If thou indeed derive thy light from Heaven,
Then, to the measure of that heaven-born light,
Shine, Poet ! in thy place, and be content :—
The stars pre-eminent in magnitude,
And they that from the zenith dart their beams, (Visible though they be to half the earth, Though half a sphere be conscious of their brightness)
Are yet of no diviner origin,
No purer essence, than the one that burns,
Like an untended watch-fire, on the ridge
Of some dark mountain ; or than those which seem Humbly to hang, like twinkling winter lamps,
Among the branches of the leafless trees ;
All are the undying offspring of one Sire :
Then, to the measure of the light vouchsafed,
Shine, Poet ! in thy place, and be content.

Preface.

IN this Edition of the Poems of William Wordsworth there will be found—now for the first time within the compass of a single volume of convenient size and modest price—every piece of original verse which we know to have been published by the poet himself, or of which he can be shown to have authorised the posthumous publication.

The OXFORD WORDSWORTH comprises (1) the Minor or Miscellaneous Poems, reprinted from the standard edition of 1849–50,—the last issued during the lifetime and under the direct authority of the poet; (2) a reprint of the original text of the two Poems of 1793, viz. An Evening Walk, and Descriptive Sketches; (3) a Supplement, giving, so far as it has been possible to ascertain, every piece published by Wordsworth on any other occasion whatsoever, but omitted by him from the final edition of 1849–50; (4) *The Prelude*¹, or Growth of a Poet's Mind; an Autobiographical Poem; (5) The Excursion (text of ed. 1849–50); (6) all the Author's Notes of ed. 1849–50, together with many notes found in various early editions, but subsequently omitted; (7) sundry Prefaces, Postscripts, &c., given at the end of Vol. V., ed. 1849–50; (8) a Chronological Table of the Life of Wordsworth, and (9) some few miscellaneous Notes by the Editor, who is also accountable for (10) the Chronological Data prefixed to the individual poems.

Great pains have been taken to ensure a high degree of accuracy in the text of this Edition. The poet's use of capital letters—a sure index to his intentions of stress—has been carefully and, it is hoped, in every instance reproduced; but it seemed idle to preserve with scrupulous exactness certain oddities and inconsistencies of spelling—a matter to which Wordsworth, unlike his brother-poet, Walter Savage Landor, appears never to have given serious attention. The editor has throughout compared the punctuation of the standard text of 1849–50 with that of the Aldine Wordsworth, issued in 1892². In most instances of divergence between them he has followed the recent authority; but in a few cases a regard—it may be, a superstitious regard—for the metrical design of the poet has compelled him to revert (not without misgiving) to the pointing of the standard text. Be this as it may, we must always bear in mind the fact that Wordsworth's system of punctuation was no mere logical or intellectual organ, but rather—in the words of the Aldine Editor—"an elaborate and ingenious instrument, intended at once to guide the reader to the meaning and to serve a metrical purpose."

In three places, where a misprint in the text of 1849-50, while not absolutely demonstrable, was yet in the highest degree probable, the Editor has substituted a reading of one or more of the earlier editions, taking care to add in a footnote the precise authority attaching to the adopted reading. On behalf of the change thus introduced into line 3 of Misc. Son., II. XXIV: "a lamp sullenly (vice suddenly) glaring," it will probably suffice to refer the reader to the numerous passages cited in the footnote on page 266; bidding him add thereto, from Eccles. Sonnets, II. xv. line 13: "Ambition . . . is no sullen fire;" and also, from Inscriptions, X., lines 27, 28: "by sullen weeds forbidden To resume its native light." In defence of "choral (vice coral) fountains" (p. 217) it may be observed, first: that Wordsworth was not a writer of nonsense-verses; secondly: that he had a rooted aversion to slipshod grammar, and, in particular, to the very solecism exemplified in the phrase (of text 1849-50), "coral fountains," i.e. to the adjectival misuse of a substantive pur et simple. We may feel confident that the poet-critic who found fault with W. Rowan Hamilton's phrase: weariness of that gold sphere, and remonstrated with R. P. Gillies for having written: where the lake gleams beneath the autumn sun; who vehemently advocated the employment of vernal and autumnal as being both "unexceptionable words," and declared it to be a matter of regret that Miss Seward's bantling, hybernal, was not in more familiar use;—we may, surely, feel quite satisfied that this severe precisian would never have condescended to the vile phrase, coral fountains; all the more because, in the words, fountains coralline, he had a phrase ready to his hand which (had it but been possible on the score of sense) was undeniably "unexceptionable," as well from the metrist's as from the grammarian's point of view. It should be added that the Aldine Editor led the way in adopting both readings—sullenly and choral—into his text. The third instance above referred to (see page 498) calls for no particular comment in this place.

In the extract from Chaucer's Troilus and Cresida, contributed by Wordsworth to the volume projected by Thomas Powell in 1840, line 118, as it appears in the original issue of that volume (1841), runs precisely as it runs in Chaucer's original, and as it now runs in the OXFORD WORDSWORTH:—

"With a soft voice, he of his Lady dear"—

When, however, in the following year, this extract, along with the poet's other adaptations from Chaucer, was being reprinted for publication amongst his Collected Poems, the compositor perpetrated the ludicrous and (one would have thought) quite palpable blunder of foisting in the word 'night' (evidently caught from the expression 'night by night,' which occurs four lines below), between the words 'soft' and 'voice.' From that day to this, the line has run, in every edition of the Poems:—

"With a soft night voice, he of his Lady dear"—

an arrangement which obviously yields neither good metre nor common sense. It seems strange that neither Wordsworth himself, nor his clerk and proof-reader, Mr. John Carter, should, while revising the several editions of the Poems that appeared between 1842 and 1850, have detected so manifest an error of the press. But we may perhaps suppose that their attention on these occasions was wholly given to Wordsworth's original compositions, and that the text of the adaptations from Chaucer, having been settled once for all, was simply left to take care of itself. Professor Dowden, in a paper read to the Wordsworth Society in May, 1882, was the first to suggest the possibly intrusive character of 'night;' he has, however, retained that word in the text of the Aldine Edition (1892). The Editor of the OXFORD WORDSWORTH, finding himself unable to conceive the possibility of any difference of opinion as to the true character and origin of 'night' in the line under notice, has summarily removed it from the text, without note, comment or apology of any kind whatsoever.

In a very few instances—possibly not more than half-a-dozen in all—where a passage either of striking beauty or otherwise interesting had been rejected from the text of ed. 1849-50, the Editor has ventured to restore the cancelled lines to their original position, placing them within brackets, to indicate that they form no part of the standard text, and adding in a footnote the precise amount of authority which they derive from the numerous earlier editions. The second stanza of Louisa has been replaced after this fashion; so, too, have the opening stanza of Dion, and a stanza (originally the sixth) of the Ode to Duty. Thus restored, the passages in question are sure to catch the eye of the reader; whereas, had they been relegated to the "Notes and Illustrations" at the end of the volume, they would necessarily have escaped the notice of that numerous class who read poetry readily enough, but turn with instant aversion from anything in the shape of a Note.

The Minor Poems are here presented in the order in which they stand in ed. 1849-50. The notion of that order or arrangement was, as is well known, first conceived by Wordsworth in 1812, and, after three years of sedulous elaboration, was finally perfected and embodied by him in the Collective Edition of 1815. To it, despite much ridicule and hostile criticism, the poet adhered with unwavering faith throughout the rest of his life. On this question of arrangement, the Editor is fain to confess, his affections are most humble; he has no ambition to see a goodlier scheme than Wordsworth's. Accordingly, those who purchase the OXFORD WORDSWORTH must needs content themselves with the works of the poet arranged according to an antiquated scheme of his own devising. As to the advantages alleged by some to accompany a chronological arrangement of the poems, it will be time enough to discuss them when the materials for the construction of such an arrangement are in our hands. At present, our knowledge of the chronology¹ of the poems is very far from complete; and, accordingly, every attempt to set the poems in their true chronological order must of necessity be largely tentative and conjectural.

In compiling the Chronological Life-Table, the Editor has, of course, freely availed himself of the two great Sources for the Biography of Wordsworth, viz. the Memoirs of the poet, published in 1851 by his nephew Christopher, late Bishop of Lincoln, and the Life in three volumes by Professor Knight of St. Andrews, published in 1889.

¹ In this matter of chronology, be it observed, the poet himself is little better than a blind guide. Whenever he attempts to assign dates to his several compositions, he frequently errs, and not seldom contradicts himself. Nevertheless, in many instances, Wordsworth's testimony is all we at present have to go upon; and, wherever the date he gives is not discredited by evidence from another source, it has been thought best to adopt it in this Edition, as at least provisionally correct

Though not very inviting to look at, this Life-Table will, the Editor trusts, be found useful by sundry persons in divers ways. To the old Wordsworthian it will prove convenient for occasional reference; the young reader may pick out thence the leading dates and events of the poet's life; while the more advanced student may, it is hoped, learn by its aid something at least concerning the affinities—moral, poetical and intellectual—which connect Wordsworth with the preceding generation, and with the men of his own troubled and disjointed times.

It may be well to point out that in the OXFORD WORDSWORTH no attempt has been made to annotate the poems systematically; nor has the Editor thought it fair to cumber the pages with such information as the student can, without any difficulty, obtain for himself from Biographies, &c., now-a-days within the reach of all. Here and there, in order to facilitate the continuous reading of the poet, the Editor has thrown in a brief footnote, for the most part giving a name or a date referred to in the text; and to these footnotes he has added a very few notes (printed along with the Author's Notes at the end of the volume), to convey some novel suggestion, or else to supply some necessary or interesting fact regarding the text. Beyond this he has not attempted to go. The main object of the Series to which this Edition belongs is to provide the public, not with notes or commentary, but with a thoroughly sound, complete and legible text; and in the volume now before the reader this object, the Editor ventures to believe, has been realised to the fullest extent possible.

In view of the vague and unsettled character of the chronology of much of Wordsworth's poetry, the Editor has deemed it inexpedient to print a formal Chronological Table or List of the Author's Works, such as that given in Vol. VII. of the Aldine Edition. He has, however, used all diligence in testing the accuracy of the dates here prefixed to the individual poems. In the interest of the student and for purposes of reference, the lines have been numbered throughout the entire volume.

In conclusion, the Editor's best thanks are due to Professor William Knight, LL.D., of St. Andrews, for permission, granted in the readiest and most cordial fashion, to make use of certain particulars regarding the chronology of the Sonnets of 1802-3, which he himself had, at considerable pains, hunted up for use in his forthcoming Edition of the Poems. To Professor Dowden the Editor stands indebted for good counsel, assistance, and encouragement during the continuance of his task, as at many other times. Here, too, what has he to offer in return but grateful thanks?—

Lastly, his warmest acknowledgments are due to the Rev. Thomas Hutchinson of Kimbolton, Leominster, the poet's nephew by marriage, who, at considerable inconvenience to himself, in the kindest manner undertook to read a proof of the Chronological Life-Table, marked several errors therein for correction, and suggested certain improvements, which, so far as was found practicable, have been carried into effect.

1850	80	WILLIAM WORDSWORTH DIED, April 23rd. Buried in Grasmere Churchyard (April 27th). The Prelude; or, Growth of a Poet's Mind publ. [Rev. W. L. Bowles died.]

The stereotyped edition of the poems in six volumes, published in 1836-7, was re-issued, with a revised and slightly altered text, in 1840; and this edition of 1840 again was also reprinted in 1841, 1842, 1843, 1846, and 1849. To the six-vol. ed. of 1842 the volume, originally published under the title of Poems, Chiefly of Early and Late Years, was added in the course of that same year, with the title: The Poetical Works of William Wordsworth. Volume VII. London: Edward Moxon. 1842.

The one-vol. edition of 1845 has also been frequently reprinted. After 1850 the contents were enlarged by the addition of The Prelude, and of the nine poems first published in 1849-50. Moxon's familiar one-vol. edition,—that which has a preface notice from the pen of Mr. W. M. Rossetti,—is in fact but a re-issue of this ed. of 1845, with The Prelude, but without the poems of 1849-50.

In 1857 a six-volume edition of the poems appeared, in which the notes dictated in 1843 by the poet to Miss Fenwick were first published, being prefixed to the individual pieces to which they severally refer.

The Letter to the Bishop of Llandaff, mentioned under 1793 in the foregoing Table, remained unpublished until 1876, when it was included in the collective edition of Wordsworth's Prose Works put forth by Dr. A. B. Grosart.

Besides the prose writings already noticed, Wordsworth wrote (1) the famous Preface to the second edition (1800) of the Lyrical Ballads; (2) the Appendix on Poetic Diction to the third edition (1802); (3) the Preface to The Excursion; (4) the Preface and the Essay Supplementary to the Preface of the edition of 1815; and (5) the Postscript to the Yarrow Revisited volume¹. Many notes also from Wordsworth's pen appeared in the several successive issues of his poems between 1793 and 1845; of which notes the poet subsequently saw fit to cancel not a few. One or two of these, which seemed well worth restoring, will be found in this volume amongst the notes of ed. 1849-50, from which they are distinguished by the addition of their proper date after the signature (W.).

POEMS

BY

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

POEMS WRITTEN IN YOUTH.

Of the Poems in this class, "THE EVENING WALK" and "DESCRIPTIVE SKETCHES" were first published in 1793. They are reprinted with some alterations that were chiefly made very soon after their publication.

This notice, which was written some time ago, scarcely applies to the Poem, "Descriptive Sketches," as it now stands. The corrections, though numerous, are not, however, such as to prevent its retaining with propriety a place in the class of Juvenile Pieces¹.

EXTRACT.

FROM THE CONCLUSION OF A POEM, COMPOSED IN ANTICIPATION OF LEAVING SCHOOL.

[Composed 1786.—Published 1815.]

DEAR native regions, I foretell,
From what I feel at this farewell,
That, wheresoe'er my steps may tend,
And whensoe'er my course shall end,
If in that hour a single tie
Survive of local sympathy,
My soul will cast the backward view,
The longing look alone on you.

Thus, while the Sun sinks down to rest
Far in the regions of the west,
Though to the vale no parting beam
Be given, not one memorial gleam,
A lingering light he fondly throws
On the dear hills where first he rose.

II.

WRITTEN IN VERY EARLY YOUTH.

[Composed 1786 (?).—Published Morning Post February 13, 1802; ed. 1807.]

CALM is all nature as a resting wheel.
The kine are couched upon the dewy
grass;
The horse alone, seen dimly as I pass,
Is cropping audibly his later meal:
Dark is the ground; a slumber seems to steal
O'er vale, and mountain, and the starless
sky.
Now, in this blank of things, a harmony,
Home-felt, and home-created, comes to heal
That grief for which the senses still supply
Fresh food; for only then, when memory

Is hushed, am I at rest. My Friends!
 restrain
 Those busy cares that would allay my
 pain;
 Oh! leave me to myself, nor let me feel
 The officious touch that makes me droop
 again.

 Night—Moonlight—Hope—Night-sounds—
 Conclusion.

FAR from my dearest Friend, 'tis mine to rove
 Through bare grey dell, high wood, and pastoral cove;
 Where Derwent rests, and listens to the roar
 That stuns the tremulous cliffs of high Lodore;
 Where peace to Grasmere's lonely island
 leads,
 To willow hedge-rows, and to emerald
 meads;
 Leads to her bridge, rude church, and cottaged grounds,
 Her rocky sheepwalks, and her woodland bounds;
 Where, undisturbed by winds, Winander²
 sleeps;
 'Mid clustering isles, and holly-sprinkled steeps;

10

Where twilight glens endear my Esth-waite's shore,
 And memory of departed pleasures, more.

Fair scenes, erewhile, I taught, a happy
 child,
 The echoes of your rocks my carols wild:
 The spirit sought not then, in cherished sadness,
 A cloudy substitute for failing gladness.
 In youth's keen eye the livelong day was
 bright,
 The sun at morning, and the stars at night,
 Alike, when first the bittern's hollow bill Was heard, or woodcocks³ roamed the moonlight hill.

In thoughtless gaiety I coursed the
 plain,
 And hope itself was all I knew of pain;
 For then the inexperienced heart would beat
 At times, while young Content forsook
 her seat,
 And wild Impatience, pointing upward,
 showed,
 Through passes yet unreached, a brighter
 road.
 Alas! the idle tale of man is found
 Depicted in the dial's moral round;
 Hope with reflection blends her social rays
 To gild the total tablet of his days;
 Yet still, the sport of some malignant
 power,
 He knows but from its shade the present
 hour.

But why, ungrateful, dwell on idle pain?
 To show what pleasures yet to me remain,
 Say, will my Friend, with reluctant
 ear,
 The history of a poet's evening hear?

When, in the south, the wan noon, brooding still,
 Breathed a pale steam around the glaring hill,

³ In the beginning of winter these mountains are frequented by woodcocks, which in dark nights retire into the woods.

¹ So many and so important changes have been made in this Poem since its first appearance, that it has been thought well to reprint the original text of 1793. See Appendix, page 592.—Ed.

² These lines are only applicable to the middle part of that lake.

And shades of deep-embattled clouds were
seen,
Spotting the northern cliffs with lights
between; 40
When crowding cattle, checked by rails that make A fence far stretched into the shallow
lake, Lashed the cool water with their restless tails,
Or from high points of rock looked out for fanning gales;
When school-boys stretched their length
upon the green; 45
And round the broad-spread oak, a glimmering scene,
In the rough fern-clad park, the herded deer
Shook the still-twinkling tail and glancing ear;
When horses in the sunburnt intake¹
stood,
And vainly eyed below the tempting
flood, 50
Or tracked the passenger, in mute distress, With forward neck the closing gate to press—
Then, while I wandered where the huddling rill
Brightens with water-breaks the hollow ghyll²
As by enchantment, an obscure retreat Opened at once, and stayed my devious
feet. 56
While thick above the rill the branches
close,
In rocky basin its wild waves repose, Inverted shrubs, and moss of gloomy
green,
Cling from the rocks, with pale wood-weeds between; 60
And its own twilight softens the whole
scene,
Save where aloft the subtle sunbeams
shine

On withered briars that o'er the crags
recline;
Save where, with sparkling foam, a small cascade
Illumines, from within, the leafy shade;
Beyond, along the vista of the brook, 66
Where antique roots its bustling course
o'erlook,
The eye reposes on a secret bridge,³ Half grey, half shagged with ivy to its ridge;
There, bending o'er the stream, the listless
swain 70
Lingers behind his disappearing wain.
—Did Sabine grace adorn my living line, Bandusia's praise, wild stream, should yield to thine!
Never shall ruthless minister of death
'Mid thy soft glooms the glittering steel unsheath; 75
No goblets shall, for thee, be crowned with flowers,
No kid with piteous outcry thrill thy
bowers;
The mystic shapes that by thy margin rove
A more benignant sacrifice approve—
A mind that, in a calm angelic mood 80
Of happy wisdom, meditating good, Beholds, of all from her high powers required,
Much done, and much designed, and more desired,— Harmonious thoughts, a soul by truth refined,
Entire affection for all human kind. 85

Dear Brook, farewell! To-morrow's noon again
Shall hide me, wooing long thy wildwood
strain;
But now the sun has gained his western
road,
And eve's mild hour invites my steps
abroad.

While, near the midway cliff, the silvered kite 90

¹ The word intake is local, and signifies a mountain-inclosure.

² Ghyll is also, I believe, a term confined to this country: ghyll and dingle have the same meaning.

³ The reader, who has made the tour of this country, will recognise, in this description, the features which characterise the lower waterfall in the grounds of Rydal.

In many a whistling circle wheels her
flight;
Slant watery lights, from parting clouds, apace
Travel along the precipice's base;
Cheering its naked waste of scattered
stone,
By lichens grey, and scanty moss, o'er-grown; 95
Where scarce the foxglove peeps, or thistle's beard;
And restless stone-chat, all day long, is
heard.

How pleasant, as the sun declines, to view
The spacious landscape change in form and hue!
Here, vanish, as in mist, before a flood too
Of bright obscurity, hill, lawn, and
wood;
There, objects, by the searching beams betrayed,
Come forth, and here retire in purple
shade;
Even the white stems of birch, the cottage
white,
Soften their glare before the mellow
light; 105
The skiffs, at anchor where with umbrage
wide Yon chestnuts half the latticed boat-house
hide,
Shed from their sides, that face the sun's slant beam,
Strong flakes of radiance on the tremulous
stream:
Raised by yon travelling flock, a dusty
cloud 110
Mounts from the road, and spreads its moving shroud;
The shepherd, all involved in wreaths of
fire,
Now shows a shadowy speck, and now is lost entire.

Into a gradual calm the breezes sink,
A blue rim borders all the lake's still brink; 115
There doth the twinkling aspen's foliage
sleep,

And insects clothe, like dust, the glassy
deep:
And now, on every side, the surface breaks
Into blue spots, and slowly lengthening streaks;
Here, plots of sparkling water tremble
bright 120
With thousand thousand twinkling points
of light;
There, waves that, hardly weltering, die
away,
Tip their smooth ridges with a softer ray;
And now the whole wide lake in deep
repose
Is hushed, and like a burnished mirror glows, 125
Save where, along the shady western
marge,
Coasts, with industrious oar, the charcoal barge.

Their panniered train a group of potters goad,
Winding from side to side up the steep
road;
The peasant, from yon cliff of fearful edge Shot, down the headlong path darts with his sledge; 131
Bright beams the lonely mountain-horse
illume Feeding 'mid purple heath, "green rings,"¹ and broom;
While the sharp slope the slackened team
confounds,
Downward the ponderous timber-wain re-sounds; 135
In foamy breaks the rill, with merry song, Dashed o'er the rough rock, lightly leaps
along;
From lonesome chapel at the mountain's
feet
Three humble bells their rustic chime repeat;
Sounds from the water-side the hammered boat; 140
And blasted quarry thunders, heard remote!

Even here, amid the sweep of endless
woods,
Blue pomp of lakes, high cliffs and falling floods,
Not undelightful are the simplest charms,
Found by the grassy door of mountain-farms. 145

Sweetly ferocious,¹ round his native
walks,
Pride of his sister-wives, the monarch stalks ;
Spur-clad his nervous feet, and firm his
tread ;
A crest of purple tops the warrior's head.
Bright sparks his black and rolling eye-ball hurls 150
Afar, his tail he closes and unfurls ;
On tiptoe reared, he strains his clarion
throat,
Threatened by faintly-answering farms remote :
Again with his shrill voice the mountain rings,
While, flapped with conscious pride, resound his wings ! 155

Where, mixed with graceful birch, the sombrous pine
And yew-tree o'er the silver rocks recline,
I love to mark the quarry's moving trains,
Dwarf panniered steeds, and men, and numerous wains : 159
How busy all the enormous hive within,
While Echo dallies with its various din !
Some (hear you not their chisels' clinking sound ?)
Toil, small as pygmies in the gulf pro-
found ;
Some, dim between the lofty cliffs described,
O'erwalk the slender plank from side to
side ; 165
These, by the pale-blue rocks that ceaseless ring,
In airy baskets hanging, work and sing.

scription of the cock, I remembered a spirited one of the same animal in L'Agriculture, ou Les Gé-orgiques Françaises, of M. Rossuet.

Just where a cloud above the mountain rears
An edge all flame, the broadening sun appears ;
A long blue bar its ægis orb divides, 170
And breaks the spreading of its golden
tides ;
And now that orb has touched the purple
steep,
Whose softened image penetrates the deep.
'Cross the calm lake's blue shades the cliffs aspire,
With towers and woods, a "prospect all on fire ;" 175
While coves and secret hollows, through a ray
Of fainter gold, a purple gleam betray.
Each slip of lawn the broken rocks
between Shines in the light with more than earthly
green :
Deep yellow beams the scattered stems
illumine, 180
Far in the level forest's central gloom :
Waving his hat, the shepherd, from the
vale, Directs his winding dog the cliffs to scale,—
The dog, loud barking, 'mid the glittering
rocks,
Hunts, where his master points, the intercepted flocks. 185
Where oaks o'erhang the road the radiance
shoots
On tawny earth, wild weeds, and twisted
roots ;
The druid-stones a brightened ring unfold ;
And all the babbling brooks are liquid
gold ;
Sunk to a curve, the day-star lessens
still, 190
Gives one bright glance, and drops behind the hill.²

In these secluded vales, if village fame, Confirmed by hoary hairs, belief may claim ;
When up the hills, as now, retired the
light,

² From Thomson.

Strange apparitions mocked the shepherd's sight. 195

The form appears of one that spurs his steed

Midway along the hill with desperate speed;

Unhurt pursues his lengthened flight, while all

Attend, at every stretch, his headlong fall.

Anon, appears a brave, a gorgeous show

Of horsemen-shadows moving to and fro;

At intervals imperial banners stream,

And now the van reflects the solar beam;

The rear through iron brown betrays a sullen gleam.

While silent stands the admiring crowd below, 205

Silent the visionary warriors go,

Winding in ordered pomp their upward way,¹

Till the last banner of their long array

Has disappeared, and every trace is fled

Of splendour—save the beacon's spiry head 210

Tipt with eve's latest gleam of burning red.

Now, while the solemn evening shadows sail,

On slowly-waving pinions, down the vale;

And, fronting the bright west, yon oak entwines

Its darkening boughs and leaves in stronger lines; 215

'Tis pleasant near the tranquil lake to stray

Where, winding on along some secret bay,

The swan uplifts his chest, and backward flings

His neck, a varying arch, between his towering wings:

The eye that marks the gliding creature sees 220

How graceful, pride can be, and how majestic, ease.

While tender cares and mild domestic loves

With furtive watch pursue her as she moves,

The female with a meeker charm succeeds,

And her brown little-ones around her leads, 225

Nibbling the water lilies as they pass,

Or playing wanton with the floating grass.

She, in a mother's care, her beauty's pride

Forgetting, calls the wearied to her side;

Alternately they mount her back, and rest 230

Close by her mantling wings' embraces prest.

Long may they float upon this flood serene;

Theirs be these holms untrodden, still, and green,

Where leafy shades fence off the blustering gale,

And breathes in peace the lily of the vale! 235

Yon isle, which feels not even the milkmaid's feet,

Yet hears her song, "by distance made more sweet,"

Yon isle conceals their home, their hut-like bower;

Green water-rushes overspread the floor;

Long grass and willows form the woven wall, 240

And swings above the roof the poplar tall.

Thence issuing often with unwieldy stalk,

They crush with broad black feet their flowery walk;

Or, from the neighbouring water, hear at morn

The hound, the horse's tread, and mellow horn; 245

Involve their serpent-necks in changeful rings,

Rolled wantonly between their slippery wings,

Or, starting up with noise and rude delight,

Force half upon the wave their cumbrous flight.

¹ See a description of an appearance of this kind in Clark's Survey of the Lakes, accompanied by vouchers of its veracity, that may amuse the reader.

Fair Swan! by all a mother's joys caressed, 250
Haply some wretch has eyed, and called thee blessed;
When with her infants, from some shady seat
By the lake's edge, she rose—to face the noontide heat;
Or taught their limbs along the dusty
road
A few short steps to totter with their load. 255

I see her now, denied to lay her head,
On cold blue nights, in hut or straw-built
shed,
Turn to a silent smile their sleepy cry,
By pointing to the gliding moon on high.
—When low-hung clouds each star of summer hide, 260
And fireless are the valleys far and wide,
Where the brook brawls along the public
road
Dark with bat-haunted ashes stretching broad,
Oft has she taught them on her lap to lay
The shining glow-worm; or, in heedless play, 265
Toss it from hand to hand, disquieted;
While others, not unseen, are free to shed
Green unmolested light upon their mossy bed.

Oh! when the sleety showers her path
assail,
And like a torrent roars the headstrong
gale; 270
No more her breath can thaw their fingers
cold,
Their frozen arms her neck no more can
fold;
Weak roof a covering form two babes to shield,
And faint the fire a dying heart can yield!
Press the sad kiss, fond mother! vainly fears 275
Thy flooded cheek to wet them with its
tears;
No tears can chill them, and no bosom
warms,

Thy breast their death-bed, coffined in thine arms!

Sweet are the sounds that mingle from
afar,
Heard by calm lakes, as peeps the folding
star, 280
Where the duck dabbles 'mid the rustling
sedge,
And feeding pike starts from the water's
edge,
Or the swan stirs the reeds, his neck and bill
Wetting, that drip upon the water still;
And heron, as resounds the trodden
shore, 285
Shoots upward, darting his long neck
before.

Now, with religious awe, the farewell
light Blends with the solemn colouring of
night;
'Mid groves of clouds that crest the mountain's brow,
And round the west's proud lodge their shadows throw, 290
Like Una shining on her gloomy way,
The half-seen form of Twilight roams
astray;
Shedding, through paly loop-holes mild
and small,
Gleams that upon the lake's still bosom
fall;
Soft o'er the surface creep those lustrous
pale 295
Tracking the motions of the fitful gale.
With restless interchange at once the
bright
Wins on the shade, the shade upon the
light.
No favoured eye was e'er allowed to gaze
On lovelier spectacle in faery days; 300
When gentle Spirits urged a sportive
chase,
Brushing with lucid wands the water's face: While music, stealing round the glimmer-
ing deeps,
Charmed the tall circle of the enchanted
steeps.

—The lights are vanished from the watery plains : 305

No wreck of all the pageantry remains.
Unheeded night has overcome the vales :
On the dark earth the wearied vision
fails ;

The latest lingerer of the forest train,
The lone black fir, forsakes the faded
plain ; 310

Last evening sight, the cottage smoke, no
more,
Lost in the thickened darkness, glimmers
hoar ;

And, towering from the sullen dark-brown
mere,
Like a black wall, the mountain-steeps
appear.

—Now o'er the soothed accordant heart
we feel 315

A sympathetic twilight slowly steal,
And ever, as we fondly muse, we find
The soft gloom deepening on the tranquil mind.

Stay ! pensive, sadly-pleasing visions,
stay !

Ah no ! as fades the vale, they fade
away : 320

Yet still the tender, vacant gloom remains ;

Still the cold cheek its shuddering tear retains.

The bird, who ceased, with fading light, to thread

Silent the hedge or steamy rivulet's bed,
From his grey re-appearing tower shall
soon 325

Salute with gladsome note the rising
moon,

While with a hoary light she frosts the
ground,

And pours a deeper blue to Æther's
bound ;

Pleased, as she moves, her pomp of clouds to fold

In robes of azure, fleecy-white, and gold.

Above yon eastern hill, where darkness
broods 331

O'er all its vanished dells, and lawns, and
woods ;

Where but a mass of shade the sight can
trace,

Even now she shows, half-veiled, her lovely face :

Across the gloomy valley flings her
light, 335

Far to the western slopes with hamlets
white ;

And gives, where woods the chequered upland strew,

To the green corn of summer, autumn's hue.

Thus Hope, first pouring from her blessed horn

Her dawn, far lovelier than the moon's own morn, 340

Till higher mounted, strives in vain to cheer

The weary hills, impervious, blackening
near ;

Yet does she still, undaunted, throw the while

On darling spots remote her tempting
smile.

Even now she decks for me a distant
scene, 345

(For dark and broad the gulf of time between)

Gilding that cottage with her fondest ray, (Sole bourn, sole wish, sole object of my
way ;

How fair its lawns and sheltering woods
appear !

How sweet its streamlet murmurs in mine ear !) 350

Where we, my Friend, to happy days shall rise,

Till our small share of hardly-paining
sighs

(For sighs will ever trouble human breath)

Creep hushed into the tranquil breast of death.

But now the clear bright Moon her zenith gains, 355

And, rimy without speck, extend the
plains :

The deepest cleft the mountain's front displays

Scarce hides a shadow from her searching rays ;
 From the dark-blue faint silvery threads divide
 The hills, while gleams below the azure tide ; 360
 Time softly treads ; throughout the landscape breathes
 A peace enlivened, not disturbed, by wreaths
 Of charcoal-smoke, that, o'er the fallen
 wood,
 Steal down the hill, and spread along the
 flood.

The song of mountain-streams, unheard
 by day, 365
 Now hardly heard, beguiles my homeward way.
 Air listens, like the sleeping water, still,
 To catch the spiritual music of the hill,
 Broke only by the slow clock tolling deep,
 Or shout that wakes the ferry-man from
 sleep, 370
 The echoed hoof nearing the distant
 shore,
 The boat's first motion—made with dashing oar ;
 Sound of closed gate, across the water
 borne,
 Hurrying the timid hare through rustling
 corn ; 374
 The sportive outcry of the mocking owl ;
 And at long intervals the mill-dog's howl ;
 The distant forge's swinging thump pro-
 found ;
 Or yell, in the deep woods, of lonely hound.

LINES

WRITTEN WHILE SAILING IN A BOAT AT EVENING.

How richly glows the water's breast
 Before us, tinged with evening hues,
 While, facing thus the crimson west,
 The boat her silent course pursues !
 And see how dark the backward stream !
 A little moment past so smiling ! 6

And still, perhaps, with faithless gleam,
 Some other loiterers beguiling.

Such views the youthful Bard allure ;
 But, heedless of the following gloom, 10
 He deems their colours shall endure
 Till peace go with him to the tomb.
 —And let him nurse his fond deceit,
 And what if he must die in sorrow !
 Who would not cherish dreams so sweet, Though grief and pain may come tomorrow ? 16

V.

REMEMBRANCE OF COLLINS,

COMPOSED UPON THE THAMES NEAR RICHMOND.

GLIDE gently, thus for ever glide,
 O Thames ! that other bards may see
 As lovely visions by thy side
 As now, fair river ! come to me.
 O glide, fair stream ! for ever so, 5
 Thy quiet soul on all bestowing,
 Till all our minds for ever flow
 As thy deep waters now are flowing.

Vain thought !—Yet be as now thou art,
 That in thy waters may be seen 10
 The image of a poet's heart,
 How bright, how solemn, how serene !
 Such as did once the Poet bless,
 Who, murmuring here a later¹ ditty,
 Could find no refuge from distress 15
 But in the milder grief of pity.

Now let us, as we float along,
 For him suspend the dashing oar ;
 And pray that never child of song
 May know that Poet's sorrows more. 20
 How calm ! how still ! the only sound,
 The dripping of the oar suspended !
 —The evening darkness gathers round
 By virtue's holiest Powers attended.

¹ Collins' Ode on the death of Thomson, the last written, I believe, of the poems which were published during his life-time. This Ode is also alluded to in the next stanza.

VI.

DESCRIPTIVE SKETCHES¹TAKEN DURING A PEDESTRIAN TOUR AMONG
THE ALPS.

TO

THE REV. ROBERT JONES,

FELLOW OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

DEAR SIR,

However desirous I might have been of giving you proofs of the high place you hold in my esteem, I should have been cautious of wounding your delicacy by thus publicly addressing you, had not the circumstance of our having been companions among the Alps seemed to give this dedication a propriety sufficient to do away any scruples which your modesty might otherwise have suggested.

In inscribing this little work to you I consult my heart. You know well how great is the difference between two companions lolling in a post-chaise and two travellers plodding slowly along the road, side by side, each with his little knapsack of necessaries upon his shoulders. How much more of heart between the two latter!

I am happy in being conscious that I shall have one reader who will approach the conclusion of these few pages with regret. You they must certainly interest, in reminding you of moments to which you can hardly look back without a pleasure not the less dear from a shade of melancholy. You will meet with few images without recollecting the spot where we observed them together; consequently, whatever is feeble in my design, or spiritless in my colouring, will be amply supplied by your own memory.

With still greater propriety I might have inscribed to you a description of some of the features of your native mountains, through which we have wandered together, in the same manner, with so much pleasure. But the sea-sunsets, which give such splendour to the vale of Clwyd, Snowdon, the chair of Idris, the quiet village of Bethgelert, Menai and her Druids, the Alpine steepes of the Conway, and the still more interesting windings of the wizard stream of the Dee, remain yet untouched. Apprehensive that my pencil may never be exercised on these subjects, I cannot let slip this opportunity of thus publicly assuring you with how much affection and esteem,

I am, dear Sir,

Most sincerely yours,

London, 1793.

WERE there, below, a spot of holy ground Where from distress a refuge might be
found,

And solitude prepare the soul for heaven;
Sure, nature's God that spot to man had
given

Where falls the purple morning far and
wide

In flakes of light upon the mountain-side;
Where with loud voice the power of water shakes

The leafy wood, or sleeps in quiet lakes.

Yet not unrecompensed the man shall roam,

Who at the call of summer quits his
home,

And plods through some wide realm o'er vale and height,

Though seeking only holiday delight;

At least, not owing to himself an aim

To which the sage would give a prouder
name.

¹ The original (1793) text of this Poem will be found in the Appendix, pp. 601-617. It differs in many important particulars from the finally revised text here given.—Ed.

No gains too cheaply earned his fancy cloy, 15
 Though every passing zephyr whispers joy;
 Brisk toil, alternating with ready ease,
 Feeds the clear current of his sympathies.
 For him sod-seats the cottage-door adorn;
 And peeps the far-off spire, his evening
 bourn! 20
 Dear is the forest frowning o'er his head,
 And dear the velvet green-sward to his
 tread:
 Moves there a cloud o'er mid-day's flaming eye?
 Upward he looks—"and calls it luxury:"
 Kind Nature's charities his steps attend; 25
 In every babbling brook he finds a friend;
 While chastening thoughts of sweetest use, bestowed
 By wisdom, moralise his pensive road.
 Host of his welcome inn, the noon-tide
 bower,
 To his spare meal he calls the passing
 poor; 30
 He views the sun uplift his golden fire,
 Or sink, with heart alive like Memnon's lyre;¹
 Blesses the moon that comes with kindly
 ray,
 To light him shaken by his rugged way.
 Back from his sight no bashful children
 steal; 35
 He sits a brother at the cottage-meal;
 His humble looks no shy restraint impart;
 Around him plays at will the virgin heart.
 While unsuspending wheels the village
 dance,
 The maidens eye him with enquiring
 glance, 40
 Much wondering by what fit of crazing
 care,
 Or desperate love, bewildered, he came
 there.

A hope, that prudence could not then approve,
 That clung to Nature with a truant's love,

O'er Gallia's wastes of corn my footsteps
 led; 45
 Her files of road-elms, high above my head In long-drawn vista, rustling in the breeze;
 Or where her pathways straggle as they please
 By lonely farms and secret villages.
 But lo! the Alps, ascending white in
 air; 50
 Toy with the sun and glitter from afar.

And now, emerging from the forest's
 gloom,
 I greet thee, Chartreuse, while I mourn thy doom.
 Whither is fled that Power whose frown severe Awed sober Reason till she crouched in
 fear? 55
That Silence, once in deathlike fetters
 bound,
 Chains that were loosened only by the sound
 Of holy rites chanted in measured round?
 —The voice of blasphemy the fane alarms,
 The cloister startles at the gleam of arms. 60
 The thundering tube the aged angler
 hears,
 Bent o'er the groaning flood that sweeps away his tears.
 Cloud-piercing pine-trees nod their troubled heads,
 Spires, rocks, and lawns a browner night
 o'erspreads;
 Strong terror checks the female peasant's
 sighs, 65
 And start the astonished shades at female
 eyes.
 From Bruno's forest screams the affrighted jay,
 And slow the insulted eagle wheels away.
 A viewless flight of laughing Demon's mock
 The Cross, by angels planted² on the aerial rock. 70

¹ The lyre of Memnon is reported to have emitted melancholy or cheerful tones, as it was touched by the sun's evening or morning rays.

² Alluding to crosses seen on the tops of the spiry rocks of Chartreuse, which have every appearance of being inaccessible.

The "parting Genius" sighs with hollow
breath

Along the mystic streams of Life and Death.¹

Swelling the outcry dull, that long re-
sounds

Portentous through her old woods' trackless bounds,

Vallombre,² 'mid her falling fanes, deplore, 75

For ever broke, the sabbath of her bowers.

More pleased, my foot the hidden margin roves

Of Como, bosomed deep in chestnut groves.

No meadows thrown between, the giddy
steeps

Tower, bare or sylvan, from the narrow deeps. 80

—To towns, whose shades of no rude noise complain,

From ringing team apart and grating
wain—

To flat-roofed towns, that touch the water's bound,

Or lurk in woody sunless glens profound,
Or, from the bending rocks, obtrusive
cling, 85

And o'er the whitened wave their shadows fling—

The pathway leads, as round the steeps
it twines;

And Silence loves its purple roof of vines.
The loitering traveller hence, at evening,
sees

From rock-hewn steps the sail between the trees; 90

Or marks, 'mid opening cliffs, fair dark-eyed maids

Tend the small harvest of their garden
glades;

Or stops the solemn mountain-shades to

Stretch o'er the pictured mirror broad and blue,

And track the yellow lights from steep to steep, 95

As up the opposing hills they slowly creep.

Aloft, here, half a village shines, arrayed In golden light; half hides itself in
shade:

While, from amid the darkened roofs, the
spire,

Restlessly flashing, seems to mount like
fire: 100

There, all unshaded, blazing forests throw
Rich golden verdure on the lake below.

Slow glides the sail along the illumined
shore,

And steals into the shade the lazy oar;
Soft bosoms breathe around contagious
sighs, 105

And amorous music on the water dies.

How blest, delicious scene! the eye that greet

Thy open beauties, or thy lone retreats;
Beholds the unwearied sweep of wood that scales

Thy cliffs; the endless waters of thy vales; 110

Thy lowly cots that sprinkle all the shore,
Each with its household boat beside the
door;

Thy torrents shooting from the clear-blue
sky;

Thy towns that cleave, like swallows'
nests, on high;

That glimmer hoar in eve's last light,
descried 115

Dim from the twilight water's shaggy side, Whence lutes and voices down the enchanted woods

Steal, and compose the oar-forgotten
floods;

—Thy lake that, streaked or dappled, blue or grey,

'Mid smoking woods gleams hid from morning's ray 120

Slow-travelling down the western hills, to enfold

Its green-tinged margin in a blaze of
gold;

Thy glittering steeples, whence the matin
bell

Calls forth the woodman from his desert
cell,

² Name of one of the valleys of the Chartreuse.

And quickens the blithe sound of oars that pass 125

Along the steaming lake, to early morn.
But now farewell to each and all—adieu
To every charm, and last and chief to
you,

Ye lovely maidens that in noontide shade Rest near your little plots of wheaten glade; 130

To all that binds the soul in powerless
trance,

Lip-dewing song, and ringlet-tossing
dance;

Where sparkling eyes and breaking smiles illuminate

The sylvan cabin's lute-enlivened gloom.
—Alas! the very murmur of the streams Breathes o'er the failing soul voluptuous
dreams, 136

While Slavery, forcing the sunk mind to
dwell

On joys that might disgrace the captive's
cell,

Her shameless timbrel shakes on Como's
marge,

And lures from bay to bay the vocal barge. 140

Yet are thy softer arts with power induced

To soothe and cheer the poor man's solitude.

By silent cottage-doors, the peasant's
home

Left vacant for the day, I loved to roam.
But once I pierced the mazes of a wood
In which a cabin undeserted stood; 146

There an old man an olden measure scanned

On a rude viol touched with withered
hand.

As lambs or fawns in April clustering lie
Under a hoary oak's thin canopy, 150

Stretched at his feet, with steadfast upward eye,

His children's children listened to the
sound;

—A Hermit with his family around!

But let us hence; for fair Locarno
smiles

Embowered in walnut slopes and citron
isles: 155

Or seek at eve the banks of Tusa's stream, Where, 'mid dim towers and woods, her¹ waters gleam.

From the bright wave, in solemn gloom,
retire

The dull-red steeps, and, darkening still,
aspire

To where afar rich orange lustres glow
Round undistinguished clouds, and rocks, and snow: 161

Or, led where Via Mala's chasms confine
The indignant waters of the infant Rhine, Hang o'er the abyss, whose else impervious gloom

His burning eyes with fearful light illume. 165

The mind condemned, without reprieve,
to go

O'er life's long deserts with its charge of
woe,

With sad congratulation joins the train Where beasts and men together o'er the
plain

Move on—a mighty caravan of pain: 170
Hope, strength, and courage, social suffering brings,

Freshening the wilderness with shades and springs.

—There be whose lot far otherwise is cast:

Sole human tenant of the piny waste,
By choice or doom a gipsy wanders here,
A nursing babe her only comforter; 176
Lo, where she sits beneath yon shaggy
rock,

A cowering shape half hid in curling smoke!

When lightning among clouds and mountain-snows

Predominates, and darkness comes and goes, 180

And the fierce torrent at the flashes broad Starts, like a horse, beside the glaring
road—

¹ The river along whose banks you descend in crossing the Alps by the Simplon Pass.

She seeks a covert from the battering shower
In the roofed bridge;¹ the bridge, in that dread hour,
Itself all trembling at the torrent's power.

Nor is she more at ease on some still
night, 186
When not a star supplies the comfort of its light;
Only the waning moon hangs dull and red
Above a melancholy mountain's head, Then sets. In total gloom the Vagrant
sighs, 190
Stoops her sick head, and shuts her weary
eyes;
Or on her fingers counts the distant clock,
Or to the drowsy crow of midnight cock Listens, or quakes while from the forest's gulf
Howls near and nearer yet the famished
wolf. 195

From the green vale of Urseren smooth and wide Descend we now, the maddened Reuss
our guide;
By rocks that, shutting out the blessed
day, Cling tremblingly to rocks as loose as they;
By cells² upon whose image, while he prays, 200
The kneeling peasant scarcely dares to
gaze;
By many a votive death-cross³ planted
near,
And watered duly with the pious tear,
That faded silent from the upward eye Unmoved with each rude form of peril
nigh; 205

¹ Most of the bridges among the Alps are of wood, and covered: these bridges have a heavy appearance, and rather injure the effect of the scenery in some places.

² The Catholic religion prevails here: these cells are, as is well known, very common in the Catholic countries, planted, like the Roman tombs, along the road side.

³ Crosses, commemorative of the deaths of travellers, by the fall of snow and other accidents, are very common along this dreadful road.

Fixed on the anchor left by Him who saves Alike in whelming snows and roaring waves.

But soon a peopled region on the sight
Opens—a little world of calm delight;
Where mists, suspended on the expiring
gale, 210
Spread rooflike o'er the deep secluded vale,
And beams of evening, slipping in between,
Gently illuminate a sober scene:— Here, on the brown wood-cottages⁴ they
sleep, 214
There, over rock or sloping pasture creep.
On as we journey, in clear view displayed,
The still vale lengthens underneath its
shade
Of low-hung vapour: on the freshened mead
The green light sparkles;—the dim bowers recede.
While pastoral pipes and streams the landscape lull, 220
And bells of passing mules that tinkle
dull,
In solemn shapes before the admiring eye
Dilated hang the misty pines on high,
Huge convent domes with pinnacles and
towers,
And antique castles seen through gleamy
showers. 225

From such romantic dreams, my soul,
awake
To sterner pleasure, where, by Uri's lake,
In Nature's pristine majesty outspread, Winds neither road nor path for foot to
tread:
The rocks rise naked as a wall, or stretch Far o'er the water, hung with groves of beech; 231
Aerial pines from loftier steeps ascend,
Nor stop but where creation seems to end.
Yet here and there, if 'mid the savage
scene 234
Appears a scanty plot of smiling green,
Up from the lake a zigzag path will creep

⁴ The houses in the more retired Swiss valleys are all built of wood.

To reach a small wood-hut hung boldly on the steep.

—Before those thresholds (never can they
know

The face of traveller passing to and fro,
No peasant leans upon his pole, to tell

For whom at morning tolled the funeral
bell;

Their watch-dog ne'er his angry bark for-
goes,

Touched by the beggar's moan of human
woes;

The shady porch ne'er offered a cool seat
To pilgrims overcome by summer's heat.

Yet thither the world's business finds its
way

At times, and tales unsought beguile the
day,

And there are those fond thoughts which Solitude,

However stern, is powerless to exclude.

There doth the maiden watch her lover's sail

Approaching, and upbraid the tardy gale;
At midnight listens till his parting oar,
And its last echo, can be heard no more.

And what if ospreys, cormorants, herons
cry,

Amid tempestuous vapours driving by,
Or hovering over wastes too bleak to rear

That common growth of earth, the foodful ear;

Where the green apple shrivels on the spray,

And pines the unripened pear in summer's kindest ray;

Contentment shares the desolate domain
With Independence, child of high Dis-
dain.

Exulting 'mid the winter of the skies,
Shy as the jealous chamois, Freedom flies,

And grasps by fits her sword, and often
eyes;

And sometimes, as from rock to rock she
bounds,

The Patriot nymph starts at imagined
sounds,

And, wildly pausing, oft she hangs aghast, Whether some old Swiss air hath checked her haste,

Or thrill of Spartan life is caught between the blast.

Sworn with incessant rains from hour
to hour,

All day the floods a deepening murmur
pour:

The sky is veiled, and every cheerful
sight:

Dark is the region as with coming night;
But what a sudden burst of overpowering
light!

Triumphant on the bosom of the storm,
Glances the wheeling eagle's glorious
form!

Eastward, in long perspective glittering,
shine

The wood-crowned cliffs that o'er the lake
recline;

Those lofty cliffs a hundred streams un-
fold,

At once to pillars turned that flame with
gold:

Behind his sail the peasant shrinks, to shun

The west, that burns like one dilated sun,
A crucible of mighty compass, felt By mountains, glowing till they seem to melt.

But, lo! the boatman, overawed, before
The pictured fane of Tell suspends his oar;
Confused the Marathonian tale appears,
While his eyes sparkle with heroic tears.
And who, that walks where men of ancient days
Have wrought with godlike arm the deeds
of praise,
Feels not the spirit of the place control,
Or rouse and agitate his labouring soul?
Say, who, by thinking on Canadian hills,
Or wild Aosta lulled by Alpine rills,
On Zutphen's plain, or on that highland dell,
Through which rough Garry cleaves his way, can tell What high resolves exalt the tenderest
thought
Of him whom passion rivets to the spot,
Where breathed the gale that caught Wolfe's happiest sigh,

276 276 280
284

And the last sunbeam fell on Bayard's
eye ; 300
Where bleeding Sidney from the cup retired,
And glad Dundee in "faint huzzas" expired?

But now with other mind I stand alone
Upon the summit of this naked cone,
And watch the fearless chamois-hunter
chase 305
His prey, through tracts abrupt of desolate space,

¹ Through vacant worlds where Nature never gave

A brook to murmur or a bough to wave,
Which unsubstantial Phantoms sacred
keep ;

Thro' worlds where Life, and Voice, and Motion sleep ; 310

Where silent Hours their death-like sway extend,

Save when the avalanche breaks loose, to rend

Its way with uproar, till the ruin, drowned
In some dense wood or gulf of snow pro-
found,

Mocks the dull ear of Time with deaf
abortive sound. 315

—'Tis his, while wandering on from height to height,

To see a planet's pomp and steady light
In the least star of scarce-appearing night ;
While the pale moon moves near him, on the bound 319

Of ether, shining with diminished round,
And far and wide the icy summits blaze,
Rejoicing in the glory of her rays :

To him the day-star glitters small and
bright, 323

Shorn of its beams, insufferably white,
And he can look beyond the sun, and view
Those fast-receding depths of sable blue Flying till vision can no more pursue !

—At once bewildering mists around him
close, 328

And cold and hunger are his least of woes ;

¹ For most of the images in the next sixteen verses, I am indebted to M. Raymond's interesting observations, annexed to his translation of Coxe's Tour in Switzerland.

The Demon of the snow, with angry roar
Descending, shuts for aye his prison door.
Soon with despair's whole weight his spirits sink ; 332

Bread has he none, the snow must be his drink ;

And, ere his eyes can close upon the day,
The eagle of the Alps o'ershades her prey.

Now couch thyself where, heard with fear afar, 336
Thunders through echoing pines the headlong Aar ;

Or rather stay to taste the mild delights
Of pensive Underwalden's ² pastoral heights.

—Is there who 'mid these awful wilds
has seen 340

The native Genii walk the mountain
green ?

Or heard, while other worlds their charms
reveal,

Soft music o'er the aerial summit steal ?
While o'er the desert, answering every
close,

Rich steam of sweetest perfume comes and goes. 345

—And sure there is a secret Power that reigns

Here, where no trace of man the spot
profanes,

Nought but the chalets,³ flat and bare, on high

Suspended 'mid the quiet of the sky ;
Or distant herds that pasturing upward

creep, 350
And, not untended, climb the dangerous
steep.

How still ! no irreligious sound or sight
Rouses the soul from her severe delight.

An idle voice the sabbath region fills
Of Deep that calls to Deep across the hills,
And with that voice accords the soothing
sound 356

² The people of this Canton are supposed to be of a more melancholy disposition than the other inhabitants of the Alps ; this, if true, may proceed from their living more secluded.

³ This picture is from the middle region of the Alps. Chalets are summer huts for the Swiss herdsmen.

Of drowsy bells, for ever tinkling round ;
Faint wail of eagle melting into blue Beneath the cliffs, and pine-wood's steady sugh;¹

The solitary heifer's deepened low ; 360
Or rumbling, heard remote, of falling snow.

All motions, sounds, and voices, far and
nigh,

Blend in a music of tranquillity ;
Save when, a stranger seen below, the
boy

Shouts from the echoing hills with savage
joy. 365

When, from the sunny breast of open
seas,

And bays with myrtle fringed, the southern breeze

Comes on to gladden April with the
sight

Of green isles widening on each snow-clad height ;

When shouts and lowing herds the valley
fill, 370

And louder torrents stun the noon-tide
hill,

The pastoral Swiss begin the cliffs to
scale,

Leaving to silence the deserted vale ;
And, like the Patriarchs in their simple
age,

Move, as the verdure leads, from stage
to stage ; 375

High and more high in summer's heat
they go,

And hear the rattling thunder far below ;
Or steal beneath the mountains, halfdeterred,

Where huge rocks tremble to the bellow-ing herd.

One I behold who, 'cross the foaming
flood, 380

Leaps with a bound of graceful hardi-
hood ;

Another high on that green ledge ;—he gained

The tempting spot with every sinew
strained ;

And downward thence a knot of grass
he throws,

Food for his beasts in time of winter
snows. 385

—Far different life from what Tradition
hoar

Transmits of happier lot in times of yore !
Then Summer lingered long ; and honey
flowed

From out the rocks, the wild bees' safe
abode :

Continual waters welling cheered the
waste, 390

And plants were wholesome, now of deadly taste :

Nor Winter yet his frozen stores had piled,

Usurping where the fairest herbage smiled :

Nor Hunger driven the herds from pastures bare,

To climb the treacherous cliffs for scanty fare. 395

Then the milk-thistle flourished through
the land,

And forced the full-swoln udder to demand,

Thrice every day, the pail and welcome
hand.

Thus does the father to his children tell
Of banished bliss, by fancy loved too
well. 400

Alas ! that human guilt provoked the rod
Of angry Nature to avenge her God.

Still, Nature, ever just, to him imparts
Joys only given to uncorrupted hearts.

'Tis morn : with gold the verdant mountain glows ; 405

More high, the snowy peaks with hues of rose.

Far stretched beneath the many-tinted
hills,

A mighty waste of mist the valley fills,
A solemn sea ! whose billows wide around Stand motionless, to awful silence
bound : 410

Pines, on the coast, through mist their tops uprear,

of the wind through the trees.

That like to leaning masts of stranded ships appear.

A single chasm, a gulf of gloomy blue, Gapes in the centre of the sea—and,
through

That dark mysterious gulf ascending,
sound 415

Innumerable streams with roar profound.
Mount through the nearer vapours notes
of birds,

And merry flageolet; the low of herds,
The bark of dogs, the heifer's tinkling bell,
Talk, laughter, and perchance a church-tower knell: 420

Think not the peasant from aloft has gazed

And heard with heart unmoved, with soul unraised:

Nor is his spirit less enrapt, nor less Alive to independent happiness, Then, when he lies, out-stretched, at even-tide 425

Upon the fragrant mountain's purple
side:

For as the pleasures of his simple day
Beyond his native valley seldom stray, Nought round its darling precincts can he find

But brings some past enjoyment to his
mind; 430

While Hope, reclining upon Pleasure's
urn,

Binds her wild wreaths, and whispers his return.

Once, Man entirely free, alone and wild,
Was blest as free—for he was Nature's
child.

He, all superior but his God disdain-
ed, 435

Walked none restraining, and by none
restrained:

Confessed no law but what his reason
taught,

Did all he wished, and wished but what he ought.

As man in his primeval dower arrayed
The image of his glorious Sire displayed, 440

Even so, by faithful Nature guarded,
here

The traces of primeval Man appear;
The simple dignity no forms debase;
The eye sublime, and surly lion-grace:

The slave of none, of beasts alone the
lord, 445

His book he prizes, nor neglects his sword;

—Well taught by that to feel his rights,
prepared

With this "the blessings he enjoys to guard."

And as his native hills encircle ground
For many a marvellous victory renowned, 450

The work of Freedom daring to oppose,
With few in arms,¹ innumerable foes,
When to those famous fields his steps are
led,

An unknown power connects him with the dead:

For images of other worlds are there; 455
Awful the light, and holy is the air.

Fitfully, and in flashes, through his soul,
Like sun-lit tempests, troubled transports roll;

His bosom heaves, his Spirit towers a-
main,

Beyond the senses and their little reign. 460

And oft, when that dread vision hath past by,

He holds with God himself communion
high,

There where the peal of swelling torrents fills

The sky-roofed temple of the eternal hills;
Or, when upon the mountain's silent
brow 465

¹ Alluding to several battles which the Swiss in very small numbers have gained over their oppressors, the House of Austria; and, in particular, to one fought at Næffels near Glarus, where three hundred and thirty men are said to have defeated an army of between fifteen and twenty thousand Austrians. Scattered over the valley are to be found eleven stones, with this inscription, 1388, the year the battle was fought, marking out, as I was told upon the spot, the several places where the Austrians, attempting to make a stand, were repulsed anew.

Reclined, he sees, above him and below, Bright stars of ice and azure fields of
snow;

While needle peaks of granite shooting
bare

Tremble in ever-varying tints of air.

And when a gathering weight of shadows
brown 470

Falls on the valleys as the sun goes
down;

And Pikes, of darkness named and fear and storms,¹

Uplift in quiet their illumined forms,
In sea-like reach of prospect round him
spread,

Tinged like an angel's smile all rosy
red— 475

Awe in his breast with holiest love unites,
And the near heavens impart their own delights.

When downward to his winter hut he
goes,

Dear and more dear the lessening circle
grows;

That hut which on the hills so oft employs 480

His thoughts, the central point of all his joys.

And as a swallow, at the hour of rest,
Peeps often ere she darts into her nest,

So to the homestead, where the grandsire tends

A little prattling child, he oft descends,
To glance a look upon the well-matched pair; 486

Till storm and driving ice blockade him
there.

There, safely guarded by the woods behind,

He hears the chiding of the baffled wind, Hears Winter calling all his terrors
round, 490

And, blest within himself, he shrinks not from the sound.

Through Nature's vale his homely pleasures glide,

Unstained by envy, discontent, and
pride;

The bound of all his vanity, to deck,
With one bright bell a favourite heifer's
neck; 495

Well pleased upon some simple annual feast,

Remembered half the year and hoped the
rest,

If dairy-produce, from his inner hoard,
Of thrice ten summers dignify the board.

—Alas! in every clime a flying ray 500
Is all we have to cheer our wintry way;

And here the unwilling mind may more than trace

The general sorrows of the human race:
The churlish gales of penury, that blow

Cold as the north-wind o'er a waste of
snow, 505

To them the gentle groups of bliss deny
That on the noon-day bank of leisure lie.

Yet more;—compelled by Powers which only deign

That solitary man disturb their reign,
Powers that support an unremitting strife

With all the tender charities of life, 511
Full oft the father, when his sons have grown

To manhood, seems their title to disown;
And from his nest amid the storms of heaven

Drives, eagle-like, those sons as he was driven; 515

With stern composure watches to the
plain—

And never, eagle-like, beholds again!

When long familiar joys are all resigned,

Why does their sad remembrance haunt the mind?

Lo! where through flat Batavia's willow
groves, 520

Or by the lazy Seine, the exile roves; O'er the curled waters Alpine measures
swell,

And search the affections to their inmost
cell;

Sweet poison spreads along the listener's veins,

Turning past pleasures into mortal pains;

¹ As Schreck-Horn, the pike of terror; Wetter-Horn, the pike of storms, &c., &c.

Poison, which not a frame of steel can brave, 526
Bows his young head with sorrow to the grave.¹

Gay lark of hope, thy silent song resume!
Ye flattering eastern lights, once more the hills illumine!
Fresh gales and dews of life's delicious
morn, 530
And thou, lost fragrance of the heart,
return!
Alas! the little joy to man allowed
Fades like the lustre of an evening cloud;
Or like the beauty in a flower installed,
Whose season was, and cannot be recalled. 535
Yet, when opprest by sickness, grief, or
care,
And taught that pain is pleasure's natural heir,
We still confide in more than we can
know;
Death would be else the favourite friend of woe.

'Mid savage rocks, and seas of snow that shine, 540
Between interminable tracts of pine,
Within a temple stands an awful shrine,
By an uncertain light revealed, that falls
On the mute Image and the troubled
walls.
Oh! give not me that eye of hard dis-
dain 545
That views, undimmed, Einsiedlen's² wretched fane.
While ghastly faces through the gloom
appear,
Abortive joy, and hope that works in
fear;
While prayer contends with silenced
agony,

¹ The well-known effect of the famous air, called in French Ranz des Vaches, upon the Swiss troops.

² This shrine is resorted to, from a hope of relief, by multitudes, from every corner of the Catholic world, labouring under mental or bodily afflictions.

Surely in other thoughts contempt may
die. 550
If the sad grave of human ignorance bear
One flower of hope—oh, pass and leave it
there!

The tall sun, pausing on an Alpine
spire,
Flings o'er the wilderness a stream of fire:
Now meet we other pilgrims ere the
day 555
Close on the remnant of their weary way;
While they are drawing toward the sacred floor
Where, so they fondly think, the worm shall gnaw no more.
How gaily murmur and how sweetly taste
The fountains³ reared for them amid the
waste! 560
Their thirst they slake:—they wash their toil-worn feet,
And some with tears of joy each other
greet.
Yes, I must see you when ye first behold
Those holy turrets tipped with evening
gold,
In that glad moment will for you a
sigh 565
Be heaved of charitable sympathy;
In that glad moment when your hands are prest
In mute devotion on the thankful breast!

Last, let us turn to Chamouny that shields
With rocks and gloomy woods her fertile
fields: 570
Five streams of ice amid her cots descend,
And with wild flowers and blooming orchards blend;—
A scene more fair than what the Grecian
feigns
Of purple lights and ever-vernal plains;
Here all the seasons revel hand in
hand: 575

³ Rude fountains built and covered with sheds for the accommodation of the Pilgrims, in their ascent of the mountain.

'Mid lawns and shades by breezy rivulets fanned,
They sport beneath that mountain's matchless height
That holds no commerce with the summer night.
From age to age, throughout his lonely
bounds
The crash of ruin fitfully resounds; 580
Appalling havoc! but serene his brow,
Where daylight lingers on perpetual
snow;
Glitter the stars above, and all is black
below.

What marvel then if many a Wanderer
sigh, 584
While roars the sullen Arve in anger by,
That not for thy reward, unrivall'd Vale!
Waves the ripe harvest in the autumnal
gale;
That thou, the slave of slaves, art doomed to pine
And droop, while no Italian arts are
thine,
To soothe or cheer, to soften or refine. 590

Hail Freedom! whether it was mine to stray,
With shrill winds whistling round my lonely way,
On the bleak sides of Cumbria's heath-clad moors,
Or where dank sea-weed lashes Scotland's
shores;
To scent the sweets of Piedmont's breathing rose, 595
And orange gale that o'er Lugano blows;
Still have I found, where Tyranny prevails,
That virtue languishes and pleasure fails,
While the remotest hamlets blessings share
In thy loved presence known, and only
there; 600
Heart-blessings—outward treasures too which the eye
Of the sun peeping through the clouds can spy,
And every passing breeze will testify.
There, to the porch, belike with jasmine
bound

Or woodbine wreaths, a smoother path is wound; 605
The housewife there a brighter garden
sees,
Where hum on busier wing her happy
bees;
On infant cheeks there fresher roses blow;
And grey-haired men look up with livelier
brow,—
To greet the traveller needing food and
rest; 610
Housed for the night, or but a half-hour's guest.

And oh, fair France! though now the traveller sees Thy three-striped banner fluctuate on the
breeze;
Though martial songs have banished songs
of love,
And nightingales desert the village grove, Scared by the fife and rumbling drum's
alarms, 616
And the short thunder, and the flash of
arms;
That cease not till night falls, when far
and nigh,
Sole sound, the Sourd¹ prolongs his mournful cry;
—Yet hast thou found that Freedom
spreads her power 620
Beyond the cottage hearth, the cottage-
door:
All nature smiles, and owns beneath her
eyes
Her fields peculiar, and peculiar skies.
Yes, as I roamed where Loiret's waters
glide
Through rustling aspens heard from side to side, 625
When from October clouds a milder light Fell where the blue flood rippled into
white;
Methought from every cot the watchful
bird Crowed with ear-piercing power till then unheard;

¹ An insect so called, which emits a short, melancholy cry, heard at the close of the summer evenings, on the banks of the Loire.

Each clacking mill, that broke the murmuring streams, 630
Rocked the charmed thought in more delightful dreams;
Chasing those pleasant dreams, the falling leaf
Awoke a fainter sense of moral grief;
The measured echo of the distant flail
Wound in more welcome cadence down
the vale; 635
With more majestic course¹ the water
rolled,
And ripening foliage shone with richer
gold.
—But foes are gathering—Liberty must raise Red on the hills her beacon's far-seen blaze;
Must bid the tocsin ring from tower to
tower!— 640
Nearer and nearer comes the trying hour!
Rejoice, brave Land, though pride's perverted ire
Rouse hell's own aid, and wrap thy fields
in fire:
Lo, from the flames a great and glorious
birth;
As if a new-made heaven were hailing a new earth! 645
—All cannot be: the promise is too fair
For creatures doomed to breathe terrestrial air:
Yet not for this will sober reason frown
Upon that promise, nor the hope dis-
own;
She knows that only from high aims ensue 650
Rich guerdons, and to them alone are due.

Great God! by whom the strifes of men are weighed
In an impartial balance, give thine aid
To the just cause; and, oh! do thou pre-
side
Over the mighty stream now spreading
wide: 655

¹ The duties upon many parts of the French rivers were so exorbitant, that the poorer people, deprived of the benefit of water carriage, were obliged to transport their goods by land.

So shall its waters, from the heavens supplied
In copious showers, from earth by wholesome springs,
Brood o'er the long-parched lands with Nile-like wings!
And grant that every sceptred child of
day
Who cries presumptuous, "Here the flood shall stay," 660
May in its progress see thy guiding hand,
And cease the acknowledged purpose to withstand;
Or, swept in anger from the insulted
shore,
Sink with his servile bands, to rise no
more!

To-night, my Friend, within this humble cot 665
Be scorn and fear and hope alike forgot In timely sleep; and when, at break of
day,
On the tall peaks the glistening sunbeams
play,
With a light heart our course we may renew,
The first whose footsteps print the mountain dew. 670

Left upon a Seat in a Yew-tree, which stands near the lake of Esthwaite, on a desolate part of the shore, commanding a beautiful prospect.

[Begun 1787.—Completed 1795.—Published 1798.]

NAY, Traveller! rest. This lonely Yew-tree stands Far from all human dwelling: what if
here
No sparkling rivulet spread the verdant herb?
What if the bee love not these barren
boughs?
Yet, if the wind breathe soft, the curling
waves, 5
That break against the shore, shall lull thy mind
By one soft impulse saved from vacancy.

—————Who he was

That piled these stones and with the mossy sod
 First covered, and here taught this aged
 Tree 10
 With its dark arms to form a circling
 bower,
 I well remember.—He was one who owned No common soul. In youth by science nursed,
 And led by nature into a wild scene
 Of lofty hopes, he to the world went
 forth 15
 A favoured Being, knowing no desire Which genius did not hallow; 'gainst the taint
 Of dissolute tongues, and jealousy, and hate,
 And scorn,—against all enemies prepared,
 All but neglect. The world, for so it
 thought, 20
 Owed him no service; wherefore he at once
 With indignation turned himself away,
 And with the food of pride sustained his soul
 In solitude.—Stranger! these gloomy
 boughs
 Had charms for him; and here he loved to sit, 25
 His only visitants a straggling sheep,
 The stone-chat, or the glancing sandpiper:
 And on these barren rocks, with fern and
 heath,
 And juniper and thistle, sprinkled o'er, Fixing his downcast eye, he many an
 hour 30
 A morbid pleasure nourished, tracing here
 An emblem of his own unfruitful life:
 And, lifting up his head, he then would
 gaze
 On the more distant scene,—how lovely
 'tis
 Thou seest,—and he would gaze till it became 35
 Far lovelier, and his heart could not sustain
 The beauty, still more beautiful! Nor,
 that time,
When nature had subdued him to herself,
Would he forget those Beings to whose minds

Warm from the labours of benevolence 40
The world, and human life, appeared a
scene
Of kindred loveliness: then he would sigh,
 Inly disturbed, to think that others felt
 What he must never feel: and so, lost
 Man!
 On visionary views would fancy feed, 45 Till his eye streamed with tears. In this deep vale
 He died,—this seat his only monument.

If Thou be one whose heart the holy
 forms
 Of young imagination have kept pure, Stranger! henceforth be warned; and know that pride, 50
 Howe'er disguised in its own majesty,
 Is littleness; that he who feels contempt
 For any living thing, hath faculties
 Which he has never used; that thought with him
 Is in its infancy. The man whose eye 55
 Is ever on himself doth look on one,
 The least of Nature's works, one who might move
 The wise man to that scorn which wisdom holds Unlawful, ever. O be wiser, Thou!
 Instructed that true knowledge leads to
 love; 60
 True dignity abides with him alone
 Who, in the silent hour of inward thought,
 Can still suspect, and still revere himself,
 In lowliness of heart.

GUILT AND SORROW;

OR,

INCIDENTS UPON SALISBURY PLAIN.

[Begun 1791-92.—Completed 1793-94.—Published 1842.]

ADVERTISEMENT,

PREFIXED TO THE FIRST EDITION OF THIS POEM, PUBLISHED IN 1842.

NOT less than one-third of the following poem, though it has from time to time been altered in the expression, was published so far back as the year 1798, under the title of "The Female Vagrant." The extract is of such length that an apology seems to be required for reprinting it here: but it was necessary to restore it to its original position, or the rest would have been unintelligible. The whole was written before the close of the year 1794, and I will detail, rather as matter of literary biography than for any other reason, the circumstances under which it was produced.

During the latter part of the summer of 1798, having passed a month in the Isle of Wight, in view of the fleet which was then preparing for sea off Portsmouth at the commencement of the war, I left the place with melancholy forebodings. The American war was still fresh in memory. The struggle which was beginning, and which many thought would be brought to a speedy close by the irresistible arms of Great Britain being added to those of the Allies, I was assured in my own mind would be of long continuance, and productive of distress and misery beyond all possible calculation. This conviction was pressed upon me by having been a witness, during a long residence in revolutionary France, of the spirit which prevailed in that country. After leaving the Isle of Wight, I spent two days in wandering on foot over Salisbury Plain, which, though cultivation was then widely spread through parts of it, had upon the whole a still more impressive appearance than it now retains.

The monuments and traces of antiquity, scattered in abundance over that region, led me unavoidably to compare what we know or guess of those remote times with certain aspects of modern society, and with calamities, principally those consequent upon war, to which, more than other classes of men, the poor are subject. In those reflections, joined with particular facts that had come to my knowledge, the following stanzas originated.

In conclusion, to obviate some distraction in the minds of those who are well acquainted with Salisbury Plain, it may be proper to say that, of the features described as belonging to it, one or two are taken from other desolate parts of England.

I.

A TRAVELLER on the skirt of Sarum's
Plain
Pursued his vagrant way, with feet half
bare;
Stooping his gait, but not as if to gain
Help from the staff he bore; for mien and air

Were hardy, though his cheek seemed worn with care 5
Both of the time to come, and time long
fled:
Down fell in straggling locks his thin grey hair;
A coat he wore of military red But faded, and stuck o'er with many a patch and shred.

II.

While thus he journeyed, step by step led on, 10
He saw and passed a stately inn, full sure That welcome in such house for him was none.
No board inscribed the needy to allure Hung there, no bush proclaimed to old and poor
And desolate, "Here you will find a friend!" 15
The pendent grapes glittered above the
door;—
On he must pace, perchance till night
descend,
Where'er the dreary roads their bare white lines extend.

III.

The gathering clouds grew red with stormy fire,
In streaks diverging wide and mounting
high; 20
That inn he long had passed; the distant
spire,
Which oft as he looked back had fixed his
eye,
Was lost, though still he looked, in the blank sky.
Perplexed and comfortless he gazed around,
And scarce could any trace of man descry,
Save cornfields stretched and stretching without bound; 26
But where the sower dwelt was nowhere to be found.

IV.

No tree was there, no meadow's pleasant
green,
No brook to wet his lip or soothe his ear;

Long files of corn-stacks here and there were seen, 30
 But not one dwelling-place his heart to
 cheer.
 Some labourer, thought he, may perchance be near ;
 And so he sent a feeble shout—in vain ;
 No voice made answer, he could only hear
 Winds rustling over plots of unripe grain, Or whistling thro' thin grass along the unfurrowed plain. 36

v.

Long had he fancied each successive slope Concealed some cottage, whither he might turn
 And rest ; but now along heaven's darkening cope
 The crows rushed by in eddies, homeward
 borne. 40
 Thus warned he sought some shepherd's spreading thorn
 Or hovel from the storm to shield his head,
 But sought in vain ; for now, all wild,
 forlorn,
 And vacant, a huge waste around him
 spread ;
 The wet cold ground, he feared, must be his only bed. 45

vi.

And be it so—for to the chill night shower
 And the sharp wind his head he oft hath bared ;
 A Sailor he, who many a wretched hour
 Hath told ; for, landing after labour hard,
 Full long endured in hope of just reward,
 He to an armèd fleet was forced away 51
 By seamen, who perhaps themselves had shared
 Like fate ; was hurried off, a helpless prey,
 'Gainst all that in his heart, or theirs perhaps, said nay.

For years the work of carnage did not cease, 55
 And death's dire aspect daily he surveyed, Death's minister ; then came his glad release,
 And hope returned, and pleasure fondly
 made

Her dwelling in his dreams. By Fancy's aid
 The happy husband flies, his arms to throw 60
 Round his wife's neck ; the prize of victory
 laid
 In her full lap, he sees such sweet tears
 flow
 As if thenceforth nor pain nor trouble she could know.

viii.

Vain hope ! for fraud took all that he had earned.
 The lion roars and gluts his tawny brood
 Even in the desert's heart ; but he, returned, 66
 Bears not to those he loves their needful
 food.
 His home approaching, but in such a mood
 That from his sight his children might have run,
 He met a traveller, robbed him, shed his blood ; 70
 And when the miserable work was done
 He fled, a vagrant since, the murderer's fate to shun.

ix.

From that day forth no place to him could be
 So lonely, but that thence might come a pang 74
 Brought from without to inward misery.
 Now, as he plodded on, with sullen clang
 A sound of chains along the desert rang ;
 He looked, and saw upon a gibbet high
 A human body that in irons swang,
 Uplifted by the tempest whirling by ; 80
 And, hovering, round it often did a raven fly.

It was a spectacle which none might view,
 In spot so savage, but with shuddering
 pain ;
 Nor only did for him at once renew
 All he had feared from man, but roused a train 85
 Of the mind's phantoms, horrible as vain.
 The stones, as if to cover him from day,
 Rolled at his back along the living plain ;

He fell, and without sense or motion lay ;
But, when the trance was gone, feebly pursued his way. 90

XI.

As one whose brain habitual frenzy fires Owes to the fit in which his soul hath tossed
Profunder quiet, when the fit retires, Even so the dire phantasma which had crossed
His sense, in sudden vacancy quite lost, Left his mind still as a deep evening
stream. 96
Nor, if accosted now, in thought engrossed,
Moody, or inly troubled, would he seem To traveller who might talk of any casual theme.

XII.

Hurtle the clouds in deeper darkness
piled, 100
Gone is the raven timely rest to seek ;
He seemed the only creature in the wild
On whom the elements their rage might weak ;
Save that the bustard, of those regions bleak
Shy tenant, seeing by the uncertain light
A man there wandering, gave a mournful shriek, 106
And half upon the ground, with strange
affright,
Forced hard against the wind a thick unwieldy flight.

XIII.

All, all was cheerless to the horizon's
bound ;
The weary eye—which, wheresoe'er it strays, 110
Marks nothing but the red sun's setting
round,
Or on the earth strange lines, in former days
Left by gigantic arms—at length surveys
What seems an antique castle spreading
wide ;
Hoary and naked are its walls, and raise Their brow sublime: in shelter there to bide 116

He turned, while rain poured down smoking on every side.

XIV.

Pile of Stone-henge ! so proud to hint yet
keep Thy secrets, thou that lov'st to stand and
hear
The Plain resounding to the whirlwind's
sweep, 120
Inmate of lonesome Nature's endless year ;
Even if thou saw'st the giant wicker rear
For sacrifice its throngs of living men,
Before thy face did ever wretch appear,
Who in his heart had groaned with deadlier pain 125
Than he who, tempest-driven, thy shelter now would gain ?

XV.

Within that fabric of mysterious form Winds met in conflict, each by turns supreme ;
And, from the perilous ground dislodged, through storm
And rain he wildered on, no moon to
stream 130
From gulf of parting clouds one friendly beam,
Nor any friendly sound his footsteps led ;
Once did the lightning's faint disastrous
gleam
Disclose a naked guide-post's double head, Sight which, tho' lost at once, a gleam of pleasure shed. 135

XVI.

No swinging sign-board creaked from cottage elm
To stay his steps with faintness over-
come ;
'Twas dark and void as ocean's watery realm
Roaring with storms beneath night's starless gloom ;
No gipsy cower'd o'er fire of furze or broom ; 140
No labourer watched his red kiln glaring
bright,
Nor taper glimmered dim from sick man's
room ;

Along the waste no line of mournful light
From lamp of lonely toll-gate streamed athwart the night.

XVII.

At length, though hid in clouds, the moon arose; 145
The downs were visible—and now revealed
A structure stands, which two bare slopes enclose.
It was a spot where, ancient vows fulfilled,
Kind pious hands did to the Virgin build
A lonely Spital, the belated swain 150
From the night terrors of that waste to shield:
But there no human being could remain,
And now the walls are named the "Dead House" of the plain.

XVIII.

Though he had little cause to love the
abode
Of man, or covet sight of mortal face, 155
Yet when faint beams of light that ruin
showed,
How glad he was at length to find some
trace
Of human shelter in that dreary place.
Till to his flock the early shepherd goes,
Here shall much-needed sleep his frame embrace. 160
In a dry nook where fern the floor bestrows
He lays his stiffened limbs,—his eyes begin to close;

XIX.

When hearing a deep sigh, that seemed to come
From one who mourned in sleep, he raised his head,
And saw a woman in the naked room 165
Outstretched, and turning on a restless
bed:
The moon a wan dead light around her
shed.
He waked her—spake in tone that would not fail,
He hoped, to calm her mind; but ill he sped,

For of that ruin she had heard a tale 170
Which now with freezing thoughts did all her powers assail;

XX.

Had heard of one who, forced from storms to shroud,
Felt the loose walls of this decayed
Retreat
Rock to incessant neighings shrill and
loud,
While his horse pawed the floor with furious heat; 175
Till on a stone, that sparkled to his feet, Struck, and still struck again, the troubled horse:
The man half raised the stone with pain and sweat,
Half raised, for well his arm might lose its force
Disclosing the grim head of a late murdered corse. 180

XXI.

Such tale of this lone mansion she had learned,
And when that shape, with eyes in sleep
half drowned,
By the moon's sullen lamp she first discerned,
Cold stony horror all her senses bound.
Her he addressed in words of cheering
sound; 185
Recovering heart, like answer did she
make;
And well it was that of the corse there
found
In converse that ensued she nothing
spake;
She knew not what dire pangs in him such tale could wake.

XXII.

But soon his voice and words of kind intent 190
Banished that dismal thought; and now
the wind
In fainter howlings told its rage was spent:
Meanwhile discourse ensued of various
kind,

Which by degrees a confidence of mind
 And mutual interest failed not to create.
 And, to a natural sympathy resigned, 196
 In that forsaken building where they sate
 The Woman thus retraced her own untoward fate.

“By Derwent’s side my father dwelt—a
 man
 Of virtuous life, by pious parents bred ;
 And I believe that, soon as I began 201
 To lisp, he made me kneel beside my bed,
 And in his hearing there my prayers I
 said :
 And afterwards, by my good father
 taught,
 I read, and loved the books in which I
 read ; 205
 For books in every neighbouring house
 I sought,
 And nothing to my mind a sweeter pleasure brought.

XXIV.

“A little croft we owned—a plot of corn,
 A garden stored with peas, and mint, and thyme,
 And flowers for posies, oft on Sunday
 morn 210
 Plucked while the church bells rang their earliest chime.
 Can I forget our freaks at shearing time !
 My hen’s rich nest through long grass scarce espied ;
 The cowslip-gathering in June’s dewy
 prime ;
 The swans that with white chests up-reared in pride 215 Rushing and racing came to meet me at the waterside !

XXV.

“The staff I well remember which upbore
 The bending body of my active sire ;
 His seat beneath the honied sycamore Where the bees hummed, and chair by winter fire ; 220
 When market-morning came, the neat attire
 With which, though bent on haste, myself
 I decked ;

Our watchful house-dog, that would tease and tire
 The stranger till its barking-fit I checked ;
 The red-breast, known for years, which at my casement pecked. 225

“The suns of twenty summers danced
 along,— Too little marked how fast they rolled
 away :
 But, through severe mischance and cruel
 wrong,
 My father’s substance fell into decay :
 We toiled and struggled, hoping for a day
 When Fortune might put on a kinder
 look ; 231
 But vain were wishes, efforts vain as they ;
 He from his old hereditary nook Must part ; the summons came ;—our final leave we took.

XXVII.

“It was indeed a miserable hour 235
 When, from the last hill-top, my sire surveyed,
 Peering above the trees, the steeple tower
 That on his marriage day sweet music
 made !
 Till then he hoped his bones might there be laid
 Close by my mother in their native
 bowers : 240
 Bidding me trust in God, he stood and prayed ;—
 I could not pray :—through tears that fell in showers
 Glimmered our dear-loved home, alas ! no longer ours !

XXVIII.

“There was a Youth whom I had loved so long,
 That when I loved him not I cannot say :
 ’Mid the green mountains many a thoughtless song 246
 We two had sung, like gladsome birds in
 May ;
 When we began to tire of childish play,
 We seemed still more and more to prize
 each other ;

We talked of marriage and our marriage
day; 250
And I in truth did love him like a brother,
For never could I hope to meet with such another.

XXIX.

“Two years were passed since to a distant town
He had repaired to ply a gainful trade:
What tears of bitter grief, till then unknown, 255
What tender vows our last sad kiss delayed!
To him we turned:—we had no other aid:
Like one revived, upon his neck I wept;
And her whom he had loved in joy, he
said,
He well could love in grief; his faith he kept; 260
And in a quiet home once more my father slept.

XXX.

“We lived in peace and comfort; and were blest
With daily bread, by constant toil supplied.
Three lovely babes had lain upon my
breast;
And often, viewing their sweet smiles, I sighed, 265
And knew not why. My happy father
died,
When threatened war reduced the children’s meal:
Thrice happy! that for him the grave could hide
The empty loom, cold hearth, and silent wheel,
And tears which flowed for ills which patience might not heal. 270

“’Twas a hard change; an evil time was
come;
We had no hope, and no relief could gain:
But soon, with proud parade, the noisy drum
Beat round to clear the streets of want and pain.

My husband’s arms now only served to strain 275
Me and his children hungering in his view;
In such dismay my prayers and tears were vain:
To join those miserable men he flew,
And now to the sea-coast, with numbers more, we drew.

XXXII.

“There were we long neglected, and we bore 280
Much sorrow ere the fleet its anchor weighed;
Green fields before us, and our native
shore,
We breathed a pestilential air, that made Ravage for which no knell was heard.
We prayed
For our departure; wished and wished—nor knew, 285
’Mid that long sickness and those hopes delayed,
That happier days we never more must
view.
The parting signal streamed—at last the land withdrew.

XXXIII.

“But the calm summer season now was
past.
On as we drove, the equinoctial deep 290
Ran mountains high before the howling
blast,
And many perished in the whirlwind’s
sweep.
We gazed with terror on their gloomy
sleep,
Untaught that soon such anguish must ensue,
Our hopes such harvest of affliction reap,
That we the mercy of the waves should rue: 296
We reached the western world, a poor devoted crew.

XXXIV.

“The pains and plagues that on our heads came down,
Disease and famine, agony and fear, 299
In wood or wilderness, in camp or town,

It would unman the firmest heart to
hear.

All perished—all in one remorseless year, Husband and children! one by one, by
sword

And ravenous plague, all perished: every tear

Dried up, despairing, desolate, on board
A British ship I waked, as from a trance restored." 306

XXXV.

Here paused she, of all present thought
forlorn,

Nor voice, nor sound, that moment's pain expressed,

Yet Nature, with excess of grief o'er-
borne,

From her full eyes their watery load released. 310

He too was mute: and, ere her weeping
ceased,

He rose, and to the ruin's portal went,
And saw the dawn opening the silvery east

With rays of promise, north and southward sent;

And soon with crimson fire kindled the firmament. 315

XXXVI.

"O come," he cried, "come, after weary
night

Of such rough storm, this happy change
to view."

So forth she came, and eastward looked;
the sight

Over her brow like dawn of gladness threw;

Upon her cheek, to which its youthful hue 320

Seemed to return, dried the last lingering
tear,

And from her grateful heart a fresh one drew:

The whilst her comrade to her pensive
cheer

Tempered fit words of hope; and the lark warbled near.

XXXVII.

They looked and saw a lengthening road, and wain 325

That rang down a bare slope not far remote:

The barrows glistered bright with drops
of rain,

Whistled the waggoner with merry note,
The cock far off sounded his clarion
throat;

But town, or farm, or hamlet, none they viewed, 330

Only were told there stood a lonely cot
A long mile thence. While thither they pursued

Their way, the Woman thus her mournful tale renewed.

XXXVIII.

"Peaceful as this immeasurable plain Is now, by beams of dawning light im-prest, 335

In the calm sunshine slept the glittering
main;

The very ocean hath its hour of rest.
I too forgot the heavings of my breast.

How quiet 'round me ship and ocean were!
As quiet all within me. I was blest, 340

And looked, and fed upon the silent air
Until it seemed to bring a joy to my despair.

XXXIX.

"Ah! how unlike those late terrific sleeps,
And groans that rage of racking famine
spoke;

The unburied dead that lay in festering heaps, 345

The breathing pestilence that rose like
smoke,

The shriek that from the distant battle broke,

The mine's dire earthquake, and the pallid host

Driven by the bomb's incessant thunder-stroke

To loathsome vaults, where heart-sick anguish tossed, 350

Hope died, and fear itself in agony was lost!

XL.

“Some mighty gulf of separation passed,
I seemed transported to another world ;
A thought resigned with pain, when from the mast
The impatient mariner the sail unfurled,
And, whistling, called the wind that hardly curled 356
The silent sea. From the sweet thoughts of home
And from all hope I was for ever hurled.
For me—farthest from earthly port to
roam
Was best, could I but shun the spot where man might come. 360

XLI.

“And oft I thought (my fancy was so strong)
That I, at last, a resting-place had found ;
'Here will I dwell,' said I, 'my whole life
long,
Roaming the illimitable waters round ;
Here will I live, of all but heaven disowned, 365
And end my days upon the peaceful
flood.'—
To break my dream the vessel reached its
bound ;
And homeless near a thousand homes I
stood,
And near a thousand tables pined and wanted food.

XLII.

“No help I sought ; in sorrow turned adrift, 370
Was hopeless, as if cast on some bare
rock ;
Nor morsel to my mouth that day did lift,
Nor raised my hand at any door to knock.
I lay where, with his drowsy mates, the cock
From the cross-timber of an outhouse
hung : 375
Disnally tolled, that night, the city clock !
At morn my sick heart hunger scarcely stung,
Nor to the beggar's language could I fit my tongue.

XLIII.

“So passed a second day ; and, when the third Was come, I tried in vain the crowd's resort. 380
—In deep despair, by frightful wishes
stirred,
Near the sea-side I reached a ruined fort ;
There, pains which nature could no more support,
With blindness linked, did on my vitals
fall ;
And, after many interruptions short 385
Of hideous sense, I sank, nor step could crawl :
Unsought for was the help that did my life recall.

XLIV.

“Borne to a hospital, I lay with brain
Drowsy and weak, and shattered memory ;
I heard my neighbours in their beds com-
plain 390
Of many things which never troubled me—
Of feet still bustling round with busy glee,
Of looks where common kindness had no
part,
Of service done with cold formality, Fretting the fever round the languid
heart, 395
And groans which, as they said, might make a dead man start.

XLV.

“These things just served to stir the slumbering sense,
Nor pain nor pity in my bosom raised.
With strength did memory return ; and,
thence
Dismissed, again on open day I gazed, 400
At houses, men, and common light, amazed.
The lanes I sought, and, as the sun retired, Came where beneath the trees a faggot
blazed ;
The travellers saw me weep, my fate inquired,
And gave me food—and rest, more welcome, more desired. 405

“Rough potters seemed they, trading soberly
 With panniered asses driven from door to door;
 But life of happier sort set forth to me,
 And other joys my fancy to allure—
 The bag-pipe dinning on the midnight moor 410
 In barn uplighted; and companions boon,
 Well met from far with revelry secure
 Among the forest glades, while jocund June Rolled fast along the sky his warm and genial moon.

XLVII.

“But ill they suited me—those journeys dark 415
 O'er moor and mountain, midnight theft to hatch!
 To charm the surly house-dog's faithful bark,
 Or hang on tip-toe at the lifted latch.
 The gloomy lantern, and the dim blue match,
 The black disguise, the warning whistle shrill, 420
 And ear still busy on its nightly watch,
 Were not for me, brought up in nothing ill:
 Besides, on griefs so fresh my thoughts were brooding still.

XLVIII.

“What could I do, unaided and unblest?
 My father! gone was every friend of thine: 425
 And kindred of dead husband are at best Small help; and, after marriage such as mine,
 With little kindness would to me incline.
 Nor was I then for toil or service fit;
 My deep-drawn sighs no effort could confine; 430
 In open air forgetful would I sit Whole hours, with idle arms in moping sorrow knit.

XLIX.

“The roads I paced, I loitered through the fields;
 Contentedly, yet sometimes self-accused,
 Trusted my life to what chance bounty yields, 435
 Now coldly given, now utterly refused.
 The ground I for my bed have often used:
 But what afflicts my peace with keenest ruth,
 Is that I have my inner self abused,
 Forgone the home delight of constant truth, 440
 And clear and open soul, so prized in fearless youth.

“Through tears the rising sun I oft have viewed,
 Through tears have seen him towards that world descend
 Where my poor heart lost all its fortitude:
 Three years a wanderer now my course I bend— 445
 Oh! tell me whither—for no earthly friend
 Have I.”—She ceased, and weeping turned away;
 As if because her tale was at an end,
 She wept; because she had no more to say
 Of that perpetual weight which on her spirit lay. 450

LI.

True sympathy the Sailor's looks expressed,
 His looks—for pondering he was mute the while.
 Of social Order's care for wretchedness,
 Of Time's sure help to calm and reconcile,
 Joy's second spring and Hope's long-treasured smile, 455
 'Twas not for him to speak—a man so tried.
 Yet, to relieve her heart, in friendly style
 Proverbial words of comfort he applied,
 And not in vain, while they went pacing side by side.

LII.

Ere long, from heaps of turf, before their sight, 460

Together smoking in the sun's slant beam,
Rise various wreaths that into one unite Which high and higher mounts with silver gleam :

Fair spectacle,—but instantly a scream Thence bursting shrill did all remark prevent ; 465
They paused, and heard a hoarser voice
blaspheme,
And female cries. Their course they thither bent,
And met a man who foamed with anger vehement.

LIII.

A woman stood with quivering lips and pale,
And, pointing to a little child that lay 470 Stretched on the ground, began a piteous
tale ;
How in a simple freak of thoughtless play
He had provoked his father, who straight-
way,
As if each blow were deadlier than the last,
Struck the poor innocent. Pallid with dismay 475
The Soldier's Widow heard and stood aghast ;
And stern looks on the man her grey-haired Comrade cast.

LIV.

His voice with indignation rising high Such further deed in manhood's name forbade ;
The peasant, wild in passion, made reply
With bitter insult and revilings sad ; 481
Asked him in scorn what business there he had ;
What kind of plunder he was hunting
now ;
The gallows would one day of him be glad ;—
Though inward anguish damped the Sailor's brow, 485
Yet calm he seemed as thoughts so poignant would allow.

Softly he stroked the child, who lay outstretched

With face to earth ; and, as the boy turned round
His battered head, a groan the Sailor fetched

As if he saw—there and upon that ground—
Strange repetition of the deadly wound
He had himself inflicted. Through his brain 492
At once the griding iron passage found ;
Deluge of tender thoughts then rushed
amain,
Nor could his sunken eyes the starting tear restrain. 495

LVI.

Within himself he said—What hearts have we !
The blessing this a father gives his child !
Yet happy thou, poor boy ! compared with
me,
Suffering not doing ill—fate far more mild.
The stranger's looks and tears of wrath
beguiled 500
The father, and relenting thoughts awoke ;
He kissed his son—so all was reconciled.
Then, with a voice which inward trouble
broke Ere to his lips it came, the Sailor them bespoke.

“Bad is the world, and hard is the world's law 505
Even for the man who wears the warmest fleece ;
Much need have ye that time more closely draw
The bond of nature, all unkindness cease,
And that among so few there still be
peace :
Else can ye hope but with such numerous foes 510
Your pains shall ever with your years increase ?”— While from his heart the appropriate lesson flows,
A correspondent calm stole gently o'er his woes.

LVIII.

Forthwith the pair passed on ; and down they look

Into a narrow valley's pleasant scene 515
 Where wreaths of vapour tracked a winding brook,
 That babbled on through groves and meadows green ;
 A low-roofed house peeped out the trees
 between ;
 The dripping groves resound with cheerful lays,
 And melancholy lowings intervene 520
 Of scattered herds, that in the meadow graze,
 Some amid lingering shade, some touched by the sun's rays.

LIX.

They saw and heard, and, winding with the road
 Down a thick wood, they dropt into the
 vale ;
 Comfort by prouder mansions unbestowed Their wearied frames, she hoped, would soon regale. 526
 Ere long they reached that cottage in the
 dale :
 It was a rustic inn ;—the board was
 spread,
 The milk-maid followed with her brimming pail,
 And lustily the master carved the bread, Kindly the housewife pressed, and they in comfort fed. 531

LX.

Their breakfast done, the pair, though loth, must part ;
 Wanderers whose course no longer now agrees.
 She rose and bade farewell ! and, while her heart
 Struggled with tears nor could its sorrow
 ease, 535
 She left him there ; for, clustering round
 his knees,
 With his oak-staff the cottage children
 played ;
 And soon she reached a spot o'erhung with
 trees
 And banks of ragged earth ; beneath the
 shade
 Across the pebbly road a little runnel strayed. 540

LXI.

A cart and horse beside the rivulet stood ;
 Chequering the canvas roof the sunbeams shone.
 She saw the carman bend to scoop the
 flood
 As the wain fronted her,—wherein lay one,
 A pale-faced Woman, in disease far gone.
 The carman wet her lips as well behaved ;
 Bed under her lean body there was none, Though even to die near one she most had
 loved
 She could not of herself those wasted limbs have moved.

LXII.

The Soldier's Widow learned with honest
 pain 550
 And homefelt force of sympathy sincere, Why thus that worn-out wretch must there sustain
 The jolting road and morning air severe.
 The wain pursued its way ; and following
 near
 In pure compassion she her steps retraced 555
 Far as the cottage. "A sad sight is here,"
 She cried aloud ; and forth ran out in haste
 The friends whom she had left but a few minutes past.

LXIII.

While to the door with eager speed they ran,
 From her bare straw the Woman half upraised 560
 Her bony visage—gaunt and deadly wan ;
 No pity asking, on the group she gazed
 With a dim eye, distracted and amazed ;
 Then sank upon her straw with feeble moan.
 Fervently cried the housewife—"God be praised, 565
 I have a house that I can call my own ;
 Nor shall she perish there, untended and alone !"

LXIV.

So in they bear her to the chimney seat,
 And busily, though yet with fear, untie
 Her garments, and, to warm her icy feet
 And chafe her temples, careful hands apply. 571

Nature reviving, with a deep-drawn sigh
 She strove, and not in vain, her head to rear ;
 Then said—"I thank you all ; if I must
 die,
 The God in heaven my prayers for you will hear ; 575
 Till now I did not think my end had been so near.

LXV.

"Barred every comfort labour could procure, Suffering what no endurance could assuage,
 I was compelled to seek my father's door,
 Though loth to be a burthen on his age.
 But sickness stopped me in an early stage
 Of my sad journey ; and within the wain
 They placed me—there to end life's pilgrimage,
 Unless beneath your roof I may remain :
 For I shall never see my father's door
 again. 585

LXVI.

"My life, Heaven knows, hath long been burthensome ;
 But, if I have not meekly suffered, meek May my end be ! Soon will this voice be dumb :
 Should child of mine e'er wander hither,
 speak
 Of me, say that the worm is on my
 cheek.— 590
 Torn from our hut, that stood beside the
 sea
 Near Portland lighthouse in a lonesome creek,
 My husband served in sad captivity
 On shipboard, bound till peace or death should set him free.

LXVII.

"A sailor's wife I knew a widow's cares,
 Yet two sweet little ones partook my bed ;
 Hope cheered my dreams, and to my daily prayers 597
 Our heavenly Father granted each day's bread ;
 Till one was found by stroke of violence
 dead,

Whose body near our cottage chanced to lie ; 600
 A dire suspicion drove us from our shed ;
 In vain to find a friendly face we try,
 Nor could we live together those poor boys and I ;

LXVIII.

"For evil tongues made oath how on that
 day
 My husband lurked about the neighbourhood ; 605
 Now he had fled, and whither none could
 say,
 And he had done the deed in the dark
 wood—
 Near his own home !—but he was mild and good ;
 Never on earth was gentler creature seen ;
 He'd not have robbed the raven of its
 food. 610
 My husband's loving kindness stood between
 Me and all worldly harms and wrongs however keen."

LXIX.

Alas ! the thing she told with labouring
 breath
 The Sailor knew too well. That wickedness
 His hand had wrought ; and when, in the hour of death, 615
 He saw his Wife's lips move his name to bless
 With her last words, unable to suppress His anguish, with his heart he ceased to strive ;
 And, weeping loud in this extreme distress,
 He cried—"Do pity me ! That thou shouldst live 620
 I neither ask nor wish—forgive me, but forgive !"

LXX.

To tell the change that Voice within her
 wrought
 Nature by sign or sound made no essay ;
 A sudden joy surprised expiring thought,
 And every mortal pang dissolved away.

Borne gently to a bed, in death she lay ;
 Yet still, while over her the husband bent,
 A look was in her face which seemed to say,
 "Be blest : by sight of thee from heaven was sent

Peace to my parting soul, the fulness of content." 630

LXXI.

She slept in peace,—his pulses throbbed and stopped,

Breathless he gazed upon her face,—then took

Her hand in his, and raised it, but both dropped,

When on his own he cast a rueful look.

His ears were never silent ; sleep forsook His burning eyelids stretched and stiff as lead ; 636

All night from time to time under him shook

The floor as he lay shuddering on his bed ;
 And oft he groaned aloud, "O God, that I were dead !"

LXXII.

The Soldier's Widow lingered in the cot ;
 And, when he rose, he thanked her pious
 care 641

Through which his Wife, to that kind shelter brought,

Died in his arms ; and with those thanks
 a prayer

He breathed for her, and for that merciful pair.

The corse interred, not one hour he remained 645

Beneath their roof, but to the open air
 A burthen, now with fortitude sustained,
 He bore within a breast where dreadful quiet reigned.

LXXIII.

Confirmed of purpose, fearlessly prepared
 For act and suffering, to the city straight
 He journeyed, and forthwith his crime declared : 651

"And from your doom," he added, "now
 I wait,

Nor let it linger long, the murderer's fate."
 Not ineffectual was that piteous claim :

"O welcome sentence which will end though late," 655

He said, "the pangs that to my conscience
 came

Out of that deed. My trust, Saviour ! is in thy name !"

LXXIV.

His fate was pitied. Him in iron case (Reader, forgive the intolerable thought) They hung not :—no one on his form or
 face 660

Could gaze, as on a show by idlers sought ;
 No kindred sufferer, to his death-place
 brought

By lawless curiosity or chance,
 When into storm the evening sky is
 wrought,

Upon his swinging corse an eye can glance, 665

And drop, as he once dropped, in miserable trance.

The Borderers.

A TRAGEDY.

SCENE, Borders of England and Scotland.

TIME, The Reign of Henry III.

READERS already acquainted with my Poems will recognise, in the following composition, some eight or ten lines, which I have not scrupled to retain in the places where they originally stood. It is proper however to add that they would not have been used elsewhere, if I had foreseen the time when I might be induced to publish this Tragedy.

February 28, 1842.

ACT I.

SCENE, Road in a Wood.

WALLACE and LACY.

Lacy. The Troop will be impatient;
let us hie
Back to our post, and strip the Scottish Foray
Of their rich Spoil, ere they recross the Border.
—Pity that our young Chief will have no
part
In this good service.

Wal. Rather let us grieve 5
That, in the undertaking which has caused His absence, he hath sought, whate'er his
aim,
Companionship with One of crooked ways,
From whose perverted soul can come no
good
To our confiding, open-hearted, Leader. 10

Lacy. True; and, remembering how the Band have proved That Oswald finds small favour in our
sight,
Well may we wonder he has gained such
power
Over our much-loved Captain.

Wal. I have heard
Of some dark deed to which in early life
His passion drove him—then a Voyager Upon the midland Sea. You knew his bearing 17
In Palestine?

Lacy. Where he despised alike Mohammedan and Christian. But enough; Let us begone—the Band may else be foiled. [Exeunt.]

Enter MARMADUKE and WILFRED.

Wil. Be cautious, my dear Master!

Mar. I perceive

That fear is like a cloak which old men huddle

About their love, as if to keep it warm.

Wil. Nay, but I grieve that we should part. This Stranger, 24
For such he is—

Mar. Your busy fancies, Wilfred, Might tempt me to a smile; but what of
him?

Wil. You know that you have saved his life.

Mar. I know it.

Wil. And that he hates you!—Pardon me, perhaps
That word was hasty.

Mar. Fy! no more of it.

Wil. Dear Master! gratitude's a heavy burden 30
To a proud Soul.—Nobody loves this Oswald—

Yourself, you do not love him.

Mar. I do more,
I honour him. Strong feelings to his heart
Are natural; and from no one can be learnt More of man's thoughts and ways than his experience 35

Has given him power to teach: and then for courage

And enterprise—what perils hath he shunned?

What obstacles hath he failed to over-
come?

Answer these questions, from our common knowledge, 39

And be at rest.

Wil. Oh, Sir!

Mar. Peace, my good Wilfred;
Repair to Liddesdale, and tell the Band
I shall be with them in two days at farthest.

Wil. May He whose eye is over all protect you! [Exit.

Enter OSWALD (a bunch of plants in his hand).

Osw. This wood is rich in plants and curious simples. 44

Mar. (looking at them). The wild rose, and the poppy, and the nightshade:

Which is your favourite, Oswald?

Osw. That which, while it is Strong to destroy, is also strong to heal—

[Looking forward.

Not yet in sight!—We'll saunter here awhile;

They cannot mount the hill, by us unseen.

Mar. (a letter in his hand). It is no common thing when one like you 50 Performs these delicate services, and therefore

I feel myself much bounden to you,
Oswald;

'Tis a strange letter this!—You saw her write it?

Osw. And saw the tears with which she blotted it.

Mar. And nothing less would satisfy
him?

Osw. No less; 55

For that another in his Child's affection
Should hold a place, as if 'twere robbery,
He seemed to quarrel with the very
thought.

Besides, I know not what strange prejudice
Is rooted in his mind; this Band of ours,
Which you've collected for the noblest ends, 61

Along the confines of the Esk and Tweed
To guard the Innocent—he calls us “Outlaws;”

And, for yourself, in plain terms he asserts
This garb was taken up that indolence 65
Might want no cover, and rapacity

Be better fed.

Mar. Ne'er may I own the heart
That cannot feel for one, helpless as he is.

Osw. Thou know'st me for a Man not easily moved,

Yet was I grievously provoked to think 70
Of what I witnessed.

Mar. This day will suffice
To end her wrongs.

Osw. But if the blind Man's tale
Should yet be true?

Mar. Would it were possible!
Did not the Soldier tell thee that himself,
And others who survived the wreck,
beheld 75

The Baron Herbert perish in the waves
Upon the coast of Cyprus?

Osw. Yes, even so,
And I had heard the like before: in sooth

The tale of this his quondam Barony
Is cunningly devised; and, on the back 80
Of his forlorn appearance, could not fail
To make the proud and vain his tributaries,
And stir the pulse of lazy charity.
The seignories of Herbert are in Devon;
We, neighbours of the Esk and Tweed:
'tis much 85
The Arch-impostor—

Mar. Treat him gently, Oswald;
Though I have never seen his face,
methinks,
There cannot come a day when I shall
cease

To love him. I remember, when a Boy
Of scarcely seven years' growth, beneath the Elm 90

That casts its shade over our village school,
'Twas my delight to sit and hear Idonea
Repeat her Father's terrible adventures, Till all the band of playmates wept together;

And that was the beginning of my love. 95
And, through all converse of our later
years,

An image of this old Man still was present,
When I had been most happy. Pardon me
If this be idly spoken.

Osw. See, they come, 99
Two Travellers!

Mar. (points). The woman is Idonea.

Osw. And leading Herbert.

Mar. We must let them pass—
This thicket will conceal us.

[They step aside.]

Enter IDONEA, leading HERBERT blind.

Idon. Dear Father, you sigh deeply;
ever since

We left the willow shade by the brook-
side,

Your natural breathing has been troubled.

Her. Nay, 105

You are too fearful; yet must I confess,
Our march of yesterday had better suited
A firmer step than mine.

Idon. That dismal Moor—

In spite of all the larks that cheered our
path,

I never can forgive it: but how steadily

You paced along, when the bewildering moonlight 111

Mocked me with many a strange fantastic
shape!—

I thought the Convent never would
appear;

It seemed to move away from us: and yet
That you are thus the fault is mine; for

the air 115

Was soft and warm, no dew lay on the grass,

And midway on the waste ere night had fallen

I spied a Covert walled and roofed with sods—

A miniature; belike some Shepherd-boy,
Who might have found a nothing-doing

hour 120

Heavier than work, raised it: within that hut

We might have made a kindly bed of
heath,

And thankfully there rested side by side Wrapped in our cloaks, and, with recruited strength,

Have hailed the morning sun. But cheerily, Father,— 125

That staff of yours, I could almost have
heart

To fling't away from you: you make no
use

Of me, or of my strength;—come, let me
feel

That you do press upon me. There—indeed

You are quite exhausted. Let us rest awhile 130

On this green bank. [He sits down.]

Her. (after some time). Idonea, you are silent,

And I divine the cause.

Idon. Do not reproach me:

I pondered patiently your wish and will When I gave way to your request; and
now,

When I behold the ruins of that face, 135
Those eyeballs dark—dark beyond hope
of light,

And think that they were blasted for my
sake,

The name of Marmaduke is blown away:

Father, I would not change that sacred feeling

For all this world can give.

Her. Nay, be composed: 140
Few minutes gone a faintness overspread
My frame, and I bethought me of two things

I ne'er had heart to separate—my grave,
And thee, my Child!

Idon. Believe me, honoured Sire!
'Tis weariness that breeds these gloomy fancies, 145

And you mistake the cause: you hear the woods

Resound with music, could you see the sun,

And look upon the pleasant face of Nature—

Her. I comprehend thee—I should be as cheerful

As if we two were twins; two songsters bred 150

In the same nest, my spring-time one with thine.

My fancies, fancies if they be, are such

As come, dear Child! from a far deeper source

Than bodily weariness. While here we sit

I feel my strength returning. The bequest 155

Of thy kind Patroness, which to receive

We have thus far adventured, will suffice

To save thee from the extreme of penury; But when thy Father must lie down and die,

How wilt thou stand alone?

Idon. Is he not strong? 160
Is he not valiant?

Her. Am I then so soon Forgotten? have my warnings passed so quickly

Out of thy mind? My dear, my only, Child;

Thou wouldst be leaning on a broken reed—

This Marmaduke—

Idon. O could you hear his voice: 165
Alas! you do not know him. He is one (I wot not what ill tongue has wronged him with you)

All gentleness and love. His face bespeaks

A deep and simple meekness: and that Soul,

Which with the motion of a virtuous act
Flashes a look of terror upon guilt, 171

Is, after conflict, quiet as the ocean,
By a miraculous finger stilled at once.

Her. Unhappy Woman!

Idon. Nay, it was my duty
Thus much to speak; but think not I forget— 175

Dear Father! how could I forget and live?—

You and the story of that doleful night
When, Antioch blazing to her topmost towers,

You rushed into the murderous flames,
returned

Blind as the grave, but, as you oft have told me, 180

Clasping your infant Daughter to your heart.

Her. Thy Mother too!—scarce had I gained the door,

I caught her voice; she threw herself upon me,

I felt thy infant brother in her arms;
She saw my blasted face—a tide of soldiers 185

That instant rushed between us, and I heard

Her last death-shriek, distinct among a thousand.

Idon. Nay, Father, stop not; let me hear it all,

Her. Dear Daughter! precious relic of that time—

For my old age, it doth remain with thee
To make it what thou wilt. Thou hast

been told, 191

That when, on our return from Palestine,
I found how my domains had been usurped,

I took thee in my arms, and we began
Our wanderings together. Providence 195

At length conducted us to Rossland,—
there,

Our melancholy story moved a Stranger
To take thee to her home—and for myself,

Soon after, the good Abbot of St. Cuthbert's

Supplied my helplessness with food and raiment, 200

And, as thou know'st, gave me that humble Cot

Where now we dwell.—For many years I bore

Thy absence, till old age and fresh infirmities

Exacted thy return, and our reunion.

I did not think that, during that long absence, 205

My Child, forgetful of the name of Herbert,

Had given her love to a wild Freebooter, Who here, upon the borders of the Tweed,

Doth prey alike on two distracted Countries, 209

Traitor to both.

Idon. Oh, could you hear his voice! I will not call on Heaven to vouch for me, But let this kiss speak what is in my heart.

Enter a Peasant.

Pea. Good morrow, Strangers! If you want a Guide,

Let me have leave to serve you!

Idon. My Companion Hath need of rest; the sight of Hut or Hostel 215

Would be most welcome.

Pea. Yon white hawthorn gained, You will look down into a dell, and there Will see an ash from which a sign-board hangs;

The house is hidden by the shade. Old Man,

You seem worn out with travel—shall I support you? 220

Her. I thank you; but, a resting-place so near,

'Twere wrong to trouble you.

Pea. God speed you both. [Exit Peasant.]

Her. Idonea, we must part. Be not alarmed—

'Tis but for a few days—a thought has struck me.

Idon. That I should leave you at this house, and thence 225

Proceed alone. It shall be so; for strength Would fail you ere our journey's end be reached.

[Exit HERBERT supported by IDONEA.]

Re-enter MARMADUKE and OSWALD.

Mar. This instant will we stop him—

Osw. Be not hasty,

For sometimes, in despite of my conviction,

He tempted me to think the Story true; 'Tis plain he loves the Maid, and what he said 231

That savoured of aversion to thy name

Appeared the genuine colour of his soul—Anxiety lest mischief should befall her

After his death.

Mar. I have been much deceived.

Osw. But sure he loves the Maiden, and never love 236

Could find delight to nurse itself so strangely,

Thus to torment her with inventions!—death—

There must be truth in this.

Mar. Truth in his story! He must have felt it then, known what it was, 240

And in such wise to rack her gentle heart Had been a tenfold cruelty.

Osw. Strange pleasures

Do we poor mortals cater for ourselves! To see him thus provoke her tenderness

With tales of weakness and infirmity! 245 I'd wager on his life for twenty years.

Mar. We will not waste an hour in such a cause.

Osw. Why, this is noble! shake her off at once.

Mar. Her virtues are his instruments. —A Man

Who has so practised on the world's cold sense, 250

May well deceive his Child—What! leave her thus,

A prey to a deceiver?—no—no—no—

'Tis but a word and then—

Osw. Something is here

More than we see, or whence this strong aversion?

Marmaduke! I suspect unworthy tales

Have reached his ear—you have had enemies. 256

Mar. Enemies!—of his own coinage.

Osw. That may be,

But wherefore slight protection such as
you

Have power to yield? perhaps he looks elsewhere.—

I am perplexed.

Mar. What hast thou heard or seen?

Osw. No—no—the thing stands clear of mystery; 261

(As you have said) he coins himself the slander

With which he taints her ear;—for a plain reason;

He dreads the presence of a virtuous
man

Like you; he knows your eye would search his heart, 265

Your justice stamp upon his evil deeds
The punishment they merit. All is plain:

It cannot be—

Mar. What cannot be?

Osw. Yet that a Father

Should in his love admit no rivalship,
And torture thus the heart of his own

Child— 270

Mar. Nay, you abuse my friendship!

Osw. Heaven forbid!—

There was a circumstance, trifling indeed—

It struck me at the time—yet I believe
I never should have thought of it again

But for the scene which we by chance have witnessed. 275

Mar. What is your meaning?

Osw. Two days gone I saw,

Though at a distance and he was disguised,

Hovering round Herbert's door, a man whose figure

Resembled much that cold voluptuary,
The villain, Clifford. He hates you, and he knows 280

Where he can stab you deepest.

Mar. Clifford never

Would stoop to skulk about a Cottage
door—

It could not be.

Osw. And yet I now remember

That, when your praise was warm upon
my tongue,

And the blind Man was told how you had rescued 285

A maiden from the ruffian violence

Of this same Clifford, he became impatient

And would not hear me.

Mar. No—it cannot be—

I dare not trust myself with such a
thought—

Yet whence this strange aversion? You are a man 290

Not used to rash conjectures—

Osw. If you deem it

A thing worth further notice, we must act
With caution, sift the matter artfully.

[Exeunt MARMADUKE and OSWALD.]

SCENE, The door of the Hostel.

HERBERT, IDONEA, and Host.

Her. (seated). As I am dear to you, remember, Child!

This last request.

Idon. You know me, Sire; farewell!

Her. And are you going then? Come, come, Idonea, 296

We must not part,—I have measured many a league

When these old limbs had need of rest,— and now

I will not play the sluggard.

Idon. Nay, sit down.

[Turning to Host.]

Good Host, such tendance as you would expect 300

From your own Children, if yourself were sick,

Let this old Man find at your hands;
poor Leader, [Looking at the dog.]

We soon shall meet again. If thou neglect
This charge of thine, then ill befall thee!

—Look,

The little fool is loth to stay behind. 305

Sir Host! by all the love you bear to courtesy,

Take care of him, and feed the truant
well.

Host. Fear not, I will obey you;—but One so young,

And One so fair, it goes against my heart
That you should travel unattended, Lady!—
I have a palfrey and a groom: the lad 311
Shall squire you, (would it not be better, Sir?)

And for less fee than I would let him run
For any lady I have seen this twelvemonth.

Idon. You know, Sir, I have been too long your guard 315

Not to have learnt to laugh at little fears.
Why, if a wolf should leap from out a thicket,

A look of mine would send him scouring
back,

Unless I differ from the thing I am 319
When you are by my side.

Her. Idonea, wolves
Are not the enemies that move my fears.

Idon. No more, I pray, of this. Three days at farthest

Will bring me back—protect him, Saints
—farewell! [Exit IDONEA.]

Host. 'Tis never drought with us—
St. Cuthbert and his Pilgrims,

Thanks to them, are to us a stream of comfort: 325

Pity the Maiden did not wait a while;
She could not, Sir, have failed of company.

Her. Now she is gone, I fain would call her back.

Host. (calling). Holla!

Her. No, no, the business must be done.—

What means this riotous noise?

Host. The villagers
Are flocking in—a wedding festival— 331
That's all—God save you, Sir.

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. Ha! as I live,
The Baron Herbert.

Host. Mercy, the Baron Herbert!

Osw. So far into your journey! on my
life,

You are a lusty Traveller. But how fare
you? 335

Her. Well as the wreck I am permits.
And you, Sir?

Osw. I do not see Idonea.

Her. Dutiful Girl,

She is gone before, to spare my weariness.
But what has brought you hither?

Osw. A slight affair,
That will be soon despatched.

Her. Did Marmaduke 340
Receive that letter?

Osw. Be at peace.—The tie
Is broken, you will hear no more of him.

Her. This is true comfort, thanks a thousand times!—

That noise!—would I had gone with her as far

As the Lord Clifford's Castle: I have
heard 345

That, in his milder moods, he has expressed

Compassion for me. His influence is great With Henry, our good King;—the Baron
might

Have heard my suit, and urged my plea at Court.

No matter—he's a dangerous Man.—That noise!— 350

'Tis too disorderly for sleep or rest.
Idonea would have fears, for me,—the Convent

Will give me quiet lodging. You have a boy, good Host,
And he must lead me back.

Osw. You are most lucky;
I have been waiting in the wood hard by
For a companion—here he comes; our journey 356

Enter MARMADUKE.

Lies on your way; accept us as your Guides.

Her. Alas! I creep so slowly.

Osw. Never fear;
We'll not complain of that.

Her. My limbs are stiff And need repose. Could you but wait an hour? 360

Osw. Most willingly!—Come, let me lead you in,

And, while you take your rest, think not of us;

We'll stroll into the wood; lean on my arm.

[Conducts HERBERT into the house.]

Exit MARMADUKE.

Enter Villagers.

Osw. (to himself coming out of the Hostel).

I have prepared a most apt Instrument—

The Vagrant must, no doubt, be loitering somewhere 365

About this ground; she hath a tongue well skilled,

By mingling natural matter of her own
With all the daring fictions I have taught her,

To win belief, such as my plot requires.

[Exit OSWALD.]

Enter more Villagers, a Musician among them.

Host (to them). Into the court, my Friend, and perch yourself 370

Aloft upon the elm-tree. Pretty Maids, Garlands and flowers, and cakes and merry thoughts,

Are here, to send the sun into the west
More speedily than you belike would wish.

SCENE changes to the Wood adjoining the Hostel—MARMADUKE and OSWALD entering.

Mar. I would fain hope that we deceive ourselves: 375

When first I saw him sitting there, alone,
It struck upon my heart I know not how.

Osw. To-day will clear up all.—You marked a Cottage,

That ragged Dwelling, close beneath a
rock

By the brook-side: it is the abode of One,
A Maiden innocent till ensnared by Clifford, 381

Who soon grew weary of her; but, alas!
What she had seen and suffered turned her brain.

Cast off by her Betrayer, she dwells alone, Nor moves her hands to any needful
work: 385

She eats her food which every day the peasants

Bring to her hut; and so the Wretch has lived

Ten years; and no one ever heard her
voice;

But every night at the first stroke of twelve
She quits her house and, in the neighbouring Churchyard 390

Upon the self-same spot, in rain or storm,
She paces out the hour 'twixt twelve and
one—

She paces round and round an Infant's
grave,

And in the Churchyard sod her feet have worn

A hollow ring; they say it is knee-
deep— 395

Ah! what is here?

[A female Beggar rises up, rubbing her eyes as if in sleep—a Child in her arms.]

Beg. Oh! Gentlemen, I thank you;
I've had the saddest dream that ever troubled

The heart of living creature.—My poor
Babe

Was crying, as I thought, crying for bread

When I had none to give him; whereupon 400

I put a slip of foxglove in his hand,
Which pleased him so, that he was hushed at once:

When into one of those same spotted bells
A bee came darting, which the Child with
joy 404

Imprisoned there, and held it to his ear,
And suddenly grew black, as he would die.

Mar. We have no time for this, my babbling Gossip;

Here's what will comfort you.

[Gives her money.]

Beg. The Saints reward you For this good deed!—Well, Sirs, this passed away; 409

And afterwards I fancied, a strange dog,
Trotting alone along the beaten road,

Came to my child as by my side he slept,
And, fondling, licked his face, then on a sudden

Snapped fierce to make a morsel of his
head:

But here he is, [kissing the Child] it must have been a dream. 415

Osw. When next inclined to sleep, take my advice

And put your head, good Woman, under cover.

Beg. Oh, Sir, you would not talk thus, if you knew

What life is this of ours, how sleep will master

The weary-worn.—You gentlefolk have got 420

Warm chambers to your wish. I'd rather be

A stone than what I am.—But two nights gone,

The darkness overtook me—wind and rain Beat hard upon my head—and yet I saw

A glow-worm, through the covert of the furze, 425

Shine calmly as if nothing ailed the sky: At which I half accused the God in Heaven.—

You must forgive me.

Osw. Ay, and if you think The Fairies are to blame, and you should chide

Your favourite saint—no matter—this good day 430

Has made amends.

Beg. Thanks to you both; but, Oh Sir!

How would you like to travel on whole hours

As I have done, my eyes upon the ground,

Expecting still, I knew not how, to find A piece of money glittering through the dust? 435

Mar. This woman is a prater. Pray, good Lady!

Do you tell fortunes?

Beg. Oh Sir, you are like the rest. This Little-one—it cuts me to the heart—Well! they might turn a beggar from their doors,

But there are Mothers who can see the Babe 440

Here at my breast, and ask me where I bought it:

This they can do, and look upon my face—But you, Sir, should be kinder.

Mar. Come hither, Fathers, And learn what nature is from this poor Wretch!

Beg. Ay, Sir, there's nobody that feels for us. 445

Why now—but yesterday I overtook A blind old Greybeard and accosted him, P' th' name of all the Saints, and by the Mass

He should have used me better!—Charity! If you can melt a rock, he is your man; But I'll be even with him—here again 451 Have I been waiting for him.

Osw. Well, but softly, Who is it that hath wronged you?

Beg. Mark you me; I'll point him out;—a Maiden is his guide, Lovely as Spring's first rose; a little dog, Tied by a woollen cord, moves on before With look as sad as he were dumb; the cur, 457

I owe him no ill will, but in good sooth He does his Master credit.

Mar. As I live, 'Tis Herbert and no other!

Beg. 'Tis a feast to see him, Lank as a ghost and tall, his shoulders bent, 461

And long beard white with age—yet evermore,

As if he were the only Saint on earth, He turns his face to heaven.

Osw. But why so violent Against this venerable Man?

Beg. I'll tell you: 465 He has the very hardest heart on earth; I had as lief turn to the Friar's school And knock for entrance, in mid holiday.

Mar. But to your story.

Beg. I was saying, Sir— Well!—he has often spurned me like a toad, 470

But yesterday was worse than all; at last

I overtook him, Sirs, my Babe and I, And begged a little aid for charity: But he was snappish as a cottage cur.

Well then, says I—I'll out with it; at which 475

I cast a look upon the Girl, and felt As if my heart would burst; and so I left him.

Osw. I think, good Woman, you are the very person

Whom, but some few days past, I saw in Eskdale, 479
At Herbert's door.

Beg. Ay; and if truth were known
I have good business there.

Osw. I met you at the threshold,
And he seemed angry.

Beg. Angry! well he might;
And long as I can stir I'll dog him.—
Yesterday,

To serve me so, and knowing that he owes
The best of all he has to me and mine. 485
But 'tis all over now. That good old
Lady

Has left a power of riches; and I say it,
If there's a lawyer in the land, the knave
Shall give me half.

Osw. What's this?—I fear, good Woman,
You have been insolent.

Beg. And there's the Baron,
I spied him skulking in his peasant's dress. 491

Osw. How say you? in disguise?—

Mar. But what's your business
With Herbert or his Daughter?

Beg. Daughter! truly—
But how's the day?—I fear, my little
Boy,

We've overslept ourselves.—Sirs, have you seen him? [Offers to go.]

Mar. I must have more of this;—you shall not stir 496

An inch, till I am answered. Know you aught

That doth concern this Herbert?

Beg. You are provoked,
And will misuse me, Sir!

Mar. No trifling, Woman!—

Osw. You are as safe as in a sanctuary; 500
Speak.

Mar. Speak!

Beg. He is a most hard-hearted Man.

Mar. Your life is at my mercy.

Beg. Do not harm me,
And I will tell you all!—You know not,
Sir,

What strong temptations press upon the Poor.

Osw. Speak out.

Beg. Oh, Sir, I've been a wicked
Woman. 505

Osw. Nay, but speak out!

Beg. He flattered me, and said
What harvest it would bring us both;
and so

I parted with the Child.

Mar. Parted with whom?

Beg. Idonea, as he calls her; but the Girl
Is mine.

Mar. Yours, Woman! are you Herbert's wife? 510

Beg. Wife, Sir! his wife—not I; my husband, Sir,

Was of Kirkoswald—many a snowy winter

We've weathered out together. My poor Gilfred!

He has been two years in his grave.

Mar. Enough.

Osw. We've solved the riddle—Miscreant!

Mar. Do you, 515
Good Dame, repair to Liddesdale and wait

For my return; be sure you shall have justice.

Osw. A lucky woman!—go, you have done good service. [Aside.]

Mar. (to himself). Eternal praises on the power that saved her!— 519

Osw. (gives her money). Here's for your little boy, and when you christen him
I'll be his Godfather.

Beg. Oh Sir, you are merry with me.
In grange or farm this Hundred scarcely owns

A dog that does not know me.—These good Folks,—

For love of God I must not pass their doors;

But I'll be back with my best speed: for
you— 525

God bless and thank you both, my gentle
Masters. [Exit Beggar.]

Mar. (to himself). The cruel Viper!— Poor devoted Maid,
Now I do love thee.

Osw. I am thunderstruck.

Mar. Where is she—holla!

[*Calling to the Beggar, who returns;
he looks at her stedfastly.*]

You are Idonea's Mother?—

Nay, be not terrified—it does me good 530
To look upon you.

Osw. (interrupting). In a peasant's dress

You saw, who was it?

Beg. Nay, I dare not speak ;
He is a man, if it should come to his ears

I never shall be heard of more.

Osw. Lord Clifford?

Beg. What can I do? believe me, gentle Sirs, 535

I love her, though I dare not call her daughter.

Osw. Lord Clifford—did you see him talk with Herbert?

Beg. Yes, to my sorrow—under the great oak

At Herbert's door—and when he stood beside

The blind Man—at the silent Girl he looked 540

With such a look—it makes me tremble,
Sir,

To think of it.

Osw. Enough! you may depart.

Mar. (to himself) Father!—to God himself we cannot give 543

A holier name; and, under such a mask,
To lead a Spirit, spotless as the blessed,

To that abhorred den of brutish vice!—
Oswald, the firm foundation of my life

Is going from under me; these strange discoveries—

Looked at from every point of fear or
hope,

Duty, or love—involve, I feel, my ruin. 550

ACT II.

SCENE, A Chamber in the Hostel—OSWALD alone, rising from a Table on which he had been writing.

Osw. They chose him for their Chief!— what covert part

He in the preference, modest Youth, might take,

I neither know nor care. The insult bred More of contempt than hatred; both are flown;

That either e'er existed is my shame: 555
'Twas a dull spark—a most unnatural fire
That died the moment the air breathed upon it.

—These fools of feeling are mere birds of winter

That haunt some barren island of the north,

Where, if a famishing man stretch forth
his hand, 560

They think it is to feed them. I have left
him

To solitary meditation;—now
For a few swelling phrases, and a flash

Of truth, enough to dazzle and to blind,
And he is mine for ever—here he comes.

Enter MARMADUKE.

Mar. These ten years she has moved her lips all day 566

And never speaks!

Osw. Who is it?

Mar. I have seen her.

Osw. Oh! the poor tenant of that ragged homestead,

Her whom the Monster, Clifford, drove to madness.

Mar. I met a peasant near the spot; he told me, 570

These ten years she had sate all day alone
Within those empty walls.

Osw. I too have seen her;
Chancing to pass this way some six months gone,

At midnight, I betook me to the Churchyard:

The moon shone clear, the air was still,
so still 575

The trees were silent as the graves beneath them.

Long did I watch, and saw her pacing
round

Upon the self-same spot, still round and
round,

Her lips for ever moving.

Mar. At her door Rooted I stood; for, looking at the woman, 580

I thought I saw the skeleton of Idonea.

Osw. But the pretended Father—

Mar. Earthly law

Measures not crimes like his.

Osw. We rank not, happily,
With those who take the spirit of their rule

From that soft class of devotees who feel Reverence for life so deeply, that they spare 586

The verminous brood, and cherish what they spare

While feeding on their bodies. Would that Idonea

Were present, to the end that we might
hear

What she can urge in his defence; she loves him. 590

Mar. Yes, loves him; 'tis a truth that multiplies

His guilt a thousand-fold.

Osw. 'Tis most perplexing:
What must be done?

Mar. We will conduct her hither;
These walls shall witness it—from first to last

He shall reveal himself.

Osw. Happy are we, 595
Who live in these disputed tracts, that own No law but what each man makes for himself;

Here justice has indeed a field of triumph.

Mar. Let us begone and bring her hither;—here

The truth shall be laid open, his guilt
proved 600

Before her face. The rest be left to me.

Osw. You will be firm: but though we well may trust

The issue to the justice of the cause,
Caution must not be flung aside; remember,

Yours is no common life. Self-stationed
here, 605

Upon these savage confines, we have seen you

Stand like an isthmus 'twixt two stormy
seas

That oft have checked their fury at your bidding.

'Mid the deep holds of Solway's mossy
waste,

Your single virtue has transformed a
Band 610

Of fierce barbarians into Ministers
Of peace and order. Aged men with tears Have blessed their steps, the fatherless
retire 613

For shelter to their banners. But it is,
As you must needs have deeply felt, it is In darkness and in tempest that we seek
The majesty of Him who rules the world.
Benevolence, that has not heart to use
The wholesome ministry of pain and evil,
Becomes at last weak and contemptible.

Your generous qualities have won due
praise, 621

But vigorous Spirits look for something
more

Than Youth's spontaneous products; and
to-day

You will not disappoint them; and hereafter—

Mar. You are wasting words; hear me then once for all: 625

You are a Man—and therefore, if compassion,

Which to our kind is natural as life,
Be known unto you, you will love this Woman,

Even as I do; but I should loathe the
light,

If I could think one weak or partial feeling— 630

Osw. You will forgive me—

Mar. If I ever knew
My heart, could penetrate its inmost core,

'Tis at this moment.—Oswald, I have
loved

To be the friend and father of the oppressed,

A comforter of sorrow;—there is something 635

Which looks like a transition in my soul,
And yet it is not.—Let us lead him hither.

Osw. Stoop for a moment; 'tis an act of justice;

And where's the triumph if the delegate
Must fall in the execution of his office? 640

The deed is done—if you will have it so—Here where we stand—that tribe of vulgar wretches

(You saw them gathering for the festival)

Rush in—the villains seize us—

Mar. Seize!

Osw. Yes, they—

Men who are little given to sift and weigh— 645

Would wreak on us the passion of the moment.

Mar. The cloud will soon disperse—farewell—but stay,

Thou wilt relate the story.

Osw. Am I neither
To bear a part in this Man's punishment,
Nor be its witness?

Mar. I had many hopes 650
That were most dear to me, and some will bear

To be transferred to thee.

Osw. When I'm dishonoured!

Mar. I would preserve thee. How may this be done?

Osw. By showing that you look beyond the instant.

A few leagues hence we shall have open
ground, 655

And nowhere upon earth is place so fit
To look upon the deed. Before we enter The barren Moor, hangs from a beetling
rock

The shattered Castle in which Clifford oft

Has held infernal orgies—with the gloom,
And very superstition of the place, 661
Seasoning his wickedness. The Debauchee Would there perhaps have gathered the first fruits

Of this mock Father's guilt.

Enter Host conducting HERBERT.

Host. The Baron Herbert
Attends your pleasure.

Osw. (to Host). We are ready—

(to HERBERT) Sir! 665

I hope you are refreshed.—I have just written

A notice for your Daughter, that she may
know

What is become of you.—You'll sit down and sign it;

'Twill glad her heart to see her father's signature.

[Gives the letter he had written.]

Her. Thanks for your care.

[Sits down and writes. Exit Host.]

Osw. (aside to MARMADUKE). Perhaps it would be useful 670

That you too should subscribe your name.
[MARMADUKE overlooks HERBERT —then writes—examines the letter eagerly.]

Mar. I cannot leave this paper.

[He puts it up, agitated.]

Osw. (aside). Dastard! Come.

[MARMADUKE goes towards HER-BERT and supports him—MAR-MADUKE tremblingly beckons
OSWALD to take his place.]

Mar. (as he quits HERBERT). There is a palsy in his limbs—he shakes.

[Exit OSWALD and HERBERT—MARMADUKE following.]

SCENE changes to a Wood—a Group of Pilgrims and IDONEA with them.

First Pil. A grove of darker and more lofty shade

I never saw.

Sec. Pil. The music of the birds 675 Drops deadened from a roof so thick with leaves.

Old Pil. This news! it made my heart leap up with joy.

Idon. I scarcely can believe it.

Old Pil. Myself, I heard
The Sheriff read, in open Court, a letter Which purported it was the royal pleasure 680

The Baron Herbert, who, as was supposed,
Had taken refuge in this neighbourhood,
Should be forthwith restored. The hearing, Lady,

Filled my dim eyes with tears.—When
I returned

From Palestine, and brought with me a
heart, 685

Though rich in heavenly, poor in earthly,
comfort,

I met your Father, then a wandering Outcast:

He had a Guide, a Shepherd's boy; but grieved

He was that One so young should pass his youth

In such sad service ; and he parted with
him. 690

We joined our tales of wretchedness
together,

And begged our daily bread from door to door.

I talk familiarly to you, sweet Lady !
For once you loved me.

Idon. You shall back with me
And see your Friend again. The good old
Man 695

Will be rejoiced to greet you.

Old Pil. It seems but yesterday That a fierce storm o'ertook us, worn with travel,

In a deep wood remote from any town.
A cave that opened to the road presented
A friendly shelter, and we entered in. 700

Idon. And I was with you?

Old Pil. If indeed 'twas you—
But you were then a tottering Little-
one—

We sate us down. The sky grew dark and darker :

I struck my flint, and built up a small
fire

With rotten boughs and leaves, such as the winds 705

Of many autumns in the cave had piled.
Meanwhile the storm fell heavy on the
woods ;

Our little fire sent forth a cheering warmth

And we were comforted, and talked of
comfort ;

But 'twas an angry night, and o'er our heads 710

The thunder rolled in peals that would have made

A sleeping man uneasy in his bed.

O Lady, you have need to love your Father.

His voice—methinks I hear it now, his
voice

When, after a broad flash that filled the cave, 715

He said to me, that he had seen his
Child,

A face (no cherub's face more beautiful) Revealed by lustre brought with it from
heaven ;

And it was you, dear Lady !

Idon. God be praised,
That I have been his comforter till now !
And will be so through every change of fortune 721

And every sacrifice his peace requires.— Let us begone with speed, that he may
hear

These joyful tidings from no lips but
mine. 724

[Exeunt IDONEA and Pilgrims.]

SCENE, The Area of a half-ruined Castle—on one side the entrance to a dungeon—OSWALD and MARMADUKE pacing backwards and forwards.

Mar. 'Tis a wild night.

Osw. I'd give my cloak and bonnet
For sight of a warm fire.

Mar. The wind blows keen ;
My hands are numb.

Osw. Ha ! ha ! 'tis nipping cold.
[Blowing his fingers.]

I long for news of our brave Comrades ;
Lacy

Would drive those Scottish Rovers to their dens

If once they blew a horn this side the Tweed. 730

Mar. I think I see a second range of Towers ;

This castle has another Area—come,
Let us examine it.

Osw. 'Tis a bitter night ;
I hope Idonea is well housed. That horseman,

Who at full speed swept by us where the
wood 735

Roared in the tempest, was within an ace
Of sending to his grave our precious
Charge :

That would have been a vile mischance.

Mar. It would.

Osw. Justice had been most cruelly defrauded.

Mar. Most cruelly.

Osw. As up the steep we clomb,
I saw a distant fire in the north-east ; 741
I took it for the blaze of Cheviot Beacon :
With proper speed our quarters may be gained

To-morrow evening.

[Looks restlessly towards the mouth of the dungeon.]

Mar. When, upon the plank,
I had led him 'cross the torrent, his voice blessed me: 745

You could not hear, for the foam beat the
rocks

With deafening noise,—the benediction
fell

Back on himself; but changed into a curse.

Osw. As well indeed it might.

Mar. And this you deem
The fittest place?

Osw. (aside). He is growing pitiful. 750

Mar. (listening). What an odd moaning that is!—

Osw. Mighty odd

The wind should pipe a little, while we stand

Cooling our heels in this way!—I'll begin
And count the stars.

Mar. (still listening). That dog of his,
you are sure,

Could not come after us—he must have perished; 755

The torrent would have dashed an oak to splinters.

You said you did not like his looks—that he

Would trouble us; if he were here again,
I swear the sight of him would quail me

more

Than twenty armies.

Osw. How?

Mar. The old blind Man,
When you had told him the mischance,

was troubled 761

Even to the shedding of some natural tears
Into the torrent over which he hung,

Listening in vain.

Osw. He has a tender heart!

[OSWALD offers to go down into the dungeon.]

Mar. How now, what mean you?

Osw. Truly, I was going To waken our stray Baron. Were there

not 766

A farm or dwelling-house within five leagues,

We should deserve to wear a cap and bells,

Three good round years, for playing the fool here

In such a night as this.

Mar. Stop, stop.

Osw. Perhaps, 770

You'd better like we should descend
together,

And lie down by his side—what say you to it?

Three of us—we should keep each other warm:

I'll answer for it that our four-legged
friend

Shall not disturb us; further I'll not engage; 775

Come, come, for manhood's sake!

Mar. These drowsy shiverings,
This mortal stupor which is creeping over

me,

What do they mean? were this my single body

Opposed to armies, not a nerve would tremble:

Why do I tremble now?—Is not the depth 780

Of this Man's crimes beyond the reach of
thought?

And yet, in plumbing the abyss for judgment,

Something I strike upon which turns my
mind

Back on herself, I think, again—my
breast 784

Concentres all the terrors of the Universe:
I look at him and tremble like a child.

Osw. Is it possible?

Mar. One thing you noticed not:
Just as we left the glen a clap of thunder

Burst on the mountains with hell-rousing force.

This is a time, said he, when guilt may shudder; 790

But there's a Providence for them who
walk

In helplessness, when innocence is with
them.

At this audacious blasphemy, I thought
The spirit of vengeance seemed to ride
the air.

Osw. Why are you not the man you were that moment? 795 [He draws MARMADUKE to the dungeon.]

Mar. You say he was asleep,—look at this arm,
And tell me if 'tis fit for such a work.

Oswald, Oswald! [Leans upon OSWALD.]

Osw. This is some sudden seizure!

Mar. A most strange faintness,—will you hunt me out
A draught of water?

Osw. Nay, to see you thus 800
Moves me beyond my bearing.—I will try To gain the torrent's brink. [Exit OSWALD.]

Mar. [after a pause.] It seems an age Since that Man left me.—No, I am not
lost.

Her. [at the mouth of the dungeon.] Give me your hand; where are you,
Friends? and tell me
How goes the night.

Mar. 'Tis hard to measure time
In such a weary night, and such a
place. 806

Her. I do not hear the voice of my friend Oswald.

Mar. A minute past, he went to fetch a draught

Of water from the torrent. 'Tis, you'll say,
A cheerless beverage.

Her. How good it was in you To stay behind!—Hearing at first no answer, 811
I was alarmed.

Mar. No wonder; this is a place
That well may put some fears into your
heart.

Her. Why so? a roofless rock had been a comfort,
Storm-beaten and bewildered as we were; 815

And in a night like this to lend your cloaks
To make a bed for me!—My Girl will weep
When she is told of it.

Mar. This Daughter of yours
Is very dear to you.

Her. Oh! but you are young;
Over your head twice twenty years must roll, 820

With all their natural weight of sorrow
and pain,
Ere can be known to you how much a Father

May love his Child.

Mar. Thank you, old Man, for this!
[Aside.]

Her. Fallen am I, and worn out, a useless Man;

Kindly have you protected me to-
night, 825

And no return have I to make but prayers;

May you in age be blest with such a daughter!—

When from the Holy Land I had returned

Sightless, and from my heritage was
driven,

A wretched Outcast—but this strain of
thought 830

Would lead me to talk fondly.

Mar. Do not fear;
Your words are precious to my ears;
go on.

Her. You will forgive me, but my heart runs over.

When my old Leader slipped into the
flood

And perished, what a piercing outcry
you 835

Sent after him. I have loved you ever since.

You start—where are we?

Mar. Oh, there is no danger;
The cold blast struck me.

Her. 'Twas a foolish question.

Mar. But when you were an Outcast?— Heaven is just;

Your piety would not miss its due reward; 840

The little Orphan then would be your succour,

And do good service, though she knew it
not.

Her. I turned me from the dwellings of my Fathers,

Where none but those who trampled on my rights

Seemed to remember me. To the wide world 845

I bore her in my arms; her looks won pity;
She was my Raven in the wilderness,
And brought me food. Have I not cause to love her?

Mar. Yes.

Her. More than ever Parent loved a Child? 849

Mar. Yes, yes.

Her. I will not murmur, merciful God!
I will not murmur; blasted as I have been,
Thou hast left me ears to hear my Daughter's voice,
And arms to fold her to my heart. Submissively 853
Thee I adore, and find my rest in faith.

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. Herbert!—confusion! (aside). Here it is, my Friend, [Presents the Horn.
A charming beverage for you to carouse
This bitter night.

Her. Ha! Oswald! ten bright crosses
I would have given, not many minutes
gone,
To have heard your voice.

Osw. Your couch, I fear, good Baron, Has been but comfortless; and yet that
place, 860

When the tempestuous wind first drove us hither,
Felt warm as a wren's nest. You'd better
turn

And under covert rest till break of day,
Or till the storm abate.

(To MARMADUKE aside.) He has restored
you,

No doubt you have been nobly entertained? 865

But soft!—how came he forth? The Nightmare Conscience

Has driven him out of harbour?

Mar. I believe
You have guessed right.

Her. The trees renew their murmur:
Come, let us house together.

[OSWALD conducts him to the dungeon.

Osw. (returns). Had I not Esteemed you worthy to conduct the affair 870

To its most fit conclusion, do you think

I would so long have struggled with my Nature,
And smothered all that's man in me?—
away!—

[Looking towards the dungeon.

This man's the property of him who best Can feel his crimes. I have resigned a privilege; 875

It now becomes my duty to resume it.

Mar. Touch not a finger—

Osw. What then must be done?

Mar. Which way so'er I turn, I am perplexed.

Osw. Now, on my life, I grieve for you.
The misery

Of doubt is insupportable. Pity, the facts
Did not admit of stronger evidence; 881 Twelve honest men, plain men, would set us right;

Their verdict would abolish these weak scruples.

Mar. Weak! I am weak—there does my torment lie,

Feeding itself.

Osw. Verily, when he said 885
How his old heart would leap to hear her
steps,

You thought his voice the echo of Idonea's.

Mar. And never heard a sound so terrible.

Osw. Perchance you think so now?

Mar. I cannot do it:
Twice did I spring to grasp his withered
throat, 890

When such a sudden weakness fell upon
me,

I could have dropped asleep upon his
breast.

Osw. Justice—is there not thunder in the word?

Shall it be law to stab the petty robber
Who aims but at our purse; and shall

this Parricide— 895

Worse is he far, far worse (if foul dishonour

Be worse than death) to that confiding
Creature

Whom he to more than filial love and duty Hath falsely trained—shall he fulfil his purpose?

But you are fallen.

Mar. Fallen should I be indeed— 900
Murder—perhaps asleep, blind, old, alone, Betrayed, in darkness! Here to strike the blow—

Away! away!—[Flings away his sword.]

Osw. Nay, I have done with you:
We'll lead him to the Convent. He shall
live,

And she shall love him. With unquestioned title 905

He shall be seated in his Barony,
And we too chant the praise of his good deeds.

I now perceive we do mistake our masters,

And most despise the men who best can teach us:

Henceforth it shall be said that bad men only 910

Are brave: Clifford is brave; and that old Man

Is brave.

[Taking MARMADUKE'S sword and giving it to him.]

To Clifford's arms he would have led His Victim—haply to this desolate house.

Mar. (advancing to the dungeon). It must be ended!—

Osw. Softly; do not rouse him;
He will deny it to the last. He lies 915 Within the Vault, a spear's length to the left.

*[MARMADUKE descends to the dungeon.
(Alone).]* The Villains rose in mutiny to destroy me;

I could have quelled the Cowards, but this Stripling

Must needs step in, and save my life. The
look

With which he gave the boon—I see it
now! 920

The same that tempted me to loathe the gift.—

For this old venerable Grey-beard—faith
'Tis his own fault if he hath got a face Which doth play tricks with them that look on it:

'Twas this that put it in my thoughts—that countenance— 925

His staff—his figure—Murder!—what, of whom?

We kill a worn-out horse, and who but women

Sigh at the deed? Hew down a withered
tree,

And none look grave but dotards. He may live

To thank me for this service. Rainbow arches, 930

Highways of dreaming passion, have too
long,

Young as he is, diverted wish and hope
From the unpretending ground we mortals
tread;—

Then shatter the delusion, break it up And set him free. What follows? I have learned 935

That things will work to ends the slaves
o' the world

Do never dream of. I have been what he—
This Boy—when he comes forth with bloody hands—

Might envy, and am now,—but he shall
know

What I am now—

[Goes and listens at the dungeon.]

Praying or parleying?—tut! 940

Is he not eyeless? He has been half-dead
These fifteen years—

Enter female Beggar with two or three of her Companions.

(Turning abruptly). Ha! speak—what Thing art thou?

(Recognises her). Heavens! my good Friend! [To her.]

Beg. Forgive me, gracious Sir!—

Osw. (to her companions). Begone, ye Slaves, or I will raise a whirlwind

And send ye dancing to the clouds, like leaves. [They retire affrighted.]

Beg. Indeed we meant no harm; we lodge sometimes 946

In this deserted Castle—I repent me.

[OSWALD goes to the dungeon—listens—returns to the Beggar.]

Osw. Woman, thou hast a helpless Infant—keep

Thy secret for its sake, or verily That wretched life of thine shall be the forfeit. 950

Beg. I do repent me, Sir; I fear the curse

Of that blind Man. 'Twas not your money, Sir,—

Osw. Begone!

Beg. (going). There is some wicked deed in hand: [Aside.

Would I could find the old Man and his Daughter. [Exit Beggar.

MARMADUKE re-enters from the dungeon.

Osw. It is all over then;—your foolish fears
Are hushed to sleep, by your own act and deed,
Made quiet as he is.

Mar. Why came you down? And when I felt your hand upon my arm And spake to you, why did you give no answer?

Feared you to waken him? he must have been In a deep sleep. I whispered to him thrice. There are the strangest echoes in that place!

Osw. Tut! let them gabble till the day of doom.

Mar. Scarcely, by groping, had I reached the Spot,
When round my wrist I felt a cord drawn tight,
As if the blind Man's dog were pulling at it.

Osw. But after that?

Mar. The features of Idonea Lurked in his face—

Osw. Pshaw! Never to these eyes Will retribution show itself again
With aspect so inviting. Why forbid me To share your triumph?

Mar. Yes, her very look, Smiling in sleep—

Osw. A pretty feat of Fancy!

Mar. Though but a glimpse, it sent me to my prayers.

Osw. Is he alive?

Mar. What mean you? who alive?

Osw. Herbert! since you will have it, Baron Herbert;
He who will gain his Seignory when Idonea
Hath become Clifford's harlot—is he living?

Mar. The old Man in that dungeon is alive.

Osw. Henceforth, then, will I never in camp or field

Obeys you more. Your weakness, to the Band,

Shall be proclaimed: brave Men, they all shall hear it.

You a protector of humanity!
Avenger you of outraged innocence!

Mar. 'Twas dark—dark as the grave; yet did I see,
Saw him—his face turned toward me; and I tell thee

Idonea's filial countenance was there To baffle me—it put me to my prayers. Upwards I cast my eyes, and, through a crevice, Beheld a star twinkling above my head, And, by the living God, I could not do it. [Sinks exhausted.

Osw. (to himself). Now may I perish if this turn do more Than make me change my course. (To MARMADUKE). Dear Marmaduke, My words were rashly spoken; I recall them:

I feel my error; shedding human blood Is a most serious thing.

Mar. Not I alone, Thou too art deep in guilt.

Osw. We have indeed Been most presumptuous. There is guilt in this,

Else could so strong a mind have ever known These trepidations? Plain it is that Heaven

Has marked out this foul Wretch as one whose crimes

Must never come before a mortal judgment-seat,

Or be chastised by mortal instruments.

Mar. A thought that's worth a thousand worlds!

[Goes towards the dungeon.

Osw. I grieve That, in my zeal, I have caused you so much pain.

Mar. Think not of that! 'tis over—we are safe.

Osw. (as if to himself, yet speaking aloud).
The truth is hideous, but how stifle it?

[Turning to MARMADUKE.

Give me your sword—nay, here are stones and fragments,

The least of which would beat out a man's brains;

Or you might drive your head against that wall. 1009

No! this is not the place to hear the tale:
It should be told you pinioned in your
bed,

Or on some vast and solitary plain
Blown to you from a trumpet.

Mar. Why talk thus?
Whate'er the monster brooding in your
breast

I care not: fear I have none, and cannot
fear— 1015

[The sound of a horn is heard.

That horn again—'Tis some one of our Troop;

What do they here? Listen!

Osw. What; dogged like thieves!

Enter WALLACE and LACY, &c.

Lacy. You are found at last, thanks to the vagrant Troop
For not misleading us.

Osw. (looking at WALLACE). That subtle
Grey-beard— 1019

I'd rather see my father's ghost.

Lacy (to MARMADUKE). My Captain,
We come by order of the Band. Belike
You have not heard that Henry has at last Dissolved the Barons' League, and sent
abroad

His Sheriffs with fit force to reinstate
The genuine owners of such Lands and Baronies 1025

As, in these long commotions, have been seized.

His Power is this way tending. It befits us

To stand upon our guard, and with our swords

Defend the innocent.

Mar. Lacy! we look 1029
But at the surfaces of things; we hear

Of towns in flames, fields ravaged, young and old

Driven out in troops to want and naked-
ness;

Then grasp our swords and rush upon a cure

That flatters us, because it asks not
thought:

The deeper malady is better hid; 1035
The world is poisoned at the heart.

Lacy. What mean you?

Wal. (whose eye has been fixed suspiciously upon OSWALD). Ay, what is it you mean?

Mar. Harkee, my Friends;—
[Appearing gay.

Were there a Man who, being weak and helpless

And most forlorn, should bribe a Mother,
pressed 1039

By penury, to yield him up her Daughter,
A little Infant, and instruct the Babe, Prattling upon his knee, to call him Father—

Lacy. Why, if his heart be tender, that offence

I could forgive him.

Mar. (going on). And should he make the Child

An instrument of falsehood, should he teach her 1045

To stretch her arms, and dim the glad-some light

Of infant playfulness with piteous looks
Of misery that was not—

Lacy. Troth, 'tis hard—

But in a world like ours—

Mar. (changing his tone). This self-same Man—

Even while he printed kisses on the cheek
Of this poor Babe, and taught its innocent
tongue 1051

To lisp the name of Father—could he look
To the unnatural harvest of that time

When he should give her up, a Woman
grown, 1054

To him who bid the highest in the market
Of foul pollution—

Lacy. The whole visible world

Contains not such a Monster!

Mar. For this purpose

Should he resolve to taint her Soul by means

Which bathe the limbs in sweat to think of them;

Should he, by tales which would draw tears from iron, 1060

Work on her nature, and so turn compassion

And gratitude to ministers of vice,
And make the spotless spirit of filial love
Prime mover in a plot to damn his Victim
Both soul and body—

Wal. 'Tis too horrible; 1065
Oswald, what say you to it?

Lacy. Hew him down,
And fling him to the ravens.

Mar. But his aspect,
It is so meek, his countenance so vena-rable.

Wal. (with an appearance of mistrust).
But how, what say you, Oswald?

Lacy (at the same moment). Stab him, were it

Before the Altar.

Mar. What, if he were sick, 1070
Tottering upon the very verge of life,

And old, and blind—

Lacy. Blind, say you?
Osw. (coming forward). Are we Men,

Or own we baby Spirits? Genuine courage
Is not an accidental quality,

A thing dependent for its casual birth
On opposition and impediment. 1076

Wisdom, if Justice speak the word, beats
down

The giant's strength; and, at the voice of Justice,

Spares not the worm. The giant and the worm—

She weighs them in one scale. The wiles of woman, 1080

And craft of age, seducing reason, first Made weakness a protection, and obscured

The moral shapes of things. His tender cries

And helpless innocence—do they protect The infant lamb? and shall the infirmities, 1085

Which have enabled this enormous Culprit
To perpetrate his crimes, serve as a Sanctuary

To cover him from punishment? Shame!—
Justice,

Admitting no resistance, bends alike
The feeble and the strong. She needs not
here 1090

Her bonds and chains, which make the mighty feeble.

—We recognise in this old Man a victim
Prepared already for the sacrifice.

Lacy. By heaven, his words are reason!
Osw. Yes, my Friends,

His countenance is meek and vena-
rable; 1095

And, by the Mass, to see him at his prayers!—

I am of flesh and blood, and may I perish
When my heart does not ache to think of it!—

Poor Victim! not a virtue under heaven
But what was made an engine to ensnare
thee; 1100

But yet I trust, Idonea, thou art safe.

Lacy. Idonea!

Wal. How! what? your Idonea?
[To MARMADUKE.

Mar. Mine;
But now no longer mine. You know

Lord Clifford;

He is the Man to whom the Maiden—pure
As beautiful, and gentle and benign, 1105

And in her ample heart loving even me—
Was to be yielded up.

Lacy. Now, by the head
Of my own child, this Man must die; my
hand,

A worthier wanting, shall itself entwine
In his grey hairs!—

Mar. (to LACY). I love the Father in
thee. 1110

You know me, Friends; I have a heart
to feel,

And I have felt, more than perhaps becomes me

Or duty sanctions.

Lacy. We will have ample justice.
Who are we, Friends? Do we not live on
ground

Where Souls are self-defended, free to grow 1115

Like mountain oaks rocked by the stormy
wind.

Mark the Almighty Wisdom, which decreed

This monstrous crime to be laid open—
here,

Where Reason has an eye that she can
use,

And Men alone are Umpires. To the Camp 1120

He shall be led, and there, the Country
round

All gathered to the spot, in open day
Shall Nature be avenged.

Osw. 'Tis nobly thought;
His death will be a monument for ages.

Mar. (to LACY). I thank you for that hint. He shall be brought 1125 Before the Camp, and would that best and wisest

Of every country might be present. There His crime shall be proclaimed; and for the rest

It shall be done as Wisdom shall decide:
Meanwhile, do you two hasten back and
see 1130

That all is well prepared.

Wal. We will obey you.
(Aside). But softly! we must look a little nearer.

Mar. Tell where you found us. At some future time
I will explain the cause. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE, The door of the Hostel, a group of Pilgrims as before; IDONEA and the Host among them.

Host. Lady, you'll find your Father at the Convent 1135

As I have told you: He left us yesterday With two Companions; one of them, as seemed,

His most familiar Friend. (Going.) There was a letter

Of which I heard them speak, but that I fancy

Has been forgotten.

Idon. (to Host). Farewell!

Host. Gentle pilgrims, St. Cuthbert speed you on your holy errand. 1141

[Exeunt IDONEA and Pilgrims.]

SCENE, A desolate Moor.

OSWALD (alone).

Osw. Carry him to the Camp! Yes, to the Camp.

Oh, Wisdom! a most wise resolve! and
then,

That half a word should blow it to the winds!

This last device must end my work.—
Methinks 1145

It were a pleasant pastime to construct
A scale and table of belief—as thus—

Two columns, one for passion, one for proof;

Each rises as the other falls: and first,
Passion a unit and against us—proof—

Nay, we must travel in another path, 1151
Or we're stuck fast for ever;—passion,
then,

Shall be a unit for us; proof—no, passion!
We'll not insult thy majesty by time,

Person, and place—the where, the when,
the how, 1155

And all particulars that dull brains require

To constitute the spiritless shape of Fact,
They bow to, calling the idol, Demonstration.

A whipping to the Moralists who preach
That misery is a sacred thing: for me,

I know no cheaper engine to degrade a
man, 1161

Nor any half so sure. This Stripling's
mind

Is shaken till the dregs float on the sur-
face;

And, in the storm and anguish of the
heart,

He talks of a transition in his Soul, 1165
And dreams that he is happy. We dissect

The senseless body, and why not the
mind?—

These are strange sights—the mind of man, upturned,

Is in all natures a strange spectacle;
In some a hideous one—hem! shall I stop? 1170

No.—Thoughts and feelings will sink deep, but then

They have no substance. Pass but a few minutes,
And something shall be done which Memory
May touch, when'er her Vassals are at work.

Enter MARMADUKE, from behind.

Osw. (turning to meet him). But listen, for my peace—

Mar. Why, I believe you.

Osw. But hear the proofs—

Mar. Ay, prove that when two peas lie snugly in a pod, the pod must then

Be larger than the peas—prove this—'twere matter

Worthy the hearing. Fool was I to dream

It ever could be otherwise!

Osw. Last night, 1180
When I returned with water from the brook,

I overheard the Villains—every word like red-hot iron burnt into my heart.

Said one, "It is agreed on. The blind Man

Shall feign a sudden illness, and the Girl, 1185

Who on her journey must proceed alone, Under pretence of violence, be seized.

She is," continued the detested Slave, "She is right willing—strange if she were not!—

They say Lord Clifford is a savage man; 1190

But, faith, to see him in his silken tunic, Fitting his low voice to the minstrel's harp,

There's witchery in't. I never knew a maid

That could withstand it. True," continued he,

"When we arranged the affair, she wept a little 1195

(Not the less welcome to my Lord for that)

And said, 'My Father he will have it so.'

Mar. I am your hearer.

Osw. This I caught, and more

That may not be retold to any ear.

The obstinate bolt of a small iron door
Detained them near the gateway of the Castle. 1201

By a dim lantern's light I saw that wreaths

Of flowers were in their hands, as if designed

For festive decoration; and they said, With brutal laughter and most foul allusion, 1205

That they should share the banquet with their Lord

And his new Favorite.

Mar. Misery!—

Osw. I knew
How you would be disturbed by this dire news,

And therefore chose this solitary Moor, Here to impart the tale, of which, last night, 1210

I strove to ease my mind, when our two Comrades,

Commissioned by the Band, burst in upon us.

Mar. Last night, when moved to lift the avenging steel,

I did believe all things were shadows—yea,

Living or dead all things were bodiless, 1215

All but the mutual mockeries of body, Till that same star summoned me back again.

Now I could laugh till my ribs ached. Oh, Fool!

To let a creed, built in the heart of things,

Dissolve before a twinkling atom!—Oswald, 1220

I could fetch lessons out of wiser schools Than you have entered, were it worth the pains.

Young as I am, I might go forth a teacher,

And you should see how deeply I could reason

Of love in all its shapes, beginnings, ends; 1225

Of moral qualities in their diverse aspects;

Of actions, and their laws and tendencies.

Osw. You take it as it merits—

Mar. One a King,
General or Cham, Sultan or Emperor, Strews twenty acres of good meadow-
ground 1230

With carcasses, in lineament and shape
And substance, nothing differing from his
own,

But that they cannot stand up of themselves;

Another sits i' th' sun, and by the hour
Floats kingcups in the brook—a Hero one We call, and scorn the other as Time's spendthrift; 1236

But have they not a world of common
ground

To occupy—both fools, or wise alike,
Each in his way?

Osw. Troth, I begin to think so.

Mar. Now for the corner-stone of my philosophy: 1240

I would not give a denier for the man
Who, on such provocation as this earth Yields, could not chuck his babe beneath the chin,

And send it with a fillip to its grave.

Osw. Nay, you leave me behind.

Mar. That such a One,
So pious in demeanour! in his look 1246
So saintly and so pure!—Harkee, my
Friend,

I'll plant myself before Lord Clifford's Castle,

A surly mastiff kennels at the gate,
And he shall howl and I will laugh, a medley 1250

Most tunable.

Osw. In faith, a pleasant scheme;
But take your sword along with you, for that

Might in such neighbourhood find seemly
use.—

But first, how wash our hands of this old
Man?

Mar. Oh yes, that mole, that viper in the path; 1255
Plague on my memory, him I had forgotten.

Osw. You know we left him sitting—see him yonder.

Mar. Ha! ha!—

Osw. As 'twill be but a moment's
work,

I will stroll on; you follow when 'tis done.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE changes to another part of the Moor at a short distance—HERBERT is discovered seated on a stone.

Her. A sound of laughter, too!—'tis well—I feared 1260

The Stranger had some pitiable sorrow
Pressing upon his solitary heart.

Hush!—'tis the feeble and earth-loving
wind

That creeps along the bells of the crisp heather.

Alas! 'tis cold—I shiver in the sunshine— 1265

What can this mean? There is a psalm that speaks

Of God's parental mercies—with Idonea
I used to sing it.—Listen!—what foot is
there?

Enter MARMADUKE.

Mar. (aside—looking at HERBERT.) And I have loved this Man! and she hath loved him!

And I loved her, and she loves the Lord
Clifford! 1270

And there it ends;—if this be not enough
To make mankind merry for evermore, Then plain it is as day that eyes were
made

For a wise purpose—verily to weep with!
[Looking round.]

A pretty prospect this, a masterpiece 1275
Of Nature, finished with most curious
skill!

(To HERBERT.) Good Baron, have you ever practised tillage?

Pray tell me what this land is worth by the acre.

Her. How glad I am to hear your voice!
I know not 1279

Wherein I have offended you;—last night
I found in you the kindest of Protectors;
This morning, when I spoke of weariness,
You from my shoulder took my scrip and threw it

About your own; but for these two hours
past

Once only have you spoken, when the lark 1285

Whirred from among the fern beneath our
feet,

And I, no coward in my better days,

Was almost terrified.

Mar. That's excellent!—

So you bethought you of the many ways

In which a man may come to his end, whose crimes 1290

Have roused all Nature up against him—
pshaw!—

Her. For mercy's sake, is nobody in
sight?

No traveller, peasant, herdsman?

Mar. Not a soul:

Here is a tree, ragged, and bent, and
bare,

That turns its goat's-beard flakes of pea-green moss 1295

From the stern breathing of the rough sea-wind;

This have we, but no other company:

Commend me to the place. If a man should die

And leave his body here, it were all one

As he were twenty fathoms underground.

Her. Where is our common Friend?

Mar. A ghost, methinks—

The Spirit of a murdered man, for instance—

Might have fine room to ramble about
here,

A grand domain to squeak and gibber in.

Her. Lost Man! if thou have any close-pent guilt 1305

Pressing upon thy heart, and this the
hour

Of visitation—

Mar. A bold word from you!

Her. Restore him, Heaven!

Mar. The desperate

Wretch!—A Flower,

Fairest of all flowers, was she once, but
now

They have snapped her from the stem—
Poh! let her lie 1310

Besoiled with mire, and let the houseless snail

Feed on her leaves. You knew her well—
ay, there,

Old Man! you were a very Lynx, you knew

The worm was in her—

Her. Mercy! Sir, what mean you?

Mar. You have a Daughter!

Her. Oh that she were here!—

She hath an eye that sinks into all
hearts, 1316

And if I have in aught offended you,

Soon would her gentle voice make peace between us.

Mar. (aside). I do believe he weeps—
I could weep too—

There is a vein of her voice that runs through his: 1320

Even such a Man my fancy bodied forth

From the first Man moment that I loved the Maid;

And for his sake I loved her more: these
tears—

I did not think that aught was left in me

Of what I have been—yes, I thank thee,
Heaven! 1325

One happy thought has passed across my
mind.

—It may not be—I am cut off from man;

No more shall I be man—no more shall I

Have human feelings!—(To HERBERT)—
Now, for a little more

About your Daughter!

Her. Troops of armed men,

Met in the roads, would bless us; little children, 1331

Rushing along in the full tide of play,

Stood silent as we passed them! I have
heard

The boisterous carman, in the miry road, Check his loud whip and hail us with mild voice, 1335

And speak with milder voice to his poor beasts.

Mar. And whither were you going?

Her. Learn, young Man,—
To fear the virtuous, and reverence misery,

Whether too much for patience, or, like
mine,

Softened till it becomes a gift of mercy.

Mar. Now, this is as it should be!

Her. I am weak!— 1341

My Daughter does not know how weak
I am ;

And, as thou see'st, under the arch of
heaven

Here do I stand, alone, to helplessness,

By the good God, our common Father,
doomed !— 1345

But I had once a spirit and an arm—

Mar. Now, for a word about your Barony :

I fancy when you left the Holy Land,
And came to—what's your title—eh?
your claims

Were undisputed !

Her. Like a mendicant, 1350

Whom no one comes to meet, I stood
alone ;—

I murmured—but, remembering Him who feeds

The pelican and ostrich of the desert,

From my own threshold I looked up to
Heaven

And did not want glimmerings of quiet
hope. 1355

So from the court I passed, and down the
brook,

Led by its murmur, to the ancient oak

I came ; and when I felt its cooling shade,
I sate me down, and cannot but believe—

While in my lap I held my little Babe

And clasped her to my heart, my heart that ached 1361

More with delight than grief—I heard a
voice

Such as by Cherith on Elijah called ;

It said, "I will be with thee." A little
boy,

A shepherd-lad, ere yet my trance was
gone, 1365

Hailed us as if he had been sent from
heaven,

And said, with tears, that he would be
our guide :

I had a better guide—that innocent
Babe—

Her, who hath saved me, to this hour,
from harm,

From cold, from hunger, penury, and
death ; 1370

To whom I owe the best of all the
good

I have, or wish for, upon earth—and more
And higher far than lies within earth's
bounds :

Therefore I bless her : when I think of
Man,

I bless her with sad spirit,—when of
God, 1375

I bless her in the fulness of my joy !

Mar. The name of daughter in his mouth, he prays !

With nerves so steady, that the very flies
Sit unmolested on his staff.—Innocent !

If he were innocent—then he would
tremble 1380

And be disturbed, as I am. (Turning aside). I have read

In Story, what men now alive have witnessed,

How, when the People's mind was racked with doubt,

Appeal was made to the great Judge : the Accused

With naked feet walked over burning ploughshares. 1385

Here is a Man by Nature's hand prepared
For a like trial, but more merciful.

Why else have I been led to this bleak
Waste ?

Bare is it, without house or track, and destitute

Of obvious shelter, as a shipless sea. 1390

Here will I leave him—here—All-seeing
God !

Such as he is, and sore perplexed as I am,
I will commit him to this final Ordeal !—

He heard a voice—a shepherd-lad came to
him

And was his guide ; if once, why not
again, 1395

And in this desert ? If never—then the whole

Of what he says, and looks, and does,
and is,

Makes up one damning falsehood. Leave him here

To cold and hunger !—Pain is of the
heart,

And what are a few throes of bodily suffering 1400

If they can waken one pang of remorse ?

[Goes up to HERBERT.]

Old Man! my wrath is as a flame burnt
out,

It cannot be rekindled. Thou art here Led by my hand to save thee from perdition;

Thou wilt have time to breathe and think—

Her. Oh, Mercy!

Mar. I know the need that all men have of mercy, 1406

And therefore leave thee to a righteous judgment.

Her. My Child, my blessèd Child!

Mar. No more of that;
Thou wilt have many guides if thou art
innocent;

Yea, from the utmost corners of the
earth, 1410

That Woman will come o'er this Waste to save thee.

[He pauses and looks at HERBERT'S staff.

Ha! what is here? and carved by her own hand! [Reads upon the staff.

"I am eyes to the blind, saith the Lord.
He that puts his trust in me shall not fail!"

Yes, be it so;—repent and be forgiven—
God and that staff are now thy only guides. 1416

[He leaves HERBERT on the Moor.

SCENE, An eminence, a Beacon on the summit.

LACY, WALLACE, LENNOX, &c. &c.

Several of the Band (confusedly). But patience!

One of the Band. Curses on that Traitor,
Oswald!—

Our Captain made a prey to foul device!—

Len. (to WALLACE). His tool, the wandering Beggar, made last night

A plain confession, such as leaves no
doubt, 1420

Knowing what otherwise we know too
well,

That she revealed the truth. Stand by me now;

For rather would I have a nest of vipers Between my breast-plate and my skin than make

Oswald my special enemy, if you 1425

Deny me your support.

Lacy. We have been fooled—
But for the motive?

Wal. Natures such as his Spin motives out of their own bowels,

Lacy!

I learn'd this when I was a Confessor.

I know him well; there needs no other motive 1430

Than that most strange incontinence in crime

Which haunts this Oswald. Power is life to him

And breath and being; where he cannot govern,

He will destroy.

Lacy. To have been trapped like moles!—

Yes, you are right, we need not hunt for motives: 1435

There is no crime from which this man would shrink;

He recks not human law; and I have noticed

That often, when the name of God is uttered,

A sudden blankness overspreads his face.

Len. Yet, reasoner as he is, his pride has built 1440

Some uncouth superstition of its own.

Wal. I have seen traces of it.

Len. Once he headed
A band of Pirates in the Norway seas;

And when the King of Denmark summoned him

To the oath of fealty, I well remember,
'Twas a strange answer that he made; he

said, 1446

"I hold of Spirits, and the Sun in heaven."

Lacy. He is no madman.

Wal. A most subtle doctor Were that man, who could draw the line that parts

Pride and her daughter, Cruelty, from Madness, 1450

That should be scourged, not pitied.
Restless Minds,

Such Minds as find amid their fellow-men
No heart that loves them, none that they can love,

Will turn perforce and seek for sympathy
In dim relation to imagined Beings. 1455

One of the Band. What if he mean to offer up our Captain

An expiation and a sacrifice
To those infernal fiends!

Wal. Now, if the event
Should be as Lennox has foretold, then swear,

My Friends, his heart shall have as many wounds 1460

As there are daggers here.

Lacy. What need of swearing!

One of the Band. Let us away!

Another. Away!

A third. Hark! how the horns
Of those Scotch Rovers echo through the
vale.

Lacy. Stay you behind; and, when the sun is down,
Light up this beacon.

One of the Band. You shall be obeyed.
[They go out together.]

SCENE, The Wood on the edge of the Moor.

MARMADUKE (alone).

Mar. Deep, deep and vast, vast beyond human thought,
Yet calm.—I could believe that there was here

The only quiet heart on earth. In terror, Remembered terror, there is peace and
rest. 1469

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. Ha! my dear Captain.

Mar. A later meeting, Oswald,
Would have been better timed.

Osw. Alone, I see;
You have done your duty. I had hopes, which now

I feel that you will justify.

Mar. I had fears,
From which I have freed myself—but 'tis my wish

To be alone, and therefore we must part.

Osw. Nay, then — I am mistaken.
There's a weakness 1476

About you still; you talk of solitude—

I am your friend.

Mar. What need of this assurance

At any time? and why given now?

Osw. Because

You are now in truth my Master; you have taught me 1480

What there is not another living man Had strength to teach;—and therefore gratitude

Is bold, and would relieve itself by praise.

Mar. Wherefore press this on me?

Osw. Because I feel

That you have shown, and by a signal instance, 1485

How they who would be just must seek the rule

By diving for it into their own bosoms.

To-day you have thrown off a tyranny
That lives but in the torpid acquiescence
Of our emasculated souls, the tyranny

Of the world's masters, with the musty rules 1491

By which they uphold their craft from age to age:

You have obeyed the only law that sense
Submits to recognise; the immediate law,
From the clear light of circumstances, flashed 1495

Upon an independent Intellect.

Henceforth new prospects open on your
path;

Your faculties should grow with the demand;

I still will be your friend, will cleave to
you

Through good and evil, obloquy and
scorn, 1500

Oft as they dare to follow on your steps.

Mar. I would be left alone.

Osw. (exultingly). I know your motives!
I am not of the world's presumptuous judges,

Who damn where they can neither see nor feel,

With a hard-hearted ignorance; your struggles 1505

I witness'd, and now hail your victory.

Mar. Spare me awhile that greeting.

Osw. It may be

That some there are, squeamish half-thinking cowards,

Who will turn pale upon you, call you murderer,

And you will walk in solitude among them. 1510

A mighty evil for a strong-built mind!—
Join twenty tapers of unequal height

And light them joined, and you will see the less

How 'twill burn down the taller; and they all 1514

Shall prey upon the tallest. Solitude!—
The Eagle lives in Solitude!

Mar. Even so,
The Sparrow so on the house-top, and I,
The weakest of God's creatures, stand
resolved

To abide the issue of my act, alone.

Osw. Now would you? and for ever?—
My young Friend, 1520

As time advances either we become The prey or masters of our own past
deeds.

Fellowship we must have, willing or no;
And if good Angels fail, slack in their duty,

Substitutes, turn our faces where we may,
Are still forthcoming; some which, though they bear 1526

Ill names, can render no ill services,
In recompense for what themselves required.

So meet extremes in this mysterious
world,

And opposites thus melt into each other.

Mar. Time, since Man first drew breath, has never moved 1531

With such a weight upon his wings as
now;

But they will soon be lightened.

Osw. Ay, look up—
Cast round you your mind's eye, and you will learn

Fortitude is the child of Enterprise: 1535
Great actions move our admiration, chiefly

Because they carry in themselves an earnest

That we can suffer greatly.

Mar. Very true.

Osw. Action is transitory—a step, a
blow,

The motion of a muscle—this way or
that— 1540

'Tis done, and in the after-vacancy

We wonder at ourselves like men betrayed:

Suffering is permanent, obscure and dark,
And shares the nature of infinity.

Mar. Truth—and I feel it.

Osw. What! if you had bid
Eternal farewell to unmingled joy 1546
And the light dancing of the thoughtless
heart;

It is the toy of fools, and little fit
For such a world as this. The wise abjure

All thoughts whose idle composition lives
In the entire forgetfulness of pain. 1551

—I see I have disturbed you.

Mar. By no means.

Osw. Compassion!—pity!—pride can do without them;

And what if you should never know them
more!—

He is a puny soul who, feeling pain, 1555
Finds ease because another feels it too.

If e'er I open out this heart of mine

It shall be for a nobler end—to teach

And not to purchase puling sympathy.

—Nay, you are pale. *

Mar. It may be so.

Osw. Remorse—

It cannot live with thought; think on,
think on, 1561

And it will die. What! in this universe, Where the least things control the greatest, where

The faintest breath that breathes can move a world;

What! feel remorse, where, if a cat had sneezed, 1565

A leaf had fallen, the thing had never
been

Whose very shadow gnaws us to the vitals.

Mar. Now, whither are you wandering?

That a man,

So used to suit his language to the time,
Should thus so widely differ from himself— 1570

It is most strange.

Osw. Murder!—what's in the word!—
I have no cases by me ready made

To fit all deeds. Carry him to the Camp!—
A shallow project;—you of late have seen

More deeply, taught us that the institutes 1575

Of Nature, by a cunning usurpation
Banished from human intercourse, exist
Only in our relations to the brutes That make the fields their dwelling. If a snake

Crawl from beneath our feet we do not ask A license to destroy him: our good governors 1581

Hedge in the life of every pest and plague
That bears the shape of man; and for what purpose,

But to protect themselves from extirpa-
tion?—

This flimsy barrier you have overleaped.

Mar. My Office is fulfilled—the Man is now 1586

Delivered to the Judge of all things.

Osw. Dead!

Mar. I have borne my burthen to its destined end.

Osw. This instant we'll return to our Companions—

Oh how I long to see their faces again!

Enter IDONEA with Pilgrims who continue their journey.

Idon. (after some time). What, Marmaduke!
now thou art mine for ever.

And Oswald, too! (To MARMADUKE.) On will we to my Father 1592

With the glad tidings which this day hath brought;

We'll go together, and, such proof received
Of his own rights restored, his gratitude
To God above will make him feel for ours.

Osw. I interrupt you?

Idon. Think not so.

Mar. Idonea,
That I should ever live to see this moment!

Idon. Forgive me.—Oswald knows it all—he knows,

Each word of that unhappy letter fell
As a blood-drop from my heart.

Osw. 'Twas even so.

Mar. I have much to say, but for whose ear?—not thine.

Idon. Ill can I bear that look—Plead for me, Oswald!

You are my Father's Friend.

(To MARMADUKE.) Alas, you know not,
And never can you know, how much he loved me.
1605

Twice had he been to me a father, twice
Had given me breath, and was I not to be His daughter, once his daughter? could I withstand

His pleading face, and feel his clasping
arms,

And hear his prayer that I would not forsake him 1610

In his old age— [Hides her face.

Mar. Patience—Heaven grant me patience!—

She weeps, she weeps—my brain shall burn for hours

Ere I can shed a tear.

Idon. I was a woman;

And, balancing the hopes that are the dearest

To womankind with duty to my Father,
I yielded up those precious hopes, which nought 1616

On earth could else have wrested from me;—if erring,

Oh let me be forgiven!

Mar. I do forgive thee.

Idon. But take me to your arms—this breast, alas!

It throbs, and you have a heart that does not feel it.
1620

Mar. (exultingly). She is innocent.
[He embraces her.

Osw. (aside). Were I a Moralist,

I should make wondrous revolution here;
It were a quaint experiment to show

The beauty of truth— [Addressing them.
I see I interrupt you;

I shall have business with you, Marmaduke; 1625

Follow me to the Hostel. [Exit OSWALD.
Idon. Marmaduke,

This is a happy day. My Father soon
Shall sun himself before his native doors;
The lame, the hungry, will be welcome
there.

No more shall he complain of wasted
strength, 1630

Of thoughts that fail, and a decaying
heart;

His good works will be balm and life to him.

Mar. This is most strange!—I know not what it was,

But there was something which most plainly said 1634

That thou wert innocent.

Idon. How innocent!—

Oh heavens! you've been deceived.

Mar. Thou art a Woman To bring perdition on the universe.

Idon. Already I've been punished to the height

Of my offence. [Smiling affectionately.]

I see you love me still,

The labours of my hand are still your joy;

Bethink you of the hour when on your shoulder 1641

I hung this belt.

[Pointing to the belt on which was suspended HERBERT'S scrip.]

Mar. Mercy of Heaven! [Sinks.]

Idon. What ails you! [Distractedly.]

Mar. The scrip that held his food, and I forgot

To give it back again!

Idon. What mean your words?

Mar. I know not what I said—all may be well. 1645

Idon. That smile hath life in it!

Mar. This road is perilous;

I will attend you to a Hut that stands Near the wood's edge—rest there to-night,

I pray you:

For me, I have business, as you heard, with Oswald, 1649

But will return to you by break of day.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE, A desolate prospect—a ridge of rocks—a Chapel on the summit of one—Moon behind the rocks—night stormy—irregular sound of a bell—HERBERT enters exhausted.

Her. That Chapel-bell in mercy seemed to guide me,

But now it mocks my steps; its fitful stroke

Can scarcely be the work of human hands.

Hear me, ye Men upon the cliffs, if such

There be who pray nightly before the Altar. 1655

Oh that I had but strength to reach the place!

My Child—my Child—dark—dark—I faint—this wind—

These stifling blasts—God help me!

Enter ELDRÉD.

Eld. Better this bare rock,

Though it were tottering over a man's head,

Than a tight case of dungeon walls for shelter 1660

From such rough dealing.

[A moaning voice is heard.]

Ha! what sound is that?

Trees creaking in the wind (but none are here)

Send forth such noises—and that weary bell!

Surely some evil Spirit abroad to-night Is ringing it—'twould stop a Saint in

prayer, 1665

And that—what is it? never was sound so like

A human groan. Ha! what is here?

Poor Man—

Murdered! alas! speak—speak, I am your friend:

No answer—hush—lost wretch, he lifts his hand

And lays it to his heart—(Kneels to him.)

I pray you speak! 1670

What has befallen you?

Her. (feebly.) A stranger has done this, And in the arms of a stranger I must die.

Eld. Nay, think not so: come, let me raise you up: [Raises him.]

This is a dismal place—well—that is well— 1674

I was too fearful—take me for your guide And your support—my hut is not far off.

[Draws him gently off the stage.]

SCENE, A room in the Hostel—MARMADUKE and OSWALD.

Mar. But for Idonea!—I have cause to think

That she is innocent.

Osw. Leave that thought awhile

As one of those beliefs which in their hearts

Lovers lock up as pearls, though oft no better 1680

Than feathers clinging to their points of passion.

This day's event has laid on me the duty Of opening out my story; you must hear it,

And without further preface.—In my youth,

Except for that abatement which is paid By envy as a tribute to desert, 1686

I was the pleasure of all hearts, the darling

Of every tongue—as you are now. You've heard

That I embarked for Syria. On our voyage

Was hatched among the crew a foul Conspiracy 1690

Against my honour, in the which our Captain

Was, I believed, prime Agent. The wind fell;

We lay becalmed week after week, until The water of the vessel was exhausted;

I felt a double fever in my veins, 1695

Yet rage suppressed itself;—to a deep stillness

Did my pride tame my pride;—for many days,

On a dead sea under a burning sky, I brooded o'er my injuries, deserted

By man and nature;—if a breeze had blown, 1700

It might have found its way into my heart,

And I had been—no matter—do you mark me?

Mar. Quick—to the point—if any untold crime

Doth haunt your memory,

Osw. Patience, hear me further!—

One day in silence did we drift at noon 1705

By a bare rock, narrow, and white, and bare;

No food was there, no drink, no grass, no shade,

No tree, nor jutting eminence, nor form

Inanimate large as the body of man, Nor any living thing whose lot of life 1710 Might stretch beyond the measure of one moon.

To dig for water on the spot, the Captain

Landed with a small troop, myself being one:

There I reproached him with his treachery.

Imperious at all times, his temper rose; He struck me; and that instant had I 1716

And put an end to his insolence, but my Comrades

Rushed in between us: then did I insist (All hated him, and I was stung to madness)

That we should leave him there, alive!— we did so. 1720

Mar. And he was famished?

Osw. Naked was the spot;

Methinks I see it now—how in the sun Its stony surface glittered like a shield;

And in that miserable place we left him, Alone but for a swarm of minute crea- 1725

tures Not one of which could help him while alive,

Or mourn him dead.

Mar. A man by men cast off,

Left without burial! nay, not dead nor dying,

But standing, walking, stretching forth his arms,

In all things like ourselves but in the agony 1730

With which he called for mercy; and— even so—

He was forsaken?

Osw. There is a power in sounds:

The cries he uttered might have stopped the boat

That bore us through the water—

Mar. You returned

Upon that dismal hearing—did you not?

Osw. Some scoffed at him with hellish 1736 mockery, And laughed so loud it seemed that the smooth sea

Did from some distant region echo us.

Mar. We all are of one blood, our veins are filled

At the same poisonous fountain!

Osw. 'Twas an island
Only by sufferance of the winds and
waves, 1741

Which with their foam could cover it at
will.

I know not how he perished; but the calm,

The same dead calm, continued many
days.

Mar. But his own crime had brought on him this doom, 1745

His wickedness prepared it; these expedients

Are terrible, yet ours is not the fault.

Osw. The man was famished, and was innocent!

Mar. Impossible!

Osw. The man had never wronged me.

Mar. Banish the thought, crush it, and be at peace. 1750

His guilt was marked—these things could never be

Were there not eyes that see, and for good ends,

Where ours are baffled.

Osw. I had been deceived.

Mar. And from that hour the miserable man 1754

No more was heard of?

Osw. I had been betrayed.

Mar. And he found no deliverance!

Osw. The Crew

Gave me a hearty welcome; they had laid
The plot to rid themselves, at any cost,

Of a tyrannic Master whom they loathed.
So we pursued our voyage: when we landed, 1760

The tale was spread abroad; my power
at once

Shrunk from me; plans and schemes, and lofty hopes—

All vanished. I gave way—do you attend?

Mar. The Crew deceived you?

Osw. Nay, command yourself.

Mar. It is a dismal night—how the wind howls! 1765

Osw. I hid my head within a Convent,
there

Lay passive as a dormouse in mid winter.
That was no life for me—I was o'er-thrown,

But not destroyed.

Mar. The proofs—you ought to have seen

The guilt—have touched it—felt it at your heart— 1770

As I have done.

Osw. A fresh tide of Crusaders Drove by the place of my retreat: three nights

Did constant meditation dry my blood;
Three sleepless nights I passed in sounding on,

Through words and things, a dim and perilous way; 1775

And, wheresoe'er I turned me, I beheld
A slavery compared to which the dungeon
And clanking chains are perfect liberty.

You understand me—I was comforted;
I saw that every possible shape of action 1780

Might lead to good—I saw it and burst
forth,

Thirsting for some of those exploits that fill

The earth for sure redemption of lost
peace.

[Marking MARMADUKE'S countenance.

Nay, you have had the worst. Ferocity
Subsided in a moment, like a wind 1785

That drops down dead out of a sky it vexed.

And yet I had within me evermore

A salient spring of energy; I mounted
From action up to action with a mind

That never rested—without meat or drink 1790

Have I lived many days—my sleep was
bound

To purposes of reason—not a dream

But had a continuity and substance

That waking life had never power to give.

Mar. O wretched Human-kind!—Until the mystery 1795

Of all this world is solved, well may we envy

The worm, that, underneath a stone whose
weight

Would crush the lion's paw with mortal anguish,
Doth lodge, and feed, and coil, and sleep,
in safety.

Fell not the wrath of Heaven upon those traitors? 1800

Osw. Give not to them a thought. From Palestine

We marched to Syria: oft I left the Camp,

When all that multitude of hearts was
still,

And followed on, through woods of gloomy cedar,

Into deep chasms troubled by roaring
streams; 1805

Or from the top of Lebanon surveyed
The moonlight desert, and the moonlight
sea:

In these my lonely wanderings I perceived

What mighty objects do impress their
forms

To elevate our intellectual being; 1810
And felt, if ought on earth deserves a curse,

'Tis that worst principle of ill which dooms

A thing so great to perish self-consumed.
—So much for my remorse!

Mar. Unhappy Man!

Osw. When from these forms I turned to contemplate 1815

The World's opinions and her usages,
I seemed a Being who had passed alone

Into a region of futurity,
Whose natural element was freedom—

Mar. Stop—
I may not, cannot, follow thee.

Osw. You must. 1820

I had been nourished by the sickly food
Of popular applause. I now perceived
That we are praised, only as men in us
Do recognise some image of themselves,
An abject counterpart of what they are,
Or the empty thing that they would wish
to be. 1826

I felt that merit has no surer test
Than obloquy; that, if we wish to serve

The world in substance, not deceive by
show,

We must become obnoxious to its hate,
Or fear disguised in simulated scorn. 1831

Mar. I pity, can forgive, you; but those wretches—

That monstrous perfidy!

Osw. Keep down your wrath.

False Shame discarded, spurious Fame
despised,

Twin sisters both of Ignorance, I found Life stretched before me smooth as some broad way 1836

Cleared for a monarch's progress. Priests might spin

Their veil, but not for me—'twas in fit
place

Among its kindred cobwebs. I had been,
And in that dream had left my native

land, 1840

One of Love's simple bondsmen—the soft chain

Was off for ever; and the men, from whom

This liberation came, you would destroy:
Join me in thanks for their blind services.

Mar. 'Tis a strange aching that, when we would—curse 1845

And cannot.—You have betrayed me—I have done—

I am content—I know that he is guilt-
less—

That both are guiltless, without spot or stain,

Mutually consecrated. Poor old Man!
And I had heart for this, because thou lovedst 1850

Her who from very infancy had been Light to thy path, warmth to thy blood!—

Together [Turning to OSWALD.]

We propped his steps, he leaned upon us both.

Osw. Ay, we are coupled by a chain of adamant;

Let us be fellow-labourers, then, to enlarge 1855

Man's intellectual empire. We subsist
In slavery; all is slavery; we receive

Laws, but we ask not whence those laws have come;

We need an inward sting to goad us on.

Mar. Have you betrayed me? Speak to that.

Osw. The mask, 1860
Which for a season I have stooped to wear,
Must be cast off.—Know then that I was urged,
(For other impulse let it pass) was driven,
To seek for sympathy, because I saw
In you a mirror of my youthful self; 1865
I would have made us equal once again,
But that was a vain hope. You have struck home,
With a few drops of blood cut short the business;
Therein for ever you must yield to me.
But what is done will save you from the blank 1870
Of living without knowledge that you live:
Now you are suffering—for the future day,
'Tis his who will command it.—Think of my story—
Herbert is innocent.

Mar. (in a faint voice, and doubtfully).
You do but echo

My own wild words?

Osw. Young Man, the seed must lie Hid in the earth, or there can be no harvest; 1876
'Tis Nature's law. What I have done in darkness
I will avow before the face of day.
Herbert is innocent.

Mar. What fiend could prompt
This action? Innocent!—oh breaking heart!— 1880
Alive or dead, I'll find him. [Exit.]

Osw. Alive—perdition! [Exit.]

SCENE, The inside of a poor Cottage.

ELEANOR and IDONEA seated.

Idon. The storm beats hard—Mercy for poor or rich,
Whose heads are shelterless in such a night!

A Voice without. Holla! to bed, good Folks, within!

Elea. O save us! 1884

Idon. What can this mean?

Elea. Alas, for my poor husband!—

We'll have a counting of our flocks to-morrow;
The wolf keeps festival these stormy nights:

Be calm, sweet Lady, they are wassailers
[The voices die away in the distance.]
Returning from their Feast—my heart beats so—

A noise at midnight does so frighten me.
Idon. Hush! [Listening.]

Elea. They are gone. On such a night my husband, 1891

Dragged from his bed, was cast into a dungeon,

Where, hid from me, he counted many years,

A criminal in no one's eyes but theirs—
Not even in theirs—whose brutal violence 1895

So dealt with him.

Idon. I have a noble Friend
First among youths of knightly breeding,
One

Who lives but to protect the weak or injured.

There again! [Listening.]

Elea. 'Tis my husband's foot.
Good Eldred 1899

Has a kind heart; but his imprisonment
Has made him fearful, and he'll never be
The man he was.

Idon. I will retire;—good night!
[She goes within.]

Enter ELDRÉD (hides a bundle).

Eld. Not yet in bed, Eleanor!—there are stains in that frock which must be washed out. 1905

Elea. What has befallen you?

Eld. I am belated, and you must know the cause—(speaking low) that is the blood of an unhappy Man.

Elea. Oh! we are undone for ever. 1910

Eld. Heaven forbid that I should lift my hand against any man. Eleanor, I have shed tears to-night, and it comforts me to think of it.

Elea. Where, where is he? 1915

Eld. I have done him no harm, but—it will be forgiven me; it would not have been so once.

Elea. You have not buried anything? You are no richer than when you left me?

Eld. Be at peace; I am innocent. 1921

Elea. Then God be thanked—

[A short pause; she falls upon his neck.]

Eld. To-night I met with an old Man lying stretched upon the ground—a sad spectacle: I raised him up with the hope that we might shelter and restore him.

Elea. (as if ready to run.) Where is he? You were not able to bring him all the way with you; let us return, I can help you. 1930

[ELDRED shakes his head.]

Eld. He did not seem to wish for life: as I was struggling on, by the light of the moon I saw the stains of blood upon my clothes—he waved his hand, as if it were all useless; and I let him sink again to the ground. 1936

Elea. Oh that I had been by your side!

Eld. I tell you his hands and his body were cold—how could I disturb his last moments? he strove to turn from me as if he wished to settle into sleep. 1941

Elea. But, for the stains of blood—

Eld. He must have fallen, I fancy, for his head was cut; but I think his malady was cold and hunger. 1945

Elea. Oh, Eldred, I shall never be able to look up at this roof in storm or fair but I shall tremble.

Eld. Is it not enough that my ill stars have kept me abroad to-night till this hour? I come home, and this is my comfort! 1952

Elea. But did he say nothing which might have set you at ease?

Eld. I thought he grasped my hand while he was muttering something about his Child—his Daughter—(starting as if he heard a noise.) What is that? 1958

Elea. Eldred, you are a father.

Eld. God knows what was in my heart, and will not curse my son for my sake.

Elea. But you prayed by him? you waited the hour of his release? 1964

Eld. The night was wasting fast; I have no friend; I am spited by the world—his wound terrified me—if I had brought him along with me, and he had died in my arms!—I am sure I heard something breathing—and this chair! 1970

Elea. Oh, Eldred, you will die alone. You will have nobody to close your eyes—no hand to grasp your dying hand—I shall be in my grave. A curse will attend us all. 1975

Eld. Have you forgot your own troubles when I was in the dungeon?

Elea. And you left him alive?

Eld. Alive!—the damps of death were upon him—he could not have survived an hour. 1981

Elea. In the cold, cold night.

Eld. (in a savage tone.) Ay, and his head was bare; I suppose you would have had me lend my bonnet to cover it.—You will never rest till I am brought to a felon's end. 1987

Elea. Is there nothing to be done? cannot we go to the Convent?

Eld. Ay, and say at once that I murdered him! 1991

Elea. Eldred, I know that ours is the only house upon the Waste; let us take heart; this Man may be rich; and could he be saved by our means, his gratitude may reward us. 1996

Eld. 'Tis all in vain.

Elea. But let us make the attempt. This old Man may have a wife, and he may have children—let us return to the spot; we may restore him, and his eyes may yet open upon those that love him. 2003

Eld. He will never open them more; even when he spoke to me, he kept them firmly sealed, as if he had been blind.

Idon. (rushing out.) It is, it is, my Father—

Eld. We are betrayed!

[Looking at IDONEA.]

Elea. His Daughter!—God have mercy!

[Turning to IDONEA.]

Idon. (sinking down.) Oh! lift me up and carry me to the place. 2010
You are safe; the whole world shall not harm you.

Elea. This Lady is his Daughter.

Eld. (moved.) I'll lead you to the spot.

Idon. (springing up). Alive! you heard him breathe? quick, quick—[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE, A Wood on the edge of the Waste.

Enter OSWALD and a Forester.

For. He leaned upon the bridge that spans the glen, 2015

And down into the bottom cast his eye,
That fastened there, as it would check the current.

Osw. He listened too; did you not say he listened?

For. As if there came such moaning from the flood 2019

As is heard often after stormy nights.

Osw. But did he utter nothing?

For. See him there!

MARMADUKE appearing.

Mar. Buzz, buzz, ye black and winged freebooters;

That is no substance which ye settle on!

For. His senses play him false; and see, his arms

Outspread, as if to save himself from falling!— 2025

Some terrible phantom I believe is now Passing before him, such as God will not Permit to visit any but a man 2028

Who has been guilty of some horrid crime.

Osw. The game is up!—

For. If it be needful, Sir, 2030

I will assist you to lay hands upon him.

Osw. No, no, my Friend, you may pursue your business—

'Tis a poor wretch of an unsettled mind,
Who has a trick of straying from his keepers;

We must be gentle. Leave him to my care, [Exit. Forester.

If his own eyes play false with him, these freaks 2036

Of fancy shall be quickly tamed by mine;
The goal is reached. My Master shall become

A shadow of myself—made by myself.

SCENE, The edge of the Moor.

MARMADUKE and ELDRÉD enter from opposite sides.

Mar. (raising his eyes and perceiving ELDRÉD). In any corner of this savage Waste 2040

Have you, good Peasant, seen a blind old Man?

Eld. I heard—

Mar. You heard him, where? when heard him?

Eld. As you know,
The first hours of last night were rough with storm:

I had been out in search of a stray heifer;
Returning late, I heard a moaning sound;
Then, thinking that my fancy had deceived me, 2046

I hurried on, when straight a second moan,
A human voice distinct, struck on my ear.
So guided, distant a few steps, I found
An aged Man, and such as you describe.

Mar. You heard!—he called you to him? Of all men 2051

The best and kindest!—but where is he? guide me,

That I may see him.

Eld. On a ridge of rocks
A lonesome Chapel stands, deserted now:
The bell is left, which no one dares remove; 2055

And, when the stormy wind blows o'er the peak,

It rings, as if a human hand were there
To pull the cord. I guess he must have heard it;

And it had led him towards the precipice,
To climb up to the spot whence the sound came; 2060

But he had failed through weakness. From his hand

His staff had dropped, and close upon the brink

Of a small pool of water he was laid,
As if he had stooped to drink, and so remained 2064

Without the strength to rise.

Mar. Well, well, he lives,
And all is safe: what said he?

Eld. But few words:
D 3

He only spake to me of a dear Daughter,
Who, so he feared, would never see him
more;

And of a Stranger to him, One by whom
He had been sore misused; but he forgave
The wrong and the wrong-doer. You are troubled— 2071

Perhaps you are his son?

Mar. The All-seeing knows,
I did not think he had a living Child.—
But whither did you carry him?

Eld. He was torn,
His head was bruised, and there was blood about him—— 2075

Mar. That was no work of mine.

Eld. Nor was it mine.

Mar. But had he strength to walk? I could have borne him
A thousand miles.

Eld. I am in poverty,
And know how busy are the tongues of
men;

My heart was willing, Sir, but I am one Whose good deeds will not stand by their own light; 2081

And, though it smote me more than words can tell,

I left him.

Mar. I believe that there are phantoms,
That in the shape of man do cross our path
On evil instigation, to make sport 2085
Of our distress—and thou art one of them!
But things substantial have so pressed on
me——

Eld. My wife and children came into my mind.

Mar. Oh Monster! Monster! there are three of us,
And we shall howl together.

[After a pause and in a feeble voice.

I am deserted

At my worst need, my crimes have in a net 2091

(Pointing to ELDRED) Entangled this poor man? Where was it? where?

[Dragging him along.

Eld. 'Tis needless; spare your violence.
His Daughter——

Mar. Ay, in the word a thousand scorpions lodge:
This old man had a Daughter.

Eld. To the spot 2095
I hurried back with her.—Oh save me, Sir,
From such a journey!—there was a black tree,

A single tree; she thought it was her Father.—

Oh Sir, I would not see that hour again
For twenty lives. The daylight dawned,
and now— 2100

Nay; hear my tale, 'tis fit that you should hear it—

As we approached, a solitary crow
Rose from the spot;—the Daughter clapped her hands,

And then I heard a shriek so terrible [MARMADUKE shrinks back.

The startled bird quivered upon the wing.
Mar. Dead, dead!—

Eld. (after a pause). A dismal matter,
Sir, for me, 2106

And seems the like for you; if 'tis your
wish,

I'll lead you to his Daughter; but 'twere
best

That she should be prepared; I'll go before.

Mar. There will be need of preparation.

[ELDRED goes off.

Elea. (enters). Master!

Your limbs sink under you, shall I support you? 2111

Mar. (taking her arm). Woman, I've lent my body to the service

Which now thou tak'st upon thee. God forbid

That thou shouldst ever meet a like occasion

With such a purpose in thine heart as mine was. 2115

Elea. Oh, why have I to do with things like these? [Exeunt.

SCENE changes to the door of ELDRED'S cottage—IDONEA seated—enter ELDRED.

Eld. Your Father, Lady, from a wilful
hand

Has met unkindness; so indeed he told
me,

And you remember such was my report:
From what has just befallen me I have
cause 2120

To fear the very worst.

Idon. My Father is dead;
Why dost thou come to me with words like these?

Eld. A wicked Man should answer for his crimes.

Idon. Thou seest me what I am.

Eld. It was most heinous,
And doth call out for vengeance.

Idon. Do not add,
I prithee, to the harm thou'st done already. 2126

Eld. Hereafter you will thank me for this service.

Hard by a Man I met, who, from plain proofs

Of interfering Heaven, I have no doubt, Laid hands upon your Father. Fit it were You should prepare to meet him.

Idon. I have nothing 2131
To do with others; help me to my Father—

[She turns and sees MARMADUKE leaning on ELEANOR—throws herself upon his neck, and after some time,

In joy I met thee, but a few hours past;
And thus we meet again; one human stay
Is left me still in thee. Nay, shake not so.

Mar. In such a wilderness—to see no
thing, 2136

No, not the pitying moon!

Idon. And perish so.

Mar. Without a dog to moan for him.

Idon. Think not of it,
But enter there and see him how he sleeps,
Tranquil as he had died in his own bed.

Mar. Tranquil—why not?

Idon. Oh, peace!

Mar. He is at peace; 2141
His body is at rest: there was a plot,
A hideous plot, against the soul of man:
It took effect—and yet I baffled it,
In some degree.

Idon. Between us stood, I thought,
A cup of consolation, filled from Heaven
For both our needs; must I, and in thy presence, 2147

Alone partake of it?—Belovèd Marma-duke!

Mar. Give me a reason why the wisest
thing

That the earth owns shall never choose to
die, 2150

But some one must be near to count his groans.

The wounded deer retires to solitude,
And dies in solitude: all things but man,
All die in solitude.

[Moving towards the cottage door.

Mysterious God,

If she had never lived I had not done it!—

Idon. Alas, the thought of such a cruel
death 2156

Has overwhelmed him.—I must follow.

Eld. Lady!

You will do well; (she goes) unjust suspicion may

Cleave to this Stranger: if, upon his entering,

The dead Man heave a groan, or from his
side 2160

Uplift his hand—that would be evidence.

Elea. Shame! Eldred, shame!

Mar. (both returning). The dead have but one face. (To himself.)

And such a Man—so meek and unoffend-
ing—

Helpless and harmless as a babe: a Man
By obvious signal to the world's protection 2165

Solemnly dedicated—to decoy him!—

Idon. Oh, had you seen him living!—

Mar. I (so filled

With horror is this world) am unto thee
The thing most precious that it now contains:

Therefore through me alone must be revealed 2170

By whom thy Parent was destroyed, Idonea!

I have the proofs!—

Idon. O miserable Father!

Thou didst command me to bless all man-
kind;

Nor to this moment have I ever wished
Evil to any living thing; but hear me, Hear me, ye Heavens!—(kneeling)—may vengeance haunt the fiend 2176

For this most cruel murder: let him live
And move in terror of the elements;

The thunder send him on his knees to
prayer

In the open streets, and let him think he sees, 2180

If e'er he entereth the house of God,
The roof, self-moved, unsettling o'er his
head;

And let him, when he would lie down at
night,

Point to his wife the blood-drops on his pillow!

Mar. My voice was silent, but my heart hath joined thee. 2185

to the mercy of that savage Man!

How could he call upon his Child!—O
Friend! [Turns to MARMADUKE.]

My faithful true and only Comforter.

Mar. Ay, come to me and weep.

(He kisses her.)

(To ELDRED.) Yes, Varlet, look,
The devils at such sights do clap their hands. [ELDRED retires alarmed.]

Idon. Thy vest is torn, thy cheek is deadly pale; 2191

Hast thou pursued the monster?

Mar. I have found him.—

Oh! would that thou hadst perished in the flames!

Idon. Here art thou, then can I be desolate?

Mar. There was a time, when this protecting hand 2195

Availed against the mighty; never more Shall blessings wait upon a deed of mine.

Idon. Wild words for me to hear, for me, an orphan,

Committed to thy guardianship by Heaven; 2199

And, if thou hast forgiven me, let me hope,
In this deep sorrow, trust, that I am thine
For closer care;—here, is no malady.

(Taking his arm.)

Mar. There, is a malady—

(Striking his heart and forehead.) And here, and here,

A mortal malady. I am accurst:

All nature curses me, and in my heart
Thy curse is fixed; the truth must be laid
bare. 2206

It must be told, and borne, I am the man, (Abused, betrayed, but how it matters not) Presumptuous above all that ever breathed,

Who, casting as I thought a guilty Person Upon Heaven's righteous judgment, did become 2211

An instrument of Fiends. Through me, through me,

Thy Father perished.

Idon. Perished—by what mischance?

Mar. Belovèd! if I dared, so would I call thee—

Conflict must cease, and, in thy frozen
heart, 2215

The extremes of suffering meet in absolute peace. [He gives her a letter.]

Idon. (reads) "Be not surprised if you hear that some signal judgment has befallen the man who calls himself your father; he is now with me, as his signature will show: abstain from conjecture till you see me.

"HERBERT.

"MARMADUKE."

The writing Oswald's; the signature my Father's: 2225

(Looks steadily at the paper) And here is yours,—or do my eyes deceive me?

You have then seen my Father?

Mar. He has leaned

Upon this arm.

Idon. You led him towards the Convent?

Mar. That Convent was Stone-Arthur Castle. Thither

We were his guides. I on that night resolved 2230

That he should wait thy coming till the day
Of resurrection.

Idon. Miserable Woman,

Too quickly moved, too easily giving way,
I put denial on thy suit, and hence, 2234

With the disastrous issue of last night,
Thy perturbation, and these frantic words.

Be calm, I pray thee!

Mar. Oswald—

Idon. Name him not.

Enter female Beggar.

Beg. And he is dead!—that Moor—how shall I cross it?

By night, by day, never shall I be able To travel half a mile alone.—Good Lady!

Forgive me!—Saints forgive me. Had I
thought 2241

It would have come to this!—

Idon. What brings you hither? speak!

Beg. (pointing to MARMADUKE). This innocent Gentleman. Sweet heavens! I told him

Such tales of your dead Father!—God is my judge,

I thought there was no harm: but that bad Man, 2245

He bribed me with his gold, and looked so fierce.

Mercy! I said I know not what—oh pity me—

I said, sweet Lady, you were not his Daughter—

Pity me, I am haunted;—thrice this day My conscience made me wish to be struck blind; 2250

And then I would have prayed, and had no voice.

Idon. (to MARMADUKE). Was it my Father?—no, no, no, for he Was meek and patient, feeble, old and blind, Helpless, and loved me dearer than his life.

—But hear me. For one question, I have a heart 2255

That will sustain me. Did you murder him?

Mar. No, not by stroke of arm. But learn the process:

Proof after proof was pressed upon me; guilt

Made evident, as seemed, by blacker guilt, Whose impious folds enwrapped even thee; and truth 2260

And innocence, embodied in his looks, His words and tones and gestures, did but serve

With me to aggravate his crimes, and heaped

Ruin upon the cause for which they pleaded.

Then pity crossed the path of my resolve: Confounded, I looked up to Heaven, and

cast, 2266

Idonea! thy blind Father on the Ordeal Of the bleak Waste—left him—and so he died!

[IDONEA sinks senseless; Beggar, ELEANOR, &c., crowd round, and bear her off.

Why may we speak these things, and do no more;

Why should a thrust of the arm have such a power, 2270

And words that tell these things be heard in vain?

She is not dead. Why!—if I loved this Woman,

I would take care she never woke again; But she WILL wake, and she will weep for

me,

And say no blame was mine—and so, poor fool, 2275

Will waste her curses on another name. [He walks about distractedly.]

Enter OSWALD.

OSWALD (to himself). Strong to o'erturn, strong also to build up.

[To MARMADUKE.]

The starts and sallies of our last encounter Were natural enough; but that, I trust,

Is all gone by. You have cast off the chains 2280

That fettered your nobility of mind— Delivered heart and head!

Let us to Palestine;

This is a paltry field for enterprise.

Mar. Ay, what shall we encounter next? This issue—

'Twas nothing more than darkness deepening darkness, 2285

And weakness crowned with the impotence of death!—

Your pupil is, you see, an apt proficient (ironically).

Start not!—Here is another face hard by; Come, let us take a peep at both together,

And, with a voice at which the dead will quake, 2290

Resound the praise of your morality— Of this too much.

[Drawing OSWALD towards the Cottage—stops short at the door.]

Men are there, millions, Oswald, Who with bare hands would have plucked out thy heart

And flung it to the dogs: but I am raised Above, or sunk below, all further sense

Of provocation. Leave me, with the weight Of that old Man's forgiveness on thy heart,

Pressing as heavily as it doth on mine.
Coward I have been; know, there lies not
now, 2299

Within the compass of a mortal thought,
A deed that I would shrink from;—but to endure,

That is my destiny. May it be thine:
Thy office, thy ambition, be henceforth
To feed remorse, to welcome every sting
Of penitential anguish, yea with tears.
When seas and continents shall lie between us— 2306

The wider space the better—we may find
In such a course fit links of sympathy,
An incommunicable rivalry Maintained, for peaceful ends beyond our
view. 2310

[Confused voices—several of the band enter—rush upon OSWALD and seize him.

One of them. I would have dogged him to the jaws of hell—

Osw. Ha! is it so!—That vagrant Hag!—this comes

Of having left a thing like her alive!
[Aside.

Several voices. Despatch him!

Osw. If I pass beneath a rock
And shout, and, with the echo of my voice, Bring down a heap of rubbish, and it crush me, 2316

I die without dishonour. Famished, starved,

A Fool and Coward blended to my wish!
[Smiles scornfully and exultingly at MARMADUKE.

Wal. 'Tis done! (stabs him).

Another of the band. The ruthless traitor!
Mar. A rash deed!—

With that reproof I do resign a station
Of which I have been proud.

Wil. (approaching MARMADUKE). O my poor Master! 2321

Mar. Discerning Monitor, my faithful Wilfred,

Why art thou here? [Turning to WALLACE.
Wallace, upon these Borders,

Many there be whose eyes will not want
cause

To weep that I am gone. Brothers in arms! 2325

Raise on that dreary Waste a monument
That may record my story: nor let words—Few must they be, and delicate in their touch

As light itself—be there withheld from Her Who, through most wicked arts, was made an orphan 2330

By One who would have died a thousand
times

To shield her from a moment's harm. To
you,

Wallace and Wilfred, I commend the Lady,

By lowly nature reared, as if to make her
In all things worthier of that noble birth, Whose long-suspended rights are now on the eve 2336

Of restoration: with your tenderest care
Watch over her, I pray—sustain her—

Several of the band (eagerly). Captain!
Mar. No more of that; in silence hear my doom:

A hermitage has furnished fit relief 2340
To some offenders; other penitents, Less patient in their wretchedness, have fallen,

Like the old Roman, on their own sword's point.

They had their choice: a wanderer must
I go,

The Spectre of that innocent Man, my guide. 2345

No human ear shall ever hear me speak;
No human dwelling ever give me food,
Or sleep, or rest: but over waste and wild,
In search of nothing that this earth can
give,

But expiation, will I wander on— 2350
A Man by pain and thought compelled to
live,

Yet loathing life—till anger is appeased
In Heaven, and Mercy gives me leave to
die.

POEMS REFERRING TO THE PERIOD OF CHILDHOOD.

*cf. Miss
1744/land
1801 60-185*

I. ✓

[Composed March 26, 1802.—Published 1807.]

My heart leaps up when I behold
A rainbow in the sky :
So was it when my life began ;
So is it now I am a man ;
So be it when I shall grow old,
Or let me die !
The Child is father of the Man ;
And I could wish my days to be Bound each to each by natural piety.

II.

TO A BUTTERFLY.

[Composed March 14, 1802.—Published 1807.]

STAY near me—do not take thy flight !
A little longer stay in sight !
Much converse do I find in thee,
Historian of my infancy !
Float near me ; do not yet depart !
Dead times revive in thee :
Thou bring'st, gay creature as thou art !
A solemn image to my heart,
My father's family !
Oh ! pleasant, pleasant were the days,
The time, when in our childish plays,
My sister Emmeline¹ and I
Together chased the butterfly !
A very hunter did I rush
Upon the prey ;—with leaps and springs
I followed on from brake to bush ;
But she, God love her ! feared to brush
The dust from off its wings.

III.

THE SPARROW'S NEST.

[Composed 1801.—Published 1807.]

BEHOLD, within the leafy shade,
Those bright blue eggs together laid !
On me the chance-discovered sight
Gleamed like a vision of delight.

I started—seeming to espy
The home and sheltered bed,
The Sparrow's dwelling, which, hard by My Father's house, in wet or dry
My sister Emmeline¹ and I
Together visited.

She looked at it and seemed to fear it ;
Dreading, tho' wishing, to be near it :
Such heart was in her, being then
A little Prattler among men.
The Blessing of my later years
Was with me when a boy :
She gave me eyes, she gave me ears ;
And humble cares, and delicate fears ;
A heart, the fountain of sweet tears ;
And love, and thought, and joy.

IV.

FORESIGHT.

[Composed April 28, 1802.—Published 1807.]

THAT is work of waste and ruin—
Do as Charles and I are doing !
Strawberry-blossoms, one and all,
We must spare them—here are many :
Look at it—the flower is small,
Small and low, though fair as any :
Do not touch it ! summers two
I am older, Anne, than you.

Pull the primrose, sister Anne !
Pull as many as you can.
—Here are daisies, take your fill ;
Pansies, and the cuckoo-flower :
Of the lofty daffodil
Make your bed, or make your bower ;
Fill your lap and fill your bosom ;
Only spare the strawberry-blossom !

Primroses, the Spring may love them—
Summer knows but little of them :
Violets, a barren kind,
Withered on the ground must lie ;

Daisies leave no fruit behind
 When the pretty flowerets die;
 Pluck them, and another year
 As many will be blowing here.

God has given a kindlier power 25
 To the favoured strawberry-flower.
 Hither soon as spring is fled
 You and Charles and I will walk;
 Lurking berries, ripe and red,
 Then will hang on every stalk, 30
 Each within its leafy bower;
 And for that promise spare the flower!

CHARACTERISTICS OF A CHILD THREE YEARS OLD.

[Composed 1811.—Published 1815.]

LOVING she is, and tractable, though wild;
 And Innocence hath privilege in her
 To dignify arch looks and laughing eyes;
 And feats of cunning; and the pretty
 round

Of trespasses, affected to provoke 5
 Mock-chastisement and partnership in play.

And, as a faggot sparkles on the hearth,
 Not less if unattended and alone
 Than when both young and old sit gathered round

And take delight in its activity; 10
 Even so this happy Creature of herself
 Is all-sufficient; solitude to her
 Is blithe society, who fills the air
 With gladness and involuntary songs.
 Light are her sallies as the tripping fawn's 15

Forth-startled from the fern where she lay couched;

Unthought-of, unexpected, as the stir
 Of the soft breeze ruffling the meadow-
 flowers,

Or from before it chasing wantonly 20
 The many-coloured images imprest
 Upon the bosom of a placid lake.

ADDRESS TO A CHILD,

DURING A BOISTEROUS WINTER EVENING.

BY MY SISTER.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1815.]

WHAT way does the Wind come? What way does he go?

He rides over the water, and over the
 snow,

Through wood, and through vale; and o'er rocky height,

Which the goat cannot climb, takes his sounding flight;

He tosses about in every bare tree, 5
 As, if you look up, you plainly may see;
 But how he will come, and whither he
 goes,

There's never a scholar in England knows.

He will suddenly stop in a cunning nook,
 And ring a sharp 'larum;—but, if you should look, 10

There's nothing to see but a cushion of
 snow,

Round as a pillow, and whiter than milk,
 And softer than if it were covered with silk.

Sometimes he'll hide in the cave of a rock,
 Then whistle as shrill as the buzzard cock;
 —Yet seek him,—and what shall you find in the place? 16

Nothing but silence and empty space;
 Save, in a corner, a heap of dry leaves,
 That he's left, for a bed, to beggars or thieves!

As soon as 'tis daylight to-morrow, with
 me 20

You shall go to the orchard, and then you will see

That he has been there, and made a great rout,

And cracked the branches, and strewn them about;

Heaven grant that he spare but that one upright twig

That looked up at the sky so proud and big 25

All last summer, as well you know,
 Studded with apples, a beautiful show!

Hark! over the roof he makes a pause,
 And growls as if he would fix his claws Right in the slates, and with a huge rattle 30
 Drive them down, like men in a battle:
 —But let him range round; he does us no
 harm,
 We build up the fire, we're snug and
 warm;
 Untouched by his breath see the candle shines bright,
 And burns with a clear and steady light;
 Books have we to read,—but that half-stifled knell, 36
 Alas! 'tis the sound of the eight o'clock
 bell.
 —Come now we'll to bed! and when we are there
 He may work his own will, and what shall we care?
 He may knock at the door,—we'll not let him in; 40
 May drive at the windows,—we'll laugh at his din;
 Let him seek his own home wherever it be;
 Here's a cozie warm house for Edward¹ and me.

VII.

THE MOTHER'S RETURN.

BY THE SAME.

[Composed April or May, 1807.—Published 1815.]

A MONTH, sweet Little-ones, is past Since your dear Mother went away,—
 And she to-morrow will return;
 To-morrow is the happy day.
 O blessèd tidings! thought of joy! 5
 The eldest heard with steady glee;
 Silent he stood; then laughed amain,—
 And shouted, "Mother, come to me!"
 Louder and louder did he shout,
 With witless hope to bring her near!— 10
 "Nay, patience! patience, little boy;
 Your tender mother cannot hear."

I told of hills, and far-off towns,
 And long, long vales to travel through;
 He listens, puzzled, sore perplexed, 15
 But he submits; what can he do?

No strife disturbs his sister's breast;
 She wars not with the mystery
 Of time and distance, night and day;
 The bonds of our humanity. 20

Her joy is like an instinct, joy
 Of kitten, bird, or summer fly;
 She dances, runs without an aim,
 She chatters in her ecstasy.

Her brother now takes up the note, 25
 And echoes back his sister's glee;
 They hug the infant in my arms,
 As if to force his sympathy.

Then, settling into fond discourse,
 We rested in the garden bower; 30
 While sweetly shone the evening sun
 In his departing hour.

We told o'er all that we had done,—
 Our rambles by the swift brook's side
 Far as the willow-skirted pool, 35
 Where two fair swans together glide.

We talked of change, of winter gone,
 Of green leaves on the hawthorn spray,
 Of birds that build their nests and sing,
 And all "since Mother went away!" 40

To her these tales they will repeat,
 To her our new-born tribes will show,
 The goslings green, the ass's colt,
 The lambs that in the meadow go.

—But see, the evening star comes forth!
 To bed the children must depart; 46
 A moment's heaviness they feel,
 A sadness at the heart:

'Tis gone—and in a merry fit
 They run up stairs in gamesome race; 50
 I, too, infected by their mood,
 I could have joined the wanton chase.

Five minutes past—and, O the change!
 Asleep upon their beds they lie;
 Their busy limbs in perfect rest, 55
 And closed the sparkling eye.

VIII.
ALICE FELL; OR, POVERTY.

[Composed March 12, 13, 1802.—Published 1807.]

THE post-boy drove with fierce career,
 For threatening clouds the moon had drowned;

When, as we hurried on, my ear
 Was smitten with a startling sound.

As if the wind blew many ways, 5
 I heard the sound,—and more and more;
 It seemed to follow with the chaise,
 And still I heard it as before.

At length I to the boy called out;
 He stopped his horses at the word, 10
 But neither cry, nor voice, nor shout,
 Nor aught else like it, could be heard.

The boy then smacked his whip, and fast
 The horses scampered through the rain;
 But, hearing soon upon the blast 15
 The cry, I bade him halt again.

Forthwith alighting on the ground,
 "Whence comes," said I, "this piteous
 moan?"
 And there a little Girl I found,
 Sitting behind the chaise, alone. 20

"My cloak!" no other word she spake,
 But loud and bitterly she wept,
 As if her innocent heart would break;
 And down from off her seat she leapt.

"What ails you, child?"—she sobbed,
 "Look here!" 25
 I saw it in the wheel entangled,
 A weather-beaten rag as e'er
 From any garden scare-crow dangled.

There, twisted between nave and spoke,
 It hung, nor could at once be freed; 30
 But our joint pains unloosed the cloak,
 A miserable rag indeed!

"And whither are you going, child,
 To-night along these lonesome ways?"
 "To Durham," answered she, half wild—
 "Then come with me into the chaise." 36

Insensible to all relief Sat the poor girl, and forth did send Sob after sob, as if her grief
 Could never, never have an end. 40

"My child, in Durham do you dwell?"
 She checked herself in her distress,
 And said, "My name is Alice Fell;
 I'm fatherless and motherless.

"And I to Durham, Sir, belong." 45
 Again, as if the thought would choke
 Her very heart, her grief grew strong;
 And all was for her tattered cloak!

The chaise drove on; our journey's end
 Was nigh; and, sitting by my side, 50
 As if she had lost her only friend
 She wept, nor would be pacified.

Up to the tavern-door we post;
 Of Alice and her grief I told;
 And I gave money to the host, 55
 To buy a new cloak for the old.

"And let it be of duffil grey,
 As warm a cloak as man can sell!"
 Proud creature was she the next day,
 The little orphan, Alice Fell! 60

IX.

LUCY GRAY;
 OR, SOLITUDE.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

OFT I had heard of Lucy Gray:
 And, when I crossed the wild,
 I chanced to see at break of day
 The solitary child.

No mate, no comrade Lucy knew; 5
 She dwelt on a wide moor,
 —The sweetest thing that ever grew Beside a human door!

You yet may spy the fawn at play,
The hare upon the green ; 10
But the sweet face of Lucy Gray
Will never more be seen.

“To-night will be a stormy night—
You to the town must go ;
And take a lantern, Child, to light 15
Your mother through the snow.”

“That, Father ! will I gladly do :
’Tis scarcely afternoon—
The minster-clock has just struck two,
And yonder is the moon !” 20

At this the Father raised his hook,
And snapped a faggot-band ;
He plied his work ;—and Lucy took
The lantern in her hand.

Not blither is the mountain roe : 25
With many a wanton stroke
Her feet disperse the powdery snow,
That rises up like smoke.

The storm came on before its time :
She wandered up and down ; 30
And many a hill did Lucy climb :
But never reached the town.

The wretched parents all that night
Went shouting far and wide ;
But there was neither sound nor sight 35
To serve them for a guide.

At day-break on a hill they stood
That overlooked the moor ;
And thence they saw the bridge of wood,
A furlong from their door. 40

They wept—and, turning homeward, cried,
“In heaven we all shall meet ;”
—When in the snow the mother spied
The print of Lucy’s feet.

Then downwards from the steep hill’s
edge 45
They tracked the footmarks small ;
And through the broken hawthorn hedge,
And by the long stone-wall ;

And then an open field they crossed :
The marks were still the same ; 50
They tracked them on, nor ever lost ;
And to the bridge they came.

They followed from the snowy bank
Those footmarks, one by one,
Into the middle of the plank ; 55
And further there were none !

—Yet some maintain that to this day
She is a living child ;
That you may see sweet Lucy Gray
Upon the lonesome wild. 60

O’er rough and smooth she trips along,
And never looks behind ;
And sings a solitary song
That whistles in the wind.

X.

WE ARE SEVEN. *

[Composed 1798.—Published 1800.]

—A SIMPLE Child,
That lightly draws its breath,
And feels its life in every limb,
What should it know of death ?

I met a little cottoge Girl : 5
She was eight years old, she said ;
Her hair was thick with many a curl
That clustered round her head.

She had a rustic, woodland air,
And she was wildly clad : 10
Her eyes were fair, and very fair ;
—Her beauty made me glad.

“Sisters and brothers, little maid,
How many may you be ?”
“How many ? Seven in all,” she said, 15
And wondering looked at me.

“And where are they ? I pray you tell.”
She answered, “Seven are we ;
And two of us at Conway dwell,
And two are gone to sea. 20

“Two of us in the church-yard lie,
My sister and my brother ;
And, in the church-yard cottoge, I Dwell near them with my mother.”

"You say that two at Conway dwell, 25
And two are gone to sea,
Yet ye are seven! I pray you tell,
Sweet Maid, how this may be."

Then did the little Maid reply,
"Seven boys and girls are we; 30
Two of us in the church-yard lie,
Beneath the church-yard tree."

"You run about, my little Maid,
Your limbs they are alive;
If two are in the church-yard laid, 35
Then ye are only five."

"Their graves are green, they may be
seen,"
The little Maid replied,
"Twelve steps or more from my mother's
door, 40
And they are side by side."

"My stockings there I often knit,
My kerchief there I hem;
And there upon the ground I sit,
And sing a song to them."

"And often after sun-set, Sir, 45
When it is light and fair,
I take my little porringer,
And eat my supper there."

"The first that died was sister Jane;
In bed she moaning lay, 50
Till God released her of her pain;
And then she went away."

"So in the church-yard she was laid;
And, when the grass was dry,
Together round her grave we played, 55
My brother John and I."

"And when the ground was white with
snow,
And I could run and slide,
My brother John was forced to go,
And he lies by her side." 60

"How many are you, then," said I,
"If they two are in heaven?"
Quick was the little Maid's reply,
"O Master! we are seven."

"But they are dead; those two are dead!
Their spirits are in heaven!" 66
"Twas throwing words away; for still
The little Maid would have her will,
And said, "Nay, we are seven!"

XI.

THE IDLE SHEPHERD-BOYS;

OR, DUNGEON-GHYLL FORCE.¹

A PASTORAL.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

THE valley rings with mirth and joy;
Among the hills the echoes play
A never never ending song,
To welcome in the May.
The magpie chatters with delight; 5
The mountain raven's youngling brood
Have left the mother and the nest;
And they go rambling east and west
In search of their own food;
Or through the glittering vapours dart 10
In very wantonness of heart.

Beneath a rock, upon the grass,
Two boys are sitting in the sun;
Their work, if any work they have,
Is out of mind—or done. 15
On pipes of sycamore they play
The fragments of a Christmas hymn;
Or with that plant which in our dale
We call stag-horn, or fox's tail,
Their rusty hats they trim: 20
And thus, as happy as the day,
Those Shepherds wear the time away.

Along the river's stony marge
The sand-lark chants a joyous song;
The thrush is busy in the wood, 25
And carols loud and strong.
A thousand lambs are on the rocks,
All newly born! both earth and sky
Keep jubilee, and, more than all,
Those boys with their green coronal; 30
They never hear the cry,

¹ Ghyll, in the dialect of Cumberland and Westmoreland, is a short and, for the most part, a steep narrow valley, with a stream running through it. Force is the word universally employed in these dialects for waterfall.

That plaintive cry ! which up the hill
Comes from the depth of Dungeon-Ghyll.

Said Walter, leaping from the ground,
"Down to the stump of yon old yew 35 We'll for our whistles run a race."

—Away the shepherds flew ;
They leapt—they ran—and when they
came

Right opposite to Dungeon-Ghyll,
Seeing that he should lose the prize, 40

"Stop !" to his comrade Walter cries—
James stopped with no good will :
Said Walter then, exulting ; "Here
You'll find a task for half a year. 44

"Cross, if you dare, where I shall cross—Come on, and tread where I shall tread."
The other took him at his word,
And followed as he led.

It was a spot which you may see
If ever you to Langdale go ; 50
Into a chasm a mighty block

Hath fallen, and made a bridge of rock :
The gulf is deep below ;
And, in a basin black and small,
Receives a lofty waterfall. 55

With staff in hand across the cleft
The challenger pursued his march ;
And now, all eyes and feet, hath gained
The middle of the arch.

When list ! he hears a piteous moan— 60
Again !—his heart within him dies—
His pulse is stopped, his breath is lost,
He totters, pallid as a ghost,
And, looking down, espies
A lamb, that in the pool is pent 65
Within that black and frightful rent.

The lamb had slipped into the stream,
And safe without a bruise or wound
The cataract had borne him down
Into the gulf profound. 70

His dam had seen him when he fell,
She saw him down the torrent borne ;
And, while with all a mother's love
She from the lofty rocks above

Sent forth a cry forlorn, 75
The lamb, still swimming round and
round,

Made answer to that plaintive sound.

When he had learnt what thing it was,
That sent this rueful cry, I ween
The Boy recovered heart, and told 80
The sight which he had seen.

Both gladly now deferred their task ;
Nor was there wanting other aid—
A Poet, one who loves the brooks Far better than the sages' books, 85
By chance had thither strayed ;
And there the helpless lamb he found
By those huge rocks encompassed round.

He drew it from the troubled pool,
And brought it forth into the light : 90
The Shepherds met him with his charge,
An unexpected sight !

Into their arms the lamb they took,
Whose life and limbs the flood had spared ;
Then up the steep ascent they hied, 95
And placed him at his mother's side ;
And gently did the Bard
Those idle Shepherd-boys upbraid,
And bade them better mind their trade.

ANECDOTE FOR FATHERS.

"Retine vim istam, falsa enim dicam, si coges."
EUSEBIUS.

[Composed 1798. — Published 1798.]

I HAVE a boy of five years old ;
His face is fair and fresh to see ;
His limbs are cast in beauty's mould,
And dearly he loves me.

One morn we strolled on our dry walk, 5
Our quiet home all full in view,
And held such intermitted talk
As we are wont to do.

My thoughts on former pleasures ran ;
I thought of Kilve's delightful shore, 10
Our pleasant home when spring began,
A long, long year before.

A day it was when I could bear
Some fond regrets to entertain ;
With so much happiness to spare, 15
I could not feel a pain.

The green earth echoed to the feet
Of lambs that bounded through the glade,
From shade to sunshine, and as fleet
From sunshine back to shade. 20

Birds warbled round me—and each
trace

Of inward sadness had its charm ;
Kilve, thought I, was a favoured place,
And so is Liswyn farm.

My boy beside me tripped, so slim 25
And graceful in his rustic dress !
And, as we talked, I questioned him,
In very idleness.

“Now tell me, had you rather be,”
I said, and took him by the arm, 30
“On Kilve’s smooth shore, by the green
sea,
Or here at Liswyn farm ?”

In careless mood he looked at me,
While still I held him by the arm,
And said, “At Kilve I’d rather be 35

“Now, little Edward, say why so :
My little Edward, tell me why.”—
“I cannot tell, I do not know.”—
“Why, this is strange,” said I ; 40

“For here are woods, hills smooth and warm :
There surely must some reason be Why you would change sweet Liswyn farm
For Kilve by the green sea.”

At this my boy hung down his head, 45
He blushed with shame, nor made reply ;

And three times to the child I said,
“Why, Edward, tell me why ?”

His head he raised—there was in sight,
It caught his eye, he saw it plain— 50
Upon the house-top, glittering bright,
A broad and gilded vanè.

Then did the boy his tongue unlock,
And eased his mind with this reply :
“At Kilve there was no weather-cock ; 55
And that’s the reason why.”

O dearest, dearest boy ! my heart
For better lore would seldom yearn,
Could I but teach the hundredth part 60
Of what from thee I learn.

RURAL ARCHITECTURE.

[Composed (probably) 1800.—Published 1800.]

THERE’S George Fisher, Charles Fleming, and Reginald Shore,
Three rosy-cheeked school-boys, the highest not more Than the height of a counsellor’s bag ;
To the top of GREAT HOW¹ did it please them to climb :
And there they built up, without mortar or lime, 5
A Man on the peak of the Crag.

They built him of stones gathered up as they lay :
They built him and christened him all in one day,
An urchin both vigorous and hale ;
And so without scruple they called him
Ralph Jones. 10
Now Ralph is renowned for the length of his bones ;
The Magog of Legberthwaite dale.

Just half a week after, the wind sallied
forth,
And, in anger or merriment, out of the north,
Coming on with a terrible pother, 15
From the peak of the crag blew the giant
away.

And what did these school-boys ? The very next day
They went and they built up another.

—Some little I’ve seen of blind boisterous
works
By Christian disturbers more savage than Turks, 20

Spirits busy to do and undo :
At remembrance whereof my blood sometimes will flag ;
Then, light-hearted Boys, to the top of the crag ;
And I’ll build up a giant with you.

¹ GREAT HOW is a single and conspicuous hill, which rises towards the foot of Thirlmere, on the western side of the beautiful dale of Legber-thwaite, along the high road between Keswick and Ambleside.

THE PET-LAMB.

A PASTORAL.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

THE dew was falling fast, the stars began to blink;

I heard a voice; it said, "Drink, pretty creature, drink!"

And, looking o'er the hedge, before me
I espied

A snow-white mountain-lamb with a Maiden at its side.

Nor sheep nor kine were near; the lamb was all alone, 5

And by a slender cord was tethered to a
stone;

With one knee on the grass did the little Maiden kneel,

While to that mountain-lamb she gave its evening meal.

The lamb, while from her hand he thus his supper took,

Seemed to feast with head and ears; and his tail with pleasure shook. 10

"Drink, pretty creature, drink," she said in such a tone

That I almost received her heart into my
own.

'Twas little Barbara Lewthwaite, a child of beauty rare!

I watched them with delight, they were a lovely pair.

Now with her empty can the Maiden turned away: 15

But ere ten yards were gone her footsteps did she stay.

Right towards the lamb she looked; and from a shady place

I unobserved could see the workings of her face:

If Nature to her tongue could measured numbers bring,

Thus, thought I, to her lamb that little Maid might sing: 20

"What ails thee, young One? what? Why pull so at thy cord?

Is it not well with thee? well both for bed and board?

Thy plot of grass is soft, and green as grass can be;

Rest, little young One, rest; what is't that aileth thee?

"What is it thou wouldst seek? What is wanting to thy heart? 25

Thy limbs, are they not strong? And beautiful thou art:

This grass is tender grass; these flowers
they have no peers;

And that green corn all day is rustling in thy ears!

"If the sun be shining hot, do but stretch
thy woollen chain,

This beech is standing by, its covert thou canst gain; 30

For rain and mountain-storms! the like thou need'st not fear,

The rain and storm are things that scarcely can come here.

"Rest, little young One, rest; thou hast forgot the day

When my father found thee first in places far away;

Many flocks were on the hills, but thou wert owned by none, 35

And thy mother from thy side for evermore was gone.

"He took thee in his arms, and in pity brought thee home:

A blessed day for thee! then whither wouldst thou roam?

A faithful nurse thou hast; the dam that did thee rear

Upon the mountain-tops no kinder could have been. 40

"Thou know'st that twice a day I have brought thee in this can

Fresh water from the brook, as clear as ever ran;

And twice in the day, when the ground is wet with dew,

I bring thee draughts of milk, warm milk it is and new.

"Thy limbs will shortly be twice as stout as they are now, 45
Then I'll yoke thee to my cart like a pony in the plough;
My playmate thou shalt be; and when the wind is cold
Our hearth shall be thy bed, our house shall be thy fold.

"It will not, will not rest!—Poor creature, can it be
That 'tis thy mother's heart which is working so in thee? 50 Things that I know not of belike to thee are dear,
And dreams of things which thou canst neither see nor hear.

"Alas, the mountain-tops that look so green and fair!
I've heard of fearful winds and darkness that come there;
The little brooks that seem all pastime and all play, 55
When they are angry, roar like lions for their prey.

"Here thou need'st not dread the raven in the sky;
Night and day thou art safe,—our cottage is hard by.
Why bleat so after me? Why pull so at thy chain?
Sleep—and at break of day I will come to thee again!" 60

—As homeward through the lane I went with lazy feet,
This song to myself did I oftentimes
repeat;
And it seemed, as I retraced the ballad line by line,
That but half of it was hers, and one half of it was mine.

Again, and once again, did I repeat the
song; 65
"Nay," said I, "more than half to the damsel must belong,
For she looked with such a look, and she spake with such a tone,
That I almost received her heart into my
own."

XV.

TO H. C.

SIX YEARS OLD.

[Composed 1802.—Published 1807.]

O THOU! whose fancies from afar are
brought;
Who of thy words dost make a mock apparel,
And fittest to unutterable thought
The breeze-like motion and the self-born carol;
Thou faery voyager! that dost float 5
In such clear water, that thy boat
May rather seem
To brood on air than on an earthly
stream;
Suspended in a stream as clear as sky,
Where earth and heaven do make one imagery; 10
O blessed vision! happy child!
Thou art so exquisitely wild,
I think of thee with many fears
For what may be thy lot in future years.

I thought of times when Pain might be thy guest, 15
Lord of thy house and hospitality;
And Grief, uneasy lover! never rest
But when she sate within the touch of
thee.
O too industrious folly!
O vain and causeless melancholy! 20 Nature will either end thee quite;
Or, lengthening out thy season of delight,
Preserve for thee, by individual right,
A young lamb's heart among the full-grown flocks.
What hast thou to do with sorrow, 25
Or the injuries of to-morrow?
Thou art a dew-drop, which the morn brings forth,
Ill fitted to sustain unkindly shocks,
Or to be trailed along the soiling earth;
A gem that glitters while it lives, 30
And no forewarning gives;
But, at the touch of wrong, without a
strife
Slips in a moment out of life.

INFLUENCE OF NATURAL OBJECTS

IN CALLING FORTH AND STRENGTHENING THE IMAGINATION IN BOYHOOD AND EARLY YOUTH.

[Composed 1799.—Published in The Friend, Dec. 28, 1809; ed. 1815.]

FROM AN UNPUBLISHED POEM.

[This extract is reprinted from The Friend.]

WISDOM and Spirit of the universe!
Thou Soul, that art the Eternity of
thought!

And giv'st to forms and images a breath
And everlasting motion! not in vain,
By day or star-light, thus from my first
dawn

Of childhood didst thou intertwine for me
The passions that build up our human
soul;

Not with the mean and vulgar works
of Man;

But with high objects, with enduring
things,

With life and nature; purifying thus
The elements of feeling and of thought,
And sanctifying by such discipline
Both pain and fear,—until we recognise
A grandeur in the beatings of the heart.

Nor was this fellowship vouchsafed
to me
With stinted kindness. In November
days,

When vapours rolling down the valleys
made

A lonely scene more lonesome; among
woods

At noon; and 'mid the calm of summer
nights,

When, by the margin of the trembling
lake,

Beneath the gloomy hills, homeward I
went

In solitude, such intercourse was mine:
Mine was it in the fields both day and
night,

And by the waters, all the summer long.

And in the frosty season, when the sun
Was set, and, visible for many a mile,
The cottage-windows through the twilight
blazed,

I heeded not the summons: happy time
It was indeed for all of us; for me
It was a time of rapture! Clear and
loud

The village-clock tolled six—I wheeled about,

Proud and exulting like an untired horse
That cares not for his home.—All shod
with steel

We hissed along the polished ice, in games

Confederate, imitative of the chase
And woodland pleasures,—the resounding horn,

The pack loud-chiming, and the hunted hare.

So through the darkness and the cold we flew,

And not a voice was idle: with the din
Smitten, the precipices rang aloud;

The leafless trees and every icy crag
Tinkled like iron; while far-distant hills

Into the tumult sent an alien sound
Of melancholy, not unnoticed while the
stars,

Eastward, were sparkling clear, and in the west

The orange sky of evening died away.

Not seldom from the uproar I retired
Into a silent bay, or sportively Glanced sideways, leaving the tumultuous
throng,

To cut across the reflex of a star;
Image that, flying still before me, gleamed

Upon the glassy plain: and oftentimes,
When we had given our bodies to the
wind,

And all the shadowy banks on either side
Came sweeping through the darkness,
spinning still

The rapid line of motion, then at once
Have I, reclining back upon my heels,
Stopped short; yet still the solitary cliffs Wheeled by me—even as if the earth had
rolled

With visible motion her diurnal round!

Behind me did they stretch in solemn
train,
Feebler and feebler, and I stood and watched
Till all was tranquil as a summer sea.

XVII.

THE LONGEST DAY.

ADDRESSED TO MY DAUGHTER, DORA.

[Composed 1817.—Published 1820.]

LET us quit the leafy arbour,
And the torrent murmuring by ;
For the sun is in his harbour,
Weary of the open sky.

Evening now unbinds the fetters 5
Fashioned by the glowing light ;
All that breathe are thankful debtors
To the harbinger of night.

Yet by some grave thoughts attended 10
Eve renews her calm career ;
For the day that now is ended
Is the longest of the year.

Dora ! sport, as now thou sportest,
On this platform, light and free ;
Take thy bliss, while longest, shortest, 15
Are indifferent to thee !

Who would check the happy feeling
That inspires the linnets song ?
Who would stop the swallow, wheeling
On her pinions swift and strong ? 20

Yet, at this impressive season,
Words which tenderness can speak
From the truths of homely reason Might exalt the loveliest cheek ;

And, while shades to shades succeeding 25
Steal the landscape from the sight,
I would urge this moral pleading,
Last forerunner of " Good night ! "

SUMMER ebbs ;—each day that follows 30
Is a reflux from on high,
Tending to the darksome hollows
Where the frosts of winter lie.

He who governs the creation,
In his providence, assigned
Such a gradual declination 35
To the life of human kind.

Yet we mark it not ;—fruits redden,
Fresh flowers blow as flowers have blown,
And the heart is loth to deaden
Hopes that she so long hath known. 40

Be thou wiser, youthful Maiden !
And when thy decline shall come,
Let not flowers, or boughs fruit-laden,
Hide the knowledge of thy doom.

Now, even now, ere wrapped in slumber,
Fix thine eyes upon the sea 46
That absorbs time, space, and number ;
Look thou to Eternity !

Follow thou the flowing river 50
On whose breast are thither borne
All deceived, and each deceiver,
Through the gates of night and morn ;

Through the year's successive portals ;
Through the bounds which many a star
Marks, not mindless of frail mortals, 55
When his light returns from far.

Thus when thou with Time hast travelled Toward the mighty gulf of things,
And the mazy stream unravelled 60
With thy best imaginings ;

Think, if thou on beauty leanest,
Think how pitiful that stay,
Did not virtue give the meanest
Charms superior to decay.

Duty, like a strict preceptor, 65
Sometimes frowns, or seems to frown ;
Choose her thistle for thy sceptre,
While youth's roses are thy crown.

Grasp it,—if thou shrink and tremble,
Fairest damsel of the green, 70
Thou wilt lack the only symbol
That proclaims a genuine queen ;

And ensures those palms of honour
Which selected spirits wear,
Bending low before the Donor, 75
Lord of heaven's unchanging year !

THE NORMAN BOY.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

HIGH on a broad unfertile tract of forest-skirted Down,
Nor kept by Nature for herself, nor made by man his own,
From home and company remote and every playful joy,
Served, tending a few sheep and goats,
a ragged Norman Boy.

Him never saw I, nor the spot; but from an English Dame, 5 Stranger to me and yet my friend, a simple notice came,
With suit that I would speak in verse of that sequestered child Whom, one bleak winter's day, she met upon the dreary Wild.

His flock, along the woodland's edge with relics sprinkled o'er Of last night's snow, beneath a sky threatening the fall of more, 10
Where tufts of herbage tempted each,
were busy at their feed,
And the poor Boy was busier still, with work of anxious heed.

There was he, where of branches rent and withered and decayed,
For covert from the keen north wind, his hands a hut had made.
A tiny tenement, forsooth, and frail, as needs must be 15
A thing of such materials framed, by a builder such as he.

The hut stood finished by his pains, nor seemingly lacked aught
That skill or means of his could add, but the architect had wrought
Some limber twigs into a Cross, well-shaped with fingers nice,
To be engrafted on the top of his small edifice. 20

That Cross he now was fastening there, as the surest power and best For supplying all deficiencies, all wants of the rude nest
In which, from burning heat, or tempest driving far and wide,
The innocent Boy, else shelterless, his lonely head must hide.

That Cross belike he also raised as a standard for the true 25
And faithful service of his heart in the worst that might ensue
Of hardship and distressful fear, amid the houseless waste
Where he, in his poor self so weak, by Providence was placed.

—Here, Lady! might I cease; but nay, let us before we part
With this dear holy shepherd-boy breathe a prayer of earnest heart, 30
That unto him, where'er shall lie his life's appointed way,
The Cross, fixed in his soul, may prove an all-sufficing stay.

THE POET'S DREAM.

SEQUEL TO "THE NORMAN BOY."

JUST as those final words were penned,
the sun broke out in power,
And gladdened all things; but, as chanced,
within that very hour,
Air blackened, thunder growled, fire flashed from clouds that hid the
sky,
And for the Subject of my Verse I heaved
a pensive sigh.

Nor could my heart by second thoughts from heaviness be cleared, 5
For bodied forth before my eyes the cross-crowned hut appeared;
And while around it storm as fierce seemed troubling earth and air,
I saw, within, the Norman Boy kneeling alone in prayer.

- The Child, as if the thunder's voice spake with articulate call, Bowed meekly in submissive fear, before the Lord of All; 10
His lips were moving; and his eyes, upraised to sue for grace,
With soft illumination cheered the dimness of that place.
- How beautiful is holiness!—what wonder if the sight,
Almost as vivid as a dream, produced a dream at night?
It came with sleep and showed the Boy,
no cherub, not transformed, 15
But the poor ragged Thing whose ways my human heart had warmed.
- Me had the dream equipped with wings,
so I took him in my arms,
And lifted from the grassy floor, stilling his faint alarms,
And bore him high through yielding air
my debt of love to pay,
By giving him, for both our sakes, an hour of holiday. 20
- I whispered, "Yet a little while, dear
Child! thou art my own,
To show thee some delightful thing, in country or in town.
What shall it be? a mirthful throng? or that holy place and calm St. Denis, filled with royal tombs, or the Church of Notre Dame?
- "St. Ouen's golden Shrine? Or choose what else would please thee most
Of any wonder Normandy, or all proud France, can boast!" 26
"My Mother," said the Boy, "was born near to a blessed Tree,
The Chapel Oak of Allonville; good Angel, show it me!"
- On wings from broad and steadfast poise
let loose by this reply,
For Allonville, o'er down and dale, away then did we fly; 30 O'er town and tower we fled, and fields in May's fresh verdure drest;
The wings they did not flag; the Child, though grave, was not deprest.
- But who shall show, to waking sense, the gleam of light that broke Forth from his eyes, when first the Boy looked down on that huge oak,
For length of days so much revered, so famous where it stands 35
For twofold hallowing—Nature's care, and work of human hands?
- Strong as an Eagle with my charge I glided round and round
The wide-spread boughs, for view of door, window, and stair that wound Gracefully up the gnarled trunk; nor left we unsurveyed
The pointed steeple peering forth from the centre of the shade. 40
- I lighted—opened with soft touch the chapel's iron door, Past softly, leading in the Boy; and while from roof to floor,
From floor to roof, all round his eyes the Child with wonder cast, Pleasure on pleasure crowded in, each livelier than the last.
- For, deftly framed within the trunk, the sanctuary showed, 45
By light of lamp and precious stones, that glimmered here, there glowed, Shrine, Altar, Image, Offerings hung in sign of gratitude;
Sight that inspired accordant thoughts;
and speech I thus renewed:
- "Hither the Afflicted come, as thou hast heard thy Mother say,
And, kneeling, supplication make to our Lady de la Paix; 50
What mournful sighs have here been heard, and, when the voice was stopt By sudden pangs; what bitter tears have on this pavement dropt!
- "Poor Shepherd of the naked Down, a favoured lot is thine, Far happier lot, dear Boy, than brings full many to this shrine;
From body pains and pains of soul thou needest no release, 55 Thy hours as they flow on are spent, if not in joy in peace.

“Then offer up thy heart to God in thankfulness and praise,
 Give to Him prayers, and many thoughts,
 in thy most busy days;
 And in His sight the fragile Cross, on thy small hut, will be Holy as that which long hath crowned the Chapel of this Tree; 60 “Holy as that far seen which crowns the sumptuous Church in Rome Where thousands meet to worship God
 under a mighty Dome;
 He sees the bending multitude, He hears the choral rites,
 Yet, not the less, in children’s hymns and lonely prayer delights.
 “God for His service needeth not proud work of human skill; 65
 They please Him best who labour most to do in peace His will:
 So let us strive to live, and to our Spirits will be given Such wings as, when our Saviour calls, shall bear us up to heaven.”
 The Boy no answer made by words, but,
 so earnest was his look,
 Sleep fled, and with it fled the dream—recorded in this book, 70 Lest all that passed should melt away in silence from my mind,
 As visions still more bright have done,
 and left no trace behind.
 But oh! that Country-man of thine, whose eye, loved Child, can see A pledge of endless bliss in acts of early piety,
 In verse, which to thy ear might come,
 would treat this simple theme, 75
 Nor leave untold our happy flight in that adventurous dream.
 Alas the dream, to thee, poor Boy! to thee from whom it flowed,
 Was nothing, scarcely can be aught, yet
 ’twas bounteously bestowed,
 If I may dare to cherish hope that gentle eyes will read
 Not loth, and listening Little-ones, hearttouched, their fancies feed¹. 80

THE WESTMORELAND GIRL.

TO MY GRANDCHILDREN.

[Composed June 6, 1845.—Published 1845.]

PART I.

SEEK who will delight in fable,
 I shall tell you truth. A Lamb Leapt from this steep bank to follow
 ’Cross the brook its thoughtless dam.
 Far and wide on hill and valley 5
 Rain had fallen, unceasing rain,
 And the bleating mother’s Young-one Struggled with the flood in vain:
 But, as chanced, a Cottage-maiden
 (Ten years scarcely had she told) 10
 Seeing, plunged into the torrent, Clasped the Lamb and kept her hold.
 Whirled adown the rocky channel,
 Sinking, rising, on they go,
 Peace and rest, as seems, before them 15
 Only in the lake below.
 Oh! it was a frightful current Whose fierce wrath the Girl had braved;
 Clap your hands with joy my Hearers,
 Shout in triumph, both are saved; 20
 Saved by courage that with danger
 Grew, by strength the gift of love,
 And belike a guardian angel
 Came with succour from above.

PART II.

Now, to a maturer Audience, 25
 Let me speak of this brave Child Left among her native mountains
 With wild Nature to run wild.
 So, unwatched by love maternal,
 Mother’s care no more her guide, 30
 Fared this little bright-eyed Orphan
 Even while at her father’s side.
 Spare your blame,—remembrance makes
 him
 Loth to rule by strict command;
 Still upon his cheek are living 35
 Touches of her infant hand,

Dear caresses given in pity, Sympathy that soothed his grief, As the dying mother witnessed To her thankful mind's relief. 40	She, fulfilling her sire's office, Rang alone the far-heard knell, Tribute, by her hand, in sorrow, Paid to One who loved her well. 65
Time passed on; the Child was happy, Like a Spirit of air she moved, Wayward, yet by all who knew her For her tender heart beloved.	When his spirit was departed, On that service she went forth; 70 Nor will fail the like to render When his corse is laid in earth.
Scarcely less than sacred passions, 45 Bred in house, in grove, and field, Link her with the inferior creatures, Urge her powers their rights to shield.	What then wants the Child to temper, In her breast, unruly fire, To control the froward impulse 75 And restrain the vague desire?
Anglers, bent on reckless pastime, Learn how she can feel alike 50 Both for tiny harmless minnow And the fierce sharp-toothed pike.	Easily a pious training And a steadfast outward power Would supplant the weeds, and cherish In their stead each opening flower. 80
Merciful protectress, kindling Into anger or disdain; Many a captive hath she rescued, 55 Others saved from lingering pain.	Thus the fearless Lamb-deliv'rer, Woman-grown, meek-hearted, sage, May become a blest example For her sex, of every age.
Listen yet awhile;—with patience Hear the homely truths I tell, She in Grasmere's old church-steeple Tolled this day the passing bell. 60	Watchful as a wheeling eagle, 85 Constant as a soaring lark, Should the country need a heroine, She might prove our Maid of Arc.
Yes, the wild Girl of the mountains To their echoes gave the sound, Notice punctual as the minute, Warning solemn and profound.	Leave that thought; and here be uttered Prayer that Grace divine may raise 90 Her humane courageous spirit Up to heaven, thro' peaceful ways.

I.

THE BROTHERS.

[Composed (in or about) February, 1800.—Published 1800.]

“THESE Tourists, heaven preserve us!
needs must live

A profitable life: some glance along,
Rapid and gay, as if the earth were air,
And they were butterflies to wheel about Long as the summer lasted: some, as wise, 5

Perched on the forehead of a jutting crag,
Pencil in hand and book upon the knee,
Will look and scribble, scribble on and
look,

Until a man might travel twelve stout miles,

Or reap an acre of his neighbour's corn. 10
But, for that moping Son of Idleness,

Why can he tarry yonder?—In our churchyard

Is neither epitaph nor monument, Tombstone nor name—only the turf we
tread

And a few natural graves.”

To Jane, his wife,

Thus spake the homely Priest of Enner-
dale. 16

It was a July evening; and he sate Upon the long stone-seat beneath the eaves

Of his old cottage,—as it chanced, that
day,

Employed in winter's work. Upon the
stone 20

His wife sate near him, teasing matted
wool,

While, from the twin cards toothed with glittering wire,

He fed the spindle of his youngest child,
Who, in the open air, with due accord
Of busy hands and back-and-forward
steps, 25

Her large round wheel was turning. Towards the field

In which the Parish Chapel stood alone, Girt round with a bare ring of mossy
wall,

While half an hour went by, the Priest had sent

Many a long look of wonder: and at last,
Risen from his seat, beside the snow-white
ridge 31

Of carded wool which the old man had piled

He laid his implements with gentle care, Each in the other locked; and down the
path,

That from his cottage to the church-yard
led, 35

He took his way, impatient to accost
The Stranger, whom he saw still lingering
there.

'Twas one well known to him in former
days,

A Shepherd-lad; who ere his sixteenth
year

Had left that calling, tempted to entrust
His expectations to the fickle winds 41

And perilous waters; with the mariners
A fellow-mariner; and so had fared

Through twenty seasons; but he had been reared 44

Among the mountains, and he in his heart
Was half a shepherd on the stormy seas.

Oft in the piping shrouds had Leonard
heard

The tones of waterfalls, and inland sounds
Of caves and trees:—and when the regular
wind

Between the tropics filled the steady
sail,
And blew with the same breath through days and weeks, 51
Lengthening invisibly its weary line Along the cloudless Main, he, in those hours
Of tiresome indolence, would often hang Over the vessel's side, and gaze and
gaze ;
And, while the broad blue wave and sparkling foam 56
Flashed round him images and hues that
wrought
In union with the employment of his
heart,
He, thus by feverish passion overcome,
Even with the organs of his bodily eye,
Below him, in the bosom of the deep, 61
Saw mountains ; saw the forms of sheep that grazed
On verdant hills—with dwellings among
trees,
And shepherds clad in the same country
grey
Which he himself had worn.¹

And now, at last,
From perils manifold, with some small
wealth 66
Acquired by traffic 'mid the Indian
Isles,
To his paternal home he is returned,
With a determined purpose to resume
The life he had lived there ; both for the sake 70
Of many darling pleasures, and the love
Which to an only brother he has borne In all his hardships, since that happy
time
When, whether it blew foul or fair, they two Were brother-shepherds on their native
hills. 75
—They were the last of all their race :
and now,

When Leonard had approached his home,
his heart
Failed in him ; and, not venturing to enquire
Tidings of one so long and dearly loved,
He to the solitary church-yard turned ; 80
That, as he knew in what particular spot
His family were laid, he thence might learn
If still his Brother lived, or to the file
Another grave was added.—He had found Another grave,—near which a full half-
hour 85
He had remained ; but, as he gazed, there grew
Such a confusion in his memory,
That he began to doubt ; and even to
hope
That he had seen this heap of turf before,—
That it was not another grave ; but one 90
He had forgotten. He had lost his
path,
As up the vale, that afternoon, he walked Through fields which once had been well known to him :
And oh what joy this recollection now
Sent to his heart ! he lifted up his eyes, 95
And, looking round, imagined that he saw Strange alteration wrought on every
side
Among the woods and fields, and that the
rocks,
And everlasting hills themselves were changed.

By this the Priest, who down the field
had come, 100
Unseen by Leonard, at the church yard
gate
Stopped short,—and thence, at leisure, limb by limb
Perused him with a gay complacency.
Ay, thought the Vicar, smiling to himself,
'Tis one of those who needs must leave
the path 105.
Of the world's business to go wild alone :
His arms have a perpetual holiday ;

¹ This description of the Calenture is sketched from an imperfect recollection of an admirable one in prose, by Mr. Gilbert, author of the Hurricane.

The happy man will creep about the fields,

Following his fancies by the hour, to bring

Tears down his cheek, or solitary smiles
Into his face, until the setting sun 111

Write fool upon his forehead.—Planted thus

Beneath a shed that over-arched the gate
Of this rude church-yard, till the stars
appeared

The good Man might have communed
with himself, 115

But that the Stranger, who had left the
grave,

Approached; he recognised the Priest at
once,

And, after greetings interchanged, and
given

By Leonard to the Vicar as to one Unknown to him, this dialogue ensued.

Leonard. You live, Sir, in these dales, a quiet life: 121

Your years make up one peaceful family;
And who would grieve and fret, if, welcome come

And welcome gone, they are so like each other,

They cannot be remembered? Scarce a funeral 125

Comes to this church-yard once in eighteen months;

And yet, some changes must take place
among you:

And you, who dwell here, even among these rocks,

Can trace the finger of mortality,
And see, that with our threescore years and ten

130

We are not all that perish.—I remember,

(For many years ago I passed this road)
There was a foot-way all along the fields

By the brook-side—'tis gone—and that dark cleft!

To me it does not seem to wear the
face 135

Which then it had!

Priest. Nay, Sir, for aught I know,
That chasm is much the same—

Leonard. But, surely, yonder—

Priest. Ay, there, indeed, your memory is a friend

That does not play you false.—On that tall pike

(It is the loneliest place of all these hills) 140

There were two springs which bubbled
side by side,

As if they had been made that they might be

Companions for each other: the huge
crag

Was rent with lightning—one hath dis-
appeared;

The other, left behind, is flowing still. 145

For accidents and changes such as these,
We want not store of them;—a waterspout

Will bring down half a mountain; what a feast

For folks that wander up and down like
you,

To see an acre's breadth of that wide cliff 150

One roaring cataract! a sharp May-
storm

Will come with loads of January snow,
And in one night send twenty score of

sheep

To feed the ravens; or a shepherd dies

By some untoward death among the
rocks: 155

The ice breaks up and sweeps away a bridge;

A wood is felled:—and then for our own homes!

A child is born or christened, a field ploughed,

A daughter sent to service, a web
spun,

The old house-clock is decked with a new
face; 160

And hence, so far from wanting facts or dates

To chronicle the time, we all have here
A pair of diaries,—one serving, Sir,

For the whole dale, and one for each fire-side—

Yours was a stranger's judgment: for historians, 165

Commend me to these valleys!

Leonard. Yet your Church-yard Seems, if such freedom may be used with
you,

To say that you are heedless of the past :
An orphan could not find his mother's
grave :

Here's neither head nor foot-stone, plate of brass, 170
Cross-bones nor skull,—type of our earthly state

Nor emblem of our hopes : the dead man's
home

Is but a fellow to that pasture-field.

Priest. Why, there, Sir, is a thought that's new to me!

The stone-cutters, 'tis true, might beg their bread 175

If every English church-yard were like
ours ;

Yet your conclusion wanders from the
truth :

We have no need of names and epitaphs ;
We talk about the dead by our fire-sides.

And then, for our immortal part! we want 180

No symbols, Sir, to tell us that plain tale :
The thought of death sits easy on the man Who has been born and dies among the mountains.

Leonard. Your Dalesmen, then, do in each other's thoughts

Possess a kind of second life: no doubt 185
You, Sir, could help me to the history

Of half these graves?

Priest. For eight-score winters past,
With what I've witnessed, and with what I've heard,

Perhaps I might; and, on a winter-
evening,

If you were seated at my chimney's nook,
By turning o'er these hillocks one by one,
We two could travel, Sir, through a strange round; 192

Yet all in the broad highway of the world.
Now there's a grave—your foot is half
upon it,—

It looks just like the rest; and yet that
man 195

Died broken-hearted.

Leonard. 'Tis a common case.

We'll take another: who is he that lies Beneath yon ridge, the last of those three graves?

It touches on that piece of native rock
Left in the church-yard wall.

Priest. That's Walter Ewbank. 200
He had as white a head and fresh a cheek
As ever were produced by youth and age Engendering in the blood of hale fourscore.

Through five long generations had the
heart

Of Walter's forefathers o'erflowed the
bounds 205

Of their inheritance, that single cottage—
You see it yonder! and those few green
fields.

They toiled and wrought, and still, from sire to son,

Each struggled, and each yielded 'as before

A little—yet a little,—and old Walter, 210
They left to him the family heart, and
land

With other burthens than the crop it bore.

Year after year the old man still kept up
A cheerful mind,—and buffeted with bond, Interest, and mortgages; at last he sank, 215

And went into his grave before his time.

Poor Walter! whether it was care that spurred him

God only knows, but to the very last
He had the lightest foot in Ennerdale:

His pace was never that of an old
man: 220

I almost see him tripping down the path—
With his two grandsons after him:—but

you,

Unless our Landlord be your host to-
night,

Have far to travel,—and on these rough paths 224

Even in the longest day of midsummer—

Leonard. But those two Orphans!
Priest. Orphans!—Such they were—

Yet not while Walter lived:—for, though their parents

Lay buried side by side as now they lie,
The old man was a father to the boys,

Two fathers in one father: and if tears, Shed when he talked of them where they were not, 231

And hauntings from the infirmity of love,
Are aught of what makes up a mother's
heart,

This old Man, in the day of his old age,
Was half a mother to them.—If you weep,
Sir, 235

To hear a stranger talking about strangers, Heaven bless you when you are among your kindred!

Ay—you may turn that way—it is a grave
Which will bear looking at.

Leonard. These boys—I hope
They loved this good old Man?—

Priest. They did—and truly: 240
But that was what we almost overlooked,
They were such darlings of each other.

Yes,
Though from the cradle they had lived with Walter,

The only kinsman near them, and though he Inclined to both by reason of his age, 245
With a more fond, familiar, tenderness;

They, notwithstanding, had much love to
spare,

And it all went into each other's hearts.
Leonard, the elder by just eighteen months,

Was two years taller: 'twas a joy to see,
To hear, to meet them!—From their house
the school 251

Is distant three short miles, and in the
time

Of storm and thaw, when every water-
course

And unbridged stream, such as you may have noticed

Crossing our roads at every hundred steps,
Was swoln into a noisy rivulet, 256

Would Leonard then, when elder boys remained

At home, go staggering through the slippery fords,

Bearing his brother on his back. I have seen him,

On windy days, in one of those stray
brooks, 260

Ay, more than once I have seen him, mid-leg deep,

Their two books lying both on a dry stone,
Upon the hither side: and once I said,
As I remember, looking round these rocks
And hills on which we all of us were born, 265

That God who made the great book of the world

Would bless such piety—
Leonard. It may be then—

Priest. Never did worthier lads break
English bread;

The very brightest Sunday Autumn saw,
With all its mealy clusters of ripe nuts,
Could never keep those boys away from church, 271

Or tempt them to an hour of sabbath breach.

Leonard and James! I warrant, every corner

Among these rocks, and every hollow
place

That venturous foot could reach, to one or both 275

Was known as well as to the flowers that grow there.

Like roe-bucks they went bounding o'er
the hills;

They played like two young ravens on the
crag:

Then they could write, ay, and speak too,
as well

As many of their betters—and for Leonard!
The very night before he went away, 281

In my own house I put into his hand
A Bible, and I'd wager house and field

That, if he be alive, he has it yet.

Leonard. It seems, these Brothers have not lived to be 285

A comfort to each other—Priest. That they might Live to such end is what both old and young

In this our valley all of us have wished,
And what, for my part, I have often
prayed:

But Leonard—
Leonard. Then James still is left

among you! 290

Priest. 'Tis of the elder brother I am speaking:

They had an uncle;—he was at that time

A thriving man, and trafficked on the seas :

And, but for that same uncle, to this hour Leonard had never handled rope or shroud : 295

For the boy loved the life which we lead
here ;

And though of unripe years, a stripling
only,

His soul was knit to this his native soil.
But, as I said, old Walter was too weak To strive with such a torrent ; when he died, 300

The estate and house were sold ; and all their sheep,

A pretty flock, and which, for aught I
know,

Had clothed the Ewbanks for a thousand years :—

Well—all was gone, and they were destitute,

And Leonard, chiefly for his Brother's
sake, 305

Resolved to try his fortune on the seas.
Twelve years are past since we had tidings from him.

If there were one among us who had heard That Leonard Ewbank was come home
again,

From the Great Gavel,¹ down by Leeza's
banks, 310

And down the Enna, far as Egremont,
The day would be a joyous festival ;

And those two bells of ours, which there you see—

Hanging in the open air—but, O good Sir !
This is sad talk—they 'll never sound for
him— 315

Living or dead.—When last we heard of
him,

He was in slavery among the Moors

He was in slavery among the Moors

Upon the Barbary coast.—'Twas not a little

That would bring down his spirit ; and no
doubt,

Before it ended in his death, the Youth 320 Was sadly crossed.—Poor Leonard ! when we parted,

He took me by the hand, and said to me,
If e'er he should grow rich, he would
return,

To live in peace upon his father's land,
And lay his bones among us.

Leonard. If that day 325
Should come, 'twould needs be a glad day
for him ;

He would himself, no doubt, be happy then
As any that should meet him—

Priest. Happy ! Sir—Leonard. You said his kindred all were in their graves,

And that he had one Brother—

Priest. That is but 330
A fellow-tale of sorrow. From his youth
James, though not sickly, yet was delicate ;
And Leonard being always by his side

Had done so many offices about him,
That, though he was not of a timid
nature, 335

Yet still the spirit of a mountain-boy
In him was somewhat checked ; and, when his Brother

Was gone to sea, and he was left alone,
The little colour that he had was soon Stolen from his cheek ; he drooped, and pined, and pined— 340

Leonard. But these are all the graves of full-grown men !

Priest. Ay, Sir, that passed away : we took him to us ;

He was the child of all the dale—he lived
Three months with one, and six months with another ;

And wanted neither food, nor clothes,
nor love : 345

And many, many happy days were his.
But, whether blithe or sad, 'tis my belief
His absent Brother still was at his heart.

And, when he dwelt beneath our roof, we
found

(A practice till this time unknown to
him) 350

¹ The Great Gavel, so called, I imagine, from its resemblance to the gable end of a house, is one of the highest of the Cumberland mountains. It stands at the head of the several vales of Ennerdale, Wastdale, and Borrowdale.

The Leeza is a river which flows into the Lake of Ennerdale: on issuing from the Lake, it changes its name, and is called the End, Eyne, or Enna. It falls into the sea a little below Egremont.

That often, rising from his bed at night,
He in his sleep would walk about, and sleeping

He sought his brother Leonard.—You are moved!

Forgive me, Sir: before I spoke to you,
I judged you most unkindly.

Leonard. But this Youth, 355
How did he die at last?

Priest. One sweet May-morning, (It will be twelve years since when Spring returns)

He had gone forth among the new-dropped lambs,

With two or three companions, whom their course 359

Of occupation led from height to height
Under a cloudless sun—till he, at length,
Through weariness, or, haply, to indulge
The humour of the moment, lagged behind.

You see yon precipice;—it wears the shape
Of a vast building made of many crags;
And in the midst is one particular
rock 366

That rises like a column from the vale, Whence by our shepherds it is called THE PILLAR.

Upon its æry summit crowned with
heath,

The loiterer, not unnoticed by his comrades, 370

Lay stretched at ease; but, passing by the place

On their return, they found that he was
gone.

No ill was feared; till one of them by chance

Entering, when evening was far spent, the house

Which at that time was James's home, there learned 375

That nobody had seen him all that day:
The morning came, and still he was unheard of:

The neighbours were alarmed, and to the
brook

Some hastened; some ran to the lake:
ere noon

They found him at the foot of that same
rock 380

Dead, and with mangled limbs. The third day after

I buried him, poor Youth, and there he lies!

Leonard. And that then is his grave!—
Before his death

You say that he saw many happy years?
Priest. Ay, that he did—

Leonard. And all went well with him?— Priest. If he had one, the Youth had twenty homes. 386

Leonard. And you believe, then, that his mind was easy?—

Priest. Yes, long before he died, he found that time

Is a true friend to sorrow; and, unless His thoughts were turned on Leonard's luckless fortune, 390

He talked about him with a cheerful love.
Leonard. He could not come to an unhallowed end!

Priest. Nay, God forbid!—You recollect
I mentioned

A habit which disquietude and grief
Had brought upon him; and we all conjectured 395

That, as the day was warm, he had lain
down

On the soft heath,—and, waiting for his comrades,

He there had fallen asleep; that in his
sleep

He to the margin of the precipice Had walked, and from the summit had fallen headlong: 400

And so no doubt he perished. When the
Youth

Fell, in his hand he must have grasped,
we think,

His shepherd's staff; for on that Pillar of
rock

It had been caught mid-way; and there for years

It hung;—and mouldered there.

The Priest here ended—
The Stranger would have thanked him, but he felt 406

A gushing from his heart, that took away
The power of speech. Both left the spot in silence;

And Leonard, when they reached the church-yard gate,
As the Priest lifted up the latch, turned
round,—
And, looking at the grave, he said, "My Brother!"
The Vicar did not hear the words: and
now
He pointed towards his dwelling-place, entreating
That Leonard would partake his homely
fare:
The other thanked him with an earnest
voice;
But added, that, the evening being calm,
He would pursue his journey. So they parted.

It was not long ere Leonard reached a grove
That overhung the road: he there stopped short,
And, sitting down beneath the trees, reviewed
All that the Priest had said: his early
years
Were with him:—his long absence, cherished hopes,
And thoughts which had been his an hour
before,
All pressed on him with such a weight,
that now,
This vale, where he had been so happy,
seemed
A place in which he could not bear to
live:
So he relinquished all his purposes.
He travelled back to Egremont: and
thence,
That night, he wrote a letter to the Priest,
Reminding him of what had passed between them;
And adding, with a hope to be forgiven,
That it was from the weakness of his
heart
He had not dared to tell him who he
was.
This done, he went on shipboard, and is
now
A seaman, a grey-headed Mariner.

ARTEGAL AND ELIDURE.

(SEE THE CHRONICLE OF GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH, AND MILTON'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.)

[Composed 1815.—Published 1820.]

WHERE be the temples which in Britain's
Isle,
For his paternal Gods, the Trojan raised?
Gone like a morning dream, or like a pile
Of clouds that in cerulean ether blazed!
Ere Julius landed on her white-cliffed
shore,
They sank, delivered o'er
To fatal dissolution; and, I ween, No vestige then was left that such had ever been.

Nathless, a British record (long concealed
In old Armorica, whose secret springs
No Gothic conqueror ever drank) revealed
The marvellous current of forgotten things;
How Brutus came, by oracles impelled,
And Albion's giants quelled,
A brood whom no civility could melt,
"Who never tasted grace, and goodness ne'er had felt."

By brave Corineus aided, he subdued,
And rooted out the intolerable kind;
And this too-long-polluted land imbued
With goodly arts and usages refined;
Whence golden harvests, cities, warlike
towers,
And pleasure's sumptuous bowers;
Whence all the fixed delights of house
and home,
Friendships that will not break, and love that cannot roam.

O, happy Britain! region all too fair
For self-delighting fancy to endure
That silence only should inhabit there,
Wild beasts, or uncouth savages impure!
But, intermingled with the generous seed,
Grew many a poisonous weed;
Thus fares it still with all that takes its
birth
From human care, or grows upon the breast of earth.

Hence, and how soon! that war of vengeance waged

By Guendolen against her faithless lord;
Till she, in jealous fury unassuaged, 35
Had slain his paramour with ruthless
sword:

Then into Severn hideously defiled,

She flung her blameless child, Sabrina,—vowing that the stream should
bear

That name through every age, her hatred to declare. 40

So speaks the Chronicle, and tells of Lear
By his ungrateful daughters turned adrift.
Ye lightnings, hear his voice!—they cannot hear,

Nor can the winds restore his simple gift.
But One there is, a Child of nature meek,
Who comes her Sire to seek; 46

And he, recovering sense, upon her breast Leans smilingly, and sinks into a perfect
rest.

There too we read of Spenser's fairy
themes,

And those that Milton loved in youthful
years; 50

The sage enchanter Merlin's subtle schemes;
The feats of Arthur and his knightly peers;
Of Arthur,—who, to upper light restored,
With that terrific sword

Which yet he brandishes for future war, Shall lift his country's fame above the polar star! 56

What wonder, then, if in such ample field
Of old tradition, one particular flower

Doth seemingly in vain its fragrance yield,
And bloom unnoticed even to this late hour?
Now, gentle Muses, your assistance grant,
While I this flower transplant 62

Into a garden stored with Poesy;
Where flowers and herbs unite, and haply some weeds be,

That, wanting not wild grace, are from all mischief free! 65

A KING more worthy of respect and love
Than wise Gorbionian ruled not in his day;
And grateful Britain prospered far above All neighbouring countries through his righteous sway;

He poured rewards and honours on the
good; 70

The oppressor he withstood;
And while he served the Gods with reverence due,
Fields smiled, and temples rose, and towns and cities grew.

He died, whom Artegal succeeds—his son;
But how unworthy of that sire was he! 75
A hopeful reign, auspiciously begun,
Was darkened soon by foul iniquity.

From crime to crime he mounted, till at length

The nobles leagued their strength
With a vexed people, and the tyrant chased; 80

And on the vacant throne his worthier
Brother placed.

From realm to realm the humbled Exile
went,

Suppliant for aid his kingdom to regain;
In many a court, and many a warrior's
tent,

He urged his persevering suit in vain. 85
Him, in whose wretched heart ambition failed,

Dire poverty assailed;
And, tired with slights his pride no more could brook,

He towards his native country cast a longing look.

Fair blew the wished-for wind—the voyage
sped; 90

He landed; and by many dangers scared, “Poorly provided, poorly followed,”
To Calaterium's forest he repaired.

How changed from him who, born to highest place,

Had swayed the royal mace, 95
Flattered and feared, despised yet deified,
In Troynovant, his seat by silver Thames's
side!

From that wild region where the crown-less king

Lay in concealment with his scanty train,
Supporting life by water from the spring,
And such chance food as outlaws can obtain, 101

Unto the few whom he esteems his friends
 A messenger he sends;
 And from their secret loyalty requires Shelter and daily bread,—the sum of his desires. 105

While he the issue waits, at early morn
 Wandering by stealth abroad, he chanced to hear

A startling outcry made by hound and
 horn,

From which the tusky wild boar flies in
 fear;

And, scouring toward him o'er the grassy
 plain, 110

Behold the hunter train!

He bids his little company advance
 With seeming unconcern and steady countenance.

The royal Elidure, who leads the chase, Hath checked his foaming courser:—can it be! 115

Methinks that I should recognise that face,
 Though much disguised by long adversity!
 He gazed rejoicing, and again he gazed,

Confounded and amazed—

“It is the king, my brother!” and, by
 sound 120

Of his own voice confirmed, he leaps upon the ground.

Long, strict, and tender was the embrace he gave,

Feebly returned by daunted Artegal;
 Whose natural affection doubts enslave,
 And apprehensions dark and criminal. 125

Loth to restrain the moving interview,
 The attendant lords withdrew;

And, while they stood upon the plain apart, Thus Elidure, by words, relieved his struggling heart.

“By heavenly Powers conducted, we have met; 130

—O Brother! to my knowledge lost so long,
 But neither lost to love, nor to regret,
 Nor to my wishes lost;—forgive the wrong, (Such it may seem) if I thy crown have borne,

Thy royal mantle worn: 135

I was their natural guardian; and 'tis just That now I should restore what hath been held in trust.”

A while the astonished Artegal stood mute, Then thus exclaimed: “To me, of titles
 shorn,

And stripped of power! me, feeble, destitute, 140

To me a kingdom! spare the bitter scorn:
 If justice ruled the breast of foreign kings,

Then, on the wide-spread wings

Of war, had I returned to claim my right;
 This will I here avow, not dreading thy despite.” 145

“I do not blame thee,” Elidure replied;
 “But, if my looks did with my words agree,

I should at once be trusted, not defied,
 And thou from all disquietude be free.

May the unsullied Goddess of the chase,
 Who to this blessed place 151

At this blest moment led me, if I speak With insincere intent, on me her vengeance wreak!

“Were this same spear, which in my hand
 I grasp,

The British sceptre, here would I to thee
 The symbol yield; and would undo this clasp, 156

If it confined the robe of sovereignty.
 Odious to me the pomp of regal court,

And joyless sylvan sport,

While thou art roving, wretched and
 forlorn, 160

Thy couch the dewy earth, thy roof the forest thorn!”

Then Artegal thus spake: “I only sought
 Within this realm a place of safe retreat;
 Beware of rousing an ambitious thought;

Beware of kindling hopes for me un-
 meet! 165

Thou art reputed wise, but in my mind
 Art pitifully blind:

Full soon this generous purpose thou may'st rue,

When that which has been done no wishes can undo.

“Who, when a crown is fixed upon his head,
Would balance claim with claim, and right with right? 171

But thou—I know not how inspired, how
led—

Wouldst change the course of things in all men’s sight!

And this for one who cannot imitate
Thy virtue, who may hate: 175
For, if, by such strange sacrifice restored, He reign, thou still must be his king, and sovereign lord;

“Lifted in magnanimity above
Aught that my feeble nature could perform,
Or even conceive; surpassing me in love
Far as in power the eagle doth the worm:
I, Brother! only should be king in name,
And govern to my shame;
A shadow in a hated land, while all Of glad or willing service to thy share would fall.” 185

“Believe it not,” said Elidure; “respect Awaits on virtuous life, and ever most Attends on goodness with dominion
decked,
Which stands the universal empire’s boast;
This can thy own experience testify: 190
Nor shall thy foes deny
That, in the gracious opening of thy reign,
Our father’s spirit seemed in thee to breathe again.

“And what if o’er that bright unbosoming Clouds of disgrace and envious fortune
past! 195
Have we not seen the glories of the spring
By veil of noontide darkness overcast?
The frith that glittered like a warrior’s
shield,
The sky, the gay green field,
Are vanished; gladness ceases in the
groves, 200
And trepidation strikes the blackened mountain-coves.

“But is that gloom dissolved? how passing clear Seems the wide world, far brighter than before!
Even so thy latent worth will re-appear,

Gladdening the people’s heart from shore to shore; 205

For youthful faults ripe virtues shall atone;

Re-seated on thy throne,
Proof shalt thou furnish that misfortune,
pain,

And sorrow, have confirmed thy native right to reign.

“But, not to overlook what thou may’st
know, 210

Thy enemies are neither weak nor few;
And circumspect must be our course, and slow,

Or from my purpose ruin may ensue.
Dismiss thy followers;—let them calmly
wait

Such change in thy estate 215
As I already have in thought devised;
And which, with caution due, may soon be realized.”

The Story tells what courses were pursued,
Until king Elidure, with full consent
Of all his peers, before the multitude, 220 Rose,—and, to consummate this just in-
tent,

Did place upon his brother’s head the crown,

Relinquished by his own;
Then to his people cried, “Receive your
lord,

Corbonian’s first-born son, your rightful king restored!” 225

The people answered with a loud acclaim:
Yet more;—heart-smitten by the heroic
deed,

The reinstated Artegal became Earth’s noblest penitent; from bondage freed

Of vice—thenceforth unable to subvert
Or shake his high desert. 231
Long did he reign; and, when he died, the tear

Of universal grief bedewed his honoured bier.

Thus was a Brother by a Brother saved;
With whom a crown (temptation that hath set 235

Discord in hearts of men till they have braved

Their nearest kin with deadly purpose met)
'Gainst duty weighed, and faithful love, did seem

A thing of no esteem;
And, from this triumph of affection pure,
He bore the lasting name of "pious Eli-dure!" 241

III.

TO A BUTTERFLY.

[Composed April 20, 1802.—Published 1807.]

I 'VE watched you now a full half-hour,
Self-poised upon that yellow flower;
And, little Butterfly! indeed
I know not if you sleep or feed. 5
How motionless!—not frozen seas
More motionless! and then
What joy awaits you, when the breeze
Hath found you out among the trees,
And calls you forth again!

This plot of orchard-ground is ours; 10
My trees they are, my Sister's flowers;
Here rest your wings when they are weary;
Here lodge as in a sanctuary!
Come often to us, fear no wrong;
Sit near us on the bough! 15
We'll talk of sunshine and of song,
And summer days, when we were young;
Sweet childish days, that were as long
As twenty days are now.

IV.

A FAREWELL.

[Finished May 29, 1802.—Published 1815.]

FAREWELL, thou little Nook of mountain-
ground,
Thou rocky corner in the lowest stair
Of that magnificent temple which doth
bound
One side of our whole vale with grandeur
rare;
Sweet garden-orchard, eminently fair, 5
The loveliest spot that man hath ever
found,
Farewell!—we leave thee to Heaven's peaceful care,
Thee, and the Cottage which thou dost surround.

Our boat is safely anchored by the shore,
And there will safely ride when we are
gone; 10

The flowering shrubs that deck our humble door

Will prosper, though untended and alone:
Fields, goods, and far-off chattels we have
none:

These narrow bounds contain our private store

Of things earth makes, and sun doth shine upon; 15

Here are they in our sight—we have no
more.

Sunshine and shower be with you, bud and bell!

For two months now in vain we shall be
sought;

We leave you here in solitude to dwell
With these our latest gifts of tender
thought; 20

Thou, like the morning, in thy saffron coat,

Bright gowan, and marsh-marigold, fare-
well!

Whom from the borders of the Lake we
brought,

And placed together near our rocky Well.

We go for One to whom ye will be dear;
And she will prize this Bower, this Indian
shed, 26

Our own contrivance, Building without peer!

—A gentle Maid, whose heart is lowly bred,

Whose pleasures are in wild fields gathered,
With joyousness, and with a thoughtful
cheer, 30

Will come to you; to you herself will wed;
And love the blessed life that we lead
here.

Dear Spot! which we have watched with tender heed,

Bringing thee chosen plants and blossoms blown

Among the distant mountains, flower and weed, 35

Which thou hast taken to thee as thy
own,

Making all kindness registered and known;
Thou for our sakes, though Nature's child
indeed,

Fair in thyself and beautiful alone,
Hast taken gifts which thou dost little need. 40

And O most constant, yet most fickle
Place,

That hast thy wayward moods, as thou dost show

To them who look not daily on thy face;
Who, being loved, in love no bounds dost
know,

And say'st, when we forsake thee, "Let them go!" 45

Thou easy-hearted Thing, with thy wild race

Of weeds and flowers, till we return be slow,

And travel with the year at a soft pace.

Help us to tell Her tales of years gone
by,

And this sweet spring, the best beloved and best; 50

Joy will be flown in its mortality; Something must stay to tell us of the
rest.

Here, thronged with primroses, the steep rock's breast

Glittered at evening like a starry sky;
And in this bush our sparrow built her nest, 55

Of which I sang one song that will not
die.

O happy Garden! whose seclusion deep Hath been so friendly to industrious
hours;

And to soft slumbers, that did gently
steep

Our spirits, carrying with them dreams of
flowers, 60

And wild notes warbled among leafy
bowers;

Two burning months let summer over-
leap,

And, coming back with Her who will be
ours,

Into thy bosom we again shall creep.

V.

STANZAS

WRITTEN IN MY POCKET-COPY OF THOMSON'S
"CASTLE OF INDOLENCE."

[Composed May 9-11, 1802.—Published 1815.]

WITHIN our happy Castle there dwelt
One

Whom without blame I may not over-
look;

For never sun on living creature shone
Who more devout enjoyment with us
took:

Here on his hours he hung as on a book, 5
On his own time here would he float
away,

As doth a fly upon a summer brook;
But go to-morrow, or belike to-day,
Seek for him,—he is fled; and whither none can say.

Thus often would he leave our peaceful
home, 10

And find elsewhere his business or de-
light;

Out of our Valley's limits did he roam:
Full many a time, upon a stormy night,
His voice came to us from the neighbouring height:

Oft could we see him driving full in view
At mid-day when the sun was shining
bright; 16

What ill was on him, what he had to do,
A mighty wonder bred among our quiet crew.

Ah! piteous sight it was to see this Man
When he came back to us, a withered
flower,— 20

Or like a sinful creature, pale and wan.
Down would he sit; and without strength or power

Look at the common grass from hour to
hour:

And oftentimes, how long I fear to say,
Where apple-trees in blossom made a
bower, 25

Retired in that sunshiny shade he lay;
And, like a naked Indian, slept himself
away.

Great wonder to our gentle tribe it was Whenever from our Valley he withdrew ;
For happier soul no living creature has Than he had, being here the long day
through.

Some thought he was a lover, and did woo :

Some thought far worse of him, and judged him wrong ;

But verse was what he had been wedded
to ;

And his own mind did like a tempest
strong

Come to him thus, and drove the weary
Wight along. 35

With him there often walked in friendly
guise,

Or lay upon the moss by brook or tree,
A noticeable Man with large grey eyes,

And a pale face that seemed undoubtedly

As if a blooming face it ought to be ;
Heavy his low-hung lip did oft appear,

Deprest by weight of musing Phantasy ;
Profound his forehead was, though not
severe ;

Yet some did think that he had little business here : 45

Sweet heaven forefend ! his was a lawful
right ;

Noisy he was, and gamesome as a boy ;
His limbs would toss about him with
delight,

Like branches when strong winds the trees annoy. 49

Nor lacked his calmer hours device or toy
To banish listlessness and irksome care ;

He would have taught you how you might employ

Yourself ; and many did to him repair,—
And certes not in vain ; he had inventions rare.

Expedients, too, of simplest sort he tried :
Long blades of grass, plucked round him as he lay, 56

Made, to his ear attentively applied,
A pipe on which the wind would deftly
play ;

Glasses he had, that little things display,
The beetle panoplied in gems and gold, 60
A mailed angel on a battle-day ;
The mysteries that cups of flowers enfold,
And all the gorgeous sights which fairies do behold.

He would entice that other Man to hear
His music, and to view his imagery : 65
And, sooth, these two were each to the other dear :

No livelier love in such a place could be :
There did they dwell—from earthly labour
free,

As happy spirits as were ever seen ;
If but a bird, to keep them company, 70
Or butterfly sate down, they were, I ween,
As pleased as if the same had been a Maiden-queen.

VI.

LOUISA¹.

AFTER ACCOMPANYING HER ON A MOUN-TAIN EXCURSION.

[Composed (probably) 1801.—Published 1807.]

I MET Louisa in the shade,
And, having seen that lovely Maid,
Why should I fear to say
That, nymph-like, she is fleet and strong,
And down the rocks can leap along 5
Like rivulets in May ?

[And she hath smiles to earth unknown ;
Smiles, that with motion of their own
Do spread, and sink, and rise ;
That come and go with endless play,
And ever, as they pass away,
Are hidden in her eyes.²]

She loves her fire, her cottage-home ;
Yet o'er the moorland will she roam
In weather rough and bleak ; 9
And, when against the wind she strains,
Oh ! might I kiss the mountain rains
That sparkle on her cheek.

¹ On the question of the identity of Louisa, see Editor's note on To a Butterfly, p. 897.—Ed.

² This stanza came second in all edd. from 1807 to 1843. It was most unfortunately omitted—for some reason unknown to us—in edd. 1845 and 1849.—Ed.

Take all that's mine "beneath the moon,"
 If I with her but half a noon
 May sit beneath the walls 15
 Of some old cave, or mossy nook,
 When up she winds along the brook
 To hunt the waterfalls.

VII.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

STRANGE fits of passion have I known :
 And I will dare to tell,
 But in the Lover's ear alone,
 What once to me befell.

When she I loved looked every day 5
 Fresh as a rose in June,
 I to her cottage bent my way,
 Beneath an evening-moon.

Upon the moon I fixed my eye,
 All over the wide lea ; 10
 With quickening pace my horse drew nigh
 Those paths so dear to me.

And now we reached the orchard-plot ;
 And, as we climbed the hill,
 The sinking moon to Lucy's cot 15
 Came near, and nearer still.

In one of those sweet dreams I slept,
 Kind Nature's gentlest boon !
 And all the while my eyes I kept
 On the descending moon. 20

My horse moved on ; hoof after hoof
 He raised, and never stopped :
 When down behind the cottage roof,
 At once, the bright moon dropped.

What fond and wayward thoughts will slide 25
 Into a Lover's head !
 "O mercy !" to myself I cried,
 "If Lucy should be dead !"

VIII.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

SHE dwelt among the untrodden ways
 Beside the springs of Dove,
 A Maid whom there were none to praise
 And very few to love :

A violet by a mossy stone 5
 Half hidden from the eye !
 —Fair as a star, when only one
 Is shining in the sky.

She lived unknown, and few could know
 When Lucy ceased to be ; 10
 But she is in her grave, and, oh,
 The difference to me !

IX.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1807.]

I TRAVELLED among unknown men,
 In lands beyond the sea ;
 Nor, England ! did I know till then What love I bore to thee.

'Tis past, that melancholy dream ! 5
 Nor will I quit thy shore
 A second time ; for still I seem
 To love thee more and more.

Among thy mountains did I feel
 The joy of my desire ; 10
 And she I cherished turned her wheel
 Beside an English fire.

Thy mornings showed, thy nights concealed,
 The bowers where Lucy played ;
 And thine too is the last green field 15
 That Lucy's eyes surveyed.

X.

[Composed 1826.—Published 1827.]

ERE with cold beads of midnight dew
 Had mingled tears of thine,
 I grieved, fond Youth ! that thou shouldst sue
 To haughty Geraldine.

Immoveable by generous sighs, 5
 She glories in a train
 Who drag, beneath our native skies,
 An Oriental chain.

Pine not like them with arms across,
 Forgetting in thy care 10
 How the fast-rooted trees can toss
 Their branches in mid air.

The humblest rivulet will take
 Its own wild liberties;
 And every day the imprisoned lake 15
 Is flowing in the breeze.

Then crouch no more on suppliant knee,
 But scorn with scorn outbrave;
 A Briton, even in love, should be
 A subject, not a slave! 20

XI.

TO —

[Composed 1824.—Published 1827.]

LOOK at the fate of summer flowers, Which blow at daybreak, droop ere even-
 song;
 And, grieved for their brief date, confess that ours,
 Measured by what we are and ought to be,
 Measured by all that, trembling, we foresee, 5
 Is not so long!

If human Life do pass away,
 Perishing yet more swiftly than the flower,
 If we are creatures of a winter's day;
 What space hath Virgin's beauty to dis-
 close 10
 Her sweets, and triumph o'er the breathing rose?
 Not even an hour!

The deepest grove whose foliage hid
 The happiest lovers Arcady might boast,
 Could not the entrance of this thought forbid: 15
 O be thou wise as they, soul-gifted Maid!
 Nor rate too high what must so quickly
 fade,
 So soon be lost.

Then shall love teach some virtuous Youth
 "To draw, out of the object of his eyes," 20
 The while on thee they gaze in simple
 truth,
 Hues more exalted, "a refinèd Form,"
 That dreads not age, nor suffers from the worm,
 And never dies.

XII.

THE FORSAKEN.

[Dated 1804 (W.).—Probably composed earlier.—
 Published 1842.]

THE peace which others seek they find;
 The heaviest storms not longest last;
 Heaven grants even to the guiltiest mind
 An amnesty for what is past;
 When will my sentence be reversed? 5
 I only pray to know the worst;
 And wish, as if my heart would burst.

O weary struggle! silent years
 Tell seemingly no doubtful tale;
 And yet they leave it short, and fears 10
 And hopes are strong and will prevail.
 My calmest faith escapes not pain;
 And, feeling that the hope is vain,
 I think that he will come again.

XIII.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

'Tis said that some have died for love:
 And here and there a church-yard grave is found
 In the cold north's unhallowed ground, Because the wretched man himself had slain,
 His love was such a grievous pain. 5
 And there is one whom I five years have
 known;
 He dwells alone
 Upon Helvellyn's side:
 He loved—the pretty Barbara died;
 And thus he makes his moan: 10
 Three years had Barbara in her grave been laid
 When thus his moan he made:
 "Oh, move, thou Cottage, from behind that oak!
 Or let the aged tree uprooted lie,
 That in some other way yon smoke 15
 May mount into the sky!
 The clouds pass on; they from the heavens depart:
 I look—the sky is empty space;
 I know not what I trace;
 But when I cease to look, my hand is on my heart. 20

"O! what a weight is in these shades!
Ye leaves,
That murmur once so dear, when will it
cease?"

Your sound my heart of rest bereaves,
It robs my heart of peace.
Thou Thrush, that singest loud—and loud and free, 25
Into yon row of willows flit,
Upon that alder sit;
Or sing another song, or choose another
tree.

"Roll back, sweet Rill! back to thy mountain-bounds, 29
And there for ever be thy waters chained!
For thou dost haunt the air with sounds
That cannot be sustained;
If still beneath that pine-tree's ragged bough
Headlong yon waterfall must come,
Oh let it then be dumb! 35
Be anything, sweet Rill, but that which thou art now.

"Thou Eglantine, so bright with sunny
showers,
Proud as a rainbow spanning half the
vale,
Thou one fair shrub, oh! shed thy flowers,
And stir not in the gale. 40
For thus to see thee nodding in the air,
To see thy arch thus stretch and bend,
Thus rise and thus descend,— Disturbs me till the sight is more than I can bear."

The Man who makes this feverish complaint 45
Is one of giant stature, who could dance Equipped from head to foot in iron mail.
Ah gentle Love! if ever thought was
thine.
To store up kindred hours for me, thy
face Turn from me, gentle Love! nor let me
walk 50
Within the sound of Emma's voice, nor
know
Such happiness as I have known to-day.

XIV.

A COMPLAINT.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1807.]

THERE is a change—and I am poor;
Your love hath been, nor long ago,
A fountain at my fond heart's door,
Whose only business was to flow;
And flow it did; not taking heed 5
Of its own bounty, or my need.

What happy moments did I count!
Blest was I then all bliss above!
Now, for that consecrated fount
Of murmuring, sparkling, living love, 10
What have I? shall I dare to tell?
A comfortless and hidden well.

A well of love—it may be deep—
I trust it is,—and never dry:
What matter? if the waters sleep 15
In silence and obscurity.
—Such change, and at the very door
Of my fond heart, hath made me poor.

XV.

TO —

[Composed 1824.—Published 1827.]

LET other bards of angels sing,
Bright suns without a spot;
But thou art no such perfect thing:
Rejoice that thou art not!

Heed not tho' none should call thee fair;
So, Mary, let it be 6
If nought in loveliness compare
With what thou art to me.

True beauty dwells in deep retreats,
Whose veil is unremoved 10
Till heart with heart in concord beats,
And the lover is beloved.

XVI.

[Composed ?.—Published 1845.]

YES! thou art fair, yet be not moved
To scorn the declaration,
That sometimes I in thee have loved
My fancy's own creation.

Imagination needs must stir ; 5
 Dear Maid, this truth believe,
 Minds that have nothing to confer
 Find little to perceive.

Be pleased that nature made thee fit
 To feed my heart's devotion, 10
 By laws to which all Forms submit
 In sky, air, earth, and ocean.

XVII.

[Composed 1824.—Published 1827.]

How rich that forehead's calm expanse !
 How bright that heaven-directed glance !
 —Waft her to glory, wingèd Powers,
 Ere sorrow be renewed,
 And intercourse with mortal hours 5
 Bring back a humbler mood !
 So looked Cecilia when she drew
 An Angel from his station ;
 So looked ; not ceasing to pursue 10
 Her tuneful adoration !

But hand and voice alike are still ;
 No sound here sweeps away the will
 That gave it birth : in service meek
 One upright arm sustains the cheek,
 And one across the bosom lies— 15
 That rose, and now forgets to rise,
 Subdued by breathless harmonies
 Of meditative feeling ;
 Mute strains from worlds beyond the skies,
 Through the pure light of female eyes 20
 Their sanctity revealing !

XVIII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1845.]

WHAT heavenly smiles ! O Lady mine,
 Through my very heart they shine ;
 And, if my brow gives back their light,
 Do thou look gladly on the sight ;
 As the clear Moon with modest pride 5
 Beholds her own bright beams
 Reflected from the mountain's side
 And from the headlong streams.

XIX.

TO —

[Composed 1824.—Published 1827.]

O DEARER far than light and life are
 dear,
 Full oft our human foresight I deplore ;
 Trembling, through my unworthiness,
 with fear
 That friends, by death disjoined, may meet no more !

Misgivings, hard to vanquish or control, 5 Mix with the day, and cross the hour of
 rest ;
 While all the future, for thy purer soul,
 With "sober certainties" of love is blest.

That sigh of thine, not meant for human
 ear,
 Tells that these words thy humbleness 10 offend ;
 Yet bear me up—else faltering in the rear
 Of a steep march : support me to the end.

Peace settles where the intellect is meek,
 And Love is dutiful in thought and deed ;
 Through Thee communion with that Love
 I seek : 15
 The faith Heaven strengthens where he moulds the Creed.

LAMENT OF MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS

ON THE EVE OF A NEW YEAR.

[Composed 1817.—Published 1820.]

I.

SMILE of the Moon !—for so I name
 That silent greeting from above ;
 A gentle flash of light that came
 From her whom drooping captives love ;
 Or art thou of still higher birth ? 5
 Thou that didst part the clouds of earth
 My torpor to reprove !

II.

Bright boon of pitying Heaven !—alas,
 I may not trust thy placid cheer !
 Pondering that Time to-night will pass 10
 The threshold of another year ;

For years to me are sad and dull ;
My very moments are too full
Of hopelessness and fear.

III.

And yet the soul-awakening gleam, 15
That struck perchance the farthest cone
Of Scotland's rocky wilds, did seem
To visit me, and me alone ;
Me, unapproached by any friend,
Save those who to my sorrows lend 20
Tears due unto their own.

IV.

To-night the church-tower bells will ring
Through these wide realms a festive peal ;
To the new year a welcoming ;
A tuneful offering for the weal 25
Of happy millions lulled in sleep ;
While I am forced to watch and weep,
By wounds that may not heal.

V.

Born all too high, by wedlock raised
Still higher—to be cast thus low ! 30
Would that mine eyes had never gazed
On aught of more ambitious show
Than the sweet flowerets of the fields !
—It is my royal state that yields
This bitterness of woe. 35

VI.

Yet how?—for I, if there be truth
In the world's voice, was passing fair ;
And beauty, for confiding youth,
Those shocks of passion can prepare
That kill the bloom before its time ; 40
And blanch, without the owner's crime,
The most resplendent hair.

VII.

Unblest distinction ! showered on me
To bind a lingering life in chains :
All that could quit my grasp, or flee, 45
Is gone ;—but not the subtle stains
Fixed in the spirit ; for even here
Can I be proud that jealous fear
Of what I was remains.

VIII.

A Woman rules my prison's key ; 50
A sister Queen, against the bent
Of law and holiest sympathy,

Detains me, doubtful of the event ;
Great God, who feel'st for my distress,
My thoughts are all that I possess, 55
O keep them innocent !

IX.

Farewell desire of human aid,
Which abject mortals vainly court !
By friends deceived, by foes betrayed,
Of fears the prey, of hopes the sport ; 60
Nought but the world-redeeming Cross
Is able to supply my loss,
My burthen to support.

X.

Hark ! the death-note of the year
Sounded by the castle-clock ! 65
From her sunk eyes a stagnant tear
Stole forth, unsettled by the shock ;
But oft the woods renewed their green,
Ere the tired head of Scotland's Queen
Reposed upon the block ! 70

THE COMPLAINT

OF A FORSAKEN INDIAN WOMAN.

[When a Northern Indian, from sickness, is unable to continue his journey with his companions, he is left behind, covered over with deer-skins, and is supplied with water, food, and fuel, if the situation of the place will afford it. He is informed of the track which his companions intend to pursue, and if he be unable to follow, or overtake them, he perishes alone in the desert, unless he should have the good fortune to fall in with some other tribes of Indians. The females are equally, or still more, exposed to the same fate. See that very interesting work Hearne's "Journey from Hudson's Bay to the Northern Ocean." In the high northern latitudes, as the same writer informs us, when the northern lights vary their position in the air, they make a rustling and a crackling noise, as alluded to in the following poem.]

I.

BEFORE I see another day,
Oh let my body die away !
In sleep I heard the northern gleams ;
The stars, they were among my dreams ;

In rustling conflict through the skies, 5
I heard, I saw the flashes drive,
And yet they are upon my eyes,
And yet I am alive;
Before I see another day,
Oh let my body die away! 10

II.

My fire is dead: it knew no pain;
Yet is it dead, and I remain:
All stiff with ice the ashes lie;
And they are dead, and I will die.
When I was well, I wished to live, 15
For clothes, for warmth, for food, and fire;
But they to me no joy can give,
No pleasure now, and no desire.
Then here contented will I lie!
Alone, I cannot fear to die. 20

III.

Alas! ye might have dragged me on Another day, a single one!
Too soon I yielded to despair;
Why did ye listen to my prayer?
When ye were gone my limbs were 25 stronger;
And oh, how grievously I rue,
That, afterwards, a little longer,
My friends, I did not follow you!
For strong and without pain I lay,
Dear friends, when ye were gone away. 30

IV.

My Child! they gave thee to another,
A woman who was not thy mother.
When from my arms my Babe they took,
On me how strangely did he look!
Through his whole body something ran,
A most strange working did I see; 36
—As if he strove to be a man,
That he might pull the sledge for me:
And then he stretched his arms, how wild!
Oh mercy! like a helpless child. 40

V.

My little joy! my little pride!
In two days more I must have died.
Then do not weep and grieve for me;
I feel I must have died with thee.
O wind, that o'er my head art flying 45

The way my friends their course did bend,
I should not feel the pain of dying,
Could I with thee a message send;
Too soon, my friends, ye went away;
For I had many things to say. 50

VI.

I'll follow you across the snow;
Ye travel heavily and slow;
In spite of all my weary pain
I'll look upon your tents again.
—My fire is dead, and snowy white 55
The water which beside it stood:
The wolf has come to me to-night,
And he has stolen away my food.
For ever left alone am I;
Then wherefore should I fear to die? 60

VII.

Young as I am, my course is run,
I shall not see another sun;
I cannot lift my limbs to know
If they have any life or no.
My poor forsaken Child, if I 65
For once could have thee close to me,
With happy heart I then would die,
And my last thought would happy be;
But thou, dear Babe, art far away,
Nor shall I see another day. 70

XXII.

THE LAST OF THE FLOCK.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1798.]

I.

In distant countries have I been,
And yet I have not often seen
A healthy man, a man full grown,
Weep in the public roads, alone.
But such a one, on English ground, 5
And in the broad highway, I met;
Along the broad highway he came,
His cheeks with tears were wet:
Sturdy he seemed, though he was sad;
And in his arms a Lamb he had. 10

II.

He saw me, and he turned aside,
As if he wished himself to hide:
And with his coat did then essay
To wipe those briny tears away.

I followed him, and said, "My friend, 15
 What ails you? wherefore weep you so?"
 —"Shame on me, Sir! this lusty Lamb,
 He makes my tears to flow.
 To-day I fetched him from the rock;
 He is the last of all my flock." 20

III.

"When I was young, a single man,
 And after youthful follies ran,
 Though little given to care and thought,
 Yet, so it was, an ewe I bought;
 And other sheep from her I raised, 25
 As healthy sheep as you might see;
 And then I married, and was rich
 As I could wish to be;
 Of sheep I numbered a full score,
 And every year increased my store." 30

IV.

"Year after year my stock it grew;
 And from this one, this single ewe,
 Full fifty comely sheep I raised,
 As fine a flock as ever grazed!
 Upon the Quantock hills they fed; 35
 They thrive, and we at home did thrive:
 —This lusty Lamb of all my store
 Is all that is alive;
 And now I care not if we die,
 And perish all of poverty." 40

V.

"Six Children, Sir! had I to feed;
 Hard labour in a time of need!
 My pride was tamed, and in our grief
 I of the Parish asked relief.
 They said, I was a wealthy man; 45
 My sheep upon the uplands fed,
 And it was fit that thence I took Whereof to buy us bread.
 'Do this: how can we give to you,'
 They cried, 'what to the poor is due?' 50

VI.

"I sold a sheep, as they had said,
 And bought my little children bread,
 And they were healthy with their food;
 For me—it never did me good.
 A woeful time it was for me, 55

To see the end of all my gains,
 The pretty flock which I had reared
 With all my care and pains,
 To see it melt like snow away—
 For me it was a woeful day." 60

VII.

"Another still! and still another!
 A little lamb, and then its mother!
 It was a vein that never stopped—Like blood-drops from my heart they dropped.
 Till thirty were not left alive 65
 They dwindled, dwindled, one by one;
 And I may say, that many a time
 I wished they all were gone—
 Reckless of what might come at last
 Were but the bitter struggle past." 70

VIII.

"To wicked deeds I was inclined,
 And wicked fancies crossed my mind;
 And every man I chanced to see,
 I thought he knew some ill of me:
 No peace, no comfort could I find, 75
 No ease, within doors or without;
 And crazily and wearily
 I went my work about;
 And oft was moved to flee from home,
 And hide my head where wild beasts roam." 80

IX.

"Sir! 'twas a precious flock to me,
 As dear as my own children be;
 For daily with my growing store
 I loved my children more and more.
 Alas! it was an evil time; 85
 God cursed me in my sore distress;
 I prayed, yet every day I thought
 I loved my children less;
 And every week, and every day,
 My flock it seemed to melt away." 90

X.

"They dwindled, Sir, sad sight to see!
 From ten to five, from five to three,
 A lamb, a wether, and a ewe;—
 And then at last from three to two;
 And, of my fifty, yesterday 95

I had but only one:
 And here it lies upon my arm,
 Alas! and I have none;—
 To-day I fetched it from the rock;
 It is the last of all my flock." 100

XXIII.

REPENTANCE.

A PASTORAL BALLAD.

THE fields which with covetous spirit we sold,
 Those beautiful fields, the delight of the
 day,
 Would have brought us more good than a burthen of gold,
 Could we but have been as contented as
 they.

When the troublesome Tempter beset us,
 said I, 5
 "Let him come, with his purse proudly grasped in his hand;
 But, Allan, be true to me, Allan,—we'll
 die 10
 Before he shall go with an inch of the
 land!"

There dwelt we, as happy as birds in their
 bowers;
 Unfettered as bees that in gardens abide;
 We could do what we liked with the land,
 it was ours; 11
 And for us the brook murmured that ran by its side.

But now we are strangers, go early or late;
 And often, like one overburthened with sin,
 With my hand on the latch of the half-opened gate, 15
 I look at the fields, but I cannot go in!

When I walk by the hedge on a bright summer's day,
 Or sit in the shade of my grandfather's
 tree,
 A stern face it puts on, as if ready to say,
 "What ails you, that you must come creeping to me!" 20

With our pastures about us, we could not be sad;
 Our comfort was near if we ever were
 crost;
 But the comfort, the blessings, and wealth that we had,
 We slighted them all,—and our birthright was lost.

Oh, ill-judging sire of an innocent son 25
 Who must now be a wanderer! but peace to that strain!
 Think of evening's repose when our labour
 was done,
 The sabbath's return; and its leisure's soft chain!

And in sickness, if night had been sparing of sleep,
 How cheerful, at sunrise, the hill where I
 stood, 30
 Looking down on the kine, and our treasure of sheep
 That besprinkled the field; 'twas like youth in my blood!

Now I cleave to the house, and am dull as a snail;
 And, oftentimes, hear the church-bell
 with a sigh,
 That follows the thought—We've no land in the vale, 35
 Save six feet of earth where our forefathers lie!

XXIV.

AFFLICTION OF MARGARET—.

[Dated 1804 (W.).—Probably composed earlier
 (1801?).—Published 1807.]

I.

WHERE art thou, my beloved Son,
 Where art thou, worse to me than dead?
 Oh find me, prosperous or undone!
 Or, if the grave be now thy bed,
 Why am I ignorant of the same 5
 That I may rest; and neither blame
 Nor sorrow may attend thy name?

II.

Seven years, alas! to have received
 No tidings of an only child;
 To have despaired, have hoped, believed,
 And been for evermore beguiled; ^{II}
 Sometimes with thoughts of very bliss!
 I catch at them, and then I miss;
 Was ever darkness like to this?

III.

He was among the prime in worth, ¹⁵
 An object beautiful to behold;
 Well born, well bred; I sent him forth
 Ingenuous, innocent, and bold:
 If things ensued that wanted grace,
 As hath been said, they were not base; ²⁰
 And never blush was on my face.

IV.

Ah! little doth the young-one dream,
 When full of play and childish cares,
 What power is in his wildest scream,
 Heard by his mother unawares! ²⁵
 He knows it not, he cannot guess:
 Years to a mother bring distress;
 But do not make her love the less.

V.

Neglect me! no, I suffered long
 From that ill thought; and, being blind,
 Said, "Pride shall help me in my wrong:
 Kind mother have I been, as kind ³²
 As ever breathed:" and that is true;
 I've wet my path with tears like dew,
 Weeping for him when no one knew. ³⁵

VI.

My Son, if thou be humbled, poor,
 Hopeless of honour and of gain,
 Oh! do not dread thy mother's door;
 Think not of me with grief and pain:
 I now can see with better eyes; ⁴⁰
 And worldly grandeur I despise,
 And fortune with her gifts and lies.

VII.

Alas! the fowls of heaven have wings,
 And blasts of heaven will aid their flight;
 They mount—how short a voyage brings
 The wanderers back to their delight! ⁴⁶

Chains tie us down by land and sea;
 And wishes, vain as mine, may be
 All that is left to comfort thee.

VIII.

Perhaps some dungeon hears thee groan, ^{II}
 Maimed, mangled by inhuman men; ⁵¹
 Or thou upon a desert thrown Inheritest the lion's den;
 Or hast been summoned to the deep,
 Thou, thou and all thy mates, to keep. ⁵⁵
 An incommunicable sleep.

IX.

I look for ghosts; but none will force
 Their way to me: 'tis falsely said
 That there was ever intercourse
 Between the living and the dead; ⁶⁰
 For, surely, then I should have sight
 Of him I wait for day and night,
 With love and longings infinite.

X.

My apprehensions come in crowds;
 I dread the rustling of the grass; ⁶⁵
 The very shadows of the clouds
 Have power to shake me as they pass:
 I question things and do not find
 One that will answer to my mind;
 And all the world appears unkind. ⁷⁰

XI.

Beyond participation lie
 My troubles, and beyond relief:
 If any chance to heave a sigh,
 They pity me, and not my grief.
 Then come to me, my Son, or send ⁷⁵
 Some tidings that my woes may end;
 I have no other earthly friend!

XXV.

THE COTTAGER TO HER INFANT.

BY MY SISTER.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1815.]

THE days are cold, the nights are long,
 The north-wind sings a doleful song;
 Then hush again upon my breast;
 All merry things are now at rest,
 Save thee, my pretty Love! ⁵

The kitten sleeps upon the hearth,
The crickets long have ceased their mirth;
There's nothing stirring in the house
Save one wee, hungry, nibbling mouse,
Then why so busy thou? 10

Nay! start not at that sparkling light;
'Tis but the moon that shines so bright
On the window pane bedropped with rain:
Then little Darling! sleep again,
And wake when it is day. 15

XXVI.

MATERNAL GRIEF.

[Composed 1810 (?).—Published 1842.]

DEPARTED Child! I could forget thee once Though at my bosom nursed; this woeful
gain

Thy dissolution brings, that in my soul
Is present and perpetually abides
A shadow, never, never to be displaced 5
By the returning substance, seen or touched,

Seen by mine eyes, or clasped in my embrace.

Absence and death how differ they! and how

Shall I admit that nothing can restore 9
What one short sigh so easily removed?—
Death, life, and sleep, reality and thought, Assist me, God, their boundaries to
know,

O teach me calm submission to thy Will!

The Child she mourned had overstepped the pale

Of Infancy, but still did breathe the air 15
That sanctifies its confines, and partook Reflected beams of that celestial light
To all the Little-ones on sinful earth
Not unvouchsafed—a light that warmed and cheered

Those several qualities of heart and mind
Which, in her own blest nature, rooted
deep, 21

Daily before the Mother's watchful eye,
And not hers only, their peculiar charms
Unfolded,—beauty, for its present self,
And for its promises to future years, 25
With not unfrequent rapture fondly hailed.

Have you espied upon a dewy lawn
A pair of Leverets each provoking each
To a continuance of their fearless sport,
Two separate Creatures in their several gifts 30

Abounding, but so fashioned that, in all
That Nature prompts them to display, their looks,

Their starts of motion and their fits of
rest,

An indistinguishable style appears
And character of gladness, as if Spring 35 Lodged in their innocent bosoms, and the spirit

Of the rejoicing morning were their own?

Such union, in the lovely Girl maintained

And her twin Brother, had the parent
seen,

Ere, pouncing like a ravenous bird of prey, 40

Death in a moment parted them, and left
The Mother, in her turns of anguish, worse

Than desolate; for oft-times from the
sound

Of the survivor's sweetest voice (dear
child,

He knew it not) and from his happiest
looks, 45

Did she extract the food of self-reproach,
As one that lived ungrateful for the stay
By Heaven afforded to uphold her maimed
And tottering spirit. And full oft the Boy, Now first acquainted with distress and grief, 50

Shrunk from his Mother's presence, shunned with fear

Her sad approach, and stole away to find,
In his known haunts of joy where'er he
might,

A more congenial object. But, as time Softened her pangs, and reconciled the
child 55

To what he saw, he gradually returned,
Like a scared Bird encouraged to renew
A broken intercourse; and, while his eyes
Were yet with pensive fear and gentle awe

Turned upon her who bore him, she would stoop 60

To imprint a kiss that lacked not power to spread
Faint colour over both their pallid cheeks,
And stilled his tremulous lip. Thus they were calmed
And cheered; and now together breathe fresh air
In open fields; and when the glare of
day 65
Is gone, and twilight to the Mother's wish Befriends the observance, readily they join
In walks whose boundary is the lost One's
grave,
Which he with flowers hath planted, finding there Amusement, where the Mother does not miss 70
Dear consolation, kneeling on the turf
In prayer, yet blending with that solemn rite
Of pious faith the vanities of grief;
For such, by pitying Angels and by Spirits
Transferred to regions upon which the clouds 75
Of our weak nature rest not, must be deemed
Those willing tears, and unforbidden
sighs,
And all those tokens of a cherished sorrow,
Which, soothed and sweetened by the grace of Heaven 79
As now it is, seems to her own fond heart
Immortal as the love that gave it being.

XXVII.

THE SAILOR'S MOTHER.

ONE morning (raw it was and wet—
A foggy day in winter time)
A Woman on the road I met,
Not old, though something past her
prime:
Majestic in her person, tall and straight;
And like a Roman matron's was her mien and gait. 6

The ancient spirit is not dead;
Old times, thought I, are breathing
there;
Proud was I that my country bred
Such strength, a dignity so fair: 10
She begged an alms, like one in poor
estate;
I looked at her again, nor did my pride abate.

When from these lofty thoughts I woke,
"What is it," said I, "that you bear,
Beneath the covert of your Cloak, 15
Protected from this cold damp air?"
She answered, soon as she the question
heard,
"A simple burthen, Sir, a little Singing-
bird."

And, thus continuing, she said,
"I had a Son, who many a day 20
Sailed on the seas, but he is dead;
In Denmark he was cast away;
And I have travelled weary miles to see If aught which he had owned might still remain for me.

"The bird and cage they both were his:
'Twas my Son's bird; and neat and trim 26
He kept it: many voyages
The singing-bird had gone with him;
When last he sailed, he left the bird
behind;
From bodings, as might be, that hung upon his mind. 30

"He to a fellow-lodger's care
Had left it, to be watched and fed,
And pipe its song in safety;—there
I found it when my Son was dead;
And now, God help me for my little wit! 35
I bear it with me, Sir;—he took so much delight in it."

XXVIII.

THE CHILDLESS FATHER.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

"UP, Timothy, up with your staff and
away!
Not a soul in the village this morning will
stay;

The hare has just started from Hamilton's grounds,
And Skiddaw is glad with the cry of the hounds."

—Of coats and of jackets grey, scarlet, and green,

On the slopes of the pastures all colours were seen;

With their comely blue aprons, and caps white as snow,

The girls on the hills made a holiday show.

Fresh sprigs of green box-wood, not six months before,

Filled the funeral basin¹ at Timothy's door;

A coffin through Timothy's threshold had past;

One Child did it bear, and that Child was his last.

Now fast up the dell came the noise and the fray,

The horse, and the horn, and the hark! hark away!

Old Timothy took up his staff, and he shut With a leisurely motion the door of his hut.

Perhaps to himself at that moment he said; "The key I must take, for my Ellen is dead."

But of this in my ears not a word did he speak;

And he went to the chase with a tear on his cheek.

XXIX.

THE EMIGRANT MOTHER.

[Composed March 16, 17, 1802.—Published 1807.]

ONCE in a lonely hamlet I sojourned
In which a Lady driven from France did dwell;

The big and lesser griefs with which she mourned

In friendship she to me would often tell.

¹ In several parts of the North of England, when a funeral takes place, a basin full of sprigs of box-wood is placed at the door of the house from which the coffin is taken up, and each person who attends the funeral ordinarily takes a sprig of this box-wood, and throws it into the grave of the deceased.

This Lady, dwelling upon British ground,
Where she was childless, daily would repair

To a poor neighbouring cottage; as I found,

For sake of a young Child whose home was there.

Once having seen her clasp with fond embrace

This Child, I chanted to myself a lay,
Endeavouring, in our English tongue, to trace

Such things as she unto the Babe might say:

And thus, from what I heard and knew, or guessed,

My song the workings of her heart expressed.

I.

"Dear Babe, thou daughter of another,
One moment let me be thy mother!

An infant's face and looks are thine

And sure a mother's heart is mine:

Thy own dear mother's far away,

At labour in the harvest field:

Thy little sister is at play;—

What warmth, what comfort would it yield

To my poor heart, if thou wouldst be

One little hour a child to me!

II.

"Across the waters I am come,

And I have left a babe at home:

A long, long way of land and sea!

Come to me—I'm no enemy:

I am the same who at thy side

Sate yesterday, and made a nest

For thee, sweet Baby!—thou hast tried,

Thou know'st the pillow of my breast;

Good, good art thou:—alas! to me

Far more than I can be to thee.

III.

"Here, little Darling, dost thou lie;

An infant thou, a mother I!

Mine wilt thou be, thou hast no fears;

Mine art thou—spite of these my tears.

Alas ! before I left the spot,
 My baby and its dwelling-place, 40
 The nurse said to me, 'Tears should not Be shed upon an infant's face,
 It was unlucky'—no, no, no ;
 No truth is in them who say so !

IV.

"My own dear Little-one will sigh, 45
 Sweet Babe ! and they will let him die.
 'He pines,' they'll say, 'it is his doom,
 And you may see his hour is come.'
 Oh ! had he but thy cheerful smiles,
 Limbs stout as thine, and lips as gay, 50
 Thy looks, thy cunning, and thy wiles,
 And countenance like a summer's day,
 They would have hopes of him ;—and
 then
 I should behold his face again !

V.

"'Tis gone—like dreams that we forget ;
 There was a smile or two—yet—yet 56
 I can remember them, I see
 The smiles, worth all the world to me.
 Dear Baby ! I must lay thee down ; 59
 Thou troublest me with strange alarms ;
 Smiles hast thou, bright ones of thy own ;
 I cannot keep thee in my arms ;
 For they confound me ;—where—where is That last, that sweetest smile of his ?

VI.

"Oh ! how I love thee !—we will stay 65
 Together here this one half day.
 My sister's child, who bears my name,
 From France to sheltering England
 came ;
 She with her mother crossed the sea ;
 The babe and mother near me dwell : 70
 Yet does my yearning heart to thee
 Turn rather, though I love her well :
 Rest, little Stranger, rest thee here !
 Never was any child more dear !

VII.

"—I cannot help it ; ill intent 75
 I've none, my pretty Innocent !
 I weep—I know they do thee wrong,
 These tears—and my poor idle tongue.

Oh, what a kiss was that ! my cheek
 How cold it is ! but thou art good ; 80
 Thine eyes are on me—they would speak,
 I think, to help me if they could.
 Blessings upon that soft, warm face,
 My heart again is in its place !

VIII.

"While thou art mine, my little Love, 85
 This cannot be a sorrowful grove ;
 Contentment, hope, and mother's glee,
 I seem to find them all in thee :
 Here's grass to play with, here are
 flowers ;
 I'll call thee by my darling's name ; 90
 Thou hast, I think, a look of ours,
 Thy features seem to me the same ;
 His little sister thou shalt be ;
 And, when once more my home I see,
 I'll tell him many tales of Thee." 95

XXX.

VAUDRACOUR AND JULIA.

[Composed probably 1804.—Published 1820]

The following tale was written as an Episode, in a work from which its length may perhaps exclude it. The facts are true ; no invention as to these has been exercised, as none was needed.

O HAPPY time of youthful lovers (thus
 My story may begin) O balmy time,
 In which a love-knot on a lady's brow
 Is fairer than the fairest star in heaven !
 To such inheritance of blessed fancy 5 (Fancy that sports more desperately with minds
 Than ever fortune hath been known to do)
 The high-born Vaudracour was brought, by years
 Whose progress had a little overstepped His stripling prime. A town of small repute, 10
 Among the vine-clad mountains of Au-vergne,
 Was the Youth's birth-place. There he wooed a Maid
 Who heard the heart-felt music of his suit With answering vows. Plebeian was the stock,
 Plebeian, though ingenuous, the stock, 15

From which her graces and her honours sprung :
And hence the father of the enamoured
Youth,
With haughty indignation, spurned the
thought
Of such alliance.—From their cradles up,
With but a step between their several homes, 20
Twins had they been in pleasure; after
strife
And petty quarrels, had grown fond again;
Each other's advocate, each other's stay;
And, in their happiest moments, not
content,
If more divided than a sportive pair 25
Of sea-fowl, conscious both that they are hovering
Within the eddy of a common blast,
Or hidden only by the concave depth Of neighbouring billows from each other's sight.

Thus, not without concurrence of an age Unknown to memory, was an earnest
given 31
By ready nature for a life of love,
For endless constancy, and placid truth;
But whatsoever of such rare treasure lay Reserved, had fate permitted, for support 35
Of their maturer years, his present mind
Was under fascination;—he beheld
A vision, and adored the thing he saw.
Arabian fiction never filled the world
With half the wonders that were wrought
for him. 40
Earth breathed in one great presence of the spring;
Life turned the meanest of her implements,
Before his eyes, to price above all gold;
The house she dwelt in was a sainted
shrine;
Her chamber-window did surpass in glory
The portals of the dawn; all Paradise 46
Could, by the simple opening of a door,
Let itself in upon him:—pathways, walks,
Swarmed with enchantment, till his spirit
sank,
Surcharged, within him, overblest to move

Beneath a sun that wakes a weary world
To its dull round of ordinary cares; 52
A man too happy for mortality!

So passed the time, till, whether through effect
Of some unguarded moment that dissolved 55
Virtuous restraint—ah, speak it, think it,
not!
Deem rather that the fervent Youth, who saw
So many bars between his present state
And the dear haven where he wished
to be
In honourable wedlock with his Love, 60
Was in his judgment tempted to decline To perilous weakness, and entrust his
cause
To nature for a happy end of all;
Deem that by such fond hope the Youth was swayed,
And bear with their transgression, when
I add 65
That Julia, wanting yet the name of wife, Carried about her for a secret grief
The promise of a mother.
To conceal
The threatened shame, the parents of the Maid
Found means to hurry her away by night,
And unforewarned, that in some distant
spot 71
She might remain shrouded in privacy, Until the babe was born. When morning
came,
The Lover, thus bereft, stung with his loss,
And all uncertain whither he should turn, Chafed like a wild beast in the toils; but
soon 76
Discovering traces of the fugitives,
Their steps he followed to the Maid's
retreat.
Easily may the sequel be divined—Walks to and fro—watchings at every
hour; 80
And the fair Captive, who, whene'er she
may,
Is busy at her casement as the swallow Fluttering its pinions, almost within reach,

About the pendent nest, did thus espy
Her Lover!—thence a stolen interview, 85 Accomplished under friendly shade of
night.

I pass the raptures of the pair;—such
theme
Is, by innumerable poets, touched In more delightful verse than skill of
mine
Could fashion; chiefly by that darling
bard 90
Who told of Juliet and her Romeo,
And of the lark's note heard before its
time,
And of the streaks that laced the severing
clouds
In the unrelenting east.—Through all her courts
The vacant city slept; the busy winds, 95
That keep no certain intervals of rest, Moved not; meanwhile the galaxy dis-
played
Her fires, that like mysterious pulses beat Aloft;—momentous but uneasy bliss!
To their full hearts the universe seemed
hung 100
On that brief meeting's slender filament!

They parted; and the generous Vaudracour
Reached speedily the native threshold, bent
On making (so the Lovers had agreed)
A sacrifice of birthright to attain 105
A final portion from his father's hand;
Which granted, Bride and Bridegroom then would flee
To some remote and solitary place,
Shady as night, and beautiful as heaven,
Where they may live, with no one to behold 110
Their happiness, or to disturb their love.
But now of this no whisper; not the less,
If ever an obtrusive word were dropped Touching the matter of his passion, still,
In his stern father's hearing, Vaudracour
Persisted openly that death alone 116
Should abrogate his human privilege
Divine, of swearing everlasting truth,
Upon the altar, to the Maid he loved.

“You shall be baffled in your mad intent 120
If there be justice in the court of France,” Muttered the Father.—From these words the Youth
Conceived a terror; and, by night or day Stirred nowhere without weapons, that full soon 124
Found dreadful provocation: for at night,
When to his chamber he retired, attempt Was made to seize him by three armèd
men,
Acting, in furtherance of the Father's will,
Under a private signet of the State.
One the rash Youth's ungovernable hand
Slew, and as quickly to a second gave 131
A perilous wound—he shuddered to behold
The breathless corse; then peacefully resigned
His person to the law, was lodged in prison,
And wore the fetters of a criminal. 135

Have you observed a tuft of wingèd seed
That, from the dandelion's naked stalk,
Mounted aloft, is suffered not to use
Its natural gifts for purposes of rest, Driven by the autumnal whirlwind to and fro 140
Through the wide element? or have you marked
The heavier substance of a leaf-clad bough,
Within the vortex of a foaming flood,
Tormented? by such aid you may conceive
The perturbation that ensued;—ah, no!
Desperate the Maid—the Youth is stained with blood; 146
Unmatchable on earth is their disquiet!
Yet as the troubled seed and tortured
bough
Is man, subjected to despotic sway.

For him, by private influence with the Court, 150
Was pardon gained, and liberty procured;
But not without exaction of a pledge,
Which liberty and love dispersed in air.
He flew to her from whom they would divide him—
He clove to her who could not give him
peace— 155

Yea, his first word of greeting was,—“All right
Is gone from me; my lately-towering hopes,
To the least fibre of their lowest root,
Are withered; thou no longer canst be
mine,
I thine—the conscience-stricken must not woo 160
The unruffled Innocent,—I see thy face,
Behold thee, and my misery is complete!”

“One, are we not?” exclaimed the Maiden—“One,
For innocence and youth, for weal and
woe?”
Then with the father’s name she coupled
words 165
Of vehement indignation; but the Youth Checked her with filial meekness; for no
thought
Uncharitable crossed his mind, no sense
Of hasty anger, rising in the eclipse
Of true domestic loyalty, did e’er 170
Find place within his bosom.—Once again
The persevering wedge of tyranny Achieved their separation: and once more
Were they united,—to be yet again
Disparted, pitiable lot! But here 175
A portion of the tale may well be left
In silence, though my memory could add Much how the Youth, in scanty space of
time,
Was traversed from without; much, too,
of thoughts
That occupied his days in solitude 180
Under privation and restraint; and what,
Through dark and shapeless fear of things
to come,
And what, through strong compunction
for the past,
He suffered—breaking down in heart and
mind!

Doomed to a third and last captivity,
His freedom he recovered on the eve 186 Of Julia’s travail. When the babe was
born,
Its presence tempted him to cherish schemes
Of future happiness. “You shall return,

Julia,” said he, “and to your father’s
house 190
Go with the child.—You have been wretched; yet
The silver shower, whose reckless burthen weighs
Too heavily upon the lily’s head,
Oft leaves a saving moisture at its root.
Malice, beholding you, will melt away. 195 Go!—’tis a town where both of us were
born;
None will reproach you, for our truth is
known;
And if, amid those once-bright bowers,
our fate
Remain unpitied, pity is not in man.
With ornaments—the prettiest, nature yields 200
Or art can fashion, shall you deck our boy,
And feed his countenance with your own sweet looks,
Till no one can resist him.—Now, even
now,
I see him sporting on the sunny lawn;
My father from the window sees him too; 205
Startled, as if some new-created thing
Enriched the earth, or Faery of the woods
Bounded before him;—but the unweeting
Child
Shall by his beauty win his grandsire’s
heart,
So that it shall be softened, and our loves End happily, as they began!”
These gleams
Appeared but seldom; oftener was he
seen 212
Propping a pale and melancholy face
Upon the Mother’s bosom; resting thus His head upon one breast, while from the other 215
The Babe was drawing in its quiet food.
—That pillow is no longer to be thine, Fond Youth! that mournful solace now must pass
Into the list of things that cannot be!
Unwedded Julia, terror-smitten, hears
The sentence, by her mother’s lip pronounced, 221
That dooms her to a convent.—Who shall tell,

Who dares report, the tidings to the lord
Of her affections? so they blindly asked Who knew not to what quiet depths a
weight 225

Of agony had pressed the Sufferer down:
The word, by others dreaded, he can hear Composed and silent, without visible sign
Of even the least emotion. Noting this,
When the impatient object of his love 230 Upbraided him with slackness, he returned

No answer, only took the mother's hand
And kissed it; seemingly devoid of pain,
Or care, that what so tenderly he pressed
Was a dependant on the obdurate heart
Of one who came to disunite their lives 236
For ever—sad alternative! preferred,
By the unbending Parents of the Maid,
To secret 'spousals meanly disavowed.
—So be it!

In the city he remained 240
A season after Julia had withdrawn
To those religious walls. He, too, departs—

Who with him?—even the senseless Little-
one.

With that sole charge he passed the city-gates,

For the last time, attendant by the side
Of a close chair, a litter, or sedan, 246
In which the Babe was carried. To a hill, That rose a brief league distant from the
town,

The dwellers in that house where he had lodged

Accompanied his steps, by anxious love
Impelled;—they parted from him there,
and stood 251

Watching below till he had disappeared
On the hill top. His eyes he scarcely took,
Throughout that journey, from the vehicle (Slow-moving ark of all his hopes!) that veiled 255

The tender infant: and at every inn,
And under every hospitable tree
At which the bearers halted or reposed,
Laid him with timid care upon his knees,
And looked, as mothers ne'er were known to look, 260

Upon the nursling which his arms embraced.

This was the manner in which Vaudracour

Departed with his infant; and thus reached

His father's house, where to the innocent
child

Admittance was denied. The young man
spoke 265

No word of indignation or reproof,
But of his father begged, a last request,

That a retreat might be assigned to him,
Where in forgotten quiet he might dwell,

With such allowance as his wants required; 270

For wishes he had none. To a lodge that
stood

Deep in a forest, with leave given, at the age

Of four-and-twenty summers he withdrew;
And thither took with him his motherless

Babe,
And one domestic for their common

needs, 275

An aged woman. It consoled him here
To attend upon the orphan, and perform

Obsequious service to the precious child,
Which, after a short time, by some mistake

Or indiscretion of the Father, died.— 280
The Tale I follow to its last recess

Of suffering or of peace, I know not which:

Theirs be the blame who caused the woe,
not mine!

From this time forth he never shared a
smile

With mortal creature. An Inhabitant 285
Of that same town, in which the pair had left

So lively a remembrance of their griefs,
By chance of business coming within

reach

Of his retirement, to the forest lodge Repaired, but only found the matron

there, 290
Who told him that his pains were thrown
away,

For that her Master never uttered word
To living thing—not even to her.—Behold!

While they were speaking, Vaudracour approached ;

But seeing some one near, as on the latch
Of the garden-gate his hand was laid, he shrunk— 296

And, like a shadow, glided out of view.

Shocked at his savage aspect, from the place
The visitor retired.

Thus lived the Youth
Cut off from all intelligence with man, 300
And shunning even the light of common
day ;

Nor could the voice of Freedom, which through France

Full speedily resounded, public hope,
Or personal memory of his own deep wrongs,

Rouse him : but in those solitary shades
His days he wasted, an imbecile mind ! 306

XXXI.

THE IDIOT BOY.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1798.]

'Tis eight o'clock,—a clear March night,
The moon is up,—the sky is blue,
The owlet, in the moonlight air,
Shouts from nobody knows where ;
He lengthens out his lonely shout, 5
Halloo ! halloo ! a long halloo !

—Why bustle thus about your door,
What means this bustle, Betty Foy ?
Why are you in this mighty fret ?
And why on horseback have you set 10
Him whom you love, your Idiot Boy ?

Scarcely a soul is out of bed ;
Good Betty, put him down again ;
His lips with joy they burr at you ;
But, Betty ! what has he to do 15
With stirrup, saddle, or with rein ?

But Betty's bent on her intent ;
For her good neighbour Susan Gale,
Old Susan, she who dwells alone,
Is sick, and makes a piteous moan, 20
As if her very life would fail.

There's not a house within a mile,
No hand to help them in distress ;
Old Susan lies a-bed in pain,
And sorely puzzled are the twain, 25
For what she ails they cannot guess.

And Betty's husband's at the wood,
Where by the week he doth abide,
A woodman in the distant vale ;
There's none to help poor Susan Gale ; 30
What must be done ? what will betide ?

And Betty from the lane has fetched
Her Pony, that is mild and good ;
Whether he be in joy or pain,
Feeding at will along the lane, 35
Or bringing fagots from the wood.

And he is all in travelling trim,—
And, by the moonlight, Betty Foy
Has on the well-girt saddle set (The like was never heard of yet) 40
Him whom she loves, her Idiot Boy.

And he must post without delay
Across the bridge and through the dale,
And by the church, and o'er the down,
To bring a Doctor from the town, 45
Or she will die, old Susan Gale.

There is no need of boot or spur,
There is no need of whip or wand ;
For Johnny has his holly-bough,
And with a hurly-burly now 50
He shakes the green bough in his hand.

And Betty o'er and o'er has told
The Boy, who is her best delight,
Both what to follow, what to shun,
What do, and what to leave undone, 55
How turn to left, and how to right.

And Betty's most especial charge,
Was, "Johnny ! Johnny ! mind that you Come home again, nor stop at all,— Come home again, whate'er befall, 60
My Johnny, do, I pray you, do."

To this did Johnny answer make,
Both with his head and with his hand,
And proudly shook the bridle too ;
And then ! his words were not a few, 65
Which Betty well could understand.

And now that Johnny is just going,
Though Betty's in a mighty flurry,
She gently pats the Pony's side,
On which her Idiot Boy must ride, 70
And seems no longer in a hurry.

But when the Pony moved his legs,
Oh! then for the poor Idiot Boy!
For joy he cannot hold the bridle,
For joy his head and heels are idle, 75
He's idle all for very joy.

And, while the Pony moves his legs,
In Johnny's left hand you may see
The green bough motionless and dead:
The Moon that shines above his head 80
Is not more still and mute than he.

His heart it was so full of glee
That, till full fifty yards were gone,
He quite forgot his holly whip,
And all his skill in horsemanship: 85
Oh! happy, happy, happy John.

And while the Mother, at the door,
Stands fixed, her face with joy o'erflows,
Proud of herself, and proud of him,
She sees him in his travelling trim, 90
How quietly her Johnny goes.

The silence of her Idiot Boy,
What hopes it sends to Betty's heart!
He's at the guide-post—he turns right;
She watches till he's out of sight, 95
And Betty will not then depart.

Burr, burr—now Johnny's lips they burr,
As loud as any mill, or near it;
Meek as a lamb the Pony moves,
And Johnny makes the noise he loves, 101
And Betty listens, glad to hear it.

Away she hies to Susan Gale:
Her Messenger's in merry tune;
The owlets hoot, the owlets curr,
And Johnny's lips they burr, burr, burr, 106
As on he goes beneath the moon.

His steed and he right well agree;
For of this Pony there's a rumour
That, should he lose his eyes and ears,
And should he live a thousand years, 110
He never will be out of humour.

But then he is a horse that thinks!
And, when he thinks, his pace is slack;
Now, though he knows poor Johnny well,
Yet, for his life, he cannot tell 115
What he has got upon his back.

So through the moonlight lanes they go,
And far into the moonlight dale,
And by the church, and o'er the down,
To bring a Doctor from the town, 120
To comfort poor old Susan Gale.

And Betty, now at Susan's side,
Is in the middle of her story,
What speedy help her Boy will bring,
With many a most diverting thing, 125
Of Johnny's wit, and Johnny's glory.

And Betty, still at Susan's side,
By this time is not quite so flurried:
Demure with porringer and plate
She sits, as if in Susan's fate 130
Her life and soul were buried.

But Betty, poor good woman! she,
You plainly in her face may read it,
Could lend out of that moment's store
Five years of happiness or more 135
To any that might need it.

But yet I guess that now and then
With Betty all was not so well;
And to the road she turns her ears,
And thence full many a sound she hears, 141
Which she to Susan will not tell.

Poor Susan moans, poor Susan groans;
"As sure as there's a moon in heaven,"
Cries Betty, "he'll be back again;
They'll both be here—'tis almost ten—145
Both will be here before eleven."

Poor Susan moans, poor Susan groans;
The clock gives warning for eleven;
'Tis on the stroke—"He must be near,"
Quoth Betty, "and will soon be here, 150
As sure as there's a moon in heaven."

The clock is on the stroke of twelve,
And Johnny is not yet in sight:
—The Moon's in heaven, as Betty sees,
But Betty is not quite at ease; 155
And Susan has a dreadful night.

And Betty, half an hour ago,
On Johnny vile reflections cast:
"A little idle sauntering Thing!"
With other names, an endless string; 160
But now that time is gone and past.

And Betty's drooping at the heart,
That happy time all past and gone,
"How can it be he is so late?
The Doctor, he has made him wait; 165
Susan! they'll both be here anon."

And Susan's growing worse and worse,
And Betty's in a sad quandary;
And then there's nobody to say
If she must go, or she must stay! 170
—She's in a sad quandary.

The clock is on the stroke of one;
But neither Doctor nor his Guide
Appears along the moonlight road;
There's neither horse nor man abroad, 175
And Betty's still at Susan's side

And Susan now begins to fear
Of sad mischances not a few,
That Johnny may perhaps be drowned;
Or lost, perhaps, and never found; 180
Which they must both for ever rue.

She prefaced half a hint of this
With, "God forbid it should be true!"
At the first word that Susan said
Cried Betty, rising from the bed, 185
"Susan, I'd gladly stay with you.

"I must be gone, I must away:
Consider, Johnny's but half-wise;
Susan, we must take care of him,
If he is hurt in life or limb"— 190
"Oh God forbid!" poor Susan cries.

"What can I do?" says Betty, going,
"What can I do to ease your pain?
Good Susan tell me, and I'll stay;
I fear you're in a dreadful way, 195
But I shall soon be back again."

"Nay, Betty, go! good Betty, go!
There's nothing that can ease my pain."
Then off she hies; but with a prayer,
That God poor Susan's life would spare,
Till she comes back again. 201

So, through the moonlight lane she goes,
And far into the moonlight dale;
And how she ran, and how she walked,
And all that to herself she talked, 205
Would surely be a tedious tale.

In high and low, above, below,
In great and small, in round and square,
In tree and tower was Johnny seen,
In bush and brake, in black and green;
'Twas Johnny, Johnny, everywhere. 211

And while she crossed the bridge, there
came
A thought with which her heart is sore—
Johnny perhaps his horse forsook,
To hunt the moon within the brook, 215
And never will be heard of more.

Now is she high upon the down,
Alone amid a prospect wide;
There's neither Johnny nor his Horse
Among the fern or in the gorse; 220
There's neither Doctor nor his Guide.

"Oh saints! what is become of him?
Perhaps he's climbed into an oak,
Where he will stay till he is dead;
Or sadly he has been misled, 225
And joined the wandering gipsy-folk.

"Or him that wicked Pony's carried
To the dark cave, the goblin's hall;
Or in the castle he's pursuing Among the ghosts his own undoing; 230
Or playing with the waterfall."

At poor old Susan then she railed, While to the town she posts away;
"If Susan had not been so ill,
Alas! I should have had him still, 235
My Johnny, till my dying day."

Poor Betty, in this sad distemper,
The Doctor's self could hardly spare:
Unworthy things she talked, and wild;
Even he, of cattle the most mild, 240
The Pony had his share.

But now she's fairly in the town,
And to the Doctor's door she hies;
'Tis silence all on every side;
The town so long, the town so wide, 245
Is silent as the skies.

And now she's at the Doctor's door,
She lifts the knocker, rap, rap, rap;
The Doctor at the casement shows
His glimmering eyes that peep and doze!
And one hand rubs his old night-cap. 251

“Oh Doctor! Doctor! where’s my Johnny?”

“I’m here, what is’t you want with me?”

“Oh Sir! you know I’m Betty Foy,
And I have lost my poor dear Boy, 255
You know him—him you often see;

He’s not so wise as some folks be:”

“The devil take his wisdom!” said
The Doctor, looking somewhat grim,
“What, Woman! should I know of him?”
And, grumbling, he went back to bed! 261

“O woe is me! O woe is me!
Here will I die; here will I die;
I thought to find my lost one here,
But he is neither far nor near, 265
Oh! what a wretched Mother I!”

She stops, she stands, she looks about;
Which way to turn she cannot tell.
Poor Betty! it would ease her pain
If she had heart to knock again; 270
—The clock strikes three—a dismal knell!

Then up along the town she hies,
No wonder if her senses fail;
This piteous news so much it shocked her,
She quite forgot to send the Doctor, 275
To comfort poor old Susan Gale.

And now she’s high upon the down,
And she can see a mile of road:
“O cruel! I’m almost threescore;
Such night as this was ne’er before, 280
There’s not a single soul abroad.”

She listens, but she cannot hear
The foot of horse, the voice of man;
The streams with softest sound are flowing,
The grass you almost hear it growing,
You hear it now, if e’er you can. 286

The owlets through the long blue night
Are shouting to each other still:
Fond lovers! yet not quite hob nob,
They lengthen out the tremulous sob, 290
That echoes far from hill to hill.

Poor Betty now has lost all hope,
Her thoughts are bent on deadly sin,
A green-grown pond she just has past,
And from the brink she hurries fast, 295
Lest she should drown herself therein.

And now she sits her down and weeps;
Such tears she never shed before;
“Oh dear, dear Pony! my sweet joy!
Oh carry back my Idiot Boy! 300
And we will ne’er o’erload thee more.”

A thought is come into her head:
The Pony he is mild and good,
And we have always used him well;
Perhaps he’s gone along the dell, 305
And carried Johnny to the wood.

Then up she springs as if on wings;
She thinks no more of deadly sin;
If Betty fifty ponds should see,
The last of all her thoughts would be 310
To drown herself therein.

Oh Reader! now that I might tell What Johnny and his Horse are doing!
What they’ve been doing all this time,
Oh could I put it into rhyme, 315
A most delightful tale pursuing!

Perhaps, and no unlikely thought!
He with his Pony now doth roam
The cliffs and peaks so high that are,
To lay his hands upon a star, 320
And in his pocket bring it home.

Perhaps he’s turned himself about,
His face unto his horse’s tail,
And, still and mute, in wonder lost,
All silent as a horseman-ghost, 325
He travels slowly down the vale.

And now, perhaps, is hunting sheep,
A fierce and dreadful hunter he;
Yon valley, now so trim and green,
In five months’ time, should he be seen,
A desert wilderness will be! 331

Perhaps, with head and heels on fire,
And like the very soul of evil,
He’s galloping away, away,
And so will gallop on for aye, 335
The bane of all that dread the devil!

I to the Muses have been bound These fourteen years, by strong indentures:

O gentle Muses! let me tell
But half of what to him befell; 340
He surely met with strange adventures.

- O gentle Muses ! is this kind ?
 Why will ye thus my suit repel ?
 Why of your further aid bereave me ?
 And can ye thus unfriended leave me ; 345
 Ye Muses ! whom I love so well ?
- Who's yon, that, near the waterfall,
 Which thunders down with headlong force,
 Beneath the moon, yet shining fair,
 As careless as if nothing were, 350
 Sits upright on a feeding horse ?
- Unto his horse—there feeding free,
 He seems, I think, the rein to give ;
 Of moon or stars he takes no heed ;
 Of such we in romances read : 355
 —'Tis Johnny ! Johnny ! as I live.
- And that's the very Pony, too !
 Where is she, where is Betty Foy ?
 She hardly can sustain her fears ;
 The roaring waterfall she hears, 360
 And cannot find her Idiot Boy.
- Your Pony's worth his weight in gold :
 Then calm your terrors, Betty Foy !
 She's coming from among the trees,
 And now all full in view she sees 365
 Him whom she loves, her Idiot Boy.
- And Betty sees the Pony too :
 Why stand you thus, good Betty Foy ?
 It is no goblin, 'tis no ghost,
 'Tis he whom you so long have lost, 370
 He whom you love, your Idiot Boy.
- She looks again—her arms are up—
 She screams—she cannot move for joy ;
 She darts, as with a torrent's force,
 She almost has o'erturned the Horse, 375
 And fast she holds her Idiot Boy.
- And Johnny burrs, and laughs aloud ;
 Whether in cunning or in joy
 I cannot tell ; but, while he laughs,
 Betty a drunken pleasure quaffs 380
 To hear again her Idiot Boy.
- And now she's at the Pony's tail,
 And now is at the Pony's head,—
 On that side now, and now on this ;
 And, almost stifled with her bliss, 385
 A few sad tears does Betty shed.
- She kisses o'er and o'er again
 Him whom she loves, her Idiot Boy ;
 She's happy here, is happy there,
 She is uneasy everywhere ; 390
 Her limbs are all alive with joy.
- She pats the Pony, where or when She knows not, happy Betty Foy !
 The little Pony glad may be,
 But he is milder far than she, 395
 You hardly can perceive his joy.
- "Oh ! Johnny, never mind the Doctor ; You've done your best, and that is all :"
 She took the reins, when this was said,
 And gently turned the Pony's head 400
 From the loud waterfall.
- By this the stars were almost gone,
 The moon was setting on the hill,
 So pale you scarcely looked at her :
 The little birds began to stir, 405
 Though yet their tongues were still.
- The Pony, Betty, and her Boy,
 Wind slowly through the woody dale ;
 And who is she, betimes abroad,
 That hobbles up the steep rough road ?
 Who is it, but old Susan Gale ? 410
- Long time lay Susan lost in thought ;
 And many dreadful fears beset her,
 Both for her Messenger and Nurse ;
 And, as her mind grew worse and worse,
 Her body—it grew better. 416
- She turned, she tossed herself in bed,
 On all sides doubts and terrors met her ;
 Point after point did she discuss ;
 And, while her mind was fighting thus,
 Her body still grew better. 421
- "Alas ! what is become of them ?
 These fears can never be endured ;
 I'll to the wood."—The word scarce said,
 Did Susan rise up from her bed, 425
 As if by magic cured.
- Away she goes up hill and down,
 And to the wood at length is come ;
 She spies her Friends, she shouts a greet-
 ing ;
 Oh me ! it is a merry meeting 430
 As ever was in Christendom.

The owls have hardly sung their last,
While our four travellers homeward wend;
The owls have hooted all night long,
And with the owls began my song, 435
And with the owls must end.

For, while they all were travelling home,
Cried Betty, "Tell us, Johnny, do,
Where all this long night you have been,
What you have heard, what you have seen:
And, Johnny, mind you tell us true." 441

Now Johnny all night long had heard
The owls in tuneful concert strive;
No doubt too he the moon had seen;
For in the moonlight he had been 445
From eight o'clock till five.

And thus, to Betty's question, he Made answer, like a traveller bold, (His very words I give to you,
"The cocks did crow to-who, to-who,
And the sun did shine so cold!" 451
—Thus answered Johnny in his glory,
And that was all his travel's story.

XXXII.

MICHAEL.

A PASTORAL POEM.

[Composed October 11-December 9, 1800.—
Published 1800.]

If from the public way you turn your steps
Up the tumultuous brook of Green-head Ghyll,
You will suppose that with an upright
path
Your feet must struggle; in such bold ascent
The pastoral mountains front you, face to
face. 5
But, courage! for around that boisterous
brook
The mountains have all opened out themselves,
And made a hidden valley of their own.
No habitation can be seen; but they Who journey thither find themselves
alone 10
With a few sheep, with rocks and stones, and kites
That overhead are sailing in the sky.
It is in truth an utter solitude;

Nor should I have made mention of this
Dell
But for one object which you might pass by, 15
Might see and notice not. Beside the
brook
Appears a straggling heap of unhewn
stones!
And to that simple object appertains
A story—unenriched with strange events,
Yet not unfit, I deem, for the fireside, 20
Or for the summer shade. It was the first
Of those domestic tales that spake to me
Of Shepherds, dwellers in the valleys,
men
Whom I already loved;—not verily
For their own sakes, but for the fields and hills 25
Where was their occupation and abode.
And hence this Tale, while I was yet a
Boy
Careless of books, yet having felt the
power
Of Nature, by the gentle agency
Of natural objects, led me on to feel 30
For passions that were not my own, and
think
(At random and imperfectly indeed)
On man, the heart of man, and human life.
Therefore, although it be a history
Homely and rude, I will relate the same 35
For the delight of a few natural hearts;
And, with yet fonder feeling, for the sake
Of youthful Poets, who among these hills
Will be my second self when I am gone.

UPON the forest-side in Grasmere Vale
There dwelt a Shepherd, Michael was his
name; 41
An old man, stout of heart, and strong of limb.
His bodily frame had been from youth to
age
Of an unusual strength: his mind was keen,
Intense, and frugal, apt for all affairs, 45
And in his shepherd's calling he was prompt
And watchful more than ordinary men.
Hence had he learned the meaning of all
winds,

Of blasts of every tone; and oftentimes,
 When others heeded not, He heard the South 50
 Make subterraneous music, like the noise
 Of bagpipers on distant Highland hills.
 The Shepherd, at such warning, of his flock Bethought him, and he to himself would
 say,
 "The winds are now devising work for
 me!" 55
 And, truly, at all times, the storm, that drives
 The traveller to a shelter, summoned him
 Up to the mountains: he had been alone
 Amid the heart of many thousand mists, That came to him, and left him, on the
 heights. 60
 So lived he till his eightieth year was
 past.
 And grossly that man errs, who should suppose That the green valleys, and the streams and rocks,
 Were things indifferent to the Shepherd's
 thoughts.
 Fields, where with cheerful spirits he had breathed 65
 The common air; hills, which with vigorous step
 He had so often climbed; which had impressed
 So many incidents upon his mind
 Of hardship, skill or courage, joy or fear;
 Which, like a book, preserved the memory 70
 Of the dumb animals, whom he had saved,
 Had fed or sheltered, linking to such acts
 The certainty of honourable gain;
 Those fields, those hills—what could they less? had laid Strong hold on his affections, were to
 him 75
 A pleasurable feeling of blind love,
 The pleasure which there is in life itself.

His days had not been passed in single-
 ness.
 His Helpmate was a comely matron, old—

Though younger than himself full twenty
 years. 80
 She was a woman of a stirring life,
 Whose heart was in her house: two wheels she had
 Of antique form; this large, for spinning
 wool;
 That small, for flax; and, if one wheel
 had rest,
 It was because the other was at work. 85
 The Pair had but one inmate in their
 house,
 An only Child, who had been born to them
 When Michael, telling o'er his years, began
 To deem that he was old,—in shepherd's phrase,
 With one foot in the grave. This only
 Son, 90
 With two brave sheep-dogs tried in many a storm,
 The one of an inestimable worth,
 Made all their household. I may truly
 say,
 That they were as a proverb in the vale For endless industry. When day was
 gone, 95
 And from their occupations out of doors
 The Son and Father were come home, even then,
 Their labour did not cease; unless when
 all Turned to the cleanly supper-board, and
 there,
 Each with a mess of pottage and skimmed milk, 100
 Sat round the basket piled with oaten cakes,
 And their plain home-made cheese. Yet when the meal
 Was ended, Luke (for so the Son was named)
 And his old Father both betook themselves
 To such convenient work as might employ Their hands by the fire-side; perhaps to card 106
 Wool for the Housewife's spindle, or repair
 Some injury done to sickle, flail, or scythe,
 Or other implement of house or field.

Down from the ceiling, by the chimney's edge, 110
 That in our ancient uncouth country style
 With huge and black projection overbrowed
 Large space beneath, as duly as the light
 Of day grew dim the Housewife hung a lamp;
 An aged utensil, which had performed 115
 Service beyond all others of its kind.
 Early at evening did it burn—and late,
 Surviving comrade of uncounted hours,
 Which, going by from year to year, had found,
 And left, the couple neither gay perhaps
 Nor cheerful, yet with objects and with hopes, 121
 Living a life of eager industry.
 And now, when Luke had reached his eighteenth year,
 There by the light of this old lamp they sate,
 Father and Son, while far into the night
 The Housewife plied her own peculiar work, 126
 Making the cottage through the silent hours
 Murmur as with the sound of summer flies.
 This light was famous in its neighbourhood,
 And was a public symbol of the life 130
 That thrifty Pair had lived. For, as it chanced,
 Their cottage on a plot of rising ground
 Stood single, with large prospect, north and south,
 High into Easedale, up to Dunmail-Raise,
 And westward to the village near the lake; 135
 And from this constant light, so regular,
 And so far seen, the House itself, by all
 Who dwelt within the limits of the vale,
 Both old and young, was named THE EVENING STAR.

Thus living on through such a length of years, 140
 The Shepherd, if he loved himself, must needs
 Have loved his Helpmate; but to Michael's heart

This son of his old age was yet more dear—
 Less from instinctive tenderness, the same Fond spirit that blindly works in the blood of all— 145
 Than that a child, more than all other gifts
 That earth can offer to declining man,
 Brings hope with it, and forward-looking thoughts,
 And stirrings of inquietude, when they
 By tendency of nature needs must fail. 150
 Exceeding was the love he bare to him,
 His heart and his heart's joy! For oftentimes Old Michael, while he was a babe in arms,
 Had done him female service, not alone
 For pastime and delight, as is the use 155
 Of fathers, but with patient mind enforced
 To acts of tenderness; and he had rocked
 His cradle, as with a woman's gentle hand.

And in a later time, ere yet the Boy
 Had put on boy's attire, did Michael love, 160
 Albeit of a stern unbending mind,
 To have the Young-one in his sight, when he Wrought in the field, or on his shepherd's stool
 Sate with a fettered sheep before him stretched Under the large old oak, that near his door 165
 Stood single, and, from matchless depth of shade,
 Chosen for the Shearer's covert from the sun,
 Thence in our rustic dialect was called
 The CLIPPING TREE,¹ a name which yet it bears.
 There, while they two were sitting in the shade, 170
 With others round them, earnest all and blithe,
 Would Michael exercise his heart with looks
 Of fond correction and reproof bestowed

¹ Clipping is the word used in the North of England for shearing.

Upon the Child, if he disturbed the sheep
By catching at their legs, or with his shouts 175
Scared them, while they lay still beneath the shears.

And when by Heaven's good grace the boy grew up
A healthy Lad, and carried in his cheek
Two steady roses that were five years old;
Then Michael from a winter coppice cut With his own hand a sapling, which he hooped 181
With iron, making it throughout in all
Due requisites a perfect shepherd's staff,
And gave it to the Boy; wherewith equipt
He as a watchman oftentimes was placed
At gate or gap, to stem or turn the flock;
And, to his office prematurely called, 187
There stood the urchin, as you will divine, Something between a hindrance and a help;
And for this cause not always, I believe,
Receiving from his Father hire of praise; Though nought was left undone which staff, or voice,
Or looks, or threatening gestures, could perform.

But soon as Luke, full ten years old,
could stand
Against the mountain blasts; and to the
heights, 195
Not fearing toil, nor length of weary ways,
He with his Father daily went, and they Were as companions, why should I relate That objects which the Shepherd loved
before
Were dearer now? that from the Boy there came 200
Feelings and emanations—things which
were
Light to the sun and music to the wind;
And that the old Man's heart seemed born again?

Thus in his Father's sight the Boy grew up:
And now, when he had reached his eighteenth year, 205
He was his comfort and his daily hope.

While in this sort the simple household
lived
From day to day, to Michael's ear there
came Distressful tidings. Long before the time
Of which I speak, the Shepherd had been
bound 210
In surety for his brother's son, a man
Of an industrious life, and ample means;
But unforeseen misfortunes suddenly Had prest upon him; and old Michael
now
Was summoned to discharge the forfeiture, 215
A grievous penalty, but little less Than half his substance. This unlooked-for claim,
At the first hearing, for a moment took More hope out of his life than he supposed
That any old man ever could have lost. 220
As soon as he had armed himself with
strength
To look his trouble in the face, it seemed The Shepherd's sole resource to sell at
once
A portion of his patrimonial fields.
Such was his first resolve; he thought
again, 225
And his heart failed him. "Isabel," said
he,
Two evenings after he had heard the news,
"I have been toiling more than seventy
years,
And in the open sunshine of God's love
Have we all lived; yet, if these fields of ours 230
Should pass into a stranger's hand, I think
That I could not lie quiet in my grave.
Our lot is a hard lot; the sun himself
Has scarcely been more diligent than I;
And I have lived to be a fool at last 235
To my own family. An evil man
That was, and made an evil choice, if he Were false to us; and, if he were not false,
There are ten thousand to whom loss like
this
Had been no sorrow. I forgive him;— but 240
'Twere better to be dumb than to talk thus.

When I began, my purpose was to
 speak
 Of remedies and of a cheerful hope.
 Our Luke shall leave us, Isabel; the land Shall not go from us, and it shall be
 free; 245
 He shall possess it, free as is the wind
 That passes over it. We have, thou know'st,
 Another kinsman—he will be our friend
 In this distress. He is a prosperous man, Thriving in trade—and Luke to him shall go, 250
 And with his kinsman's help and his own thrift
 He quickly will repair this loss, and then
 He may return to us. If here he stay, What can be done? Where every one is
 poor,
 What can be gained?"

At this the old Man paused, 255
 And Isabel sat silent, for her mind
 Was busy, looking back into past times.
 There's Richard Bateman, thought she to herself,
 He was a parish-boy—at the church-door
 They made a gathering for him, shillings, pence, 260
 And halfpennies, wherewith the neighbours bought
 A basket, which they filled with pedlar's
 wares;
 And, with this basket on his arm, the lad
 Went up to London, found a master there,
 Who, out of many, chose the trusty boy
 To go and overlook his merchandise 266
 Beyond the seas; where he grew wondrous rich,
 And left estates and monies to the poor,
 And, at his birth-place, built a chapel floored
 With marble, which he sent from foreign lands. 270
 These thoughts, and many others of like sort,
 Passed quickly through the mind of Isabel,
 And her face brightened. The old Man was glad,
 And thus resumed:—"Well, Isabel! this scheme

These two days has been meat and drink
 to me. 275
 Far more than we have lost is left us yet.
 We have enough—I wish indeed that I Were younger;—but this hope is a good
 hope.
 Make ready Luke's best garments, of the best Buy for him more, and let us send him
 forth 280
 To-morrow, or the next day, or to-night:
 If he could go, the Boy should go to-
 night."

Here Michael ceased, and to the fields went forth
 With a light heart. The Housewife for five days
 Was restless morn and night, and all day
 long 285
 Wrought on with her best fingers to prepare
 Things needful for the journey of her son.
 But Isabel was glad when Sunday came
 To stop her in her work: for, when she lay
 By Michael's side, she through the last two nights 290
 Heard him, how he was troubled in his
 sleep:
 And when they rose at morning she could see
 That all his hopes were gone. That day at noon
 She said to Luke, while they two by themselves
 Were sitting at the door, "Thou must not go: 295
 We have no other Child but thee to lose,
 None to remember—do not go away,
 For if thou leave thy Father he will die." The Youth made answer with a jocund
 voice;
 And Isabel, when she had told her fears, Recovered heart. That evening her best fare 301
 Did she bring forth, and all together sat
 Like happy people round a Christmas fire.

With daylight Isabel resumed her work;
 And all the ensuing week the house
 appeared 305

As cheerful as a grove in Spring: at length
The expected letter from their kinsman
came,

With kind assurances that he would do
His utmost for the welfare of the Boy;
To which, requests were added, that forthwith 310
He might be sent to him. Ten times or
more

The letter was read over; Isabel Went forth to show it to the neighbours
round;

Nor was there at that time on English land
A prouder heart than Luke's. When Isabel 315

Had to her house returned, the old Man
said,
"He shall depart to-morrow." To this word

The Housewife answered, talking much of things

Which, if at such short notice he should go,
Would surely be forgotten. But at length She gave consent, and Michael was at ease. 321

Near the tumultuous brook of Green-
head Ghyll,
In that deep valley, Michael had designed To build a Sheep-fold; and, before he
heard

The tidings of his melancholy loss, 325
For this same purpose he had gathered up A heap of stones, which by the streamlet's
edge

Lay thrown together, ready for the work.
With Luke that evening thitherward he walked:

And soon as they had reached the place
he stopped, 330

And thus the old Man spake to him:—
"My son,

To-morrow thou wilt leave me: with full
heart

I look upon thee, for thou art the same
That wert a promise to me ere thy birth,
And all thy life hast been my daily joy.
I will relate to thee some little part 336
Of our two histories; 'twill do thee good When thou art from me, even if I should touch

On things thou canst not know of.—
After thou

First cam'st into the world—as oft befalls
To new-born infants—thou didst sleep
away 341

Two days, and blessings from thy Father's
tongue

Then fell upon thee. Day by day passed on,

And still I loved thee with increasing
love.

Never to living ear came sweeter sounds
Than when I heard thee by our own fire-
side 346

First uttering, without words, a natural tune;

While thou, a feeding babe, didst in thy
joy

Sing at thy Mother's breast. Month followed month,

And in the open fields my life was passed
And on the mountains; else I think that thou 351

Hadst been brought up upon thy Father's knees.

But we were playmates, Luke: among these hills,

As well thou knowest, in us the old and young

Have played together, nor with me didst
thou 355

Lack any pleasure which a boy can know."
Luke had a manly heart; but at these
words

He sobbed aloud. The old Man grasped
his hand,

And said, "Nay, do not take it so—I see That these are things of which I need not
speak. 360

—Even to the utmost I have been to thee
A kind and a good Father: and herein

I but repay a gift which I myself Received at others' hands; for, though now old

Beyond the common life of man, I still 365 Remember them who loved me in my
youth.

Both of them sleep together: here they
lived,

As all their Forefathers had done; and,
when

At length their time was come, they were not loth
To give their bodies to the family mould.
I wished that thou shouldst live the life they lived, 371
But 'tis a long time to look back, my
Son,
And see so little gain from threescore
years.
These fields were burthened when they came to me;
Till I was forty years of age, not more 375
Than half of my inheritance was mine.
I toiled and toiled; God blessed me in my work,
And till these three weeks past the land was free.
—It looks as if it never could endure
Another Master. Heaven forgive me, Luke, 380
If I judge ill for thee, but it seems good
That thou shouldst go.”
At this the old Man paused;
Then, pointing to the stones near which they stood,
Thus, after a short silence, he resumed:
“This was a work for us; and now, my
Son, 385
It is a work for me. But, lay one stone—
Here, lay it for me, Luke, with thine own hands.
Nay, Boy, be of good hope;—we both
may live
To see a better day. At eighty-four I still am strong and hale;—do thou thy
part; 390
I will do mine.—I will begin again
With many tasks that were resigned to
thee:
Up to the heights, and in among the storms,
Will I without thee go again, and do 394
All works which I was wont to do alone,
Before I knew thy face.—Heaven bless thee, Boy!
Thy heart these two weeks has been beating fast
With many hopes; it should be so—yes—
yes—
I knew that thou couldst never have a wish

To leave me, Luke: thou hast been bound
to me 400
Only by links of love: when thou art
gone,
What will be left to us!—But I forget
My purposes. Lay now the corner-stone,
As I requested; and hereafter, Luke,
When thou art gone away, should evil
men 405
Be thy companions, think of me, my Son,
And of this moment; hither turn thy
thoughts,
And God will strengthen thee: amid all
fear
And all temptation, Luke, I pray that
thou May'st bear in mind the life thy Fathers
lived, 410
Who, being innocent, did for that cause Bestir them in good deeds. Now, fare thee well—
When thou return'st, thou in this place wilt see
A work which is not here: a covenant 414
'Twill be between us; but, whatever fate
Befall thee, I shall love thee to the last,
And bear thy memory with me to the
grave.”
The Shepherd ended here; and Luke stooped down,
And, as his Father had requested, laid The first stone of the Sheep-fold. At the
sight 420
The old Man's grief broke from him; to his heart
He pressed his Son, he kissèd him and wept;
And to the house together they returned.
—Hushed was that House in peace, or seeming peace,
Ere the night fell:—with morrow's dawn
the Boy 425
Began his journey, and, when he had reached
The public way, he put on a bold face;
And all the neighbours, as he passed their doors,
Came forth with wishes and with farewell
prayers, 429
That followed him till he was out of sight.

Subscribes Nelson's 177

A good report did from their Kinsman
come,

Of Luke and his well-doing: and the Boy Wrote loving letters, full of wondrous
news,

Which, as the Housewife phrased it, were throughout 434

"The prettiest letters that were ever seen."
Both parents read them with rejoicing
hearts.

So, many months passed on: and once
again

The Shepherd went about his daily work
With confident and cheerful thoughts;
and now

Sometimes when he could find a leisure
hour 440

He to that valley took his way, and there Wrought at the Sheep-fold. Meantime Luke began

To slacken in his duty; and, at length,
He in the dissolute city gave himself
To evil courses: ignominy and shame 445
Fell on him, so that he was driven at last
To seek a hiding-place beyond the seas.

There is a comfort in the strength of
love;

'Twill make a thing endurable, which else
Would upset the brain, or break the
heart: 450

I have conversed with more than one who
well

Remember the old Man, and what he was
Years after he had heard this heavy news.
His bodily frame had been from youth to
age

Of an unusual strength. Among the rocks
He went, and still looked up to sun and
cloud, 456

And listened to the wind; and, as before, Performed all kinds of labour for his
sheep,

And for the land, his small inheritance.

And to that hollow dell from time to
time 460

Did he repair, to build the Fold of which His flock had need. 'Tis not forgotten
yet

The pity which was then in every heart
For the old Man—and 'tis believed by all

That many and many a day he thither went,
And never lifted up a single stone. 466

There, by the Sheep-fold, sometimes was he seen

Sitting alone, or with his faithful Dog,
Then old, beside him, lying at his feet.

The length of full seven years, from time to time, 470

He at the building of this Sheep-fold
wrought,

And left the work unfinished when he died.

Three years, or little more, did Isabel Survive her Husband: at her death the estate

Was sold, and went into a stranger's
hand. 475

The Cottage which was named the EVEN-ING STAR

Is gone—the ploughshare has been through the ground

On which it stood; great changes have been wrought

In all the neighbourhood:—yet the oak is left

That grew beside their door; and the remains 480

Of the unfinished Sheep-fold may be seen Beside the boisterous brook of Green-head Ghyll.

XXXIII.

THE WIDOW ON WINDERMERE SIDE.

[Composed 1837 (?).—Published 1842.]

I.

How beautiful when up a lofty height Honour ascends among the humblest
poor,

And feeling sinks as deep! See there the
door

Of One, a Widow, left beneath a weight Of blameless debt. On evil Fortune's spite 5

She wasted no complaint, but strove to
make

A just repayment, both for conscience-
sake

And that herself and hers should stand upright

In the world's eye. Her work when daylight failed Paused not, and through the depth of night she kept 10
Such earnest vigils, that belief prevailed
With some, the noble Creature never slept;
But, one by one, the hand of death assailed
Her children from her inmost heart be-wept.

II.

The Mother mourned, nor ceased her tears to flow, 15
Till a winter's noon-day placed her buried
Son
Before her eyes, last child of many gone—
His raiment of angelic white, and lo!
His very feet bright as the dazzling snow
Which they are touching; yea far brighter,
even 20
As that which comes, or seems to come,
from heaven,
Surpasses aught these elements can show.
Much she rejoiced, trusting that from that hour
Whate'er befell she could not grieve or pine;
But the Transfigured, in and out of season, Appeared, and spiritual presence gained a power 26
Over material forms that mastered reason.
Oh, gracious Heaven, in pity make her thine!

III.

But why that prayer? as if to her could
come
No good but by the way that leads to
bliss 30
Through Death,—so judging we should judge amiss.
Since reason failed want is her threatened
doom,
Yet frequent transports mitigate the
gloom:
Nor of those maniacs is she one that kiss
The air or laugh upon a precipice; 35
No, passing through strange sufferings toward the tomb,

She smiles as if a martyr's crown were won:
Oft, when light breaks through clouds or waving trees,
With outspread arms and fallen upon her knees
The Mother hails in her descending Son
An Angel, and in earthly ecstasies 41
Her own angelic glory seems begun.

THE ARMENIAN LADY'S LOVE.

[The subject of the following poem is from the Orlandus of the author's friend, Kenelm Henry Digby: and the liberty is taken of inscribing it to him as an acknowledgment, however unworthy, of pleasure and instruction derived from his numerous and valuable writings, illustrative of the piety and chivalry of the olden time.]

I.

YOU have heard "a Spanish Lady
How she wooed an English man;"¹
Hear now of a fair Armenian,
Daughter of the proud Soldàn;
How she loved a Christian Slave, and told her pain 5
By word, look, deed, with hope that he might love again.

II.

"Pluck that rose, it moves my liking,"
Said she, lifting up her veil;
"Pluck it for me, gentle gardener, Ere it wither and grow pale." 10
"Princess fair, I till the ground, but may not take
From twig or bed an humbler flower, even for your sake!"

III.

"Grieved am I, submissive Christian!
To behold thy captive state;
Women, in your land, may pity 15
(May they not?) the unfortunate."

¹ See in Percy's Reliques that fine old ballad,
"The Spanish Lady's Love;" from which Poem the form of stanza, as suitable to dialogue, is adopted.

“Yes, kind Lady! otherwise man could not bear
Life, which to every one that breathes is full of care.”

IV.

“Worse than idle is compassion
If it end in tears and sighs; 20
Thee from bondage would I rescue
And from vile indignities;
Nurtured, as thy mien bespeaks, in high degree,
Look up—and help a hand that longs to set thee free.”

V.

‘Lady! dread the wish, nor venture 25
In such peril to engage;
Think how it would stir against you
Your most loving father’s rage:
Sad deliverance would it be, and yoked with shame,
Should troubles overflow on her from whom it came.” 30

VI.

“Generous Frank! the just in effort
Are of inward peace secure:
Hardships for the brave encountered
Even the feeblest may endure:
If almighty grace through me thy chains
unbind, 35
My father for slave’s work may seek a slave in mind.”

VII.

“Princess, at this burst of goodness,
My long-frozen heart grows warm!”
“Yet you make all courage fruitless,
Me to save from chance of harm: 40
Leading such companion I that gilded dome,
Yon minarets, would gladly leave for his worst home.”

VIII.

“Feeling tunes your voice, fair Princess!
And your brow is free from scorn, Else these words would come like mockery, 45
Sharper than the pointed thorn.”

“Whence the undeserved mistrust? Too wide apart
Our faith hath been,—O would that eyes could see the heart!”

IX.

“Tempt me not, I pray; my doom is These base implements to wield; 50
Rusty lance, I ne’er shall grasp thee,
Ne’er assail my cobwebbed shield!
Never see my native land, nor castle
towers,
Nor Her who thinking of me there counts widowed hours.”

X.

“Prisoner! pardon youthful fancies, 55
Wedded? If you can, say no!
Blessed is and be your consort;
Hopes I cherished—let them go!
Handmaid’s privilege would leave my purpose free,
Without another link to my felicity.” 60

XI.

“Wedded love with loyal Christians,
Lady, is a mystery rare;
Body, heart, and soul in union,
Make one being of a pair.”
“Humble love in me would look for no
return, 65
Soft as a guiding star that cheers, but cannot burn.”

XII.

“Gracious Allah! by such title
Do I dare to thank the God,
Him who thus exalts thy spirit,
Flower of an unchristian sod! 70
Or hast thou put off wings which thou in heaven dost wear?
What have I seen, and heard, or dreamt?
where am I? where?”

XIII.

Here broke off the dangerous converse:
Less impassioned words might tell
How the pair escaped together, 75
Tears not wanting, nor a knell
Of sorrow in her heart while through her father’s door,
And from her narrow world, she passed for evermore.

XIV.

But affections higher, holier, Urged her steps; she shrunk from trust 80
 In a sensual creed that trampled
 Woman's birthright into dust.
 Little be the wonder then, the blame be
 none,
 If she, a timid Maid, hath put such boldness on.

XV.

Judge both Fugitives with knowledge :
 In those old romantic days 86
 Mighty were the soul's commandments
 To support, restrain, or raise.
 Foes might hang upon their path, snakes rustle near,
 But nothing from their inward selves had they to fear. 90

XVI.

Thought infirm ne'er came between
 them,
 Whether printing desert sands
 With accordant steps, or gathering
 Forest-fruit with social hands ;
 Or whispering like two reeds that in the cold moonbeam 95
 Bend with the breeze their heads, beside a crystal stream.

XVII.

On a friendly deck reposing
 They at length for Venice steer ;
 There, when they had closed their voyage,
 One, who daily on the pier 100 Watched for tidings from the East, beheld his Lord,
 Fell down and clasped his knees for joy,
 not uttering word.

XVIII.

Mutual was the sudden transport ;
 Breathless questions followed fast,
 Years contracting to a moment, 105
 Each word greedier than the last ;
 "Hie thee to the Countess, friend ! return with speed,
 And of this Stranger speak by whom her lord was freed.

XIX.

"Say that I, who might have languished,
 Drooped and pined till life was spent,
 Now before the gates of Stolberg 111
 My Deliverer would present
 For a crowning recompense, the precious
 grace
 Of her who in my heart still holds her ancient place.

XX.

"Make it known that my Companion 115
 Is of royal eastern blood,
 Thirsting after all perfection,
 Innocent, and meek, and good,
 Though with misbelievers bred ; but that dark night
 Will holy Church disperse by beams of gospel-light." 120

XXI.

Swiftly went that grey-haired Servant,
 Soon returned a trusty Page
 Charged with greetings, benedictions,
 Thanks and praises, each a gage
 For a sunny thought to cheer the Stranger's way, 125
 Her virtuous scruples to remove, her fears allay.

XXII.

And how blest the Reunited,
 While beneath their castle-walls
 Runs a deafening noise of welcome !—
 Blest, though every tear that falls 130
 Doth in its silence of past sorrow tell,
 And makes a meeting seem most like a dear farewell.

XXIII.

Through a haze of human nature,
 Glorified by heavenly light,
 Looked the beautiful Deliverer 135
 On that overpowering sight, While across her virgin cheek pure blushes
 strayed,
 For every tender sacrifice her heart had made.

XXIV.

On the ground the weeping Countess
 Knelt and kissed the Stranger's hand;
 Act of soul-devoted homage, 141
 Pledge of an eternal band:
 Nor did aught of future days that kiss
 belie,
 Which, with a generous shout, the crowd did ratify.

XXV.

Constant to the fair Armenian, 145
 Gentle pleasures round her moved,
 Like a tutelary spirit
 Reverenced, like a sister loved.
 Christian meekness smoothed for all the path of life,
 Who, loving most, should wiseliest love, their only strife. 150

XXVI.

Mute memento of that union
 In a Saxon church survives,
 Where a cross-legged Knight lies sculptured
 As between two wedded Wives—Figures with armorial signs of race and
 birth, 155
 And the vain rank the pilgrims bore while yet on earth.

XXXV.

LOVING AND LIKING:

IRREGULAR VERSES

ADDRESSED TO A CHILD.

(BY MY SISTER.)

[Composed 1832.—Published 1835.]

THERE'S more in words than I can teach:
 Yet listen, Child!—I would not preach;
 But only give some plain directions
 To guide your speech and your affections.
 Say not you love a roasted fowl 5
 But you may love a screaming owl,
 And, if you can, the unwieldy toad
 That crawls from his secure abode
 Within the mossy garden wall
 When evening dews begin to fall. 10

Oh! mark the beauty of his eye:
 What wonders in that circle lie!
 So clear, so bright, our fathers said
 He wears a jewel in his head!
 And when, upon some showery day, 15
 Into a path or public way
 A frog leaps out from bordering grass,
 Startling the timid as they pass,
 Do you observe him, and endeavour
 To take the intruder into favour; 20
 Learning from him to find a reason
 For a light heart in a dull season.
 And you may love him in the pool,
 That is for him a happy school,
 In which he swims as taught by nature, 25
 Fit pattern for a human creature,
 Glancing amid the water bright,
 And sending upward sparkling light.

Nor blush if o'er your heart be stealing
 A love for things that have no feeling: 30
 The spring's first rose by you espied,
 May fill your breast with joyful pride;
 And you may love the strawberry-flower,
 And love the strawberry in its bower;
 But when the fruit, so often praised 35
 For beauty, to your lip is raised,
 Say not you love the delicate treat,
 But like it, enjoy it, and thankfully eat.

Long may you love your pensioner mouse,
 Though one of a tribe that torment the
 house: 40
 Nor dislike for her cruel sport the cat
 Deadly foe both of mouse and rat;
 Remember she follows the law of her kind,
 And Instinct is neither wayward nor blind.
 Then think of her beautiful gliding form,
 Her tread that would scarcely crush a worm, 46
 And her soothing song by the winter fire,
 Soft as the dying throb of the lyre.

I would not circumscribe your love:
 It may soar with the eagle and brood with the dove, 50
 May pierce the earth with the patient
 mole,
 Or track the hedgehog to his hole.
 Loving and liking are the solace of life, 10

Rock the cradle of joy, smooth the death-bed of strife.

You love your father and your mother, 55
Your grown-up and your baby brother;
You love your sister and your friends,
And countless blessings which God sends:
And while these right affections play,
You live each moment of your day; 60
They lead you on to full content,
And likings fresh and innocent,
That store the mind, the memory feed,
And prompt to many a gentle deed:
But likings come, and pass away; 65
'Tis love that remains till our latest day:
Our heavenward guide is holy love,
And will be our bliss with saints above.

XXXVI.

FAREWELL LINES.

[Composed 1828 (?).—Published 1842.]

"HIGH bliss is only for a higher state,"
But, surely, if severe afflictions borne
With patience merit the reward of peace,
Peace ye deserve; and may the solid good,
Sought by a wise though late exchange, and here 5
With bounteous hand beneath a cottage-roof
To you accorded, never be withdrawn,
Nor for the world's best promises re-nounced.
Most soothing was it for a welcome Friend,
Fresh from the crowded city, to behold to
That lonely union, privacy so deep,
Such calm employments, such entire content.
So when the rain is over, the storm laid,
A pair of herons oft-times have I seen,
Upon a rocky islet, side by side, 15
Drying their feathers in the sun, at ease;
And so, when night with grateful gloom had fallen,
Two glow-worms in such nearness that they shared,
As seemed, their soft self-satisfying light,
Each with the other, on the dewy ground,
Where He that made them blesses their repose.— 21

When wandering among lakes and hills
I note,
Once more, those creatures thus by nature
paired,
And guarded in their tranquil state of
life,
Even, as your happy presence to my mind
Their union brought, will they repay the debt, 26
And send a thankful spirit back to you,
With hope that we, dear Friends! shall meet again.

XXXVII.

THE REDBREAST.

(SUGGESTED IN A WESTMORELAND COTTAGE.)

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

DRIVEN in by Autumn's sharpening air
From half-stripped woods and pastures
bare,
Brisk Robin seeks a kindlier home:
Not like a beggar is he come,
But enters as a looked-for guest, 5
Confiding in his ruddy breast,
As if it were a natural shield
Charged with a blazon on the field,
Due to that good and pious deed
Of which we in the Ballad read. 10
But pensive fancies putting by,
And wild-wood sorrows, speedily
He plays the expert ventriloquist;
And, caught by glimpses. now—now
missed,
Puzzles the listener with a doubt 15
If the soft voice he throws about Comes from within doors or without!
Was ever such a sweet confusion,
Sustained by delicate illusion?
He's at your elbow—to your feeling 20
The notes are from the floor or ceiling;
And there's a riddle to be guessed,
Till you have marked his heaving chest,
And busy throat whose sink and swell
Betray the Elf that loves to dwell 25
In Robin's bosom, as a chosen cell.
Heart-pleased we smile upon the Bird
If seen, and with like pleasure stirred Commend him, when he's only heard.
But small and fugitive our gain 30

Compared with hers who long hath lain,
 With languid limbs and patient head
 Reposing on a lone sick-bed ;
 Where now she daily hears a strain
 That cheats her of too busy cares, 35
 Eases her pain, and helps her prayers.
 And who but this dear Bird beguiled
 The fever of that pale-faced Child ;
 Now cooling, with his passing wing,
 Her forehead, like a breeze of Spring ; 40
 Recalling now, with descant soft Shed round her pillow from aloft,
 Sweet thoughts of angels hovering nigh,
 And the invisible sympathy Of "Matthew, Mark, and Luke, and John, 45
 Blessing the bed she lies upon?"¹
 And sometimes, just as listening ends
 In slumber, with the cadence blends
 A dream of that low-warbled hymn
 Which old folk, fondly pleased to trim 50
 Lamps of faith, now burning dim,
 Say that the Cherubs carved in stone,
 When clouds gave way at dead of night
 And the ancient church was filled with
 light,
 Used to sing in heavenly tone, 55
 Above and round the sacred places
 They guard, with wingèd baby-faces.

Thrice happy Creature ! in all lands
 Nurtured by hospitable hands :
 Free entrance to this cot has he, 60
 Entrance and exit both yet free ;
 And when the keen unruffled weather,
 That thus brings man and bird together,
 Shall with its pleasantness be past,
 And casement closed and door made fast,
 To keep at bay the howling blast, 66
He needs not fear the season's rage,
 For the whole house is Robin's cage.
 Whether the bird flit here or there,
 O'er table lilt, or perch on chair, 70
 Though some may frown and make a stir,

¹ The words—

"Matthew, Mark, and Luke, and John, Bless the bed that I lie on,"

are part of a child's prayer, still in general use through the northern counties.

To scare him as a trespasser,
 And he belike will flinch or start,
 Good friends he has to take his part ;
 One chiefly, who with voice and look 75
 Pleads for him from the chimney-nook,
 Where sits the Dame, and wears away
 Her long and vacant holiday ;
 With images about her heart,
 Reflected from the years gone by, 80
 On human nature's second infancy.

HER EYES ARE WILD.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1798.]

I.

HER eyes are wild, her head is bare,
 The sun has burnt her coal-black hair ;
 Her eyebrows have a rusty stain,
 And she came far from over the main.
 She has a baby on her arm, 5
 Or else she were alone :
 And underneath the hay-stack warm,
 And on the greenwood stone,
 She talked and sung the woods among,
 And it was in the English tongue. 10

II.

"Sweet babe ! they say that I am mad,
 But nay, my heart is far too glad ;
 And I am happy when I sing
 Full many a sad and doleful thing :
 Then, lovely baby, do not fear ! 15
 I pray thee have no fear of me ;
 But safe as in a cradle, here
 My lovely baby ! thou shalt be :
 To thee I know too much I owe ;
 I cannot work thee any woe. 20

III.

"A fire was once within my brain ;
 And in my head a dull, dull pain ;
 And fiendish faces, one, two, three,
 Hung at my breast, and pulled at me ;
 But then there came a sight of joy ; 25
 It came at once to do me good ;
 I waked, and saw my little boy,
 My little boy of flesh and blood ;

Oh joy for me that sight to see!
For he was here, and only he. 30

IV.

"Suck, little babe, oh suck again!
It cools my blood; it cools my brain;
Thy lips I feel them, baby! they Draw from my heart the pain away.
Oh! press me with thy little hand; 35
It loosens something at my chest;
About that tight and deadly band
I feel thy little fingers prest.
The breeze I see is in the tree:
It comes to cool my babe and me. 40

V.

"Oh! love me, love me, little boy!
Thou art thy mother's only joy;
And do not dread the waves below,
When o'er the sea-rock's edge we go;
The high crag cannot work me harm, 45
Nor leaping torrents when they howl;
The babe I carry on my arm,
He saves for me my precious soul;
Then happy lie; for blest am I;
Without me my sweet babe would die. 50

VI.

"Then do not fear, my boy! for thee
Bold as a lion will I be;
And I will always be thy guide,
Through hollow snows and rivers wide.
I'll build an Indian bower; I know 55
The leaves that make the softest bed:
And if from me thou wilt not go,
But still be true till I am dead,
My pretty thing! then thou shalt sing
As merry as the birds in spring. 60

VII.

"Thy father cares not for my breast,
'Tis thine, sweet baby, there to rest;
'Tis all thine own!—and if its hue
Be changed, that was so fair to view,

'Tis fair enough for thee, my dove! 65
My beauty, little child, is flown,
But thou wilt live with me in love;
And what if my poor cheek be brown?
'Tis well for me thou canst not see How pale and wan it else would be. 70

VIII.

"Dread not their taunts, my little Life;
I am thy father's wedded wife;
And underneath the spreading tree
We two will live in honesty.
If his sweet boy he could forsake, 75
With me he never would have stayed:
From him no harm my babe can take;
But he, poor man! is wretched made;
And every day we two will pray
For him that's gone and far away 80

IX.

"I'll teach my boy the sweetest things:
I'll teach him how the owlet sings.
My little babe! thy lips are still,
And thou hast almost sucked thy fill.
—Where art thou gone, my own dear 85
child?
What wicked looks are those I see?
Alas! Alas! that look so wild,
It never, never came from me:
If thou art mad, my pretty lad,
Then I must be for ever sad. 90

X.

"Oh! smile on me, my little lamb!
For I thy own dear mother am:
My love for thee has well been tried:
I've sought thy father far and wide.
I know the poisons of the shade; 95
I know the earth-nuts fit for food:
Then, pretty dear, be not afraid:
We'll find thy father in the wood.
Now laugh and be gay, to the woods
away!
And there, my babe, we'll live for aye." 100

POEMS ON THE NAMING OF PLACES.

ADVERTISEMENT.

By persons resident in the country, and attached to rural objects, many places will be found unnamed or of unknown names, where little Incidents must have occurred, or feelings been experienced, which will have given to such places a private and peculiar interest. From a wish to give some sort of record to such Incidents, and renew the gratification of such feelings, Names have been given to Places by the Author and some of his Friends, and the following Poems written in consequence.

I.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

It was an April morning : fresh and clear
The Rivulet, delighting in its strength, Ran with a young man's speed ; and yet
the voice

Of waters which the winter had supplied
Was softened down into a vernal tone. 5

The spirit of enjoyment and desire,
And hopes and wishes, from all living
things

Went circling, like a multitude of sounds.
The budding groves seemed eager to urge
on

The steps of June ; as if their various hues
Were only hindrances that stood between Them and their object : but, meanwhile, prevailed 12

Such an entire contentment in the air
That every naked ash, and tardy tree
Yet leafless, showed as if the countenance
With which it looked on this delightful
day 16

Were native to the summer.—Up the
brook

I roamed in the confusion of my heart,
Alive to all things and forgetting all.

At length I to a sudden turning came 20
In this continuous glen, where down a rock
The Stream, so ardent in its course before, Sent forth such sallies of glad sound, that
all

Which I till then had heard appeared the
voice

Of common pleasure : beast and bird, the lamb, 25

The shepherd's dog, the linnet and the thrush,

Vied with this waterfall, and made a song Which, while I listened, seemed like the wild growth

Or like some natural produce of the air,
That could not cease to be. Green leaves were here ; 30

But 'twas the foliage of the rocks—the birch,

The yew, the holly, and the bright green
thorn,

With hanging islands of resplendent
furze :

And on a summit, distant a short space,
By any who should look beyond the dell 35
A single mountain-cottage might be seen.

I gazed and gazed, and to myself I said,
"Our thoughts at least are ours ; and this wild nook,

My EMMA¹, I will dedicate to thee."
—Soon did the spot become my other
home, 40

My dwelling, and my out-of-doors abode.
And of the Shepherds who have seen me
there,

To whom I sometimes in our idle talk Have told this fancy, two or three, perhaps,

Years after we are gone and in our graves,
When they have cause to speak of this wild place, 46

May call it by the name of EMMA'S DELL.

¹ Emma : the poet's sister Dora, just as Emmeline is elsewhere used as a pseudonym for Dorothy. See editor's note on To a Butterfly, p. 897.—ED.

II.

TO JOANNA.

[Composed August, 1800.—Published 1800.]

AMID the smoke of cities did you pass
The time of early youth; and there you
learned,

From years of quiet industry, to love
The living Beings by your own fire-side,
With such a strong devotion, that your
heart

Is slow to meet the sympathies of them
Who look upon the hills with tenderness,
And make dear friendships with the streams and groves.

Yet we, who are transgressors in this kind,
Dwelling retired in our simplicity
Among the woods and fields, we love you
well,

Joanna! and I guess, since you have been
So distant from us now for two long years,
That you will gladly listen to discourse
However trivial, if you thence be taught That they, with whom you once were happy, talk
Familiarly of you and of old times.

While I was seated, now some ten days
past,

Beneath those lofty firs, that overtop
Their ancient neighbour, the old steeple-
tower,

The Vicar from his gloomy house hard by Came forth to greet me; and, when he had asked,

“How fares Joanna, that wild-hearted
Maid!

And when will she return to us?” he paused;

And, after short exchange of village news,
He with grave looks demanded for what
cause,

Reviving obsolete idolatry,
I, like a Runic Priest, in characters
Of formidable size had chiselled out
Some uncouth name upon the native rock,
Above the Rotha, by the forest-side.

—Now, by those dear immunities of heart
Engendered between malice and true love,
I was not loth to be so catechised,
And this was my reply:—“As it befell,

One summer morning we had walked
abroad

At break of day, Joanna and myself.
—’Twas that delightful season when the broom,

Full-flowered, and visible on every steep,
Along the copses runs in veins of gold.
Our pathway led us on to Rotha’s banks;
And, when we came in front of that tall
rock

That eastward looks, I there stopped short
—and stood

Tracing the lofty barrier with my eye
From base to summit; such delight I
found

To note in shrub and tree, in stone and
flower,

That intermixture of delicious hues,
Along so vast a surface, all at once,
In one impression, by connecting force
Of their own beauty, imaged in the heart.
—When I had gazed perhaps two minutes’
space,

Joanna, looking in my eyes, beheld
That ravishment of mine, and laughed aloud.

The Rock, like something starting from a
sleep,

Took up the Lady’s voice, and laughed
again;

That ancient Woman seated on Helm-crag
Was ready with her cavern; Hammar-scar,
And the tall Steep of Silver-how, sent forth
A noise of laughter; southern Loughrigg
heard,

And Fairfield answered with a mountain tone;

Helvellyn far into the clear blue sky Carried the Lady’s voice,—old Skiddaw blew

His speaking-trumpet;—back out of the
clouds

Of Glaramara southward came the voice;
And Kirkstone tossed it from his misty
head.

—Now whether (said I to our cordial
Friend,

Who in the hey-day of astonishment Smiled in my face) this were in simple
truth

A work accomplished by the brotherhood

Of ancient mountains, or my ear was touched 70

With dreams and visionary impulses
To me alone imparted, sure I am
That there was a loud uproar in the hills.
And, while we both were listening, to my
side

The fair Joanna drew, as if she wished 75
To shelter from some object of her fear.
—And hence, long afterwards, when eighteen moons

Were wasted, as I chanced to walk alone
Beneath this rock, at sunrise, on a calm
And silent morning, I sat down, and there,
In memory of affections old and true, 81
I chiselled out in those rude characters
Joanna's name deep in the living stone:—
And I, and all who dwell by my fireside,
Have called the lovely rock, JOANNA'S
ROCK." 85

NOTE.—In Cumberland and Westmoreland are several inscriptions, upon the native rock, which, from the wasting of time, and the rudeness of the workmanship, have been mistaken for Runic. They are, without doubt, Roman.

The Rotha, mentioned in this poem, is the River which, flowing through the lakes of Grasmere and Rydal, falls into Winandermere. On Helm-crag, that impressive single mountain at the head of the Vale of Grasmere, is a rock which from most points of view bears a striking resemblance to an old Woman cowering. Close by this rock is one of those fissures or caverns, which in the language of the country are called dungeons. Most of the mountains here-mentioned immediately surround the Vale of Grasmere; of the others, some are at a considerable distance, but they belong to the same cluster.

III.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

THERE is an Eminence,—of these our hills
The last that parleys with the setting sun;
We can behold it from our orchard seat;
And, when at evening we pursue our walk Along the public way, this Peak, so high Above us, and so distant in its height, 6
Is visible; and often seems to send
Its own deep quiet to restore our hearts.
The meteors make of it a favourite haunt:
The star of Jove, so beautiful and large
In the mid heavens, is never half so fair

As when he shines above it. 'Tis in truth
The loneliest place we have among the
clouds.

And She who dwells with me, whom I have loved

With such communion that no place on
earth 15

Can ever be a solitude to me,
Hath to this lonely Summit given my Name.

IV.

[Composed October 10, 1800.—Published 1800.]

A NARROW girdle of rough stones and crags,
A rude and natural causeway, interposed
Between the water and a winding slope
Of copse and thicket, leaves the eastern
shore

Of Grasmere safe in its own privacy: 5
And there myself and two beloved Friends,
One calm September morning, ere the mist
Had altogether yielded to the sun, Sauntered on this retired and difficult way.

—Ill suits the road with one in haste;
but we 10

Played with our time; and, as we strolled
along,

It was our occupation to observe Such objects as the waves had tossed ashore—

Feather, or leaf, or weed, or withered
bough,

Each on the other heaped, along the line
Of the dry wreck. And, in our vacant mood, 16

Not seldom did we stop to watch some tuft
Of dandelion seed or thistle's beard,

That skimmed the surface of the dead
calm lake,

Suddenly halting now—a lifeless stand!

And starting off again with freak as sudden;
In all its sportive wanderings, all the while,

Making report of an invisible breeze
That was its wings, its chariot, and its horse,

Its playmate, rather say, its moving soul.

—And often, trifling with a privilege 26
Alike indulged to all, we paused, one now,

And now the other, to point out, perchance
To pluck, some flower or water-weed, too
fair

Either to be divided from the place 30
 On which it grew, or to be left alone
 To its own beauty. Many such there are, Fair ferns and flowers, and chiefly that tall fern,

So stately, of the Queen Osmunda named;
 Plant lovelier, in its own retired abode 35
 On Grasmere's beach, than Naiad by the
 side

Of Grecian brook, or Lady of the Mere,
 Sole-sitting by the shores of old romance.
 —So fared we that bright morning: from the fields,

Meanwhile, a noise was heard, the busy mirth 40

Of reapers, men and women, boys and girls.
 Delighted much to listen to those sounds,
 And feeding thus our fancies, we advanced
 Along the indented shore; when suddenly,
 Through a thin veil of glittering haze was
 seen 45

Before us, on a point of jutting land,
 The tall and upright figure of a Man
 Attired in peasant's garb, who stood alone,
 Angling beside the margin of the lake.
 "Improvident and reckless," we exclaimed,
 "The Man must be, who thus can lose a
 day 51

Of the mid harvest, when the labourer's hire

Is ample, and some little might be stored Wherewith to cheer him in the winter
 time."

Thus talking of that Peasant, we approached 55

Close to the spot where with his rod and line

He stood alone; whereat he turned his
 head

To greet us—and we saw a Man worn down
 By sickness, gaunt and lean, with sunken cheeks

And wasted limbs, his legs so long and lean
 That for my single self I looked at them,
 Forgetful of the body they sustained.— 62

Too weak to labour in the harvest field,
 The Man was using his best skill to gain

A pittance from the dead unfeeling lake
 That knew not of his wants. I will not say

What thoughts immediately were ours, nor how 67

The happy idleness of that sweet morn,
 With all its lovely images, was changed
 To serious musing and to self-reproach. 70
 Nor did we fail to see within ourselves
 What need there is to be reserved in speech,
 And temper all our thoughts with charity.
 —Therefore, unwilling to forget that day,
 My Friend, Myself, and She who then received 75

The same admonishment, have called the
 place

By a memorial name, uncouth indeed
 As e'er by mariner was given to bay
 Or foreland, on a new-discovered coast;
 And POINT RASH-JUDGMENT is the Name it bears. 80

TO M. H.

[Composed after December 21, and before December 28, 1799.—Published 1800.]

OUR walk was far among the ancient trees:
 There was no road, nor any woodman's
 path;

But a thick umbrage—checking the wild growth

Of weed and sapling, along soft green turf
 Beneath the branches—of itself had made
 A track, that brought us to a slip of lawn,
 And a small bed of water in the woods. 7
 All round this pool both flocks and herds might drink

On its firm margin, even as from a well,
 Or some stone-basin which the herdsman's
 hand 10

Had shaped for their refreshment; nor did sun,

Or wind from any quarter, ever come,
 But as a blessing to this calm recess,
 This glade of water and this one green
 field.

The spot was made by Nature for herself;
 The travellers know it not, and 'twill remain 16

Unknown to them; but it is beautiful;
 And if a man should plant his cottage near,
 Should sleep beneath the shelter of its trees,
 And blend its waters with his daily meal,
 He would so love it, that in his death-hour
 Its image would survive among his
 thoughts: 22

And therefore, my sweet MARY, this still
Nook,
With all its beeches, we have named from
You !

VI.

[Began August 29, 30, 1800.—Finished 1802.—
Published 1815.]

WHEN, to the attractions of the busy world
Preferring studious leisure, I had chosen
A habitation in this peaceful Vale,
Sharp season followed of continual storm
In deepest winter; and, from week to week, 5
Pathway, and lane, and public road, were clogged

With frequent showers of snow. Upon a
hill,

At a short distance from my cottage, stands
A stately Fir-grove, whither I was wont
To hasten, for I found, beneath the roof 10
Of that perennial shade, a cloistral place
Of refuge, with an unincumbered floor.

Here, in safe covert, on the shallow snow,
And sometimes on a speck of visible earth,
The redbreast near me hopped; nor was
I loth 15

To sympathize with vulgar coppice birds
That, for protection from the nipping blast,
Hither repaired.—A single beech-tree grew Within this grove of firs! and, on the fork
Of that one beech, appeared a thrush's nest;
A last year's nest, conspicuously built 21
At such small elevation from the ground
As gave sure sign that they, who in that house

Of nature and of love had made their home
Amid the fir-trees, all the summer long 25
Dwelt in a tranquil spot. And oftentimes A few sheep, stragglers from some mountain-flock,

Would watch my motions with suspicious stare,

From the remotest outskirts of the grove,— Some nook where they had made their final stand, 30

Huddling together from two fears—the
fear

Of me and of the storm. Full many an
hour

Here did I lose. But in this grove the trees

Had been so thickly planted and had thriven

In such perplexed and intricate array, 35
That vainly did I seek beneath their stems
A length of open space, where to and fro
My feet might move without concern or
care;

And, baffled thus, though earth from day
to day

Was fettered, and the air by storm disturbed, 40

I ceased the shelter to frequent,—and
prized,

Less than I wished to prize, that calm recess.

The snows dissolved, and genial Spring
returned

To clothe the fields with verdure. Other haunts

Meanwhile were mine; till one bright
April day, 45

By chance retiring from the glare of noon
To this forsaken covert, there I found

A hoary pathway traced between the trees,
And winding on with such an easy line

Along a natural opening, that I stood 50
Much wondering how I could have sought in vain

For what was now so obvious. To abide,
For an allotted interval of ease,

Under my cottage-roof, had gladly come
From the wild sea a cherished Visitant;

And with the sight of this same path—
begun, 56

Began and ended, in the shady grove,
Pleasant conviction flashed upon my mind

That, to this opportune recess allured,
He had surveyed it with a finer eye, 60

A heart more wakeful; and had worn the track

By pacing here, unwearied and alone,
In that habitual restlessness of foot

That haunts the Sailor, measuring o'er and o'er

His short domain upon the vessel's deck, 65
While she pursues her course through the dreary sea.

When thou hadst quitted Esthwaite's pleasant shore,

And taken thy first leave of those green hills
 And rocks that were the play-ground of thy youth,
 Year followed year, my Brother! and we two, 70
 Conversing not, knew little in what mould
 Each other's mind was fashioned; and at length,
 When once again we met in Grasmere Vale,
 Between us there was little other bond
 Than common feelings of fraternal love.
 But thou, a School-boy, to the sea hadst carried 76
 Undying recollections; Nature there
 Was with thee; she, who loved us both, she still Was with thee; and even so didst thou become A silent Poet; from the solitude 80
 Of the vast sea didst bring a watchful heart
 Still couchant, an inevitable ear,
 And an eye practised like a blind man's touch.¹
 —Back to the joyless Ocean thou art gone;
 Nor from this vestige of thy musing hours
 Could I withhold thy honoured name,—
 and now 86
 I love the fir-grove with a perfect love.
 Thither do I withdraw when cloudless suns Shine hot, or wind blows troublesome and strong;
 And there I sit at evening, when the steep
 Of Silver-how, and Grasmere's peaceful
 lake 91
 And one green island, gleam between the stems
 Of the dark firs, a visionary scene!
 And while I gaze upon the spectacle
 Of clouded splendour, on this dream-like
 sight 95
 Of solemn loveliness, I think on thee,

¹ Lines 1-83 were probably written on August 29, 30, 1800; the remainder in 1802, while John W. was absent on the voyage to China from which he returned in September of that year. Can this be the Silver How Poem to which (Dorothy W. tells us) William wrote a conclusion on March 26, 1802? See Knight's "Life of W. W.," vol. I. pp. 302-3.—Ed.

My Brother, and on all which thou hast lost.
 Nor seldom, if I rightly guess, while Thou, Muttering the verses which I muttered
 first Among the mountains, through the midnight watch 100
 Art pacing thoughtfully the vessel's deck
 In some far region, here, while o'er my
 head,
 At every impulse of the moving breeze,
 The fir-grove murmurs with a sea-like
 sound,
 Alone I tread this path;—for aught I know, Timing my steps to thine; and, with a
 store 106
 Of undistinguishable sympathies,
 Mingling most earnest wishes for the day
 When we, and others whom we love, shall meet 109
 A second time, in Grasmere's happy Vale.

NOTE.—This wish was not granted; the lamented Person not long after perished by shipwreck, in discharge of his duty as Commander of the Honourable East India Company's Vessel, the Earl of Abergavenny.

[Composed 1845.—Published 1845.]

FORTH from a jutting ridge, around whose base
 Winds our deep Vale, two heath-clad Rocks ascend
 In fellowship, the loftiest of the pair
 Rising to no ambitious height; yet both,
 O'erlake and stream, mountain and flowery
 mead, 5
 Unfolding prospects fair as human eyes
 Ever beheld. Up-led with mutual help,
 To one or other brow of those twin Peaks Were two adventurous Sisters wont to climb,
 And took no note of the hour while thence they gazed, 10
 The blooming heath their couch, gazed
 side by side,
 In speechless admiration. I, a witness
 And frequent sharer of their calm delight
 With thankful heart, to either Eminence Gave the baptismal name each Sister bore.

Now are they parted, far as Death's cold
hand

16

Hath power to part the Spirits of those who love

As they did love. Ye kindred Pinnacles—
That, while the generations of mankind

Follow each other to their hiding-place 20
In time's abyss, are privileged to endure

Beautiful in yourselves, and richly graced

With like command of beauty—grant your
aid

For MARY's humble, SARAH's silent claim,¹
That their pure joy in nature may survive

From age to age in blended memory. 26

POEMS OF THE FANCY.

I.

A MORNING EXERCISE.

[Composed 1828.—Published 1832.]

FANCY, who leads the pastimes of the glad, Full oft is pleased a wayward dart to
throw;

Sending sad shadows after things not sad, Peopling the harmless fields with signs of
woe:

Beneath her sway, a simple forest cry 5
Becomes an echo of man's misery.

Blithe ravens croak of death; and when the owl

Tries his two voices for a favourite strain—
Tu-whit—Tu-who! the unsuspecting fowl Forebodes mishap or seems but to complain; 10

Fancy, intent to harass and annoy,
Can thus pervert the evidence of joy.

Through border wilds where naked Indians stray,

Myriads of notes attest her subtle skill;
A feathered task-master cries, "WORK
AWAY!" 15

And in thy iteration, "WHIP POOR WILL!"¹

Is heard the spirit of a toil-worn slave,
Lashed out of life, not quiet in the grave.

What wonder? at her bidding, ancient lays 19

Steeped in dire grief the voice of Philomel;
And that fleet messenger of summer days,
The Swallow, twittered subject to like spell;

But ne'er could Fancy bend the buoyant
Lark

To melancholy service—hark! O hark!

The daisy sleeps upon the dewy lawn, 25
Not lifting yet the head that evening
bowed;

But He is risen, a later star of dawn, Glittering and twinkling near yon rosy
cloud;

Bright gem instinct with music, vocal spark;

The happiest bird that sprang out of the Ark! 30

Hail, blest above all kinds!—Supremely skilled

Restless with fixed to balance, high with
low,

Thou leav'st the halcyon free her hopes to build

On such forbearance as the deep may
show; 34

Perpetual flight, unchecked by earthly ties,
Leav'st to the wandering bird of paradise.

Faithful, though swift as lightning, the meek dove;

Yet more hath Nature reconciled in thee;
So constant with thy downward eye of
love,

Yet, in aerial singleness, so free; 40
So humble, yet so ready to rejoice

In power of wing and never-wearied voice.

To the last point of vision, and beyond,
Mount, daring warbler!—that love-prompted strain,

("Twixt thee and thine a never-failing bond), 45

Thrills not the less the bosom of the plain:
Yet might'st thou seem, proud privilege!
to sing

All independent of the leafy spring.²

² This stanza was transferred in 1845 to its present place from the poem (composed 1825; published 1827) To a Skylark, beginning, "Ethereal minstrel! pilgrim of the sky."—Ed.

How would it please old Ocean to partake,
With sailors longing for a breeze in vain,
The harmony thy notes most gladly make Where earth resembles most his own domain!

Urania's self might welcome with pleased
ear

These matins mounting towards her native sphere.

Chanter by heaven attracted, whom no bars

To daylight known deter from that pursuit,

'Tis well that some sage instinct, when the stars

Come forth at evening, keeps Thee still and mute;

For not an eyelid could to sleep incline Wert thou among them, singing as they shine!

A FLOWER GARDEN

AT COLEORTON HALL, LEICESTERSHIRE.

[Composed 1824.—Published 1827.]

TELL me, ye Zephyrs! that unfold,
While fluttering o'er this gay Recess,
Pinions that fanned the teeming mould
Of Eden's blissful wilderness,
Did only softly-stealing hours

There close the peaceful lives of flowers?
Say, when the moving creatures saw
All kinds commingled without fear,
Prevailed a like indulgent law
For the still growths that prosper here?
Did wanton fawn and kid forbear

The half-blown rose, the lily spare?
Or peeped they often from their beds,
And prematurely disappeared,
Devoured like pleasure ere it spreads

A bosom to the sun endeared?
If such their harsh untimely doom,
It falls not here on bud or bloom.
All summer-long the happy Eve
Of this fair Spot her flowers may bind,
Nor e'er, with ruffled fancy, grieve,
From the next glance she casts, to find
That love for little things by Fate
Is rendered vain as love for great.

Yet, where the guardian fence is wound, 25
So subtly are our eyes beguiled,
We see not nor suspect a bound,
No more than in some forest wild;
The sight is free as air—or crost
Only by art in nature lost. 30

And though the jealous turf refuse
By random footsteps to be prest,
And feed on never-sullied dews,
Ye, gentle breezes from the west,
With all the ministers of hope 35
Are tempted to this sunny slope!

And hither throngs of birds resort;
Some, inmates lodged in shady nests,
Some, perched on stems of stately port
That nod to welcome transient guests; 40
While hare and leveret, seen at play, Appear not more shut out than they.

Apt emblem (for reproof of pride)
This delicate Enclosure shows
Of modest kindness, that would hide 45
The firm protection she bestows;
Of manners, like its viewless fence,
Ensuring peace to innocence.

Thus spake the moral Muse—her wing
Abruptly spreading to depart, 50
She left that farewell offering,
Memento for some docile heart;
That may respect the good old age
When Fancy was Truth's willing Page;
And Truth would skim the flowery glade,
Though entering but as Fancy's Shade. 56

III.

[Composed March 18, 1798.—Published 1800.]

A WHIRL-BLAST from behind the hill Rushed o'er the wood with startling
sound;

Then—all at once the air was still,
And showers of hailstones pattered round.
Where leafless oaks towered high above, 5
I sat within an undergrove
Of tallest hollies, tall and green;
A fairer bower was never seen.
From year to year the spacious floor
With withered leaves is covered o'er, 10
And all the year the bower is green.

But see! where'er the hailstones drop
 The withered leaves all skip and hop;
 There's not a breeze—no breath of air—
 Yet here, and there, and every where 15
 Along the floor, beneath the shade
 By those embowering hollies made,
 The leaves in myriads jump and spring,
 As if with pipes and music rare
 Some Robin Good-fellow were there, 20
 And all those leaves, in festive glee,
 Were dancing to the minstrelsy.

IV.

THE WATERFALL AND THE EGLANTINE.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

I.

“BEGONE, thou fond presumptuous Elf,” Exclaimed an angry Voice, “Nor dare to thrust thy foolish self Between me and my choice!”
 A small Cascade fresh swoln with snows 5
 Thus threatened a poor Briar-rose,
 That, all bespattered with his foam,
 And dancing high and dancing low,
 Was living, as a child might know,
 In an unhappy home. 10

II.

“Dost thou presume my course to block?
 Off, off! or, puny Thing!
 I'll hurl thee headlong with the rock
 To which thy fibres cling.”
 The Flood was tyrannous and strong; 15
 The patient Briar suffered long,
 Nor did he utter groan or sigh,
 Hoping the danger would be past;
 But, seeing no relief, at last
 He ventured to reply. 20

III.

“Ah!” said the Briar, “blame me not;
 Why should we dwell in strife?
 We who in this sequestered spot
 Once lived a happy life!
 You stirred me on my rocky bed— 25
 What pleasure through my veins you
 spread

The summer long, from day to day,
 My leaves you freshened and bedewed;
 Nor was it common gratitude
 That did your cares repay. 30

IV.

“When spring came on with bud and bell,
 Among these rocks did I
 Before you hang my wreaths to tell
 That gentle days were nigh!
 And in the sultry summer hours 35
 I sheltered you with leaves and flowers;
 And in my leaves—now shed and gone,
 The linnet lodged, and for us two Chanted his pretty songs, when you
 Had little voice or none. 40

V.

“But now proud thoughts are in your
 breast—
 What grief is mine you see,
 Ah! would you think, even yet how blest Together we might be!
 Though of both leaf and flower bereft, 45
 Some ornaments to me are left—
 Rich store of scarlet hips is mine,
 With which I, in my humble way,
 Would deck you many a winter day,
 A happy Eglantine!” 50

VI.

What more he said I cannot tell,
 The Torrent down the rocky dell
 Came thundering loud and fast;
 I listened, nor aught else could hear;
 The Briar quaked—and much I fear 55
 Those accents were his last.

V.

THE OAK AND THE BROOM.

A PASTORAL.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

I.

His simple truths did Andrew glean Beside the babbling rills;
 A careful student he had been Among the woods and hills.
 One winter's night, when through the
 trees 5
 The wind was roaring, on his knees

His youngest born did Andrew hold :
 And while the rest, a ruddy quire,
 Were seated round their blazing fire,
 This Tale the Shepherd told. 10

II.

"I saw a crag, a lofty stone
 As ever tempest beat !
 Out of its head an Oak had grown,
 A Broom out of its feet.
 The time was March, a cheerful noon— 15
 The thaw-wind, with the breath of June, Breathed gently from the warm southwest :

When, in a voice sedate with age,
 This Oak, a giant and a sage,
 His neighbour thus addressed :— 20

III.

"Eight weary weeks, through rock and clay,
 Along this mountain's edge,
 The Frost hath wrought both night and
 day,
 Wedge driving after wedge.
 Look up ! and think, above your head 25
 What trouble, surely, will be bred ;
 Last night I heard a crash—'tis true,
 The splinters took another road—
 I see them yonder—what a load
 For such a Thing as you ! 30

IV.

"You are preparing as before,
 To deck your slender shape ;
 And yet, just three years back—no more—
 You had a strange escape :
 Down from yon cliff a fragment broke ; 35
 It thundered down, with fire and smoke,
 And hitherward pursued its way ;
 This ponderous block was caught by me,
 And o'er your head, as you may see,
 'Tis hanging to this day ! 40

V.

"If breeze or bird to this rough steep
 Your kind's first seed did bear ;
 The breeze had better been asleep,
 The bird caught in a snare :
 For you and your green twigs decoy 45
 The little witless shepherd-boy

To come and slumber in your bower ;
 And trust me, on some sultry noon,
 Both you and he, Heaven knows how
 soon !
 Will perish in one hour. 50

VI.

"From me this friendly warning take ?—
 The Broom began to doze,
 And thus, to keep herself awake,
 Did gently interpose :
 'My thanks for your discourse are due ;
 That more than what you say is true 56
 I know, and I have known it long ;
 Frail is the bond by which we hold
 Our being, whether young or old,
 Wise, foolish, weak, or strong. 60

VII.

"Disasters, do the best we can,
 Will reach both great and small ;
 And he is oft the wisest man,
 Who is not wise at all.
 For me, why should I wish to roam? 65
 This spot is my paternal home,
 It is my pleasant heritage ;
 My father many a happy year
 Spread here his careless blossoms, here Attained a good old age. 70

VIII.

"Even such as his may be my lot.
 What cause have I to haunt My heart with terrors? Am I not In truth a favoured plant !
 On me such bounty Summer pours, 75
 That I am covered o'er with flowers ;
 And when the Frost is in the sky,
 My branches are so fresh and gay
 That you might look at me and say,
 This Plant can never die. 80

IX.

"The butterfly, all green and gold,
 To me hath often flown,
 Here in my blossoms to behold
 Wings lovely as his own.
 When grass is chill with rain or dew, 85
 Beneath my shade the mother-eye
 Lies with her infant lamb ; I see
 The love they to each other make,
 And the sweet joy which they partake,
 It is a joy to me.' 90

X.

“Her voice was blithe, her heart was light;
The Broom might have pursued
Her speech, until the stars of night
Their journey had renewed;
But in the branches of the oak 95
Two ravens now began to croak
Their nuptial song, a gladsome air;
And to her own green bower the breeze
That instant brought two stripling bees
To rest, or murmur there. 100

XI.

“One night, my Children! from the north
There came a furious blast;
At break of day I ventured forth,
And near the cliff I passed.
The storm had fallen upon the Oak, 105
And struck him with a mighty stroke,
And whirled, and whirled him far away;
And, in one hospitable cleft,
The little careless Broom was left
To live for many a day.” 110

VI.

TO A SEXTON.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

LET thy wheel-barrow alone—
Wherefore, Sexton, piling still In thy bone-house bone on bone?
'Tis already like a hill
In a field of battle made, 5
Where three thousand skulls are laid;
These died in peace each with the other,—
Father, sister, friend, and brother.

Mark the spot to which I point!
From this platform, eight feet square, 10
Take not even a finger-joint:
Andrew's whole fire-side is there.
Here, alone, before thine eyes,
Simon's sickly daughter lies,
From weakness now and pain defended,
Whom he twenty winters tended. 16

Look but at the gardener's pride—
How he glories, when he sees Roses, lilies, side by side,
Violets in families! 20

By the heart of Man, his tears,
By his hopes and by his fears,
Thou, too heedless, art the Warden
Of a far superior garden.

Thus then, each to other dear, 25
Let them all in quiet lie,
Andrew there, and Susan here,
Neighbours in mortality,
And should I live through sun and rain
Seven widowed years without my Jane,
O Sexton, do not then remove her, 31
Let one grave hold the Loved and Lover!

VII.

TO THE DAISY.

“Her¹ divine skill taught me this,
That from every thing I saw
I could some instruction draw,
And raise pleasure to the height
Through the meanest object's sight.
By the murmur of a spring,
Or the least bough's rustelling;
By a Daisy whose leaves spread Shut when Titan goes to bed;
Or a shady bush or tree;
She could more infuse in me
Than all Nature's beauties can
In some other wiser man.”

G. WITHER.

In youth from rock to rock I went,
From hill to hill in discontent
Of pleasure high and turbulent,
Most pleased when most uneasy;
But now my own delights I make,— 5
My thirst at every rill can slake,
And gladly Nature's love partake
Of Thee, sweet Daisy!

Thee Winter in the garland wears
That thinly decks his few grey hairs; 10
Spring parts the clouds with softest airs,
That she may sun thee;
Whole Summer-fields are thine by right;
And Autumn, melancholy Wight!
Doth in thy crimson head delight 15
When rains are on thee.

In shoals and bands, a morrice train, Thou greet'st the traveller in the lane; Pleased at his greeting thee again; Yet nothing daunted, 20 Nor grieved if thou be set at nought: And oft alone in nooks remote We meet thee, like a pleasant thought, When such are wanted.	And all day long I number yet, 65 All seasons through, another debt, Which I, wherever thou art met, To thee am owing; An instinct call it, a blind sense; A happy, genial influence, 70 Coming one knows not how, nor whence, Nor whither going.
Be violets in their secret mews 25 The flowers the wanton Zephyrs choose; Proud be the rose, with rains and dews Her head impearling, Thou liv'st with less ambitious aim, Yet hast not gone without thy fame; 30 Thou art indeed by many a claim The Poet's darling.	Child of the Year! that round dost run Thy pleasant course,—when day's begun As ready to salute the sun 75 As lark or leveret, Thy long-lost praise thou shalt regain; Nor be less dear to future men Than in old time;—thou not in vain Art Nature's favourite. ¹ 80
If to a rock from rains he fly, Or, some bright day of April sky, Imprisoned by hot sunshine lie 35 Near the green holly, And wearily at length should fare; He needs but look about, and there Thou art!—a friend at hand, to scare His melancholy. 40	VIII. TO THE SAME FLOWER. [Composed 1802.—Published 1807.]
A hundred times, by rock or bower, Ere thus I have lain couched an hour, Have I derived from thy sweet power Some apprehension; Some steady love; some brief delight; 45 Some memory that had taken flight; Some chime of fancy wrong or right; Or stray invention.	WITH little here to do or see Of things that in the great world be, Daisy! again I talk to thee, For thou art worthy, Thou unassuming Common-place 5 Of Nature, with that homely face, And yet with something of a grace Which love makes for thee!
If stately passions in me burn, And one chance look to Thee should turn, I drink out of an humbler urn 51 A lowlier pleasure; The homely sympathy that heeds The common life our nature breeds; A wisdom fitted to the needs 55 Of hearts at leisure.	Oft on the dappled turf at ease I sit, and play with similes, 10 Loose types of things through all degrees, Thoughts of thy raising: And many a fond and idle name I give to thee, for praise or blame, As is the humour of the game, 15 While I am gazing.
Fresh-smitten by the morning ray, When thou art up, alert and gay, Then, cheerful Flower! my spirits play With kindred gladness: 60 And when, at dusk, by dews oppress Thou sink'st, the image of thy rest Hath often eased my pensive breast Of careful sadness.	A nun demure of lowly port; Or sprightly maiden, of Love's court, In thy simplicity the sport Of all temptations; 20 A queen in crown of rubies drest; A starveling in a scanty vest; Are all, as seems to suit thee best, Thy appellations.

A little Cyclops with one eye 25
 Staring to threaten and defy,
 That thought comes next—and instantly
 The freak is over,
 The shape will vanish—and behold
 A silver shield with boss of gold, 30
 That spreads itself, some faery bold
 In fight to cover !

I see thee glittering from afar—
 And then thou art a pretty star ;
 Not quite so fair as many are 35
 In heaven above thee !
 Yet like a star, with glittering crest,
 Self-poised in air thou seem'st to rest ;—
 May peace come never to his nest,
 Who shall reprove thee ! 40

Bright Flower! for by that name at last,
 When all my reveries are past,
 I call thee, and to that cleave fast,
 Sweet silent creature !
 That breath'st with me in sun and air, 45
 Do thou, as thou art wont, repair
 My heart with gladness, and a share
 Of thy meek nature !

IX.

THE GREEN LINNET.

BENEATH these fruit-tree boughs that shed
 Their snow-white blossoms on my head,
 With brightest sunshine round me spread
 Of spring's unclouded weather,
 In this sequestered nook how sweet 5
 To sit upon my orchard-seat !
 And birds and flowers once more to greet,
 My last year's friends together.

One have I marked, the happiest guest
 In all this covert of the blest : 10
 Hail to Thee, far above the rest
 In joy of voice and pinion !
 Thou, Linnet ! in thy green array,
 Presiding Spirit here to-day,
 Dost lead the revels of the May ; 15
 And this is thy dominion.

While birds, and butterflies, and flowers,
 Make all one band of paramours,
 Thou, ranging up and down the bowers,
 Art sole in thy employment : 20

A Life, a Presence like the Air,
 Scattering thy gladness without care,
 Too blest with any one to pair ;
 Thyself thy own enjoyment.

Amid yon tuft of hazel trees, 25
 That twinkle to the gusty breeze,
 Behold him perched in ecstasies,
 Yet seeming still to hover ;
 There ! where the flutter of his wings
 Upon his back and body flings 30
 Shadows and sunny glimmerings,
 That cover him all over.

My dazzled sight he oft deceives,
 A Brother of the dancing leaves ;
 Then flits, and from the cottage eaves 35
 Pours forth his song in gushes ;
 As if by that exulting strain
 He mocked and treated with disdain
 The voiceless Form he chose to feign,
 While fluttering in the bushes. 40

X.

TO A SKY-LARK.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

UP with me ! up with me into the clouds !
 For thy song, Lark, is strong ;
 Up with me, up with me into the clouds !
 Singing, singing,
 With clouds and sky about thee ringing, 5
 Lift me, guide me, till I find
 That spot which seems so to thy mind !

I have walked through wildernesses dreary,
 And to-day my heart is weary ;
 Had I now the wings of a Faery,
 Up to thee would I fly.
 There is madness about thee, and joy
 divine

In that song of thine ;
 Lift me, guide me, high and high
 To thy banqueting place in the sky. 15

Joyous as morning,
 Thou art laughing and scorning ;
 Thou hast a nest for thy love and thy
 rest,
 And, though little troubled with sloth,
 Drunken Lark ! thou wouldst be loth

To be such a traveller as I.	21	Has a thought about her nest,
Happy, happy Liver,		Thou wilt come with half a call,
With a soul as strong as a mountain river		Spreading out thy glossy breast
Pouring out praise to the almighty Giver,		Like a careless Prodigal ;	30
Joy and jollity be with us both !	25	Telling tales about the sun,
		When we've little warmth, or none.
Alas ! my journey, rugged and uneven,		Poets, vain men in their mood !
Through prickly moors or dusty ways must wind ;		Travel with the multitude :
But hearing thee, or others of thy kind,		Never heed them ; I aver	35
As full of gladness and as free of heaven,		That they all are wanton wooers ;
I, with my fate contented, will plod on,	30	But the thrifty cottager,
And hope for higher raptures, when life's day is done.		Who stirs little out of doors,
		Joys to spy thee near her home ;
		Spring is coming, Thou art come !	40

XI.

TO THE SMALL CELANDINE.¹

[Composed April 30, 1802.—Published 1807.]

PANSIES, lilies, kingcups, daisies,		Comfort have thou of thy merit,
Let them live upon their praises ;		Kindly, unassuming Spirit !
Long as there's a sun that sets,		Careless of thy neighbourhood,
Primroses will have their glory ;		Thou dost show thy pleasant face
Long as there are violets,	5	On the moor, and in the wood,	45
They will have a place in story :		In the lane ;—there's not a place,
There's a flower that shall be mine,		Howsoever mean it be,
'Tis the little Celandine.		But 'tis good enough for thee.
Eyes of some men travel far		Ill befall the yellow flowers,
For the finding of a star ;	10	Children of the flaring hours !	50
Up and down the heavens they go,		Buttercups, that will be seen,
Men that keep a mighty rout !		Whether we will see or no ;
I'm as great as they, I trow,		Others, too, of lofty mien ;
Since the day I found thee out,		They have done as worldlings do,
Little Flower—I'll make a stir,	15	Taken praise that should be thine,	55
Like a sage astronomer.		Little, humble Celandine.
Modest, yet withal an Elf		Prophet of delight and mirth,
Bold, and lavish of thyself ;		Ill-requited upon earth ;
Since we needs must first have met		Herald of a mighty band,
I have seen thee, high and low,	20	Of a joyous train ensuing,	60
Thirty years or more, and yet		Serving at my heart's command,
'Twas a face I did not know ;		Tasks that are no tasks renewing,
Thou hast now, go where I may,		I will sing, as doth behove,
Fifty greetings in a day.		Hymns in praise of what I love !

XII.

TO THE SAME FLOWER.

[Composed May 1, 1802.—Published 1807.]

Ere a leaf is on a bush,	25	PLEASURES newly found are sweet
In the time before the thrush		When they lie about our feet :
		February last, my heart
		First at sight of thee was glad ;

All unheard of as thou art, 5
 Thou must needs, I think, have had,
 Celandine ! and long ago,
 Praise of which I nothing know.

I have not a doubt but he,
 Whosoe'er the man might be, 10
 Who the first with pointed rays (Workman worthy to be sainted)
 Set the sign-board in a blaze,
 When the rising sun he painted,
 Took the fancy from a glance 15
 At thy glittering countenance.

Soon as gentle breezes bring News of winter's vanishing,
 And the children build their bowers,
 Sticking 'kerchief-plots of mould 20
 All about with full-blown flowers,
 Thick as sheep in shepherd's fold !
 With the proudest thou art there,
 Mantling in the tiny square.

Often have I sighed to measure 25
 By myself a lonely pleasure,
 Sighed to think I read a book
 Only read, perhaps, by me ;
 Yet I long could overlook
 Thy bright coronet and Thee, 30
 And thy arch and wily ways,
 And thy store of other praise.

Blithe of heart, from week to week
 Thou dost play at hide-and-seek ;
 While the patient primrose sits 35
 Like a beggar in the cold,
 Thou, a flower of wiser wits,
 Slip'st into thy sheltering hold ;
 Liveliest of the vernal train
 When ye all are out again. 40

Drawn by what peculiar spell,
 By what charm of sight or smell,
 Does the dim-eyed curious Bee,
 Labouring for her waxen cells,
 Fondly settle upon Thee 45
 Prized above all buds and bells
 Opening daily at thy side,
 By the season multiplied ?¹

¹ This stanza originally came after line 40 of the preceding poem (No. XI). It was placed here in 1845.—ED.

Thou art not beyond the moon,
 But a thing "beneath our shoon : " 50
 Let the bold Discoverer thrid
 In his bark the polar sea ;
 Rear who will a pyramid ;
 Praise it is enough for me,
 If there be but three or four 55
 Who will love my little Flower.

XIII.

THE SEVEN SISTERS ;

OR,

THE SOLITUDE OF BINNORIE.

[Composed before August 17, 1800.—Published 1807.]

SEVEN Daughters had Lord Archibald,
 All children of one mother :
 You could not say in one short day
 What love they bore each other. 5
 A garland of seven lilies wrought !
 Seven Sisters that together dwell ;
 But he, bold Knight as ever fought,
 Their Father, took of them no thought,
 He loved the wars so well. 10
 Sing, mournfully, oh ! mournfully,
 The solitude of Binnorie ! 10

II.

Fresh blows the wind, a western wind,
 And from the shores of Erin,
 Across the wave, a Rover brave
 To Binnorie is steering : 15
 Right onward to the Scottish strand
 The gallant ship is borne ;
 The warriors leap upon the land,
 And hark ! the Leader of the band
 Hath blown his bugle horn. 20
 Sing, mournfully, oh ! mournfully,
 The solitude of Binnorie.

III.

Beside a grotto of their own,
 With boughs above them closing,
 The Seven are laid, and in the shade 25
 They lie like fawns reposing.
 But now, upstarting with affright
 At noise of man and steed,
 Away they fly to left, to right—
 Of your fair household, Father-knight, 30
 Methinks you take small heed !

Sing, mournfully, oh ! mournfully,
The solitude of Binnorie.

IV.

Away the seven fair Campbells fly,
And over hill and hollow, 35
With menace proud, and insult loud,
The youthful Rovers follow.
Cried they, "Your Father loves to roam :
Enough for him to find
The empty house when he comes home; 40
For us your yellow ringlets comb,
For us be fair and kind !"
Sing, mournfully, oh ! mournfully,
The solitude of Binnorie.

V.

Some close behind, some side by side, 45
Like clouds in stormy weather ;
They run, and cry, "Nay, let us die,
And let us die together."
A lake was near ; the shore was steep ;
There never foot had been ; 50
They ran, and with a desperate leap Together plunged into the deep,
Nor ever more were seen.
Sing, mournfully, oh ! mournfully,
The solitude of Binnorie. 55

VI.

The stream that flows out of the lake,
As through the glen it rambles,
Repeats a moan o'er moss and stone,
For those seven lovely Campbells.
Seven little Islands, green and bare, 60
Have risen from out the deep :
The fishers say, those sisters fair
By faeries all are buried there,
And there together sleep.
Sing, mournfully, oh ! mournfully, 65
The solitude of Binnorie.

XIV.

[Composed 1803.—Published 1807.]

Who fancied what a pretty sight
This Rock would be if edged around
With living snow-drops? circlet bright !
How glorious to this orchard-ground !
Who loved the little Rock, and set 5
Upon its head this coronet ?

Was it the humour of a child ?
Or rather of some gentle maid,
Whose brows, the day that she was styled
The shepherd-queen, were thus arrayed ? 10
Of man mature, or matron sage ?
Or old man toying with his age ?

I asked—'twas whispered ; The device
To each and all might well belong :
It is the Spirit of Paradise 15
That prompts such work, a Spirit strong,
That gives to all the self-same bent
Where life is wise and innocent.

XV.

THE REDBREAST CHASING THE BUTTERFLY.

[Composed April 18, 1802.—Published 1807.]

ART thou the bird whom Man loves best,
The pious bird with the scarlet breast,
Our little English Robin ;
The bird that comes about our doors
When Autumn-winds are sobbing ? 5
Art thou the Peter of Norway Boors ?
Their Thomas in Finland,
And Russia far inland ?
The bird that by some name or other
All men who know thee call their brother, 10
The darling of children and men ?
Could Father Adam¹ open his eyes
And see this sight beneath the skies,
He'd wish to close them again.
—If the Butterfly knew but his friend, 15
Hither his flight he would bend ;
And find his way to me,
Under the branches of the tree :
In and out, he darts about ;
Can this be the bird, to man so good, 20
That, after their bewildering,
Covered with leaves the little children,
So painfully in the wood ?

What ailed thee, Robin, that thou couldst pursue
A beautiful creature, 25
That is gentle by nature ?

¹ See "Paradise Lost," Book XI, where Adam points out to Eve the ominous sign of the Eagle chasing "two Birds of gayest plume," and the gentle Hart and Hind pursued by their enemy.

Beneath the summer sky
 From flower to flower let him fly;
 'Tis all that he wishes to do.
 The cheerer Thou of our in-door sadness, 30
 He is the friend of our summer gladness:
 What hinders, then, that ye should be Playmates in the sunny weather,
 And fly about in the air together!
 His beautiful wings in crimson are drest, 35
 A crimson as bright as thine own:
 Wouldst thou be happy in thy nest,
 O pious Bird! whom man loves best,
 Love him, or leave him alone!

SONG FOR THE SPINNING WHEEL.

FOUNDED UPON A BELIEF PREVALENT AMONG THE PASTORAL VALES OF WESTMORELAND.

[Composed 1812.—Published 1820.]

SWIFTLY turn the murmuring wheel!
 Night has brought the welcome hour,
 When the weary fingers feel
 Help, as if from faery power;
 Dewy night o'ershades the ground; 5
 Turn the swift wheel round and round!

Now, beneath the starry sky,
 Couch the widely-scattered sheep;—
 Ply the pleasant labour, ply!
 For the spindle, while they sleep, 10
 Runs with speed more smooth and fine,
 Gathering up a trustier line.

Short-lived likings may be bred
 By a glance from fickle eyes;
 But true love is like the thread 15
 Which the kindly wool supplies,
 When the flocks are all at rest,
 Sleeping on the mountain's breast.

XVII.

HINT FROM THE MOUNTAINS

FOR CERTAIN POLITICAL PRETENDERS.

[Composed 1817.—Published 1820.]

"Who but hails the sight with pleasure
 When the wings of genius rise,
 Their ability to measure
 With great enterprise;

But in man was ne'er such daring 5
 As yon Hawk exhibits, pairing
 His brave spirit with the war in The stormy skies!
 "Mark him, how his power he uses,
 Lays it by, at will resumes! 10
 Mark, ere for his haunt he chooses
 Clouds and utter glooms!
 There he wheels in downward mazes;
 Sunward now his flight he raises,
 Catches fire, as seems, and blazes 15
 With uninjured plumes!"

ANSWER.

"Stranger, 'tis no act of courage
 Which aloft thou dost discern;
 No bold bird gone forth to forage 20
 'Mid the tempest stern;
 But such mockery as the nations
 See, when public perturbations
 Lift men from their native stations,
 Like yon TUFT OF FERN;
 "Such it is; the aspiring creature 25
 Soaring on undaunted wing,
 (So you fancied) is by nature
 A dull helpless thing,
 Dry and withered, light and yellow;—
 That to be the tempest's fellow! 30
 Wait—and you shall see how hollow
 Its endeavouring!"

XVIII.

ON SEEING A NEEDLECASE IN THE FORM OF A HARP.

THE WORK OF E. M. S.

[Composed 1827.—Published 1827.]

FROWNS are on every Muse's face,
 Reproaches from their lips are sent,
 That mimicry should thus disgrace
 The noble Instrument.

A very Harp in all but size! 5
 Needles for strings in apt gradation!
 Minerva's self would stigmatize
 The unclassic profanation.

Even her own needle that subdued
 Arachne's rival spirit, 10
 Though wrought in Vulcan's happiest
 mood,
 Such honour could not merit.

And this too from the Laureate's Child,
 A living lord of melody!
 How will her Sire be reconciled 15
 To the refined indignity?

I spake, when whispered a low voice,
 "Bard! moderate your ire;
 Spirits of all degrees rejoice
 In presence of the lyre. 20

"The Minstrels of Pygmean bands,
 Dwarf Genii, moonlight-loving Fays,
 Have shells to fit their tiny hands
 And suit their slender lays.

"Some, still more delicate of ear, 25
 Have lutes (believe my words)
 Whose framework is of gossamer,
 While sunbeams are the chords.

"Gay Sylphs this miniature will court,
 Made vocal by their brushing wings, 30
 And sullen Gnomes will learn to sport Around its polished strings;

"Whence strains to love-sick maiden dear,
 While in her lonely bower she tries
 To cheat the thought she cannot cheer, 35
 By fanciful embroideries.

"Trust, angry Bard! a knowing Sprite,
 Nor think the Harp her lot deplores;
 Though 'mid the stars the Lyre shine
 bright,
 Love stoops as fondly as he soars." 40

XIX.

TO A LADY,

IN ANSWER TO A REQUEST THAT I WOULD WRITE HER A POEM UPON SOME DRAWINGS THAT SHE HAD MADE OF FLOWERS IN THE ISLAND OF MADEIRA.

[Composed 1845 (?).—Published 1845.]

FAIR Lady! can I sing of flowers
 That in Madeira bloom and fade,
 I who ne'er sate within their bowers, Nor through their sunny lawns have
 strayed?
 How they in sprightly dance are worn 5
 By Shepherd-groom or May-day queen,
 Or holy festal pomps adorn,
 These eyes have never seen.

Yet tho' to me the pencil's art
 No like remembrances can give, 10
 Your portraits still may reach the heart
 And there for gentle pleasure live;
 While Fancy ranging with free scope
 Shall on some lovely Alien set
 A name with us endeared to hope, 15
 To peace, or fond regret.

Still as we look with nicer care,
 Some new resemblance we may trace
 A Heart's-ease will perhaps be there,
 A Speedwell may not want its place. 20
 And so may we, with charmed mind
 Beholding what your skill has wrought, Another Star-of-Bethlehem find,
 A new Forget-me-not.

From earth to heaven with motion fleet 25
 From heaven to earth our thoughts will pass,
 A Holy-thistle here we meet
 And there a Shepherd's weather-glass;
 And haply some familiar name
 Shall grace the fairest, sweetest, plant 30
 Whose presence cheers the drooping frame Of English Emigrant.

Gazing she feels its power beguile Sad thoughts, and breathes with easier
 breath;
 Alas! that meek that tender smile 35
 Is but a harbinger of death:
 And pointing with a feeble hand
 She says, in faint words by sighs broken,
 Bear for me to my native land
 This precious Flower, true love's last token. 40

XX.

[Composed 1845 (?).—Published 1845.]

GLAD sight wherever new with old Is joined through some dear homeborn tie;
 The life of all that we behold
 Depends upon that mystery. 5
 Vain is the glory of the sky,
 The beauty vain of field and grove,
 Unless, while with admiring eye
 We gaze, we also learn to love.

XXI.

THE CONTRAST.

THE PARROT AND THE WREN.

[Composed 1825.—Published 1827.]

I.

WITHIN her gilded cage confined
I saw a dazzling Belle,
A Parrot of that famous kind
Whose name is NON-PAREIL.

Like beads of glossy jet her eyes ;
And, smoothed by Nature's skill,
With pearl or gleaming agate vies
Her finely-curved bill.

Her plumy mantle's living hues,
In mass opposed to mass,
Outshine the splendour that imbues
The robes of pictured glass.

And, sooth to say, an apter Mate
Did never tempt the choice
Of feathered Thing most delicate
In figure and in voice.

But, exiled from Australian bowers,
And singleness her lot,
She trills her song with tutored powers,
Or mocks each casual note.

No more of pity for regrets
With which she may have striven !
Now but in wantonness she frets,
Or spite, if cause be given ;

Arch, volatile, a sportive bird
By social glee inspired ;
Ambitious to be seen or heard,
And pleased to be admired !

II.

THIS moss-lined shed, green, soft, and dry,
Harbours a self-contented Wren,
Not shunning man's abode, though shy,
Almost as thought itself, of human ken.

Strange places, coverts unendeared,
She never tried ; the very nest
In which this Child of Spring was reared Is warmed thro' winter by her feathery
breast.

To the bleak winds she sometimes gives
A slender unexpected strain ;
Proof that the hermitess still lives, Though she appear not, and be sought in vain.

Say, Dora ! tell me, by yon placid moon,
If called to choose between the favoured
pair,
Which would you be,—the bird of the saloon,
By lady-fingers tended with nice care,
Caressed, applauded, upon dainties fed,
Or Nature's DARKLING of this mossy shed ?

XXII.

THE DANISH BOY.

A FRAGMENT.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

I.

BETWEEN two sister moorland rills
There is a spot that seems to lie
Sacred to flowerets of the hills,
And sacred to the sky.
And in this smooth and open dell
There is a tempest-stricken tree ;
A corner-stone by lightning cut,
The last stone of a lonely hut ;
And in this dell you see
A thing no storm can e'er destroy,
The shadow of a Danish Boy.

II.

In clouds above, the lark is heard,
But drops not here to earth for rest ;
Within this lonesome nook the bird
Did never build her nest.
No beast, no bird, hath here his home ;
Bees, wafted on the breezy air,
Pass high above those fragrant bells
To other flowers:—to other dells
Their burdens do they bear ;
The Danish Boy walks here alone:
The lovely dell is all his own.

III.

A Spirit of noon-day is he ;
Yet seems a form of flesh and blood ;
Nor piping shepherd shall he be,
Nor herd-boy of the wood.

A regal vest of fur he wears,
 In colour like a raven's wing ;
 It fears not rain, nor wind, nor dew ;
 But in the storm 'tis fresh and blue 30
 As budding pines in spring ;
 His helmet has a vernal grace,
 Fresh as the bloom upon his face.

IV.

A harp is from his shoulder slung ;
 Resting the harp upon his knee, 35
 To words of a forgotten tongue
 He suits its melody.
 Of flocks upon the neighbouring hill
 He is the darling and the joy ;
 And often, when no cause appears, 40
 The mountain-ponies prick their ears,
 —They hear the Danish Boy,
 While in the dell he sings alone
 Beside the tree and corner-stone.

V.

There sits he ; in his face you spy 45
 No trace of a ferocious air,
 Nor ever was a cloudless sky
 So steady or so fair.
 The lovely Danish Boy is blest
 And happy in his flowery cove : 50
 From bloody deeds his thoughts are far ;
 And yet he warbles songs of war,
 That seem like songs of love,
 For calm and gentle is his mien ;
 Like a dead Boy he is serene. 55

XXIII.

SONG

FOR THE WANDERING JEW.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

THOUGH the torrents from their fountains
 Roar down many a craggy steep,
 Yet they find among the mountains
 Resting-places calm and deep.

Clouds that love through air to hasten, 5
 Ere the storm its fury stills,
 Helmet-like themselves will fasten
 On the heads of towering hills.

What if through the frozen centre
 Of the Alps the Chamois bound, 10
 Yet he has a home to enter
 In some nook of chosen ground :

And the Sea-horse, though the ocean
 Yield him no domestic cave,
 Slumbers without sense of motion, 15
 Couched upon the rocking wave.

If on windy days the Raven
 Gambol like a dancing skiff,
 Not the less she loves her haven
 In the bosom of the cliff. 20

The fleet Ostrich, till day closes, Vagrant over desert sands,
 Brooding on her eggs reposes
 When chill night that care demands.

Day and night my toils redouble, 25
 Never nearer to the goal ;
 Night and day, I feel the trouble
 Of the Wanderer in my soul.

XXIV.

STRAY PLEASURES.

“—*Pleasure is spread through the earth
 In stray gifts to be claimed by whoever shall find.*”

By their floating mill,
 That lies dead and still,
 Behold yon Prisoners three,
 The Miller with two Dames, on the breast of the Thames !
 The platform is small, but gives room for them all ; 5
 And they're dancing merrily.

From the shore come the notes
 To their mill where it floats,
 To their house and their mill tethered
 fast :
 To the small wooden isle where, their work to beguile, 10
 They from morning to even take whatever is given ;—
 And many a blithe day they have past.

In sight of the spires,
 All alive with the fires
 Of the sun going down to his rest, 15
 In the broad open eye of the solitary sky,
 They dance,—there are three, as jocund
 as free,
 While they dance on the calm river's
 breast.

Man and Maidens wheel,
 They themselves make the reel, 20
 And their music's a prey which they seize ;
 It plays not for them,—what matter? 'tis
 theirs ;
 And if they had care, it has scattered their cares While they dance, crying, "Long as ye please !"

They dance not for me, 25
 Yet mine is their glee !
 Thus pleasure is spread through the earth
 In stray gifts to be claimed by whoever shall find ;
 Thus a rich loving-kindness, redundantly
 kind,
 Moves all nature to gladness and mirth.

The showers of the spring 31
 Rouse the birds, and they sing ;
 If the wind do but stir for his proper
 delight,
 Each leaf, that and this, his neighbour will kiss ;
 Each wave, one and t'other, speeds after his brother ; 35
 They are happy, for that is their right !

XXV.

THE PILGRIM'S DREAM ;

OR, THE STAR AND THE GLOW-WORM.

[Composed 1818.—Published 1820.]

A PILGRIM, when the summer day
 Had closed upon his weary way,
 A lodging begged beneath a castle's roof ;
 But him the haughty Warder spurned ;
 And from the gate the Pilgrim turned, 5
 To seek such covert as the field
 Or heath-besprinkled copse might yield,
 Or lofty wood, shower-proof.

He paced along ; and pensively,
 Halting beneath a shady tree, 10 Whose moss-grown root might serve for couch or seat,
 Fixed on a Star his upward eye ;

Then from the tenant of the sky
 He turned, and watched with kindred
 look
 A Glow-worm, in a dusky nook, 15
 Apparent at his feet.

The murmur of a neighbouring stream
 Induced a soft and slumbrous dream,
 A pregnant dream, within whose shadowy
 bounds
 He recognised the earth-born Star, 20
 And That which glittered from afar ;
 And (strange to witness !) from the frame
 Of the ethereal Orb there came Intelligible sounds.

Much did it taunt the humble Light 25
 That now, when day was fled, and night
 Hushed the dark earth, fast closing weary
 eyes,

A very reptile could presume
 To show her taper in the gloom,
 As if in rivalship with One 30
 Who sat a ruler on his throne Erected in the skies.

"Exalted Star !" the Worm replied,
 "Abate this unbecoming pride,
 Or with a less uneasy lustre shine ; 35
 Thou shrink'st as momentarily thy rays
 Are mastered by the breathing haze ;
 While neither mist, nor thickest cloud
 That shapes in heaven its murky shroud,
 Hath power to injure mine. 40

"But not for this do I aspire
 To match the spark of local fire,
 That at my will burns on the dewy lawn,
 With thy acknowledged glories ;—No !
 Yet, thus upbraided, I may show 45
 What favours do attend me here,
 Till, like thyself, I disappear
 Before the purple dawn."

When this in modest guise was said,
 Across the welkin seemed to spread 50
 A boding sound—for aught but sleep unfit !

Hills quaked, the rivers backward ran ;
 That Star, so proud of late, looked wan ;
 And reeled with visionary stir
 In the blue depth, like Lucifer 55
 Cast headlong to the pit !

Fire raged : and, when the spangled floor
Of ancient ether was no more,
New heavens succeeded, by the dream
brought forth :

And all the happy Souls that rode 60
Transfigured through that fresh abode
Had heretofore, in humble trust,
Shone meekly 'mid their native dust,
The Glow-worms of the earth !

This knowledge, from an Angel's voice 65
Proceeding, made the heart rejoice
Of Him who slept upon the open lea :
Waking at morn he murmured not ;
And, till life's journey closed, the spot
Was to the Pilgrim's soul endeared, 70
Where by that dream he had been cheered Beneath the shady tree.

XXVI.

THE POET AND THE CAGED TURTLEDOVE.

[Composed 1830.—Published 1835.]

As often as I murmur here
My half-formed melodies, Straight from her osier mansion near
The Turtle-dove replies :
Though silent as a leaf before, 5
The captive promptly coos ;
Is it to teach her own soft lore,
Or second my weak Muse ?

I rather think the gentle Dove
Is murmuring a reproof, 10
Displeased that I from lays of love
Have dared to keep aloof ;
That I, a Bard of hill and dale,
Have carolled, fancy free,
As if nor dove nor nightingale 15
Had heart or voice for me.

If such thy meaning, O forbear,
Sweet Bird ! to do me wrong ;
Love, blessed Love, is everywhere
The spirit of my song : 20
'Mid grove, and by the calm fireside,
Love animates my lyre—
That coo again !—'tis not to chide,
I feel, but to inspire.

XXVII.

A WREN'S NEST.

[Composed 1833.—Published 1835.]

AMONG the dwellings framed by birds
In field or forest with nice care,
Is none that with the little Wren's
In snugness may compare.

No door the tenement requires, 5
And seldom needs a laboured roof ;
Yet is it to the fiercest sun
Impervious, and storm-proof.

So warm, so beautiful withal, 10
In perfect fitness for its aim,
That to the Kind by special grace
Their instinct surely came.

And when for their abodes they seek
An opportune recess, 15
The hermit has no finer eye
For shadowy quietness.

These find, 'mid ivied abbey-walls,
A canopy in some still nook ;
Others are pent-housed by a brae
That overhangs a brook. 20

There to the brooding bird her mate
Warbles by fits his low clear song ;
And by the busy streamlet both
Are sung to all day long.

Or in sequestered lanes they build, 25
Where, till the fitting bird's return,
Her eggs within the nest repose,
Like relics in an urn.

But still, where general choice is good, 30
There is a better and a best ;
And, among fairest objects, some
Are fairer than the rest ; 15

This, one of those small builders proved
In a green covert, where, from out
The forehead of a pollard oak, 35
The leafy antlers sprout ;

For She who planned the mossy lodge,
Mistrusting her evasive skill,
Had to a Primrose looked for aid
Her wishes to fulfil. 40

High on the trunk's projecting brow,
 And fixed an infant's span above
 The budding flowers, peeped forth the nest
 The prettiest of the grove!

The treasure proudly did I show 45
 To some whose minds without disdain
 Can turn to little things; but once Looked up for it in vain:

'Tis gone—a ruthless spoiler's prey,
 Who heeds not beauty, love, or song, 50
 'Tis gone! (so seemed it) and we grieved
 Indignant at the wrong.

Just three days after, passing by
 In clearer light the moss-built cell
 I saw, espied its shaded mouth; 55
 And felt that all was well.

The Primrose for a veil had spread
 The largest of her upright leaves;
 And thus, for purposes benign,
 A simple flower deceives. 60

Concealed from friends who might disturb Thy quiet with no ill intent,
 Secure from evil eyes and hands
 On barbarous plunder bent, 64

Rest, Mother-bird! and when thy young
 Take flight, and thou art free to roam,
 When withered is the guardian Flower,
 And empty thy late home,

Think how ye prospered, thou and thine,
 Amid the unviolated grove 70
 Housed near the growing Primrose-tuft
 In foresight, or in love.

XXVIII.

LOVE LIES BLEEDING.

[Composed 1842 (?).—Published 1842.]

You call it, "Love lies bleeding,"—so you
 may,
 Though the red Flower, not prostrate,
 only droops,
 As we have seen it here from day to day,
 From month to month, life passing not
 away:
 A flower how rich in sadness! Even thus stoops, 5

(Sentient by Grecian sculpture's marvellous power),
 Thus leans, with hanging brow and body
 bent

Earthward in uncomplaining languish-
 ment,

The dying Gladiator. So, sad Flower!
 ('Tis Fancy guides me willing to be led, 10 Though by a slender thread,)

So drooped Adonis, bathed in sanguine
 dew

Of his death-wound, when he from innocent air

The gentlest breath of resignation drew;
 While Venus in a passion of despair 15
 Rent, weeping over him, her golden hair Spangled with drops of that celestial shower.

She suffered, as Immortals sometimes do;
 But pangs more lasting far that Lover
 knew

Who first, weighed down by scorn, in some lone bower 20

Did press this semblance of unpitied
 smart

Into the service of his constant heart,
 His own dejection, downcast Flower!
 could share

With thine, and gave the mournful name which thou wilt ever bear. 24

XXIX.

COMPANION TO THE FOREGOING.

[Composed 1842 (?).—Published 1842.]

NEVER enlivened with the liveliest ray That fosters growth or checks or cheers
 decay,

Nor by the heaviest rain-drops more
 deprest,

This Flower, that first appeared as summer's guest,

Preserves her beauty 'mid autumnal
 leaves, 5

And to her mournful habits fondly cleaves.

When files of stateliest plants have ceased to bloom,

One after one submitting to their doom,

When her coevals each and all are fled,
 What keeps her thus reclined upon her lonesome bed? 10

The old mythologists, more impressed than we

Of this late day by character in tree
 Or herb that claimed peculiar sympathy,
 Or by the silent lapse of fountain clear,
 Or with the language of the viewless air 15
 By bird or beast made vocal, sought a
 cause

To solve the mystery, not in Nature's laws
 But in Man's fortunes. Hence a thousand tales

Sung to the plaintive lyre in Grecian vales.
 Nor doubt that something of their spirit swayed 20

The fancy-stricken Youth or heart-sick
 Maid,

Who, while each stood companionless and eyed

This undeparting Flower in crimson dyed, Thought of a wound which death is slow to cure, 24

A fate that has endured and will endure,
 And, patience coveting yet passion feeding,
 Called the dejected Lingerer Love lies Bleeding.

XXX.

RURAL ILLUSIONS.

[Composed 1832.—Published 1835.]

SYLPH was it? or a Bird mere bright

Than those of fabulous stock?
 A second darted by;—and lo!

Another of the flock,
 Through sunshine flitting from the bough
 To nestle in the rock. 6

Transient deception! a gay freak
 Of April's mimicries!

Those brilliant strangers, hailed with joy
 Among the budding trees, 10

Proved last year's leaves, pushed from the spray

To frolic on the breeze.

Maternal Flora! show thy face,
 And let thy hand be seen,

Thy hand here sprinkling tiny flowers, 15
 That, as they touch the green,
 Take root (so seems it) and look up
 In honour of their Queen.

Yet, sooth, those little starry specks,
 That not in vain aspired 20

To be confounded with live growths,
 Most dainty, most admired,
 Were only blossoms dropped from twigs
 Of their own offspring tired.

Not such the World's illusive shows; 25
Her wingless flutterings,

Her blossoms which, though shed, out-
 brave

The floweret as it springs,
 For the undeceived, smile as they may,
 Are melancholy things: 30

But gentle Nature plays her part
 With ever-varying wiles,

And transient feignings with plain truth
 So well she reconciles,

That those fond Idlers most are pleased 35
 Whom oftenest she beguiles.

XXXI.

THE KITTEN AND FALLING LEAVES.

[Composed 1804.—Published 1807.]

THAT way look, my Infant, lo!
 What a pretty baby-show!

See the Kitten on the wall,
 Sporting with the leaves that fall,
 Withered leaves—one—two—and three—5
 From the lofty elder-tree!

Through the calm and frosty air
 Of this morning bright and fair,

Eddying round and round they sink
 Softly, slowly: one might think, 10

From the motions that are made,
 Every little leaf conveyed

Sylph or Faery hither tending,—
 To this lower world descending, 15

Each invisible and mute,
 In his wavering parachute.

—But the Kitten, how she starts,
 Crouches, stretches, paws, and darts!

First at one, and then its fellow,
 Just as light and just as yellow; 20

There are many now—now one—
 Now they stop and there are none:

What intensesness of desire In her upward eye of fire ! With a tiger-leap half-way	25	Lithest, gaudiest Harlequin ! Prettiest Tumbler ever seen ! Light of heart and light of limb ;
Now she meets the coming prey, Lets it go as fast, and then Has it in her power again :		What is now become of Him? 75 Lambs, that through the mountains went
Now she works with three or four, Like an Indian conjurer ;	30	Frisking, bleating merriment, When the year was in its prime, They are sobered by this time.
Quick as he in feats of art, Far beyond in joy of heart. Were her antics played in the eye Of a thousand standers-by, Clapping hands with shout and stare,	35	If you look to vale or hill, 80 If you listen, all is still, Save a little neighbouring rill, That from out the rocky ground Strikes a solitary sound.
What would little Tabby care For the plaudits of the crowd? Over happy to be proud, Over wealthy in the treasure		Vainly glitter hill and plain, 85 And the air is calm in vain ; Vainly Morning spreads the lure Of a sky serene and pure ;
Of her own exceeding pleasure !	40	Creature none can she decoy Into open sign of joy : 90 Is it that they have a fear Of the dreary season near? Or that other pleasures be Sweeter even than gaiety?
'Tis a pretty baby-treat ; Nor, I deem, for me unmeet ; Here, for neither Babe nor me, Other playmate can I see. Of the countless living things, That with stir of feet and wings (In the sun or under shade, Upon bough or grassy blade) And with busy revellings,	45	Yet, whate'er enjoyments dwell 95 In the impenetrable cell Of the silent heart which Nature Furnishes to every creature ; Whatsoever we feel and know Too sedate for outward show, 100 Such a light of gladness breaks, Pretty Kitten ! from thy freaks,— Spreads with such a living grace O'er my little Dora's face ;
Chirp and song, and murmurings, Made this orchard's narrow space, And this vale, so blithe a place ; Multitudes are swept away Never more to breathe the day : Some are sleeping ; some in bands Travelled into distant lands ; Others slunk to moor and wood, Far from human neighbourhood ; And among the Kinds that keep With us closer fellowship,	50	Yes, the sight so stirs and charms 105 Thee, Baby, laughing in my arms, That almost I could repine That your transports are not mine, That I do not wholly fare Even as ye do, thoughtless pair ! 110 And I will have my careless season Spite of melancholy reason, Will walk through life in such a way
With us openly abide, All have laid their mirth aside.	60	That, when time brings on decay, Now and then I may possess 115 Hours of perfect gladness. —Pleased by any random toy ; By a kitten's busy joy, Or an infant's laughing eye Sharing in the ecstasy ; 120
Where is he that giddy Sprite, Blue-cap, with his colours bright, Who was blest as bird could be, Feeding in the apple-tree ; Made such wanton spoil and rout, Turning blossoms inside out ; Hung—head pointing towards the ground— Fluttered, perched, into a round Bound himself, and then unbound ;	65
	70

I would fare like that or this,
 Find my wisdom in my bliss ;
 Keep the sprightly soul awake,
 And have faculties to take,
 Even from things by sorrow wrought, 125
 Matter for a jocund thought,
 Spite of care, and spite of grief,
 To gambol with Life's falling Leaf.

ADDRESS TO MY INFANT DAUGHTER, DORA,

ON BEING REMINDED THAT SHE WAS A MONTH OLD THAT DAY, SEPTEMBER 16.

[Composed September 16, 1804.—Published 1815.]

———HAST thou then survived—Mild Offspring of infirm humanity,
 Meek Infant ! among all forlornest things
 The most forlorn—one life of that bright
 star,
 The second glory of the Heavens?—Thou hast ; 5
 Already hast survived that great decay,
 That transformation through the wide earth felt,
 And by all nations. In that Being's sight
 From whom the Race of human kind proceed,
 A thousand years are but as yesterday ; 10
 And one day's narrow circuit is to Him
 Not less capacious than a thousand years.
 But what is time? What outward glory?
 Neither
 A measure is of Thee, whose claims extend Through "heaven's eternal year."—Yet hail to Thee, 15 Frail, feeble, Monthling !—by that name,
 methinks,
 Thy scanty breathing-time is portioned
 out
 Not idly.—Hadst thou been of Indian
 birth,
 Couched on a casual bed of moss and
 leaves,
 And rudely canopied by leafy boughs, 20
 Or to the churlish elements exposed On the blank plains,—the coldness of the
 night,
 Or the night's darkness, or its cheerful face

Of beauty, by the changing moon adorned,
 Would, with imperious admonition, then Have scored thine age, and punctually timed 26
 Thine infant history, on the minds of those
 Who might have wandered with thee.—
 Mother's love,
 Nor less than mother's love in other breasts,
 Will, among us warm-clad and warmly housed, 30
 Do for thee what the finger of the heavens
 Doth all too often harshly execute
 For thy unblest coevals, amid wilds
 Where fancy hath small liberty to grace
 The affections, to exalt them or refine ; 35
 And the maternal sympathy itself, Though strong, is, in the main, a joyless
 tie
 Of naked instinct, wound about the heart.
 Happier, far happier is thy lot and ours !
 Even now—to solemnise thy helpless
 state, 40
 And to enliven in the mind's regard
 Thy passive beauty—parallels have risen,
 Resemblances, or contrasts, that connect,
 Within the region of a father's thoughts,
 Thee and thy mate and sister of the sky.
 And first ;—thy sinless progress, through a world 46
 By sorrow darkened and by care disturbed,
 Apt likeness bears to hers, through gathered clouds
 Moving untouched in silver purity,
 And cheering oft-times their reluctant
 gloom. 50
 Fair are ye both, and both are free from
 stain :
 But thou, how leisurely thou fill'st thy
 horn
 With brightness ! leaving her to post
 along,
 And range about, disquieted in change,
 And still impatient of the shape she wears. 55
 Once up, once down the hill, one journey,
 Babe,
 That will suffice thee ; and it seems that
 now

Thou hast foreknowledge that such task is thine ;
Thou travellest so contentedly, and sleep'st 59
In such a heedless peace. Alas ! full soon
Hath this conception, grateful to behold, Changed countenance, like an object sullied o'er
By breathing mist ; and thine appears
to be
A mournful labour, while to her is given Hope, and a renovation without end. 65 —That smile forbids the thought ; for on thy face
Smiles are beginning, like the beams of
dawn,
To shoot and circulate ; smiles have there been seen ;
Tranquil assurances that Heaven supports
The feeble motions of thy life, and cheers Thy loneliness : or shall those smiles be called 71
Feelers of love, put forth as if to explore This untried world, and to prepare thy
way
Through a strait passage intricate and dim ?
Such are they ; and the same are tokens,
signs, 75
Which, when the appointed season hath arrived,
Joy, as her holiest language, shall adopt ;
And Reason's godlike Power be proud to
own.

THE WAGGONER.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1819.]

“In Cairo's crowded streets
The impatient Merchant, wondering, waits in vain,
And Mecca saddens at the long delay.”

THOMSON.

TO CHARLES LAMB, ESQ.

MY DEAR FRIEND,

When I sent you, a few weeks ago, the Tale of Peter Bell, you asked “why THE WAGGONER was not added ?”—To say the truth, —from the higher tone of imagination, and the deeper touches of passion aimed at in the former, I apprehended this little Piece could not accompany it without disadvantage. In the year 1806, if I am not mistaken, THE WAG-GONER was read to you in manuscript, and, as you have remembered it for so long a time, I am the more encouraged to hope that, since the localities on which the Poem partly depends did not prevent its being interesting to you, it may prove acceptable to others. Being therefore in some measure the cause of its present appearance, you must allow me the gratification of inscribing it to you ; in acknowledgment of the pleasure I have derived from your Writings, and of the high esteem with which I am very truly yours,

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

RYDAL MOUNT, May 20, 1819.

Canto First.

'Tis spent—this burning day of June !
Soft darkness o'er its latest gleams is stealing ;
The buzzing dor-hawk, round and round, is wheeling,—
That solitary bird
Is all that can be heard 5
In silence deeper far than that of deepest noon !

Confiding Glow-worms, 'tis a night
Propitious to your earth-born light !
But where the scattered stars are seen
In hazy straits the clouds between, 10
Each, in his station twinkling not,
Seems changed into a pallid spot.
The mountains against heaven's grave
weight

Rise up, and grow to wondrous height.
The air, as in a lion's den, 15
Is close and hot ;—and now and then Comes a tired and sultry breeze
With a haunting and a panting,
Like the stifling of disease ;
But the dews allay the heat, 20
And the silence makes it sweet.

Hush, there is some one on the stir !
'Tis Benjamin the Waggoner ;
Who long hath trod this toilsome way,
Companion of the night and day. 25
That far-off tinkling's drowsy cheer,
Mixed with a faint yet grating sound
In a moment lost and found,

The Wain announces—by whose side
 Along the banks of Rydal Mere 30
 He paces on, a trusty Guide,— Listen! you can scarcely hear!
 Hither he his course is bending;—
 Now he leaves the lower ground,
 And up the craggy hill ascending 35
 Many a stop and stay he makes,
 Many a breathing-fit he takes;
 Steep the way and wearisome,
 Yet all the while his whip is dumb!

The Horses have worked with right good-will, 40
 And so have gained the top of the hill;
 He was patient, they were strong,
 And now they smoothly glide along,
 Recovering breath, and pleased to win
 The praises of mild Benjamin. 45 Heaven shield him from mishap and snare!

But why so early with this prayer?—
 Is it for threatenings in the sky?
 Or for some other danger nigh?
 No; none is near him yet, though he 50
 Be one of much infirmity;
 For at the bottom of the brow,
 Where once the DOVE and OLIVE-BOUGH
 Offered a greeting of good ale
 To all who entered Grasmere Vale; 55
 And called on him who must depart
 To leave it with a jovial heart;
 There, where the DOVE and OLIVE-BOUGH
 Once hung, a Poet harbours now,
 A simple water-drinking Bard; 60
 Why need our Hero then (though frail
 His best resolves) be on his guard?
 He marches by, secure and bold;
 Yet, while he thinks on times of old,
 It seems that all looks wondrous cold; 65
 He shrugs his shoulders, shakes his head,
 And, for the honest folk within,
 It is a doubt with Benjamin
 Whether they be alive or dead!

Here is no danger,—none at all! 70
 Beyond his wish he walks secure;
 But pass a mile—and then for trial,—
 Then for the pride of self-denial;
 If he resist that tempting door,
 Which with such friendly voice will call;

If he resist those casement panes, 76
 And that bright gleam which thence will
 fall
 Upon his Leaders' bells and manes,
 Inviting him with cheerful lure:
 For still, though all be dark elsewhere, 80
 Some shining notice will be there,
 Of open house and ready fare.

The place to Benjamin right well
 Is known, and by as strong a spell
 As used to be that sign of love 85
 And hope—the OLIVE-BOUGH and DOVE;
 He knows it to his cost, good Man!
 Who does not know the famous SWAN?
 Object uncouth! and yet our boast,
 For it was painted by the Host; 90
 His own conceit the figure planned,
 'Twas coloured all by his own hand;
 And that frail Child of thirsty clay,
 Of whom I sing this rustic lay,
 Could tell with self-dissatisfaction 95
 Quaint stories of the bird's attraction!¹

Well! that is past—and in despite
 Of open door and shining light.
 And now the conqueror essays
 The long ascent of Dunmail-raise; 100
 And with his team is gentle here
 As when he clomb from Rydal Mere;
 His whip they do not dread—his voice
 They only hear it to rejoice.
 To stand or go is at their pleasure; 105
 Their efforts and their time they measure
 By generous pride within the breast;
 And while they strain, and while they rest,
 He thus pursues his thoughts at leisure.

Now am I fairly safe to-night— 110
 And with proud cause my heart is light:
 I trespassed lately worse than ever—
 But Heaven has blest a good endeavour;
 And, to my soul's content, I find
 The evil One is left behind. 115
 Yes, let my master fume and fret,
 Here am I—with my horses yet!
 My jolly team, he finds that ye
 Will work for nobody but me!

¹ This rude piece of self-taught art (such is the progress of refinement) has been supplanted by a professional production.

Full proof of this the Country gained ; 120
 It knows how ye were vexed and strained,
 And forced unworthy stripes to bear,
 When trusted to another's care.
 Here was it—on this rugged slope, Which now ye climb with heart and
 hope, 125
 I saw you, between rage and fear,
 Plunge, and fling back a spiteful ear,
 And ever more and more confused,
 As ye werè more and more abused :
 As chance would have it, passing by 130
 I saw you in that jeopardy :
 A word from me was like a charm ;
 Ye pulled together with one mind ;
 And your huge burthen, safe from harm,
 Moved like a vessel in the wind ! 135
 —Yes, without me, up hills so high
 'Tis vain to strive for mastery.
 Then grieve not, jolly team ! though tough
 The road we travel, steep, and rough ;
 Though Rydal-heights and Dunmail-raise,
 And all their fellow banks and braes, 141
 Full often make you stretch and strain,
 And halt for breath and halt again,
 Yet to their sturdiness 'tis owing
 That side by side we still are going ! 145

While Benjamin in earnest mood
 His meditations thus pursued,
 A storm, which had been smothered long,
 Was growing inwardly more strong ;
 And, in its struggles to get free, 150
 Was busily employed as he.
 The thunder had begun to growl—
 He heard not, too intent of soul ;
 The air was now without a breath—
 He marked not that 'twas still as death.
 But soon large rain-drops on his head 156
 Fell with the weight of drops of lead ;—
 He starts—and takes, at the admonition,
 A sage survey of his condition.
 The road is black before his eyes, 160
 Glimmering faintly where it lies ;
 Black is the sky—and every hill,
 Up to the sky, is blacker still—
 Sky, hill, and dale, one dismal room,
 Hung round and overhung with gloom ;
 Save that above a single height 166
 Is to be seen a lurid light,

Above Helm-crag¹—a streak half dead,
 A burning of portentous red ;
 And near that lurid light, full well 170
 The ASTROLOGER, sage Sidrophel,
 Where at his desk and book he sits,
 Puzzling aloft his curious wits ;
 He whose domain is held in common
 With no one but the ANCIENT WOMAN, 175
 Cowering beside her rifted cell,
 As if intent on magic spell ;—
 Dread pair that, spite of wind and weather,
 Still sit upon Helm-crag together !

The ASTROLOGER was not unseen 180
 By solitary Benjamin ;
 But total darkness came anon,
 And he and every thing was gone :
 And suddenly a ruffling breeze, (That would have rocked the sounding
 trees, 185
 Had aught of sylvan growth been there),
 Swept through the Hollow long and bare :
 The rain rushed down—the road was battered,
 As with the force of billows shattered ;
 The horses are dismayed, nor know 190
 Whether they should stand or go ;
 And Benjamin is groping near them,
 Sees nothing, and can scarcely hear them.
 He is astounded,—wonder not,—
 With such a charge in such a spot ; 195
 Astounded in the mountain gap
 With thunder-peals, clap after clap,
 Close-treading on the silent flashes—
 And somewhere, as he thinks, by crashes
 Among the rocks ; with weight of rain,
 And sullen motions long and slow, 201
 That to a dreary distance go—
 Till, breaking in upon the dying strain,
 A rending o'er his head begins the fray
 again.

Meanwhile, uncertain what to do, 205
 And oftentimes compelled to halt,
 The horses cautiously pursue
 Their way, without mishap or fault ;

¹ A mountain of Grasmere, the broken summit of which presents two figures, full as distinctly shaped as that of the famous Cobbler near Ar-rquhar in Scotland.

And now have reached that pile of stones,
 Heaped over brave King Dunmail's bones,
 He who had once supreme command, 211
 Last king of rocky Cumberland ;
 His bones, and those of all his Power,
 Slain here in a disastrous hour !

When, passing through this narrow strait, 215

Stony, and dark, and desolate,
 Benjamin can faintly hear
 A voice that comes from some one near,
 A female voice:—"Who'er you be,
 Stop," it exclaimed, "and pity me!" 220
 And less in pity than in wonder,
 Amid the darkness and the thunder,
 The Waggoner, with prompt command,
 Summons his horses to a stand.

While, with increasing agitation, 225
 The Woman urged her supplication,
 In rueful words, with sobs between—
 The voice of tears that fell unseen ;
 There came a flash—a startling glare,
 And all Seat-Sandal was laid bare ! 230
 'Tis not a time for nice suggestion,
 And Benjamin, without a question,
 Taking her for some way-worn rover,
 Said, "Mount, and get you under cover!"

Another voice, in tone as hoarse 235
 As a swoln brook with rugged course,
 Cried out, "Good brother, why so fast?
 I've had a glimpse of you—avast!
 Or, since it suits you to be civil,
 Take her at once—for good and evil!" 240

"It is my Husband," softly said
 The Woman, as if half afraid :
 By this time she was snug within,
 Through help of honest Benjamin ;
 She and her Babe, which to her breast 245
 With thankfulness the Mother pressed ;
 And now the same strong voice more near
 Said cordially, "My Friend, what cheer?
 Rough doings these ! as God's my judge,
 The sky owes somebody a grudge ! 250
 We've had in half an hour or less
 A twelvemonth's terror and distress !"

Then Benjamin entreats the Man
 Would mount, too, quickly as he can :
 The Sailor—Sailor now no more, 255
 But such he had been heretofore—

To courteous Benjamin replied,
 "Go you your way, and mind not me ;
 For I must have, whate'er betide,
 My Ass and fifty things beside,— 260
 Go, and I'll follow speedily !"

The Waggon moves—and with its load
 Descends along the sloping road ;
 And the rough Sailor instantly
 Turns to a little tent hard by : 265
 For when, at closing-in of day,
 The family had come that way,
 Green pasture and the soft warm air
 Tempted them to settle there.—
 Green is the grass for beast to graze, 270
 Around the stones of Dunmail-raise !

The Sailor gathers up his bed,
 Takes down the canvas overhead ;
 And after farewell to the place,
 A parting word—though not of grace, 275
 Pursues, with Ass and all his store,
 The way the Waggon went before.

Canto Second.

If Wytheburne's modest House of prayer,
 As lowly as the lowliest dwelling,
 Had, with its belfry's humble stock,
 A little pair that hang in air,
 Been mistress also of a clock, 5
 (And one, too, not in crazy plight), Twelve strokes that clock would have been telling

Under the brow of old Helvellyn—
 Its bead-roll of midnight,
 Then, when the Hero of my tale 10
 Was passing by, and, down the vale
 (The vale now silent, hushed, I ween, As if a storm had never been)
 Proceeding with a mind at ease ;
 While the old Familiar of the seas, 15
 Intent to use his utmost haste,
 Gained ground upon the Waggon fast,
 And gives another lusty cheer ;
 For, spite of rumbling of the wheels,
 A welcome greeting he can hear ;— 20
 It is a fiddle in its glee
 Dinning from the CHERRY TREE !

Thence the sound—the light is there—
 As Benjamin is now aware,
 Who, to his inward thoughts confined, 25

Had almost reached the festive door,
When, startled by the Sailor's roar,
He hears a sound and sees the light,
And in a moment calls to mind
That 'tis the village MERRY-NIGHT !¹ 30

Although before in no dejection,
At this insidious recollection
His heart with sudden joy is filled,—
His ears are by the music thrilled,
His eyes take pleasure in the road 35
Glittering before him bright and broad ;
And Benjamin is wet and cold,
And there are reasons manifold That make the good, tow'rds which he's yearning,
Look fairly like a lawful earning. 40

Nor has thought time to come and go,
To vibrate between yes and no ;
For, cries the Sailor, "Glorious chance
That blew us hither !—let him dance,
Who can or will !—my honest soul, 45
Our treat shall be a friendly bowl !"
He draws him to the door—"Come in, Come, come," cries he to Benjamin !
And Benjamin—ah, woe is me !
Gave the word—the horses heard 50
And halted, though reluctantly.

"Blithe souls and lightsome hearts have we Feasting at the CHERRY TREE !"
This was the outside proclamation,
This was the inside salutation ; 55
What bustling—jostling—high and low !
A universal overflow !
What tankards foaming from the tap !
What store of cakes in every lap !
What thumping—stumping—overhead !
The thunder had not been more busy :
With such a stir you would have said, 62
This little place may well be dizzy !
'Tis who can dance with greatest vigour—
'Tis what can be most prompt and eager ;
As if it heard the fiddle's call, 66
The pewter clatters on the wall ;
The very bacon shows its feeling,
Swinging from the smoky ceiling !

A steaming bowl, a blazing fire, 70
What greater good can heart desire ?
'Twere worth a wise man's while to try
The utmost anger of the sky :
To seek for thoughts of a gloomy cast,
If such the bright amends at last. 75
Now should you say I judge amiss,
The CHERRY TREE shows proof of this ;
For soon, of all the happy there,
Our Travellers are the happiest pair ;
All care with Benjamin is gone— 80
A Cæsar past the Rubicon !
He thinks not of his long, long, strife ;—
The Sailor, Man by nature gay,
Hath no resolves to throw away ;
And he hath now forgot his Wife, 85
Hath quite forgotten her—or may be Thinks her the luckiest soul on earth,
Within that warm and peaceful berth,
Under cover,
Terror over, 90
Sleeping by her sleeping Baby.

With bowl that sped from hand to hand,
The gladdest of the gladsome band,
Amid their own delight and fun,
They hear—when every dance is done, 95
When every whirling bout is o'er—
The fiddle's *squeak*²—that call to bliss,
Ever followed by a kiss ;
They envy not the happy lot,
But enjoy their own the more ! 100

While thus our jocund Travellers fare,
Up springs the Sailor from his chair—
Limps (for I might have told before That he was lame) across the floor—
Is gone—returns—and with a prize ; 105
With what?—a Ship of lusty size ;
A gallant stately Man-of-war,
Fixed on a smoothly-sliding car.
Surprise to all, but most surprise
To Benjamin, who rubs his eyes, 110
Not knowing that he had befriended
A Man so gloriously attended !

"This," cries the Sailor, "a Third-rate is—
Stand back, and you shall see her gratis !

¹ A term well known in the North of England, and applied to rural Festivals where young persons meet in the evening for the purpose of dancing.

² At the close of each strathspey, or jig, a particular note from the fiddle summons the Rustic to the agreeable duty of saluting his partner.

This was the Flag-ship at the Nile, 115
The VANGUARD—you may smirk and
smile,

But, pretty Maid, if you look near,
You'll find you've much in little here !
A nobler ship did never swim,
And you shall see her in full trim : 120
I'll set, my friends, to do you honour,
Set every inch of sail upon her."
So said, so done ; and masts, sails, yards,
He names them all ; and interlards
His speech with uncouth terms of art, 125 Accomplished in the showman's part ;
And then, as from a sudden check,
Cries out—" 'Tis there, the quarter-deck
On which brave Admiral Nelson stood—A sight that would have roused your blood ! 130

One eye he had, which, bright as ten,
Burned like a fire among his men ;
Let this be land, and that be sea,
Here lay the French—and thus came we !"

Hushed was by this the fiddle's sound,
The dancers all were gathered round, 136
And such the stillness of the house,
You might have heard a nibbling mouse ;
While, borrowing helps where'er he may,
The Sailor through the story runs 140
Of ships to ships and guns to guns ;
And does his utmost to display
The dismal conflict, and the might
And terror of that marvellous night !
"A bowl, a bowl of double measure," 145
Cries Benjamin, "a draught of length !
To Nelson, England's pride and treasure,
Her bulwark and her tower of strength !"
When Benjamin had seized the bowl,
The mastiff, from beneath the waggon,
Where he lay, watchful as a dragon, 151
Rattled his chain ;—'twas all in vain,
For Benjamin, triumphant soul !
He heard the monitory growl ;
Heard—and in opposition quaffed 155
A deep, determined, desperate draught !
Nor did the battered Tar forget,
Or flinch from what he deemed his debt :
Then, like a hero crowned with laurel,
Back to her place the ship he led ; 160
Wheeled her back in full apparel ;
And so, flag flying at mast head,

Re-yoked her to the Ass :—anon
Cries Benjamin, "We must be gone."
Thus, after two hours' hearty stay, 165
Again behold them on their way !

Canto Third.

RIGHT gladly had the horses stirred,
When they the wished-for greeting heard,
The whip's loud notice from the door,
That they were free to move once more.
You think, those doings must have bred 5
In them disheartening doubts and dread ;
No, not a horse of all the eight,
Although it be a moonless night,
Fears either for himself or freight ;
For this they know (and let it hide, 10
In part, the offences of their guide)
That Benjamin, with clouded brains,
Is worth the best with all their pains ;
And, if they had a prayer to make,
The prayer would be that they may take
With him whatever comes in course, 16
The better fortune or the worse ;
That no one else may have business near
them,
And, drunk or sober, he may steer them.

So forth in dauntless mood they fare, 20
And with them goes the guardian pair.

Now, heroes, for the true commotion,
The triumph of your late devotion !
Can aught on earth impede delight,
Still mounting to a higher height ; 25
And higher still—a greedy flight !
Can any low-born care pursue her,
Can any mortal clog come to her ?
No notion have they—not a thought,
That is from joyless regions brought ! 30
And, while they coast the silent lake,
Their inspiration I partake ;
Share their empyreal spirits—yea,
With their enraptured vision see—
O fancy—what a jubilee ! 35
What shifting pictures—clad in gleams
Of colour bright as feverish dreams !
Earth, spangled sky, and lake serene,
Involved and restless all—a scene
Pregnant with mutual exaltation, 40
Rich change, and multiplied creation !
This sight to me the Muse imparts ;—
And then, what kindness in their hearts !

What tears of rapture, what vow-making,
 Profound entreaties, and hand-shaking!
 What solemn, vacant, interlacing, 46
 As if they'd fall asleep embracing!
 Then, in the turbulence of glee,
 And in the excess of amity,
 Says Benjamin, "That Ass of thine, 50
 He spoils thy sport, and hinders mine:
 If he were tethered to the waggon,
 He'd drag as well what he is dragging;
 And we, as brother should with brother,
 Might trudge it alongside each other!" 55

Forthwith, obedient to command,
 The horses made a quiet stand;
 And to the waggon's skirts was tied
 The Creature, by the Mastiff's side,
 The Mastiff wondering, and perplexed 60
 With dread of what will happen next;
 And thinking it but sorry cheer
 To have such company so near!

This new arrangement made, the Wain
 Through the still night proceeds again;
 No moon hath risen her light to lend; 66
 But indistinctly may be kenned
 The VANGUARD, following close behind, Sails spread, as if to catch the wind!

"Thy wife and child are snug and warm, 70
 Thy ship will travel without harm;
 I like," said Benjamin, "her shape and stature:
 And this of mine—this bulky creature
 Of which I have the steering—this,
 Seen fairly, is not much amiss! 75
 We want your streamers, friend, you
 know;
 But, altogether as we go,
 We make a kind of handsome show!
 Among these hills, from first to last,
 We've weathered many a furious blast;
 Hard passage forcing on, with head 81
 Against the storm, and canvas spread.
 I hate a boaster; but to thee Will say't, who know'st both land and
 sea,
 The unluckiest hulk that stems the brine
 Is hardly worse beset than mine, 86
 When cross-winds on her quarter beat;
 And, fairly lifted from my feet,

I stagger onward—heaven knows how;
 But not so pleasantly as now: 90
 Poor pilot I, by snows confounded,
 And many a foundrous pit surrounded!
 Yet here we are, by night and day Grinding through rough and smooth our
 way; 94
 Through foul and fair our task fulfilling;
 And long shall be so yet—God willing!"

"Ay," said the Tar, "through fair and foul—
 But save us from yon screeching owl!"
 That instant was begun a fray
 Which called their thoughts another way:
 The Mastiff, ill-conditioned car! 101
 What must he do but growl and snarl,
 Still more and more dissatisfied
 With the meek comrade at his side!
 Till, not incensed though put to proof, 105
 The Ass, uplifting a hind hoof,
 Salutes the Mastiff on the head;
 And so were better manners bred,
 And all was calmed and quieted.

"Yon screech-owl," says the Sailor, turning 110
 Back to his former cause of mourning,
 "Yon owl!—pray God that all be well!
 'Tis worse than any funeral bell;
 As sure as I've the gift of sight,
 We shall be meeting ghosts to-night!" 115
 —Said Benjamin, "This whip shall lay
 A thousand, if they cross our way.
 I know that Wanton's noisy station,
 I know him and his occupation;
 The jolly bird hath learned his cheer 120
 Upon the banks of Windermere;
 Where a tribe of them make merry,
 Mocking the Man that keeps the ferry;
 Hallooing from an open throat,
 Like travellers shouting for a boat. 125
 —The tricks he learned at Windermere
 This vagrant owl is playing here—
 That is the worst of his employment:
 He's at the top of his enjoyment!"

This explanation stilled the alarm, 130
 Cured the foreboder like a charm;
 This, and the manner, and the voice,
 Summoned the Sailor to rejoice;
 His heart is up—he fears no evil
 From life or death, from man or devil;

He wheels—and, making many stops, 136
Brandished his crutch against the mountain tops ;

And, while he talked of blows and scars,
Benjamin, among the stars,
Beheld a dancing—and a glancing ; 140
Such retreating and advancing
As, I ween, was never seen
In bloodiest battle since the days of Mars !

Canto Fourth.

THUS they, with freaks of proud delight,
Beguile the remnant of the night ;
And many a snatch of jovial song
Regales them as they wind along ;
While to the music, from on high, 5
The echoes make a glad reply.—
But the sage Muse the revel heeds
No farther than her story needs ;
Nor will she servilely attend
The loitering journey to its end. 10
—Blithe spirits of her own impel
The Muse, who scents the morning air,
To take of this transported pair
A brief and unreprieved farewell ;
To quit the slow-paced waggon's side, 15
And wander down yon hawthorn dell,
With murmuring Greta for her guide.
—There doth she ken the awful form
Of Raven-crag—black as a storm—
Glimmering through the twilight pale ; 20
And Ghimmer-crag,¹ his tall twin brother,
Each peering forth to meet the other :—
And, while she roves through St. John's
Vale,

Along the smooth unpathwayed plain,
By sheep-track or through cottage lane, 25
Where no disturbance comes to intrude
Upon the pensive solitude,
Her unsuspecting eye, perchance,
With the rude shepherd's favoured glance,
Beholds the faeries in array, 30
Whose party-coloured garments gay
The silent company betray :
Red, green, and blue ; a moment's sight !
For Skiddaw-top with rosy light
Is touched—and all the band take flight.
—Fly also, Muse ! and from the dell 36
Mount to the ridge of Nathdale Fell ;

¹ The crag of the ewe lamb.

Thence look thou forth o'er wood and lawn

Hoar with the frost-like dews of dawn ;
Across yon meadowy bottom look, 40
Where close fogs hide their parent brook ;
And see, beyond that hamlet small
The ruined towers of Threlkeld-hall,
Lurking in a double shade,
By trees and lingering twilight made ! 45
There, at Blencathara's rugged feet,
Sir Lancelot gave a safe retreat
To noble Clifford ; from annoy
Concealed the persecuted boy,
Well pleased in rustic garb to feed 50
His flock, and pipe on shepherd's reed
Among this multitude of hills,
Crag, woodlands, waterfalls, and rills ;
Which soon the morning shall enfold,
From east to west, in ample vest 55
Of massy gloom and radiance bold.

The mists, that o'er the streamlet's bed
Hung low, begin to rise and spread ;
Even while I speak, their skirts of grey
Are smitten by a silver ray ; 60
And, lo !—up Castrigg's naked steep (Where, smoothly urged, the vapours
sweep

Along—and scatter and divide,
Like fleecy clouds self-multiplied)
The stately waggon is ascending, 65
With faithful Benjamin attending, Apparent now beside his team—
Now lost amid a glittering steam :
And with him goes his Sailor-friend,
By this time near their journey's end ; 70
And, after their high-minded riot,
Sickening into thoughtful quiet ;
As if the morning's pleasant hour
Had for their joys a killing power.
And sooth for Benjamin a vein 75
Is opened of still deeper pain,
As if his heart by notes were stung
From out the lowly hedge-rows flung ;
As if the warbler lost in light 80
Reprieved his soarings of the night,
In strains of rapture pure and holy Upbraided his distempered folly.

 Drooping is he, his step is dull ;
 But the horses stretch and pull ;

With increasing vigour climb,	85	Which he stifles, moody man !
Eager to repair lost time ;		With all the patience that he can ;	135
Whether, by their own desert,		To the end that, at your meeting,
Knowing what cause there is for shame,		He may give thee decent greeting.
They are labouring to avert		There he is—resolved to stop,
As much as may be of the blame,	90	Till the waggon gains the top ;
Which, they foresee, must soon alight		But stop he cannot—must advance :	140
Upon his head, whom, in despite		Him Benjamin, with lucky glance,
Of all his failings, they love best ;		Espies—and instantly is ready,
Whether for him they are distrest ;		Self-collected, poised, and steady :
Or, by length of fasting roused,	95	And, to be the better seen,
Are impatient to be housed :		Issues from his radiant shroud,	145
Up against the hill they strain		From his close-attending cloud,
Tugging at the iron chain,		With careless air and open mien..
Tugging all with might and main,		Erect his port, and firm his going ;
Last and foremost, every horse	100	So struts yon cock that now is crowing ;
To the utmost of his force !		And the morning light in grace	150
And the smoke and respiration,		Strikes upon his lifted face,
Rising like an exhalation,		Hurrying the pallid hue away
Blend with the mist—a moving shroud		That might his trespasses betray.
To form, an undissolving cloud ;	105	But what can all avail to clear him,
Which, with slant ray, the merry sun		Or what need of explanation,	155
Takes delight to play upon.		Parley or interrogation?
Never golden-haired Apollo,		For the Master sees, alas !
Pleased some favourite chief to follow		That unhappy Figure near him,
Through accidents of peace or war,	110	Limping o'er the dewy grass,
In a perilous moment threw		Where the road it fringes, sweet,	160
Around the object of his care		Soft and cool to way-worn feet ;
Veil of such celestial hue ;		And, O indignity ! an Ass,
Interposed so bright a screen—		By his noble Mastiff's side,
Him and his enemies between !	115	Tethered to the waggon's tail :
		And the ship, in all her pride,	165
Alas ! what boots it?—who can hide,		Following after in full sail !
When the malicious Fates are bent		Not to speak of babe and mother ;
On working out an ill intent?		Who, contented with each other,
Can destiny be turned aside?		And snug as birds in leafy arbour,
No—sad progress of my story !	120	Find, within, a blessed harbour !	170
Benjamin, this outward glory		With eager eyes the Master pries ;
Cannot shield thee from thy Master,		Looks in and out, and through and
Who from Keswick has pricked forth,		through ;
Sour and surly as the north ;		Says nothing—till at last he spies
And, in fear of some disaster,	125	A wound upon the Mastiff's head,
Comes to give what help he may,		A wound where plainly might be read	175
And to hear what thou canst say ;		What feats an Ass's hoof can do !
If, as needs he must forbode,		But drop the rest :—this aggravation,
Thou hast been loitering on the road !		This complicated provocation,
His fears, his doubts, may now take		A hoard of grievances unsealed ;
flight—	130	All past forgiveness it repealed ;	180
The wished-for object is in sight ;		And thus, and through distempered blood
Yet, trust the Muse, it rather hath		On both sides, Benjamin the good,
Stirred him up to livelier wrath ;

The patient, and the tender-hearted,
 Was from his team and waggon parted ;
 When duty of that day was o'er, 185
 Laid down his whip—and served no more.—
 Nor could the waggon long survive,
 Which Benjamin had ceased to drive :
 It lingered on ;—guide after guide
 Ambitiously the office tried ; 190
 But each unmanageable hill
 Called for his patience and his skill ;—
 And sure it is that through this night,
 And what the morning brought to light,
 Two losses had we to sustain, 195
 We lost both WAGGONER and WAIN !

Accept, O Friend, for praise or blame,
 The gift of this adventurous song ;
 A record which I dared to frame, 199
 Though timid scruples checked me long ;
 They checked me—and I left the theme Untouched ;—in spite of many a gleam
 Of fancy which thereon was shed,
 Like pleasant sunbeams shifting still Upon the side of a distant hill : 205
 But Nature might not be gainsaid ;
 For what I have and what I miss
 I sing of these ;—it makes my bliss !
 Nor is it I who play the part,
 But a shy spirit in my heart, 210
 That comes and goes—will sometimes leap
 From hiding-places ten years deep ;
 Or haunts me with familiar face,
 Returning, like a ghost unaid,
 Until the debt I owe be paid. 215
 Forgive me then ; for I had been
 On friendly terms with this Machine :
 In him, while he was wont to trace Our roads, through many a long year's
 space,
 A living almanack had we ; 220
 We had a speaking diary,
 That in this uneventful place,
 Gave to the days a mark and name
 By which we knew them when they came.

—Yes, I, and all about me here, 225
 Through all the changes of the year,
 Had seen him through the mountains go,
 In pomp of mist or pomp of snow,
 Majestically huge and slow :
 Or with a milder grace adorning 230
 The landscape of a summer's morning ;
 While Grasmere smoothed her liquid
 plain
 The moving image to detain ;
 And mighty Fairfield, with a chime
 Of echoes, to his march kept time ; 235
 When little other business stirred,
 And little other sound was heard ;
 In that delicious hour of balm,
 Stillness, solitude, and calm,
 While yet the valley is arrayed, 240
 On this side with a sober shade ;
 On that is prodigally bright—
 Crag, lawn, and wood—with rosy light.
 —But most of all, thou lordly Wain !
 I wish to have thee here again, 245
 When windows flap and chimney roars,
 And all is dismal out of doors ;
 And, sitting by my fire, I see Eight sorry carts, no less a train !
 Unworthy successors of thee, 250 Come straggling through the wind and
 rain :
 And oft, as they pass slowly on,
 Beneath my windows, one by one,
 See, perched upon the naked height
 The summit of a cumbrous freight, 255
 A single traveller—and there
 Another ; then perhaps a pair—
 The lame, the sickly, and the old ;
 Men, women, heartless with the cold ;
 And babes in wet and starveling plight ;
 Which once, be weather as it might, 261
 Had still a nest within a nest,
 Thy shelter—and their mother's breast !
 Then most of all, then far the most,
 Do I regret what we have lost ; 265
 Am grieved for that unhappy sin
 Which robbed us of good Benjamin ;—
 And of his stately Charge, which none
 Could keep alive when He was gone !

POEMS OF THE IMAGINATION.

I.

THERE WAS A BOY.

[Composed November or December, 1798.
Published 1800.]

THERE was a Boy; ye knew him well, ye cliffs
And islands of Winander!—many a time,
At evening, when the earliest stars began
To move along the edges of the hills,
Rising or setting, would he stand alone, 5
Beneath the trees, or by the glimmering
lake;
And there, with fingers interwoven, both
hands Pressed closely palm to palm and to his mouth
Uplifted, he, as through an instrument,
Blew mimic hootings to the silent owls, 10
That they might answer him.—And they would shout
Across the watery vale, and shout again, Responsive to his call,—with quivering
peals,
And long halloos, and screams, and echoes
loud
Redoubled and redoubled; concourse
wild 15
Of jocund din! And, when there came a pause
Of silence such as baffled his best skill:
Then sometimes, in that silence, while he
hung
Listening, a gentle shock of mild surprise
Has carried far into his heart the voice 20
Of mountain-torrents; or the visible cene
Would enter unawares into his mind
With all its solemn imagery, its rocks,
Its woods, and that uncertain heaven
received
Into the bosom of the steady lake. 25

This boy was taken from his mates, and
died
In childhood, ere he was full twelve years
old.
Pre-eminent in beauty is the vale
Where he was born and bred: the churchyard hangs
Upon a slope above the village-school; 30
And through that churchyard when my way has led
On summer-evenings, I believe that there
A long half-hour together I have stood Mute—looking at the grave in which he
lies!

TO THE CUCKOO.

[Composed March 23–26, 1802.—Published 1807.]

O BLITHE New-comer! I have heard,
I hear thee and rejoice.
O Cuckoo! shall I call thee Bird,
Or but a wandering Voice?
While I am lying on the grass 5
Thy twofold shout I hear;
From hill to hill it seems to pass
At once far off, and near.
Though babbling only to the Vale,
Of sunshine and of flowers, 10
Thou bringest unto me a tale
Of visionary hours.
Thrice welcome, darling of the Spring!
Even yet thou art to me
No bird, but an invisible thing, 15
A voice, a mystery;
The same whom in my schoolboy days
I listened to; that Cry
Which made me look a thousand ways
In bush, and tree, and sky. 20

Cock*

To seek thee did I often rove
Through woods and on the green ;
And thou wert still a hope, a love ;
Still longed for, never seen.

And I can listen to thee yet ; 25
Can lie upon the plain
And listen, till I do beget
That golden time again.

O blessèd Bird ! the earth we pace
Again appears to be 30
An unsubstantial, faery place ;
That is fit home for Thee !

III.

A NIGHT-PIECE.

[Composed January 25, 1798.—Published 1815.]

——THE sky is overcast
With a continuous cloud of texture close, Heavy and wan, all whitened by the Moon,

Which through that veil is indistinctly
seen,

A dull, contracted circle, yielding light 5
So feebly spread that not a shadow falls, Chequering the ground—from rock, plant, tree, or tower.

At length a pleasant instantaneous gleam Startles the pensive traveller while he treads

His lonesome path, with unobserving eye Bent earthwards ; he looks up—the clouds are split 11

Asunder,—and above his head he sees
The clear Moon, and the glory of the heavens.

There in a black-blue vault she sails along,
Followed by multitudes of stars, that, small
And sharp, and bright, along the dark abyss 16

Drive as she drives : how fast they wheel
away,

Yet vanish not !—the wind is in the tree,
But they are silent ;—still they roll along Immeasurably distant ; and the vault, 20
Built round by those white clouds, enormous clouds,

Still deepens its unfathomable depth.

At length the Vision closes ; and the mind,

Not undisturbed by the delight it feels,
Which slowly settles into peaceful calm,
Is left to muse upon the solemn scene. 26

IV.

AIREY-FORCE VALLEY.

[Composed ? — Published 1842.]

——NOT a breath of air
Ruffles the bosom of this leafy glen.
From the brook's margin, wide around,
the trees

Are steadfast as the rocks ; the brook itself,
Old as the hills that feed it from afar, 5
Doth rather deepen than disturb the calm Where all things else are still and motion-
less.

And yet, even now, a little breeze, per-
chance

Escaped from boisterous winds that rage without,

Has entered, by the sturdy oaks unfelt, 10
But to its gentle touch how sensitive Is the light ash ! that, pendent from the
brow

Of yon dim cave, in seeming silence makes
A soft eye-music of slow-waving boughs,
Powerful almost as vocal harmony 15
To stay the wanderer's steps and soothe his thoughts.

YEW-TREES.

[Composed 1803.—Published 1815.]

THERE is a Yew-tree, pride of Lorton Vale, Which to this day stands single, in the midst

Of its own darkness, as it stood of yore :
Not loth to furnish weapons for the bands
Of Umfraville or Percy ere they marched To Scotland's heaths ; or those that crossed the sea 6

And drew their sounding bows at Azincour,

Perhaps at earlier Crecy, or Poitiers.
Of vast circumference and gloom profound
This solitary Tree ! a living thing 10

Produced too slowly ever to decay ;
Of form and aspect too magnificent
To be destroyed. But worthier still of note

Are those fraternal Four of Borrowdale,
 Joined in one solemn and capacious grove;
 Huge trunks! and each particular trunk a growth 16
 Of intertwined fibres serpentine
 Up-coiling, and inveterately convolved;
 Nor uninformed with Phantasy, and looks That threaten the profane; a pillared
 shade, 20
 Upon whose grassless floor of red-brown
 hue,
 By sheddings from the pining umbrage tinged
 Perennially—beneath whose sable roof
 Of boughs, as if for festal purpose decked
 With unrejoicing berries—ghostly Shapes
 May meet at noontide; Fear and trembling Hope, 26
 Silence and Foresight; Death the Skeleton
 And Time the Shadow;—there to celebrate,
 As in a natural temple scattered o'er
 With altars undisturbed of mossy stone,
 United worship; or in mute repose 31
 To lie, and listen to the mountain flood Murmuring from Glaramara's inmost caves.

NUTTING.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

—It seems a day

(I speak of one from many singled out)
 One of those heavenly days that cannot die;
 When, in the eagerness of boyish hope,
 I left our cottage-threshold, sallying forth
 With a huge wallet o'er my shoulders slung,
 A nutting-crook in hand; and turned my
 steps 7
 Tow'rd some far-distant wood, a Figure quaint,
 Tricked out in proud disguise of cast-off
 weeds
 Which for that service had been husbanded, 10
 By exhortation of my frugal Dame—
 Motley accoutrement, of power to smile
 At thorns, and brakes, and brambles,— and in truth
 More ragged than need was! O'er path-less rocks,

Through beds of matted fern, and tangled thickets, 15
 Forcing my way, I came to one dear nook
 Unvisited, where not a broken bough Drooped with its withered leaves, un-gracious sign
 Of devastation; but the hazels rose Tall and erect, with tempting clusters
 hung, 20
 A virgin scene!—A little while I stood, Breathing with such suppression of the
 heart
 As joy delights in; and with wise restraint
 Voluptuous, fearless of a rival, eyed
 The banquet;—or beneath the trees I sate
 Among the flowers, and with the flowers
 I played; 26
 A temper known to those who, after long
 And weary expectation, have been blest
 With sudden happiness beyond all hope.
 Perhaps it was a bower beneath whose
 leaves 30
 The violets of five seasons re-appear
 And fade, unseen by any human eye;
 Where fairy water-breaks do murmur on
 For ever; and I saw the sparkling foam,
 And—with my cheek on one of those green
 stones 35
 That, fleeced with moss, under the shady
 trees,
 Lay round me, scattered like a flock of sheep—
 I heard the murmur and the murmuring
 sound,
 In that sweet mood when pleasure loves to pay Tribute to ease; and, of its joy secure, 40
 The heart luxuriates with indifferent
 things,
 Wasting its kindness on stocks and stones,
 And on the vacant air. Then up I rose,
 And dragged to earth both branch and bough, with crash 44
 And merciless ravage: and the shady nook
 Of hazels, and the green and mossy bower,
 Deformed and sullied, patiently gave up
 Their quiet being: and unless I now Confound my present feelings with the
 past,
 Ere from the mutilated bower I turned 50
 Exulting, rich beyond the wealth of kings,

I felt a sense of pain when I beheld
 The silent trees, and saw the intruding
 sky.—
 Then, dearest Maiden, move along these shades 54
 In gentleness of heart; with gentle hand
 Touch—for there is a spirit in the woods.

THE SIMPLON PASS.

[Composed 1799 (? 1804).—Published 1845.]

———BROOK and road

Were fellow-travellers in this gloomy Pass,
 And with them did we journey several
 hours
 At a slow step. The immeasurable height
 Of woods decaying, never to be decayed, 5
 The stationary blasts of waterfalls,
 And in the narrow rent, at every turn,
 Winds thwarting winds bewildered and
 forlorn,
 The torrents shooting from the clear blue
 sky,
 The rocks that muttered close upon our ears, 10
 Black drizzling crags that spake by the wayside
 As if a voice were in them, the sick sight
 And giddy prospect of the raving stream,
 The unfettered clouds and region of the
 heavens,
 Tumult and peace, the darkness and the
 light— 15
 Were all like workings of one mind, the features
 Of the same face, blossoms upon one tree,
 Characters of the great Apocalypse,
 The types and symbols of Eternity,
 Of first, and last, and midst, and without
 end. 20

VIII.

[Composed 1804.—Published 1807.]

SHE was a Phantom of delight
 When first she gleamed upon my sight;
 A lovely Apparition, sent
 To be a moment's ornament;
 Her eyes as stars of Twilight fair; 5
 Like Twilight's, too, her dusky hair;

But all things else about her drawn
 From May-time and the cheerful Dawn;
 A dancing Shape, an Image gay,
 To haunt, to startle, and way-lay. 10

I saw her upon nearer view,
 A Spirit, yet a Woman too!
 Her household motions light and free,
 And steps of virgin-liberty;
 A countenance in which did meet 15
 Sweet records, promises as sweet;
 A Creature not too bright or good
 For human nature's daily food;
 For transient sorrows, simple wiles, Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles. 20

And now I see with eye serene
 The very pulse of the machine;
 A Being breathing thoughtful breath,
 A Traveller between life and death;
 The reason firm, the temperate will, 25
 Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill;
 A perfect Woman, nobly planned,
 To warn, to comfort, and command;
 And yet a Spirit still, and bright
 With something of angelic light. 30

IX.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1807.]

O NIGHTINGALE! thou surely art
 A creature of a "fiery heart":—
 These notes of thine—they pierce and pierce;
 Tumultuous harmony and fierce!
 Thou sing'st as if the God of wine 5
 Had helped thee to a Valentine;
 A song in mockery and despite
 Of shades, and dews, and silent night;
 And steady bliss, and all the loves
 Now sleeping in these peaceful groves. 10
 I heard a Stock-dove sing or say
 His homely tale, this very day;
 His voice was buried among trees,
 Yet to be come-at by the breeze:
 He did not cease; but cooed—and cooed;
 And somewhat pensively he wooed: 16
 He sang of love, with quiet blending,
 Slow to begin, and never ending;
 Of serious faith, and inward glee;
 That was the song—the song for me! 20

X.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

THREE years she grew in sun and shower,
Then Nature said, "A lovelier flower
On earth was never sown;
This Child I to myself will take;
She shall be mine, and I will make A Lady of my own. 5

"Myself will to my darling be Both law and impulse: and with me
The Girl, in rock and plain,
In earth and heaven, in glade and bower,
Shall feel an overseeing power 11
To kindle or restrain.

"She shall be sportive as the fawn
That wild with glee across the lawn
Or up the mountain springs; 15
And hers shall be the breathing balm,
And hers the silence and the calm
Of mute insensate things.

"The floating clouds their state shall lend
To her; for her the willow bend; 20
Nor shall she fail to see
Even in the motions of the Storm
Grace that shall mould the Maiden's
form
By silent sympathy.

"The stars of midnight shall be dear 25
To her; and she shall lean her ear
In many a secret place
Where rivulets dance their wayward round,
And beauty born of murmuring sound Shall pass into her face. 30

"And vital feelings of delight
Shall rear her form to stately height,
Her virgin bosom swell;
Such thoughts to Lucy I will give While she and I together live 35
Here in this happy dell."

Thus Nature spake—The work was done—
How soon my Lucy's race was run!
She died, and left to me
This heath, this calm, and quiet scene; 40
The memory of what has been,
And never more will be.

XI.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

A SLUMBER did my spirit seal;
I had no human fears:
She seemed a thing that could not feel
The touch of earthly years.

No motion has she now, no force; 5
She neither hears nor sees;
Rollo'd round in earth's diurnal course,
With rocks, and stones, and trees. the clouds touch

XII.

[Composed 1804.—Published 1807.]

I WANDERED lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host, of golden daffodils;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees, 5
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the milky way,
They stretched in never-ending line
Along the margin of a bay: 10
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced; but they
Out-did the sparkling waves in glee:
A poet could not but be gay, 15
In such a jocund company:
I gazed—and gazed—but little thought
What wealth the show to me had brought:

For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood, 20
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;
And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.

XIII.

THE REVERIE OF POOR SUSAN.

At the corner of Wood Street, when daylight appears,
Hangs a Thrush that sings loud, it has sung for three years:

Sun looks song - In Mercer St - O Sullivan.

Poor Susan has passed by the spot, and has heard
In the silence of morning the song of the Bird.

'Tis a note of enchantment; what ails her? She sees 5
A mountain ascending, a vision of trees;
Bright volumes of vapour through Lothbury glide,
And a river flows on through the vale of Cheapside.

Green pastures she views in the midst of the dale,
Down which she so often has tripped with her pail; 10
And a single small cottage, a nest like a dove's,
The one only dwelling on earth that she loves.

She looks, and her heart is in heaven:
but they fade,
The mist and the river, the hill and the
shade:
The stream will not flow, and the hill will not rise, 15
And the colours have all passed away from her eyes!

XIV.

POWER OF MUSIC.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1807.]

AN Orpheus! an Orpheus! yes, Faith may grow bold,
And take to herself all the wonders of
old;—
Near the stately Pantheon you'll meet with the same
In the street that from Oxford hath borrowed its name.

His station is there; and he works on the crowd, 5
He sways them with harmony merry and
loud;
He fills with his power all their hearts to the brim—
Was aught ever heard like his fiddle and
him?

What an eager assembly! what an empire is this!

The weary have life, and the hungry have
bliss; 10
The mourner is cheered, and the anxious have rest;
And the guilt-burthened soul is no longer oppress.

As the Moon brightens round her the clouds of the night,
So He, where he stands, is a centre of light;
It gleams on the face, there, of duskybrowed Jack, 15
And the pale-visaged Baker's, with basket on back.

That errand-bound 'Prentice was passing in haste—
What matter! he's caught—and his time runs to waste;
The Newsman is stopped, though he stops on the fret;
And the half-breathless Lamplighter—
he's in the net! 20

The Porter sits down on the weight which
he bore;
The Lass with her barrow wheels hither her store;—
If a thief could be here he might pilfer at
ease;
She sees the Musician, 'tis all that she sees!

He stands, backed by the wall;—he abates not his din; 25
His hat gives him vigour, with boons dropping in,
From the old and the young, from the poorest; and there!
The one-pennied Boy has his penny to
spare.

O blest are the hearers, and proud be the
hand
Of the pleasure it spreads through so thankful a band; 30
I am glad for him, blind as he is!—all the while
If they speak 'tis to praise, and they praise with a smile.

That tall Man, a giant in bulk and in height,
 Not an inch of his body is free from delight;
 Can he keep himself still, if he would?
 oh, not he! 35
 The music stirs in him like wind through a tree.

Mark that Cripple who leans on his crutch; like a tower
 That long has leaned forward, leans hour after hour!—
 That Mother, whose spirit in fetters is
 bound,
 While she dandles the Babe in her arms to the sound. 40
 Now, coaches and chariots! roar on like a
 stream;
 Here are twenty souls happy as souls in
 a dream:
 They are deaf to your murmurs—they care not for you,
 Nor what ye are flying, nor what ye pursue!

XV.

STAR-GAZERS.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1807.]

WHAT crowd is this? what have we here!
 we must not pass it by;
 A Telescope upon its frame, and pointed to the sky:
 Long is it as a barber's pole, or mast of little boat,
 Some little pleasure-skiff, that doth on Thames's waters float.
 The Showman chooses well his place, 'tis Leicester's busy Square; 5
 And is as happy in his night, for the heavens are blue and fair;
 Calm, though impatient, is the crowd;
 each stands ready with the fee,
 And envies him that's looking;—what an insight must it be!
 Yet, Showman, where can lie the cause?
 Shall thy Implement have blame,

A boaster that, when he is tried, fails, and is put to shame? 10
 Or is it good as others are, and be their eyes in fault?
 Their eyes, or minds? or, finally, is yon resplendent vault?

Is nothing of that radiant pomp so good as we have here?
 Or gives a thing but small delight that never can be dear?
 The silver moon with all her vales, and hills of mightiest fame, 15 Doth she betray us when they're seen? or are they but a name?

Or is it rather that Conceit rapacious is
 and strong,
 And bounty never yields so much but it seems to do her wrong?
 Or is it that, when human Souls a journey long have had
 And are returned into themselves, they cannot but be sad? 20

Or must we be constrained to think that these Spectators rude, Poor in estate, of manners base, men of the multitude,
 Have souls which never yet have risen,
 and therefore prostrate lie?
 No, no, this cannot be;—men thirst for power and majesty!

Does, then, a deep and earnest thought the blissful mind employ 25
 Of him who gazes, or has gazed? a grave and steady joy,
 That doth reject all show of pride, admits no outward sign,
 Because not of this noisy world, but silent and divine!

Whatever be the cause, 'tis sure that they who pry and pore
 Seem to meet with little gain, seem less happy than before: 30
 One after One they take their turn, nor have I one espied
 That doth not slackly go away, as if dissatisfied.

WRITTEN IN MARCH,

WHILE RESTING ON THE BRIDGE AT THE FOOT OF BROTHER'S WATER.

[Composed April 16, 1802.—Published 1807.]

THE Cock is crowing,
The stream is flowing,
The small birds twitter,
The lake doth glitter,
The green field sleeps in the sun ; 5
The oldest and youngest Are at work with the strongest ;
The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising ;
There are forty feeding like one ! 10
Like an army defeated
The snow hath retreated,
And now doth fare ill
On the top of the bare hill ;
The Ploughboy is whooping—anon—anon : 16
There's joy in the mountains ;
There's life in the fountains ;
Small clouds are sailing,
Blue sky prevailing ;
The rain is over and gone ! 20

XVII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

LYRE ! though such power do in thy magic
live
As might from India's farthest plain Recall the not unwilling Maid,
Assist me to detain
The lovely Fugitive : 5
Check with thy notes the impulse which,
betrayed
By her sweet farewell looks, I longed to
aid.
Here let me gaze enrapt upon that eye,
The impregnable and awe-inspiring fort
Of contemplation, the calm port 10
By reason fenced from winds that sigh
Among the restless sails of vanity.
But if no wish be hers that we should
part,
A humbler bliss would satisfy my heart.
Where all things are so fair, 15

Enough by her dear side to breathe the
air

Of this Elysian weather ;
And on or in, or near, the brook, espy
Shađe upon the sunshine lying Faint and somewhat pensively ;
And downward Image gaily vying 21
With its upright living tree
'Mid silver clouds, and openings of blue
sky
As soft almost and deep as her cerulean
eye.

Nor less the joy with many a glance 25
Cast up the Stream or down at her beseeching,
To mark its eddying foam-balls prettily distrest
By ever-changing shape and want of rest ;
Or watch, with mutual teaching,
The current as it plays 30
In flashing leaps and stealthy creeps
Adown a rocky maze ;
Or note (translucent summer's happiest
chance !)
In the slope-channel floored with pebbles
bright,
Stones of all hues, gem emulous of gem,
So vivid that they take from keenest
sight 36
The liquid veil that seeks not to hide
them.

BEGGARS.

[Composed March 13, 14, 1802.—Published 1807.]

SHE had a tall man's height or more ;
Her face from summer's noontide heat
No bonnet shaded, but she wore
A mantle, to her very feet
Descending with a graceful flow, 5
And on her head a cap as white as new-fallen snow.
Her skin was of Egyptian brown :
Haughty, as if her eye had seen
Its own light to a distance thrown,
She towered, fit person for a Queen 10
To lead those ancient Amazonian files ;
Or ruling Bandit's wife among the Grecian
isles.

Advancing, forth she stretched her hand
 And begged an alms with doleful plea
 That ceased not; on our English land 15
 Such woes, I knew, could never be;
 And yet a boon I gave her, for the creature
 Was beautiful to see—a weed of glorious feature.

I left her, and pursued my way;
 And soon before me did espy 20
 A pair of little Boys at play,
 Chasing a crimson butterfly;
 The taller followed with his hat in hand, Wreathed round with yellow flowers the gayest of the land.

The other wore a rimless crown 25
 With leaves of laurel stuck about;
 And while both followed up and down,
 Each whooping with a merry shout,
 In their fraternal features I could trace Unquestionable lines of that wild Suppliant's face. 30

Yet they, so blithe of heart, seemed fit
 For finest tasks of earth or air:
 Wings let them have, and they might flit
 Precursors to Aurora's car, Scattering fresh flowers; though happier far, I ween, 35
 To hunt their fluttering game o'er rock and level green.

They dart across my path—but lo,
 Each ready with a plaintive whine!
 Said I, "not half an hour ago
 Your Mother has had alms of mine." 40
 "That cannot be," one answered—"she is
 dead;"—
 I looked reproof—they saw—but neither hung his head.

"She has been dead, Sir, many a day."—
 "Hush, boys! you're telling me a lie;
 It was your Mother, as I say!" 45
 And, in the twinkling of an eye,
 "Come! come!" cried one, and without more ado
 Off to some other play the joyous Vagrants flew!

XIX.

SEQUEL TO THE FOREGOING.

COMPOSED MANY YEARS AFTER.

[Composed 1817.—Published 1827.]

WHERE are they now, those wanton Boys?
 For whose free range the dædal earth
 Was filled with animated toys,
 And implements of frolic mirth;
 With tools for ready wit to guide; 5
 And ornaments of seemlier pride,
 More fresh, more bright, than princes
 wear;
 For what one moment flung aside,
 Another could repair;
 What good or evil have they seen 10
 Since I their pastime witnessed here,
 Their daring wiles, their sportive cheer?
 I ask—but all is dark between!

They met me in a genial hour,
 When universal nature breathed 15
 As with the breath of one sweet flower,—
 A time to overrule the power
 Of discontent, and check the birth
 Of thoughts with better thoughts at strife,
 The most familiar bane of life 20
 Since parting Innocence bequeathed Mortality to Earth!
 Soft clouds, the whitest of the year,
 Sailed through the sky—the brooks ran
 clear;

The lambs from rock to rock were bound-
 ing; 25
 With songs the budded groves resound-
 ing;
 And to my heart are still endeared
 The thoughts with which it then was cheered;

The faith which saw that gladsome pair
 Walk through the fire with unsinged hair.
 Or, if such faith must needs deceive— 31
 Then, Spirits of beauty and of grace,
 Associates in that eager chase;
 Ye, who within the blameless mind
 Your favourite seat of empire find— 35
 Kind Spirits! may we not believe That they, so happy and so fair Through your sweet influence, and the
 care

Of pitying Heaven, at least were free
 From touch of deadly injury? 40
 Destined, whate'er their earthly doom,
 For mercy and immortal bloom?

XX.

GIPSIES.

[Composed 1807.—Published 1807.]

YET are they here the same unbroken knot

Of human Beings, in the self-same spot!
 Men, women, children, yea the frame
 Of the whole spectacle the same!

Only their fire seems bolder, yielding
 light, 5

Now deep and red, the colouring of night;
 That on their Gipsy-faces falls,
 Their bed of straw and blanket-walls.

—Twelve hours, twelve bounteous hours are gone, while I

Have been a traveller under open sky, 10
 Much witnessing of change and cheer,
 Yet as I left I find them here!

The weary Sun betook himself to rest;—
 Then issued Vesper from the fulgent west, Outshining like a visible God 15

The glorious path in which he trod.
 And now, ascending, after one dark hour
 And one night's diminution of her power,

Behold the mighty Moon! this way
 She looks as if at them—but they 20

Regard not her:—oh, better wrong and
 strife

(By nature transient) than this torpid
 life;

Life which the very stars reprove
 As on their silent tasks they move!

Yet, witness all that stirs in heaven or
 earth! 25

In scorn I speak not;—they are what their
 birth

And breeding suffer them to be;
 Wild outcasts of society!

XXI.

RUTH.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

WHEN Ruth was left half desolate,
 Her Father took another Mate;

And Ruth, not seven years old,
 A slighted child, at her own will Went wandering over dale and hill, 5
 In thoughtless freedom, bold.

And she had made a pipe of straw,
 And music from that pipe could draw
 Like sounds of winds and floods;
 Had built a bower upon the green, 10
 As if she from her birth had been An infant of the woods.

Beneath her father's roof, alone
 She seemed to live; her thoughts her
 own;

Herself her own delight; 15
 Pleased with herself, nor sad, nor gay;

And, passing thus the live-long day,
 She grew to woman's height.

There came a Youth from Georgia's
 shore—

A military casque he wore, 20
 With splendid feathers drest;
 He brought them from the Cherokees;

The feathers nodded in the breeze,
 And made a gallant crest.

From Indian blood you deem him sprung:
 But no! he spake the English tongue, 26
 And bore a soldier's name;

And, when America was free
 From battle and from jeopardy,
 He 'cross the ocean came. 30

With hues of genius on his cheek
 In finest tones the Youth could speak:
 —While he was yet a boy,

The moon, the glory of the sun,
 And streams that murmur as they run, 35
 Had been his dearest joy.

He was a lovely Youth! I guess 40
 The panther in the wilderness
 Was not so fair as he;

And, when he chose to sport and play, 40
 No dolphin ever was so gay
 Upon the tropic sea.

Among the Indians he had fought,
 And with him many tales he brought
 Of pleasure and of fear; 45

Such tales as told to any maid
 By such a Youth, in the green shade,
 Were perilous to hear.

- He told of girls—a happy rout !
 Who quit their fold with dance and shout,
 Their pleasant Indian town, 54
 To gather strawberries all day long ;
 Returning with a choral song
 When daylight is gone down.
- He spake of plants that hourly change 55
 Their blossoms, through a boundless range
 Of intermingling hues ;
 With budding, fading, faded flowers
 They stand the wonder of the bowers
 From morn to evening dews. 60
- He told of the magnolia, spread High as a cloud, high over head !
 The cypress and her spire ;
 —Of flowers that with one scarlet gleam
 Cover a hundred leagues, and seem 63
 To set the hills on fire.
- The Youth of green savannahs spake,
 And many an endless, endless lake,
 With all its fairy crowds
 Of islands, that together lie 70
 As quietly as spots of sky
 Among the evening clouds.
- “How pleasant,” then he said, “it were
 A fisher or a hunter there,
 In sunshine or in shade 75
 To wander with an easy mind ;
 And build a household fire, and find
 A home in every glade !
- “What days and what bright years ! Ah
 me !
 Our life were life indeed, with thee 80
 So passed in quiet bliss,
 And all the while,” said he, “to know
 That we were in a world of woe,
 On such an earth as this !”
- And then he sometimes interwove 85
 Fond thoughts about a father’s love :
 “For there,” said he, “are spun
 Around the heart such tender ties,
 That our own children to our eyes
 Are dearer than the sun. 90
- “Sweet Ruth ! and could you go with me
 My helpmate in the woods to be,
 Our shed at night to rear ;
 Or run, my own adopted bride,
 A sylvan huntress at my side, 95
 And drive the flying deer !
- “Beloved Ruth !”—No more he said.
 The wakeful Ruth at midnight shed
 A solitary tear :
 She thought again—and did agree 100
 With him to sail across the sea,
 And drive the flying deer.
- “And now, as fitting is and right,
 We in the church our faith will plight,
 A husband and a wife.” 105
 Even so they did ; and I may say
 That to sweet Ruth that happy day
 Was more than human life.
- Through dream and vision did she sink,
 Delighted all the while to think 110
 That on those lonesome floods,
 And green savannahs, she should share
 His board with lawful joy, and bear
 His name in the wild woods.
- But, as you have before been told, 115
 This Stripling, sportive, gay, and bold,
 And, with his dancing crest,
 So beautiful, through savage lands
 Had roamed about, with vagrant bands
 Of Indians in the West. 120
- The wind, the tempest roaring high,
 The tumult of a tropic sky,
 Might well be dangerous food
 For him, a Youth to whom was given
 So much of earth—so much of heaven, 125
 And such impetuous blood.
- Whatever in those climes he found Irregular in sight or sound
 Did to his mind impart
 A kindred impulse, seemed allied 130
 To his own powers, and justified
 The workings of his heart.
- Nor less, to feed voluptuous thought,
 The beauteous forms of nature wrought,
 Fair trees and gorgeous flowers ; 135
 The breezes their own languor lent ;
 The stars had feelings, which they sent Into those favoured bowers.
- Yet, in his worst pursuits I ween
 That sometimes there did intervene 140
 Pure hopes of high intent :
 For passions linked to forms so fair
 And stately needs must have their share
 Of noble sentiment.

- But ill he lived, much evil saw, 145
 With men to whom no better law
 Nor better life was known ;
 Deliberately, and undeceived,
 Those wild men's vices he received,
 And gave them back his own. 150
- His genius and his moral frame
 Were thus impaired, and he became
 The slave of low desires :
 A Man who without self-control 155
 Would seek what the degraded soul Unworthily admires.
- And yet he with no feigned delight
 Had wooed the Maiden, day and night
 Had loved her, night and morn :
 What could he less than love a Maid 160
 Whose heart with so much nature played?
 So kind and so forlorn !
- Sometimes, most earnestly, he said,
 "O Ruth ! I have been worse than dead ;
 False thoughts, thoughts bold and vain,
 Encompassed me on every side 166
 When I, in confidence and pride,
 Had crossed the Atlantic main.
- "Before me shone a glorious world—
 Fresh as a banner bright, unfurled 170
 To music suddenly :
 I looked upon those hills and plains,
 And seemed as if let loose from chains,
 To live at liberty.
- "No more of this ; for now, by thee 175
 Dear Ruth ! more happily set free
 With nobler zeal I burn ;
 My soul from darkness is released,
 Like the whole sky when to the east
 The morning doth return." 180
- Full soon that better mind was gone :
 No hope, no wish remained, not one,—
 They stirred him now no more ;
 New objects did new pleasure give,
 And once again he wished to live 185
 As lawless as before.
- Meanwhile, as thus with him it fared,
 They for the voyage were prepared,
 And went to the sea-shore,
 But, when they thither came, the Youth Deserted his poor Bride, and Ruth 191
 Could never find him more.
- God help thee, Ruth !—Such pains she had,
 That she in half a year was mad,
 And in a prison housed ; 195
 And there, with many a doleful song
 Made of wild words, her cup of wrong
 She fearfully caroused.
- Yet sometimes milder hours she knew,
 Nor wanted sun, nor rain, nor dew, 200
 Nor pastimes of the May ;
 —They all were with her in her cell ;
 And a clear brook with cheerful knell
 Did o'er the pebbles play.
- When Ruth three seasons thus had lain,
 There came a respite to her pain ; 206
 She from her prison fled ;
 But of the Vagrant none took thought ;
 And where it liked her best she sought
 Her shelter and her bread. 210
- Among the fields she breathed again :
 The master-current of her brain
 Ran permanent and free ;
 And, coming to the Banks of Tone,
 There did she rest ; and dwell alone 215
 Under the greenwood tree.
- The engines of her pain, the tools
 That shaped her sorrow, rocks and pools,
 And airs that gently stir
 The vernal leaves—she loved them still ;
 Nor ever taxed them with the ill 221
 Which had been done to her.
- A Barn her winter bed supplies ;
 But, till the warmth of summer skies
 And summer days is gone, 225
 (And all do in this tale agree)
 She sleeps beneath the greenwood tree,
 And other home hath none.
- An innocent life, yet far astray !
 And Ruth will, long before her day, 230
 Be broken down and old :
 Sore aches she needs must have ! but less
 Of mind than body's wretchedness,
 From damp, and rain, and cold.
- If she is prest by want of food, 235
 She from her dwelling in the wood Repairs to a road-side ;
 And there she begs at one steep place
 Where up and down with easy pace
 The horsemen-travellers ride. 240

That oaten pipe of hers is mute,
Or thrown away; but with a flute
Her loneliness she cheers:
This flute, made of a hemlock stalk,
At evening in his homeward walk 245
The Quantock woodman hears.

I, too, have passed her on the hills
Setting her little water-mills
By spouts and fountains wild—
Such small machinery as she turned 250
Ere she had wept, ere she had mourned,
A young and happy Child!

Farewell! and when thy days are told,
Ill-fated Ruth, in hallowed mould
Thy corpse shall buried be, 255
For thee a funeral bell shall ring,
And all the congregation sing
A Christian psalm for thee.

RESOLUTION AND INDEPENDENCE.

Composed May 3-July 4, 1802.—Published 1807.

I.

THERE was a roaring in the wind all
night;
The rain came heavily and fell in floods;
But now the sun is rising calm and bright;
The birds are singing in the distant woods;
Over his own sweet voice the Stock-dove
broods; 5
The Jay makes answer as the Magpie chatters;
And all the air is filled with pleasant noise of waters.

II.

All things that love the sun are out of doors;
The sky rejoices in the morning's birth;
The grass is bright with rain-drops;—on the moors 10
The hare is running races in her mirth;
And with her feet she from the plashy
earth
Raises a mist; that, glittering in the sun, Runs with her all the way, wherever she doth run.

unpleasant made on the
III. poets snow
I was a Traveller then upon the moor; 15
I saw the hare that raced about with joy;
I heard the woods and distant waters roar;
Or heard them not, as happy as a boy:
The pleasant season did my heart employ:
My old remembrances went from me wholly; 20
And all the ways of men, so vain and melancholy.

IV.

But, as it sometimes chanceth, from the
night
Of joy in minds that can no further go,
As high as we have mounted in delight
In our dejection do we sink as low; 25
To me that morning did it happen so;
And fears and fancies thick upon me came;
Dim sadness—and blind thoughts, I knew not, nor could name.

V.

I heard the sky-lark warbling in the sky;
And I bethought me of the playful
hare: 30
Even such a happy Child of earth am I;
Even as these blissful creatures do I fare;
Far from the world I walk, and from all
care;
But there may come another day to me—
Solitude, pain of heart, distress, and poverty. 35

VI.

My whole life I have lived in pleasant
thought,
As if life's business were a summer mood;
As if all needful things would come un-
sought
To genial faith, still rich in genial good;
But how can He expect that others should Build for him, sow for him, and at his call 41
Love him, who for himself will take no heed at all?

VII.

I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous
Boy,
The sleepless Soul that perished in his
pride;

Of Him who walked in glory and in joy 45
Following his plough, along the mountain-side :

By our own spirits are we deified :

We Poets in our youth begin in gladness ;
But thereof come in the end dependency and madness.

VIII.

Now, whether it were by peculiar grace, 50
A leading from above, a something given,
Yet it befell that, in this lonely place,
When I with these untoward thoughts had striven,

Beside a pool bare to the eye of heaven
I saw a Man before me unawares : 55
The oldest man he seemed that ever wore grey hairs.

IX.

As a huge stone is sometimes seen to lie
Couched on the bald top of an eminence ;
Wonder to all who do the same espy,
By what means it could thither come,
and whence ; 60

So that it seems a thing endowed with
sense :

Like a sea-beast crawled forth, that on a shelf

Of rock or sand reposes, there to sun itself ;

X.

Such seemed this Man, not all alive nor
dead,

Nor all asleep—in his extreme old age : 65
His body was bent double, feet and head
Coming together in life's pilgrimage ;

As if some dire constraint of pain, or rage
Of sickness felt by him in times long past,
A more than human weight upon his frame had cast. 70

XI.

Himself he propped, limbs, body, and pale face,

Upon a long grey staff of shaven wood :
And, still as I drew near with gentle pace,
Upon the margin of that moorish flood Motionless as a cloud the old Man stood,

That heareth not the loud winds when they call ; 76
And moveth all together, if it move at all.

XII.

At length, himself unsettling, he the pond
Stirred with his staff, and fixedly did look Upon the muddy water, which he coned,
As if he had been reading in a book : 81
And now a stranger's privilege I took ;
And, drawing to his side, to him did say,
"This morning gives us promise of a glorious day."

XIII.

A gentle answer did the old Man make,
In courteous speech which forth he slowly
drew : 86
And him with further words I thus bespoke,
"What occupation do you there pursue?
This is a lonesome place for one like you."
Ere he replied, a flash of mild surprise 90
Broke from the sable orbs of his yet-vidid
eyes.

XIV.

His words came feebly, from a feeble chest,
But each in solemn order followed each,
With something of a lofty utterance drest—
Choice word and measured phrase, above
the reach 95
Of ordinary men ; a stately speech ;
Such as grave Livers do in Scotland use, Religious men, who give to God and man their dues.

XV.

He told, that to these waters he had come
To gather leeches, being old and poor : 100
Employment hazardous and wearisome !
And he had many hardships to endure :
From pond to pond he roamed, from moor to moor ;
Housing, with God's good help, by choice or chance ;
And in this way he gained an honest maintenance. 105

XVI.

The old Man still stood talking by my side;
 But now his voice to me was like a stream
 Scarce heard; nor word from word could I divide;
 And the whole body of the Man did seem Like one whom I had met with in a dream; 110
 Or like a man from some far region sent,
 To give me human strength, by apt admonishment.

XVII.

My former thoughts returned: the fear that kills;
 And hope that is unwilling to be fed;
 Cold, pain, and labour, and all fleshly ills; 115
 And mighty Poets in their misery dead.
 —Perplexed, and longing to be comforted,
 My question eagerly did I renew,
 "How is it that you live, and what is it you do?"

XVIII.

He with a smile did then his words repeat;
 And said that, gathering leeches, far and wide 121
 He travelled; stirring thus about his feet
 The waters of the pools where they abide.
 "Once I could meet with them on every side;
 But they have dwindled long by slow decay; 125
 Yet still I persevere, and find them where I may."

XIX.

While he was talking thus, the lonely place,
 The old Man's shape, and speech—all troubled me:
 In my mind's eye I seemed to see him pace
 About the weary moors continually, 130
 Wandering about alone and silently.
 While I these thoughts within myself pursued,
 He, having made a pause, the same discourse renewed.

XX.

And soon with this he other matter blended,
 Cheerfully uttered, with demeanour kind,
 But stately in the main; and, when he ended, 136
 I could have laughed myself to scorn to find
 In that decrepit Man so firm a mind.
 "God," said I, "be my help and stay secure;
 I'll think of the Leech-gatherer on the lonely moor!" 140

THE THORN.

Composed 1798.—Published 1798.

I.

"THERE is a Thorn—it looks so old,
 In truth, you'd find it hard to say
 How it could ever have been young,
 It looks so old and grey.
 Not higher than a two years' child 5
 It stands erect, this aged Thorn;
 No leaves it has, no prickly points;
 It is a mass of knotted joints,
 A wretched thing forlorn.
 It stands erect, and like a stone 10
 With lichens is it overgrown.

II.

"Like rock or stone, it is o'ergrown,
 With lichens to the very top,
 And hung with heavy tufts of moss,
 A melancholy crop: 15
 Up from the earth these mosses creep,
 And this poor Thorn they clasp it round
 So close, you'd say that they are bent
 With plain and manifest intent
 To drag it to the ground; 20
 And all have joined in one endeavour
 To bury this poor Thorn for ever.

III.

"High on a mountain's highest ridge,
 Where oft the stormy winter gale
 Cuts like a scythe, while through the clouds 25
 It sweeps from vale to vale;

Not five yards from the mountain path,
 This Thorn you on your left espy;
 And to the left, three yards beyond,
 You see a little muddy pond 30
 Of water—never dry, Though but of compass small, and
 bare
 To thirsty suns and parching air.

IV.

“And, close beside this aged Thorn,
 There is a fresh and lovely sight, 35
 A beauteous heap, a hill of moss,
 Just half a foot in height.
 All lovely colours there you see,
 All colours that were ever seen;
 And mossy network too is there, 40
 As if by hand of lady fair
 The work had woven been;
 And cups, the darlings of the eye,
 So deep is their vermilion dye.

V.

“Ah me! what lovely tints are there 45
 Of olive green and scarlet bright,
 In spikes, in branches, and in stars,
 Green, red, and pearly white!
 This heap of earth o’ergrown with moss,
 Which close beside the Thorn you
 see, 50
 So fresh in all its beauteous dyes,
 Is like an infant’s grave in size,
 As like as like can be:
 But never, never any where,
 An infant’s grave was half so fair. 55

VI.

“Now would you see this aged Thorn,
 This pond, and beauteous hill of moss,
 You must take care and choose your
 time
 The mountain when to cross.
 For oft there sits between the heap, 60
 So like an infant’s grave in size,
 And that same pond of which I spoke,
 A Woman in a scarlet cloak,
 And to herself she cries,
 ‘Oh misery! oh misery!’ 65
 Oh woe is me! oh misery!’

VII.

“At all times of the day and night
 This wretched Woman thither goes;
 And she is known to every star,
 And every wind that blows; 70
 And there, beside the Thorn, she sits
 When the blue daylight’s in the skies,
 And when the whirlwind’s on the hill,
 Or frosty air is keen and still,
 And to herself she cries, 75
 ‘Oh misery! oh misery!
 Oh woe is me! oh misery!’”

VIII.

“Now wherefore, thus, by day and night,
 In rain, in tempest, and in snow,
 Thus to the dreary mountain-top 80
 Does this poor Woman go?
 And why sits she beside the Thorn
 When the blue daylight’s in the sky
 Or when the whirlwind’s on the hill,
 Or frosty air is keen and still, 85
 And wherefore does she cry?—
 O wherefore? wherefore? tell me why Does she repeat that doleful cry?”

IX.

“I cannot tell; I wish I could;
 For the true reason no one knows: 90
 But would you gladly view the spot,
 The spot to which she goes;
 The hillock like an infant’s grave,
 The pond—and Thorn, so old and grey;
 Pass by her door—’tis seldom shut— 95
 And if you see her in her hut—
 Then to the spot away!
 I never heard of such as dare Approach the spot when she is there.”

X.

“But wherefore to the mountain-top 100
 Can this unhappy Woman go,
 Whatever star is in the skies,
 Whatever wind may blow?”
 “Full twenty years are past and gone
 Since she (her name is Martha Ray) 105 Gave with a maiden’s true good-will Her company to Stephen Hill;
 And she was blithe and gay,
 While friends and kindred all approved
 Of him whom tenderly she loved. 110

XI.

“And they had fixed the wedding day,
The morning that must wed them both;
But Stephen to another Maid
Had sworn another oath;
And, with this other Maid, to church 115
Unthinking Stephen went—Poor Martha! on that woeful day
A pang of pitiless dismay
Into her soul was sent;
A fire was kindled in her breast, 120
Which might not burn itself to rest.

XII.

“They say, full six months after this,
While yet the summer leaves were green,
She to the mountain-top would go,
And there was often seen. 125
What could she seek?—or wish to hide?
Her state to any eye was plain;
She was with child, and she was mad;
Yet often was she sober sad
From her exceeding pain. 130
O guilty Father—would that death
Had saved him from that breach of faith!

XIII.

“Sad case for such a brain to hold Communion with a stirring child!
Sad case, as you may think, for one 135
Who had a brain so wild!
Last Christmas-eve we talked of this,
And grey-haired Wilfred of the glen Held that the unborn infant wrought
About its mother's heart, and brought 140
Her senses back again:
And, when at last her time drew near,
Her looks were calm, her senses clear.

XIV.

“More know I not, I wish I did,
And it should all be told to you; 145
For what became of this poor child
No mortal ever knew;
Nay—if a child to her was born
No earthly tongue could ever tell;
And if 'twas born alive or dead, 150
Far less could this with proof be said;
But some remember well
That Martha Ray about this time
Would up the mountain often climb.

XV.

“And all that winter, when at night 155
The wind blew from the mountain-peak,
'Twas worth your while, though in the dark,
The churchyard path to seek:
For many a time and oft were heard
Cries coming from the mountain head: 160
Some plainly living voices were;
And others, I've heard many swear,
Were voices of the dead:
I cannot think, whate'er they say,
They had to do with Martha Ray. 165

XVI.

“But that she goes to this old Thorn,
The Thorn which I described to you,
And there sits in a scarlet cloak,
I will be sworn is true.
For one day with my telescope, 170
To view the ocean wide and bright,
When to this country first I came,
Ere I had heard of Martha's name,
I climbed the mountain's height:—
A storm came on, and I could see 175
No object higher than my knee.

XVII.

“'Twas mist and rain, and storm and rain:
No screen, no fence could I discover;
And then the wind! in sooth, it was
A wind full ten times over. 180
I looked around, I thought I saw
A jutting crag,—and off I ran,
Head-foremost, through the driving rain,
The shelter of the crag to gain;
And, as I am a man, 185
Instead of jutting crag I found
A Woman seated on the ground.

XVIII.

“I did not speak—I saw her face;
Her face!—it was enough for me;
I turned about and heard her cry, 190
'Oh misery! oh misery!
And there she sits, until the moon
Through half the clear blue sky will go;
And when the little breezes make
The waters of the pond to shake, 195
As all the country know,

She shudders, and you hear her cry,
'Oh misery! oh misery!'"

XIX.

"But what's the Thorn? and what the pond?

And what the hill of moss to her? 200

And what the creeping breeze that comes
The little pond to stir?"

"I cannot tell; but some will say
She hanged her baby on the tree;
Some say she drowned it in the pond, 205
Which is a little step beyond:

But all and each agree,
The little Babe was buried there,
Beneath that hill of moss so fair.

XX.

"I've heard, the moss is spotted red 210

With drops of that poor infant's blood;

But kill a new-born infant thus,

I do not think she could!

Some say if to the pond you go,

And fix on it a steady view, 215

The shadow of a babe you trace,

A baby and a baby's face,

And that it looks at you;

Whene'er you look on it, 'tis plain

The baby looks at you again. 220

XXI.

"And some had sworn an oath that she

Should be to public justice brought;

And for the little infant's bones

With spades they would have sought.

But instantly the hill of moss 225

Before their eyes began to stir!

And, for full fifty yards around,

The grass—it shook upon the ground!

Yet all do still aver

The little Babe lies buried there, 230

Beneath that hill of moss so fair.

XXII.

"I cannot tell how this may be,

But plain it is the Thorn is bound

With heavy tufts of moss that strive

To drag it to the ground; 235

And this I know, full many a time,

When she was on the mountain high,

By day, and in the silent night,
When all the stars shone clear and bright,
That I have heard her cry, 240
'Oh misery! oh misery!
Oh woe is me! oh misery!'"

HART-LEAP WELL.

[Composed January or February, 1800.—Published 1800.]

Hart-Leap Well is a small spring of water, about five miles from Richmond in Yorkshire, and near the side of the road that leads from Richmond to Askrigg. Its name is derived from a remarkable Chase, the memory of which is preserved by the monuments spoken of in the second Part of the following Poem, which monuments do now exist as I have there described them.

THE Knight had ridden down from Wensley Moor

With the slow motion of a summer's cloud,

And now, as he approached a vassal's door,

"Bring forth another horse!" he cried aloud.

"Another horse!"—That shout the vassal heard 5

And saddled his best Steed, a comely grey;

Sir Walter mounted him; he was the third

Which he had mounted on that glorious day.

Joy sparkled in the prancing courser's eyes;

The horse and horseman are a happy pair; 10

But, though Sir Walter like a falcon flies,
There is a doleful silence in the air.

A rout this morning left Sir Walter's Hall,
That as they galloped made the echoes

roar;

But horse and man are vanished, one and all; 15

Such race, I think, was never seen before.

Sir Walter, restless as a veering wind,
Calls to the few tired dogs that yet remain:

Blanch, Swift, and Music, noblest of their
kind,
Follow, and up the weary mountain
strain. 20

The Knight hallooed, he cheered and chid them on
With suppliant gestures and upbraidings
stern;
But breath and eyesight fail; and, one by one,
The dogs are stretched among the mountain fern.

Where is the throng, the tumult of the race? 25
The bugles that so joyfully were blown?
—This chase it looks not like an earthly
chase;
Sir Walter and the Hart are left alone.

The poor Hart toils along the mountain-
side;
I will not stop to tell how far he fled, 30
Nor will I mention by what death he died;
But now the Knight beholds him lying
dead.

Dismounting, then, he leaned against a
thorn;
He had no follower, dog, nor man, nor
boy:
He neither cracked his whip, nor blew his
horn, 35
But gazed upon the spoil with silent joy.

Close to the thorn on which Sir Walter leaned Stood his dumb partner in this glorious feat;
Weak as a lamb the hour that it is yeaned;
And white with foam as if with cleaving sleet. 40

Upon his side the Hart was lying
stretched:
His nostril touched a spring beneath a
hill,
And with the last deep groan his breath had fetched
The waters of the spring were trembling
still.

And now, too happy for repose or rest, 45
(Never had living man such joyful lot!) Sir Walter walked all round, north, south, and west,
And gazed and gazed upon that darling
spot.

And climbing up the hill—(it was at least Four roods of sheer ascent) Sir Walter
found 50
Three several hoof-marks which the hunted Beast
Had left imprinted on the grassy ground.

Sir Walter wiped his face, and cried, “Till now
Such sight was never seen by human eyes:
Three leaps have borne him from this lofty brow 55
Down to the very fountain where he lies.

“I’ll build a pleasure-house upon this
spot,
And a small arbour, made for rural joy;
’Twill be the traveller’s shed, the pilgrim’s cot,
A place of love for damsels that are coy. 60

“A cunning artist will I have to frame
A basin for that fountain in the dell!
And they who do make mention of the same,
From this day forth, shall call it HART-LEAP WELL.

“And, gallant Stag! to make thy praises
known, 65
Another monument shall here be raised;
Three several pillars, each a rough-hewn
stone,
And planted where thy hoofs the turf have grazed.

“And in the summer-time, when days are
long,
I will come hither with my Paramour; 70
And with the dancers and the minstrel’s
song
We will make merry in that pleasant
bower.

“Till the foundations of the mountains
fail
My mansion with its arbour shall endure;—

The joy of them who till the fields of Swale, 75
And them who dwell among the woods of Ure!"

Then home he went, and left the Hart
stone-dead,
With breathless nostrils stretched above
the spring.
—Soon did the Knight perform what he had said;
And far and wide the fame thereof did ring. 80

Ere thrice the Moon into her port had steered,
A cup of stone received the living well;
Three pillars of rude stone Sir Walter
reared,
And built a house of pleasure in the dell.
And, near the fountain, flowers of stature tall 85
With trailing plants and trees were intertwined,—
Which soon composed a little sylvan hall,
A leafy shelter from the sun and wind.

And thither, when the summer days were
long, 89
Sir Walter led his wondering Paramour;
And with the dancers and the minstrel's
song
Made merriment within that pleasant
bower.

The Knight, Sir Walter, died in course of
time,
And his bones lie in his paternal vale.—
But there is matter for a second rhyme, 95
And I to this would add another tale.

PART SECOND.

The moving accident is not my trade;
To freeze the blood I have no ready arts:
'Tis my delight, alone in summer shade, 99
To pipe a simple song for thinking hearts.

As I from Hawes to Richmond did repair,
It chanced that I saw standing in a dell
Three aspens at three corners of a square;
And one, not four yards distant, near a
well.

What this imported I could ill divine: 105
And, pulling now the rein my horse to stop,

I saw three pillars standing in a line,—
The last stone-pillar on a dark hill-top.

The trees were grey, with neither arms
nor head;
Half wasted the square mound of tawny
green; 110
So that you just might say, as then I said,
"Here in old time the hand of man hath
been."

I looked upon the hill both far and near,
More doleful place did never eye survey;
It seemed as if the spring-time came not
here, 115
And Nature here were willing to decay.

I stood in various thoughts and fancies lost,
When one, who was in shepherd's garb
attired,
Came up the hollow:—him did I accost,
And what this place might be I then en-
quired. 120

The Shepherd stopped, and that same story told
Which in my former rhyme I have rehearsed.

"A jolly place," said he, "in times of old!
But something ails it now: the spot is curst.

"You see these lifeless stumps of aspen
wood— 125
Some say that they are beeches, others elms—

These were the bower; and here a mansion stood,

The finest palace of a hundred realms!
"The arbour does its own condition tell;
You see the stones, the fountain, and the
stream; 130

But as to the great Lodge! you might as
well

Hunt half a day for a forgotten dream.

"There's neither dog nor heifer, horse nor
sheep,

Will wet his lips within that cup of stone;
And oftentimes, when all are fast asleep,
This water doth send forth a dolorous groan. 136

"Some say that here a murder has been done,
And blood cries out for blood: but, for my part,
I've guessed, when I've been sitting in the sun,
That it was all for that unhappy Hart.

"What thoughts must through the creature's brain have past! 141
Even from the topmost stone, upon the steep,
Are but three bounds—and look, Sir, at this last—
O Master! it has been a cruel leap.

"For thirteen hours he ran a desperate race; 145
And in my simple mind we cannot tell
What cause the Hart might have to love this place,
And come and make his death-bed near the well.

"Here on the grass perhaps asleep he sank,
Lulled by the fountain in the summer-tide; 150
This water was perhaps the first he drank
When he had wandered from his mother's side.

"In April here beneath the flowering thorn
He heard the birds their morning carols sing;
And he perhaps, for aught we know, was born 155
Not half a furlong from that self-same spring.

"Now, here is neither grass nor pleasant shade;
The sun on drearier hollow never shone;
So will it be, as I have often said,
Till trees, and stones, and fountain, all are gone." 160

"Grey-headed Shepherd, thou hast spoken well;
Small difference lies between thy creed and mine:
This Beast not unobserved by Nature fell;
His death was mourned by sympathy divine.

"The Being that is in the clouds and air,
That is in the green leaves among the groves, 166
Maintains a deep and reverential care
For the unoffending creatures whom he loves.

"The pleasure-house is dust:—behind, before,
This is no common waste, no common gloom; 170
But Nature, in due course of time, once more Shall here put on her beauty and her bloom.

"She leaves these objects to a slow decay,
That what we are, and have been, may be known;
But at the coming of the milder day 175
These monuments shall all be overgrown.

"One lesson, Shepherd, let us two divide,
Taught both by what she shows, and what conceals;
Never to blend our pleasure or our pride
With sorrow of the meanest thing that feels." 180

SONG AT THE FEAST OF BROUGHAM CASTLE,

UPON THE RESTORATION OF LORD CLIFFORD,
THE SHEPHERD, TO THE ESTATES AND HONOURS OF HIS ANCESTORS.

Composed 1807.—Published 1807.

HIGH in the breathless Hall the Minstrel sate,
And Emont's murmur mingled with the Song.—

The words of ancient time I thus translate,
A festal strain that hath been silent long:—

"From town to town, from tower to tower,
The red rose is a gladsome flower. 6
Her thirty years of winter past,
The red rose is revived at last;
She lifts her head for endless spring,
For everlasting blossoming: 10

- Both roses flourish, red and white :
 In love and sisterly delight
 The two that were at strife are blended,
 And all old troubles now are ended.—
 Joy ! joy to both ! but most to her 15
 Who is the flower of Lancaster !
 Behold her how She smiles to-day
 On this great throng, this bright array !
 Fair greeting doth she send to all
 From every corner of the hall ; 20
 But chiefly from above the board
 Where sits in state our rightful Lord,
 A Clifford to his own restored !
- “They came with banner, spear, and
 shield ;
 And it was proved in Bosworth-field. 25
 Not long the Avenger was withstood—
 Earth helped him with the cry of blood :
 St. George was for us, and the might
 Of blessed Angels crowned the right.
 Loud voice the Land has uttered forth, 30
 We loudest in the faithful north :
 Our fields rejoice, our mountains ring,
 Our streams proclaim a welcoming ;
 Our strong-abodes and castles see
 The glory of their loyalty. 35
- “How glad is Skipton at this hour—
 Though lonely, a deserted Tower ; Knight, squire, and yeoman, page and groom :
- We have them at the feast of Brough'm.
 How glad Pendragon—though the sleep
 Of years be on her !—She shall reap 41
 A taste of this great pleasure, viewing
 As in a dream her own renewing.
 Rejoiced is Brough, right glad, I deem,
 Beside her little humble stream ; 45
 And she that keepeth watch and ward
 Her statelier Eden's course to guard ;
 They both are happy at this hour,
 Though each is but a lonely Tower :—
 But here is perfect joy and pride 50
 For one fair House by Emont's side,
 This day, distinguished without peer,
 To see her Master and to cheer—
 Him, and his Lady-mother dear !
- “Oh ! it was a time forlorn 55
 When the fatherless was born—
 Give her wings that she may fly,
- Or she sees her infant die !
 Swords that are with slaughter wild
 Hunt the Mother and the Child. 60
 Who will take them from the light ?
 —Yonder is a man in sight—Yonder is a house—but where ?
 No, they must not enter there.
 To the caves, and to the brooks, 65
 To the clouds of heaven she looks ;
 She is speechless, but her eyes
 Pray in ghostly agonies.
 Blissful Mary, Mother mild, Maid and Mother undefiled, 70
 Save a Mother and her Child !
- “Now Who is he that bounds with joy
 On Carrock's side, a Shepherd-boy ?
 No thoughts hath he but thoughts that
 pass
 Light as the wind along the grass. 75
 Can this be He who hither came
 In secret, like a smothered flame ?
 O'er whom such thankful tears were shed
 For shelter, and a poor man's bread ! 79
 God loves the Child ; and God hath willed
 That those dear words should be fulfilled,
 The Lady's words, when forced away
 The last she to her Babe did say :
 'My own, my own, thy Fellow-guest 85
 I may not be ; but rest thee, rest,
 For lowly shepherd's life is best !'
- “Alas ! when evil men are strong
 No life is good, no pleasure long.
 The Boy must part from Mosedale's groves,
 And leave Blencathara's rugged coves, 90
 And quit the flowers that summer brings
 To Glenderamakin's lofty springs ;
 Must vanish, and his careless cheer
 Be turned to heaviness and fear.
 —Give Sir Lancelot Threlkeld praise ! 95
 Hear it, good man, old in days !
 Thou tree of covert and of rest
 For this young Bird that is distrest ;
 Among thy branches safe he lay,
 And he was free to sport and play, 100
 When falcons were abroad for prey.
- “A recreant harp, that sings of fear
 And heaviness in Clifford's ear !
 I said, when evil men are strong,
 No life is good, no pleasure long, 105

A weak and cowardly untruth !
 Our Clifford was a happy Youth,
 And thankful through a weary time,
 That brought him up to manhood's prime.
 —Again he wanders forth at will, 110
 And tends a flock from hill to hill :
 His garb is humble ; ne'er was seen Such garb with such a noble mien ;
 Among the shepherd-grooms no mate
 Hath he, a Child of strength and state !
 Yet lacks not friends for simple glee, 116
 Nor yet for higher sympathy.
 To his side the fallow-deer
 Came, and rested without fear ;
 The eagle, lord of land and sea, 120
 Stooped down to pay him fealty ;
 And both the undying fish that swim
 Through Bowscale-tarn did wait on him ;
 The pair were servants of his eye
 In their immortality ; 125
 And glancing, gleaming, dark or bright,
 Moved to and fro, for his delight.
 He knew the rocks which Angels haunt
 Upon the mountains visitant ;
 He hath kenned them taking wing : 130
 And into caves where Faeries sing
 He hath entered ; and been told
 By Voices how men lived of old.
 Among the heavens his eye can see
 The face of thing that is to be ; 135
 And, if that men report him right,
 His tongue could whisper words of might.
 —Now another day is come,
 Fitter hope, and nobler doom ;
 He hath thrown aside his crook, 140
 And hath buried deep his book ;
 Armour rusting in his halls
 On the blood of Clifford calls ;—
 'Quell the Scot,' exclaims the Lance—Bear me to the heart of France, 145
 Is the longing of the Shield—
 Tell thy name, thou trembling Field ;
 Field of death, where'er thou be,
 Groan thou with our victory !
 Happy day, and mighty hour, 150
 When our Shepherd in his power,
 Mailed and horsed, with lance and sword,
 To his ancestors restored
 Like a re-appearing Star,
 Like a glory from afar, 155
 First shall head the flock of war !”

Alas ! the impassioned minstrel did not
 know
 How, by Heaven's grace, this Clifford's heart was framed :
 How he, long forced in humble walks to go,
 Was softened into feeling, soothed, and tamed. 160
 Love had he found in huts where poor men
 lie ;
 His daily teachers had been woods and rills,
 The silence that is in the starry sky,
 The sleep that is among the lonely hills.
 In him the savage virtue of the Race, 165 Revenge, and all ferocious thoughts were
 dead :
 Nor did he change ; but kept in lofty place
 The wisdom which adversity had bred.
 Glad were the vales, and every cottage-
 hearth ;
 The Shepherd-lord was honoured more and more ; 170
 And, ages after he was laid in earth,
 “The good Lord Clifford” was the name
 he bore.

LINES

COMPOSED A FEW MILES ABOVE TINTERN ABBEY, ON REVISITING THE BANKS OF
 THE WYE DURING A TOUR. JULY 13, 1798.

[Composed July 13, 1798.—Published 1798.]

FIVE years have past ; five summers, with the length
 Of five long winters ! and again I hear These waters, rolling from their mountain-springs
 With a soft inland murmur.¹—Once again
 Do I behold these steep and lofty cliffs, 5
 That on a wild secluded scene impress Thoughts of more deep seclusion ; and connect
 The landscape with the quiet of the sky.
 The day is come when I again repose
 Here, under this dark sycamore, and view

These plots of cottage-ground, these orchard-tufts, 11
Which at this season, with their unripe fruits,
Are clad in one green hue, and lose themselves
'Mid groves and copses. Once again I see
These hedge-rows, hardly hedge-rows, little lines 15
Of sportive wood run wild: these pastoral farms,
Green to the very door; and wreaths of smoke
Sent up, in silence, from among the trees!
With some uncertain notice, as might seem
Of vagrant dwellers in the houseless woods, 20
Or of some Hermit's cave, where by his fire
The Hermit sits alone.

These beauteous forms,
Through a long absence, have not been to me
As is a landscape to a blind man's eye:
But oft, in lonely rooms, and 'mid the din
Of towns and cities, I have owed to them,
In hours of weariness, sensations sweet,
Felt in the blood, and felt along the heart;
And passing even into my purer mind, 29
With tranquil restoration:—feelings too
Of unremembered pleasure: such, perhaps,
As have no slight or trivial influence
On that best portion of a good man's life,
His little, nameless, unremembered, acts
Of kindness and of love. Nor less, I trust,
To them I may have owed another gift, 36
Of aspect more sublime; that blessed mood,
In which the burthen of the mystery,
In which the heavy and the weary weight
Of all this unintelligible world, 40
Is lightened:—that serene and blessed mood,
In which the affections gently lead us on,— Until, the breath of this corporeal frame
And even the motion of our human blood
Almost suspended, we are laid asleep 45
In body, and become a living soul:
While with an eye made quiet by the power
Of harmony, and the deep power of joy,

We see into the life of things.

If this
Be but a vain belief, yet, oh! how oft— 50
In darkness and amid the many shapes
Of joyless daylight; when the fretful stir
Unprofitable, and the fever of the world,
Have hung upon the beatings of my heart—
How oft, in spirit, have I turned to thee, O sylvan Wye! thou wanderer thro' the
woods, 56
How often has my spirit turned to thee!

And now, with gleams of half-extinguished thought,
With many recognitions dim and faint,
And somewhat of a sad perplexity, 60
The picture of the mind revives again:
While here I stand, not only with the sense
Of present pleasure, but with pleasing thoughts
That in this moment there is life and food
For future years. And so I dare to hope, Though changed, no doubt, from what I was when first 66
I came among these hills; when like a roe
I bounded o'er the mountains, by the sides
Of the deep rivers, and the lonely streams,
Wherever nature led: more like a man 70
Flying from something that he dreads than one Who sought the thing he loved. For nature
then
(The coarser pleasures of my boyish days,
And their glad animal movements all gone
by)
To me was all in all.—I cannot paint 75
What then I was. The sounding cataract
Haunted me like a passion: the tall rock,
The mountain, and the deep and gloomy
wood,
Their colours and their forms, were then
to me
An appetite; a feeling and a love, 80
That had no need of a remoter charm,
By thought supplied, nor any interest Unborrowed from the eye.—That time is
past,
And all its aching joys are now no more,
And all its dizzy raptures. Not for this 85
Faint I, nor mourn nor murmur; other
gifts

Have followed; for such loss, I would believe,

Abundant recompense. For I have learned
To look on nature, not as in the hour
Of thoughtless youth; but hearing often-
times 90

The still, sad music of humanity,
Nor harsh nor grating, though of ample
power

To chasten and subdue. (And I have felt
A presence that disturbs me with the joy
Of elevated thoughts; a sense sublime 95
Of something far more deeply interfused,
Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns,
And the round ocean and the living air,
And the blue sky, and in the mind of man:
A motion and a spirit, that impels 100
All thinking things, all objects of all
thought,

And rolls through all things.) Therefore am I still

A lover of the meadows and the woods,
And mountains; and of all that we behold
From this green earth; of all the mighty
world 105

Of eye, and ear,—both what they half create,¹

And what perceive; well pleased to recognise

In nature and the language of the sense
The anchor of my purest thoughts, the nurse,

The guide, the guardian of my heart, and
soul

Of all my moral being.

Nor perchance,

If I were not thus taught, should I the
more

Suffer my genial spirits to decay:

For thou art with me here upon the banks
Of this fair river; thou my dearest Friend,
My dear, dear Friend; and in thy voice I catch 110

The language of my former heart, and read
My former pleasures in the shooting lights
Of thy wild eyes. Oh! yet a little while
May I behold in thee what I was once,

My dear, dear Sister! and this prayer I
make, 121

Knowing that Nature never did betray
The heart that loved her; 'tis her privilege,
Through all the years of this our life, to lead
From joy to joy: for she can so inform 125
The mind that is within us, so impress
With quietness and beauty, and so feed
With lofty thoughts, that neither evil
tongues,

Rash judgments, nor the sneers of selfish
men,

Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The dreary intercourse of daily life, 131
Shall e'er prevail against us, or disturb
Our cheerful faith, that all which we behold
Is full of blessings. / Therefore let the moon

Shine on thee in thy solitary walk; 135
And let the misty mountain-winds be free
To blow against thee: and, in after years,
When these wild ecstasies shall be matured
Into a sober pleasure; when thy mind
Shall be a mansion for all lovely forms, 140
Thy memory be as a dwelling-place
For all sweet sounds and harmonies; oh!
then,

If solitude, or fear, or pain, or grief,
Should be thy portion, with what healing
thoughts

Of tender joy wilt thou remember me, 145
And these my exhortations! Nor, per-
chance—

If I should be where I no more can hear Thy voice, nor catch from thy wild eyes
these gleams

Of past existence—wilt thou then forget
That on the banks of this delightful stream
We stood together; and that I, so long
A worshipper of Nature, hither came 152
Unwearied in that service: rather say
With warmer love—oh! with far deeper zeal

Of holier love. Nor wilt thou then forget
That after many wanderings, many years
Of absence, these steep woods and lofty cliffs, 157

And this green pastoral landscape, were
to me

More dear, both for themselves and for thy sake!

¹ This line has a close resemblance to an admirable line of Young's, the exact expression of which I do not recollect.

XXVII.

[Composed 1803.—Published 1807.]

It is no Spirit who from heaven hath flown,
 And is descending on his embassy ;
 Nor Traveller gone from earth the heavens to espy !
 'Tis Hesperus—there he stands with glittering crown,
 First admonition that the sun is down ! 5
 For yet it is broad day-light: clouds
 pass by ;
 A few are near him still—and now the sky,
 He hath it to himself—'tis all his own.
 O most ambitious Star ! an inquest
 wrought
 Within me when I recognised thy light ;
 A moment I was startled at the sight : 11
 And, while I gazed, there came to me a
 thought
 That I might step beyond my natural race
 As thou seem'st now to do ; might one day
 trace
 Some ground not mine ; and, strong her strength above, 15
 My Soul, an Apparition in the place, Tread there with steps that no one shall reprove !

FRENCH REVOLUTION,

AS IT APPEARED TO ENTHUSIASTS AT ITS COMMENCEMENT.¹ REPRINTED FROM
 "THE FRIEND."

[Composed 1804.—Published October 26, 1809 (The Friend); ed. 1815.]

OH ! pleasant exercise of hope and joy !
 For mighty were the auxiliars which then
 stood
 Upon our side, we who were strong in love !
 Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive,
 But to be young was very heaven !—Oh !
 times, 5
 In which the meagre, stale, forbidding ways

¹ This and the Extract, page 89, and the first Piece of this Class, are from the unpublished Poem of which some account is given in the Preface to THE EXCURSION.

Of custom, law, and statute, took at once
 The attraction of a country in romance !
 When Reason seemed the most to assert
 her rights,
 When most intent on making of herself to
 A prime Enchantress—to assist the work
 Which then was going forward in her
 name !
 Not favoured spots alone, but the whole
 earth,
 The beauty wore of promise, that which sets
 (As at some moment might not be unfelt
 Among the bowers of paradise itself) 16
 The budding rose above the rose full
 blown.
 What temper at the prospect did not wake
 To happiness unthought of ? The inert
 Were roused, and lively natures rapt away !
 They who had fed their childhood upon
 dreams, 21
 The playfellows of fancy, who had made All powers of swiftness, subtilty, and
 strength
 Their ministers,—who in lordly wise had
 stirred
 Among the grandest objects of the sense,
 And dealt with whatsoever they found
 there 26
 As if they had within some lurking right
 To wield it;—they, too, who, of gentle
 mood,
 Had watched all gentle motions, and to
 these
 Had fitted their own thoughts, schemers
 more mild, 30
 And in the region of their peaceful
 selves;—
 Now was it that both found, the meek and lofty Did both find, helpers to their heart's desire,
 And stuff at hand, plastic as they could
 wish ;
 Were called upon to exercise their skill, 35
 Not in Utopia, subterranean fields,
 Or some secreted island, Heaven knows
 where !
 But in the very world, which is the world
 Of all of us,—the place where in the end
 We find our happiness, or not at all ! 40

XXIX.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1807.]

YES, it was the mountain Echo,
Solitary, clear, profound,
Answering to the shouting Cuckoo,
Giving to her sound for sound !

Unsolicited reply 5
To a babbling wanderer sent ;
Like her ordinary cry,
Like—but oh, how different !

Hears not also mortal Life ?
Hear not we, unthinking Creatures ! 10
Slaves of folly, love, or strife—
Voices of two different natures ?

Have not we too?—yes, we have Answers, and we know not whence ;
Echoes from beyond the grave, 15
Recognised intelligence !

Such rebounds our inward ear
Catches sometimes from afar—
Listen, ponder, hold them dear ;
For of God,—of God they are. 20

TO A SKYLARK¹.

[Composed 1825.—Published 1827.]

ETHEREAL minstrel ! pilgrim of the sky !
Dost thou despise the earth where cares abound ?
Or, while the wings aspire, are heart and
eye
Both with thy nest upon the dewy
ground ?
Thy nest which thou canst drop into at
will, 5
Those quivering wings composed, that music still !

Leave to the nightingale her shady wood ;
A privacy of glorious light is thine ;
Whence thou dost pour upon the world a
flood
Of harmony, with instinct more divine ; 10

LAODAMIA.

[Composed 1814.—Published 1815.]

“ WITH sacrifice before the rising morn Vows have I made by fruitless hope inspired ;
And from the infernal Gods, 'mid shades
forlorn
Of night, my slaughtered Lord have I
required :
Celestial pity I again implore ;— 5
Restore him to my sight—great Jove, restore !”

So speaking, and by fervent love endowed With faith, the Suppliant heavenward lifts her hands ;
While, like the sun emerging from a
cloud,
Her countenance brightens—and her eye expands ; 10
Her bosom heaves and spreads, her stature
grows ;
And she expects the issue in repose.

O terror ! what hath she perceived?—O
joy !
What doth she look on?—whom doth she
behold ?
Her Hero slain upon the beach of Troy ? 15
His vital presence ? his corporeal mould ?
It is—if sense deceive her not—'tis He !
And a God leads him, wingèd Mercury !

Mild Hermes spake—and touched her with his wand
That calms all fear ; “ Such grace hath crowned thy prayer, 20
Laodamia ! that at Jove's command Thy Husband walks the paths of upper
air :
He comes to tarry with thee three hours'
space ;
Accept the gift, behold him face to face !”

Forth sprang the impassioned Queen her Lord to clasp ; 25
 Again that consummation she essayed ;
 But unsubstantial Form eludes her grasp
 As often as that eager grasp was made.
 The Phantom parts—but parts to re-unite,
 And re-assume his place before her sight.

“Protesiláus, lo ! thy guide is gone ! 31
 Confirm, I pray, the vision with thy voice :
 This is our palace,—yonder is thy throne ;
 Speak, and the floor thou tread'st on will rejoice.

Not to appal me have the gods bestowed
 This precious boon ; and blest a sad
 abode.” 36

“Great Jove, Laodamía ! doth not leave
 His gifts imperfect :—Spectre though I be,
 I am not sent to scare thee or deceive ;
 But in reward of thy fidelity. 40
 And something also did my worth obtain ;
 For fearless virtue bringeth boundless gain.

“Thou knowest, the Delphic oracle foretold
 That the first Greek who touched the Trojan strand
 Should die ; but me the threat could not withhold : 45
 A generous cause a victim did demand ;
 And forth I leapt upon the sandy plain ;
 A self-devoted chief—by Hector slain.”

“Supreme of Heroes—bravest, noblest,
 best !
 Thy matchless courage I bewail no more,
 Which then, when tens of thousands were
 deprest 51
 By doubt, propelled thee to the fatal shore ;
 Thou found'st—and I forgive thee—here
 thou art—
 A nobler counsellor than my poor heart.

“But thou, though capable of sternest
 deed, 55
 Wert kind as resolute, and good as brave ;
 And he, whose power restores thee, hath decreed Thou shouldst elude the malice of the
 grave :
 Redundant are thy locks, thy lips as fair
 As when their breath enriched Thessalian
 air. 60

“No Spectre greets me,—no vain Shadow
 this ;

Come, blooming Hero, place thee by my
 side !

Give, on this well-known couch, one nuptial kiss

To me, this day, a second time thy bride !”

Jove frowned in heaven : the conscious Parcæ threw 65
 Upon those roseate lips a Stygian hue.

“This visage tells thee that my doom is
 past :

Nor should the change be mourned, even if the joys

Of sense were able to return as fast
 And surely as they vanish. Earth destroys 70

Those raptures duly—Erebus disdains :
 Calm pleasures there abide—majestic pains.

“Be taught, O faithful Consort, to control Rebellious passion : for the Gods approve The depth, and not the tumult, of the
 soul ; 75

A fervent, not ungovernable, love.
 Thy transports moderate ; and meekly
 mourn

When I depart, for brief is my sojourn—”

“Ah wherefore?—Did not Hercules by force

Wrest from the guardian Monster of the tomb 80

Alcestis, a reanimated corse,
 Given back to dwell on earth in vernal bloom ?

Medea's spells dispersed the weight of
 years,

And Æson stood a youth 'mid youthful peers. 84

“The Gods to us are merciful—and they Yet further may relent : for mightier far Than strength of nerve and sinew, or the sway

Of magic potent over sun and star,
 Is love, though oft to agony distrest,
 And though his favourite seat be feeble woman's breast. 90

"But if thou goest, I follow—" "Peace!"
he said,—

She looked upon him and was calmed and
cheered;

The ghastly colour from his lips had fled;
In his deportment, shape, and mien,
appeared

Elysian beauty, melancholy grace, 95
Erought from a pensive though a happy
place.

He spake of love, such love as Spirits feel In worlds whose course is equable and
pure;

No fears to beat away—no strife to heal—
The past unsighed for, and the future
sure; 100

Spake of heroic arts in graver mood
Revived, with finer harmony pursued;

Of all that is most beautiful—imaged
there

In happier beauty; more pellucid streams,
An ampler ether, a diviner air, 105

And fields invested with purple gleams; Climes which the sun, who sheds the brightest day

Earth knows, is all unworthy to survey.

Yet there the Soul shall enter which hath earned

That privilege by virtue.—"Ill," said he,
"The end of man's existence I discerned,
Who from ignoble games and revelry Could draw, when we had parted, vain
delight,

While tears were thy best pastime, day
and night;

"And while my youthful peers before my
eyes 115

(Each hero following his peculiar bent)
Prepared themselves for glorious enterprise
By martial sports,—or, seated in the tent, Chieftains and kings in council were de-
tained;

What time the fleet at Aulis lay enchained.

"The wished-for wind was given :—I then revolved 121

The oracle, upon the silent sea;
And, if no worthier led the way, resolved
That, of a thousand vessels, mine should be

The foremost prow in pressing to the strand,— 125

Mine the first blood that tinged the Trojan sand.

"Yet bitter, oft-times bitter, was the pang
When of thy loss I thought, beloved Wife!
On thee too fondly did my memory hang,
And on the joys we shared in mortal life,—
The paths which we had trod—these fountains, flowers; 131

My new-planned cities, and unfinished
towers.

"But should suspense permit the Foe to
cry,

'Behold they tremble!—haughty their array,

Yet of their number no one dares to die?'
In soul I swept the indignity away: 136

Old frailties then recurred:—but lofty
thought,

In act embodied, my deliverance wrought.

"And Thou, though strong in love, art all too weak

In reason, in self-government too slow;
I counsel thee by fortitude to seek 141

Our blest re-union in the shades below.
The invisible world with thee hath sym-pathised;

Be thy affections raised and solemnised.

"Learn, by a mortal yearning, to ascend—Seeking a higher object. Love was given, Encouraged, sanctioned, chiefly for that
end; 147

For this the passion to excess was driven—
That self might be annulled: her bondage prove

The fetters of a dream opposed to love."—

Aloud she shrieked! for Hermes re-
appears! 151

Round the dear Shade she would have clung—'tis vain:

The hours are past—too brief had they been years;

And him no mortal effort can detain:

Swift, toward the realms that know not earthly day, 155

He through the portal takes his silent way,
And on the palace-floor a lifeless corpse She
lay.

Thus, all in vain exhorted and reproved,
 She perished; and, as for a wilful crime,
 By the just Gods whom no weak pity
 moved, 160
 Was doomed to wear out her appointed
 time,
 Apart from happy Ghosts, that gather
 flowers
 Of blissful quiet 'mid unfading bowers.¹
 —Yet tears to human suffering are due;
 And mortal hopes defeated and o'erthrown
 Are mourned by man, and not by man
 alone, 166
 As fondly he believes.—Upon the side
 Of Hellespont (such faith was entertained)
 A knot of spiry trees for ages grew From out the tomb of him for whom she died; 170
 And ever, when such stature they had gained
 That Ilium's walls were subject to their
 view,
 The trees' tall summits withered at the
 sight;
 A constant interchange of growth and blight!²

XXXII.

DION.

[Composed 1816.—Published 1820.]

(SEE PLUTARCH.)

[I.]

[FAIR is the Swan, whose majesty, prevailing
 O'er breezeless water, on Locarno's lake,
 Bears him on while proudly sailing
 He leaves behind a moon-illumined wake:
 Behold! the mantling spirit of reserve 5
 Fashions his neck into a goodly curve;

¹ For an account of the important changes—material as well as formal—introduced from time to time into this stanza, see Editor's note,
 p. 901.—Ed.

² For the account of these long-lived trees, see Pliny's "Natural History," lib. xvi. cap. 44; and for the features in the character of Protesilaus, see the "Iphigenia in Aulis" of Euripides. Virgil places the Shade of Laodamia in a mournful region, among unhappy Lovers,

— His Laodamia

It comes. —

An arch thrown back between luxuriant
 wings
 Of whitest garniture, like fir-tree boughs
 To which, on some unruffled morning, clings
 A flaky weight of winter's purest snows!
 —Behold!—as with a gushing impulse heaves 11
 That downy prow, and softly cleaves
 The mirror of the crystal flood,
 Vanish inverted hill, and shadowy wood,
 And pendent rocks, where'er, in gliding
 state, 15
 Winds the mute Creature without visible
 Mate
 Or Rival, save the Queen of night
 Showering down a silver light,
 From heaven, upon her chosen Favourite!]

[II.]

[So pure, so bright, so fitted to embrace Where'er he turned, a natural grace 20
 Of haughtiness without pretence,
 &c. &c. &c. (Edd. 1820, 1827, 1832).]

I.

SERENE, and fitted to embrace,
 Where'er he turned, a swan-like grace
 Of haughtiness without pretence,
 And to unfold a still magnificence,
 Was princely Dion, in the power 5
 And beauty of his happier hour.
 And what pure homage then did wait
 On Dion's virtues, while the lunar beam
 Of Plato's genius, from its lofty sphere,
 Fell round him in the grove of Academe,
 Softening their inbred dignity austere—
 That he, not too elate
 With self-sufficing solitude,
 But with majestic lowliness endued,
 Might in the universal bosom reign, 15
 And from affectionate observance gain
 Help, under every change of adverse fate.

II.

Five thousand warriors—O the rapturous
 day!
 Each crowned with flowers, and armed with spear and shield,
 Or ruder weapon which their course might
 yield, 20
 To Syracuse advance in bright array.

Who leads them on?—The anxious people
see

Long-exiled Dion marching at their head,
He also crowned with flowers of Sicily,
And in a white, far-beaming, corselet clad!
Pure transport undisturbed by doubt or
fear 26

The gazers feel; and, rushing to the plain,
Salute those strangers as a holy train Or blest procession (to the Immortals
dear)

That brought their precious liberty again.
Lo! when the gates are entered, on each
hand, 31

Down the long street, rich goblets filled with wine

In seemly order stand,
On tables set, as if for rites divine;—
And, as the great Deliverer marches by,
He looks on festal ground with fruits
bestrown; 36

And flowers are on his person thrown
In boundless prodigality;
Nor doth the general voice abstain from
prayer,

Invoking Dion's tutelary care, 40
As if a very Deity he were!

III.

Mourn, hills and groves of Attica! and mourn

Plissus, bending o'er thy classic urn!
Mourn, and lament for him whose spirit dreads

Your once sweet memory, studious walks and shades! 45

For him who to divinity aspired,
Not on the breath of popular applause,
But through dependence on the sacred laws

Framed in the schools where Wisdom dwelt retired,

Intent to trace the ideal path of right 50 (More fair than heaven's broad causeway paved with stars)

Which Dion learned to measure with sublime delight;—

But He hath overleaped the eternal bars;
And, following guides whose craft holds no consent

With aught that breathes the ethereal element, 55

Hath stained the robes of civil power
with blood,

Unjustly shed, though for the public
good.

Whence doubts that came too late, and wishes vain,

Hollow excuses, and triumphant pain;
And oft his cogitations sink as low 60

As, through the abysses of a joyless heart,
The heaviest plummet of despair can go—But whence that sudden check? that fearful start!

He hears an uncouth sound—
Anon his lifted eyes 65

Saw, at a long-drawn gallery's dusky
bound,

A Shape of more than mortal size
And hideous aspect, stalking round and
round!

A woman's garb the Phantom wore,
And fiercely swept the marble floor,—
Like Auster whirling to and fro, 71
His force on Caspian foam to try;

Or Boreas when he scours the snow
That skins the plains of Thessaly,
Or when aloft on Mænalus he stops 75
His fight, 'mid eddying pine-tree tops!

IV.

So, but from toil less sign of profit reaping,

The sullen Spectre to her purpose bowed,
Sweeping—vehemently sweeping—

No pause admitted, no design avowed! 80
"Avaunt, inexplicable Guest!—avaunt,"

Exclaimed the Chieftain—"let me rather
see

The coronal that coiling vipers make;
The torch that flames with many a lurid
flake,

And the long train of doleful pageantry 85
Which they behold, whom vengeful Furies haunt;

Who, while they struggle from the scourge to flee,

Move where the blasted soil is not unworn,

And, in their anguish, bear what other minds have borne!"

v.

But Shapes, that come not at an earthly
call, 90

Will not depart when mortal voices bid ;
Lords of the visionary eye whose lid, Once raised, remains aghast, and will not
fall !

Ye Gods, thought He, that servile Implement

Obeys a mystical intent ! 95

Your Minister would brush away
The spots, that to my soul adhere ;
But should she labour night and day,
They will not, cannot disappear ;
Whence angry perturbations,—and that
look 100

Which no philosophy can brook !

vi.

Ill-fated Chief ! there are whose hopes are built

Upon the ruins of thy glorious name ;
Who, through the portal of one moment's guilt,

Pursue thee with their deadly aim ! 105
O matchless perfidy ! portentous lust
Of monstrous crime !—that horror-striking blade,

Drawn in defiance of the Gods, hath laid
The noble Syracusan low in dust !
Shuddered the walls—the marble city
wept— 110

And sylvan places heaved a pensive sigh ;
But in calm peace the appointed Victim
slept,

As he had fallen in magnanimity ;
Of spirit too capacious to require That Destiny her course should change ;
too just 115

To his own native greatness to desire That wretched boon, days lengthened by mistrust.

So were the hopeless troubles, that involved

The soul of Dion, instantly dissolved.
Released from life and cares of princely
state, 120

He left this moral grafted on his Fate ;
"Him only pleasure leads, and peace attends,

Him, only him, the shield of Jove defends,

Whose means are fair and spotless as his ends."

XXXIII.

THE PASS OF KIRKSTONE.

[Composed 1817.—Published 1820.]

I.

WITHIN the mind strong fancies work,
A deep delight the bosom thrills,
Oft as I pass along the fork
Of these fraternal hills :

Where, save the rugged road, we find 5
No appanage of human kind,

Nor hint of man ; if stone or rock
Seem not his handy-work to mock
By something cognizably shaped ;
Mockery—or model roughly hewn, 10

And left as if by earthquake strewn,
Or from the Flood escaped :
Altars for Druid service fit ;
(But where no fire was ever lit,

Unless the glow-worm to the skies 15 Thence offer nightly sacrifice)

Wrinkled Egyptian monument ;
Green moss-grown tower ; or hoary tent ;
Tents of a camp that never shall be razed—

On which four thousand years have gazed ! 20

II.

Ye ploughshares sparkling on the slopes !
Ye snow-white lambs that trip Imprisoned 'mid the formal props
Of restless ownership !

Ye trees, that may to-morrow fall 25
To feed the insatiate Prodigal !

Lawns, houses, chattels, groves, and
fields,

All that the fertile valley shields ;
Wages of folly—baits of crime,
Of life's uneasy game the stake, 30
Playthings that keep the eyes awake

Of drowsy, dotard Time ;—
O care ! O guilt !—O vales and plains,

Here, 'mid his own unvexed domains,
A Genius dwells, that can subdue 35

At once all memory of You,—

Most potent when mists veil the sky,
Mists that distort and magnify,
While the coarse rushes, to the sweeping
breeze,
Sigh forth their ancient melodies! 40

III.

List to those shriller notes!—that march
Perchance was on the blast,
When, through this Height's inverted
arch,

Rome's earliest legion passed!
—They saw, adventurously impelled, 45
And older eyes than theirs beheld,
This block—and yon, whose church-like frame

Gives to this savage Pass its name.
Aspiring Road! that lov'st to hide
Thy daring in a vapoury bourn, 50
Not seldom may the hour return
When thou shalt be my guide:

And I (as all men may find cause,
When life is at a weary pause,
And they have panted up the hill 55
Of duty with reluctant will)

Be thankful, even though tired and faint,
For the rich bounties of constraint;
Whence oft invigorating transports flow
That choice lacked courage to bestow! 60

IV.

My Soul was grateful for delight
That wore a threatening brow;
A veil is lifted—can she slight
The scene that opens now?

Though habitation none appear, 65
The greenness tells, man must be there;
The shelter—that the perspective
Is of the clime in which we live;
Where Toil pursues his daily round;
Where Pity sheds sweet tears—and Love,
In woodbine bower or birchen grove, 71
Inflicts his tender wound.

—Who comes not hither ne'er shall know
How beautiful the world below;
Nor can he guess how lightly leaps 75
The brook adown the rocky steep.

Farewell, thou desolate Domain!
Hope, pointing to the cultured plain,
Carols like a shepherd-boy;
And who is she?—Can that be Joy! 80

Who, with a sunbeam for her guide,
Smoothly skims the meadows wide;
While Faith, from yonder opening cloud,
To hill and vale proclaims aloud,
"Whate'er the weak may dread, the wicked dare, 85
Thy lot, O Man, is good, thy portion
fair!"

XXXIV.

TO ENTERPRISE.

[Composed 1820 (?).—Published 1822.]

KEEP for the Young the impassioned
smile
Shed from thy countenance, as I see thee
stand

High on that chalky cliff of Britain's
Isle,

A slender volume grasping in thy hand—(Perchance the pages that relate 5
The various turns of Crusoe's fate)—

Ah, spare the exulting smile,
And drop thy pointing finger bright
As the first flash of beacon light;
But neither veil thy head in shadows dim,
Nor turn thy face away 11

From One who, in the evening of his day,
To thee would offer no presumptuous hymn!

I.

Bold Spirit! who art free to rove
Among the starry courts of Jove, 15
And oft in splendour dost appear Embodied to poetic eyes,

While traversing this nether sphere,
Where Mortals call thee ENTERPRISE.
Daughter of Hope! her favourite Child,
Whom she to young Ambition bore, 21

When hunter's arrow first defiled
The grove, and stained the turf with gore;
Thee wingèd Fancy took, and nursed
On broad Euphrates' palmy shore, 25

And where the mightier Waters burst
From caves of Indian mountains hoar!
She wrapped thee in a panther's skin;
And Thou, thy favourite food to win,

The flame-eyed eagle oft wouldst scare 30
From her rock-fortress in mid air,

With infant shout ; and often sweep,
 Paired with the ostrich, o'er the plain ;
 Or, tired with sport, wouldst sink asleep
 Upon the couchant lion's mane ! 35
 With rolling years thy strength increased ;
 And, far beyond thy native East,
 To thee, by varying titles known
 As variously thy power was shown,
 Did incense-bearing altars rise, 40
 Which caught the blaze of sacrifice,
 From suppliants panting for the skies !

II.

What though this ancient Earth be trod
 No more by step of Demi-god
 Mounting from glorious deed to deed 45
 As thou from clime to clime didst lead ;
 Yet still the bosom beating high,
 And the hushed farewell of an eye
 Where no procrastinating gaze
 A last infirmity betrays, 50
 Prove that thy heaven-descended sway
 Shall ne'er submit to cold decay.
 By thy divinity impelled,
 The Stripling seeks the tented field ; -
 The aspiring Virgin kneels ; and, pale 55
 With awe, receives the hallowed veil,
 A soft and tender Heroine Vowed to severer discipline ;
 Inflamed by thee, the blooming Boy
 Makes of the whistling shrouds a toy, 60
 And of the ocean's dismal breast
 A play-ground,—or a couch of rest ;
 'Mid the blank world of snow and ice,
 Thou to his dangers dost enchain
 The Chamois-chaser awed in vain 65
 By chasm or dizzy precipice ;
 And hast Thou not with triumph seen How soaring Mortals glide between
 Or through the clouds, and brave the light
 With bolder than Icarian flight ? 70
 How they, in bells of crystal, dive—
 Where winds and waters cease to strive—
 For no unholy visitings,
 Among the monsters of the Deep ;
 And all the sad and precious things 75
 Which there in ghastly silence sleep ?
 Or adverse tides and currents headed,
 And breathless calms no longer dreaded,
 In never-slackening voyage go Straight as an arrow from the bow ; 80

And, slighting sails and scorning oars,
 Keep faith with Time on distant shores ?
 —Within our fearless reach are placed
 The secrets of the burning Waste ;
 Egyptian tombs unlock their dead, 85
 Nile trembles at his fountain head ;
 Thou speak'st—and lo ! the polar Seas
 Unbosom their last mysteries.
 —But oh ! what transports, what sublime
 reward,
 Won from the world of mind, dost thou prepare 90
 For philosophic Sage ; or high-souled
 Bard
 Who, for thy service trained in lonely
 woods,
 Hath fed on pageants floating through
 the air,
 Or calentured in depth of limpid floods ;
 Nor grieves—tho' doomed thro' silent night to bear 95
 The domination of his glorious themes,
 Or struggle in the net-work of thy dreams !

III.

If there be movements in the Patriot's soul,
 From source still deeper, and of higher worth,
 'Tis thine the quickening impulse to control, 100
 And in due season send the mandate
 forth ;
 Thy call a prostrate Nation can restore,
 When but a single Mind resolves to crouch no more.

IV.

Dread Minister of wrath !
 Who to their destined punishment dost urge 105
 The Pharaohs of the earth, the men of hardened heart !
 Not unassisted by the flattering stars,
 Thou strew'st temptation o'er the path
 When they in pomp depart
 With trampling horses and refulgent cars— 110
 Soon to be swallowed by the briny surge ;
 Or cast, for lingering death, on unknown strands ;
 Or caught amid a whirl of desert sands—

An Army now, and now a living hill
That a brief while heaves with convulsive throes— 115
Then all is still ;
Or, to forget their madness and their woes,
Wrapt in a winding-sheet of spotless snows !

v.

Back flows the willing current of my Song :
If to provoke such doom the Impious
dare, 120
Why should it daunt a blameless prayer ?
—Bold Goddess ! range our Youth among ;
Nor let thy genuine impulse fail to beat
In hearts no longer young ;
Still may a veteran Few have pride 125
In thoughts whose sternness makes them
sweet ;

In fixed resolves by Reason justified ;
That to their object cleave like sleet
Whitening a pine tree's northern side,
When fields are naked far and wide, 130
And withered leaves, from earth's cold
breast
Up-caught in whirlwinds, nowhere can find rest.

VI.

But if such homage thou disdain
As doth with mellowing years agree,
One rarely absent from thy train 135
More humble favours may obtain
For thy contented Votary.
She who incites the frolic lambs
In presence of their heedless dams,
And to the solitary fawn 140
Vouchsafes her lessons, bounteous Nymph
That wakes the breeze, the sparkling lymph
Doth hurry to the lawn ;
She who inspires that strain of joyance holy
Which the sweet Bird, misnamed the melancholy, 145
Pours forth in shady groves, shall plead for me ;
And vernal mornings opening bright
With views of undefined delight,
And cheerful songs, and suns that shine
On busy days, with thankful nights, be mine. 150

VII.

But thou, O Goddess ! in thy favourite Isle (Freedom's impregnable redoubt,
The wide earth's storehouse fenced about
With breakers roaring to the gales
That stretch a thousand thousand sails) 155
Quicken the slothful, and exalt the vile !— Thy impulse is the life of Fame ;
Glad Hope would almost cease to be
If torn from thy society ;
And Love, when worthiest of his name, 160
Is proud to walk the earth with Thee !

XXXV.

TO —,

ON HER FIRST ASCENT TO THE SUMMIT OF HELVELLYN.

[Composed 1816.—Published 1820.]

INMATE of a mountain-dwelling,
Thou hast clomb aloft, and gazed
From the watch-towers of Helvellyn ;
Awed, delighted, and amazed !

Potent was the spell that bound thee 5
Not unwilling to obey ;
For blue Ether's arms, flung round thee,
Stilled the pantings of dismay.

Lo ! the dwindled woods and meadows ;
What a vast abyss is there ! 10
Lo ! the clouds, the solemn shadows,
And the glistenings—heavenly fair !

And a record of commotion
Which a thousand ridges yield ;
Ridge, and gulf, and distant ocean 15
Gleaming like a silver shield !

Maiden ! now take flight ;—inherit Alps or Andes—they are thine !
With the morning's roseate Spirit
Sweep their length of snowy line ; 20

Or survey their bright dominions
In the gorgeous colours drest
Flung from off the purple pinions,
Evening spreads throughout the west !
Thine are all the choral¹ fountains 25
Warbling in each sparry vault
Of the untrodden lunar mountains ;
Listen to their songs !—or halt,

¹ "Choral", edd. 1820, 1827 ; "coral", 1832-1849.—Ed.

To Niphates' top invited,
 Whither spiteful Satan steered ; 30
 Or descend where the ark alighted,
 When the green earth re-appeared ;
 For the power of hills is on thee,
 As was witnessed through thine eye
 Then, when old Helvellyn won thee 35
 To confess their majesty !

XXXVI.

TO A YOUNG LADY,

WHO HAD BEEN REPROACHED FOR TAKING LONG WALKS IN THE COUNTRY.

[Composed 1801 (?).—Published Morning Post,
 February 11, 1802 ; ed. 1807.]

DEAR Child of Nature, let them rail !
 —There is a nest in a green dale,
 A harbour and a hold ;
 Where thou, a Wife and Friend, shalt see Thy own heart-stirring days, and be 5
 A light to young and old.

There, healthy as a shepherd boy,
 And treading among flowers of joy
 Which at no season fade,
 Thou, while thy babes around thee cling, 10
 Shalt show us how divine a thing
 A Woman may be made.

Thy thoughts and feelings shall not die,
 Nor leave thee, when grey hairs are nigh,
 A melancholy slave ; 15
 But an old age serene and bright,
 And lovely as a Lapland night,
 Shall lead thee to thy grave.

XXXVII.

WATER FOWL.

[Composed 1812 (?)¹.—Published 1823 ; ed. 1827.]

"Let me be allowed the aid of verse to describe the evolutions which these visitants sometimes perform, on a fine day towards the close of winter."—Extract from the Author's Book on the Lakes (edition of 1823.—Ed.).

Book I., much of which was undoubtedly composed in 1800. In 1836 Wordsworth assigned them to the year 1812 ; but his memory on such matters was treacherous, and it is quite possible that they were written as far back as 1800.—Ed.

MARK how the feathered tenants of the
 flood,
 With grace of motion that might scarcely seem Inferior to angelical, prolong
 Their curious pastime ! shaping in mid air (And sometimes with ambitious wing that soars 5
 High as the level of the mountain-tops)
 A circuit ampler than the lake beneath—
 Their own domain ; but ever, while intent
 On tracing and retracing that large round,
 Their jubilant activity evolves 10
 Hundreds of curves and circlets, to and fro, Upward and downward, progress intricate Yet unperplexed, as if one spirit swayed
 Their indefatigable flight. 'Tis done—
 Ten times, or more, I fancied it had ceased ;
 But lo ! the vanished company again 16 Ascending ; they approach—I hear their
 wings,
 Faint, faint at first ; and then an eager
 sound,
 Past in a moment—and as faint again !
 They tempt the sun to sport amid their plumes ; 20
 They tempt the water, or the gleaming ice,
 To show them a fair image ; 'tis themselves,
 Their own fair forms, upon the glimmering
 ing plain,
 Painted more soft and fair as they descend
 Almost to touch ;—then up again aloft, 25
 Up with a sally and a flash of speed,
 As if they scorned both resting-place and
 rest !

XXXVIII.

VIEW FROM THE TOP OF BLACK COMB².

[Composed 1813.—Published 1815.]

THIS Height a ministering Angel might select :
 For from the summit of BLACK COMB (dread name

² Black Comb stands at the southern extremity of Cumberland : its base covers a much greater extent of ground than any other mountain in those parts ; and, from its situation, the summit commands a more extensive view than any other point in Britain.

Derived from clouds and storms!) the amplest range
 Of unobstructed prospect may be seen That British ground commands:—low dusky tracts, 5
 Where Trent is nursed, far southward!
 Cambrian hills
 To the south-west, a multitudinous show;
 And, in a line of eye-sight linked with
 these,
 The hoary peaks of Scotland that give
 birth
 To Tiviot's stream, to Annan, Tweed, and Clyde:— 10
 Crowding the quarter whence the sun comes forth
 Gigantic mountains rough with crags;
 beneath,
 Right at the imperial station's western base,
 Main ocean, breaking audibly, and stretched
 Far into silent regions blue and pale;—
 And visibly engirding Mona's Isle 16 That, as we left the plain, before our
 sight
 Stood like a lofty mount, uplifting slowly
 (Above the convex of the watery globe)
 Into clear view the cultured fields that streak 20
 Her habitable shores, but now appears
 A dwindled object, and submits to lie
 At the spectator's feet.—Yon azure ridge,
 Is it a perishable cloud? Or there
 Do we behold the line of Erin's coast? 25
 Land sometimes by the roving shepherd-
 swain
 (Like the bright confines of another world)
 Not doubtfully perceived.—Look homeward now!
 In depth, in height, in circuit, how serene
 The spectacle, how pure!—Of Nature's
 works, 30
 In earth, and air, and earth-embracing
 sea,
 A revelation infinite it seems;
 Display august of man's inheritance,
 Of Britain's calm felicity and power!

XXXIX.

THE HAUNTED TREE.

TO ———.

[Composed 1819.—Published 1820.]

THOSE silver clouds collected round the
 sun
 His mid-day warmth abate not, seeming
 less
 To overshadow than multiply his beams
 By soft reflection—grateful to the sky, To rocks, fields, woods. Nor doth our human sense 5
 Ask, for its pleasure, screen or canopy
 More ample than the time-dismantled Oak Spreads o'er this tuft of heath, which now, attired
 In the whole fulness of its bloom, affords
 Couch beautiful as e'er for earthly use 10
 Was fashioned; whether by the hand of
 Art,
 That eastern Sultan, amid flowers en-
 wrought
 On silken tissue, might diffuse his limbs
 In languor; or by Nature, for repose
 Of panting Wood-nymph, wearied with the chase. 15
 O Lady! fairer in thy Poet's sight Than fairest spiritual creature of the
 groves,
 Approach;—and, thus invited, crown with
 rest
 The noon-tide hour: though truly some there are
 Whose footsteps superstitiously avoid 20
 This venerable Tree; for, when the wind Blows keenly, it sends forth a creaking
 sound (Above the general roar of woods and crags)
 Distinctly heard from far—a doleful note!
 As if (so Grecian shepherds would have deemed) 25
 The Hamadryad, pent within, bewailed
 Some bitter wrong. Nor is it unbelieved,
 By ruder fancy, that a troubled ghost Haunts the old trunk; lamenting deeds of which The flowery ground is conscious. But no
 wind 30

Sweeps now along this elevated ridge;
Not even a zephyr stirs;—the obnoxious
Tree

Is mute; and, in his silence, would look
down,

O lovely Wanderer of the trackless hills,
On thy reclining form with more delight 35
Than his coevals in the sheltered vale
Seem to participate, the while they view
Their own far-stretching arms and leafy heads

Vividly pictured in some glassy pool,
That, for a brief space, checks the hurrying
stream! 40

XL.

THE TRIAD.

[Composed 1828.—Published 1829 (The Keepsake);
ed. 1832.]

SHOW me the noblest Youth of present
time,

Whose trembling fancy would to love
give birth;

Some God or Hero, from the Olympian
clime

Returned, to seek a Consort upon earth;
Or, in no doubtful prospect, let me see 5
The brightest star of ages yet to be,
And I will mate and match him blissfully.

I will not fetch a Naiad from a flood Pure as herself—(song lacks not mightier
power)

Nor leaf-crowned Dryad from a pathless
wood, 10

Nor Sea-nymph glistening from her coral
bower;

Mere Mortals, bodied forth in vision still,
Shall with Mount Ida's triple lustre fill
The chaster coverts of a British hill.

"Appear!—obey my lyre's command! 15
Come, like the Graces, hand in hand!

For ye, though not by birth allied,
Are Sisters in the bond of love;

Nor shall the tongue of envious pride
Presume those interweavings to reprove 20
In you, which that fair progeny of Jove Learned from the tuneful spheres that glide

In endless union, earth and sea above."

—I sing in vain;—the pines have hushed their waving:

A peerless Youth expectant at my side, 25
Breathless as they, with unabated craving
Looks to the earth, and to the vacant air;
And, with a wandering eye that seems to chide,

Asks of the clouds what occupants they
hide:—

But why solicit more than sight could
bear, 30

By casting on a moment all we dare?
Invoke we those bright Beings one by
one;

And what was boldly promised, truly shall be done.

"Fear not a constraining measure!
—Yielding to this gentle spell, 35

Lucida! from domes of pleasure,
Or from cottage-sprinkled dell,

Come to regions solitary,
Where the eagle builds her aery,

Above the hermit's long-forsaken cell!" 40

—She comes!—behold
That Figure, like a ship with snow-white
sail!

Nearer she draws; a breeze uplifts her veil;

Upon her coming wait
As pure a sunshine and as soft a gale 45

As e'er, on herbage covering earthly mould,
Tempted the bird of Juno to unfold

His richest splendour—when his veering gait

And every motion of his starry train
Seem governed by a strain 50

Of music, audible to him alone.

"O Lady, worthy of earth's proudest throne!

Nor less, by excellence of nature, fit
Beside an unambitious hearth to sit

Domestic queen, where grandeur is unknown; 55

What living man could fear
The worst of Fortune's malice, wert Thou
near,

Humbling that lily-stem, thy sceptre meek,
That its fair flowers may from his cheek

Brush the too happy tear? 60

—Queen, and handmaid lowly !
Whose skill can speed the day with lively cares,

And banish melancholy
By all that mind invents or hand prepares ;
O Thou, against whose lip, without its
smile 65

And in its silence even, no heart is proof ; Whose goodness, sinking deep, would reconcile

The softest Nursling of a gorgeous palace
To the bare life beneath the hawthorn-roof
Of Sherwood's Archer, or in caves of Wallace— 70

Who that hath seen thy beauty could content

His soul with but a glimpse of heavenly
day ?

Who that hath loved thee, but would lay His strong hand on the wind, if it were bent

To take thee in thy majesty away ? 75

—Pass onward (even the glancing deer Till we depart intrude not here ;)
That mossy slope, o'er which the woodbine throws

A canopy, is smoothed for thy repose !”

Glad moment is it when the throng 80
Of warblers in full concert strong Strive, and not vainly strive, to rout
The lagging shower, and force coy Phœbus
out,

Met by the rainbow's form divine,
Issuing from her cloudy shrine ;— 85
So may the thrillings of the lyre
Prevail to further our desire,
While to these shades a sister Nymph I
call.

“Come, if the notes thine ear may pierce,
Come, youngest of the lovely Three, 90
Submissive to the might of verse

And the dear voice of harmony,
By none more deeply felt than Thee !”
—I sang ; and lo ! from pastimes virginal
She hastens to the tents 95
Of nature, and the lonely elements.

Air sparkles round her with a dazzling sheen ;

But mark her glowing cheek, her vesture
green !

And, as if wishful to disarm
Or to repay the potent Charm, 100
She bears the stringèd lute of old romance,
That cheered the trellised arbour's privacy,
And soothed war-wearied knights in raftered hall.

How vivid, yet how delicate, her glee !
So tripped the Muse, inventress of the dance ; 105

So, truant in waste woods, the blithe Euphrosyne !

But the ringlets of that head
Why are they ungarlanded ?
Why bedeck her temples less Than the simplest shepherdess ? 110

Is it not a brow inviting Choicest flowers that ever breathed,
Which the myrtle would delight in
With Idalian rose enwreathed ?

But her humility is well content 115
With one wild floweret (call it not forlorn)
FLOWER OF THE WINDS, beneath her bosom
worn—

Yet more for love than ornament.

Open, ye thickets ! let her fly, Swift as a Thracian Nymph o'er field and
height ! 120

For She, to all but those who love her, shy,
Would gladly vanish from a Stranger's
sight ;

Though, where she is beloved and loves,
Light as the wheeling butterfly she moves ;
Her happy spirit as a bird is free, 125
That rifles blossoms on a tree, Turning them inside out with arch audacity.

Alas ! how little can a moment show
Of an eye where feeling plays
In ten thousand dewy rays ; 130

A face o'er which a thousand shadows go !
—She stops—is fastened to that rivulet's
side ;

And there (while, with sedater mien,
O'er timid waters that have scarcely left
Their birthplace in the rocky cleft 135

She bends) at leisure may be seen Features to old ideal grace allied,
Amid their smiles and dimples dignified—
Fit countenance for the soul of primal truth ;
The bland composure of eternal youth !

- What more changeful than the sea? 141
 But over his great tides
 Fidelity presides;
 And this light-hearted Maiden constant is as he.
 High is her aim as heaven above, 145
 And wide as ether her good-will;
 And, like the lowly reed, her love
 Can drink its nurture from the scantiest
 rill:
 Insight as keen as frosty star
 Is to her charity no bar, 150
 Nor interrupts her frolic graces
 When she is, far from these wild places,
 Encircled by familiar faces.
- O the charm that manners draw,
 Nature, from thy genuine law! 155
 If from what her hand would do,
 Her voice would utter, aught ensue
 Untoward or unfit;
 She, in benign affections pure,
 In self-forgetfulness secure, 160
 Sheds round the transient harm or vague mischance
 A light unknown to tutored elegance:
 Hers is not a cheek shame-stricken,
 But her blushes are joy-flushes;
 And the fault (if fault it be) 165
 Only ministers to quicken
 Laughter-loving gaiety,
 And kindle sportive wit—
 Leaving this Daughter of the mountains
 free,
 As if she knew that Oberon king of Faery
 Had crossed her purpose with some quaint vagary, 171
 And heard his viewless bands
 Over their mirthful triumph clapping
 hands.
- “Last of the Three, though eldest born,
 Reveal thyself, like pensive Morn 175
 Touched by the skylark’s earliest note,
 Ere humbler gladness be afloat.
 But whether in the semblance drest
 Of Dawn—or Eve, fair vision of the west,
 Come with each anxious hope subdued
 By woman’s gentle fortitude, 181
 Each grief, through meekness, settling into rest.
- Or I would hail thee when some high-wrought page
 Of a closed volume lingering in thy hand
 Has raised thy spirit to a peaceful stand Among the glories of a happier age.” 186
- Her brow hath opened on me—see it
 there,
 Brightening the umbrage of her hair;
 So gleams the crescent moon, that loves
 To be descried through shady groves. 190
 Tenderest bloom is on her cheek;
 Wish not for a richer streak;
 Nor dread the depth of meditative eye;
 But let thy love, upon that azure field
 Of thoughtfulness and beauty, yield 195
 Its homage offered up in purity.
 What wouldst thou more? In sunny glade,
 Or under leaves of thickest shade,
 Was such a stillness e’er diffused Since earth grew calm while angels mused? 200
 Softly she treads, as if her foot were loth
 To crush the mountain dew-drops—soon to melt
 On the flower’s breast; as if she felt That flowers themselves, whate’er their
 hue,
 With all their fragrance, all their glisten-
 ing, 205
 Call to the heart for inward listening—
 And though for bridal wreaths and tokens
 true
 Welcomed wisely; though a growth
 Which the careless shepherd sleeps on,
 As fitly spring from turf the mourner weeps on— 210
 And without wrong are cropped the marble tomb to strew.
 The Charm is over; the mute Phantoms
 gone,
 Nor will return—but droop not, favoured
 Youth;
 The apparition that before thee shone
 Obeyed a summons covetous of truth. 215
 From these wild rocks thy footsteps I will guide
 To bowers in which thy fortune may be tried,
 And one of the bright Three become thy happy Bride.

XLI.

THE WISHING-GATE.

[Composed 1823.—Published 1829 (The Keepsake);
ed. 1832.]

In the vale of Grasmere, by the side of the old highway leading to Ambleside, is a gate, which, time out of mind, has been called the Wishing-gate, from a belief that wishes formed or indulged there have a favourable issue.

HOPE rules a land for ever green :
All powers that serve the bright-eyed
Queen

Are confident and gay ;
Clouds at her bidding disappear ;
Points she to aught?—the bliss draws near,
And Fancy smooths the way. 6

Not such the land of Wishes—there Dwell fruitless day-dreams, lawless prayer,
And thoughts with things at strife ;
Yet how forlorn, should ye depart, 10
Ye superstitions of the heart,
How poor, were human life !

When magic lore abjured its might,
Ye did not forfeit one dear right,
One tender claim abate ; 15
Witness this symbol of your sway,
Surviving near the public way,
The rustic Wishing-gate !

Enquire not if the faery race
Shed kindly influence on the place, 20
Ere northward they retired ;
If here a warrior left a spell,
Panting for glory as he fell ;
Or here a saint expired.

Enough that all around is fair,
Composed with Nature's finest care, 25
And in her fondest love—
Peace to embosom and content—
To overawe the turbulent,
The selfish to reprove. 30

Yea ! even the Stranger from afar,
Reclining on this moss grown bar,
Unknowing, and unknown,
The infection of the ground partakes,
Linging for his Beloved—who makes 35
All happiness her own.

Then why should conscious Spirits fear
The mystic stirrings that are here,
The ancient faith disclaim ?
The local Genius ne'er befriends 40
Desires whose course in folly ends,
Whose just reward is shame.

Smile if thou wilt, but not in scorn,
If some, by ceaseless pains outworn,
Here crave an easier lot ; 45
If some have thirsted to renew
A broken vow, or bind a true,
With firmer, holier knot.

And not in vain, when thoughts are cast
Upon the irrevocable past, 50
Some Penitent sincere
May for a worthier future sigh,
While trickles from his downcast eye
No unavailing tear.

The Worldling, pining to be freed 55
From turmoil, who would turn or speed
The current of his fate,
Might stop before this favoured scene,
At Nature's call, nor blush to lean
Upon the Wishing-gate. 60

The Sage, who feels how blind, how weak
Is man, though loth such help to seek,
Yet, passing, here might pause,
And thirst for insight to allay 65
Misgiving, while the crimson day
In quietness withdraws ;

Or when the church-clock's knell profound
To Time's first step across the bound
Of midnight makes reply ;
Time pressing on with starry crest 70
To filial sleep upon the breast
Of dread eternity.

XLII.

THE WISHING-GATE DESTROYED.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

'Tis gone—with old belief and dream
That round it clung, and tempting scheme
Released from fear and doubt ;
And the bright landscape too must lie, 5
By this blank wall, from every eye,
Relentlessly shut out.

Bear witness ye who seldom passed
That opening—but a look ye cast
Upon the lake below,
What spirit-stirring power it gained 10
From faith which here was entertained,
Though reason might say no.

Blest is that ground, where, o'er the springs
Of history, Glory claps her wings,
Fame sheds the exulting tear; 15
Yet earth is wide, and many a nook
Unheard of is, like this, a book
For modest meanings dear.

It was in sooth a happy thought
That grafted, on so fair a spot, 20
So confident a token
Of coming good;—the charm is fled;
Indulgent centuries spun a thread,
Which one harsh day has broken.

Alas! for him who gave the word; 25
Could he no sympathy afford,
Derived from earth or heaven,
To hearts so oft by hope betrayed;
Their very wishes wanted aid
Which here was freely given? 30

Where, for the love-lorn maiden's wound,
Will now so readily be found
A balm of expectation?
Anxious for far-off children, where Shall mothers breathe a like sweet air 35
Of home-felt consolation?

And not unfelt will prove the loss
'Mid trivial care and petty cross
And each day's shallow grief;
Though the most easily beguiled 40
Were oft among the first that smiled
At their own fond belief.

If still the reckless change we mourn,
A reconciling thought may turn
To harm that might lurk here, 45
Ere judgment prompted from within Fit aims, with courage to begin,
And strength to persevere.

Not Fortune's slave is Man: our state
Enjoins, while firm resolves await 50
On wishes just and wise,
That strenuous action follow both,
And life be one perpetual growth
Of heaven-ward enterprise.

So taught, so trained, we boldly face 55
All accidents of time and place;
Whatever props may fail,
Trust in that sovereign law can spread
New glory o'er the mountain's head,
Fresh beauty through the vale. 60

That truth informing mind and heart,
The simplest cottager may part,
Ungrieved, with charm and spell;
And yet, lost Wishing-gate, to thee
The voice of grateful memory 65
Shall bid a kind farewell!¹

XLIII.

THE PRIMROSE OF THE ROCK.

A Rock there is whose homely front
The passing traveller slights;
Yet there the glow-worms hang their lamps,
Like stars, at various heights;
And one coy Primrose to that Rock 5
The vernal breeze invites.

What hideous warfare hath been waged,
What kingdoms overthrown,
Since first I spied that Primrose-tuft
And marked it for my own; 10
A lasting link in Nature's chain
From highest heaven let down!

The flowers, still faithful to the stems,
Their fellowship renew;
The stems are faithful to the root, 15
That worketh out of view;
And to the rock the root adheres
In every fibre true.

Close clings to earth the living rock,
Though threatening still to fall; 20
The earth is constant to her sphere;
And God upholds them all:
So blooms this lonely Plant, nor dreads
Her annual funeral.

Here closed the meditative strain; 25
But air breathed soft that day,
The hoary mountain-heights were cheered,
The sunny vale looked gay;
And to the Primrose of the Rock
I gave this after-lay. 30

I sang—Let myriads of bright flowers, Like Thee, in field and grove Revive unenvied ;—mightier far, Than tremblings that reprove Our vernal tendencies to hope, 35 Is God's redeeming love ;	How oft from you, derided Powers ! Comes Faith that in auspicious hours 20 Builds castles, not of air : Bodings unsanctioned by the will Flow from your visionary skill, And teach us to beware.
That love which changed—for wan disease, For sorrow that had bent O'er hopeless dust, for withered age— Their moral element, 40 And turned the thistles of a curse To types beneficent.	The bosom-weight, your stubborn gift, 25 That no philosophy can lift, Shall vanish, if ye please, Like morning mist : and, where it lay, The spirits at your bidding play In gaiety and ease. 30
Sin-blighted though we are, we too, The reasoning Sons of Men, From one oblivious winter called 45 Shall rise, and breathe again ; And in eternal summer lose Our threescore years and ten.	Star-guided contemplations move Through space, though calm, not raised above Prognostics that ye rule ; The naked Indian of the wild, And haply too the cradled Child, 35 Are pupils of your school.
To humbleness of heart descends This prescience from on high, 50 The faith that elevates the just, Before and when they die ; And makes each soul a separate heaven, A court for Deity.	But who can fathom your intents, Number their signs or instruments ? A rainbow, a sunbeam, A subtle smell that Spring unbinds, 40 Dead pause abrupt of midnight winds, An echo, or a dream.

XLIV.

PRESENTIMENTS.

PRESENTIMENTS ! they judge not right Who deem that ye from open light Retire in fear of shame ; All heaven-born Instincts shun the touch Of vulgar sense,—and, being such, 5 Such privilege ye claim.	The laughter of the Christmas hearth With sighs of self-exhausted mirth Ye feelingly reprove ; 45 And daily, in the conscious breast, Your visitations are a test And exercise of love.
The tear whose source I could not guess, The deep sigh that seemed fatherless, Were mine in early days ; And now, unforced by time to part 10 With fancy, I obey my heart, And venture on your praise.	When some great change gives boundless scope To an exulting Nation's hope 50 Oft, startled and made wise By your low-breathed interpretations, The simply-meek foretaste the springs Of bitter contraries.
What though some busy foes to good, Too potent over nerve and blood, Lurk near you—and combine 15 To taint the health which ye infuse ; This hides not from the moral Muse Your origin divine.	Ye daunt the proud array of war, 55 Pervade the lonely ocean far As sail hath been unfurled ; For dancers in the festive hall What ghastly partners hath your call Fetched from the shadowy world. 60
	'Tis said that warnings ye dispense, Emboldened by a keener sense ;

That men have lived for whom,
With dread precision, ye made clear
The hour that in a distant year
Should knell them to the tomb. 65

Unwelcome insight! Yet there are Blest times when mystery is laid bare,
Truth shows a glorious face,
While on that isthmus which commands
The councils of both worlds she stands,
Sage Spirits! by your grace.

God, who instructs the brutes to scent
All changes of the element,
Whose wisdom fixed the scale 75
Of natures, for our wants provides
By higher, sometimes humbler, guides,
When lights of reason fail.

XLV.

VERNAL ODE.

[Composed 1817.—Published 1820.]

“Rerum Natura tota est nusquam magis quam in minimis.” PLIN. Nat. Hist.

I.

BENEATH the concave of an April sky,
When all the fields with freshest' green were dight,

Appeared, in presence of the spiritual eye
That aids or supersedes our grosser sight,
The form and rich habiliments of One 5 Whose countenance bore resemblance to
the sun,

When it reveals, in evening majesty,
Features half lost amid their own pure
light.

Poised like a weary cloud, in middle air
He hung,—then floated with angelic ease (Softening that bright effulgence by degrees) 11

Till he had reached a summit sharp and
bare,

Where oft the venturous heifer drinks the noontide breeze.

Upon the apex of that lofty cone
Alighted, there the Stranger stood alone;
Fair as a gorgeous Fabric of the east 16
Suddenly raised by some enchanter's
power,

Where nothing was; and firm as some old
Tower
Of Britain's realm, whose leafy crest Waves high, embellished by a gleaming shower! 20

II.

Beneath the shadow of his purple wings Rested a golden harp;—he touched the strings;

And, after prelude of unearthly sound
Poured through the echoing hills around,
He sang—

“No wintry desolations, 25
Scorching blight or noxious dew,
Affect my native habitations;
Buried in glory, far beyond the scope
Of man's enquiring gaze, but to his hope Imaged, though faintly, in the hue 30
Profound of night's ethereal blue;

And in the aspect of each radiant orb;—
Some fixed, some wandering with no timid curb;

But wandering star and fixed, to mortal
eye,

Blended in absolute serenity, 35
And free from semblance of decline;—

Fresh as if Evening brought their natal
hour,

Her darkness splendour gave, her silence
power,

To testify of Love and Grace divine.

III.

“What if those bright fires 40
Shine subject to decay,

Sons haply of extinguished sires,
Themselves to lose their light, or pass
away

Like clouds before the wind,
Be thanks poured out to Him whose hand

bestows, 45
Nightly, on human kind

That vision of endurance and repose.
—And though to every draught of vital

breath,
Renewed throughout the bounds of earth
or ocean,

The melancholy gates of Death 50
Respond with sympathetic motion;

Though all that feeds on nether air
 Howe'er magnificent or fair,
 Grows but to perish, and entrust
 Its ruins to their kindred dust; 55
 Yet, by the Almighty's ever-during care,
 Her procreant vigils Nature keeps Amid the unfathomable deeps;
 And saves the peopled fields of earth
 From dread of emptiness or dearth. 60 Thus, in their stations, lifting tow'rd the
 sky
 The foliaged head in cloud-like majesty,
 The shadow-casting race of trees survive:
 Thus, in the train of Spring, arrive Sweet flowers;—what living eye hath viewed 65
 Their myriads?—endlessly renewed,
 Wherever strikes the sun's glad ray;
 Where'er the subtle waters stray;
 Wherever sportive breezes bend
 Their course, or genial showers descend!
 Mortals, rejoice! the very Angels quit 71
 Their mansions unsusceptible of change,
 Amid your pleasant bowers to sit,
 And through your sweet vicissitudes to range!"

IV.

O, nursed at happy distance from the
 cares 75
 Of a too-anxious world, mild pastoral
 Muse!
 That to the sparkling crown Urania
 wears,
 And to her sister Clio's laurel wreath, Preferr'd a garland culled from purple
 heath,
 Or blooming thicket moist with morning
 dews; 80
 Was such bright Spectacle vouchsafed
 to me?
 And was it granted to the simple ear
 Of thy contented Votary
 Such melody to hear!
Him rather suits it, side by side with
 thee, 85
 Wrapped in a fit of pleasing indolence, While thy tired lute hangs on the hawthorn-tree,
 To lie and listen—till o'er-drows'd sense
 Sinks, hardly conscious of the influence—

To the soft murmur of the vagrant Bee. 90
 —A slender sound! yet hoary Time
 Doth to the Soul exalt it with the chime
 Of all his years;—a company
 Of ages coming, ages gone; (Nations from before them sweeping, 95 Regions in destruction steeping,)
 But every awful note in unison
 With that faint utterance, which tells
 Of treasure sucked from buds and bells,
 For the pure keeping of those waxen cells; 100
 Where She—a statist prudent to confer
 Upon the common weal; a warrior bold,
 Radiant all over with unburnished gold,
 And armed with living spear for mortal fight;
 A cunning forager 105
 That spreads no waste; a social builder;
 one
 In whom all busy offices unite
 With all fine functions that afford de-
 light—
 Safe through the winter storm in quiet dwells!

V.

And is She brought within the power 110
 Of vision?—o'er this tempting flower
 Hovering until the petals stay
 Her flight, and take its voice away!—
 Observe each wing!—a tiny van!
 The structure of her laden thigh, 115
 How fragile! yet of ancestry
 Mysteriously remote and high;
 High as the imperial front of man;
 The roseate bloom on woman's cheek;
 The soaring eagle's curvèd beak; 120
 The white plumes of the floating swan;
 Old as the tiger's paw, the lion's mane—
 Ere shaken by that mood of stern disdain,
 At which the desert trembles.—Humming:
 Bee!
 Thy sting was needless then, perchance unknown, 125
 The seeds of malice were not sown;
 All creatures met in peace, from fierceness
 free,
 And no pride blended with their dignity.
 —Tears had not broken from their source;
 Nor Anguish strayed from her Tartareanden; 130

The golden years maintained a course Not undiversified though smooth and
 even ;
 We were not mocked with glimpse and shadow then,
 Bright Seraphs mixed familiarly with
 men ;
 And earth and stars composed a universal heaven ! 135

XLVI.

DEVOTIONAL INCITEMENTS.

[Composed 1832.—Published 1835.]

“Not to the earth confined, Ascend to heaven.”

WHERE will they stop, those breathing
 Powers,
 The Spirits of the new-born flowers?
 They wander with the breeze, they wind
 Where'er the streams a passage find ;
 Up from their native ground they rise 5
 In mute aerial harmonies ;
 From humble violet—modest thyme—
 Exhaled, the essential odours climb,
 As if no space below the sky
 Their subtle flight could satisfy : 10 Heaven will not tax our thoughts with
 pride
 If like ambition be their guide.

Roused by this kindest of May-
 showers,
 The spirit-quickener of the flowers,
 That with moist virtue softly cleaves 15
 The buds, and freshens the young leaves,
 The birds pour forth their souls in notes
 Of rapture from a thousand throats—
 Here checked by too impetuous haste,
 While there the music runs to waste, 20
 With bounty more and more enlarged,
 Till the whole air is overcharged ;
 Give ear, O Man ! to their appeal,
 And thirst for no inferior zeal,
 Thou, who canst think, as well as feel. 25

Mount from the earth ; aspire ! aspire !
 So pleads the town's cathedral quire,
 In strains that from their solemn height
 Sink, to attain a loftier flight ;

While incense from the altar breathes 30
 Rich fragrance in embodied wreaths ;
 Or, flung from swinging censer, shrouds
 The taper-lights, and curls in clouds Around angelic Forms, the still Creation of the painter's skill, 35
 That on the service wait concealed
 One moment, and the next revealed.
 —Cast off your bonds, awake, arise,
 And for no transient ecstasies !
 What else can mean the visual plea 40
 Of still or moving imagery—
 The iterated summons loud,
 Not wasted on the attendant crowd,
 Nor wholly lost upon the throng
 Hurrying the busy streets along ? 45

Alas ! the sanctities combined
 By art to unsensualise the mind
 Decay and languish ; or, as creeds
 And humours change, are spurned like
 weeds :
 The priests are from their altars thrust ;
 Temples are levelled with the dust ; 51
 And solemn rites and awful forms
 Founder amid fanatic storms.
 Yet evermore, through years renewed
 In undisturbed vicissitude 55
 Of seasons balancing their flight
 On the swift wings of day and night,
 Kind Nature keeps a heavenly door
 Wide open for the scattered Poor.
 Where flower-breathed incense to the skies 60
 Is wafted in mute harmonies ;
 And ground fresh-cloven by the plough
 Is fragrant with a humbler vow ;
 Where birds and brooks from leafy dells
 Chime forth unwearied canticles, 65
 And vapours magnify and spread
 The glory of the sun's bright head—
 Still constant in her worship, still Conforming to the eternal Will,
 Whether men sow or reap the fields, 70
 Divine monition Nature yields,
 That not by bread alone we live,
 Or what a hand of flesh can give ;
 That every day should leave some part Free for a sabbath of the heart : 75
 So shall the seventh be truly blest,
 From morn to eve, with hallowed rest.

XLVII.

THE CUCKOO-CLOCK.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

WOULDEST thou be taught, when sleep has taken flight,

By a sure voice that can most sweetly tell,
How far off yet a glimpse of morning
light,

And if to lure the truant back be well,
Forbear to covet a Repeater's stroke, 5
That, answering to thy touch, will sound
the hour;

Better provide thee with a Cuckoo-clock,
For service hung behind thy chamber-
door;

And in due time the soft spontaneous
shock,

The double note, as if with living power,
Will to composure lead—or make thee blithe as bird in bower. 11

List, Cuckoo—Cuckoo!—oft tho' tempests
howl,

Or nipping frost remind thee trees are
bare,

How cattle pine, and droop the shivering
fowl,

Thy spirits will seem to feed on balmy air:
I speak with knowledge,—by that Voice
beguiled, 16

Thou wilt salute old memories as they
throng

Into thy heart; and fancies, running wild Through fresh green fields, and budding groves among,

Will make thee happy, happy as a child;
Of sunshine wilt thou think, and flowers, and song, 21

And breathe as in a world where nothing can go wrong.

And know—that, even for him who shuns
the day

And nightly tosses on a bed of pain;
Whose joys, from all but memory swept
away, 25

Must come unhopèd for, if they come
again;

Know—that, for him whose waking thoughts, severe

As his distress is sharp, would scorn my
theme,

The mimic notes, striking upon his ear
In sleep, and intermingling with his dream, 30

Could from sad regions send him to a dear Delightful land of verdure, shower and
gleam,

To mock the wandering Voice beside some haunted stream.

O bounty without measure! while the
grace

Of Heaven doth in such wise, from humblest springs, 35

Pour pleasure forth, and solaces that trace
A mazy course along familiar things,

Well may our hearts have faith that blessings come,

Streaming from founts above the starry
sky,

With angels when their own untroubled
home 40

They leave, and speed on nightly embassy
To visit earthly chambers,—and for whom?

Yea, both for souls who God's forbearance try,

And those that seek his help, and for his mercy sigh.

XLVIII.

TO THE CLOUDS.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

ARMY of Clouds! ye wingèd Host in troops Ascending from behind the motionless
brow

Of that tall rock, as from a hidden world,
Oh whither with such eagerness of speed?

What seek ye, or what shun ye? of the gale
Companions, fear ye to be left behind, 6

Or racing o'er your blue ethereal field
Contend ye with each other? of the sea

Children, thus post ye over vale and
height

To sink upon your mother's lap—and
rest? 10

Or were ye rightlier hailed, when first mine eyes

Beheld in your impetuous march the likeness

Of a wide army pressing on to meet
 Or overtake some unknown enemy?—
 But your smooth motions suit a peaceful
 aim; 15
 And Fancy, not less aptly pleased, compares Your squadrons to an endless flight of birds
 Aerial, upon due migration bound
 To milder climes; or rather do ye urge
 In caravan your hasty pilgrimage 20
 To pause at last on more aspiring heights
 Than these, and utter your devotion there
 With thunderous voice? Or are ye jubilant, And would ye, tracking your proud lord
 the Sun,
 Be present at his setting; or the pomp 25
 Of Persian mornings would ye fill, and
 stand Poising your splendours high above the heads
 Of worshippers kneeling to their up-risen
 God?
 Whence, whence, ye Clouds! this eagerness of speed?
 Speak, silent creatures.—They are gone, are fled, 30
 Buried together in yon gloomy mass
 That loads the middle heaven; and clear and bright
 And vacant doth the region which they thronged Appear; a calm descent of sky conducting Down to the unapproachable abyss, 35 Down to that hidden gulf from which they rose
 To vanish—fleet as days and months and
 years,
 Fleet as the generations of mankind,
 Power, glory, empire, as the world itself,
 The lingering world, when time hath ceased to be. 40
 But the winds roar, shaking the rooted
 trees,
 And see! a bright precursor to a train
 Perchance as numerous, overpeers the rock
 That sullenly refuses to partake Of the wild impulse. From a fount of
 life 45
 Invisible, the long procession moves

Luminous or gloomy, welcome to the vale Which they are entering, welcome to mine eye
 That sees them, to my soul that owns in
 them,
 And in the bosom of the firmament 50 O'er which they move, wherein they are contained,
 A type of her capacious self and all
 Her restless progeny.
 A humble walk
 Here is my body doomed to tread, this
 path,
 A little hoary line and faintly traced, 55
 Work, shall we call it, of the shepherd's foot
 Or of his flock?—joint vestige of them
 both.
 I pace it unrepining, for my thoughts Admit no bondage and my words have wings.
 Where is the Orphean lyre, or Druid harp, 60
 To accompany the verse? The mountain
 blast
 Shall be our hand of music; he shall
 sweep
 The rocks, and quivering trees, and billow
 lake,
 And search the fibres of the caves, and
 they Shall answer, for our song is of the
 Clouds, 65
 And the wind loves them; and the gentle gales—
 Which by their aid re-clothe the naked
 lawn
 With annual verdure, and revive the
 woods,
 And moisten the parched lips of thirsty
 flowers—
 Love them; and every idle breeze of air Bends to the favourite burthen. Moon and stars 71
 Keep their most solemn vigils when the
 Clouds
 Watch also, shifting peaceably their place Like bands of ministering Spirits, or when they lie,
 As if some Protean art the change had
 wrought, 75

In listless quiet o'er the ethereal deep Scattered, a Cyclades of various shapes
And all degrees of beauty. O ye Lightnings!

Ye are their perilous offspring; and the
Sun—

Source inexhaustible of life and joy, 80
And type of man's far-darting reason,
therefore

In old time worshipped as the god of verse,
A blazing intellectual deity—

Loves his own glory in their looks, and
showers

Upon that unsubstantial brotherhood 85
Visions with all but beatific light

Enriched—too transient, were they not renewed

From age to age, and did not, while we gaze

In silent rapture, credulous desire Nourish the hope that memory lacks not
power 90

To keep the treasure unimpaired. Vain
thought!

Yet why repine, created as we are
For joy and rest, albeit to find them only Lodged in the bosom of eternal things?

SUGGESTED BY A PICTURE OF THE BIRD OF PARADISE.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

THE gentlest Poet, with free thoughts
endowed,

And a true master of the glowing strain, Might scan the narrow province with disdain

That to the Painter's skill is here allowed.
This, this the Bird of Paradise! disclaim
The daring thought, forget the name; 6
This the Sun's Bird, whom Glendoveers might own

As no unworthy Partner in their flight Through seas of ether, where the ruffling
sway

Of nether air's rude billows is unknown;
Whom Sylphs, if e'er for casual pastime
they 11

Through India's spicy regions wing their
way,

Might bow to as their Lord. What character,

O sovereign Nature! I appeal to thee,
Of all thy feathered progeny 15

Is so unearthly, and what shape so fair?
So richly decked in variegated down,
Green, sable, shining yellow, shadowy
brown,

Tints softly with each other blended,
Hues doubtfully begun and ended; 20

Or intershooting, and to sight
Lost and recovered, as the rays of light Glance on the conscious plumes touched here and there?.

Full surely, when with such proud gifts
of life

Began the pencil's strife, 25
O'erweening Art was caught as in a snare.

A sense of seemingly presumptuous
wrong

Gave the first impulse to the Poet's song;
But, of his scorn repenting soon, he drew

A juster judgment from a calmer view; 30
And, with a spirit freed from discontent,

Thankfully took an effort that was meant
Not with God's bounty, Nature's love, to vie,

Or made with hope to please that inward
eye 34

Which ever strives in vain itself to satisfy,
But to recall the truth by some faint trace

Of power ethereal and celestial grace,
That in the living Creature find on earth a place.

A JEWISH FAMILY.

(IN A SMALL VALLEY OPPOSITE ST. GOAR, UPON THE RHINE.)

[Composed 1828.—Published 1835.]

GENIUS of Raphael! if thy wings

Might bear thee to this glen,

With faithful memory left of things

To pencil dear and pen,

Thou wouldst forego the neighbouring
Rhine, 5

And all his majesty—

A studious forehead to incline

O'er this poor family.

The Mother—her thou must have seen,
 In spirit, ere she came 10
 To dwell these rifted rocks between,
 Or found on earth a name;
 An image, too, of that sweet Boy,
 Thy inspirations give—
 Of playfulness, and love, and joy, 15
 Predestined here to live.

Downcast, or shooting glances far,
 How beautiful his eyes,
 That blend the nature of the star
 With that of summer skies ! 20
 I speak as if of sense beguiled ;
 Uncounted months are gone,
 Yet am I with the Jewish Child,
 That exquisite Saint John.

I see the dark-brown curls, the brow, 25
 The smooth transparent skin,
 Refined, as with intent to show
 The holiness within ;
 The grace of parting Infancy
 By blushes yet untamed ; 30
 Age faithful to the mother's knee,
 Nor of her arms ashamed.

Two lovely Sisters, still and sweet
 As flowers, stand side by side ;
 Their soul-subduing looks might cheat 35
 The Christian of his pride :
 Such beauty hath the Eternal poured Upon them not forlorn,
 Though of a lineage once abhorred,
 Nor yet redeemed from scorn. 40

Mysterious safeguard, that, in spite
 Of poverty and wrong,
 Doth here preserve a living light,
 From Hebrew fountains sprung ;
 That gives this ragged group to cast 45
 Around the dell a gleam
 Of Palestine, of glory past,
 And proud Jerusalem !

LI.

ON THE POWER OF SOUND.

[Composed 1828.—Published 1835.]

ARGUMENT.

The Ear addressed, as occupied by a spiritual functionary, in communion with sounds, individual, or combined in studied harmony.—Sources and effects of those sounds (to the close of 6th Stanza).—The power of music, whence proceeding, exemplified in the idiot.—Origin of music, and its effect in early ages—how produced (to the middle of 10th Stanza).—The mind recalled to sounds acting casually and severally.—Wish uttered (11th Stanza) that these could be united into a scheme or system for moral interests and intellectual contemplation.—(Stanza 12th).—The Pythagorean theory of numbers and music, with their supposed power over the motions of the universe—imagination consonant with such a theory.—Wish expressed (in 11th Stanza) realized, in some degree, by the representation of all sounds under the form of thanksgiving to the Creator.—(Last Stanza) the destruction of earth and the planetary system—the survival of audible harmony, and its support in the Divine Nature, as revealed in Holy Writ.

I.

THY functions are ethereal,
 As if within thee dwelt a glancing mind,
 Organ of vision ! And a Spirit aërial Informs the cell of Hearing, dark and blind ;
 Intricate labyrinth, more dread for thought
 To enter than oracular cave ; 6 Strict passage, through which sighs are
 brought,
 And whispers for the heart, their slave ;
 And shrieks, that revel in abuse
 Of shivering flesh ; and warbled air, 10
 Whose piercing sweetness can unloose
 The chains of frenzy, or entice a smile
 Into the ambush of despair ;
 Hosannas pealing down the long-drawn aisle,
 And requiems answered by the pulse that beats 15
 Devoutly, in life's last retreats !

II.

The headlong streams and fountains Serve Thee, invisible Spirit, with untired
 powers ;
 Cheering the wakeful tent on Syrian
 mountains,
 They lull perchance ten thousand thousand flowers. 20
 That roar, the prowling lion's Here I am,
 How fearful to the desert wide !
 That bleat, how tender ! of the dam
 Calling a straggler to her side.

Shout, cuckoo!—let the vernal soul 25
 Go with thee to the frozen zone;
 Toll from thy loftiest perch, lone bellbird, toll!
 At the still hour to Mercy dear,
 Mercy from her twilight throne Listening to nun's faint throb of holy
 fear, 30
 To sailor's prayer breathed from a darkening sea,
 Or widow's cottage-lullaby.

III.

Ye Voices, and ye Shadows
 And Images of voice—to hound and horn
 From rocky steep and rock-bestudded meadows 35
 Flung back, and, in the sky's blue caves, reborn—
 On with your pastime! till the church-tower bells
 A greeting give of measured glee;
 And milder echoes from their cells
 Repeat the bridal symphony. 40
 Then, or far earlier, let us rove
 Where mists are breaking up or gone,
 And from aloft look down into a cove
 Besprinkled with a careless quire,
 Happy milk-maids, one by one 45
 Scattering a ditty each to her desire,
 A liquid concert matchless by nice Art,
 A stream as if from one full heart.

IV.

Blest be the song that brightens
 The blind man's gloom, exalts the veteran's mirth; 50
 Unscorned the peasant's whistling breath, that lightens
 His duteous toil of furrowing the green
 earth.
 For the tired slave, Song lifts the languid oar,
 And bids it aptly fall, with chime
 That beautifies the fairest shore, 55
 And mitigates the harshest clime.
 Yon pilgrims see—in lagging file
 They move; but soon the appointed way
 A choral Ave Marie shall beguile,
 And to their hope the distant shrine 60

Glisten with a livelier ray:
 Nor friendless he, the prisoner of the
 mine,
 Who from the well-spring of his own clear breast
 Can draw, and sing his griefs to rest.

V.

When civic renovation 65
 Dawns on a kingdom, and for needful
 haste
 Best eloquence avails not, Inspiration Mounts with a tune, that travels like a blast
 Piping through cave and battlemented
 tower;
 Then starts the sluggard, pleased to meet
 That voice of Freedom, in its power 71
 Of promises, shrill, wild, and sweet!
 Who, from a martial pageant, spreads
 Incitements of a battle-day, Thrilling the unweaponed crowd with plumeless heads?— 75
 Even She whose Lydian airs inspire Peaceful striving, gentle play
 Of timid hope and innocent desire Shot from the dancing Graces, as they move
 Fanned by the plausible wings of Love. 80

VI.

How oft along thy mazes,
 Regent of sound, have dangerous Passions
 trod!
 O Thou, through whom the temple rings with praises,
 And blackening clouds in thunder speak
 of God,
 Betray not by the cozenage of sense 85
 Thy votaries, woingly resigned
 To a voluptuous influence
 That taints the purer, better, mind;
 But lead sick Fancy to a harp
 That hath in noble tasks been tried; 90
 And, if the virtuous feel a pang too sharp,
 Soothe it into patience—stay
 The uplifted arm of Suicide;
 And let some mood of thine in firm array Knit every thought the impending issue
 needs, 95
 Ere martyr burns, or patriot bleeds!

VII.

As Conscience, to the centre
Of being, smites with irresistible pain,
So shall a solemn cadence, if it enter
The mouldy vaults of the dull idiot's
brain, 100

Transmute him to a wretch from quiet hurled—

Convulsed as by a jarring din;
And then aghast, as at the world
Of reason partially let in
By concords winding with a sway 105
Terrible for sense and soul!
Or awed he weeps, struggling to quell
dismay.

Point not these mysteries to an Art Lodged above the starry pole;
Pure modulations flowing from the heart
Of divine Love, where Wisdom, Beauty,
Truth 111
With Order dwell, in endless youth?

VIII.

Oblivion may not cover
All treasures hoarded by the miser, Time.
Orphean Insight! truth's undaunted lover, 115
To the first leagues of tutored passion
climb,

When Music deigned within this grosser sphere

Her subtle essence to unfold,
And voice and shell drew forth a tear Softer than Nature's self could mould. 120
Yet strenuous was the infant Age:
Art, daring because souls could feel,
Stirred nowhere but an urgent equipage
Of rapt imagination sped her march
Through the realms of woe and weal: 125 Hell to the lyre bowed low; the upper arch

Rejoiced that clamorous spell and magic verse

Her wan disasters could disperse.

IX.

The GIFT to king Amphion
That walled a city with its melody 130
Was for belief no dream:—thy skill, Arion!

Could humanize the creatures of the sea,
Where men were monsters. A last grace
he craves,

Leave for one chant;—the dulcet sound
Steals from the deck o'er willing waves,
And listening dolphins gather round. 136

Self-cast, as with a desperate course,
Mid that strange audience, he bestrides
A proud One docile as a managed horse;
And singing, while the accordant hand
Sweeps his harp, the Master rides; 141
So shall he touch at length a friendly
strand,

And he, with his preserver, shine star-
bright

In memory, through silent night.

X.

The pipe of Pan, to shepherds 145
Couched in the shadow of Mænalian
pines,

Was passing sweet; the eyeballs of the leopards,

That in high triumph drew the Lord of vines,

How did they sparkle to the cymbal's clang!

While Fauns and Satyrs beat the ground
In cadence,—and Silenus swang 151

This way and that, with wild-flowers crowned.

To life, to life give back thine ear:

Ye who are longing to be rid Of fable, though to truth subservient,
hear 155

The little sprinkling of cold earth that fell Echoed from the coffin-lid;

The convict's summons in the steeple's
knell;

“The vain distress-gun,” from a leeward
shore,

Repeated—heard, and heard no more! 160

XI.

For terror, joy, or pity, Vast is the compass and the swell of
notes:

From the babe's first cry to voice of regal city,

Rolling a solemn sea-like bass, that floats

Far as the woodlands—with the trill to blend 165

Of that shy songstress, whose love-tale Might tempt an angel to descend,
While hovering o'er the moonlight vale.
Ye wandering Utterances, has earth no
scheme,

No scale of moral music—to unite 170
Powers that survive but in the faintest
dream

Of memory?—O that ye might stoop to bear
Chains, such precious chains of sight
As laboured minstrelsies through ages
wear!

O for a balance fit the truth to tell 175
Of the Unsubstantial, pondered well!

XII.

By one pervading spirit
Of tones and numbers all things are controlled,
As sages taught, where faith was found to merit

Initiation in that mystery old. 180
The heavens, whose aspect makes our minds as still

As they themselves appear to be,
Innumerable voices fill
With everlasting harmony;
The towering headlands, crowned with mist, 185

Their feet among the billows, know
That Ocean is a mighty harmonist;
Thy pinions, universal Air,
Ever waving to and fro,
Are delegates of harmony, and bear 190 Strains that support the Seasons in their
round;
Stern Winter loves a dirge-like sound.

XIII.

Break forth into thanksgiving, Ye banded instruments of wind and chords;

Unite, to magnify the Ever-living, 195
Your inarticulate notes with the voice of
words!

Nor hushed be service from the lowing
mead,

Nor mute the forest hum of noon;
Thou too be heard, lone eagle! freed
From snowy peak and cloud, attune 200
Thy hungry barkings to the hymn
Of joy, that from her utmost walls
The six-days' Work by flaming Sera-phim

Transmits to Heaven! As Deep to Deep Shouting through one valley calls, 205
All worlds, all natures, mood and measure keep

For praise and ceaseless gratulation, poured
Into the ear of God, their Lord!

XIV.

A Voice to Light gave Being;
To Time, and Man his earth-born-chronicler; 210
A Voice shall finish doubt and dim foreseeing,

And sweep away life's visionary stir;
The trumpet (we, intoxicate with pride, Arm at its blast for deadly wars)
To archangelic lips applied, 215
The grave shall open, quench the stars.
O Silence! are Man's noisy years
No more than moments of thy life?
Is Harmony, blest queen of smiles and
tears,

With her smooth tones and discords just,
Tempered into rapturous strife, 221 Thy destined bond-slave? No! though earth be dust

And vanish, though the heavens dissolve, her stay
Is in the WORD, that shall not pass
away.

Peter Bell,

A T A L E.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1819.]

“What’s in a Name?”

“Brutus will start a Spirit as soon as Caesar!”

TO ROBERT SOUTHEY, Esq., P.L., ETC., ETC.

MY DEAR FRIEND,

The Tale of Peter Bell, which I now introduce to your notice, and to that of the Public, has, in its Manuscript state, nearly survived its minority:—for it first saw the light in the summer of 1798. During this long interval, pains have been taken at different times to make the production less unworthy of a favourable reception; or rather to fit it for filling permanently a station, however humble, in the Literature of our Country. This has, indeed, been the aim of all my endeavours in Poetry, which, you know, have been sufficiently laborious to prove that I deem the Art not lightly to be approached; and that the attainment of excellence in it may laudably be made the principal object of intellectual pursuit by any man, who, with reasonable consideration of circumstances, has faith in his own impulses.

The Poem of Peter Bell, as the Prologue will show, was composed under a belief that the Imagination not only does not require for its exercise the intervention of supernatural agency, but that, though such agency be excluded, the faculty may be called forth as imperiously, and for kindred results of pleasure, by incidents within the compass of poetic probability, in the humblest departments of daily life. Since that Prologue was written, you have exhibited most splendid effects of judicious daring in the opposite and usual course. Let this acknowledgment make my peace with the lovers of the supernatural; and I am persuaded it will be admitted that to you, as a Master in that province of the art, the following Tale, whether from contrast or congruity, is not an inappropriate offering. Accept it, then, as a public testimony of affectionate admiration from one with whose name yours has been often coupled (to use your own words) for evil and for good; and believe me to be, with earnest wishes that life and health may be granted you to complete the many important works in which you are engaged, and with high respect,

Most faithfully yours,

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

RYDAL MOUNT,
April 7, 1819.

PROLOGUE.

THERE’S something in a flying horse,
There’s something in a huge balloon;
But through the clouds I’ll never float
Until I have a little Boat, Shaped like the crescent-moon. 5

And now I have a little Boat,
In shape a very crescent-moon:
Fast through the clouds my Boat can sail;
But if perchance your faith should fail,
Look up—and you shall see me soon! 10

The woods, my Friends, are round you roaring,
Rocking and roaring like a sea;
The noise of danger’s in your ears,
And ye have all a thousand fears
Both for my little Boat and me! 15

Meanwhile untroubled I admire
The pointed horns of my canoe;
And, did’nt pity touch my breast
To see how ye are all distress,
Till my ribs ached I’d laugh at you! 20

Away we go, my Boat and I—Frail man ne’er sate in such another;
Whether among the winds we strive,
Or deep into the clouds we dive,
Each is contented with the other. 25

Away we go—and what care we
For treasons, tumults, and for wars?
We are as calm in our delight
As is the crescent-moon so bright
Among the scattered stars. 30

Up goes my Boat among the stars
Through many a breathless field of light,
Through many a long blue field of ether,
Leaving ten thousand stars beneath her:
Up goes my little Boat so bright! 35

The Crab, the Scorpion, and the Bull—
We pry among them all; have shot

High o'er the red-haired race of Mars,
Covered from top to toe with scars;
Such company I like it not! 40

The towns in Saturn are decayed,
And melancholy Spectres throng them;—
The Pleiads, that appear to kiss
Each other in the vast abyss,
With joy I sail among them. 45

Swift Mercury resounds with mirth,
Great Jove is full of stately bowers;
But these, and all that they contain,
What are they to that tiny grain,
That little Earth of ours? 50

Then back to Earth, the dear green Earth:—
Whole ages if I here should roam,
The world for my remarks and me
Would not a whit the better be;
I've left my heart at home. 55

See! there she is, the matchless Earth!
There spreads the famed Pacific Ocean!
Old Andes thrusts yon craggy spear
Through the grey clouds; the Alps are here,
Like waters in commotion! 60

Yon tawny slip is Libya's sands;
That silver thread the river Dnieper;
And look, where clothed in brightest green
Is a sweet Isle, of isles the Queen;
Ye fairies, from all evil keep her! 65

And see the town where I was born!
Around those happy fields we span
In boyish gambols;—I was lost
Where I have been, but on this coast
I feel I am a man. 70

Never did fifty things at once Appear so lovely, never, never;—
How tunefully the forests ring!
To hear the earth's soft murmuring
Thus could I hang for ever! 75

"Shame on you!" cried my little Boat,
"Was ever such a homesick Loon,
Within a living Boat to sit,
And make no better use of it;
A Boat twin-sister of the crescent-moon!"

"Ne'er in the breast of full-grown Poet Fluttered so faint a heart before;—
Was it the music of the spheres
That overpowered your mortal ears?
—Such din shall trouble them no more. 85

"These nether precincts do not lack Charms of their own;—then come with
me,

I want a comrade, and for you
There's nothing that I would not do;
Nought is there that you shall not see. 90

"Haste! and above Siberian snows
We'll sport amid the boreal morning;
Will mingle with her lustres gliding
Among the stars, the stars now hiding,
And now the stars adorning. 95

"I know the secrets of a land
Where human foot did never stray;
Fair is that land as evening skies,
And cool, though in the depth it lies
Of burning Africa. 100

"Or we'll into the realm of Faery,
Among the lovely shades of things;
The shadowy forms of mountains bare,
And streams, and bowers, and ladies fair,
The shades of palaces and kings! 105

"Or, if you thirst with hardy zeal
Less quiet regions to explore,
Prompt voyage shall to you reveal How earth and heaven are taught to feel
The might of magic lore!" 110

"My little vagrant Form of light,
My gay and beautiful Canoe,
Well have you played your friendly part;
As kindly take what from my heart
Experience forces—then adieu! 115

"Temptation lurks among your words;
But, while these pleasures you're pursuing Without impediment or let,
No wonder if you quite forget
What on the earth is doing. 120

"There was a time when all mankind
Did listen with a faith sincere
To tuneful tongues in mystery versed;
Then Poets fearlessly rehearsed
The wonders of a wild career. 125

"Go—(but the world's a sleepy world,
And 'tis, I fear, an age too late)
Take with you some ambitious Youth!
For, restless Wanderer! I, in truth,
Am all unfit to be your mate. 130

"Long have I loved what I behold,
The night that calms, the day that cheers;
The common growth of mother-earth
Suffices me—her tears, her mirth,
Her humblest mirth and tears. 135

"The dragon's wing, the magic ring,
I shall not covet for my dower,
If I along that lowly way
With sympathetic heart may stray,
And with a soul of power. 140

"These given, what more need I desire
To stir, to soothe, or elevate?
What nobler marvels than the mind
May in life's daily prospect find,
May find or there create? 145

"A potent wand doth Sorrow wield;
What spell so strong as guilty Fear!
Repentance is a tender Sprite;
If aught on earth have heavenly might,
'Tis lodged within her silent tear. 150

"But grant my wishes,—let us now Descend from this ethereal height;
Then take thy way, adventurous Skiff,
More daring far than Hippogriff,
And be thy own delight! 155

"To the stone-table in my garden,
Loved haunt of many a summer hour,
The Squire is come: his daughter Bess
Beside him in the cool recess
Sits blooming like a flower. 160

"With these are many more convened;
They know not I have been so far;—
I see them there, in number nine,
Beneath the spreading Weymouth-pine!
I see them—there they are! 165

"There sits the Vicar and his Dame;
And there my good friend, Stephen Otter;
And, ere the light of evening fail,
To them I must relate the Tale
Of Peter Bell the Potter." 170

Off flew the Boat—away she flees, Spurning her freight with indignation!
And I, as well as I was able,
On two poor legs, toward my stone-table
Limped on with sore vexation. 175

"O, here he is!" cried little Bess—
She saw me at the garden-door;
"We've waited anxiously and long,"
They cried, and all around me throng,
Full nine of them or more! 180

"Reproach me not—your fears be still—
Be thankful we again have met;—
Resume, my Friends! within the shade
Your seats, and quickly shall be paid
The well-remembered debt." 185

I spake with faltering voice, like one
Not wholly rescued from the pale
Of a wild dream, or worse illusion;
But straight, to cover my confusion,
Began the promised Tale. 190

PART FIRST.

ALL by the moonlight river-side
Groaned the poor Beast—alas! in vain;
The staff was raised to loftier height,
And the blows fell with heavier weight
As Peter struck—and struck again. 195

"Hold!" cried the Squire, "against the rules
Of common sense you're surely sinning;
This leap is for us all too bold;
Who Peter was, let that be told,
And start from the beginning." 200

—"A Potter,¹ Sir, he was by trade,"
Said I, becoming quite collected;
"And wheresoever he appeared,
Full twenty times was Peter feared
For once that Peter was respected. 205

"He, two-and-thirty years or more,
Had been a wild and woodland rover;
Had heard the Atlantic surges roar
On farthest Cornwall's rocky shore,
And trod the cliffs of Dover. 210

"And he had seen Caernarvon's towers,
And well he knew the spire of Sarum;
And he had been where Lincoln bell
Flings o'er the fen that ponderous knell—
A far-renowned alarum! 215

- "At Doncaster, at York, and Leeds,
 And merry Carlisle had he been ;
 And all along the Lowlands fair,
 All through the bonny shire of Ayr ;
 And far as Aberdeen. 220
- "And he had been at Inverness ;
 And Peter, by the mountain-rills,
 Had danced his round with Highland lasses ;
 And he had lain beside his asses
 On lofty Cheviot Hills : 225
- "And he had trudged through Yorkshire
 dales,
 Among the rocks and winding scars ;
 Where deep and low the hamlets lie
 Beneath their little patch of sky
 And little lot of stars : 230
- "And all along the indented coast,
 Bespattered with the salt-sea foam ;
 Where'er a knot of houses lay
 On headland, or in hollow bay ;—
 Sure never man like him did roam ! 235
- "As well might Peter in the Fleet
 Have been fast bound, a begging debtor ;—
 He travelled here, he travelled there ;—
 But not the value of a hair
 Was heart or head the better. 240
- "He roved among the vales and streams,
 In the green wood and hollow dell ;
 They were his dwellings night and day,—
 But nature ne'er could find the way Into the heart of Peter Bell. 245
- "In vain, through every changeful year,
 Did Nature lead him as before ;
 A primrose by a river's brim
 A yellow primrose was to him,
 And it was nothing more. 250
- "Small change it made in Peter's heart
 To see his gentle panniered train
 With more than vernal pleasure feeding, Where'er the tender grass was leading
 Its earliest green along the lane. 255
- "In vain, through water, earth, and air,
 The soul of happy sound was spread,
 When Peter on some April morn,
 Beneath the broom or budding thorn,
 Made the warm earth his lazy bed. 260
- "At noon, when, by the forest's edge
 He lay beneath the branches high,
 The soft blue sky did never melt
 Into his heart ; he never felt
 The witchery of the soft blue sky ! 265
- "On a fair prospect some have looked
 And felt, as I have heard them say,
 As if the moving time had been A thing as steadfast as the scene
 On which they gazed themselves away.
- "Within the breast of Peter Bell 271
 These silent raptures found no place ;
 He was a Carl as wild and rude
 As ever hue-and-cry pursued,
 As ever ran a felon's race. 275
- "Of all that lead a lawless life,
 Of all that love their lawless lives,
 In city or in village small,
 He was the wildest far of all ;—
 He had a dozen wedded wives. 280
- "Nay, start not !—wedded wives—and twelve !
 But how one wife could e'er come near him,
 In simple truth I cannot tell ;
 For, be it said of Peter Bell,
 To see him was to fear him. 285
- "Though Nature could not touch his heart
 By lovely forms, and silent weather,
 And tender sounds, yet you might see
 At once that Peter Bell and she Had often been together. 290
- "A savage wildness round him hung
 As of a dweller out of doors ;
 In his whole figure and his mièn
 A savage character was seen
 Of mountains and of dreary moors. 295
- "To all the unshaped half-human thoughts
 Which solitary Nature feeds
 'Mid summer storms or winter's ice,
 Had Peter joined whatever vice
 The cruel city breeds. 300
- "His face was keen as is the wind
 That cuts along the hawthorn-fence ;
 Of courage you saw little there,
 But, in its stead, a medley air
 Of cunning and of impudence. 305

"He had a dark and sidelong walk,
And long and slouching was his gait ;
Beneath his looks so bare and bold,
You might perceive, his spirit cold
Was playing with some inward bait. 310

"His forehead wrinkled was and furred ;
A work, one half of which was done
By thinking of his 'whens' and 'hows ;'
And half, by knitting of his brows
Beneath the glaring sun. 315

"There was a hardness in his cheek,
There was a hardness in his eye,
As if the man had fixed his face,
In many a solitary place,
Against the wind and open sky !" 320

ONE NIGHT, (and now, my little Bess !
We've reached at last the promised Tale ;)
One beautiful November night,
When the full moon was shining bright
Upon the rapid river Swale, 325

Along the river's winding banks
Peter was travelling all alone ;—
Whether to buy or sell, or led
By pleasure running in his head,
To me was never known, 330

He trudged along through copse and brake
He trudged along o'er hill and dale ;
Nor for the moon cared he a tittle,
And for the stars he cared as little,
And for the murmuring river Swale. 335

But, chancing to espy a path
That promised to cut short the way ;
As many a wiser man hath done,
He left a trusty guide for one
That might his steps betray. 340

To a thick wood he soon is brought Where cheerily his course he weaves,
And whistling loud may yet be heard,
Though often buried like a bird
Darkling, among the boughs and leaves.

But quickly Peter's mood is changed, 346
And on he drives with cheeks that burn
In downright fury and in wrath ;—
There's little sign the treacherous path
Will to the road return ! 350

The path grows dim, and dimmer still ;
Now up, now down, the Rover wends,
With all the sail that he can carry,
Till brought to a deserted quarry—
And there the pathway ends. 355

He paused—for shadows of strange shape,
Massy and black, before him lay ;
But through the dark, and through the
cold,
And through the yawning fissures old,
Did Peter boldly press his way 360

Right through the quarry ;—and behold
A scene of soft and lovely hue !
Where blue and grey, and tender green,
Together make as sweet a scene
As ever human eye did view. 365

Beneath the clear blue sky he saw
A little field of meadow ground ;
But field or meadow name it not ;
Call it of earth a small green plot,
With rocks encompassed round. 370

The Swale flowed under the grey rocks,
But he flowed quiet and unseen :—
You need a strong and stormy gale
To bring the noises of the Swale
To that green spot, so calm and green !

And is there no one dwelling here, 376
No hermit with his beads and glass ?
And does no little cottage look Upon this soft and fertile nook ?
Does no one live near this green grass ?

Across the deep and quiet spot 381
Is Peter driving through the grass—
And now has reached the skirting trees ;
When, turning round his head, he sees
A solitary Ass. 385

"A prize !" cries Peter—but he first Must spy about him far and near :
There's not a single house in sight,
No woodman's hut, no cottage light—
Peter, you need not fear ! 390

There's nothing to be seen but woods,
And rocks that spread a hoary gleam,
And this one Beast, that from the bed
Of the green meadow hangs his head
Over the silent stream. 395

- His head is with a halter bound ;
The halter seizing, Peter leapt
Upon the Creature's back, and plied
With ready heels his shaggy side ;
But still the Ass his station kept, 400
- Then Peter gave a sudden jerk,
A jerk that from a dungeon-floor
Would have pulled up an iron ring ;
But still the heavy-headed Thing
Stood just as he had stood before ! 405
- Quoth Peter, leaping from his seat,
"There is some plot against me laid ;"
Once more the little meadow-ground
And all the hoary cliffs around
He cautiously surveyed. 410
- All, all is silent—rocks and woods,
All still and silent—far and near !
Only the Ass, with motion dull,
Upon the pivot of his skull
Turns round his long left ear. 415
- Thought Peter, What can mean all this ?
Some ugly witchcraft must be here !
—Once more the Ass, with motion dull,
Upon the pivot of his skull
Turned round his long left ear. 420
- Suspicion ripened into dread ;
Yet, with deliberate action slow,
His staff high-raising, in the pride
Of skill, upon the sounding hide
He dealt a sturdy blow. 425
- The poor Ass staggered with the shock ;
And then, as if to take his ease,
In quiet uncomplaining mood,
Upon the spot where he had stood,
Dropped gently down upon his knees ; 430
- As gently on his side he fell ;
And by the river's brink did lie ;
And, while he lay like one that mourned,
The patient Beast on Peter turned His shining hazel eye. 435
- 'Twas but one mild, reproachful look,
A look more tender than severe ;
And straight in sorrow, not in dread,
He turned the eye-ball in his head Towards the smooth river deep and clear. 440
- Upon the Beast the sapling rings ;
His lank sides heaved, his limbs they
stirred ;
He gave a groan, and then another,
Of that which went before the brother,
And then he gave a third. 445
- All by the moonlight river side
He gave three miserable groans ;
And not till now hath Peter seen
How gaunt the Creature is,—how lean
And sharp his staring bones ! 450
- With legs stretched out and stiff he lay :—
No word of kind commiseration
Fell at the sight from Peter's tongue ;
With hard contempt his heart was wrung,
With hatred and vexation. 455
- The meagre beast lay still as death ;
And Peter's lips with fury quiver ;
Quoth he, " You little mulish dog,
I'll fling your carcass like a log Head-foremost down the river !" 460
- An impious oath confirmed the threat—
Whereat from the earth on which he lay
To all the echoes, south and north,
And east and west, the Ass sent forth
A long and clamorous bray ! 465
- This outcry, on the heart of Peter,
Seems like a note of joy to strike,—
Joy at the heart of Peter knocks ;
But in the echo of the rocks
Was something Peter did not like. 470
- Whether to cheer his coward breast,
Or that he could not break the chain,
In this serene and solemn hour,
Twined round him by demoniac power,
To the blind work he turned again. 475
- Among the rocks and winding crags ;
Among the mountains far away ;
Once more the Ass did lengthen out
More ruefully a deep-drawn shout,
The hard dry see-saw of his horrible bray !
- What is there now in Peter's heart ! 481
Or whence the might of this strange sound ?
The moon uneasy looked and dimmer,
The broad blue heavens appeared to glimmer,
And the rocks staggered all around— 485

From Peter's hand the sapling dropped !
Threat has he none to execute ;
"If any one should come and see That I am here, they 'll think," quoth he,
"I'm helping this poor dying brute." 490

He scans the Ass from limb to limb,
And ventures now to uplift his eyes ;
More steady looks the moon, and clear,
More like themselves the rocks appear
And touch more quiet skies. 495

His scorn returns—his hate revives ;
He stoops the Ass's neck to seize
With malice—that again takes flight ;
For in the pool a startling sight
Meets him, among the inverted trees. 500

Is it the moon's distorted face ?
The ghost-like image of a cloud ?
Is it a gallows there portrayed ?
Is Peter of himself afraid ?
Is it a coffin,—or a shroud ? 505

A grisly idol hewn in stone ?
Or imp from witch's lap let fall ?
Perhaps a ring of shining fairies ?
Such as pursue their feared vagaries
In sylvan bower, or haunted hall ? 510

Is it a fiend that to a stake
Of fire his desperate self is tethering ?
Or stubborn spirit doomed to yell
In solitary ward or cell,
Ten thousand miles from all his brethren ?

Never did pulse so quickly throb, 516
And never heart so loudly panted ;
He looks, he cannot choose but look ;
Like some one reading in a book—
A book that is enchanted. 520

Ah, well-a-day for Peter Bell !
He will be turned to iron soon,
Meet Statue for the court of Fear !
His hat is up—and every hair
Bristles, and whitens in the moon ! 525

He looks, he ponders, looks again ;
He sees a motion—hears a groan ;
His eyes will burst—his heart will break—
He gives a loud and frightful shriek,
And back he falls, as if his life were flown !

PART SECOND.

WE left our Hero in a trance, 531
Beneath the alders, near the river ;
The Ass is by the river-side,
And, where the feeble breezes glide,
Upon the stream the moonbeams quiver.

A happy respite ! but at length 536
He feels the glimmering of the moon ;
Wakes with glazed eye, and feebly sighing—

To sink, perhaps, where he is lying,
Into a second swoon ! 540

He lifts his head, he sees his staff ;
He touches—'tis to him a treasure !
Faint recollection seems to tell
That he is yet where mortals dwell—
A thought received with languid pleasure !

His head upon his elbow propped, 546
Becoming less and less perplexed,
Sky-ward he looks—to rock and wood—
And then—upon the glassy flood
His wandering eye is fixed. 550

Thought he, that is the face of one
In his last sleep securely bound !
So toward the stream his head he bent,
And downward thrust his staff, intent
The river's depth to sound. 555

Now—like a tempest-shattered bark,
That overwhelmed and prostrate lies,
And in a moment to the verge
Is lifted of a foaming surge—
Full suddenly the Ass doth rise ! 560

His staring bones all shake with joy,
And close by Peter's side he stands :
While Peter o'er the river bends,
The little Ass his neck extends,
And fondly licks his hands. 565

Such life is in the Ass's eyes,
Such life is in his limbs and ears ;
That Peter Bell, if he had been
The veriest coward ever seen,
Must now have thrown aside his fears. 570

The Ass looks on—and to his work
Is Peter quietly resigned ;
He touches here—he touches there—
And now among the dead man's hair
His sapling Peter has entwined. 575

He pulls—and looks—and pulls again ;
 And he whom the poor Ass had lost,
 The man who had been four days dead,
 Head-foremost from the river's bed
 Uprises like a ghost ! 580

And Peter draws him to dry land ;
 And through the brain of Peter pass
 Some poignant twitches, fast and faster ;
 "No doubt," quoth he, "he is the Master
 Of this poor miserable Ass !" 585

The meagre shadow that looks on—
 What would he now ? what is he doing ?
 His sudden fit of joy is flown,—
 He on his knees hath laid him down,
 As if he were his grief renewing ; 590

But no—that Peter on his back
 Must mount, he shows well as he can :
 Thought Peter then, come weal or woe,
 I'll do what he would have me do,
 In pity to this poor drowned man. 595

With that resolve he boldly mounts
 Upon the pleased and thankful Ass ;
 And then, without a moment's stay,
 That earnest Creature turned away,
 Leaving the body on the grass. 600

Intent upon his faithful watch,
 The Beast four days and nights had past ;
 A sweeter meadow ne'er was seen,
 And there the Ass four days had been,
 Nor ever once did break his fast : 605

Yet firm his step, and stout his heart ;
 The mead is crossed—the quarry's mouth
 Is reached ; but there the trusty guide
 Into a thicket turns aside,
 And deftly ambles towards the south. 610

When hark a burst of doleful sound !
 And Peter honestly might say,
 The like came never to his ears,
 Though he has been, full thirty years,
 A rover—night and day ! 615

'Tis not a plover of the moors,
 'Tis not a bittern of the fen ;
 Nor can it be a barking fox,
 Nor night-bird chambered in the rocks,
 Nor wild-cat in a woody glen ! 620

The Ass is startled—and stops short Right in the middle of the thicket ;
 And Peter, wont to whistle loud
 Whether alone or in a crowd,
 Is silent as a silent cricket. 625

What ails you now, my little Bess ?
 Well may you tremble and look grave !
 This cry—that rings along the wood,
 This cry—that floats adown the flood,
 Comes from the entrance of a cave : 630

I see a blooming Wood-boy there,
 And if I had the power to say How sorrowful the wanderer is,
 Your heart would be as sad as his Till you had kissed his tears away ! 635

Grasping a hawthorn branch in hand,
 All bright with berries ripe and red,
 Into the cavern's mouth he peeps ;
 Thence back into the moonlight creeps ;
 Whom seeks he—whom?—the silent
 dead : 640

His father !—Him doth he require—
 Him hath he sought with fruitless pains,
 Among the rocks, behind the trees ;
 Now creeping on his hands and knees,
 Now running o'er the open plains. 645

And hither is he come at last,
 When he through such a day has gone,
 By this dark cave to be distress
 Like a poor bird—her plundered nest
 Hovering around with dolorous moan ! 650

Of that intense and piercing cry
 The listening Ass conjectures well ;
 Wild as it is, he there can read
 Some intermingled notes that plead
 With touches irresistible. 655

But Peter—when he saw the Ass
 Not only stop but turn, and change
 The cherished tenor of his pace
 That lamentable cry to chase—
 It wrought in him conviction strange ; 660

A faith that for the dead man's sake,
 And this poor slave who loved him well,
 Vengeance upon his head will fall,
 Some visitation worse than all
 Which ever till this night befell. 665

Meanwhile the Ass to reach his home
Is striving stoutly as he may ;
But, while he climbs the woody hill,
The cry grows weak—and weaker still ;
And now at last it dies away. 670

So with his freight the Creature turns
Into a gloomy grove of beech,
Along the shade with footsteps true Descending slowly, till the two
The open moonlight reach. 675

And there, along the narrow dell,
A fair smooth pathway you discern,
A length of green and open road—
As if it from a fountain flowed—
Winding away between the fern. 680

The rocks that tower on either side
Build up a wild fantastic scene ;
Temples like those among the Hindoos,
And mosques, and spires, and abbey-windows,
And castles all with ivy green ! 685

And while the Ass pursues his way
Along this solitary dell,
As pensively his steps advance,
The mosques and spires change countenance,
And look at Peter Bell ! 690

That unintelligible cry
Hath left him high in preparation,—
Convinced that he, or soon or late,
This very night will meet his fate—
And so he sits in expectation ! 695

The strenuous Animal hath clomb
With the green path ; and now he wends
Where, shining like the smoothest sea,
In undisturbed immensity
A level plain extends. 700

But whence this faintly-rustling sound
By which the journeying pair are chased ?
—A withered leaf is close behind,
Light plaything for the sportive wind
Upon that solitary waste. 705

When Peter spied the moving thing,
It only doubled his distress ;
“Where there is not a bush or tree,
The very leaves they follow me—
So huge hath been my wickedness !” 710

To a close lane they now are come,
Where, as before, the enduring Ass
Moves on without a moment's stop,
Nor once turns round his head to crop
A bramble-leaf or blade of grass. 715

Between the hedges as they go,
The white dust sleeps upon the lane ;
And Peter, ever and anon
Back-looking, sees, upon a stone,
Or in the dust, a crimson stain. 720

A stain—as of a drop of blood
By moonlight made more faint and wan ;
Ha ! why these sinkings of despair ?
He knows not how the blood comes there—
And Peter is a wicked man. 725

At length he spies a bleeding wound,
Where he had struck the Ass's head ;
He sees the blood, knows what it is,—
A glimpse of sudden joy was his,
But then it quickly fled ; 730

Of him whom sudden death had seized
He thought,—of thee, O faithful Ass !
And once again those ghastly pains,
Shoot to and fro through heart and reins,
And through his brain like lightning
pass. 735

PART THIRD.

I've heard of one, a gentle Soul,
Though given to sadness and to gloom,
And for the fact will vouch,—one night
It chanced that by a taper's light
This man was reading in his room ; 740

Bending, as you or I might bend
At night o'er any pious book,
When sudden blackness overspread
The snow-white page on which he read,
And made the good man round him look.

The chamber walls were dark all round,—
And to his book he turned again ;
—The light had left the lonely taper,
And formed itself upon the paper
Into large letters—bright and plain ! 750

The godly book was in his hand—
And on the page, more black than coal,
Appeared, set forth in strange array,
A word—which to his dying day
Perplexed the good man's gentle soul. 755

The ghostly word, thus plainly seen,
Did never from his lips depart ;
But he hath said, poor gentle wight !
It brought full many a sin to light
Out of the bottom of his heart. 760

Dread Spirits ! to confound the meek
Why wander from your course so far, Disordering colour, form, and stature !
—Let good men feel the soul of nature,
And see things as they are. 765

Yet, potent Spirits ! well I know,
How ye, that play with soul and sense,
Are not unused to trouble friends
Of goodness, for most gracious ends—
And this I speak in reverence ! 770

But might I give advice to you,
Whom in my fear I love so well ;
From men of pensive virtue go,
Dread Beings ! and your empire show
On hearts like that of Peter Bell. 775

Your presence often have I felt
In darkness and the stormy night ;
And with like force, if need there be,
Ye can put forth your agency 779
When earth is calm, and heaven is bright.

Then coming from the wayward world,
That powerful world in which ye dwell,
Come, Spirits of the Mind ! and try,
To-night, beneath the moonlight sky,
What may be done with Peter Bell ! 785

—O, would that some more skilful voice
My further labour might prevent !
Kind Listeners, that around me sit,
I feel that I am all unfit
For such high argument. 790

I've played, I've danced, with my narration ;
I loitered long ere I began :
Ye waited then on my good pleasure ;
Pour out indulgence still, in measure
As liberal as ye can ! 795

Our Travellers, ye remember well,
Are thridding a sequestered lane ;

And Peter many tricks is trying,
And many anodynes applying,
To ease his conscience of its pain. 800

By this his heart is lighter far ;
And, finding that he can account
So snugly for that crimson stain,
His evil spirit up again
Does like an empty bucket mount. 805

And Peter is a deep logician
Who hath no lack of wit mercurial ; “Blood drops—leaves rustle—yet,” quoth
he,
“This poor man never but for me
Could have had Christian burial. 810

“And, say the best you can, 'tis plain,
That here has been some wicked dealing ;
No doubt the devil in me wrought ;
I'm not the man who could have thought
An Ass like this was worth the steal-
ing !” 815

So from his pocket Peter takes
His shining horn tobacco-box ;
And in a light and careless way,
As men who with their purpose play,
Upon the lid he knocks. 820

Let them whose voice can stop the clouds,
Whose cunning eye can see the wind,
Tell to a curious world the cause
Why, making here a sudden pause,
The Ass turned round his head and grin-
ned. 825

Appalling process ! I have marked
The like on heath, in lonely wood ;
And, verily, have seldom met
A spectacle more hideous—yet
It suited Peter's present mood. 830

And, grinning in his turn, his teeth
He in jocosé defiance showed—
When, to upset his spiteful mirth,
A murmur, pent within the earth,
In the dead earth beneath the road, 835

Rolled audibly !—it swept along,
A muffled noise—a rumbling sound !—
'Twas by a troop of miners made,
Plying with gunpowder their trade,
Some twenty fathoms under ground. 840

- Small cause of dire effect ! for, surely,
If ever mortal, King or Cotter,
Believed that earth was charged to quake
And yawn for his unworthy sake,
'Twas Peter Bell the Potter. 845
- But as an oak in breathless air
Will stand though to the centre hewn ;
Or as the weakest things, if frost
Have stiffened them, maintain their post ;
So he, beneath the gazing moon !— 850
- The Beast bestriding thus, he reached
A spot where, in a sheltering cove,
A little chapel stands alone,
With greenest ivy overgrown,
And tufted with an ivy grove ; 855
- Dying insensibly away
From human thoughts and purposes,
It seemed—wall, window, roof and tower—
To bow to some transforming power,
And blend with the surrounding trees. 860
- As ruinous a place it was,
Thought Peter, in the shire of Fife
That served my turn, when following still From land to land a reckless will I married my sixth wife ! 865
- The unheeding Ass moves slowly on,
And now is passing by an inn
Brim-full of a carousing crew,
That make, with curses not a few,
An uproar and a drunken din. 870
- I cannot well express the thoughts
Which Peter in those noises found ;—
A stifling power compressed his frame,
While-as a swimming darkness came Over that dull and dreary sound. 875
- For well did Peter know the sound ;
The language of those drunken joys
To him, a jovial soul, I ween,
But a few hours ago, had been A gladsome and a welcome noise. 880
- Now, turned adrift into the past,
He finds no solace in his course ;
Like planet-stricken men of yore,
He trembles, smitten to the core
By strong compunction and remorse. 885
- But, more than all, his heart is stung
To think of one, almost a child ;
A sweet and playful Highland girl,
As light and beauteous as a squirrel,
As beauteous and as wild ! 890
- Her dwelling was a lonely house,
A cottage in a heathy dell ;
And she put on her gown of green,
And left her mother at sixteen,
And followed Peter Bell. 895
- But many good and pious thoughts
Had she ; and, in the kirk to pray,
Two long Scotch miles, through rain or
snow,
To kirk she had been used to go,
Twice every Sabbath-day. 900
- And, when she followed Peter Bell,
It was to lead an honest life ;
For he, with tongue not used to falter,
Had pledged his troth before the altar
To love her as his wedded wife. 905
- A mother's hope is hers ;—but soon
She drooped and pined like one forlorn ;
From Scripture she a name did borrow ;
Benoni, or the child of sorrow,
She called her babe unborn. 910
- For she had learned how Peter lived,
And took it in most grievous part ;
She to the very bone was worn,
And, ere that little child was born,
Died of a broken heart. 915
- And now the Spirits of the Mind
Are busy with poor Peter Bell ;
Upon the rights of visual sense
Usurping, with a prevalence
More terrible than magic spell. 920
- Close by a brake of flowering furze
(Above it shivering aspens play)
He sees an unsubstantial creature,
His very self in form and feature, 924
Not four yards from the broad highway :
- And stretched beneath the furze he sees
The Highland girl—it is no other ;
And hears her crying as she cried,
The very moment that she died,
“ My mother ! oh my mother ! ” 930

- The sweat pours down from Peter's face,
So grievous is his heart's contrition ;
With agony his eye-balls ache
While he beholds by the furze-brake
This miserable vision ! 935
- Calm is the well-deserving brute,
His peace hath no offence betrayed ;
But now, while down that slope he wends,
A voice to Peter's ear ascends, Resounding from the woody glade : 940
- The voice, though clamorous as a horn
Re-echoed by a naked rock,
Comes from that tabernacle—List !
Within, a fervent Methodist
Is preaching to no heedless flock ! 945
- "Repent ! repent !" he cries aloud,
"While yet ye may find mercy ;—strive
To love the Lord with all your might ;
Turn to him, seek him day and night,
And save your souls alive ! 950
- "Repent ! repent ! though ye have gone,
Through paths of wickedness and woe,
After the Babylonian harlot ;
And though your sins be red as scarlet,
They shall be white as snow !" 955
- Even as he passed the door, these words
Did plainly come to Peter's ears ;
And they such joyful tidings were,
The joy was more than he could bear !—
He melted into tears. 960
- Sweet tears of hope and tenderness !
And fast they fell, a plenteous shower !
His nerves, his sinews seemed to melt ;
Through all his iron frame was felt
A gentle, a relaxing, power ! 965
- Each fibre of his frame was weak ;
Weak all the animal within ;
But, in its helplessness, grew mild
And gentle as an infant child,
An infant that has known no sin. 970
- 'Tis said, meek Beast ! that, through Heaven's grace,
He not unmoved did notice now
The cross upon thy shoulder scored,
For lasting impress, by the Lord
To whom all human-kind shall bow ; 975
- Memorial of his touch—that day
When Jesus humbly deigned to ride,
Entering the proud Jerusalem,
By an immeasurable stream
Of shouting people deified ! 980
- Meanwhile the persevering Ass
Turned towards a gate that hung in view
Across a shady lane ; his chest
Against the yielding gate he pressed
And quietly passed through. 985
- And up the stony lane he goes ;
No ghost more softly ever trod ;
Among the stones and pebbles he Sets down his hoofs inaudibly,
As if with felt his hoofs were shod. 990
- Along the lane the trusty Ass
Went twice two hundred yards or more,
And no one could have guessed his aim,— Till to a lonely house he came,
And stopped beside the door. 995
- Thought Peter, 'tis the poor man's home
He listens—not a sound is heard
Save from the trickling household rill ;
But, stepping o'er the cottage-sill,
Forthwith a little Girl appeared. 1000
- She to the Meeting-house was bound
In hopes some tidings there to gather :
No glimpse it is, no doubtful gleam ;
She saw—and uttered with a scream,
"My father ! here's my father !" 1005
- The very word was plainly heard,
Heard plainly by the wretched Mother—
Her joy was like a deep affright :
And forth she rushed into the light,
And saw it was another ! 1010
- And instantly upon the earth,
Beneath the full moon shining bright,
Close to the Ass's feet she fell ;
At the same moment Peter Bell
Dismounts in most unhappy plight. 1015
- As he beheld the Woman lie
Breathless and motionless, the mind
Of Peter sadly was confused ;
But, though to such demands unused,
And helpless almost as the blind, 1020

He raised her up; and while he held
Her body propped against his knee,
The Woman waked—and when she spied
The poor Ass standing by her side,
She moaned most bitterly. 1025

“Oh! God be praised—my heart’s at ease—
For he is dead—I know it well!”
—At this she wept a bitter flood;
And, in the best way that he could,
His tale did Peter tell. 1030

He trembles—he is pale as death;
His voice is weak with perturbation;
He turns aside his head, he pauses;
Poor Peter from a thousand causes
Is crippled sore in his narration. 1035

At length she learned how he espied
The Ass in that small meadow-ground;
And that her Husband now lay dead,
Beside that luckless river’s bed
In which he had been drowned. 1040

A piercing look the Widow cast
Upon the Beast that near her stands;
She sees ’tis he, that ’tis the same;
She calls the poor Ass by his name,
And wrings, and wrings her hands. 1045

“O wretched loss—untimely stroke!
If he had died upon his bed!
He knew not one forewarning pain;
He never will come home again—
Is dead, for ever dead!” 1050

Beside the Woman Peter stands;
His heart is opening more and more;
A holy sense pervades his mind;
He feels what he for human-kind
Has never felt before. 1055

At length, by Peter’s arm sustained,
The Woman rises from the ground—
“Oh, mercy! something must be done,
My little Rachel, you must run,—
Some willing neighbour must be found.

“Make haste—my little Rachel—do, 1061
The first you meet with—bid him come,
Ask him to lend his horse to-night,
And this good Man, whom Heaven requite,
Will help to bring the body home.” 1065

Away goes Rachel weeping loud;—
An Infant, waked by her distress,
Makes in the house a piteous cry;
And Peter hears the Mother sigh,
“Seven are they, and all fatherless!” 1070

And now is Peter taught to feel
That man’s heart is a holy thing;
And Nature, through a world of death,
Breathes into him a second breath,
More searching than the breath of spring.

Upon a stone the Woman sits 1076
In agony of silent grief—
From his own thoughts did Peter start;
He longs to press her to his heart,
From love that cannot find relief. 1080

But roused, as if through every limb
Had past a sudden shock of dread,
The Mother o’er the threshold flies,
And up the cottage stairs she hies,
And on the pillow lays her burning
head. 1085

And Peter turns his steps aside
Into a shade of darksome trees,
Where he sits down, he knows not how,
With his hands pressed against his brow,
His elbows on his tremulous knees. 1090

There, self-involved, does Peter sit Until no sign of life he makes,
As if his mind were sinking deep
Through years that have been long asleep!
The trance is passed away—he wakes;

He lifts his head—and sees the Ass 1096
Yet standing in the clear moonshine;
“When shall I be as good as thou?
Oh! would, poor beast, that I had now
A heart but half as good as thine!” 1100

But He—who deviously hath sought
 His Father through the lonesome woods,
 Hath sought, proclaiming to the ear
 Of night his grief and sorrowful fear—
 He comes, escaped from fields and floods ;— 1105

With weary pace is drawing nigh ;
 He sees the Ass—and nothing living
 Had ever such a fit of joy
 As hath this little orphan Boy,
 For he has no misgiving ! 1110

Forth to the gentle Ass he springs,
 And up about his neck he climbs ;
 In loving words he talks to him,
 He kisses, kisses face and limb,—
 He kisses him a thousand times ! 1115

This Peter sees, while in the shade
 He stood beside the cottage-door ;

And Peter Bell, the ruffian wild,
 Sobs loud, he sobs even like a child,
 "Oh ! God, I can endure no more !" 1120

—Here ends my Tale: for in a trice
 Arrived a neighbour with his horse ;
 Peter went forth with him straightway ;
 And, with due care, ere break of day,
 Together they brought back the Corse.

And many years did this poor Ass, 1126
 Whom once it was my luck to see Cropping the shrubs of Leming-Lane,
 Help by his labour to maintain
 The Widow and her family. 1130

And Peter Bell, who, till that night,
 Had been the wildest of his clan,
 Forsook his crimes, renounced his folly,
 And, after ten months' melancholy,
 Became a good and honest man. 1135

MISCELLANEOUS SONNETS.

DEDICATION.

TO —.

[Composed 1826 (?).—Published 1827.]

HAPPY the feeling from the bosom thrown
 In perfect shape (whose beauty Time shall spare Though a breath made it) like a bubble blown
 For summer pastime into wanton air ;
 Happy the thought best likened to a stone 5
 Of the sea-beach, when, polished with nice care,
 Veins it discovers exquisite and rare,
 Which for the loss of that moist gleam atone
 That tempted first to gather it. That here,
 O chief of Friends ! such feelings I present 10
 To thy regard, with thoughts so fortunate,
 Were a vain notion ; but the hope is dear
 That thou, if not with partial joy elate, Wilt smile upon this gift with more than mild content !

PART I.

I.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

NUNS fret not at their convent's narrow
 room ;
 And hermits are contented with their
 cells ;
 And students with their pensive citadels ; Maids at the wheel, the weaver at his loom,
 Sit blithe and happy ; bees that soar for bloom, 5
 High as the highest Peak of Furness-fells,
 Will murmur by the hour in foxglove
 bells :
 In truth the prison, unto which we doom
 Ourselves, no prison is : and hence for me,
 In sundry moods, 'twas pastime to be
 bound 10
 Within the Sonnet's scanty plot of ground ; Pleased if some Souls (for such there needs must be)

Who have felt the weight of too much liberty,
 Should find brief solace there, as I have found.

II.

ADMONITION.

Intended more particularly for the perusal of those who may have happened to be enamoured of some beautiful place of Retreat, in the Country of the Lakes.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

WELL may'st thou halt—and gaze with brightening eye !
 The lovely Cottage in the guardian nook Hath stirred thee deeply ; with its own
 dear brook,
 Its own small pasture, almost its own sky !
 But covet not the Abode ;—forbear to
 sigh, 5
 As many do, repining while they look ;
 Intruders—who would tear from Nature's book
 This precious leaf, with harsh impiety.
 Think what the Home must be if it were
 thine,
 Even thine, though few thy wants !—Roof, window, door, 10
 The very flowers are sacred to the Poor,
 The roses to the porch which they entwine :
 Yea, all, that now enchants thee, from
 the day
 On which it should be touched, would melt away.

III.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

“BELOVED Vale !” I said, “when I shall con
 Those many records of my childish years,
 Remembrance of myself and of my peers

Will press me down: to think of what is
gone

Will be an awful thought, if life have
one." 5

But, when into the Vale I came, no fears Distressed me; from mine eyes escaped
no tears;

Deep thought, or dread remembrance, had
I none.

By doubts and thousand petty fancies crost
I stood, of simple shame the blushing
Thrall; 10

So narrow seemed the brooks, the fields
so small!

A Juggler's balls old Time about him
tossed;

I looked, I stared, I smiled, I laughed;
and all

The weight of sadness was in wonder lost.

IV.

AT APPLETHWAITE, NEAR KESWICK.

[Composed 1804.—Published 1842.]

BEAUMONT! it was thy wish that I should rear

A seemly Cottage in this sunny Dell, On favoured ground, thy gift, where I might dwell

In neighbourhood with One to me most
dear,

That undivided we from year to year 5
Might work in our high Calling—a bright
hope

To which our fancies, mingling, gave free
scope

Till checked by some necessities severe.
And should these slacken, honoured

BEAUMONT! still

Even then we may perhaps in vain
implore 10

Leave of our fate thy wishes to fulfil.

Whether this boon be granted us or not,
Old Skiddaw will look down upon the Spot
With pride, the Muses love it evermore.

V.

[Composed 1801.—Published 1815.]

PELION and Ossa flourish side by side,
Together in immortal books enrolled:
His ancient dower Olympus hath not sold;

And that inspiring Hill, which "did
divide

Into two ample horns his forehead wide," 5
Shines with poetic radiance as of old;

While not an English Mountain we behold
By the celestial Muses glorified.

Yet round our sea-girt shore they rise in crowds:

What was the great Parnassus' self to
Thee, 10

Mount Skiddaw? In his natural sovereignty

Our British Hill is nobler far; he shrouds
His double front among Atlantic clouds,

And pours forth streams more sweet than Castaly.

VI.

[Composed 1801.—Published 1820.]

THERE is a little unpretending Rill
Of limpid water, humbler far than aught
That ever among Men or Naiads sought Notice or name!—It quivers down the
hill,

Furrowing its shallow way with dubious
will; 5

Yet to my mind this scanty Stream is
brought

Often than Ganges or the Nile; a
thought

Of private recollection sweet and still!
Months perish with their moons; year
treads on year;

But, faithful Emma! thou with me canst
say 10

That, while ten thousand pleasures dis-
appear,

And flies their memory fast almost as they;
The immortal Spirit of one happy day
Lingers beside that Rill, in vision clear.

VII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

HER only pilot the soft breeze, the boat
Lingers, but Fancy is well satisfied;
With keen-eyed Hope, with Memory, at her side,

And the glad Muse at liberty to note
All that to each is precious, as we float 5

Gently along ; regardless who shall chide
 If the heavens smile, and leave us free to
 glide,
 Happy Associates breathing air remote From trivial cares. But, Fancy and the Muse,
 Why have I crowded this small bark with
 you 10
 And others of your kind, ideal crew !
 While here sits One whose brightness owes its hues
 To flesh and blood ; no Goddess from above,
 No fleeting Spirit, but my own true Love?

VIII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1815.]

THE fairest, brightest, hues of ether fade ;
 The sweetest notes must terminate and
 die ;
 O Friend ! thy flute has breathed a harmony
 Softly resounded through this rocky glade ;
 Such strains of rapture as¹ the Genius
 played 5
 In his still haunt on Bagdad's summit
 high ;
 He who stood visible to Mirza's eye,
 Never before to human sight betrayed.
 Lo, in the vale, the mists of evening
 spread !
 The visionary Arches are not there, 10
 Nor the green Islands, nor the shining
 Seas ;
 Yet sacred is to me this Mountain's head, Whence I have risen, uplifted on the
 breeze
 Of harmony, above all earthly care.

IX.

UPON THE SIGHT OF A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE,
 Painted by Sir G. H. Beaumont, Bart.

[Composed August, 1811.—Published 1815.]

PRaised be the Art whose subtle power could stay
 Yon cloud, and fix it in that glorious
 shape ;

Nor would permit the thin smoke to escape,
 Nor those bright sunbeams to forsake the
 day ;
 Which stopped that band of travellers on their way, 5
 Ere they were lost within the shady
 wood ;
 And showed the Bark upon the glassy
 flood
 For ever anchored in her sheltering bay.
 Soul-soothing Art ! whom Morning, Noon-tide, Even,
 Do serve with all their changeful pageantry ; 10
 Thou, with ambition modest yet sublime,
 Here, for the sight of mortal man, hast
 given
 To one brief moment caught from fleeting
 time
 The appropriate calm of blest eternity.

X.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

“WHY, Minstrel, these untuneful murmurings—
 Dull, flagging notes that with each other jar ?”
 “Think, gentle Lady, of a Harp so far From its own country, and forgive the strings.”
 A simple answer ! but even so forth
 springs, 5
 From the Castalian fountain of the heart,
 The Poetry of Life, and all that
 Art
 Divine of words quickening insensate
 things.
 From the submissive necks of guiltless
 men
 Stretched on the block the glittering axe recoils ; 10
 Sun, moon, and stars, all struggle in the toils
 Of mortal sympathy ; what wonder then That the poor Harp distempered music
 yields
 To its sad Lord, far from his native
 fields ?

XI.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819¹]

AERIAL Rock—whose solitary brow
 From this low threshold daily meets my
 sight;
 When I step forth to hail the morning
 light;
 Or quit the stars with a lingering farewell—how Shall Fancy pay to thee a grateful vow? 5
 How, with the Muse's aid, her love attest?
 —By planting on thy naked head the crest
 Of an imperial Castle, which the plough
 Of ruin shall not touch. Innocent scheme!
 That doth presume no more than to supply 10
 A grace the sinuous vale and roaring
 stream
 Want, through neglect of hoar Antiquity.
 Rise, then, ye votive Towers! and catch a
 gleam
 Of golden sunset, ere it fade and die.

XII.

TO SLEEP.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

O GENTLE Sleep! do they belong to thee, These twinklings of oblivion? Thou dost
 love
 To sit in meekness, like the brooding
 Dove,
 A captive never wishing to be free.
 This tiresome night, O Sleep! thou art
 to me 5
 A Fly, that up and down himself doth shove
 Upon a fretful rivulet, now above,
 Now on the water vexed with mockery.
 I have no pain that calls for patience, no;
 Hence am I cross and peevish as a
 child: 10
 Am pleased by fits to have thee for my foe,
 Yet ever willing to be reconciled:

¹ This, and eleven other Sonnets here marked simply "1819," appeared in the vol. containing The Waggoner, which was published in the summer of 1819 shortly after Peter Bell.—Ed.

O gentle Creature! do not use me so,
 But once and deeply let me be beguiled.

XIII.

TO SLEEP.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

FOND words have oft been spoken to thee,
 Sleep!
 And thou hast had thy store of tenderest
 names;
 The very sweetest Fancy culls or frames,
 When thankfulness of heart is strong and
 deep!
 Dear Bosom-child we call thee, that dost
 steep 5
 In rich reward all suffering; Balm that tames
 All anguish; Saint that evil thoughts and aims Takest away, and into souls dost creep, Like to a breeze from heaven. Shall I
 alone,
 I surely not a man ungently made, 10
 Call thee worst Tyrant by which Flesh is crost?
 Perverse, self-willed to own and to disown,
 Mere slave of them who never for thee
 prayed,
 Still last to come where thou art wanted most!

XIV.

TO SLEEP.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

A FLOCK of sheep that leisurely pass by,
 One after one; the sound of rain, and bees Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and
 seas,
 Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure sky;
 I have thought of all by turns, and yet do lie 5
 Sleepless! and soon the small birds'
 melodies
 Must hear, first uttered from my orchard
 trees;
 And the first cuckoo's melancholy cry.
 Even thus last night, and two nights more, I lay

And could not win thee, Sleep! by any stealth: 10
So do not let me wear to-night away:
Without Thee what is all the morning's wealth?
Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health!

XV.

THE WILD DUCK'S NEST.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

THE imperial Consort of the Fairy-king
Owns not a sylvan bower; or gorgeous cell
With emerald floored, and with purpureal shell Ceilinged and roofed; that is so fair a thing
As this low structure, for the tasks of
Spring 5
Prepared by one who loves the buoyant
swell
Of the brisk waves, yet here consents to
dwell;
And spreads in steadfast peace her brooding wing.
Words cannot paint the o'ershadowing
yew-tree bough,
And dimly-gleaming Nest,—a hollow
crown 10
Of golden leaves inlaid with silver down,
Fine as the mother's softest plumes allow:
I gazed—and, self-accused while gazing,
sighed
For human-kind, weak slaves of cumbrous
pride!

XVI.

WRITTEN UPON A BLANK LEAF IN "THE COMPLETE ANGLER."

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

WHILE flowing rivers yield a blameless
sport,
Shall live the name of Walton: Sage benign!
Whose pen, the mysteries of the rod and
line
Unfolding, did not fruitlessly exhort 4
To reverend watching of each still report
That Nature utters from her rural shrine.
Meek, nobly versed in simple discipline—

He found the longest summer day too
short,
To his loved pastime given by sedgy Lee,
Or down the tempting maze of Shawford
brook— 10
Fairer than life itself, in this sweet Book,
The cowslip-bank and shady willow-tree;
And the fresh meads—where flowed, from every nook
Of his full bosom, gladsome Piety!

XVII.

TO THE POET, JOHN DYER.

[Composed 1811.—Published 1820.]

BARD of the Fleece, whose skilful genius
made
That work a living landscape fair and
bright;
Nor hallowed less with musical delight Than those soft scenes through which thy childhood strayed, Those southern tracts of Cambria, "deep embayed, 5
With green hills fenced, with ocean's murmur lulled;"
Though hasty Fame hath many a chaplet culled
For worthless brows, while in the pensive
shade
Of cold neglect she leaves thy head un-
graced,
Yet pure and powerful minds, hearts
meek and still, 10
A grateful few, shall love thy modest Lay,
Long as the shepherd's bleating flock shall stray
O'er naked Snowdon's wide aerial waste;
Long as the thrush shall pipe on Grongar Hill!

XVIII.

ON THE DETRACTION WHICH FOLLOWED THE PUBLICATION OF A CERTAIN POEM.

[Composed 1820.—Published 1820.]

See Milton's Sonnet, beginning, "A Book was writ of late called 'Tetrachordon.'"
A BOOK came forth of late, called PETER
BELL;
Not negligent the style;—the matter?—
good

As aught that song records of Robin
Hood;
Or Roy, renowned through many a Scottish dell;
But some (who brook those hackneyed themes full well, 5 Nor heat, at Tam o' Shanter's name, their
blood)
Waxed wroth, and with foul claws, a harry brood,
On Bard and Hero clamorously fell.
Heed not, wild Rover once through heath and glen,
Who mad'st at length the better life thy choice, 10
Heed not such onset! nay, if praise of
men
To thee appear not an unmeaning
voice,
Lift up that grey-haired forehead, and rejoice
In the just tribute of thy Poet's pen!

XIX.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

GRIEF, thou hast lost an ever-ready
friend
Now that the cottage Spinning-wheel is mute;
And Care—a comforter that best could
suit
Her forward mood, and softliest repre-
hend;
And Love—a charmer's voice, that used to lend, 5
More efficaciously than aught that flows
From harp or lute, kind influence to compose
The throbbing pulse—else troubled without end:
Even Joy could tell, Joy craving truce and rest
From her own overflow, what power sedate 10
On those revolving motions did await Assiduously—to soothe her aching breast;
And, to a point of just relief, abate
The mantling triumphs of a day too blest.

XX.

TO S. H.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

Excuse is needless when with love sincere
Of occupation, not by fashion led,
Thou turn'st the Wheel that slept with dust o'erspread;
My nerves from no such murmur shrink,— tho' near,
Soft as the Dorhawk's to a distant ear, 5
When twilight shades darken the mountain's head.
Even She who toils to spin our vital thread
Might smile on work, O Lady, once so
dear
To household virtues. Venerable Art, Torn from the Poor! yet shall kind Heaven protect 10
Its own; though Rulers, with undue respect,
Trusting to crowded factory and mart
And proud discoveries of the intellect, Heed not the pillage of man's ancient heart.

XXI.

COMPOSED IN ONE OF THE VALLEYS OF WESTMORELAND, ON EASTER SUNDAY.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

WITH each recurrence of this glorious
morn
That saw the Saviour in his human frame Rise from the dead, erewhile the Cottage-dame
Put on fresh raiment—till that hour un-
worn:
Domestic hands the home-bred wool had shorn, 5
And she who span it culled the daintiest
fleece,
In thoughtful reverence to the Prince of
Peace,
Whose temples bled beneath the platted
thorn.
A blest estate when piety sublime
These humble props disdained not! O green dales! 10

Sad may I be who heard your sabbath
chime
When Art's abused inventions were un-
known;
Kind Nature's various wealth was all your own;
And benefits were weighed in Reason's scales!

XXII.

DECAY OF PIETY.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

OFT have I seen, ere Time had ploughed my cheek,
Matrons and Sires—who, punctual to the call
Of their loved Church, on fast or festival
Through the long year the House of Prayer would seek:
By Christmas snows, by visitation bleak
Of Easter winds, unscared, from hut or hall
They came to lowly bench or sculptured stall,
But with one fervour of devotion meek.
I see the places where they once were
known,
And ask, surrounded even by kneeling
crowds,
Is ancient Piety for ever flown?
Alas! even then they seemed like fleecy
clouds
That, struggling through the western sky, have won
Their pensive light from a departed sun!

XXIII.

COMPOSED ON THE EVE OF THE MARRIAGE OF A FRIEND¹ IN THE VALE OF GRAS-
MERE, 1812.

[Composed 1812.—Published 1815.]

WHAT need of clamorous bells, or ribands
gay,
These humble nuptials to proclaim or
grace?
Angels of love, look down upon the place;

¹ The poet's wife's brother, Thomas Hutchinson, who married Mary Monkhouse, November 1, 1812.—Ed.

Shed on the chosen vale a sun-bright day!
Yet no proud gladness would the Bride display
Even for such promise:—serious is her
face,
Modest her mien; and she, whose thoughts
keep pace
With gentleness, in that becoming way Will thank you. Faultless does the Maid
appear;
No disproportion in her soul, no strife: so
But, when the closer view of wedded life Hath shown that nothing human can be clear
From frailty, for that insight may the Wife
To her indulgent Lord become more dear.

XXIV.

FROM THE ITALIAN OF MICHAEL ANGELO.

I.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

YES! hope may with my strong desire
keep pace,
And I be undeluded, unbetrayed;
For if of our affections none finds grace
In sight of Heaven, then, wherefore hath God made
The world which we inhabit? Better plea Love cannot have than that in loving thee
Glory to that eternal Peace is paid,
Who such divinity to thee imparts
As hallows and makes pure all gentle
hearts.
His hope is treacherous only whose love dies
With beauty, which is varying every hour;
But in chaste hearts, uninfluenced by the
power
Of outward change, there blooms a deathless flower,
That breathes on earth the air of paradise.

XXV.

FROM THE SAME.

II.

[Composed probably 1805.—Published 1807.]

No mortal object did these eyes behold
When first they met the placid light of
thine,
And my Soul felt her destiny divine,

And hope of endless peace in me grew bold:
 Heaven-born, the Soul a heavenward course must hold; 5
 Beyond the visible world she soars to seek (For what delights the sense is false and weak)
 Ideal Form, the universal mould.
 The wise man, I affirm, can find no rest
 In that which perishes: nor will he lend His heart to aught which doth on time depend. II
 'Tis sense, unbridled will, and not true
 love,
 That kills the soul: love better what is best,
 Even here below, but more in heaven
 above.

XXVI.

FROM THE SAME. TO THE SUPREME BEING.

III.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

THE prayers I make will then be sweet
 indeed
 If Thou the spirit give by which I pray:
 My unassisted heart is barren clay,
 That of its native self can nothing feed:
 Of good and pious works Thou art the seed,
 That quickens only where Thou say'st
 it may: 6
 Unless Thou show to us thine own true
 way
 No man can find it: Father! Thou must lead.
 Do Thou, then, breathe those thoughts into my mind 9
 By which such virtue may in me be bred
 That in thy holy footsteps I may tread;
 The fetters of my tongue do Thou unbind,
 That I may have the power to sing of
 Thee,
 And sound thy praises everlastingly.

XXVII.

[Composed later than June, 1812.—Published 1815.]

SURPRISED by joy—impatient as the Wind
 I turned to share the transport—Oh! with whom

But Thee¹, deep buried in the silent tomb,
 That spot which no vicissitude can find?
 Love, faithful love, recalled thee to my
 mind— 5
 But how could I forget thee? Through what power,
 Even for the least division of an hour,
 Have I been so beguiled as to be blind
 To my most grievous loss!—That thought's
 return 9
 Was the worst pang that sorrow ever
 bore,
 Save one, one only, when I stood for-
 lorn,
 Knowing my heart's best treasure was no
 more;
 That neither present time, nor years unborn
 Could to my sight that heavenly face
 restore.

METHOUGHT I saw the footsteps of a
 throne
 Which mists and vapours from mine eyes did shroud—
 Nor view of who might sit thereon allowed;
 But all the steps and ground about were strown
 With sights the ruefullest that flesh and bone 5
 Ever put on; a miserable crowd, Sick, hale, old, young, who cried before that cloud,
 "Thou art our king, O Death! to thee we groan."
 Those steps I clomb; the mists before me gave Smooth way; and I beheld the face of one Sleeping alone within a mossy cave, II
 With her face up to heaven; that seemed

A lovely Beauty in a summer grave !

[Composed November, 1836.—Published 1837.]

EVEN so for me a Vision sanctified
The sway of Death ; long ere mine eyes had seen .
Thy countenance—the still rapture of thy mien—
When thou, dear Sister ! wert become Death's Bride :
No trace of pain or languor could abide 5
That change :—age on thy brow was smoothed—thy cold
Wan cheek at once was privileged to unfold
A loveliness to living youth denied.
Oh ! if within me hope should e'er decline,
The lamp of faith, lost Friend ! too faintly burn ; 10
Then may that heaven-revealing smile of
thine,
The bright assurance, visibly return :
And let my spirit in that power divine Rejoice, as, through that power, it ceased to mourn.

XXX.

[Composed August, 1802.—Published 1807.]

It is a beauteous evening, calm and free,
The holy time is quiet as a Nun
Breathless with adoration ; the broad sun
Is sinking down in its tranquillity ;
The gentleness of heaven broods o'er the
Sea : 5
Listen ! the mighty Being is awake,
And doth with his eternal motion make
A sound like thunder—everlastingly.
Dear Child ! dear Girl ! that walkest with me here,
If thou appear untouched by solemn
thought, 10
Thy nature is not therefore less divine :
Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the
year ;

And worshipp'st at the Temple's inner
shrine,
God being with thee when we know it not.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

WHERE lies the Land to which yon Ship must go ?
Fresh as a lark mounting at break of day,
Festively she puts forth in trim array ;
Is she for tropic suns, or polar snow ?
What boots the enquiry ?—Neither friend nor foe 5
She cares for ; let her travel where she
may,
She finds familiar names, a beaten way
Ever before her, and a wind to blow.
Yet still I ask, what haven is her mark ?
And, almost as it was when ships were rare, 10
(From time to time, like Pilgrims, here and there Crossing the waters) doubt, and something dark,
Of the old Sea some reverential fear,
Is with me at thy farewell, joyous Bark !

XXXII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

WITH Ships the sea was sprinkled far
and nigh,
Like stars in heaven, and joyously it
showed ;
Some lying fast at anchor in the road,
Some veering up and down, one knew not why.
A goodly Vessel did I then espy 5
Come like a giant from a haven broad ;
And lustily along the bay she strode,
Her tackling rich, and of apparel high.
This Ship was nought to me, nor I to her,
Yet I pursued her with a Lover's look ; 10
This Ship to all the rest did I prefer :
When will she turn, and whither ? She will brook
No tarrying ; where She comes the winds must stir :
On went She, and due north her journey took.

XXXIII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

THE world is too much with us; late and soon,
 Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers:
 Little we see in Nature that is ours;
 We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon!
 This Sea that bares her bosom to the moon;
 The winds that will be howling at all hours,
 And are up-gathered now like sleeping flowers;
 For this, for everything, we are out of tune;
 It moves us not.—Great God! I'd rather be A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn; 10
 So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
 Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn;
 Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea;
 Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn.

[Composed ?.—Published 1823 (Joanna Baillie's Poetic Miscellanies); ed. 1827.]

A VOLANT Tribe of Bards on earth are found,
 Who, while the flattering Zephyrs round them play,
 On "coignes of vantage" hang their nests of clay;
 How quickly from that aery hold unbound,
 Dust for oblivion! To the solid ground 5
 Of nature trusts the Mind that builds for aye;
 Convinced that there, there only, she can lay Secure foundations. As the year runs round,
 Apart she toils within the chosen ring;
 While the stars shine, or while day's purple eye 10
 Is gently closing with the flowers of spring;

Where even the motion of an Angel's wing
 Would interrupt the intense tranquillity
 Of silent hills, and more than silent sky.

[Composed probably 1815.—Published 1815.]

"WEAK is the will of Man, his judgment blind;
 Remembrance persecutes, and Hope betrays;
 Heavy is woe;—and joy, for human-kind,
 A mournful thing, so transient is the blaze!"
 Thus might he paint our lot of mortal days 5
 Who wants the glorious faculty assigned
 To elevate the more-than-reasoning Mind,
 And colour life's dark cloud with orient rays.
 Imagination is that sacred power, Imagination lofty and refined: 10
 'Tis hers to pluck the amaranthine flower
 Of Faith, and round the sufferer's temples bind Wreaths that endure affliction's heaviest shower,
 And do not shrink from sorrow's keenest wind.

TO THE MEMORY OF RAISLEY CALVERT.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

CALVERT! it must not be unheard by them
 Who may respect my name that I to thee
 Owed many years of early liberty.
 This care was thine when sickness did condemn Thy youth to hopeless wasting, root and stem— 5
 That I, if frugal and severe, might stray
 Where'er I liked; and finally array
 My temples with the Muse's diadem.
 Hence, if in freedom I have loved the truth;
 If there be aught of pure, or good, or great, 10
 In my past verse; or shall be, in the lays
 Of higher mood, which now I meditate;—

It gladdens me, O worthy, short-lived,
Youth!
To think how much of this will be thy praise.

PART II.

I.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

SCORN not the Sonnet; Critic, you have frowned,
Mindless of its just honours; with this key Shakspeare unlocked his heart; the melody
Of this small lute gave ease to Petrarch's
wound;
A thousand times this pipe did Tasso
sound; 5
With it Camoëns soothed an exile's grief;
The Sonnet glittered a gay myrtle leaf Amid the cypress with which Dante
crowned
His visionary brow: a glow-worm lamp,
It cheered mild Spenser, called from Faery-land 10
To struggle through dark ways; and when a damp Fell round the path of Milton, in his
hand
The Thing became a trumpet; whence he blew
Soul-animating strains—alas, too few!

II.

[Composed December 1806.—Published 1807.]

How sweet it is, when mother Fancy
rocks
The wayward brain, to saunter through a
wood!
An old place, full of many a lovely brood,
Tall trees, green arbours, and ground-flowers in flocks;
And wild rose tip-toe upon hawthorn stocks, 5
Like a bold Girl, who plays her agile pranks
At Wakes and Fairs with wandering Mountebanks,—
When she stands cresting the Clown's head, and mocks
The crowd beneath her. Verily I think,

Such place to me is sometimes like a
dream 10
Or map of the whole world: thoughts, link by link,
Enter through ears and eyesight, with such gleam
Of all things, that at last in fear I shrink,
And leap at once from the delicious
stream.

TO B. R. HAYDON.

[Composed December 1815.—Published February
4, 1816 (The Champion); March 31, 1816 (The Examiner); vol. of 1816.]

HIGH is our calling, Friend!—Creative
Art (Whether the instrument of words she
use,
Or pencil pregnant with ethereal hues,)
Demands the service of a mind and heart,
Though sensitive, yet, in their weakest
part, 5
Heroically fashioned—to infuse
Faith in the whispers of the lonely Muse, While the whole world seems adverse to desert.
And, oh! when Nature sinks, as oft she
may,
Through long-lived pressure of obscure distress, 10
Still to be strenuous for the bright reward,
And in the soul admit of no decay,
Brook no continuance of weak-minded-
ness—
Great is the glory, for the strife is hard!

IV.

[Composed 1814.—Published 1815.]

FROM the dark chambers of dejection
freed,
Spurning the unprofitable yoke of care,
Rise, GILLIES, rise: the gales of youth shall bear
Thy genius forward like a wingèd steed.
Though bold Bellerophon (so Jove de-
creed 5
In wrath) fell headlong from the fields of
air,

Yet a rich guerdon waits on minds that dare,
 If aught be in them of immortal seed,
 And reason govern that audacious flight Which heavenward they direct.—Then droop not thou, 10
 Erroneously renewing a sad vow
 In the low dell 'mid Roslin's faded grove:
 A cheerful life is what the Muses love,
 A soaring spirit is their prime delight.

V.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

FAIR Prime of life! were it enough to gild
 With ready sunbeams every straggling
 shower;
 And, if an unexpected cloud should lower,
 Swiftly thereon a rainbow arch to build For Fancy's errands,—then, from fields half-tilled 5
 Gathering green weeds to mix with poppy
 flower,
 Thee might thy Minions crown, and chant thy power,
 Unpitied by the wise, all censure stilled.
 Ah! show that worthier honours are thy
 due;
 Fair Prime of life! arouse the deeper
 heart; 10
 Confirm the Spirit glorying to pursue
 Some path of steep ascent and lofty aim;
 And, if there be a joy that slights the
 claim
 Of grateful memory, bid that joy depart.

VI.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

I WATCH, and long have watched, with calm regret
 Yon slowly-sinking star—immortal Sire
 (So might he seem) of all the glittering
 quire!
 Blue ether still surrounds him,—yet—and
 yet;
 But now the horizon's rocky parapet 5
 Is reached, where, forfeiting his bright
 attire,
 He burns—transmuted to a dusky fire—
 Then pays submissively the appointed debt

To the flying moments, and is seen no
 more.
 Angels and gods! We struggle with our fate, 10
 While health, power, glory, from their height decline,
 Depressed; and then extinguished: and our state,
 In this, how different, lost Star, from
 thine,
 That no to-morrow shall our beams restore!

VII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

I HEARD (alas! 'twas only in a dream) Strains—which, as sage Antiquity believed,
 By waking ears have sometimes been received
 Wafted adown the wind from lake or
 stream;
 A most melodious requiem, a supreme 5
 And perfect harmony of notes, achieved
 By a fair Swan on drowsy billows heaved,
 O'er which her pinions shed a silver gleam.
 For is she not the votary of Apollo?
 And knows she not, singing as he inspires, 10
 That bliss awaits her which the ungenial
 Hollow¹
 Of the dull earth partakes not, nor desires?
 Mount, tuneful Bird, and join the immortal quires!
 She soared—and I awoke, struggling in vain to follow.

RETIREMENT.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

If the whole weight of what we think and
 feel,
 Save only far as thought and feeling blend
 With action, were as nothing, patriot
 Friend!

¹ See the "Phædo" of Plato, by which this Sonnet was suggested.

From thy remonstrance would be no appeal ;
 But to promote and fortify the weal 5
 Of her own Being is her paramount end ;
 A truth which they alone shall comprehend
 Who shun the mischief which they cannot heal.
 Peace in these feverish times is sovereign
 bliss :
 Here, with no thirst but what the stream can slake, 10
 And startled only by the rustling brake, Cool air I breathe ; while the unincum-bered Mind,
 By some weak aims at services assigned To gentle Natures, thanks not Heaven amiss.

[Composed ?.—Published 1823 (Joanna Ballie's Poetic Miscellanies); ed. 1827.]

NOT Love, not War, nor the tumultuous
 swell
 Of civil conflict, nor the wrecks of change,
 Nor Duty struggling with afflictions strange—
 Not these alone inspire the tuneful shell ;
 But where untroubled peace and concord
 dwell, 5
 There also is the Muse not loth to range, Watching the twilight smoke of cot or grange,
 Skyward ascending from a woody dell.
 Meek aspirations please her, lone endeavour,
 And sage content, and placid melancholy ;
 She loves to gaze upon a crystal river—11
 Diaphanous because it travels slowly ; Soft is the music that would charm for ever ;
 The flower of sweetest smell is shy and lowly.

MARK the concentrated hazels that en-
 close Yon old grey Stone, protected from the ray

Of noontide suns :—and even the beams that play
 And glance, while wantonly the rough wind blows,
 Are seldom free to touch the moss that grows 5
 Upon that roof, amid embowering gloom,
 The very image framing of a Tomb,
 In which some ancient Chieftain finds
 repose
 Among the lonely mountains.—Live, ye
 trees !
 And thou, grey Stone, the pensive likeness keep 10
 Of a dark chamber where the Mighty
 sleep :
 For more than Fancy to the influence bends
 When solitary Nature condescends
 To mimic Time's forlorn humanities.

COMPOSED AFTER A JOURNEY ACROSS THE HAMBLETON HILLS, YORKSHIRE.

[Composed October 4, 1802.—Published 1807.]

DARK and more dark the shades of evening fell ;
 The wished-for point was reached—but at
 an hour
 When little could be gained from that rich dower
 Of prospect, whereof many thousands
 tell.
 Yet did the glowing west with marvellous
 power 5
 Salute us ; there stood Indian citadel, Temple of Greece, and minster with its
 tower
 Substantially expressed—a place for bell
 Or clock to toll from ! Many a tempting
 isle,
 With groves that never were imagined,
 lay
 'Mid seas how steadfast ! objects all for the eye 11
 Of silent rapture ; but we felt the while We should forget them ; they are of the
 sky,
 And from our earthly memory fade away.

XII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

— “they are of the sky,
And from our earthly memory fade away.”

THOSE words were uttered as in pensive
mood

We turned, departing from that solemn
sight:

A contrast and reproach to gross delight,
And life's unspiritual pleasures daily wooded!

But now upon this thought I cannot
brood; 5

It is unstable as a dream of night;
Nor will I praise a cloud, however bright,
Disparaging Man's gifts, and proper food.
Grove, isle, with every shape of sky-built
dome,

Though clad in colours beautiful and
pure, 10

Find in the heart of man no natural
home:

The immortal Mind craves objects that endure:

These cleave to it; from these it cannot
roam,

Nor they from it: their fellowship is secure.

SEPTEMBER, 1815.

[Composed December, 1815.—Published February
11, 1816 (The Examiner); vol. of 1816.]

WHILE not a leaf seems faded; while the
fields,

With ripening harvest prodigally fair,
In brightest sunshine bask; this nipping
air,

Sent from some distant clime where Winter wilds

His icy scimitar, a foretaste yields 5
Of bitter change, and bids the flowers
beware;

And whispers to the silent birds, “Prepare

Against the threatening foe your trustiest
shields.”

For me, who under kindlier laws belong.

To Nature's tuneful quire, this rustling dry Through leaves yet green, and yon crystalline sky, 11

Announce a season potent to renew,
'Mid frost and snow, the instinctive joys of song,

And nobler cares than listless summer
knew.

XIV.

NOVEMBER I.

[Composed December, 1815.—Published January
28, 1816 (The Examiner); vol. of 1816.]

How clear, how keen, how marvellously
bright

The effluence from yon distant mountain's
head,

Which, strewn with snow smooth as the sky can shed,

Shines like another sun—on mortal sight
Uprisen, as if to check approaching Night,
And all her twinkling stars. Who now would tread, 6

If so he might, yon mountain's glittering
head—

Terrestrial, but a surface, by the flight
Of sad mortality's earth-sullying wing, Unswapt, unstained? Nor shall the aerial
Powers 10

Dissolve that beauty, destined to endure,
White, radiant, spotless, exquisitely pure,
Through all vicissitudes, till genial Spring
Has filled the laughing vales with welcome flowers.

COMPOSED DURING A STORM.

[Composed February, 1819.—Published in Peter Bell vol., 1819.]

ONE who was suffering tumult in his soul
Yet failed to seek the sure relief of prayer, Went forth—his course surrendering to the care

Of the fierce wind, while mid-day lightnings prowl

Insidiously, untimely thunders growl; 5
While trees, dim-seen, in frenzied numbers, tear

The lingering remnant of their yellow hair,

And shivering wolves, surprised with darkness, howl
As if the sun were not. He raised his eye Soul-smitten; for, that instant did appear Large space, ('mid dreadful clouds) of purest sky, 11
An azure disc—shield of Tranquillity;
Invisible, unlooked-for, minister
Of providential goodness ever nigh!

XVI.

TO A SNOWDROP.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

LONE Flower, hemmed in with snows, and white as they
But hardier far, once more I see thee bend
Thy forehead as if fearful to offend, Like an unbidden guest. Though day
by day
Storms, sallying from the mountain-tops, waylay 5
The rising sun, and on the plains descend;
Yet art thou welcome, welcome as a
friend
Whose zeal outruns his promise! Blue-eyed May Shall soon behold this border thickly set With bright jonquils, their odours lavish-
ing 10
On the soft west-wind and his frolic
peers;
Nor will I then thy modest grace forget, Chaste Snowdrop, venturous harbinger of Spring,
And pensive monitor of fleeting years!

XVII.

TO THE LADY MARY LOWTHER.

With a selection from the Poems of Anne, Countess of Winchilsea; and extracts of similar character from other Writers; transcribed by a female friend.

[Composed ?.—Published 1820.]

LADY! I rifled a Parnassian Cave
(But seldom trod) of mildly-gleaming ore;
And culled, from sundry beds a lucid
store

Of genuine crystals, pure as those that pave
The azure brooks, where Dian joys to lave 5
Her spotless limbs; and ventured to explore
Dim shades—for reliques, upon Lethe's
shore,
Cast up at random by the sullen wave.
To female hands the treasures were resigned;
And lo this Work!—a grotto bright and
clear 10
From stain or taint; in which thy blameless mind
May feed on thoughts though pensive not austere;
Or, if thy deeper spirit be inclined
To holy musing, it may enter here.

XVIII.

TO LADY BEAUMONT.

[Composed January or February, 1807.—Published 1807.]

LADY! the songs of Spring were in the grove
While I was shaping beds for winter
flowers;
While I was planting green unfading
bowers,
And shrubs—to hang upon the warm alcove,
And sheltering wall; and still, as Fancy wove 5
The dream, to time and nature's blended
powers
I gave this paradise for winter hours,
A labyrinth, Lady! which your feet shall rove.
Yes! when the sun of life more feebly shines,
Becoming thoughts, I trust, of solemn
gloom 10
Or of high gladness you shall hither
bring;
And these perennial bowers and murmuring pines
Be gracious as the music and the bloom
And all the mighty ravishment of spring.

XIX.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

THERE is a pleasure in poetic pains Which only Poets know;—'t was rightly
 said;
 Whom could the Muses else allure to
 tread
 Their smoothest paths, to wear their lightest chains?
 When happiest Fancy has inspired the
 strains, 5
 How oft the malice of one luckless word Pursues the Enthusiast to the social board,
 Haunts him belated on the silent plains!
 Yet he repines not, if his thought stand
 clear,
 At last, of hindrance and obscurity, 10
 Fresh as the star that crowns the brow of
 morn;
 Bright, speckless, as a softly-moulded tear
 The moment it has left the virgin's eye,
 Or rain-drop lingering on the pointed thorn.

XX.

[Composed ?.—Published 1815.]

THE Shepherd, looking eastward, softly
 said,
 "Bright is thy veil, O Moon, as thou art
 bright!"
 Forthwith that little cloud, in ether
 spread
 And penetrated all with tender light,
 She cast away, and showed her fulgent
 head 5
 Uncovered; dazzling the Beholder's sight
 As if to vindicate her beauty's right,
 Her beauty thoughtlessly disparagèd.
 Meanwhile that veil, removed or thrown
 aside,
 Went floating from her, darkening as it
 went; 10
 And a huge mass, to bury or to hide,
 Approached this glory of the firmament;
 Who meekly yields, and is obscured—
 content
 With one calm triumph of a modest pride.

XXI.

[Composed not later than 1819.—Published 1820.]

WHEN haughty expectations prostrate lie,
 And grandeur crouches like a guilty
 thing,
 Oft shall the lowly weak, till nature bring Mature release, in fair society Survive, and Fortune's utmost anger
 try; 5
 Like these frail snowdrops that together
 cling,
 And nod their helmets, smitten by the wing
 Of many a furious whirl-blast sweeping by.
 Observe the faithful flowers! if small to great
 May lead the thoughts, thus struggling used to stand 10
 The Emathian phalanx, nobly obstinate;
 And so the bright immortal Theban band, Whom onset, fiercely urged at Jove's
 command,
 Might overwhelm, but could not separate!

XXII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1815.]

HAIL, Twilight, sovereign of one peaceful
 hour!
 Not dull art Thou as undiscerning Night;
 But studious only to remove from sight
 Day's mutable distinctions.—Ancient
 Power!
 Thus did the waters gleam, the mountains lower, 5
 To the rude Briton, when, in wolf-skin vest Here roving wild, he laid him down to
 rest
 On the bare rock, or through a leafy
 bower
 Looked ere his eyes were closed. By him was seen
 The self-same Vision which we now behold,
 At thy meek bidding, shadowy Power!
 brought forth; 11
 These mighty barriers, and the gulf between;
 The flood, the stars,—a spectacle as old As the beginning of the heavens and earth!

XXIII¹.

[Composed perhaps 1802.—Published 1807.]

WITH how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st the sky,
"How silently, and with how wan a
face!"

Where art thou? Thou so often seen on
high

Running among the clouds a Woodnymph's race!

Unhappy Nuns, whose common breath's
a sigh

Which they would stife, move at such a pace!

The northern Wind, to call thee to the
chase,

Must blow to-night his bugle horn. Had I
The power of Merlin, Goddess! this should be:

And all the stars, fast as the clouds were riven,

Should sally forth, to keep thee company,
Hurrying and sparkling through the clear blue heaven;

But, Cynthia! should to thee the palm be given,

Queen both for beauty and for majesty.

XXIV.

[Composed ?.—Published 1815.]

EVEN as a dragon's eye that feels the stress

Of a bedimmed sleep, or as a lamp Sullenly² glaring through sepulchral damp,

So burns yon Taper 'mid a black recess

¹ This poem originally consisted of fifteen lines: it was shortened and classed as a Sonnet in ed. 1820. See Supplement, page 629.—Ed.

² The collective edd. of the Poems from 1827 to 1849 read "suddenly"; edd. 1815, 1820, and the Sonnet-vol. of 1838 read "sullenly." The latter is undoubtedly the word intended by Wordsworth. Cf. "sullen fire," Misc. Son. II. vi. l. 7 (edd. 1819, 1820, 1827); "sullen star," Excursion IV. 487; and the "sullen light," i.e. the faintly glowing wick of an extinguished candle, spoken of in Wordsworth's reply to the letter of Mathetes (The Friend, iii. 48, ed. 1818).—Ed.

Of mountains, silent, dreary, motionless:
The lake below reflects it not; the sky
Muffled in clouds, affords no company
To mitigate and cheer its loneliness.
Yet, round the body of that joyless Thing
Which sends so far its melancholy light,
Perhaps are seated in domestic ring
A gay society with fates bright, Conversing, reading, laughing;—or they
sing,
While hearts and voices in the song unite.

XXV.

[Composed ?.—Published 1820.]

THE stars are mansions built by Nature's
hand,

And, haply, there the spirits of the blest Dwell, clothed in radiance, their immortal vest;

Huge Ocean shows, within his yellow
strand,

A habitation marvellously planned,
For life to occupy in love and rest;

All that we see—is dome, or vault, or
nest,

Or fortress, reared at Nature's sage command.

Glad thought for every season! but the
Spring

Gave it while cares were weighing on my
heart,

'Mid song of birds, and insects murmur-
ing;

And while the youthful year's prolific
art—

Of bud, leaf, blade, and flower—was fashioning

Abodes where self-disturbance hath no
part.

XXVI.

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

DESPONDING Father! mark this altered
bough,

So beautiful of late, with sunshine warmed,

Or moist with dews; what more unsightly now,

Its blossoms shrivelled, and its fruit, if formed,

Invisible? yet Spring her genial brow 5
 Knits not o'er that discolouring and decay
 As false to expectation. Nor fret thou
 At like unlovely process in the May
 Of human life: a Stripling's graces blow, Fade and are shed, that from their timely
 fall 10
 (Misdeem it not a cankerous change) may grow
 Rich mellow bearings, that for thanks
 shall call:
 In all men, sinful is it to be slow
 To hope—in Parents, sinful above all.

CAPTIVITY.—MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS.

[Composed ?.—Published 1819.]

“As the cold aspect of a sunless way Strikes through the Traveller's frame with deadlier chill,
 Oft as appears a grove, or obvious hill,
 Glistening with unparticipated ray,
 Or shining slope where he must never
 stray; 5
 So joys, remembered without wish or will,
 Sharpen the keenest edge of present ill,—
 On the crushed heart a heavier burthen
 lay.
 Just Heaven, contract the compass of
 my mind
 To fit proportion with my altered state!
 Quench those felicities whose light I find Reflected in my bosom all too late!— 12
 O be my spirit, like my thralldom, strait;
 And, like mine eyes that stream with sorrow, blind!”

ST. CATHERINE OF LEDBURY.

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

WHEN human touch (as monkish books attest)
 Nor was applied nor could be, Ledbury
 bells
 Broke forth in concert flung adown the dells,

And upward, high as Malvern's cloudy
 crest;
 Sweet tones, and caught by a noble Lady
 blest 5
 To rapture! Mabel listened at the side
 Of her loved mistress: soon the music
 died,
 And Catherine said, Here I set up my
 rest.
 Warned in a dream, the Wanderer long had sought
 A home that by such miracle of sound 10
 Must be revealed:—she heard it now, or felt
 The deep, deep joy of a confiding
 thought;
 And there, a saintly Anchoress, she dwelt Till she exchanged for heaven that happy
 ground.

XXIX.

[Composed probably 1807.—Published 1807.]

—“gives to airy nothing
 A local habitation and a name.”

THOUGH narrow be that old Man's cares, and near,
 The poor old Man is greater than he seems:
 For he hath waking empire, wide as
 dreams;
 An ample sovereignty of eye and ear.
 Rich are his walks with supernatural
 cheer; 5
 The region of his inner spirit teems
 With vital sounds and monitory gleams
 Of high astonishment and pleasing fear.
 He the seven birds hath seen, that never
 part,
 Seen the SEVEN WHISTLERS in their nightly rounds, 10
 And counted them: and oftentimes will start—
 For overhead are sweeping GABRIEL'S
 HOUNDS Doomed, with their impious Lord, the flying Hart
 To chase for ever, on aerial grounds!

XXX.

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

FOUR fiery steeds impatient of the rein Whirled us o'er sunless ground beneath a sky
As void of sunshine, when, from that wide plain,
Clear tops of far-off mountains we descry,
Like a Sierra of cerulean Spain, 5
All light and lustre. Did no heart reply?
Yes, there was One;—for One, asunder
fly
The thousand links of that ethereal chain;
And green vales open out, with grove and
field,
And the fair front of many a happy
Home; 10
Such tempting spots as into vision come While Soldiers, weary of the arms they wield,
And sick at heart of strife-ful Christendom, Gaze on the moon by parting clouds revealed.

XXXI.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1815.]

BROOK! whose society the Poet seeks,
Intent his wasted spirits to renew;
And whom the curious Painter doth
pursue
Through rocky passes, among flowery creeks,
And tracks thee dancing down thy water-
breaks; 5
If wish were mine some type of thee to
view,
Thee, and not thee thyself, I would not do Like Grecian Artists, give thee human cheeks,
Channels for tears; no Naiad shouldst thou be,—
Have neither limbs, feet, feathers, joints, nor hairs: 10
It seems the Eternal Soul is clothed in
thee
With purer robes than those of flesh and
blood,
And hath bestowed on thee a safer good;
Unwearied joy, and life without its cares.

COMPOSED ON THE BANKS OF A ROCKY
STREAM.

[Composed ?.—Published 1820.]

DOGMATIC Teachers, of the snow-white fur!
Ye wrangling Schoolmen, of the scarlet
hood!
Who, with a keenness not to be with-
stood,
Press the point home, or falter and demur,
Checked in your course by many a teasing burr; 5
These natural council-seats your acrid
blood
Might cool;—and, as the Genius of the
flood
Stoops willingly to animate and spur Each lighter function slumbering in the brain,
Yon eddying balls of foam, these arrowy
gleams 10
That o'er the pavement of the surging
streams
Welter and flash, a synod might detain
With subtle speculations, haply vain,
But surely less so than your far-fetched themes!

XXXIII.

THIS AND THE TWO FOLLOWING WERE SUGGESTED BY MR. W. WESTALL'S VIEWS OF THE CAVES, ETC., IN YORKSHIRE.[Composed 1818.—Published January, 1819 (Blackwood's Magazine); Peter Bell vol., 1819.]

PURE element of waters! wheresoe'er Thou dost forsake thy subterranean
haunts,
Green herbs, bright flowers, and berry-bearing plants,
Rise into life and in thy train appear:
And, through the sunny portion of the year,
Swift insects shine, thy hovering pursuivants: 6
And, if thy bounty fail, the forest pants;
And hart and hind and hunter with his spear
Languish and droop together. Nor unfelt

In man's perturbèd soul thy sway benign;
 And, haply, far within the marble belt
 Of central earth, where tortured Spirits
 pine
 For grace and goodness lost, thy murmurs melt
 Their anguish,—and they blend sweet songs with thine¹.

XXXIV.

MALHAM COVE.

[Composed 1818.—Published January 1819 (Black-wood's Magazine); Peter Bell vol., 1819.]

WAS the aim frustrated by force or guile,
 When giants scooped from out the rocky
 ground,
 Tier under tier, this semicirque profound?
 (Giants—the same who built in Erin's isle That Causeway with incomparable toil!)—
 Oh, had this vast theatric structure wound
 With finished sweep into a perfect round,
 No mightier work had gained the plausive
 smile
 Of all-beholding Phœbus! But, alas, Vain earth! false world! Foundations must be laid
 In Heaven; for, 'mid the wreck of is and
 WAS,
 Things incomplete and purposes betrayed
 Make sadder transits o'er thought's optic glass
 Than noblest objects utterly decayed.

XXXV.

GORDALE.

[Composed 1818.—Published January, 1819 (Black-wood's Magazine); Peter Bell vol., 1819.]

AT early dawn, or rather when the air
 Glimmers with fading light, and shadowy
 Eve
 Is busiest to confer and to bereave;
 Then, pensive Votary! let thy feet repair
 To Gordale-chasm, terrific as the lair Where the young lions couch; for so, by leave

¹ Waters (as Mr. Westall informs us in the letterpress prefixed to his admirable views) are invariably found to flow through these caverns.

Of the propitious hour, thou may'st perceive
 The local Deity, with cozy hair
 And mineral crown, beside his jagged
 urn,
 Recumbent: Him thou may'st behold, who hides
 His lineaments by day, yet there presides,
 Teaching the docile waters how to turn,
 Or (if need be) impediment to spurn,
 And force their passage to the salt-sea
 tides!

XXXVI.

COMPOSED UPON WESTMINSTER BRIDGE,
 SEPTEMBER 3, 1802.

[Composed July 31, 1802.—Published 1807.]

EARTH has not anything to show more
 fair:
 Dull would he be of soul who could pass by
 A sight so touching in its majesty:
 This City now doth, like a garment, wear
 The beauty of the morning; silent, bare, Ships, towers, domes, theatres, and temples lie
 Open unto the fields, and to the sky;
 All bright and glittering in the smokeless
 air.
 Never did sun more beautifully steep
 In his first splendour, valley, rock, or
 hill;
 Ne'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deep!
 The river glideth at his own sweet will:
 Dear God! the very houses seem asleep;
 And all that mighty heart is lying still!

CONCLUSION.

TO —

[Composed probably 1827.—Published 1827.]

IF these brief Records, by the Muses' art Produced as lonely Nature or the strife
 That animates the scenes of public life²
 Inspired, may in thy leisure claim a part;
 And if these Transcripts of the private
 heart

² This line alludes to Sonnets which will be found in another Class.

Have gained a sanction from thy falling
tears;
Then I repent not. But my soul hath fears Breathed from eternity; for, as a dart Cleaves the blank air, Life flies: now every day
Is but a glimmering spoke in the swift wheel 10
Of the revolving week. Away, away,
All fitful cares, all transitory zeal!
So timely Grace the immortal wing may
heal,
And honour rest upon the senseless clay.

PART III.

I.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

THOUGH the bold wings of Poesy affect The clouds, and wheel around the mountain tops
Rejoicing, from her loftiest height she drops
Well pleased to skim the plain with wild flowers deckt,
Or muse in solemn grove whose shades protect 5
The lingering dew—there steals along, or stops
Watching the least small bird that round her hops,
Or creeping worm, with sensitive respect.
Her functions are they therefore less
divine,
Her thoughts less deep, or void of grave
intent 10
Her simplest fancies? Should that fear be thine,
Aspiring Votary, ere thy hand present
One offering, kneel before her modest
shrine,
With brow in penitential sorrow bent!

II.

OXFORD, MAY 30, 1820.

[Composed 1820.—Published 1820.]

YE sacred Nurseries of blooming Youth!
In whose collegiate shelter England's
Flowers
Expand, enjoying through their vernal
hours

The air of liberty, the light of truth;
Much have ye suffered from Time's gnawing tooth: 5
Yet, O ye spires of Oxford! domes and
towers!
Gardens and groves! your presence over-
powers
The soberness of reason; till, in sooth, Transformed, and rushing on a bold exchange 9
I slight my own beloved Cam, to range
Where silver Isis leads my stripling feet;
Pace the long avenue, or glide adown
The stream-like windings of that glorious street—
An eager Novice robed in fluttering gown!

III.

OXFORD, MAY 30, 1820.

[Composed 1820.—Published 1820.]

SHAME on this faithless heart! that could allow Such transport, though but for a moment's space;
Not while—to aid the spirit of the place—
The crescent moon clove with its glittering prow
The clouds, or night-bird sang from shady bough; 5
But in plain daylight:—She, too, at my
side,
Who, with her heart's experience satisfied,
Maintains inviolate its slightest vow!
Sweet Fancy! other gifts must I receive;
Proofs of a higher sovereignty I claim; 10
Take from her brow the withering flowers of eve,
And to that brow life's morning wreath
restore;
Let her be comprehended in the frame
Of these illusions, or they please no more.

IV.

RECOLLECTION OF THE PORTRAIT OF KING
HENRY THE EIGHTH, TRINITY LODGE, CAMBRIDGE.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827]

THE imperial Stature, the colossal stride,
Are yet before me; yet do I behold
The broad full visage, chest of amplest
mould,

The vestments 'broidered with barbaric
pride:

And lo! a poniard, at the Monarch's
side, 5

Hangs ready to be grasped in sympathy
With the keen threatenings of that fulgent eye,

Below the white-rimmed bonnet, far-
descried.

Who trembles now at thy capricious
mood?

'Mid those surrounding Worthies, haughty
King, 10

We rather think, with grateful mind
sedate,

How Providence educeth, from the spring
Of lawless will, unlooked-for streams of
good,

Which neither force shall check nor time abate!

V.

ON THE DEATH OF HIS MAJESTY (GEORGE
THE THIRD).

(Composed 1820.—Published 1820.)

WARD of the Law!—dread Shadow of a
King!

Whose realm had dwindled to one stately
room;

Whose universe was gloom immersed in
gloom,

Darkness as thick as life o'er life could fling,

Save haply for some feeble glimmering 5
Of Faith and Hope—if thou, by nature's
doom,

Gently hast sunk into the quiet tomb,
Why should we bend in grief, to sorrow
cling,

When thankfulness were best?—Fresh-flowing tears,

Or, where tears flow not, sigh succeeding
sigh, 10

Yield to such after-thought the sole reply

Which justly it can claim. The Nation hears

In this deep knell, silent for threescore
years,

An unexampled voice of awful memory!

VI.

JUNE, 1820.

[Composed 1820.—Published 1820.]

FAME tells of groves—from England far
away—

Groves¹ that inspire the Nightingale to trill

And modulate, with subtle reach of skill Elsewhere unmatched, her ever-varying
lay;

Such bold report I venture to gainsay: 5
For I have heard the quire of Richmond
hill

Chanting with indefatigable bill, Strains that recalled to mind a distant
day;

When, haply under shade of that same
wood,

And scarcely conscious of the dashing oars 10

Plied steadily between those willowy
shores,

The sweet-souled Poet of the Seasons
stood—

Listening, and listening long, in rapturous mood,

Ye heavenly Birds! to your Progenitors.

VII.

A PARSONAGE IN OXFORDSHIRE.

[Composed 1820.—Published 1822 (Ecclesiastical Sketches, note, p. 121); ed. 1827.]

WHERE holy ground begins, unhallowed
ends,

Is marked by no distinguishable line;
The turf unites, the pathways intertwine;

And, wheresoe'er the stealing footstep
tends,

Garden, and that Domain where kindred,
friends, 5

And neighbours rest together, here con-
found

Their several features, mingled like the
sound

Of many waters, or as evening blends
With shady night. Soft airs, from shrub and flower,

¹ Wallachia is the country alluded to.

Waft fragrant greetings to each silent
grave ; 10
And while those lofty poplars gently wave
Their tops, between them comes and goes a sky
Bright as the glimpses of eternity,
To saints accorded in their mortal hour.

COMPOSED AMONG THE RUINS OF A CASTLE IN NORTH WALES.

[Composed probably September, 1824.—Published 1827.]

THROUGH shattered galleries, 'mid roof-less halls,
Wandering with timid footsteps oft betrayed,
The Stranger sighs, nor scruples to upbraid
Old Time, though he, gentlest among the Thralls 4
Of Destiny, upon these wounds hath laid
His lenient touches, soft as light that falls,
From the wan Moon, upon the towers and walls,
Light deepening the profoundest sleep of shade.
Relic of Kings ! Wreck of forgotten wars,
To winds abandoned and the prying stars,
Time loves Thee ! at his call the Seasons
twine 11
Luxuriant wreaths around thy forehead
hoar ;
And, though past pomp no changes can restore,
A soothing recompense, his gift, is thine !

IX.

TO THE LADY E. B. AND THE HON. MISS P.

[Composed September, 1824.—Published 1827.]

Composed in the Grounds of Plass Newidd, near Llangollen, 1824.

A STREAM, to mingle with your favourite Dee,
Along the VALE OF MEDITATION¹ flows ;
So styled by those fierce Britons, pleased to see

In Nature's face the expression of repose ;
Or haply there some pious hermit chose 5
To live and die, the peace of heaven his
aim ;

To whom the wild sequestered region owes,
At this late day, its sanctifying name.

GLYN CAFAILGARoch, in the Cambrian
tongue,

In ours, the VALE OF FRIENDSHIP, let this spot 10

Be named ; where, faithful to a low-roofed Cot,

On Deva's banks, ye have abode so long ;
Sisters in love, a love allowed to climb,
Even on this earth, above the reach of
Time !

X.

TO THE TORRENT AT THE DEVIL'S BRIDGE,
NORTH WALES, 1824.

[Composed September, 1824.—Published 1827.]

How art thou named ? In search of what strange land,

From what huge height, descending ?
Can such force

Of waters issue from a British source,
Or hath not Pindus fed thee, where the band

Of Patriots scoop their freedom out, with
hand 5

Desperate as thine ? Or come the incessant shocks

From that young Stream, that smites the throbbing rocks,

Of Viamala ? There I seem to stand,
As in life's morn ; permitted to behold,

From the dread chasm, woods climbing above woods, 10

In pomp that fades not ; everlasting snows ;
And skies that ne'er relinquish their
repose ;

Such power possess the family of floods
Over the minds of Poets, young or old !

XI.

IN THE WOODS OF RYDAL.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

WILD Redbreast ! hadst thou at Je-mima's lip

Pecked, as at mine, thus boldly, Love might say,

A half-blown rose had tempted thee to sip
Its glistening dews; but hallowed is the clay
Which the Muse warms; and I, whose head is grey, 5
Am not unworthy of thy fellowship;
Nor could I let one thought—one motion—slip
That might thy sylvan confidence betray.
For are we not all His without whose
care
Vouchsafed no sparrow falleth to the
ground? 10
Who gives his Angels wings to speed through air,
And rolls the planets through the blue
profound;
Then peck or perch, fond Flutterer! nor forbear
To trust a Poet in still musings bound.

XII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

WHEN Philoctetes in the Lemnian isle
Like a Form sculptured on a monument Lay couched; on him or his dread bow unbent
Some wild Bird oft might settle and beguile
The rigid features of a transient smile, 5 Disperse the tear, or to the sigh give
vent,
Slackening the pains of ruthless banish-
ment
From his loved home, and from heroic
toil.
And trust that spiritual Creatures round us move, Griefs to allay which Reason cannot heal; 10
Yea, veriest reptiles have sufficed to
prove
To fettered wretchedness that no Bastille
Is deep enough to exclude the light of
love,
Though man for brother man has ceased to feel.

XIII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

WHILE Anna's peers and early playmates tread,
In freedom, mountain-turf and river's
marge;
Or float with music in the festal barge;
Rein the proud steed, or through the dance are led;
Her doom it is to press a weary bed— 5 Till oft her guardian Angel, to some charge
More urgent called, will stretch his wings
at large,
And friends too rarely prop the languid
head.
Yet, helped by Genius—untired comforter,
The presence even of a stuffed Owl for
her 10
Can cheat the time; sending her fancy out
To ivied castles and to moonlight skies, Though he can neither stir a plume, nor shout;
Nor veil, with restless film, his staring eyes.

XIV.

TO THE CUCKOO.

NOT the whole warbling grove in concert
heard
When sunshine follows shower, the breast can thrill
Like the first summons, Cuckoo! of thy bill,
With its twin notes inseparably paired.
The captive 'mid damp vaults unsunned, unaided, 5
Measuring the periods of his lonely doom,
That cry can reach; and to the sick man's room
Sends gladness, by no languid smile
declared.
The lordly eagle-race through hostile search
May perish; time may come when never
more 10
The wilderness shall hear the lion roar;

But, long as cock shall crow from household perch
To rouse the dawn, soft gales shall speed thy wing,
And thy erratic voice be faithful to the Spring!

XV.

TO —

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

“Miss not the occasion: by the forelock take
That subtle Power, the never-halting Time, Lest a mere moment's putting-off should make Mischance almost as heavy as a crime.”

“WAIT, prithee, wait!” this answer Les-bia threw Forth to her Dove, and took no further heed.

Her eye was busy, while her fingers flew Across the harp, with soul-engrossing
speed;

But from that bondage when her thoughts were freed 5

She rose, and toward the close-shut casement drew,

Whence the poor unregarded Favourite,
true

To old affections, had been heard to plead With flapping wing for entrance. What a shriek

Forced from that voice so lately tuned to a strain 10

Of harmony!—a shriek of terror, pain,
And self-reproach! for, from aloft, a Kite Pounced,—and the Dove, which from its ruthless beak

She could not rescue, perished in her sight!

XVI.

THE INFANT M— M—.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

UNQUIET Childhood here by special grace
Forgets her nature, opening like a flower
That neither feeds nor wastes its vital
power

In painful struggles. Months each other
chase,

And nought untunes that Infant's voice;
no trace 5

Of fretful temper sullies her pure cheek;
Prompt, lively, self-sufficing, yet so meek
That one enrapt with gazing on her face (Which even the placid innocence of death Could scarcely make more placid, heaven more bright) 10

Might learn to picture, for the eye of
faith,

The Virgin, as she shone with kindred
light;

A nursing couched upon her mother's knee,

Beneath some shady palm of Galilee.

XVII.

TO —, IN HER SEVENTIETH YEAR.

SUCH age how beautiful! O Lady bright,
Whose mortal lineaments seem all refined
By favouring Nature and a saintly Mind
To something purer and more exquisite Than flesh and blood; whene'er thou meet'st my sight, 5

When I beheld thy blanched unwithered
cheek,

Thy temples fringed with locks of gleaming white,

And head that droops because the soul
is meek,

Thee with the welcome Snowdrop I compare;

That child of winter, prompting thoughts that climb 10

From desolation toward the genial prime;
Or with the Moon conquering earth's
misty air,

And filling more and more with crystal
light

As pensive Evening deepens into night.

XVIII.

TO ROTH A Q—.

[Composed some years after 1822.—Published 1827.]

ROTHA, my Spiritual Child! this head was grey

When at the sacred font for thee I stood; Pledged till thou reach the verge of womanhood,

And shalt become thy own sufficient stay:
 Too late, I feel, sweet Orphan! was the
 day 5
 For steadfast hope the contract to fulfil;
 Yet shall my blessing hover o'er thee still,
 Embodied in the music of this Lay, Breathed forth beside the peaceful mountain Stream¹
 Whose murmur soothed thy languid Mother's ear 10
 After her throes, this Stream of name
 more dear
 Since thou dost bear it,—a memorial
 theme
 For others; for thy future self, a spell
 To summon fancies out of Time's dark
 cell.

A GRAVESTONE UPON THE FLOOR IN THE CLOISTERS OF WORCESTER CATHEDRAL.

[Composed probably 1828.—Published 1829 (The Keepsake); ed. 1832.]

"MISERRIMUS!" and neither name nor date,
 Prayer, text, or symbol, graven upon the stone;
 Nought but that word assigned to the unknown,
 That solitary word—to separate
 From all, and cast a cloud around the fate Of him who lies beneath. Most wretched
 one, 6
 Who chose his epitaph?—Himself alone Could thus have dared the grave to agitate,
 And claim, among the dead, this awful
 crown;
 Nor doubt that He marked also for his
 own 10
 Close to these cloistral steps a burial-
 place,
 That every foot might fall with heavier
 tread,
 Trampling upon his vileness. Stranger,
 pass
 Softly!—To save the contrite, Jesus bled.

ROMAN ANTIQUITIES DISCOVERED AT BISHOPSTONE, HEREFORDSHIRE.

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

WHILE poring Antiquarians search the
 ground
 Upturned with curious pains, the Bard, a Seer, Takes fire:—The men that have been reappear;
 Romans for travel girt, for business
 gowned;
 And some recline on couches, myrtle-crowned, 5
 In festal glee: why not? For fresh and
 clear,
 As if its hues were of the passing year, Dawns this time-buried pavement. From that mound
 Hoards may come forth of Trajans, Maxi-mins,
 Shrunk into coins with all their warlike
 toil: 10
 Or a fierce impress issues with its foil
 Of tenderness—the Wolf, whose suckling Twins
 The unlettered ploughboy pities when he wins
 The casual treasure from the furrowed soil.

XXI.

1830.

[Composed November, 1830.—Published 1835.]

CHATSWORTH! thy stately mansion, and the pride
 Of thy domain, strange contrast do present
 To house and home in many a craggy rent
 Of the wild Peak; where new-born waters
 glide
 Through fields whose thrifty occupants
 abide 5
 As in a dear and chosen banishment,
 With every semblance of entire content;
 So kind is simple Nature, fairly tried!
 Yet He whose heart in childhood gave her troth
 To pastoral dales, thin-set with modest farms, 10
 May learn, if judgment strengthen with his growth,

That, not for Fancy only, pomp hath charms;
 And, strenuous to protect from lawless harms
 The extremes of favoured life, may honour both.

XXII.

A TRADITION OF OKER HILL IN DARLEY
 DALE, DERBYSHIRE.

[Composed probably 1828.—Published 1829 (The Keepsake); ed. 1832.]

'Tis said that to the brow of yon fair hill
 Two Brothers clomb, and, turning face from face, Nor one look more exchanging, grief to still Or feed, each planted on that lofty place
 A chosen Tree; then, eager to fulfil 5
 Their courses, like two new-born rivers, they
 In opposite directions urged their way Down from the far-seen mount. No blast might kill
 Or blight that fond memorial;—the trees grew,
 And now entwine their arms; but ne'er again 10
 Embraced those Brothers upon earth's wide plain;
 Nor aught of mutual joy or sorrow knew Until their spirits mingled in the sea
 That to itself takes all, Eternity.

XXIII.

FILIAL PIETY¹.

[Composed probably 1828.—Published 1829 (The Casket); ed. 1832.]

On the Wayside between Preston and Liverpool.
 UNTOUCHED through all severity of cold;
 Inviolatè, whate'er the cottage hearth

¹ Thomas Scarisbrick was killed by a stroke of lightning while building a turf-stack between Ormskirk and Preston in 1779. His son James finished the stack, and while he lived kept it in constant repair in memory of the father. James died in 1824, leaving to his grandchildren goblets and decanters cut with a turf-stack between two trees. (See Mr. J. Bromley's letter to the Athenæum, May 17, 1890.)—Ed.

Might need for comfort, or for festal mirth;

That Pile of Turf is half a century old:
 Yes, Traveller! fifty winters have been told 5
 Since suddenly the dart of death went forth

'Gainst him who raised it,—his last work on earth:

Thence has it, with the Son, so strong a hold

Upon his Father's memory, that his hands,

Through reverence, touch it only to repair 10

Its waste.—Though crumbling with each breath of air,

In annual renovation thus it stands—
 Rude Mausoleum! but wrens nestle there,
 And red-breasts warble when sweet sounds are rare.

XXIV.

TO THE AUTHOR'S PORTRAIT.

Painted at Rydal Mount, by W. Pickersgill, Esq., for St. John's College, Cambridge.]

[Composed probably 1832.—Published 1835.]

Go, faithful Portrait! and where long hath knelt

Margaret, the saintly Foundress, take thy place;

And, if Time spare the colours for the grace

Which to the work surpassing skill hath dealt,

Thou, on thy rock reclined, though kingdoms melt 5

And states be torn up by the roots, wilt seem

To breathe in rural peace, to hear the stream,

And think and feel as once the Poet felt.

Whate'er thy fate, those features have not grown

Unrecognised through many a household tear 10

More prompt, more glad, to fall than drops of dew

By morning shed around a flower half-
blown ;
Tears of delight, that testified how true
To life thou art, and, in thy truth, how
dear !

XXV.

[Composed 1832 or 1833.—Published 1835.]

WHY art thou silent ! Is thy love a plant
Of such weak fibre that the treacherous
air

Of absence withers what was once so fair ?
Is there no debt to pay, no boon to grant ?
Yet have my thoughts for thee been vigilant—

Bound to thy service with unceasing care,
The mind's least generous wish a mendicant

For nought but what thy happiness could spare.

Speak—though this soft warm heart, once free to hold

A thousand tender pleasures, thine and
mine,

Be left more desolate, more dreary cold
Than a forsaken bird's-nest filled with
snow

'Mid its own bush of leafless eglantine—
Speak, that my torturing doubts their end may know !

XXVI.

TO B. R. HAYDON, ON SEEING HIS PICTURE OF NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE ON THE ISLAND OF ST. HELENA.

[Composed June 11, 1831.—Published 1832.]

HAYDON ! let worthier judges praise the
skill

Here by thy pencil shown in truth of
lines

And charm of colours ; I applaud those signs

Of thought, that give the true poetic thrill ;

That unencumbered whole of blank and
still,

Sky without cloud—ocean without a
wave ;

And the one Man that laboured to en-slave

The World, sole-standing high on the bare hill—

Back turned, arms folded, the unapparent
face

Tinged, we may fancy, in this dreary
place

With light reflected from the invisible
sun

Set, like his fortunes ; but not set for aye

Like them. The unguilty Power pursues his way,

And before him doth dawn-perpetual run.

XXVII.

[Composed ?.—Published : vol. of 1842.]

A POET!—He hath put his heart to school,

Nor dares to move unpropped upon the staff

Which Art hath lodged within his hand —must laugh

By precept only, and shed tears by rule.
Thy Art be Nature ; the live current quaff,

And let the groveller sip his stagnant
pool,

In fear that else, when Critics grave and cool

Have killed him, Scorn should write his epitaph.

How does the Meadow-flower its bloom
unfold ?

Because the lovely little flower is free
Down to its root, and, in that freedom,
bold ;

And so the grandeur of the Forest-tree
Comes not by casting in a formal mould,
But from its own divine vitality.

XXVIII.

[Composed ?.—Published : vol. of 1842.]

THE most alluring clouds that mount the
sky

Owe to a troubled element their forms,
Their hues to sunset. If with raptured
eye

We watch their splendour, shall we covet
storms,

And wish the Lord of day his slow decline

Would hasten, that such pomp may float on high ?

Behold, already they forget to shine,
Dissolve—and leave to him who gazed a
sigh.

Not loth to thank each moment for its boon
Of pure delight, come whensoever it may,
Peace let us seek,—to steadfast things
attune 11

Calm expectations, leaving to the gay
And volatile their love of transient
bowers,

The house that cannot pass away be ours.

XXIX.

ON A PORTRAIT OF THE DUKE OF WELLING-TON UPON THE FIELD OF WATERLOO, BY HAYDON.

[Composed August 31, 1840.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

By Art's bold privilege Warrior and War-horse stand

On ground yet strewn with their last battle's wreck ;

Let the Steed glory while his Master's hand
Lies fixed for ages on his conscious neck ;
But by the Chieftain's look, though at his
side 5

Hangs that day's treasured sword, how firm a check

Is given to triumph and all human pride !
Yon trophied Mound shrinks to a sha-dowly speck

In his calm presence ! Him the mighty deed Elates not, brought far nearer the grave's
rest, 10

As shows that time-worn face, for he such seed

Has sown as yields, we trust, the fruit of fame

In Heaven ; hence no one blushes for thy
name,

Conqueror, 'mid some sad thoughts, divinely blest !

XXX.

COMPOSED ON A MAY MORNING, 1838.

[Composed May, 1838.—Published: Sonnet-vol. of 1838.]

LIFE with yon Lambs, like day, is just begun,

Yet Nature seems to them a heavenly guide.

Does joy approach ? they meet the coming
tide ;

And sullenness avoid, as now they shun

Pale twilight's lingering glooms,—and in
the sun 5

Couch near their dams, with quiet satisfied ;

Or gambol—each with his shadow at his
side,

Varying its shape wherever he may run.

As they from turf yet hoar with sleepy
dew

All turn, and court the shining and the
green, 10

Where herbs look up, and opening flowers are seen ;

Why to God's goodness cannot We be
true,

And so, His gifts and promises between,
Feed to the last on pleasures ever new ?

XXXI.

[Composed ?.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

Lo ! where she stands fixed in a saint-like
trance,

One upward hand, as if she needed rest
From rapture, lying softly on her breast !
Nor wants her eyeball an ethereal glance ;
But not the less—nay more—that countenance, 5

While thus illumined, tells of painful
strife

For a sick heart made weary of this life
By love, long crossed with adverse circumstance.

—Would She were now as when she hoped to pass

At God's appointed hour to them who
tread 10

Heaven's sapphire pavement, yet breathed well content,

Well pleased, her foot should print earth's common grass,

Lived thankful for day's light, for daily
bread,

For health, and time in obvious duty spent.

XXXII.

TO A PAINTER.

[Composed 1840.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

ALL praise the Likeness by thy skill portrayed;
 But 'tis a fruitless task to paint for me,
 Who, yielding not to changes Time has
 made,
 By the habitual light of memory see Eyes unbedimmed, see bloom that cannot
 fade, 5
 And smiles that from their birthplace ne'er shall flee
 Into the land where ghosts and phantoms
 be;
 And, seeing this, own nothing in its stead.
 Couldst thou go back into far-distant
 years,
 Or share with me, fond thought! that inward eye, 10
 Then, and then only, Painter! could thy
 Art
 The visual powers of Nature satisfy, Which hold, whate'er to common sight
 appears,
 Their sovereign empire in a faithful
 heart.

XXXIII.

ON THE SAME SUBJECT.

[Composed 1840.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

THOUGH I beheld at first with blank surprise
 This Work, I now have gazed on it so
 long
 I see its truth with unreluctant eyes;
 O, my Belovèd! I have done thee wrong, Conscious of blessedness, but, whence it sprung, 5
 Ever too heedless, as I now perceive:
 Morn into noon did pass, noon into eve,
 And the old day was welcome as the young,
 As welcome, and as beautiful—in sooth
 More beautiful, as being a thing more holy: 10
 Thanks to thy virtues, to the eternal
 youth

Of all thy goodness, never melancholy;
 To thy large heart and humble mind, that
 cast
 Into one vision, future, present, past.

XXXIV.

[Composed 1838.—Published: Sonnet-vol. of 1838.]

HARK! 'tis the Thrush, undaunted, unde-
 prest,
 By twilight premature of cloud and rain;
 Nor does that roaring wind deaden his
 strain
 Who carols thinking of his Love and nest,
 And seems, as more incited, still more
 blest. 5
 Thanks; thou hast snapped a fireside
 Prisoner's chain,
 Exulting Warbler! eased a fretted brain,
 And in a moment charmed my cares to rest.
 Yes, I will forth, bold Bird! and front
 the blast,
 That we may sing together, if thou wilt,
 So loud, so clear, my Partner through life's day, 10
 Mute in her nest love-chosen, if not love-
 built
 Like thine, shall gladden, as in seasons
 past,
 Thrilled by loose snatches of the social
 Lay.

XXXV.

[Composed 1838.—Published: Sonnet-vol. of 1838.]

'Tis He whose yester-evening's high dis-
 dain
 Beat back the roaring storm—but how subdued
 His day-break note, a sad vicissitude!
 Does the hour's drowsy weight his glee
 restrain?
 Or, like the nightingale, her joyous vein 5 Pleased to renounce, does this dear Thrush
 attune
 His voice to suit the temper of yon Moon Doubly depressed, setting, and in her wane?
 Rise, tardy Sun! and let the Songster
 prove (The balance trembling between night and morn 10

No longer) with what ecstasy upborne
 He can pour forth his spirit. In heaven
 above,
 And earth below, they best can serve true gladness
 Who meet most feelingly the calls of sadness.

XXXVI.

[Composed 1837.—Published: Sonnet-vol. of 1838.]

OH what a Wreck! how changed in mien and speech!
 Yet—though dread Powers, that work in mystery, spin
 Entanglings of the brain; though shadows stretch
 O'er the chilled heart—reflect; far, far within
 Hers is a holy Being, freed from Sin. 5
 She is not what she seems, a forlorn wretch,
 But delegated Spirits comforts fetch
 To Her from heights that Reason may not win.
 Like Children, She is privileged to hold Divine communion; both do live and
 move, 10
 Whate'er to shallow Faith their ways
 unfold,
 Inly illumined by Heaven's pitying love;
 Love pitying innocence, not long to last,
 In them—in Her our sins and sorrows
 past.

XXXVII.

[Composed March 8, 1842.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

INTENT on gathering wool from hedge and brake
 Yon busy Little-ones rejoice that soon
 A poor old Dame will bless them for the boon:
 Great is their glee while flake they add to flake
 With rival earnestness; far other strife 5
 Than will hereafter move them, if they
 make
 Pastime their idol, give their day of life
 To pleasure snatched for reckless pleasure's sake.

Can pomp and show allay one heart-born
 grief?

Pains which the World inflicts can she requite? 10

Not for an interval however brief;
 The silent thoughts that search for steadfast light,

Love from her depths, and Duty in her
 might,

And Faith—these only yield secure relief.

XXXVIII.

A PLEA FOR AUTHORS.

[Composed May, 1838.—Published: Sonnet-vol. of 1838.]

FAILING impartial measure to dispense
 To every suitor, Equity is lame;
 And social Justice, stript of reverence
 For natural rights, a mockery and a
 shame;

Law but a servile dupe of false pretence,
 If, guarding grossest things from common
 claim 6

Now and for ever, She, to works that
 came

From mind and spirit, grudge a short-lived fence.

“What! lengthened privilege, a lineal tie,
 For Books!” Yes, heartless Ones, or be it
 proved 10

That 'tis a fault in Us to have lived and
 loved

Like others, with like temporal hopes to die;
 No public harm that Genius from her
 course

Be turned; and streams of truth dried up, even at their source!

XXXIX.

VALEDICTORY SONNET.

Closing the Volume of Sonnets published in 1838.

[Composed 1838.—Published: Sonnet-vol. of 1838.]

SERVING no haughty Muse, my hands have here

Disposed some cultured Flowerets (drawn from spots

Where they bloomed singly, or in scattered knots,)

Each kind in several beds of one par-terre;

Both to allure the casual Loiterer, 5
And that, so placed, my Nurslings may requite

Studious regard with opportune delight,
Nor be unthanked, unless I fondly err.
But metaphor dismissed, and thanks
apart,

Reader, farewell! My last words let them
be— 10

If in this book Fancy and Truth agree;
If simple Nature trained by careful Art Through It have won a passage to thy
heart;

Grant me thy love, I crave no other fee!

TO THE REV. CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH,
D.D., MASTER OF HARROW SCHOOL,

After the perusal of his "Theophilus Anglicanus," recently published.

[Composed December 11, 1843.—Published 1845.]

ENLIGHTENED Teacher, gladly from thy
hand

Have I received this proof of pains bestowed

By Thee to guide thy Pupils on the
road

That, in our native isle, and every land,
The Church, when trusting in divine
command 5

And in her Catholic attributes, hath trod:
O may these lessons be with profit scanned
To thy heart's wish, thy labour blest by
God!

So the bright faces of the young and
gay

Shall look more bright—the happy, happier still; 10

Catch, in the pauses of their keenest
play,

Motions of thought which elevate the
will

And, like the Spire that from your classic
Hill

Points heavenward, indicate the end and
way.

TO THE PLANET VENUS,

Upon its approximation (as an Evening Star) to the Earth, January, 1838.

[Composed January, 1838.—Published: Sonnet-
vol. of 1838.]

WHAT strong allurements draws, what spirit guides,

Thee, Vesper! brightening still, as if the nearer

Thou com'st to man's abode the spot grew dearer

Night after night? True is it Nature hides

Her treasures less and less.—Man now presides 5

In power, where once he trembled in his weakness;

Science advances with gigantic strides;
But are we aught enriched in love and meekness?

Aught dost thou see, bright Star! of pure and wise

More than in humbler times graced human story; 10

That makes our hearts more apt to sympathize

With heaven, our souls more fit for future
glory,

When earth shall vanish from our closing
eyes,

Ere we lie down in our last dormitory?

[Composed December 24, 1842.—Published 1845.]

WANSFELL!¹ this Household has a favoured lot,

Living with liberty on thee to gaze,
To watch while Morn first crowns thee with her rays,

Or when along thy breast serenely float Evening's angelic clouds. Yet ne'er a
note 5

Hath sounded (shame upon the Bard!)
thy praise

For all that thou, as if from heaven, hast

¹ The Hill that rises to the south-east, above Ambleside.

Of glory lavished on our quiet days.
 Bountiful Son of Earth! when we are
 gone
 From every object dear to mortal sight, 10
 As soon we shall be, may these words
 attest
 How oft, to elevate our spirits, shone
 Thy visionary majesties of light,
 How in thy pensive glooms our hearts found rest.

XLIII.

[Composed January 1, 1843.—Published 1845.]

WHILE beams of orient light shoot wide and high,
 Deep in the vale a little rural Town¹ Breathes forth a cloud-like creature of its
 own,
 That mounts not toward the radiant morning sky,
 But, with a less ambitious sympathy, 5
 Hangs o'er its Parent waking to the cares Troubles and toils that every day prepares.
 So Fancy, to the musing Poet's eye, Endears that Lingerer. And how blest her sway,
 (Like influence never may my soul reject),
 If the calm Heaven, now to its zenith
 decked 11
 With glorious forms in numberless array,
 To the lone shepherd on the hills disclose Gleams from a world in which the saints
 repose.

XLIV.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

IN my mind's eye a Temple, like a cloud
 Slowly surmounting some invidious hill, Rose out of darkness: the bright Work stood still;
 And might of its own beauty have been proud,
 But it was fashioned and to God was vowed 5
 By Virtues that diffused, in every part,
 Spirit divine through forms of human art:

¹ Ambleside.

Faith had her arch—her arch, when winds blow loud,
 Into the consciousness of safety thrilled;
 And Love her towers of dread foundation
 laid 10
 Under the grave of things; Hope had her
 spire
 Star-high, and pointing still to something higher;
 Trembling I gazed, but heard a voice—it
 said,
 "Hell-gates are powerless Phantoms when we build."

ON THE PROJECTED KENDAL AND WINDERMERE RAILWAY.

[Composed October 12, 1844.—Published in pamphlet Kendal and Windermere Railway, 1844;
 ed. 1845.]

Is then no nook of English ground secure From rash assault?² Schemes of retirement sown
 In youth, and 'mid the busy world kept
 pure
 As when their earliest flowers of hope were blown,
 Must perish;—how can they this blight
 endure? 5
 And must he too the ruthless change bemoan
 Who scorns a false utilitarian lure
 'Mid his paternal fields at random thrown?
 Baffle the threat, bright Scene, from Or-rest-head
 Given to the pausing traveller's rapturous
 glance: 10
 Plead for thy peace, thou beautiful romance

² The degree and kind of attachment which many of the yeomanry feel to their small inheritances can scarcely be over-rated. Near the house of one of them stands a magnificent tree, which a neighbour of the owner advised him to fell for profit's sake. "Fell it!" exclaimed the yeoman, "I had rather fall on my knees and worship it." It happens, I believe, that the intended railway would pass through this little property, and I hope that an apology for the answer will not be thought necessary by one who enters into the strength of the feeling.

Of nature; and, if human hearts be dead, Speak, passing winds; ye torrents, with your strong
 And constant voice, protest against the wrong.

XLVI.

[Composed 1844.—Published along with XLV.]

PROUD were ye, Mountains, when, in times
 of old,
 Your patriot sons, to stem invasive war,
 Intrenched your brows; ye gloried in each scar:
 Now, for your shame, a Power, the Thirst of Gold,
 That rules o'er Britain like a baneful star, Wills that your peace, your beauty, shall be sold, 6
 And clear way made for her triumphal car
 Through the beloved retreats your arms enfold!
 Hear YE that Whistle? As her long-linked
 Train
 Swept onwards, did the vision cross your
 view? 10
 Yes, ye were startled;—and, in balance
 true,
 Weighing the mischief with the promised
 gain,
 Mountains, and Vales, and Floods, I call on you
 To share the passion of a just disdain.

AT FURNESS ABBEY.

[Composed probably 1845.—Published 1845.]

HERE, where, of havoc tired and rash
 undoing,
 Man left this Structure to become Time's
 prey,
 A soothing spirit follows in the way
 That Nature takes, her counter-work pursuing.
 See how her ivy clasps the sacred Ruin, 5

Fall to prevent or beautify decay;
 And, on the mouldered walls, how bright,
 how gay,
 The flowers in pearly dew their bloom renewing!
 Thanks to the place, blessings upon the
 hour;
 Even as I speak the rising Sun's first
 smile 10
 Gleams on the grass-crowned top of yon tall Tower,
 Whose cawing occupants with joy proclaim
 Prescriptive title to the shattered pile,
 Where, Cavendish, thine seems nothing but a name!

AT FURNESS ABBEY.

[Composed June 21, 1845.—Published 1845.]

WELL have yon Railway Labourers to THIS ground Withdrawn for noontide rest. They sit, they walk
 Among the Ruins, but no idle talk Is heard; to grave demeanour all are
 bound;
 And from one voice a Hymn with tuneful
 sound 5
 Hallows once more the long-deserted
 Quire
 And thrills the old sepulchral earth, around.
 Others look up, and with fixed eyes admire
 That wide-spanned arch, wondering how it was raised,
 To keep, so high in air, its strength and
 grace: 10
 All seem to feel the spirit of the place,
 And by the general reverence God is
 praised:
 Profane Despoilers, stand ye not reprov'd, While thus these simple-hearted men are
 moved?

MEMORIALS OF A TOUR IN SCOTLAND, 1803.

I.

DEPARTURE

FROM THE VALE OF GRASMERE. AUGUST, 1803.

[Composed 1811¹.—Published 1827.]

THE gentlest Shade that walked Elysian
plains

Might sometimes covet dissoluble chains ;
Even for the tenants of the zone that lies Beyond the stars, celestial Paradise, Methinks 'twould heighten joy, to over-
leap 5

At will the crystal battlements, and peep
Into some other region, though less fair,
To see how things are made and managed
there.

Change for the worse might please, in-cursion bold

Into the tracts of darkness and of cold: 10
O'er Limbo lake with aery flight to steer,
And on the verge of Chaos hang in fear.
Such animation often do I find,
Power in my breast, wings growing in my
mind,

Then, when some rock or hill is overpast, Perchance without one look behind me
cast, 16

Some barrier with which Nature, from the birth

Of things, has fenced this fairest spot on
earth.

O pleasant transit, Grasmere ! to resign
Such happy fields, abodes so calm as thine ;
Not like an outcast with himself at strife ;
The slave of business, time, or care for life,

But' moved by choice ; or, if constrained in part,

Yet still with Nature's freedom at the
heart ;— 24

To cull contentment upon wildest shores,
And luxuries extract from bleakest moors ;
With prompt embrace all beauty to enfold,
And having rights in all that we behold.

—Then why these lingering steps ?—A bright adieu, 29

For a brief absence, proves that love is true ;
Ne'er can the way be irksome or forlorn
That winds into itself for sweet return.

II.

AT THE GRAVE OF BURNS.

1803.

SEVEN YEARS AFTER HIS DEATH.

[Composed partly before 1807.—Published : vol.
of 1842.]

I SHIVER, Spirit fierce and bold,
At thought of what I now behold :
As vapours breathed from dungeons cold
Strike pleasure dead,
So sadness comes from out the mould 5
Where Burns is laid.

And have I then thy bones so near,
And thou forbidden to appear ?
As if it were thyself that's here
I shrink with pain ; 10
And both my wishes and my fear Alike are vain.

Off weight—nor press on weight !—away Dark thoughts !—they came, but not to
stay ;

With chastened feelings would I pay 15
The tribute due

To him, and aught that hides his clay
From mortal view.

Fresh as the flower, whose modest worth
He sang, his genius "glinted" forth, .20
Rose like a star that touching earth,

For so it seems,
Doth glorify its humble birth
With matchless beams.

The piercing eye, the thoughtful brow, 25
The struggling heart, where be they now?—
Full soon the Aspirant of the plough,
The prompt, the brave,
Slept, with the obscurest, in the low
And silent grave. 30

I mourned with thousands, but as one
More deeply grieved, for He was gone
Whose light I hailed when first it shone,
And showed my youth 34
How Verse may build a princely throne
On humble truth.

Alas! where'er the current tends;
Regret pursues and with it blends,— Huge Criffel's hoary top ascends
By Skiddaw seen,— 40
Neighbours we were, and loving friends
We might have been;

True friends though diversely inclined;
But heart with heart and mind with mind,
Where the main fibres are entwined, 45
Through Nature's skill,
May even by contraries be joined More closely still.

The tear will start, and let it flow;
Thou "poor Inhabitant below," 50
At this dread moment—even so—Might we together
Have sate and talked where gowans blow,
Or on wild heather.

What treasures would have then been placed 55
Within my reach; of knowledge graced
By fancy what a rich repast!
But why go on?—
Oh! spare to sweep, thou mournful blast,
His grave grass-grown. 60

There, too, a Son, his joy and pride,
(Not three weeks past the Stripling died,) Lies gathered to his Father's side,

Soul-moving sight!
Yet one to which is not denied 65
Some sad delight.

For he is safe, a quiet bed
Hath early found among the dead,
Harboured where none can be misled,
Wronged, or distressed; 70
And surely here it may be said
That such are blest.

And oh for Thee, by pitying grace
Checked oft-times in a devious race,
May He, who halloweth the place 75
Where Man is laid,
Receive thy Spirit in the embrace
For which it prayed!

Sighing I turned away; but ere Night fell I heard, or seemed to hear, 80
Music that sorrow comes not near,
A ritual hymn,
Chanted in love that casts out fear
By Seraphim.

THOUGHTS

SUGGESTED THE DAY FOLLOWING, ON THE BANKS OF NITH, NEAR THE POET'S RESIDENCE.

[Finished 1839.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

Too frail to keep the lofty vow
That must have followed when his brow
Was wreathed—"The Vision" tells us how—

With holly spray,
He faltered, drifted to and fro, 5
And passed away.

Well might such thoughts, dear Sister,
throng

Our minds when, lingering all too long,
Over the grave of Burns we hung
In social grief— 10

Indulged as if it were a wrong
To seek relief.

But, leaving each unquiet theme
Where gentlest judgments may misdeem,
And prompt to welcome every gleam 15

Of good and fair,
Let us beside the limpid Stream
Breathe hopeful air.

Enough of sorrow, wreck, and blight ;
 Think rather of those moments bright 20
 When to the consciousness of right
 His course was true,
 When Wisdom prospered in his sight
 And virtue grew.

Yes, freely let our hearts expand, 25
 Freely as in youth's season bland,
 When side by side, his Book in hand,
 We went to stray,
 Our pleasure varying at command
 Of each sweet Lay. 30

How oft inspired must he have trod
 These pathways, yon far-stretching road !
 There lurks his home ; in that Abode,
 With mirth elate,
 Or in his nobly-pensive mood, 35
 The Rustic sate.

Proud thoughts that Image overawes,
 Before it humbly let us pause,
 And ask of Nature from what cause
 And by what rules 40
 She trained her Burns to win applause
 That shames the Schools.

Through busiest street and loneliest glen
 Are felt the flashes of his pen ;
 He rules 'mid winter snows, and when 45
 Bees fill their hives ;
 Deep in the general heart of men
 His power survives.

What need of fields in some far clime
 Where Heroes, Sages, Bards sublime, 50
 And all that fetched the flowing rhyme
 From genuine springs,
 Shall dwell together till old Time
 Folds up his wings ?

Sweet Mercy ! to the gates of Heaven 55
 This Minstrel lead, his sins forgiven ;
 The rueful conflict, the heart riven
 With vain endeavour,
 And memory of Earth's bitter leaven,
 Effaced for ever. 60

But why to Him confine the prayer,
 When kindred thoughts and yearnings
 bear
 On the frail heart the purest share

With all that live?—
 The best of what we do and are, 65
 Just God, forgive !¹

IV.

TO THE SONS OF BURNS,

AFTER VISITING THE GRAVE OF THEIR FATHER.

[Composed partly 1803.—Published 1807².

"The Poet's grave is in a corner of the churchyard.
 We looked at it with melancholy and painful reflections, repeating to each other his own verses—
 "Is there a man whose judgment clear,' etc."—

—Extract from the Journal of my Fellow-traveller.

'MID crowded obelisks and urns
 I sought the untimely grave of Burns ;
 Sons of the Bard, my heart still mourns
 With sorrow true ;
 And more would grieve, but that it turns 6
 Trembling to you !

Through twilight shades of good and ill
 Ye now are panting up life's hill,
 And more than common strength and skill
 Must ye display ; 10
 If ye would give the better will
 Its lawful sway.

Hath Nature strung your nerves to bear
 Intemperance with less harm, beware !
 But if the Poet's wit ye share, 15
 Like him can speed
 The social hour—of tenfold care
 There will be need ;

For honest men delight will take
 To spare your failings for his sake, 20
 Will flatter you,—and fool and rake
 Your steps pursue ;
 And of your Father's name will make
 A snare for you.

Far from their noisy haunts retire, 25
 And add your voices to the quire
 That sanctify the cottage fire
 With service meet ;
 There seek the genius of your Sire,
 His spirit greet ; 30

² Stanzas ii., iii., iv., viii., published in 1807 ;
 stanzas i., v., vi., vii., published in 1827.—Ed.

Or where 'mid "lonely heights and hows,"
 He paid to Nature tuneful vows;
 Or wiped his honourable brows
 Bedewed with toil,
 While reapers strove, or busy ploughs 35
 Upturned the soil;

His judgment with benignant ray
 Shall guide, his fancy cheer, your way;
 But ne'er to a seductive lay
 Let faith be given; 40
 Nor deem that "light which leads astray
 Is light from Heaven."

Let no mean hope your souls enslave;
 Be independent, generous, brave;
 Your Father such example gave, 45
 And such revere;
 But be admonished by his grave,
 And think, and fear!

ELLEN IRWIN:

OR,

THE BRAES OF KIRTLE¹.

[Composed probably 1799 or 1800.—Published 1800.]

FAIR Ellen Irwin, when she sate
 Upon the braes of Kirtle,
 Was lovely as a Grecian maid
 Adorned with wreaths of myrtle;
 Young Adam Bruce beside her lay, 5
 And there did they beguile the day
 With love and gentle speeches,
 Beneath the budding beeches.

From many knights and many squires
 The Bruce had been selected; 10
 And Gordon, fairest of them all,
 By Ellen was rejected.
 Sad tidings to that noble Youth!
 For it may be proclaimed with truth,
 If Bruce hath loved sincerely, 15
 That Gordon loves as dearly.

But what are Gordon's form and face,
 His shattered hopes and crosses,

To them, 'mid Kirtle's pleasant braes,
 Reclined on flowers and mosses? 20
 Alas that ever he was born!
 The Gordon, couched behind a thorn,
 Sees them and their caressing;
 Beholds them blest and blessing.

Proud Gordon, maddened by the thoughts
 That through his brain are travelling, 26
 Rushed forth, and at the heart of Bruce
 He launched a deadly javelin!
 Fair Ellen saw it as it came,
 And, starting up to meet the same, 30
 Did with her body cover
 The Youth, her chosen lover.

And, falling into Bruce's arms,
 Thus died the beauteous Ellen,
 Thus, from the heart of her True-love, 35
 The mortal spear repelling.
 And Bruce, as soon as he had slain
 The Gordon, sailed away to Spain;
 And fought with rage incessant
 Against the Moorish crescent. 40

But many days, and many months,
 And many years ensuing,
 This wretched Knight did vainly seek
 The death that he was wooing.
 So, coming his last help to crave, 45
 Heart-broken, upon Ellen's grave
 His body he extended,
 And there his sorrow ended.

Now ye, who willingly have heard
 The tale I have been telling, 50
 May in Kirkconnell churchyard view
 The grave of lovely Ellen:
 By Ellen's side the Bruce is laid;
 And, for the stone upon his head,
 May no rude hand deface it, 55
 And its forlorn Éc jatté!

VI.

TO A HIGHLAND GIRL,

AT INVERSNEYDE, UPON LOCH LOMOND.

[Composed 1803.—Published 1807.]

SWEET Highland Girl, a very shower
 Of beauty is thy earthly dower!
 Twice seven consenting years have shed
 Their utmost bounty on thy head:

¹ The Kirtle is a river in the southern part of Scotland, on the banks of which the events here related took place.

And these grey rocks; that household
lawn; 5
Those trees, a veil just half withdrawn;
This fall of water that doth make
A murmur near the silent lake;
This little bay; a quiet road
That holds in shelter thy Abode— 10
In truth together do ye seem Like something fashioned in a dream;
Such Forms as from their covert peep
When earthly cares are laid asleep!
But, O fair Creature! in the light 15
Of common day, so heavenly bright,
I bless Thee, Vision as thou art,
I bless thee with a human heart;
God shield thee to thy latest years!
Thee, neither know I, nor thy peers; 20
And yet my eyes are filled with tears.

With earnest feeling I shall pray
For thee when I am far away:
For never saw I mien, or face,
In which more plainly I could trace 25
Benignity and home-bred sense
Ripening in perfect innocence.
Here scattered, like a random seed,
Remote from men, Thou dost not need
The embarrassed look of shy distress, 30
And maidenly shamefacedness:
Thou wear'st upon thy forehead clear
The freedom of a Mountaineer:
A face with gladness overspread!
Soft smiles, by human kindness bred! 35
And seemliness complete, that sways
Thy courtesies, about thee plays;
With no restraint, but such as springs
From quick and eager visitings
Of thoughts that lie beyond the reach 40
Of thy few words of English speech:
A bondage sweetly brooked, a strife
That gives thy gestures grace and life!
So have I, not unmoved in mind,
Seen birds of tempest-loving kind— 45
Thus beating up against the wind.

What hand but would a garland cull
For thee who art so beautiful?
O happy pleasure! here to dwell
Beside thee in some heathy dell; 50
Adopt your homely ways, and dress,
A Shepherd, thou a Shepherdess!

But I could frame a wish for thee
More like a grave reality:
Thou art to me but as a wave 55
Of the wild sea; and I would have Some claim upon thee, if I could,
Though but of common neighbourhood.
What joy to hear thee, and to see!
Thy elder Brother I would be, 60
Thy Father—anything to thee!

Now thanks to Heaven! that of its
grace
Hath led me to this lonely place.
Joy have I had; and going hence
I bear away my recompense. 65
In spots like these it is we prize
Our Memory, feel that she hath eyes:
Then, why should I be loth to stir?
I feel this place was made for her;
To give new pleasure like the past, 70
Continued long as life shall last.
Nor am I loth, though pleased at heart,
Sweet Highland Girl! from thee to part;
For I, methinks, till I grow old,
As fair before me shall behold, 75
As I do now, the cabin small,
The lake, the bay, the waterfall;
And Thee, the Spirit of them all!

VII.

GLEN ALMAIN;

OR, THE NARROW GLEN.

[Composed probably 1803.—Published 1807.]

In this still place, remote from men,
Sleeps Ossian, in the NARROW GLEN;
In this still place, where murmurs on
But one meek streamlet, only one:
He sang of battles, and the breath 5
Of stormy war, and violent death;
And should, methinks, when all was past,
Have rightfully been laid at last Where rocks were rudely heaped, and rent
As by a spirit turbulent; 10
Where sights were rough, and sounds were wild,
And everything unreconciled;
In some complaining, dim retreat,
For fear and melancholy meet;

But this is calm ; there cannot be 15
A more entire tranquillity.

Does then the Bard sleep here indeed ?
Or is it but a groundless creed ?
What matters it ?—I blame them not Whose Fancy in this lonely Spot 20
Was moved ; and in such way expressed Their notion of its perfect rest.
A convent, even a hermit's cell,
Would break the silence of this Dell :
It is not quiet, is not ease ; 25
But something deeper far than these ;
The separation that is here
Is of the grave ; and of austere .
Yet happy feelings of the dead :
And, therefore, was it rightly said 30
That Ossian, last of all his race !
Lies buried in this lonely place.

VIII.

STEPPING WESTWARD.

[Composed between 1803-1805.—Published 1807.]

While my Fellow-traveller and I were walking by the side of Loch Ketterline, one fine evening after sunset, in our road to a Hut where, in the course of our Tour, we had been hospitably entertained some weeks before, we met, in one of the loneliest parts of that solitary region, two well-dressed Women, one of whom said to us, by way of greeting, "What, you are stepping westward?"

"WHAT, you are stepping westward?"—
"Yea."

—'Twould be a wildish destiny,
If we, who thus together roam
In a strange Land, and far from home,
Were in this place the guests of Chance : 5
Yet who would stop, or fear to advance,
Though home or shelter he had none,
With such a sky to lead him on ?

The dewy ground was dark and cold ;
Behind, all gloomy to behold ; 10
And stepping westward seemed to be
A kind of heavenly destiny :
I liked the greeting ; 'twas a sound
Of something without place or bound ;
And seemed to give me spiritual right 15
To travel through that region bright.

The voice was soft, and she who spake
Was walking by her native lake :
The salutation had to me 1
The very sound of courtesy : 20
Its power was felt ; and while my eye
Was fixed upon the glowing Sky,
The echo of the voice enwrought
A human sweetness with the thought
Of travelling through the world that lay Before me in my endless way. 26

IX.

THE SOLITARY REAPER.

[Composed between 1803-1805.—Published 1807.]

BEHOLD her, single in the field,
Yon solitary Highland Lass !
Reaping and singing by herself ;
Stop here, or gently pass !
Alone she cuts and binds the grain, 5
And sings a melancholy strain ;
O listen ! for the Vale profound
Is overflowing with the sound.

No Nightingale did ever chaunt
More welcome notes to weary bands 10
Of travellers in some shady haunt,
Among Arabian sands :
A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
In spring-time from the Cuckoo-bird,
Breaking the silence of the seas 15
Among the farthest Hebrides.

Will no one tell me what she sings ?
Perhaps the plaintive numbers flow
For old, unhappy, far-off things,
And battles long ago :
Or is it some more humble lay,
Familiar matter of to-day ?
Some natural sorrow, loss, or pain,
That has been, and may be again ?

Whate'er the theme, the Maiden sang 25
As if her song could have no ending ;
I saw her singing at her work,
And o'er the sickle bending ;—
I listened, motionless and still ;
And, as I mounted up the hill,
The music in my heart I bore,
Long after it was heard no more.

not alluded with any of spirit for dramatic suggestion.

ADDRESS TO KILCHURN CASTLE, UPON LOCH AWE.

[Composed ll. 1-3, 1803; finished "long after."—
Published 1827.]

"From the top of the hill a most impressive scene opened upon our view,—a ruined Castle on an Island (for an Island the flood had made it) at some distance from the shore, backed by a Cove of the Mountain Cruachan, down which came a foaming stream. The Castle occupied every foot of the Island that was visible to us, appearing to rise out of the water,—mists rested upon the mountain side, with spots of sunshine; there was a mild desolation in the low grounds, a solemn grandeur in the mountains, and the Castle was wild, yet stately—not dismantled of turrets—nor the walls broken down, though obviously a ruin."—Extract from the Journal of my Companion.

CHILD of loud-throated War! the mountain Stream

Roars in thy hearing; but thy hour of rest
Is come, and thou art silent in thy age;
Save when the wind sweeps by and sounds are caught

Ambiguous, neither wholly thine nor
theirs. 5

Oh! there is life that breathes not;
Powers there are
That touch each other to the quick in modes

Which the gross world no sense hath to perceive,

No soul to dream of. What art Thou, from care

Cast off—abandoned by thy rugged Sire, Nor by soft Peace adopted; though, in
place 11

And in dimension, such that thou might'st
seem

But a mere footstool to yon sovereign
Lord,

Huge Cruachan, (a thing that meaner hills Might crush, nor know that it had suffered harm;) 15

Yet he, not loth, in favour of thy claims
To reverence, suspends his own; submitting

All that the God of Nature hath conferred,

All that he holds in common with the stars,
To the memorial majesty of Time 20
Impersonated in thy calm decay!
Take, then, thy seat, Vicegerent unre-
proved!

Now, while a farewell gleam of evening
light

Is fondly lingering on thy shattered front,
Do thou, in turn, be paramount; and rule
Over the pomp and beauty of a scene 26 Whose mountains, torrents, lake, and woods, unite

To pay thee homage; and with these are joined,

In willing admiration and respect,
Two Hearts, which in thy presence might be called 30

Youthful as Spring.—Shade of departed
Power,

Skeleton of unfleshed humanity,
The chronicle were welcome that should
call

Into the compass of distinct regard
The toils and struggles of thy infant
years! 35

Yon foaming flood seems motionless as ice;
Its dizzy turbulence eludes the eye,
Frozen by distance; so, majestic Pile,
To the perception of this Age, appear Thy fierce beginnings, softened and subdued 40

And quieted in character—the strife,
The pride, the fury uncontrollable,
Lost on the aerial heights of the Crusades!¹

XI.

ROB ROY'S GRAVE.

[Composed between September, 1803—April, 1805.
—Published 1807.]

The history of Rob Roy is sufficiently known;
his grave is near the head of Loch Ketterine, in one of those small pinfold-like Burial-grounds, of neglected and desolate appearance, which the traveller meets with in the Highlands of Scotland.

A FAMOUS man is Robin Hood,
The English ballad-singer's joy!

¹ The tradition is, that the Castle was built by a Lady during the absence of her Lord in Palestine.

- And Scotland has a thief as good,
 An outlaw of as daring mood ;
 She has her brave ROB ROY ! 5
 Then clear the weeds from off his
 Grave,
 And let us chant a passing stave,
 In honour of that Hero brave !
- Heaven gave Rob Roy a dauntless heart And wondrous length and strength of
 arm : 10
 Nor craved he more to quell his foes,
 Or keep his friends from harm.
- Yet was Rob Roy as wise as brave ;
 Forgive me if the phrase be strong ;—
 A Poet worthy of Rob Roy 15
 Must scorn a timid song.
- Say, then, that he was wise as brave ;
 As wise in thought as bold in deed :
 For in the principles of things
He sought his moral creed. 20
- Said generous Rob, “What need of books?
 Burn all the statutes and their shelves :
 They stir us up against our kind ;
 And worse, against ourselves.
- “We have a passion—make a law, 25
 Too false to guide us or control !
 And for the law itself we fight
 In bitterness of soul.
- “And, puzzled, blinded thus, we lose
 Distinctions that are plain and few : 30
 These find I graven on my heart :
That tells me what to do.
- “The creatures see of flood and field,
 And those that travel on the wind !
 With them no strife can last ; they
 live 35
 In peace, and peace of mind.
- “For why?—because the good old rule
 Sufficeth them, the simple plan,
 That they should take, who have the
 power,
 And they should keep who can. 40
- “A lesson that is quickly learned,
 A signal this which all can see !
 Thus nothing here provokes the strong
 To wanton cruelty.
- “All freakishness of mind is checked ; 45
 He tamed, who foolishly aspires ;
 While to the measure of his might Each fashions his desires.
- “All kinds, and creatures, stand and fall
 By strength of prowess or of wit : 50
 ’Tis God’s appointment who must sway,
 And who is to submit.
- “Since, then, the rule of right is plain,
 And longest life is but a day ;
 To have my ends, maintain my rights, 55
 I’ll take the shortest way.”
- And thus among these rocks he lived,
 Through summer heat and winter snow :
 The Eagle, he was lord above,
 And Rob was lord below. 60
- So was it—would, at least, have been
 But through untowardness of fate ;
 For Polity was then too strong—
 He came an age too late ;
- Or shall we say an age too soon ? 65
 For, were the bold Man living now,
 How might he flourish in his pride,
 With buds on every bough !
- Then rents and factors, rights of chase,
 Sheriffs, and lairds and their domains, 70
 Would all have seemed but paltry things,
 Not worth a moment’s pains.
- Rob Roy had never lingered here,
 To these few meagre Vales confined ;
 But thought how wide the world, the
 times 75
 How fairly to his mind !
- And to his Sword he would have said,
 “Do Thou my sovereign will enact
 From land to land through half the earth !
 Judge thou of law and fact ! 80
- “’Tis fit that we should do our part,
 Becoming that mankind should learn
 That we are not to be surpassed
 In fatherly concern.
- “Of old things all are over old, 85
 Of good things none are good enough ;—
 We’ll show that we can help to frame
 A world of other stuff.

"I, too, will have my kings that take
From me the sign of life and death : 90
Kingdoms shall shift about, like clouds, Obedient to my breath."

And, if the word had been fulfilled,
As might have been, then, thought of joy!
France would have had her present Boast,
And we our own Rob Roy ! 96

Oh ! say not so ; compare them not ;
I would not wrong thee, Champion brave !
Would wrong thee nowhere ; least of all Here standing by thy grave. 100

For Thou, although with some wild
thoughts,
Wild Chieftain of a savage Clan !
Hadst this to boast of ; thou didst love
The liberty of man.

And, had it been thy lot to live 105
With us who now behold the light,
Thou wouldst have nobly stirred thyself,
And battled for the Right.

For thou wert still the poor man's stay,
The poor man's heart, the poor man's
hand ; 110
And all the oppressed, who wanted
strength,
Had thine at their command.

Bear witness many a pensive sigh
Of thoughtful Herdsman when he strays Alone upon Loch Veol's heights, 115
And by Loch Lomond's braes.

And, far and near, through vale and hill,
Are faces that attest the same ;
The proud heart flashing through the eyes,
At sound of ROB ROY's name. 120

SONNET.

COMPOSED AT ——— CASTLE.

[Composed September 18, 1803.—Published 1807.]

DEGENERATE Douglas ! oh, the unworthy
Lord !
Whom mere despite of heart could so far please,
And love of havoc, (for with such disease

Fame taxes him,) that he could send forth word

To level with the dust a noble horde, 5
A brotherhood of venerable Trees, Leaving an ancient dome, and towers
like these,

Beggared and outraged !—Many hearts deplored

The fate of those old Trees ; and oft with pain

The traveller, at this day, will stop and
gaze 10

On wrongs, which Nature scarcely seems to heed :

For sheltered places, bosoms, nooks, and bays,

And the pure mountains, and the gentle
Tweed,

And the green silent pastures, yet remain.

XIII.

YARROW UNVISITED.

[Composed 1803.—Published 1807.]

See the various Poems the scene of which is laid upon the banks of the Yarrow ; in particular, the exquisite Ballad of Hamilton beginning—
"Busk ye, busk ye, my bonny, bonny Bride, Busk ye, busk ye, my winsome Marrow !"

FROM Stirling castle we had seen
The mazy Forth unravelled ;
Had trod the banks of Clyde, and Tay,
And with the Tweed had travelled ;
And when we came to Clovenford, 5
Then said my "winsome Marrow," "Whate'er betide, we'll turn aside,
And see the Braes of Yarrow."

"Let Yarrow folk, frae Selkirk town,
Who have been buying, selling, 10
Go back to Yarrow, 'tis their own ;
Each maiden to her dwelling !
On Yarrow's banks let herons feed,
Hares couch, and rabbits burrow !
But we will downward with the Tweed, 15
Nor turn aside to Yarrow.

"There's Galla Water, Leader Haughs,
Both lying right before us ;
And Dryborough, where with chiming
Tweed

The lintwhites sing in chorus ; 20

There's pleasant Tiviot-dale, a land
 Made blithe with plough and harrow :
 Why throw away a needful day
 To go in search of Yarrow ?

"What's Yarrow but a river bare, 25
 That glides the dark hills under ?
 There are a thousand such elsewhere
 As worthy of your wonder."

—Strange words they seemed of slight and scorn ;

My True-love sighed for sorrow ; 30
 And looked me in the face, to think I thus could speak of Yarrow !

"Oh! green," said I, "are Yarrow's holms,

And sweet is Yarrow flowing !
 Fair hangs the apple frae the rock,¹ 35
 But we will leave it growing.

O'er hilly path, and open Strath,
 We'll wander Scotland thorough ;
 But, though so near, we will not turn Into the dale of Yarrow. 40

"Let beeves and home-bred kine partake
 The sweets of Burn-mill meadow ;
 The swan on still St. Mary's Lake Float double, swan and shadow !
 We will not see them ; will not go, 45
 To-day, nor yet to-morrow ;
 Enough if in our hearts we know
 There's such a place as Yarrow.

"Be Yarrow stream unseen, unknown !
 It must, or we shall rue it : 50
 We have a vision of our own ;
 Ah ! why should we undo it ?
 The treasured dreams of times long past,
 We'll keep them, winsome Marrow !
 For when we're there, although 'tis fair,
 'Twill be another Yarrow ! 56

"If Care with freezing years should come,
 And wandering seem but folly,—
 Should we be loth to stir from home,
 And yet be melancholy ; 60
 Should life be dull, and spirits low,
 'Twill soothe us in our sorrow,
 That earth hath something yet to show,
 The bonny holms of Yarrow !"

SONNET.

IN THE PASS OF KILLICRANKY.

An invasion being expected, October, 1803.

[Composed October, 1803.—Published 1807.]

Six thousand veterans practised in war's game,

Tried men, at Killicranky were arrayed
 Against an equal host that wore the plaid, Shepherds and herdsmen.—Like a whirlwind came

The Highlanders, the slaughter spread like flame ; 5

And Garry, thundering down his mountain-road,

Was stopped, and could not breathe beneath the load

Of the dead bodies.—'Twas a day of shame
 For them whom precept and the pedantry
 Of cold mechanic battle do enslave. 10

O for a single hour of that Dundee,
 Who on that day the word of onset gave !
 Like conquest would the Men of England see ;

And her Foes find a like inglorious grave.

XV.

THE MATRON OF JEDBOROUGH
 AND HER HUSBAND.

[Composed between 1803–1805.—Published 1807.]

At Jedborough, my companion and I went into private lodgings for a few days ; and the following Verses were called forth by the character and domestic situation of our Hostess.

AGE ! twine thy brows with fresh spring
 flowers,

And call a train of laughing Hours ;
 And bid them dance, and bid them sing ;
 And thou, too, mingle in the ring !

Take to thy heart a new delight ; 5
 If not, make merry in despite

That there is One who scorns thy power :—
 But dance ! for under Jedborough Tower
 A Matron dwells who, though she bears
 The weight of more than seventy years, 10
 Lives in the light of youthful glee,
 And she will dance and sing with thee.

Nay! start not at that Figure—there!
 Him who is rooted to his chair!
 Look at him—look again! for he 15
 Hath long been of thy family.
 With legs that move not, if they can,
 And useless arms, a trunk of man,
 He sits, and with a vacant eye;
 A sight to make a stranger sigh! 20
 Deaf, drooping, that is now his doom:
 His world is in this single room:
 Is this a place for mirthful cheer?
 Can merry-making enter here?

The joyous Woman is the Mate 25
 Of him in that forlorn estate!
 He breathes a subtterranean damp;
 But bright as Vesper shines her lamp:
 He is as mute as Jedborough Tower:
 She jocund as it was of yore, 30
 With all its bravery on; in times
 When, all alive with merry chimes,
 Upon a sun-bright morn of May,
 It roused the Vale to holiday.

I praise thee, Matron! and thy due 35
 Is praise, heroic praise, and true!
 With admiration I behold
 Thy gladness unsubdued and bold:
 Thy looks, thy gestures, all present
 The picture of a life well spent: 40
 This do I see; and something more;
 A strength unthought of heretofore!
 Delighted am I for thy sake;
 And yet a higher joy partake:
 Our Human-nature throws away 45
 Its second twilight, and looks gay;
 A land of promise and of pride
 Unfolding, wide as life is wide.

Ah! see her helpless Charge! enclosed Within himself as seems, composed; 50
 To fear of loss, and hope of gain,
 The strife of happiness and pain,
 Utterly dead! yet in the guise
 Of little infants, when their eyes
 Begin to follow to and fro 55
 The persons that before them go,
 He tracks her motions, quick or slow.
 Her buoyant spirit can prevail
 Where common cheerfulness would fail;
 She strikes upon him with the heat 60
 Of July suns; he feels it sweet;

An animal delight though dim!
 'Tis all that now remains for him!

The more I looked, I wondered more—
 And, while I scanned them o'er and o'er,
 Some inward trouble suddenly 66
 Broke from the Matron's strong black
 eye—

A remnant of uneasy light,
 A flash of something over-bright!
 Nor long this mystery did detain 70
 My thoughts;—she told in pensive strain
 That she had borne a heavy yoke,
 Been stricken by a twofold stroke;
 Ill health of body; and had pined
 Beneath worse ailments of the mind. 75

So be it!—but let praise ascend
 To Him who is our lord and friend!
 Who from disease and suffering
 Hath called for thee a second spring;
 Repaid thee for that sore distress 80
 By no untimely joyousness;
 Which makes of thine a blissful state;
 And cheers thy melancholy Mate!

XVI.

[Composed September 25, 1803.—Published 1815.]

FLY, some kind Harbinger, to Grasmere-
 dale!
 Say that we come, and come by this day's
 light;
 Fly upon swiftest wing round field and
 height,
 But chiefly let one Cottage hear the tale;
 There let a mystery of joy prevail, 5
 The kitten frolic, like a gamesome sprite,
 And Rover whine, as at a second sight
 Of near-approaching good that shall not
 fail:
 And from that Infant's face let joy
 appear; 9
 Yea, let our Mary's one companion child—
 That hath her six weeks' solitude beguiled
 With intimations manifold and dear, While we have wandered over wood and
 wild—
 Smile on his Mother now with bolder cheer. 14

XVII.

THE BLIND HIGHLAND BOY.

A TALE TOLD BY THE FIRE-SIDE, AFTER RETURNING TO THE VALE OF GRASMERE.

[Composed probably December, 1806.—Published 1807.]

Now we are tired of boisterous joy,
Have romped enough, my little Boy!
Jane hangs her head upon my breast,
And you shall bring your stool and rest;
This corner is your own. 5

There! take your seat, and let me see
That you can listen quietly:
And, as I promised, I will tell
That strange adventure which befell
A poor blind Highland Boy. 10

A Highland Boy!—why call him so?
Because, my Darlings, ye must know
That, under hills which rise like towers,
Far higher hills than these of ours!
He from his birth had lived. 15

He ne'er had seen one earthly sight;
The sun, the day; the stars, the night;
Or tree, or butterfly, or flower,
Or fish in stream, or bird in bower,
Or woman, man, or child. 20

And yet he neither drooped nor pined,
Nor had a melancholy mind;
For God took pity on the Boy,
And was his friend; and gave him joy
Of which we nothing know. 25

His Mother, too, no doubt, above
Her other children him did love:
For was she here, or was she there,
She thought of him with constant care,
And more than mother's love. 30

And proud she was of heart, when clad
In crimson stockings, tartan plaid,
And bonnet with a feather gay,
To Kirk he on the sabbath day
Went hand in hand with her. 35

A dog, too, had he; not for need,
But one to play with and to feed;
Which would have led him, if bereft
Of company or friends, and left Without a better guide. 40

And then the bagpipes he could blow—
And thus from house to house would go;
And all were pleased to hear and see,
For none made sweeter melody
Than did the poor blind Boy. 45

Yet he had many a restless dream;
Both when he heard the eagles scream,
And when he heard the torrents roar,
And heard the water beat the shore
Near which their cottage stood. 50

Beside a lake their cottage stood,
Not small like ours, a peaceful flood;
But one of mighty size, and strange;
That, rough or smooth, is full of change,
And stirring in its bed. 55

For to this lake, by night and day,
The great Sea-water finds its way
Through long, long windings of the hills,
And drinks up all the pretty rills
And rivers large and strong: 60

Then hurries back the road it came—
Returns, on errand still the same;
This did it when the earth was new;
And this for evermore will do,
As long as earth shall last. 65

And, with the coming of the tide,
Come boats and ships that safely ride
Between the woods and lofty rocks;
And to the shepherds with their flocks
Bring tales of distant lands. 70

And of those tales, whate'er they were,
The blind Boy always had his share;
Whether of mighty towns, or vales
With warmer suns and softer gales,
Or wonders of the Deep. 75

Yet more it pleased him, more it stirred,
When from the water-side he heard
The shouting, and the jolly cheers;
The bustle of the mariners
In stillness or in storm. 80

But what do his desires avail?
For He must never handle sail;
Nor mount the mast, nor row, nor float
In sailor's ship, or fisher's boat,
Upon the rocking waves. 85

His Mother often thought, and said,
What sin would be upon her head
If she should suffer this: "My Son,
Whate'er you do, leave this undone;
The danger is so great."

90

Thus lived he by Loch Leven's side
Still sounding with the sounding tide,
And heard the billows leap and dance,
Without a shadow of mischance,
Till he was ten years old.

95

When one day (and now mark me well, Ye soon shall know how this befell)
He in a vessel of his own
On the swift flood is hurrying down,
Down to the mighty Sea.

100

In such a vessel never more
May human creature leave the shore!
If this or that way he should stir,
Woe to the poor blind Mariner!
For death will be his doom.

105

But say what bears him?—Ye have seen
The Indian's bow, his arrows keen, Rare beasts, and birds with plumage
bright;
Gifts which, for wonder or delight,
Are brought in ships from far.

110

Such gifts had those seafaring men
Spread round that haven in the glen;
Each hut, perchance, might have its own;
And to the Boy they all were known—
He knew and prized them all.

115

The rarest was a Turtle-shell
Which he, poor Child, had studied well;
A shell of ample size, and light
As the pearly car of Amphitrite,
That sportive dolphins drew.

120

And, as a Coracle that braves
On Vaga's breast the fretful waves,
This shell upon the deep would swim,
And gaily lift its fearless brim
Above the tossing surge.

125

And this the little blind Boy knew;
And he a story strange yet true
Had heard, how in a shell like this
An English Boy, O thought of bliss!
Had stoutly launched from shore; 130

Launched from the margin of a bay
Among the Indian isles, where lay
His father's ship, and had sailed far—
To join that gallant ship of war,
In his delightful shell.

135

Our Highland Boy oft visited
The house that held this prize; and, led
By choice or chance, did thither come
One day when no one was at home,
And found the door unbarred.

140

While there he sate, alone and blind,
That story flashed upon his mind;—
A bold thought roused him, and he took
The shell from out its secret nook,
And bore it on his head.

145

He launched his vessel,—and in pride
Of spirit, from Loch Leven's side, Stepped into it—his thoughts all free
As the light breezes that with glee Sang through the adventurer's hair.

A while he stood upon his feet; 151
He felt the motion—took his seat;
Still better pleased as more and more
The tide retreated from the shore,
And sucked, and sucked him in. 155

And there he is in face of Heaven.
How rapidly the Child is driven!
The fourth part of a mile, I ween,
He thus had gone, ere he was seen
By any human eye. 160

But when he was first seen, oh me
What shrieking and what misery!
For many saw; among the rest
His Mother, she who loved him best,
She saw her poor blind Boy. 165

But for the child, the sightless Boy,
It is the triumph of his joy!
The bravest traveller in balloon,
Mounting as if to reach the moon,
Was never half so blessed. 170

And let him, let him go his way,
Alone, and innocent, and gay!
For, if good Angels love to wait
On the forlorn unfortunate,
This Child will take no harm. 175 and was, the vessel, was a shell.

which he, poor child had studied The shell of a green turtle. There another - the night of it.

Ann of W's near Vienna & Guelphing Kussatze palace

But now the passionate lament,
Which from the crowd on shore was sent,
The cries which broke from old and young
In Gaelic, or the English tongue,
Are stifled—all is still. 180

And quickly with a silent crew
A boat is ready to pursue;
And from the shore their course they take,
And swiftly down the running lake
They follow the blind Boy. 185

But soon they move with softer pace;
So have ye seen the fowler chase
On Grasmere's clear unruffled breast
A youngling of the wild-duck's nest
With deftly-lifted oar; 190

Or as the wily sailors crept
To seize (while on the Deep it slept)
The hapless creature which did dwell
Erewhile within the dancing shell,
They steal upon their prey. 195

With sound the least that can be made,
They follow, more and more afraid,
More cautious as they draw more near;
But in his darkness he can hear,
And guesses their intent. 200

"Lei-gha—Lei-gha"—he then cried out,
"Lei-gha—Lei-gha"—with eager shout;
Thus did he cry, and thus did pray,
And what he meant was "Keep away,
And leave me to myself!" 205

Alas! and when he felt their hands—
You've often heard of magic wands,
That with a motion overthrow
A palace of the proudest show,
Or melt it into air: 210

So all his dreams—that inward light
With which his soul had shone so bright—
All vanished;—'twas a heartfelt cross
To him, a heavy, bitter loss,
As he had ever known. 215

But hark! a gratulating voice,
With which the very hills rejoice:
'Tis from the crowd, who tremblingly
Have watched the event, and now can see
That he is safe at last. 220

And then, when he was brought to land,
Full sure they were a happy band,
Which, gathering round, did on the banks
Of that great Water give God thanks,
And welcomed the poor Child. 225

And in the general joy of heart
The blind Boy's little dog took part;
He leapt about, and oft did kiss
His master's hands in sign of bliss,
With sound like lamentation. 230

But most of all, his Mother dear,
She who had fainted with her fear,
Rejoiced when waking she espies
The Child; when she can trust her eyes,
And touches the blind Boy. 235

She led him home, and wept amain,
When he was in the house again:
Tears flowed in torrents from her eyes;
She kissed him—how could she chastise?
She was too happy far. 240

Thus, after he had fondly braved
The perilous Deep, the Boy was saved;
And, though his fancies had been wild,
Yet he was pleased and reconciled
To live in peace on shore. 245

And in the lonely Highland dell
Still do they keep the Turtle-shell;
And long the story will repeat
Of the blind Boy's adventurous feat,
And how he was preserved. 250

Note.—It is recorded in "Dampier's Voyages," that a boy, son of the captain of a Man-of-War, seated himself in a Turtle-shell, and floated in it from the shore to his father's ship, which lay at anchor at the distance of half a mile. In deference to the opinion of a Friend, I have substituted such a shell for the less elegant vessel in which my blind Voyager did actually entrust himself to the dangerous current of Loch Leven, as was related to me by an eye-witness.

MEMORIALS OF A TOUR IN SCOTLAND,

1814.

I.

SUGGESTED BY A BEAUTIFUL RUIN UPON
ONE OF THE ISLANDS OF LOCH LOMOND, A PLACE CHOSEN FOR THE RETREAT OF A SOLITARY INDIVIDUAL, FROM WHOM THIS HABITATION ACQUIRED THE NAME
OF

THE BROWNIE'S CELL.

[Composed perhaps 1814.—Published 1820.]

I.

To barren heath, bleak moor, and quaking fen,

Or depth of labyrinthine glen ;
Or into trackless forest set
With trees, whose lofty umbrage met ;
World-wearied Men withdrew of yore ; 5 (Penance their trust, and prayer their store ;)

And in the wilderness were bound
To such apartments as they found ;
Or with a new ambition raised ;
That God might suitably be praised. 10

II.

High lodged the Warrior, like a bird of prey ;

Or where broad waters round him lay :
But this wild Ruin is no ghost
Of his devices—buried, lost !
Within this little lonely isle 15
There stood a consecrated Pile ;
Where tapers burned, and mass was sung,
For them whose timid Spirits clung
To mortal succour, though the tomb
Had fixed, for ever fixed, their doom ! 20

III.

Upon those servants of another world
When madding Power her bolts had hurled,

Their habitation shook ;—it fell,
And perished, save one narrow cell ;
Whither, at length, a Wretch retired 25
Who neither grovelled nor aspired :
He, struggling in the net of pride,
The future scorned, the past defied ;
Still tempering, from the unguilty forge
Of vain conceit, an iron scourge ! 30

IV.

Proud Remnant was he of a fearless Race,
Who stood and flourished face to face
With their perennial hills ;—but Crime,
Hastening the stern decrees of Time, Brought low a Power, which from its
home 35
Burst, when repose grew wearisome ;
And, taking impulse from the sword,
And, mocking its own plighted word,
Had found, in ravage widely dealt,
Its warfare's bourn, its travel's belt ! 40

V.

All, all were dispossessed, save him whose
smile
Shot lightning through this lonely Isle !
No right had he but what he made
To this small spot, his leafy shade ;
But the ground lay within that ring 45
To which he only dared to cling ;
Renouncing here, as worse than dead,
The craven few who bowed the head

Beneath the change; who heard a claim How loud! yet lived in peace with shame. 50

VI.

From year to year this shaggy Mortal
went

(So seemed it) down a strange descent:
Till they, who saw his outward frame,
Fixed on him an unhallowed name;
Him, free from all malicious taint, 55
And guiding, like the Patmos Saint,
A pen unwearied—to indite,
In his lone Isle, the dreams of night;
Impassioned dreams, that strove to span
The faded glories of his Clan! 60

VII.

Suns that through blood their western harbour sought,

And stars that in their courses fought;
Towers rent, winds combating with
woods,

Lands deluged by unbridled floods;
And beast and bird that from the spell 65
Of sleep took import terrible;—
These types mysterious (if the show
Of battle and the routed foe
Had failed) would furnish an array Of matter for the dawning day! 70

VIII.

How disappeared He?—ask the newt and toad,

Inheritors of his abode;
The otter crouching undisturbed,
In her dank cleft;—but be thou curbed,
O froward Fancy! 'mid a scene 75
Of aspect winning and serene;
For those offensive creatures shun
The inquisition of the sun!
And in this region flowers delight,
And all is lovely to the sight. 80

IX.

Spring finds not here a melancholy breast,
When she applies her annual test
To dead and living; when her breath
Quickens, as now, the withered heath;—
Nor flaunting Summer—when he throws
His soul into the briar-rose; 86

Or calls the lily from her sleep
Prolonged beneath the bordering deep;
Nor Autumn, when the viewless wren
Is warbling near the BROWNIE'S Den. 90

X.

Wild Relique! beauteous as the chosen
spot

In Nysa's isle, the embellished grot;
Whither, by care of Libyan Jove,
(High Servant of paternal Love)
Young Bacchus was conveyed—to lie 95
Safe from his step-dame Rhea's eye;
Where bud, and bloom, and fruitage,
glowed,

Close-crowding round the infant-god;
All colours,—and the liveliest streak
A foil to his celestial cheek! 100

COMPOSED AT CORA LINN, IN SIGHT OF WALLACE'S TOWER.

“—How Wallace fought for Scotland, left the
name
Of Wallace to be found, like a wild flower,
All over his dear Country; left the deeds
Of Wallace, like a family of ghosts,
To people the steep rocks and river banks,
Her natural sanctuaries, with a local soul
Of independence and stern liberty.”—MS.

LORD of the vale! astounding Flood;
The dullest leaf in this thick wood Quakes—conscious of thy power;
The caves reply with hollow moan;
And vibrates, to its central stone, 5
Yon time-cemented Tower!

And yet how fair the rural scene!
For thou, O Clyde, hast ever been Beneficent as strong;
Pleased in refreshing dews to steep 10
The little trembling flowers that peep Thy shelving rocks among.

Hence all who love their country, love
To look on thee—delight to rove
Where they thy voice can hear; 15
And, to the patriot-warrior's Shade,
Lord of the vale! to Heroes laid
In dust, that voice is dear!

Along thy banks, at dead of night
Sweeps visibly the Wallace Wight; 20
Or stands, in warlike vest,
Aloft, beneath the moon's pale beam,
A Champion worthy of the stream,
Yon grey tower's living crest!

But clouds and envious darkness hide 25
A Form not doubtfully descried:—
Their transient mission o'er,
O say to what blind region flee
These Shapes of awful phantasy?
To what untrodden shore? 30

Less than divine command they spurn;
But this we from the mountains learn,
And this the valleys show;
That never will they deign to hold Communion where the heart is cold 35
To human weal and woe.

The man of abject soul in vain
Shall walk the Marathonian plain;
Or thrid the shadowy gloom,
That still invests the guardian Pass, 40
Where stood, sublime, Leonidas Devoted to the tomb.

And let no Slave his head incline,
Or kneel, before the votive shrine
By Uri's lake, where Tell 45
Leapt, from his storm-vev't boat, to land,
Heaven's Instrument, for by his hand
That day the Tyrant fell.

EFFUSION

IN THE PLEASURE-GROUND ON THE BANKS OF THE BRAN, NEAR DUNKELD.

[Composed 1814 (?).—Published 1827.]

"The waterfall, by a loud roaring, warned us when we must expect it. We were first, however, conducted into a small apartment, where the Gardener desired us to look at a picture of Ossian, which, while he was telling the history of the young Artist who executed the work, disappeared, parting in the middle—flying asunder as by the touch of magic—and lo! we are at the entrance of a splendid apartment, which was almost dizzy and alive with waterfalls, that tumbled in all directions; the great cascade, opposite the window, which faced us, being reflected in innumerable mirrors upon the ceiling and against the walls."— Extract from the Journal of my Fellow-Traveller.

WHAT He—who, mid the kindred throng
Of Heroes that inspired his song,
Doth yet frequent the hill of storms,
The stars dim-twinkling through their
forms!

What! Ossian here—a painted Thrall, 5
Mute fixture on a stuccoed wall;
To serve—an unsuspected screen
For shôw that must not yet be seen;
And, when the moment comes, to part
And vanish by mysterious art; 10
Head, harp, and body, split asunder,
For ingress to a world of wonder:
A gay saloon, with waters dancing
Upon the sight wherever glancing;
One loud cascade in front, and lo! 15
A thousand like it, white as snow—
Streams on the walls, and torrent-foam
As active round the hollow dome,
Illusive cataracts! of their terrors
Not stripped, nor voiceless in the mirrors,
That catch the pageant from the flood 21
Thundering adown a rocky wood.
What pains to dazzle and confound!
What strife of colour, shape and sound
In this quaint medley, that might seem 25
Devised out of a sick man's dream!
Strange scene, fantastic and uneasy
As ever made a maniac dizzy,
When disenchanting from the mood
That loves on sullen thoughts to brood! 30

O Nature—in thy changeful visions,
Through all thy most abrupt transitions
Smooth, graceful, tender, or sublime—
Ever averse to pantomime,
Thee neither do they know nor us 35
Thy servants, who can trifle thus;
Else verily the sober powers Of rock that frowns, and stream that roars,
Exalted by congenial sway
Of Spirits, and the undying Lay, 40
And Names that moulder not away,
Had wakened some redeeming thought
More worthy of this favoured Spot;
Recalled some feeling—to set free
The Bard from such indignity! 45

The Effigies¹ of a valiant Wight
 I once beheld, a Templar Knight;
 Not prostrate, not like those that rest
 On tombs, with palms together prest,
 But sculptured out of living stone, 50
 And standing upright and alone,
 Both hands with rival energy
 Employed in setting his sword free
 From its dull sheath—stern sentinel
 Intent to guard St. Robert's cell; 55
 As if with memory of the affray
 Far distant, when, as legends say,
 The Monks of Fountain's thronged to
 force
 From its dear home the Hermit's corse,
 That in their keeping it might lie, 60
 To crown their abbey's sanctity.
 So had they rushed into the grot
 Of sense despised, a world forgot,
 And torn him from his loved retreat,
 Where altar-stone and rock-hewn seat 65
 Still hint that quiet best is found,
 Even by the Living, under ground;
 But a bold Knight, the selfish aim Defeating, put the Monks to shame,
 There where you see his Image stand 70
 Bare to the sky, with threatening brand
 Which lingering NID is proud to show
 Reflected in the pool below.

Thus, like the men of earliest days,
 Our sires set forth their grateful praise:
 Uncouth the workmanship, and rude! 76
 But, nursed in mountain solitude,
 Might some aspiring artist dare
 To seize whate'er, through misty air,
 A ghost, by glimpses, may present 80
 Of imitable lineament,
 And give the phantom an array
 That less should scorn the abandoned clay;
 Then let him hew with patient stroke
 An Ossian out of mural rock, 85
 And leave the figurative Man—
 Upon thy margin, roaring Bran!—
 Fixed, like the Templar of the steep,
 An everlasting watch to keep;
 With local sanctities in trust, 90
 More precious than a hermit's dust;

And virtues through the mass infused,
 Which old idolatry abused.
 What though the Granite would deny
 All fervour to the sightless eye; 95
 And touch from rising suns in vain
 Solicit a Memnonian strain;
 Yet, in some fit of anger sharp,
 The wind might force the deep-grooved
 harp
 To utter melancholy moans 100
 Not unconnected with the tones
 Of soul-sick flesh and weary bones;
 While grove and river notes would lend,
 Less deeply sad, with these to blend!
 Vain pleasures of luxurious life, 105
 For ever with yourselves at strife;
 Through town and country both deranged
 By affectations interchanged,
 And all the perishable gauds
 That heaven-deserted man applauds; 110
 When will your hapless patrons learn
 To watch and ponder—to discern
 The freshness, the everlasting youth,
 Of admiration sprung from truth;
 From beauty infinitely growing 115
 Upon a mind with love o'erflowing—
 To sound the depths of every Art
 That seeks its wisdom through the heart?

Thus (where the intrusive Pile, ill-
 graced
 With baubles of theatric taste, 120
 O'erlooks the torrent breathing showers
 On motley bands of alien flowers
 In stiff confusion set or sown,
 Till Nature cannot find her own,
 Or keep a remnant of the sod 125
 Which Caledonian Heroes trod)
 I mused; and, thirsting for redress,
 Recoiled into the wilderness.

YARROW VISITED.

SEPTEMBER, 1814.

(See page 292.)

AND is this—Yarrow?—This the Stream
 Of which my fancy cherished,
 So faithfully, a waking dream?
 An image that hath perished!

O that some Minstrel's harp were near, 5 To utter notes of gladness, And chase this silence from the air, That fills my heart with sadness !	Meek loveliness is round thee spread, 45 A softness still and holy ; The grace of forest charms decayed, And pastoral melancholy.
Yet why ?—a silvery current flows With uncontrolled meanderings ; 10 Nor have these eyes by greener hills Been soothed, in all my wanderings. And, through her depths, Saint Mary's Lake Is visibly delighted ; For not a feature of those hills 15 Is in the mirror slighted.	That region left, the vale unfolds Rich groves of lofty stature, 50 With Yarrow winding through the pomp Of cultivated nature ; And, rising from those lofty groves, Behold a Ruin hoary ! The shattered front of Newark's Towers, Renowned in Border story. 56
A blue sky bends o'er Yarrow vale, Save where that pearly whiteness Is round the rising sun diffused, A tender hazy brightness ; 20 Mild dawn of promise ! that excludes All profitless dejection ; Though not unwilling here to admit A pensive recollection.	Fair scenes for childhood's opening bloom, For sportive youth to stray in ; For manhood to enjoy his strength ; And age to wear away in ! 60 Yon cottage seems a bower of bliss, A covert for protection Of tender thoughts, that nestle there— The brood of chaste affection.
Where was it that the famous Flower 25 Of Yarrow Vale lay bleeding ? His bed perchance was yon smooth mound On which the herd is feeding : And haply from this crystal pool, Now peaceful as the morning, 30 The Water-wraith ascended thrice— And gave his doleful warning.	How sweet, on this autumnal day, 65 The wild-wood fruits to gather, And on my True-love's forehead plant A crest of blooming heather ! And what if I enwreathed my own ! 'Twere no offence to reason ; 70 The sober Hills thus deck their brows To meet the wintry season.
Delicious is the Lay that sings The haunts of happy Lovers, The path that leads them to the grove, 35 The leafy grove that covers : And Pity sanctifies the Verse That paints, by strength of sorrow, The unconquerable strength of love ; Bear witness, rueful Yarrow ! 40	I see—but not by sight alone, Loved Yarrow, have I won thee ; A ray of fancy still survives— 75 Her sunshine plays upon thee ! Thy ever-youthful waters keep A course of lively pleasure ; And gladsome notes my lips can breathe, Accordant to the measure. 80
But thou, that didst appear so fair To fond imagination, Dost rival in the light of day Her delicate creation :	The vapours linger round the Heights, They melt, and soon must vanish ; One hour is theirs, nor more is mine— Sad thought, which I would banish, But that I know, where'er I go, 85 Thy genuine image, Yarrow ! Will dwell with me—to heighten joy, And cheer my mind in sorrow.

INDEPENDENCE AND LIBERTY.

COMPOSED BY THE SEA-SIDE, NEAR CALAIS,
AUGUST, 1802.

[Composed August, 1802.—Published 1807.]

FAIR Star of evening, Splendour of the
west,
Star of my Country!—on the horizon's
brink
Thou hangest, stooping, as might seem,
to sink
On England's bosom; yet well pleased to
rest,
Meanwhile, and be to her a glorious crest
Conspicuous to the Nations. Thou, I
think,
Shouldst be my Country's emblem; and shouldst wink,
Bright Star! with laughter on her banners, drest
In thy fresh beauty. There! that dusky
spot
Beneath thee, that is England; there she lies.
Blessings be on you both! one hope, one
lot,
One life, one glory!—I, with many a fear
For my dear Country, many heartfelt
sighs,
Among men who do not love her, linger
here.

CALAIS, AUGUST, 1802.

[Composed August, 1802.—Published January 29,
1803 (*Morning Post*¹); 1807.]

Is it a reed that's shaken by the wind,
Or what is it that ye go forth to see?
Lords, lawyers, statesmen, squires of low
degree,
Men known, and men unknown, sick,
lame, and blind,
Post forward all, like creatures of one
kind,
With first-fruit offerings crowd to bend
the knee
In France, before the new-born Majesty.
'Tis ever thus. Ye men of prostrate mind,
A seemly reverence may be paid to
power;
But that's a loyal virtue, never sown
In haste, nor springing with a transient
shower:
When truth, when sense, when liberty were flown,
What hardship had it been to wait an
hour?
Shame on you, feeble Heads, to slavery prone!

¹ This Sonnet (II.), as well as Nos. IV., V., VIII., IX., XVI. and XVII., appear in the Morning Post with the signature W. L. D.,—initials which probably stand for Wordsworthius Libertati dedicavit.—

COMPOSED NEAR CALAIS, ON THE ROAD LEADING TO ARDRES, AUGUST 7, 1802.
[Composed August, 1802.—Published 1807.]

JONES! as from Calais southward you and I Went pacing side by side, this public
Way
Streamed with the pomp of a too-credu-lous day¹.
When faith was pledged to new-born
Liberty:
A homeless sound of joy was in the sky: 5
From hour to hour the antiquated Earth Beat like the heart of Man: songs, gar-lands, mirth,
Banners, and happy faces, far and nigh!
And now, sole register that these things
were,
Two solitary greetings have I heard, 10
"Good morrow, Citizen!" a hollow word,
As if a dead man spake it! Yet despair
Touches me not, though pensive as a bird Whose vernal coverts winter hath laid bare².

I GRIEVED for Buonaparté, with a vain
And an unthinking grief! The tenderest
mood
Of that Man's mind—what can it be?
what food
Fed his first hopes? what knowledge could he gain?
'Tis not in battles that from youth we
train 5
The Governor who must be wise and
good,
And temper with the sternness of the brain
Thoughts motherly, and meek as womanhood.
Wisdom doth live with children round
her knees:

Books, leisure, perfect freedom, and the talk 10
Man holds with week-day man in the hourly walk
Of the mind's business: these are the degrees
By which true Sway doth mount; this is the stalk
True Power doth grow on; and her rights are these.

FESTIVALS have I seen that were not
names:
This is young Buonaparté's natal day,
And his is henceforth an established
sway—
Consul for life. With worship France proclaims
Her approbation, and with pomps and
games. 5
Heaven grant that other Cities may be gay!
Calais is not: and I have bent my way
To the sea-coast, noting that each man frames
His business as he likes. Far other show
My youth here witnessed, in a prouder
time; 10
The senselessness of joy was then sublime!
Happy is he, who, caring not for Pope, Consul, or King, can sound himself to
know
The destiny of Man, and live in hope.

ON THE EXTINCTION OF THE VENETIAN REPUBLIC³.

[Composed probably August, 1802.—Published 1807.]

ONCE did She hold the gorgeous east in fee;
And was the safeguard of the west: the worth
Of Venice did not fall below her birth,

Venice, the eldest Child of Liberty. 4
 She was a maiden City, bright and free;
 No guile seduced, no force could violate;
 And, when she took unto herself a Mate,
 She must espouse the everlasting Sea.
 And what if she had seen those glories
 fade,
 Those titles vanish, and that strength
 decay; 10
 Yet shall some tribute of regret be paid
 When her long life hath reached its final
 day:
 Men are we, and must grieve when even the Shade
 Of that which once was great is passed
 away.

THE KING OF SWEDEN.

[Composed probably August, 1802.—Published 1807.]

THE Voice of song from distant lands shall call
 To that great King: shall hail the crownèd
 Youth
 Who, taking counsel of unbending Truth,
 By one example hath set forth to all How they with dignity may stand; or
 fall, 5
 If fall they must. Now, whither doth it tend?
 And what to him and his shall be the
 end?
 That thought is one which neither can appal
 Nor cheer him; for the illustrious Swede hath done
 The thing which ought to be; is raised
 above 10
 All consequences: work he hath begun
 Of fortitude, and piety, and love,
 Which all his glorious ancestors approve:
 The heroes bless him, him their rightful son¹.

¹ See note.—W. (The "crownèd Youth" was Gustavus IV. of Sweden: born 1778; crowned 1792; abdicated 1809. See Part II., Sonnets xx., XXI.—ED.)

TO TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE².

[Composed probably August, 1802.—Published
 February 2, 1803 (Morning Post); 1807.]

TOUSSAINT, the most unhappy man of
 men!
 Whether the whistling Rustic tend his plough
 Within thy hearing, or thy head be now Pillowed in some deep dungeon's earless
 den;—
 O miserable Chieftain! where and when Wilt thou find patience! Yet die not;
 do thou 6
 Wear rather in thy bonds a cheerful
 brow:
 Though fallen thyself, never to rise again,
 Live, and take comfort. Thou hast left behind
 Powers that will work for thee; air, earth, and skies; 10
 There's not a breathing of the common
 wind
 That will forget thee; thou hast great allies;
 Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
 And love, and man's unconquerable mind.

 ruary 11, 1803 (Morning Post); 1807.]

Among the capricious acts of tyranny that disgraced those times, was the chasing of all Negroes from France by decree of the government: we had a Fellow-passenger who was one of the expelled.

WE had a female Passenger who came From Calais with us, spotless in array,—
 A white-robed Negro, like a lady gay,
 Yet downcast as a woman fearing blame;
 Meek, destitute, as seemed, of hope or
 aim 5

² François Dominique Toussaint, surnamed L'Ouverture, was governor of St. Domingo, and chief of the African slaves enfranchised by the decree of the French Convention (1794). He resisted Napoleon's edict re-establishing slavery in St. Domingo, was arrested and sent to Paris in June, 1802, and there died after ten months' imprisonment in April, 1803.—ED.

She sate, from notice turning not away,
 But on all proffered intercourse did lay
 A weight of languid speech, or to the same
 No sign of answer made by word or face:
 Yet still her eyes retained their tropic fire,
 That, burning independent of the mind,
 Joined with the lustre of her rich attire 12
 To mock the Outcast—O ye Heavens, be
 kind!

And feel, thou Earth, for this afflicted Race!

COMPOSED IN THE VALLEY NEAR DOVER, ON THE DAY OF LANDING.

[Composed August 30, 1802.—Published 1807.]

HERE, on our native soil, we breathe once
 more.

The cock that crows, the smoke that curls, that sound

Of bells;—those boys who in yon meadow-
 ground

In white-sleeved shirts are playing; and the roar

Of the waves breaking on the chalky
 shore;— 5

All, all are English. Oft have I looked
 round

With joy in Kent's green vales; but never
 found

Myself so satisfied in heart before.

Europe is yet in bonds; but let that pass, Thought for another moment. Thou art
 free, 10

My Country! and 'tis joy enough and
 pride

For one hour's perfect bliss, to tread the grass

Of England once again, and hear and see,
 With such a dear Companion at my side.

XI.

SEPTEMBER, 1802. NEAR DOVER.

[Composed September, 1802.—Published 1807.]

INLAND, within a hollow vale, I stood;
 And saw, while sea was calm and air was
 clear,

The coast of France—the coast of France
 how near!

Drawn almost into frightful neighbourhood.

I shrunk; for verily the barrier flood 5

Was like a lake, or river bright and fair,
 A span of waters; yet what power is
 there!

What mightiness for evil and for good!
 Even so doth God protect us if we be Virtuous and wise. Winds blow, and waters roll, 10

Strength to the brave, and Power, and Deity;

Yet in themselves are nothing! One decree

Spake laws to them, and said that by the
 soul

Only, the Nations shall be great and free.

THOUGHT OF A BRITON ON THE SUBJUGA-TION OF SWITZERLAND.

[Composed probably early in 1807.—Published 1807.]

Two Voices are there; one is of the sea,
 One of the mountains; each a mighty
 Voice:

In both from age to age thou didst rejoice,
 They were thy chosen music, Liberty!

There came a Tyrant, and with holy glee 5
 Thou fought'st against him; but hast vainly striven:

Thou from thy Alpine holds at length art
 driven,

Where not a torrent murmurs heard by
 thee.

Of one deep bliss thine ear hath been bereft:

Then cleave, O cleave to that which still is left; 10

For, high-souled Maid, what sorrow would it be

That Mountain floods should thunder as before,

And Ocean bellow from his rocky shore,
 And neither awful Voice be heard by
 thee!

WRITTEN IN LONDON, SEPTEMBER, 1802.

[Composed September, 1802.—Published 1807.]

O FRIEND! I know not which way I must
 look

For comfort, being, as I am, oppress'd,
 To think that now our life is only drest

For show; mean handy-work of craftsman, cook,
 Or groom!—We must run glittering like a brook 5
 In the open sunshine, or we are unblest:
 The wealthiest man among us is the best:
 No grandeur now in nature or in book
 Delights us. Rapine, avarice, expense,
 This is idolatry; and these we adore: 10
 Plain living and high thinking are no
 more:
 The homely beauty of the good old cause
 Is gone; our peace, our fearful innocence,
 And pure religion breathing household
 laws.

LONDON, 1802.

[Composed September, 1802.—Published 1807.]

MILTON! thou shouldst be living at this
 hour:
 England hath need of thee: she is a fen
 Of stagnant waters: altar, sword, and pen,
 Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and
 bower,
 Have forfeited their ancient English
 dower 5
 Of inward happiness. We are selfish men;
 Oh! raise us up, return to us again;
 And give us manners, virtue, freedom,
 power.
 Thy soul was like a Star, and dwelt apart;
 Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea: 10
 Pure as the naked heavens, majestic, free,
 So didst thou travel on life's common way,
 In cheerful godliness; and yet thy heart
 The lowliest duties on herself did lay.

XV.

[Composed probably 1802.—Published 1807.]

GREAT men have been among us; hands that penned
 And tongues that uttered wisdom—better
 none:
 The later Sidney, Marvel, Harrington,

Young Vane, and others who called Milton friend.
 These moralists could act and comprehend: 5
 They knew how genuine glory was put on;
 Taught us how rightfully a nation shone
 In splendour: what strength was, that would not bend
 But in magnanimous meekness. France,
 'tis strange,
 Hath brought forth no such souls as we had then. 10
 Perpetual emptiness! unceasing change!
 No single volume paramount, no code,
 No master spirit, no determined road;
 But equally a want of books and men!

It is not to be thought of that the Flood
 Of British freedom, which, to the open sea
 Of the world's praise, from dark antiquity Hath flowed, "with pomp of waters, un-withstood," 4
 Roused though it be full often to a mood
 Which spurns the check of salutary bands,
 That this most famous Stream in bogs and sands
 Should perish; and to evil and to good
 Be lost for ever. In our halls is hung Armoury of the invincible Knights of old:
 We must be free or die, who speak the
 tongue 11
 That Shakspeare spake; the faith and morals hold Which Milton held.—In every thing we are sprung
 Of Earth's first blood, have titles manifold.

WHEN I have borne in memory what has tamed
 Great Nations, how ennobling thoughts depart
 When men change swords for ledgers, and desert

The student's bower for gold, some fears unnamed

I had, my Country—am I to be blamed?
Now, when I think of thee, and what
thou art, 6

Verily, in the bottom of my heart,
Of those unfilial fears I am ashamed.
For dearly must we prize thee; we who
find

In thee a bulwark for the cause of
men; 10

And I by my affection was beguiled:
What wonder if a Poet now and then,
Among the many movements of his mind,
Felt for thee as a lover or a child!

OCTOBER, 1803.

[Composed October, 1803.—Published 1807.]

ONE might believe that natural miseries
Had blasted France, and made of it a land Unfit for men; and that in one great
band

Her sons were bursting forth, to dwell at ease.

But 'tis a chosen soil, where sun and
breeze 5

Shed gentle favours: rural works are
there,

And ordinary business without care;
Spot rich in all things that can soothe and please!

How piteous then that there should be such dearth

Of knowledge; that whole myriads should unite 10

To work against themselves such fell
despite:

Should come in frenzy and in drunken
mirth,

Impatient to put out the only light
Of Liberty that yet remains on earth!

XIX.

[Composed 1803 (?).—Published 1807.]

THERE is a bondage worse, far worse, to
bear

Than his who breathes, by roof, and floor, and wall,

Pent in, a Tyrant's solitary Thrall:

'Tis his who walks about in the open
air,

One of a Nation who, henceforth, must
wear 5

Their fetters in their souls. For who could be,

Who, even the best, in such condition,
free

From self-reproach, reproach that he must share

With Human-nature? Never be it ours
To see the sun how brightly it will
shine, 10

And know that noble feelings, manly
powers,

Instead of gathering strength, must droop
and pine;

And earth with all her pleasant fruits and flowers

Fade, and participate in man's decline.

OCTOBER, 1803.

[Composed October, 1803.—Published 1807.]

THESE times strike monied worldlings with dismay:

Even rich men, brave by nature, taint
the air

With words of apprehension and despair:

While tens of thousands, thinking on the affray,

Men unto whom sufficient for the day 5
And minds not stinted or untilled are
given,

Sound, healthy, children of the God of
heaven,

Are cheerful as the rising sun in
May.

What do we gather hence but firmer
faith

That every gift of noble origin 10
Is breathed upon by Hope's perpetual
breath;

That virtue and the faculties within
Are vital,—and that riches are akin

To fear, to change, to cowardice, and death?

XXI.

[Composed probably 1808.—Published 1807.]

ENGLAND! the time is come when thou shouldst wean
 Thy heart from its emasculating food;
 The truth should now be better under-
 stood;
 Old things have been unsettled; we have
 seen Fair seed-time, better harvest might have
 been 5
 But for thy trespasses; and, at this day,
 If for Greece, Egypt, India, Africa, Aught good were destined, thou wouldst step between.
 England! all nations in this charge agree:
 But worse, more ignorant in love and hate, 10
 Far—far more abject, is thine Enemy:
 Therefore the wise pray for thee, though the freight
 Of thy offences be a heavy weight:
 Oh grief that Earth's best hopes rest all with Thee!

XXII.

OCTOBER, 1803.

[Composed October, 1803.—Published 1807.]

WHEN, looking on the present face of
 things,
 I see one man, of men the meanest too!
 Raised up to sway the world, to do, undo,
 With mighty Nations for his underlings,
 The great events with which old story
 rings 5
 Seem vain and hollow; I find nothing
 great:
 Nothing is left which I can venerate;
 So that a doubt almost within me springs
 Of Providence, such emptiness at length Seems at the heart of all things. But, great God! 10
 I measure back the steps which I have
 trod;
 And tremble, seeing whence proceeds the
 strength
 Of such poor Instruments, with thoughts
 sublime
 I tremble at the sorrow of the time.

TO THE MEN OF KENT. OCTOBER, 1803.

[Composed Oct. 1803.—Published 1807.]

VANGUARD of Liberty, ye men of Kent,
 Ye children of a Soil that doth advance
 Her haughty brow against the coast of France,
 Now is the time to prove your hardiment!
 To France be words of invitation sent! 5
 They from their fields can see the countenance
 Of your fierce war, may ken the glittering lance,
 And hear you shouting forth your brave
 intent.
 Left single, in bold parley, ye, of yore,
 Did from the Norman win a gallant wreath; 10
 Confirmed the charters that were yours
 before;—
 No parleying now. In Britain is one
 breath;
 We all are with you now from shore to
 shore;—
 Ye men of Kent, 'tis victory or death!

XXIV.

[Composed ?.—Published 1837.]

WHAT if our numbers barely could defy
 The arithmetic of babes, must foreign hordes,
 Slaves, vile as ever were befooled by
 words,
 Striking through English breasts the anarchy
 Of Terror, bear us to the ground, and tie
 Our hands behind our backs with felon cords? 6
 Yields every thing to discipline of swords?
 Is man as good as man, none low, none
 high?—
 Nor discipline nor valour can withstand
 The shock, nor quell the inevitable rout,
 When in some great extremity breaks
 out 11
 A people, on their own beloved Land Risen, like one man, to combat in the
 sight
 Of a just God for liberty and right.

LINES ON THE EXPECTED INVASION.
1803.

[Composed 1803.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

COME ye—who, if (which Heaven avert!)
the Land
Were with herself at strife, would take your stand,
Like gallant Falkland, by the Monarch's
side,
And, like Montrose, make Loyalty your
pride—
Come ye—who, not less zealous, might display 5
Banners at enmity with regal sway,
And, like the Pym and Miltons of that
day,
Think that a State would live in sounder
health
If Kingship bowed its head to Commonwealth—
Ye too—whom no discreditable fear 10
Would keep, perhaps with many a fruitless tear,
Uncertain what to choose and how to steer—
And ye—who might mistake for sober
sense
And wise reserve the plea of indolence—Come ye—whate'er your creed—O waken
all, 15
Whate'er your temper, at your Country's
call;
Resolving (this a free-born Nation can)
To have one Soul, and perish to a man,
Or save this honoured Land from every
Lord 19
But British reason and the British sword.

ANTICIPATION. OCTOBER, 1803.

[Composed October, 1803.—Published 1803 (The Poetical Register, iii. 340); 1804 (The Anti-Gallican); 1807.]

SHOUT, for a mighty Victory is won!
On British ground the Invaders are laid
low;
The breath of Heaven has drifted them like snow,

And left them lying in the silent sun,
Never to rise again!—the work is done. 5
Come forth, ye old men, now in peaceful
show
And greet your sons! drums beat and trumpets blow!
Make merry, wives! ye little children, stun
Your grandame's ears with pleasure of your noise!
Clap, infants, clap your hands! Divine
must be 10
That triumph, when the very worst, the
pain,
And even the prospect of our brethren
slain,
Hath something in it which the heart enjoys:—
In glory will they sleep and endless sanctity.

NOVEMBER, 1806.

[Composed 1806.—Published 1807.]

ANOTHER year!—another deadly blow!
Another mighty Empire¹ overthrown!
And We are left, or shall be left, alone;
The last that dare to struggle with the Foe.
'Tis well! from this day forward we shall
know 5
That in ourselves our safety must be
sought;
That by our own right hands it must be
wrought;
That we must stand unproped, or be laid low.
O dastard whom such foretaste doth not
cheer!
We shall exult, if they who rule the land
Be men who hold its many blessings
dear, 11
Wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band,
Who are to judge of danger which they
fear,
And honour which they do not understand.

ODE.

I.

[Composed probably January, 1816.—Published:
vol. of 1816.]

WHO rises on the banks of Seine,
And binds her temples with the civic wreath?

What joy to read the promise of her mien!
How sweet to rest her wide-spread wings
beneath!

But they are ever playing, 5
And twinkling in the light,
And, if a breeze be straying,
That breeze she will invite;

And stands on tiptoe, conscious she is
fair,

And calls a look of love into her face, 10
And spreads her arms, as if the general air Alone could satisfy her wide embrace.

—Melt, Principalities, before her melt!
Her love ye hailed—her wrath have felt!
But She through many a change of form hath gone, 15
And stands amidst you now an armèd
creature,

Whose panoply is not a thing put on,
But the live scales of a portentous nature;
That, having forced its way from birth to
birth,

Stalks round—abhorred by Heaven, a terror to the Earth! 20

II.

I marked the breathings of her dragon
crest:

My Soul, a sorrowful interpreter,
In many a midnight vision bowed
Before the ominous aspect of her spear;
Whether the mighty beam, in scorn upheld, 25
Threatened her foes,—or, pompously at
rest,

Seemed to bisect her orbèd shield,
As stretches a blue bar of solid cloud
Across the setting sun and all the fiery west.

III.

So did she daunt the Earth, and God
defy! 30

And, wheresoe'er she spread her sovereignty,

Pollution tainted all that was most pure.
—Have we not known—and live we not to tell—

That Justice seemed to hear her final knell?

Faith buried deeper in her own deep
breast 35

Her stores, and sighed to find them insecure!

And Hope was maddened by the drops that fell

From shades, her chosen place of short-lived rest.

Shame followed shame, and woe supplanted woe—

Is this the only change that time can
show? 40

How long shall* vengeance sleep? Ye patient Heavens, how long?

—Infirm ejaculation! from the tongue
Of Nations wanting virtue to be strong
Up to the measure of accorded might,
And daring not to feel the majesty of right! 45

IV.

Weak Spirits are there—who would ask,
Upon the pressure of a painful thing,

The lion's sinews, or the eagle's wing;
Or let their wishes loose, in forest-glade,

Among the lurking powers 50
Of herbs and lowly flowers,

Or seek, from saints above, miraculous
aid—

That Man may be accomplished for a task

Which his own nature hath enjoined;— and why?

If, when that interference hath relieved
him, 55

He must sink down to languish
In worse than former helplessness—and lie

Till the caves roar,—and imbecility
Again engendering anguish,

The same weak wish returns, that had before deceived him. 60

V.

But Thou, supreme Disposer! may'st not speed
The course of things, and change the creed
Which hath been held aloft before men's
sight
Since the first framing of societies, Whether, as bards have told in ancient
song, 65
Built up by soft seducing harmonies;
Or prest together by the appetite,
And by the power, of wrong.

PART II.

I.

ON A CELEBRATED EVENT IN ANCIENT HISTORY¹.

[Composed ?.—Published 1815.]

A ROMAN Master stands on Grecian
ground,
And to the people at the Isthmian
Games
Assembled, He, by a herald's voice, proclaims
THE LIBERTY OF GREECE:—the words
rebound 4
Until all voices in one voice are drowned;
Glad acclamation by which air was rent!
And birds, high flying in the element, Dropped to the earth, astonished at the
sound!
Yet were the thoughtful grieved; and still that voice
Haunts, with sad echoes, musing Fancy's
ear: 10
Ah! that a Conqueror's words should be so dear:
Ah! that a boon could shed such rapturous joys!
A gift of that which is not to be given By all the blended powers of Earth and
Heaven.

¹ i.e. the proclamation of the Liberty of Greece by T. Quintius Flaminius, the conqueror of Phillip of Macedon (B.C. 196).—ED.

II.

UPON THE SAME EVENT.

[Composed ?.—Published 1815.]

WHEN, far and wide, swift as the beams of morn
The tidings passed of servitude repealed,
And of that joy which shook the Isthmian Field,
The rough Ætolians smiled with bitter
scorn.
" 'Tis known," cried they, "that he, who would adorn 5
His envied temples with the Isthmian
crown,
Must either win, through effort of his own,
The prize, or be content to see it worn
By more deserving brows.—Yet so ye prop, Sons of the brave who fought at Marathon, 10
Your feeble spirits! Greece her head hath bowed,
As if the wreath of liberty thereon
Would fix itself as smoothly as a cloud,
Which, at Jove's will, descends on Pe-lion's top."

TO THOMAS CLARKSON, ON THE FINAL PASS-ING OF THE BILL FOR THE ABOLITION OF THE SLAVE TRADE. MARCH, 1807.

[Composed March, 1807.—Published 1807.]

CLARKSON! it was an obstinate hill to climb:
How toilsome—nay, how dire—it was, by
thee
Is known; by none, perhaps, so feelingly:
But thou, who, starting in thy fervent
prime,
Didst first lead forth that enterprise sub-
lime, 5
Hast heard the constant Voice its charge
repeat,
Which, out of thy young heart's oracular
seat,
First roused thee.—O true yoke-fellow
of Time,
Duty's intrepid liegeman, see, the palm 9
Is won, and by all Nations shall be worn!
The blood-stained Writing is for ever torn;

And thou henceforth wilt have a good man's calm,
A great man's happiness; thy zeal shall find Repose at length, firm friend of human kind!

A PROPHECY.

FEBRUARY, 1807.

[Composed 1807.—Published 1807.]

HIGH deeds, O Germans, are to come from you!

Thus in your books the record shall be
found,

“A watchword was pronounced, a potent
sound—

ARMINIUS!—all the people quaked like dew Stirred by the breeze; they rose, a Nation,
true,

True to herself—the mighty Germany,⁵
She of the Danube and the Northern Sea, She rose, and off at once the yoke she threw.

All power was given her in the dreadful
trance;

Those new-born Kings¹ she withered like a flame.”¹⁰

—Woe to them all! but heaviest woe and
shame

To that Bavarian who could first advance
His banner in accursed league with France,

First open traitor to the German name!

The Bavarian (line 12) was Frederick Augustus, Elector of Saxony, with whom Napoleon (Dec. 11, 1806) concluded a treaty admitting him into the Confederation of the Rhine.—Ed.

A vivid repetition of the stars;
Jove, Venus, and the ruddy crest of Mars
Amid his fellows beauteously revealed 6
At happy distance from earth's groaning
field,

Where ruthless mortals wage incessant wars.

Is it a mirror?—or the nether Sphere Opening to view the abyss in which she feeds¹⁰

Her own calm fires?—But list! a voice is near;

Great Pan himself low-whispering through the reeds,

“Be thankful, thou; for, if unholy deeds Ravage the world, tranquillity is here!”

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

Go back to antique ages, if thine eyes
The genuine mien and character would
trace

Of the rash Spirit that still holds her place,³

Prompting the world's audacious vanities!
Go back, and see the Tower of Babel rise;

The pyramid extend its monstrous base,
For some Aspirant of our short-lived race,
Anxious an aery name to immortalize.

There, too, ere wiles and politic dispute
Gave specious colouring to aim and act, See the first mighty Hunter leave the brute—¹¹

To chase mankind, with men in armies packed

For his field-pastime high and absolute,
While, to dislodge his game, cities are sacked!

NOT 'mid the World's vain objects that enslave

The free-born Soul—that World whose vaunted skill

In selfish interest perverts the will,

Whose factions lead astray the wise and brave—
Not there; but in dark wood and rocky
cave, 5
And hollow vale which foaming torrents
fill
With omnipresent murmur as they rave Down their steep beds, that never shall be still:
Here, mighty Nature! in this school
sublime
I weigh the hopes and fears of suffering
Spain; 10
For her consult the auguries of time,
And through the human heart explore my way;
And look and listen—gathering, whence
I may,
Triumph, and thoughts no bondage can restrain.

I DROPPED my pen; and listened to the
Wind
That sang of trees up-torn and vessels tost—
A midnight harmony; and wholly lost
To the general sense of men by chains confined
Of business, care, or pleasure; or resigned 5
To timely sleep. Thought I, the impassioned strain,
Which, without aid of numbers, I sus-tain.
Like acceptance from the World will
find.
Yet some with apprehensive ear shall
drink
A dirge devoutly breathed o'er sorrows
past; 10
And to the attendant promise will give heed—
The prophecy,—like that of this wild
blast,

Which, while it makes the heart with sadness shrink, Tells also of bright calms that shall succeed.

HOFER¹.

[Composed 1809.—Published Oct. 26, 1809 (The Friend); 1815.]

OF mortal parents is the Hero born
By whom the undaunted Tyrolese are led?
Or is it Tell's great Spirit, from the dead
Returned to animate an age forlorn?
He comes like Phœbus through the gates of morn 5
When dreary darkness is discomfited,
Yet mark his modest state! upon his head,
That simple crest, a heron's plume, is worn.
O Liberty! they stagger at the shock
From van to rear—and with one mind would flee, 10
But half their host is buried:—rock on
rock
Descends:—beneath this godlike Warrior, see!
Hills, torrents, woods, embodied to be-mock
The Tyrant, and confound his cruelty.

ADVANCE—come forth from thy Tyrolean
ground,
Dear Liberty! stern Nymph of soul un-
tamed;
Sweet Nymph, O rightly of the mountains named!
Through the long chain of Alps from mound to mound
And o'er the eternal snows, like Echo,
bound; 5
Like Echo, when the hunter train at dawn Have roused her from her sleep: and forest-lawn,

¹ Andreas Hofer, an innkeeper, led the Tyrolese for a time successfully, but was defeated by the Bavarians in October 1809, and tried by court-martial and shot in 1810.—Ed.

Cliffs, woods and caves, her viewless steps resound
 And babble of her pastime!—On, dread
 Power!
 With such invisible motion speed thy
 flight, 10
 Through hanging clouds, from craggy
 height to height,
 Through the green vales and through the herdsman's bower—
 That all the Alps may gladden in thy
 might,
 Here, there, and in all places at one hour.

FEELINGS OF THE TYROLESE.

[Composed 1809.—Published December 21, 1809
 (The Friend); 1815.]

THE Land we from our fathers had in
 trust,
 And to our children will transmit, or die;
 This is our maxim, this our piety;
 And God and Nature say that it is just.
 That which we would perform in arms—
 we must! 5
 We read the dictate in the infant's eye;
 In the wife's smile; and in the placid sky;
 And, at our feet, amid the silent dust
 Of them that were before us.—Sing aloud Old songs, the precious music of the
 heart! 10
 Give, herds and flocks, your voices to the
 wind!
 While we go forth, a self-devoted crowd,
 With weapons grasped in fearless hands,
 to assert
 Our virtue, and to vindicate mankind.

ALAS! what boots the long laborious quest
 Of moral prudence, sought through good and ill;
 Or pains abstruse—to elevate the will,
 And lead us on to that transcendent rest
 Where every passion shall the sway
 attest 5

Of Reason, seated on her sovereign hill;
 What is it but a vain and curious skill,
 If sapient Germany must lie deprest,
 Beneath the brutal sword?—Her haughty
 Schools
 Shall blush; and may not we with sorrow
 say, 10
 A few strong instincts and a few plain
 rules,
 Among the herdsmen of the Alps, have
 wrought
 More for mankind at this unhappy day Than all the pride of intellect and
 thought?

AND is it among rude untutored Dales, There, and there only, that the heart is
 true?
 And, rising to repel or to subdue,
 Is it by rocks and woods that man prevails?
 Ah no! though Nature's dread protection fails, 5
 There is a bulwark in the soul. This
 knew Iberian Burghers when the sword they drew
 In Zaragoza, naked to the gales
 Of fiercely-breathing war. The truth was felt
 By Palafox, and many a brave compeer,
 Like him of noble birth and noble mind;
 By ladies, meek-eyed women without
 fear; 12
 And wanderers of the street, to whom is dealt
 The bread which without industry they
 find.

O'ER the wide earth, on mountain and on
 plain,
 Dwells in the affections and the soul of
 man
 A Godhead, like the universal PAN;

But more exalted, with a brighter train :
 And shall his bounty be dispensed in
 vain, 5
 Showered equally on city and on field,
 And neither hope nor steadfast promise
 yield
 In these usurping times of fear and
 pain?
 Such doom awaits us. Nay, forbid it
 Heaven !
 We know the arduous strife, the eternal
 laws 10
 To which the triumph of all good is
 given,
 High sacrifice, and labour without pause, Even to the death :—else wherefore should
 the eye
 Of man converse with immortality?

TYROLESE.

[Composed 1809.—Published December 21, 1809

It was a moral end for which they fought ;
 Else how, when mighty Thrones were put to shame,
 Could they, poor Shepherds, have preserved an aim,
 A resolution, or enlivening thought?
 Nor hath that moral good been vainly
 sought ; 5
 For in their magnanimity and fame Powers have they left, an impulse, and a claim
 Which neither can be overturned nor bought.
 Sleep, Warriors, sleep ! among your hills
 repose !
 We know that ye, beneath the stern
 control 10
 Of awful prudence, keep the unvanquished soul :
 And when, impatient of her guilt and
 woes,
 Europe breaks forth ; then, Shepherds !
 shall ye rise
 For perfect triumph o'er your Enemies.

HAIL, Zaragoza ! If with unwet eye
 We can approach, thy sorrow to behold,
 Yet is the heart not pitiless nor cold ;
 Such spectacle demands not tear or sigh.
 These desolate remains are trophies high
 Of more than martial courage in the breast
 Of peaceful civic virtue : they attest
 Thy matchless worth to all posterity.
 Blood flowed before thy sight without remorse ;
 Disease consumed thy vitals ; War upheaved 10
 The ground beneath thee with volcanic
 force :
 Dread trials ! yet encountered and sustained
 Till not a wreck of help or hope remained,
 And law was from necessity received ¹.

SAY, what is Honour?—'Tis the finest sense
 Of justice which the human mind can frame,
 Intent each lurking frailty to disclaim, 3
 And guard the way of life from all offence Suffered or done. When lawless violence Invades a Realm, so pressed that in the scale 6
 Of perilous war her weightiest armies fail,
 Honour is hopeful elevation,—whence Glory, and triumph. Yet with politic skill Endangered States may yield to terms unjust ; 10
 Stoop their proud heads, but, not unto the dust—
 A Foe's most favourite purpose to fulfil :
 Happy occasions oft by self-mistrust
 Are forfeited ; but infamy doth kill.

 An empty noise of death the battle's roar,
 If vital hope be wanting to restore,

 Peace of Vienna, signed Oct. 10, 1809.—Ed.

Or fortitude be wanting to sustain, Armies or kingdoms. We have heard a
 strain 5
 Of triumph, how the labouring Danube
 bore
 A weight of hostile corses: drenched with gore
 Were the wide fields, the hamlets heaped with slain.
 Yet see (the mighty tumult overpast) Austria a Daughter of her Throne hath sold! 10
 And her Tyrolean Champion we be-
 hold Murdered, like one ashore by shipwreck
 cast, Murdered without relief. Oh! blind as
 bold,
 To think that such assurance can stand fast!

BRAVE Schill¹! by death delivered, take thy flight
 From Prussia's timid region. Go, and
 rest
 With heroes, 'mid the islands of the Blest,
 Or in the fields of empyrean light.
 A meteor wert thou crossing a dark
 night: 5
 Yet shall thy name, conspicuous and
 sublime,
 Stand in the spacious firmament of time,
 Fixed as a star: such glory is thy right.
 Alas! it may not be: for earthly fame
 Is Fortune's frail dependant; yet there lives 10
 A Judge, who, as man claims by merit,
 gives;
 To whose all-pondering mind a noble
 aim,
 Faithfully kept, is as a noble deed;
 In whose pure sight all virtue doth succeed.

CALL not the royal Swede² unfortunate,
 Who never did to Fortune bend the knee;
 Who slighted fear; rejected steadfastly Temptation; and whose kingly name and
 state
 Have "perished by his choice, and not his fate!" 5
 Hence lives He, to his inner self endeared;
 And hence, wherever virtue is revered,
 He sits a more exalted Potentate, Throned in the hearts of men. Should Heaven ordain
 That this great Servant of a righteous
 cause 10
 Must still have sad or vexing thoughts to endure,
 Yet may a sympathising spirit pause, Admonished by these truths, and quench all pain
 In thankful joy and gratulation pure.

 paid
 His vows to Fortune; who, in cruel-slight
 Of virtuous hope, of liberty, and right, Hath followed wheresoe'er a way was

 By the blind Goddess,—ruthless, undismayed; 5
 And so hath gained at length a prosperous height,
 Round which the elements of worldly

 Beneath his haughty feet, like clouds, are

 cheer
 The captive chieftain, by a tyrant's doom,
 Forced to descend into his destined tomb—
 A dungeon dark! where he must waste
 the year,
 And lie cut off from all his heart holds
 dear; 5

What time his injured country is a stage
 Whereon deliberate Valour and the rage
 Of righteous Vengeance side by side appear,
 Filling from morn to night the heroic

 With deeds of hope and everlasting

 And silent fetters? Yes, if visions bright Shine on his soul, reflected from the days
 When he himself was tried in open light.

AH! where is Palafox¹? Nor tongue nor pen
 Reports of him, his dwelling or his grave!
 Does yet the unheard-of vessel ride the
 wave?
 Or is she swallowed up, remote from ken
 Of pitying human nature? Once again 5

¹ Don Joseph Palafox-y-Melzi (1780-1847), famed for his stubborn defence of Saragossa, on the surrender of that fortress by the general to whom, owing to illness, he had been compelled to resign the command, was taken prisoner (February, 1809) and sent to Vincennes, where he was detained for nearly five years. On the restoration of Ferdinand VII. he was sent back to Madrid, and in 1814 was appointed Captain-General of Arragon; but soon after retired into private life, from which he never again emerged.—Ed.

Methinks that we shall hail thee, Cham-

 With new-born hope. Unbounded is the
 might
 Of martyrdom, and fortitude, and right.

 Like his own lightning, over mountains
 high,
 On rampart, and the banks of all her

IN due observance of an ancient rite,
 The rude Biscayans, when their children lie
 Dead in the sinless time of infancy, Attire the peaceful corse in vestments
 white;
 And, in like sign of cloudless triumph
 bright, 5
 They bind the unoffending creature's brows
 With happy garlands of the pure white
 rose:
 Then do a festal company unite
 In choral song; and, while the uplifted cross
 Of Jesus goes before, the child is borne to Uncovered to his grave: 'tis closed,—her loss
 The Mother then mourns, as she needs must mourn;
 But soon, through Christian faith, is grief
 subdued:
 And joy returns, to brighten fortitude.

 THOSE FUNERALS.

YET, yet, Biscayans! we must meet our
 Foes
 With firmer soul, yet labour to regain Our ancient freedom; else 'twere worse than vain

To gather round the bier these festal shows.

A garland fashioned of the pure white rose 5

Becomes not one whose father is a slave :

Oh, bear the infant covered to his grave !

These venerable mountains now enlose
A people sunk in apathy and fear.

If this endure, farewell, for us, all good !

The awful light of heavenly innocence

Will fail to illuminate the infant's bier ;

And guilt and shame, from which is no defence,

Descend on all that issues from our blood.

XXVI.

THE OAK OF GUERNICA.

The ancient oak of Guernica, says Laborde in his account of Biscay, is a most venerable natural monument. Ferdinand and Isabella, in the year 1476, after hearing Mass in the church of Santa Maria de la Antigua, repaired to this tree, under which they swore to the Biscayans to maintain their fueros (privileges). What other interest belongs to it in the minds of this people will appear from the following

SUPPOSED ADDRESS TO THE SAME. 1810.

OAK of Guernica ! Tree of holier power
Than that which in Dodona did enshrine (So faith too fondly deemed) a voice divine

Heard from the depths of its aerial bower—
How canst thou flourish at this blighting
hour? 5

What hope, what joy can sunshine bring
to thee,

Or the soft breezes from the Atlantic sea,
The dews of morn, or April's tender
shower?

Stroke merciful and welcome would that
be

Which should extend thy branches on the
ground, 10

If never more within their shady round
Those lofty-minded Lawgivers shall meet,
Peasant and lord, in their appointed seat,
Guardians of Biscay's ancient liberty.

XXVII.

INDIGNATION OF A HIGH-MINDED SPANIARD.

1810.

[Composed 1810.—Published 1815.]

WE can endure that He should waste our lands,

Despoil our temples, and by sword and flame

Return us to the dust from which we
came ;

Such food a Tyrant's appetite demands ;
And we can brook the thought that by his hands 5

Spain may be overpowered, and he possess,
For his delight, a solemn wilderness

Where all the brave lie dead. But, when of bands

Which he will break for us he dares to
speak,

Of benefits, and of a future day 10
When our enlightened minds shall bless his sway ;

Then, the strained heart of fortitude proves
weak ;

Our groans, our blushes, our pale cheeks declare

That he has power to inflict what we lack strength to bear.

XXVIII.

[Composed probably 1810.—Published 1815.]

AVAUNT all specious pliancy of mind
In men of low degree, all smooth pretence !

I better like a blunt indifference,
And self-respecting slowness, disinclined
To win me at first sight: and be there
joined 5

Patience and temperance with this high reserve,

Honour that knows the path and will not swerve ;

Affections which, if put to proof, are kind ;
And piety towards God. Such men of old Were England's native growth; and throughout Spain 10

(Thanks to high God) forests of such remain :

Then for that Country let our hopes be bold ;
 For matched with these shall policy prove vain,
 Her arts, her strength, her iron, and her gold.

O'ERWEENING Statesmen have full long relied On fleets and armies, and external wealth :
 But from within proceeds a Nation's health ;
 Which shall not fail, though poor men cleave with pride
 To the paternal floor ; or turn aside, 5
 In the thronged city, from the walks of gain,
 As being all unworthy to detain
 A Soul by contemplation sanctified.
 There are who cannot languish in this strife,
 Spaniards of every rank, by whom the good 10
 Of such high course was felt and understood ;
 Who to their Country's cause have bound a life
 Erewhile, by solemn consecration, given
 To labour, and to prayer, to nature, and to heaven¹.

THE FRENCH AND THE SPANISH GUERRILLAS.

[Composed 1810 or 1811.—Published 1815.]

HUNGER, and sultry heat, and nipping blast
 From bleak hill-top, and length of march by night
 Through heavy swamp, or over snow-clad height—
 These hardships ill-sustained, these dangers past,
 The roving Spanish Bands are reached at last, 5

Charged, and dispersed like foam : but as a flight
 Of scattered quails by signs do reunite,
 So these,—and, heard of once again, are chased
 With combinations of long-practised art
 And newly-kindled hope ; but they are fled— 10
 Gone are they, viewless as the buried dead :
 Where now ?—Their sword is at the Foe-man's heart !
 And thus from year to year his walk they thwart,
 And hang like dreams around his guilty bed.

XXXI.

SPANISH GUERRILLAS.

1811.

[Composed 1811.—Published 1815.]

THEY seek, are sought ; to daily battle led,
 Shrink not, though far outnumbered by their Foes,
 For they have learnt to open and to close
 The ridges of grim war ; and at their head
 Are captains such as erst their country bred 5
 Or fostered, self-supported chiefs,—like those Whom hardy Rome was fearful to oppose ;
 Whose desperate shock the Carthaginian fled.
 In One who lived unknown a shepherd's life
 Redoubted Viriathus breathes again ; 10
 And Mina², nourished in the studious shade,
 With that great Leader vies, who, sick of strife
 And bloodshed, longed in quiet to be laid
 In some green island of the western main.

² Don Esprez y Mina, leader of the Guerillas of Navarre, had been educated for the priesthood. The "great Leader" (l. 12) is the Roman general Sertorius, whose romantic story profoundly stirred Wordsworth's imagination (See Prelude I, ll. 190-202). Viriathus (l. 10), the renowned shepherd-leader of the Lusitanians against the arms of Rome.—Ed.

THE power of Armies is a visible thing, Formal, and circumscribed in time and
space ;

But who the limits of that power shall
trace

Which a brave People into light can bring
Or hide, at will,—for freedom combating By just revenge inflamed? No foot may
chase, 6

No eye can follow, to a fatal place
That power, that spirit, whether on the wing

Like the strong wind, or sleeping like the
wind

Within its awful caves.—From year to year Springs this indigenous produce far and
near ; 11

No craft this subtle element can bind,
Rising like water from the soil, to find
In every nook a lip that it may cheer.

HERE pause : the poet claims at least this
praise,

That virtuous Liberty hath been the scope
Of his pure song, which did not shrink from hope

In the worst moment of these evil days ;
From hope, the paramount duty that Heaven lays, 5

For its own honour, on man's suffering
heart.

Never may from our souls one truth de-
part—

That an accursed thing it is to gaze
On prosperous tyrants with a dazzled eye ; Nor—touched with due abhorrence of their guilt 10

For whose dire ends tears flow, and blood is spilt,

And justice labours in extremity—
Forget thy weakness, upon which is built,
O wretched man, the throne of tyranny !

THE FRENCH ARMY IN RUSSIA.

1812-13.

[Composed Feb., 1816.—Published : vol. of 1816.]

HUMANITY, delighting to behold
A fond reflection of her own decay,
Hath painted Winter like a traveller old, Propped on a staff, and, through the sullen day,

In hooded mantle, limping o'er the plain,
As though his weakness were disturbed by pain : 6

Or, if a juster fancy should allow
An undisputed symbol of command,
The chosen sceptre is a withered bough,
Infirmly grasped within a palsied hand.
These emblems suit the helpless and for-
lorn, 11
But mighty Winter the device shall scorn.

For he it was—dread Winter ! who beset,
Flinging round van and rear his ghastly net,
That host, when from the regions of the Pole 15

They shrunk, insane ambition's barren goal—

That host, as huge and strong as e'er defied Their God, and placed their trust in human pride !

As fathers persecute rebellious sons,
He smote the blossoms of their warrior
youth ; 20

He called on Frost's inexorable tooth Life to consume in Manhood's firmest
hold ;

Nor spared the reverend blood that feebly runs ;

For why—unless for liberty enrolled
And sacred home—ah ! why should hoary
Age be bold ? 25

Fleet the Tartar's reinless steed,
But fleetier far the pinions of the Wind,
Which from Siberian caves the Monarch
freed,

And sent him forth, with squadrons of his
kind,

And bade the Snow their ample backs bestride, 30

And to the battle ride.

No pitying voice commands a halt,
 No courage can repel the dire assault ;
 Distracted, spiritless, benumbed, and
 blind,
 Whole legions sink—and, in one instant,
 find 35
 Burial and death : look for them—and descry,
 When morn returns, beneath the clear
 blue sky,
 A soundless waste, a trackless vacancy !

YE Storms, resound the praises of your
 King !
 And ye mild Seasons—in a sunny clime,
 Midway on some high hill, while father
 Time
 Looks on delighted—meet in festal ring,
 And loud and long of Winter's triumph
 sing ! 5
 Sing ye, with blossoms crowned, and fruits, and flowers,
 Of Winter's breath surcharged with sleety
 showers,
 And the dire flapping of his hoary
 wing !
 Knit the blithe dance upon the soft green
 grass ;
 With feet, hands, eyes, looks, lips, report your gain ; 10
 Whisper it to the billows of the main,
 And to the aerial zephyrs as they pass,
 That old decrepit Winter—He hath slain
 That Host, which rendered all your bounties vain !

 Resting upon his arms each warrior stood,
 Checked in the very act and deed of blood,
 With breath suspended, like a listening scout.
 O Silence ! thou wert mother of a shout 5
 That through the texture of yon azure
 dome
 Cleaves its glad way, a cry of harvest
 home
 Uttered to Heaven in ecstasy devout !
 The barrier Rhine hath flashed, through battle-smoke,
 On men who gaze heart-smitten by the
 view, 10
 As if all Germany had felt the shock !
 —Fly, wretched Gauls ! ere they the Insensible. He sits deprived of sight,

And lamentably wrapped in twofold night, Whom no weak hopes deceived; whose mind ensued, 6
Through perilous war, with regal fortitude,
Peace that should claim respect from law-

Dread King of Kings, vouchsafe a ray

To his forlorn condition! let thy grace to Upon his inner soul in mercy shine;
Permit his heart to kindle, and to embrace

WHEN the soft hand of sleep had closed the latch
On the tired household of corporeal sense,
And Fancy, keeping unreluctant watch,
Was free her choicest favours to dispense;

¹ i.e. the final overthrow of Napoleon at Leipzig, Oct. 16-19, 1813.—Ed.

I saw, in wondrous perspective displayed,
A landscape more august than happiest
skill 6
Of pencil ever clothed with light and
shade;
An intermingled pomp of vale and hill,
City, and naval stream, suburban grove,
And stately forest where the wild deer
rove; 10
Nor wanted lurking hamlet, dusky towns,
And scattered rural farms of aspect
bright;
And, here and there, between the pastoral downs,
The azure sea upswelled upon the sight.
Fair prospect, such as Britain only shows! 15
But not a living creature could be seen Through its wide circuit, that, in deep
repose,
And, even to sadness, lonely and serene, Lay hushed; till—through a portal in
the sky
Brighter than brightest loop-hole, in a storm, 20
Opening before the sun's triumphant
eye—
Issued, to sudden view, a glorious Form!
Earthward it glided with a swift descent:
Saint George himself this Visitant must
be;
And, ere a thought could ask on what
intent 25
He sought the regions of humanity,
A thrilling voice was heard, that vivified
City and field and flood;—aloud it cried—“Though from my celestial home,
Like a Champion, armed I come; 30
On my helm the dragon crest,
And the red cross on my breast;
I, the Guardian of this Land,
Speak not now of toilsome duty;
Well obeyed was that command— 35
Whence bright days of festive beauty; Haste, Virgins, haste!—the flowers which summer gave
Have perished in the field;
But the green thickets plenteously shall
yield
Fit garlands for the brave, 40

That will be welcome, if by you entwined ;
 Haste, Virgins, haste ; and you, ye Matrons grave,
 Go forth with rival youthfulness of mind,
 And gather what ye find
 Of hardy laurel and wild holly boughs—
 To deck your stern Defenders' modest brows ! 46
 Such simple gifts prepare,
 Though they have gained a worthier meed,
 And in due time shall share
 Those palms and amaranthine wreaths Unto their martyred Countrymen decreed, 51
 In realms where everlasting freshness breathes !”

II.

And lo ! with crimson banners proudly streaming,
 And upright weapons innocently gleaming,
 Along the surface of a spacious plain 55
 Advance in order the redoubted Bands,
 And there receive green chaplets from the hands
 Of a fair female train—
 Maids and Matrons, dight
 In robes of dazzling white ; 60 While from the crowd bursts forth a rapturous noise
 By the cloud-capt hills retorted ;
 And a throng of rosy boys
 In loose fashion tell their joys ;
 And grey-haired sires, on staffs supported, 65
 Look round, and by their smiling seem
 to say, “Thus strives a grateful Country to display
 The mighty debt which nothing can repay !”

III.

Anon before my sight a palace rose 69
 Built of all precious substances,—so pure
 And exquisite, that sleep alone bestows
 Ability like splendour to endure :
 Entered, with streaming thousands,
 through the gate,
 I saw the banquet spread beneath a Dome
 of state,

A lofty Dome, that dared to emulate 75
 The heaven of sable night
 With starry lustre ; yet had power to throw
 Solemn effulgence, clear as solar light,
 Upon a princely company below,
 While the vault rang with choral harmony, 80
 Like some Nymph-haunted grot beneath the roaring sea.
 —No sooner ceased that peal, than on the verge
 Of exultation hung a dirge
 Breathed from a soft and lonely instru-
 ment,
 That kindled recollections 85
 Of agonised affections ;
 And, though some tears the strain attended,
 The mournful passion ended
 In peace of spirit, and sublime content !

IV.

But garlands wither ; festal shows de-
 part, 90
 Like dreams themselves ; and sweetest
 sound—
 (Albeit of effect profound)
 It was—and it is gone !
 Victorious England ! bid the silent Art Reflect, in glowing hues that shall not
 fade, 95
 Those high achievements ; even as she arrayed
 With second life the deed of Marathon
 Upon Athenian walls ;
 So may she labour for thy civic halls :
 And be the guardian spaces 100
 Of consecrated places,
 As nobly graced by Sculpture's patient
 toil ;
 And let imperishable Columns rise Fixed in the depths of this courageous soil ;
 Expressive signals of a glorious strife, 105
 And competent to shed a spark divine
 Into the torpid breast of daily life ;—
 Records on which, for pleasure of all
 eyes,
 The morning sun may shine
 With gratulation thoroughly benign ! 110

v.

And ye, Pierian Sisters, sprung from Jove
 And sage Mnemosyne,—full long debarred
 From your first mansions, exiled all too
 long
 From many a hallowed stream and grove, Dear native regions where ye went to rove, 115
 Chanting for patriot heroes the reward
 Of never-dying song!
 Now (for, though Truth descending from
 above
 The Olympian summit hath destroyed for
 aye 119
 Your kindred Deities, Ye live and move,
 Spared for obeisance from perpetual love,
 For privilege redeemed of godlike sway)
 Now, on the margin of some spotless fountain,
 Or top serene of unmolested mountain,
 Strike audibly the noblest of your lyres,
 And for a moment meet the soul's desires! 126
 That I, or some more favoured Bard, may
 hear What ye, celestial Maids! have often sung
 Of Britain's acts,—may catch it with rapt
 ear,
 And give the treasure to our British
 tongue! 130
 So shall the characters of that proud page Support their mighty theme from age
 to age;
 And, in the desert places of the earth,
 When they to future empires have given
 birth,
 So shall the people gather and believe 135
 The bold report, transferred to every
 clime;
 And the whole world, not envious but admiring,
 And to the like aspiring,
 Own—that the progeny of this fair Isle
 Had power as lofty actions to achieve 140
 As were performed in man's heroic prime;
 Nor wanted, when their fortitude had held
 Its even tenor, and the foe was quelled,

A corresponding virtue to beguile
 The hostile purpose of wide-wasting
 Time— 145
 That not in vain they laboured to secure,
 For their great deeds, perpetual memory,
 And fame as largely spread as land and
 sea,
 By Works of spirit high and passion pure!

FEELINGS OF A FRENCH ROYALIST, ON THE DISINTERMENT OF THE REMAINS OF THE DUKE D'ENGHIEN.

[Composed 1816.—Published: vol. of 1816.]

DEAR Reliques! from a pit of vilest
 mould
 Uprisen—to lodge among ancestral kings;
 And to inflict shame's salutary stings
 On the remorseless hearts of men grown
 old
 In a blind worship; men perversely bold
 Even to this hour,—yet, some shall now forsake 6
 Their monstrous Idol if the dead e'er
 spake,
 To warn the living; if truth were ever
 told
 By aught redeemed out of the hollow
 grave:
 O murdered Prince! meek, loyal, pious,
 brave! 10
 The power of retribution once was given:
 But 'tis a rueful thought that willow bands
 So often tie the thunder-wielding hands
 Of Justice sent to earth from highest
 Heaven!

OCCASIONED BY THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO.

(The last six lines intended for an Inscription.)

FEBRUARY, 1816.

[Composed 1816.—Published Feb. 4, 1816 (The Champion); vol. of 1816.]

INTREPID sons of Albion! not by you
 Is life despised; ah no, the spacious earth Ne'er saw a race who held, by right of
 birth,

So many objects to which love is due:
Ye slight not life—to God and Nature
true;

But death, becoming death, is dearer far,
When duty bids you bleed in open war:
Hence hath your prowess quelled that impious crew.

Heroes!—for instant sacrifice prepared;
Yet filled with ardour and on triumph
bent

'Mid direst shocks of mortal accident—
To you who fell, and you whom slaughter spared

To guard the fallen, and consummate the event,

Your Country rears this sacred Monument!

SIEGE OF VIENNA RAISED BY JOHN SOBIESKI.

FEBRUARY, 1816.

[Composed Jan., 1816.—Published Feb. 4, 1816
(The Champion); vol. of 1816.]

OH, for a kindling touch from that pure flame

Which ministered, erewhile, to a sacrifice
Of gratitude, beneath Italian skies,

In words like these: "Up, Voice of song!
proclaim

Thy saintly rapture with celestial aim: 5
For lo! the Imperial City stands released

From bondage threatened by the embattled East,

And Christendom respire; from guilt
and shame

Redeemed, from miserable fear set free
By one day's feat, one mighty victory. 10

—Chant the Deliverer's praise in every
tongue!

The Cross shall spread, the Crescent hath waxed dim;

He conquering, as in joyful Heaven is sung,

HE CONQUERING THROUGH GOD, AND GOD
BY HIM¹."

XLIII.

OCCASIONED BY THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO.
FEBRUARY, 1816.

[Composed February, 1816.—Published: vol. of 1816.]

THE Bard—whose soul is meek as dawning day,

Yet trained to judgments righteously
severe,

Fervid, yet conversant with holy fear,
As recognising one Almighty sway:

He—whose experienced eye can pierce the
array

Of past events; to whom, in vision clear,
The aspiring heads of future things

appear,
Like mountain-tops whose mists have rolled away—

Assoiled from all encumbrance of our time²,

He only, if such breathe, in strains devout

Shall comprehend this victory sublime;
Shall worthily rehearse the hideous rout,

The triumph hail, which from their peaceful clime

Angels might welcome with a choral shout!

[Composed ? (perhaps 1816).—Published 1827.]

EMPERORS and Kings, how oft have temples rung

With impious thanksgiving, the Almighty's scorn!

How oft above their altars have been
hung

Trophies that led the good and wise to mourn

Triumphant wrong, battle of battle born,
And sorrow that to fruitless sorrow clung!

Now, from Heaven-sanctioned victory,
Peace is sprung;

In this firm hour Salvation lifts her horn.
Glory to arms! But, conscious that the nerve

² "From all this world's encumbrance did himself assoil."—SPENSER.

Of popular reason, long mistrusted, freed
Your thrones, ye Powers, from duty fear to swerve! 11

Be just, be grateful; nor, the oppressor's
creed

Reviving, heavier chastisement deserve
Than ever forced unpitied hearts to bleed.

ODE.

[Composed 1816.—Published: volume of 1816.]

I.

IMAGINATION—ne'er before content,
But aye ascending, restless in her pride
From all that martial feats could yield
To her desires, or to her hopes present—Stooped to the Victory on that Belgic
field 5

Achieved, this closing deed magnificent,
And with the embrace was satisfied.

—Fly, ministers of Fame,

With every help that ye from earth and heaven may claim!

Bear through the world these tidings of
delight! 10

—Hours, Days, and Months, have borne them in the sight

Of mortals, hurrying like a sudden shower
That landward stretches from the sea,
The morning's splendours to devour;

But this swift travel scorns the company
Of irksome change, or threats from sad-dening power. 16

—The shock is given—the Adversaries bleed—

Lo, Justice triumphs! Earth is freed!

Joyful annunciation!—it went forth—

It pierced the caverns of the sluggish
North— 20

It found no barrier on the ridge

Of Andes—frozen gulfs became its bridge—

The vast Pacific gladdens with the freight—

Upon the Lakes of Asia 'tis bestowed—

The Arabian desert shapes a willing
road 25

Across her burning breast,

For this refreshing incense from the West!—

—Where snakes and lions breed,

Where towns and cities thick as stars
appear,

Wherever fruits are gathered, and where'er 30

The upturned soil receives the hopeful
seed—

While the Sun rules, and cross the shades of night—

The unwearied arrow hath pursued its flight!

The eyes of good men thankfully give
heed,

And in its sparkling progress read 35
Of virtue crowned with glory's deathless meed:

Tyrants exult to hear of kingdoms won,
And slaves are pleased to learn that mighty feats are done;

Even the proud Realm, from whose distracted borders

This messenger of good was launched in air, 40

France, humbled France, amid her wild disorders,

Feels, and hereafter shall the truth
declare,

That she too lacks not reason to rejoice,
And utter England's name with sadly-plausive voice.

II.

O genuine glory, pure renown! 45
And well might it beseem that mighty
Town

Into whose bosom earth's best treasures
flow,

To whom all persecuted men retreat;

If a new Temple lift her votive brow

High on the shore of silver Thames—to greet 50

The peaceful guest advancing from afar.

Bright be the Fabric, as a star

Fresh risen, and beautiful within!—there
meet

Dependence infinite, proportion just;

A Pile that Grace approves, and Time can trust 55

With his most sacred wealth, heroic dust.

III.

But if the valiant of this land
 In reverential modesty demand,
 That all observance, due to them, be paid
 Where their serene progenitors are laid ; Kings, warriors, high-souled poets, saint-like sages, 61
 England's illustrious sons of long, long ages ;
 Be it not unordained that solemn rites,
 Within the circuit of those Gothic walls,
 Shall be performed at pregnant intervals ;
 Commemoration holy that unites 66
 The living generations with the dead ;
 By the deep soul-moving sense
 Of religious eloquence,—
 By visual pomp, and by the tie 70
 Of sweet and threatening harmony ;
 Soft notes, awful as the omen
 Of destructive tempests coming,
 And escaping from that sadness
 Into elevated gladness ; 75
 While the white-robed choir attendant,
 Under mouldering banners pendant,
 Provoke all potent symphonies to raise Songs of victory and praise,
 For them who bravely stood unhurt, or bled 80
 With medicable wounds, or found their graves
 Upon the battle field, or under ocean's
 waves ;
 Or were conducted home in single state,
 And long procession—there to lie,
 Where their sons' sons, and all posterity, Unheard by them, their deeds shall celebrate ! 86

IV.

Nor will the God of peace and love
 Such martial service disapprove.
 He guides the Pestilence—the cloud
 Of locusts travels on his breath ; 90
 The region that in hope was ploughed
 His drought consumes, his mildew taints with death ;
 He springs the hushed Volcano's mine,
 He puts the Earthquake on her still design,

Darkens the sun, hath bade the forest sink,
 And, drinking towns and cities, still can
 drink 96
 Cities and towns—'tis Thou—the work is
 Thine !— The fierce Tornado sleeps within Thy courts—
 He hears the word—he flies—
 And navies perish in their ports ; 100
 For Thou art angry with Thine enemies !
 For these, and mourning for our errors,
 And sins, that point their terrors,
 We bow our heads before Thee, and we laud
 And magnify Thy name, Almighty God !
 But Man is Thy most awful instru-
 ment, 106
 In working out a pure intent¹ ;
 Thou cloth'st the wicked in their dazzling
 mail,
 And for Thy righteous purpose they prevail ;
 Thine arm from peril guards the coasts 110
 Of them who in Thy laws delight :
 Thy presence turns the scale of doubtful
 fight,
 Tremendous God of battles, Lord of Hosts !

V.

Forbear :—to Thee—Father and Judge of all, with fervent
 tongue, 115
 But in a gentler strain
 Of contemplation, by no sense of wrong (Too quick and keen) incited to disdain
 Of pity pleading from the heart in vain—
 To THEE—To THEE, 120
 Just God of christianised Humanity, Shall praises be poured forth, and thanks
 ascend,
 That Thou hast brought our warfare to an end,

¹ Lines 106, 107 were, in 1845, substituted for the four following lines at which many had stumbled :—

“But Thy most dreaded instrument,
 In working out a pure intent,
 Is Man—arrayed for mutual slaughter,
 —Yea, Carnage is thy daughter!”—ED.

And that we need no second victory !
 Blest, above measure blest, 125
 If on Thy love our Land her hopes shall
 rest,
 And all the Nations labour to fulfil Thy law, and live henceforth in peace, in pure good will.

XLVI.

ODE.

THE MORNING OF THE DAY APPOINTED FOR A GENERAL THANKSGIVING. JANUARY 18, 1816.

Composed January, 1816.—Published: vol. of 1816.]

I.

HAIL, orient Conqueror of gloomy Night !
 Thou that canst shed the bliss of gratitude
 On hearts howe'er insensible or rude ;
 Whether thy punctual visitations smite
 The haughty towers where monarchs
 dwell ; 5
 Or thou, impartial Sun, with presence
 bright.
 Cheer'st the low threshold of the peasant's cell !
 Not unrejoiced I see thee climb the sky
 In naked splendour, clear from mist or haze,
 Or cloud approaching to divert the rays,
 Which even in deepest winter testify 11
 Thy power and majesty,
 Dazzling the vision that presumes to gaze.
 —Well does thine aspect usher in this
 Day ;
 As aptly suits therewith that modest pace
 Submitted to the chains 16
 That bind thee to the path which God ordains
 That thou shalt trace, Till, with the heavens and earth, thou pass away !
 Nor less, the stillness of these frosty
 plains, 20
 Their utter stillness, and the silent grace
 Of yon ethereal summits white with snow, (Whose tranquil pomp and spotless purity Report of storms gone by
 To us who tread below), 25
 Do with the service of this Day accord.
 —Divinest Object which the uplifted eye

Of mortal man is suffered to behold ;
 Thou, who upon those snow-clad Heights hast poured
 Meek lustre, nor forget'st the humble Vale ;
 Thou who dost warm Earth's universal
 mould, 31
 And for thy bounty wert not unadored
 By pious men of old ;
 Once more, heart-cheering Sun, I bid thee
 hail !
 Bright be thy course to-day, let not this promise fail ! 35

II.

'Mid the deep quiet of this morning
 hour,
 All nature seems to hear me while I speak,
 By feelings urged that do not vainly seek Apt language, ready as the tuneful notes That stream in blithe succession from the throats 40
 Of birds, in leafy bower,
 Warbling a farewell to a vernal shower.
 —There is a radiant though a short-lived
 flame,
 That burns for Poets in the dawning east ;
 And oft my soul hath kindled at the same,
 When the captivity of sleep had ceased ; 46
 But He who fixed immoveably the frame
 Of the round world, and built, by laws as
 strong,
 A solid refuge for distress—
 The towers of righteousness ; 50
 He knows that from a holier altar came The quickening spark of this day's sacrifice ;
 Knows that the source is nobler whence doth rise
 The current of this matin song ;
 That deeper far it lies 55
 Than aught dependent on the fickle skies.

III.

Have we not conquered?—by the vengeful sword ?
 Ah no, by dint of Magnanimity ;
 That curbed the baser passions, and left
 free
 A loyal band to follow their liege Lord Clear-sighted Honour, and his staid Com-
 peers, 61
 Along a track of most unnatural years ;

In execution of heroic deeds
 Whose memory, spotless as the crystal beads
 Of morning dew upon the untrodden
 meads, 65
 Shall live enrolled above the starry spheres.
 He, who in concert with an earthly string
 Of Britain's acts would sing,
 He with enraptured voice will tell
 Of One whose spirit no reverse could quell; 70
 Of One that 'mid the failing never failed—
 Who paints how Britain struggled and prevailed
 Shall represent her labouring with an eye
 Of circumspect humanity; Shall show her clothed with strength and
 skill 75
 All martial duties to fulfil;
 Firm as a rock in stationary fight;
 In motion rapid as the lightning's gleam;
 Pierce as a flood-gate bursting at mid-
 night
 To rouse the wicked from their giddy
 dream— 80
 Woe, woe to all that face her in the
 field!
 Appalled she may not be, and cannot yield.

IV.

And thus is missed the sole true glory
 That can belong to human story!
 At which they only shall arrive 85
 Who through the abyss of weakness dive.
 The very humblest are too proud of heart;
 And one brief day is rightly set apart
 For Him who lifteth up and layeth low;
 For that Almighty God to whom we owe, Say not that we have vanquished—but that we survive. 91

V.

How dreadful the dominion of the impure!
 Why should the Song be tardy to proclaim That less than power unbounded could not tame

That soul of Evil—which, from Hell let loose, 95
 Had filled the astonished world with such abuse
 As boundless patience only could endure?
 —Wide-wasted regions—cities wrapt in flame—
 Who sees, may lift a streaming eye
 To Heaven;—who never saw, may heave
 a sigh; 100
 But the foundation of our nature shakes,
 And with an infinite pain the spirit aches,
 When desolated countries, towns on fire,
 Are but the avowed attire
 Of warfare waged with desperate mind 105
 Against the life of virtue in mankind;
 Assaulting without ruth
 The citadels of truth;
 While the fair gardens of civility,
 By ignorance defaced, 110
 By violence laid waste,
 Perish without reprieve for flower or tree!

VI.

A crouching purpose—a distracted will—Opposed to hopes that battened upon
 scorn,
 And to desires whose ever-waxing horn
 Not all the light of earthly power could
 fill; 116
 Opposed to dark, deep plots of patient
 skill,
 And to celerities of lawless force;
 Which, spurning God, had flung away
 remorse—
 What could they gain but shadows of redress? 120
 —So bad proceeded propagating worse;
 And discipline was passion's dire excess.
 Widens the fatal web, its lines extend,
 And deadlier poisons in the chalice blend.
 When will your trials teach you to be wise? 125
 —O prostrate Lands, consult your agonies!

VII.

No more—the guilt is banished,
 And, with the guilt, the shame is fled;
 And, with the guilt and shame, the Woe hath vanished,

Shaking the dust and ashes from her
 head! 130
 —No more—these lingerings of distress
 Sully the limpid stream of thankfulness.
 What robe can Gratitude employ
 So seemly as the radiant vest of Joy?
 What steps so suitable as those that move
 In prompt obedience to spontaneous measures 136
 Of glory, and felicity, and love, Surrendering the whole heart to sacred pleasures?

VIII.

O Britain! dearer far than life is dear,
 If one there be 140
 Of all thy progeny
 Who can forget thy prowess, never more
 Be that ungrateful Son allowed to hear Thy green leaves rustle or thy torrents roar.
 As springs the lion from his den, 145
 As from a forest-brake
 Upstarts a glistening snake,
 The bold Arch-despot re-appeared;—
 again
 Wide Europe heaves, impatient to be cast,
 With all her armed Powers, 150
 On that offensive soil, like waves upon a thousand shores.
 The trumpet blew a universal blast!
 But Thou art foremost in the field:—
 there stand:
 Receive the triumph destined to thy hand!
 All States have glorified themselves;—
 their claims 155
 Are weighed by Providence, in balance
 even;
 And now, in preference to the mightiest
 names,
 To Thee the exterminating sword is given.
 Dread mark of approbation, justly gained!
 Exalted office, worthily sustained! 160

IX.

Preserve, O Lord! within our hearts
 The memory of Thy favour,
 That else insensibly departs,
 And loses its sweet savour!

Lodge it within us!—as the power of
 light 165
 Lives inexhaustibly in precious gems,
 Fixed on the front of Eastern diadems,
 So shine our thankfulness for ever bright!
 What offering, what transcendent monument
 Shall our sincerity to Thee present? 170 —Not work of hands; but trophies that may reach
 To highest Heaven—the labour of the
 Soul;
 That builds, as thy unerring precepts
 teach,
 Upon the internal conquests made by each,
 Her hope of lasting glory for the whole.
 Yet will not heaven disown nor earth gainsay 176
 The outward service of this day;
 Whether the worshippers entreat
 Forgiveness from God's mercy-seat;
 Or thanks and praises to His throne
 ascend 180
 That He has brought our warfare to an
 end,
 And that we need no second victory!—
 Ha! what a ghastly sight for man to see;
 And to the heavenly saints in peace who
 dwell,
 For a brief moment, terrible; 185
 But, to Thy sovereign penetration, fair,
 Before whom all things are, that were,
 All judgments that have been, or e'er shall be;
 Links in the chain of Thy tranquillity!
 Along the bosom of this favoured Nation, Breathe Thou, this day, a vital undula-
 tion! 191
 Let all who do this land inherit
 Be conscious of Thy moving spirit!
 Oh, 'tis a goodly Ordinance,—the sight,
 Though sprung from bleeding war, is one of pure delight; 195 Bless Thou the hour, or ere the hour
 arrive,
 When a whole people shall kneel down in
 prayer,
 And, at one moment, in one rapture, strive
 With lip and heart to tell their gratitude
 For Thy protecting care, 200

Their solemn joy—praising the Eternal
Lord

For tyranny subdued,
And for the sway of equity renewed,
For liberty confirmed, and peace restored !

X.

But hark—the summons!—down the placid lake 205

Floats the soft cadence of the church-
tower bells ;

Bright shines the Sun, as if his beams would wake

The tender insects sleeping in their cells ;
Bright shines the Sun—and not a breeze to shake

The drops that tip the melting icicles. 210
O, enter now his Temple gate !

Inviting words—perchance already flung (As the crowd press devoutly down the aisle

Of some old Minster's venerable pile)
From voices into zealous passion stung,
While the tubed engine feels the inspiring
blast, 216

And has begun—its clouds of sound to cast

Forth towards empyreal Heaven,

As if the fretted roof were riven.

Us humbler ceremonies now await ; 220

But in the bosom, with devout respect
The banner of our joy we will erect,
And strength of love our souls shall elevate :

For to a few collected in His name, 224
Their heavenly Father will incline an ear Graciously to service hallowed by its aim ;—
Awake ! the majesty of God revere !

Go—and with foreheads meekly bowed Present your prayers—go—and rejoice
aloud—

The Holy One will hear ! 230
And what, 'mid silence deep, with faith sincere,

Ye, in your low and undisturbed estate,
Shall simply feel and purely meditate—
Of warnings—from the unprecedented
might,

Which, in our time, the impious have disclosed ; 235

And of more arduous duties thence imposed Upon the future advocates of right ;

Of mysteries revealed,
And judgments unrepealed,
Of earthly revolution, 240
And final retribution,—

To his omniscience will appear
An offering not unworthy to find place,
On this high DAY of THANKS, before the Throne of Grace !

Of future war. Advance not—spare to hide, 10
O gentle Power of darkness! these mild
hues;
Obscure not yet these silent avenues
Of stateliest architecture, where the Forms
Of nun-like females, with soft motion, glide!

III.

BRUGÈS.

THE Spirit of Antiquity—enshrined
In sumptuous buildings, vocal in sweet song,
In picture, speaking with heroic tongue,
And with devout solemnities entwined—Mounts to the seat of grace within the
mind: 5
Hence Forms that glide with swan-like ease along,
Hence motions, even amid the vulgar
throng,
To an harmonious decency confined:
As if the streets were consecrated ground,
The city one vast temple, dedicate 10
To mutual respect in thought and deed;
To leisure, to forbearances sedate;
To social cares from jarring passions freed;
A deeper peace than that in deserts found!

IV.

INCIDENT AT BRUGÈS.

[Composed after July, 1828.—Published: vol. of 1835.]

IN Brugès town is many a street
Whence busy life hath fled;
Where, without hurry, noiseless feet
The grass-grown pavement tread.
There heard we, halting in the shade 5
Flung from a Convent-tower,
A harp that tuneful prelude made
To a voice of thrilling power.
The measure, simple truth to tell,
Was fit for some gay throng; 10
Though from the same grim turret fell
The shadow and the song.
When silent were both voice and chords,
The strain seemed doubly dear,
Yet sad as sweet,—for English words 15
Had fallen upon the ear.

It was a breezy hour of eve;
And pinnacle and spire
Quivered and seemed almost to heave,
Clothed with innocuous fire; 20
But, where we stood, the setting sun
Showed little of his state;
And, if the glory reached the Nun,
'Twas through an iron grate.

Not always is the heart unwise, 25
Nor pity idly born,
If even a passing Stranger sighs
For them who do not mourn.
Sad is thy doom, self-solaced dove,
Captive, who'er thou be! 30
Oh! what is beauty, what is love,
And opening life to thee?

Such feeling pressed upon my soul,
A feeling sanctified
By one soft trickling tear that stole 35
From the Maiden at my side;
Less tribute could she pay than this,
Borne gaily o'er the sea,
Fresh from the beauty and the bliss
Of English liberty? 40

V.

AFTER VISITING THE FIELD OF WATERLOO.

A WINGÈD Goddess—clothed in vesture
wrought
Of rainbow colours; One whose port was
bold,
Whose overburthened hand could scarcely
hold
The glittering crowns and garlands which it brought—
Hovered in air above the far-famed Spot.
She vanished; leaving prospect blank and
cold 6
Of wind-swept corn that wide around us
rolled
In dreary billows, wood, and meagre cot,
And monuments that soon must disap-
pear:
Yet a dread local recompense we found;
While glory seemed betrayed, while patriot-zeal 11
Sank in our hearts, we felt as men should
feel

With such vast hoards of hidden carnage
near,
And horror breathing from the silent
ground !

VI.

BETWEEN NAMUR AND LIEGE.

WHAT lovelier home could gentle Fancy choose?
Is this the stream, whose cities, heights,
and plains,
War's favourite playground, are with crimson stains
Familiar, as the Morn with pearly dews?
The Morn, that now, along the silver MEUSE, 5
Spreading her peaceful ensigns, calls the swains
To tend their silent boats and ringing wains,
Or strip the bough whose mellow fruit bestrews
The ripening corn beneath it. As mine
eyes
Turn from the fortified and threatening
hill, 10
How sweet the prospect of yon watery
glade,
With its grey rocks clustering in pensive
shade—
That, shaped like old monastic turrets, rise
From the smooth meadow-ground, serene and still !

VII.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE.

WAS it to disenchant, and to undo,
That we approached the Seat of Charle-maine?
To sweep from many an old romantic
strain
That faith which no devotion may renew !
Why does this puny Church present to
view 5
Her feeble columns? and that scanty chair !
This sword that one of our weak times might wear !
Objects of false pretence, or meanly true !

If from a traveller's fortune I might claim
A palpable memorial of that day, 10
Then would I seek the Pyrenean Breach That ROLAND clove with huge two-handed
sway,
And to the enormous labour left his name,
Where unremitting frosts the rocky crescent bleach.

VIII.

IN THE CATHEDRAL AT COLOGNE.

O FOR the help of Angels to complete
This Temple—Angels governed by a plan
Thus far pursued (how gloriously !) by
Man,
Studious that He might not disdain the seat
Who dwells in heaven ! But that aspiring heat 5
Hath failed ; and now, ye Powers ! whose gorgeous wings
And splendid aspect yon emblazonings
But faintly picture, 'twere an office meet
For you, on these unfinished shafts to try
The midnight virtues of your harmony :— This vast design might tempt you to repeat 11
Strains that call forth upon empyreal
ground
Immortal Fabrics, rising to the sound
Of penetrating harps and voices sweet !

IX.

IN A CARRIAGE, UPON THE BANKS OF THE RHINE.

AMID this dance of objects sadness steals O'er the defrauded heart—while sweeping by,
As in a fit of Thespian jollity,
Beneath her vine-leaf crown the green
Earth reels :
Backward, in rapid evanescence, wheels 5
The venerable pageantry of Time,
Each beetling rampart, and each tower
sublime,
And what the Dell unwillingly reveals Of lurking cloistral arch, through trees espied
Near the bright River's edge. Yet why repine ? 10
To muse, to creep, to halt at will, to gaze—

Such sweet wayfaring—of life's spring
the pride,
Her summer's faithful joy—that still is
mine,
And in fit measure cheers autumnal days.

X.

HYMN,

FOR THE BOATMEN, AS THEY APPROACH
THE RAPIDS UNDER THE CASTLE OF HEIDELBERG.

JESU! bless our slender Boat,
By the current swept along;
Loud its threatenings—let them not Drown the music of a song
Breathed thy mercy to implore,
Where these troubled waters roar!

Saviour, for our warning, seen Bleeding on that precious Rood;
If, while through the meadows green
Gently wound the peaceful flood,
We forgot Thee, do not Thou Disregard Thy Suppliants now!

Hither, like yon ancient Tower
Watching o'er the River's bed,
Fling the shadow of thy power,
Else we sleep among the dead;
Thou who trod'st the billowy sea,
Shield us in our jeopardy!

Guide our Bark among the waves;
Through the rocks our passage smooth;
Where the whirlpool frets and raves
Let Thy love its anger soothe:
All our hope is placed in Thee;
*Miserere Domine*¹!

XI.

THE SOURCE OF THE DANUBE.

NOT, like his great Compeers, indignantly Doth DANUBE spring to life²! The wandering Stream
(Who loves the Cross, yet to the Crescent's gleam Unfolds a willing breast) with infant glee Slips from his prison walls: and Fancy,
free

To follow in his track of silver light, Mounts on rapt wing, and with a moment's flight
Hath reached the encincture of that gloomy sea
Whose waves the Orphean lyre forbad to
meet
In conflict; whose rough winds forgot their jars
To wait the heroic progeny of Greece;
When the first Ship sailed for the Golden Fleece—
ARGO—exalted for that daring feat
To fix in heaven her shape distinct with stars.

XII.

ON APPROACHING THE STAUB-BACH, LAUTERBRUNNEN.

UTTERED by whom, or how inspired—designed For what strange service, does this concert reach
Our ears, and near the dwellings of man-
kind!
'Mid fields familiarised to human speech?—
No Mermaids warble—to allay the wind Driving some vessel toward a dangerous beach—
More thrilling melodies; Witch answering Witch,
To chant a love-spell, never intertwined Notes shrill and wild with art more musical:
Alas! that from the lips of abject Want
Or Idleness in tatters mendicant
The strain should flow—free Fancy to enthrall,
And with regret and useless pity haunt
This bold, this bright, this sky-born, WATERFALL³!

XIII.

THE FALL OF THE AAR—HANDEC.

FROM the fierce aspect of this River, throwing
His giant body o'er the steep rock's brink,
Back in astonishment and fear we shrink:

But, gradually a calmer look bestowing, Flowers we espy beside the torrent growing; 5
 Flowers that peep forth from many a cleft and chink,
 And, from the whirlwind of his anger,
 drink
 Hues ever fresh, in rocky fortress blowing:
 They suck—from breath that, threatening to destroy, 9
 Is more benignant than the dewy eve—
 Beauty, and life, and motions as of joy:
 Nor doubt but HE to whom yon Pine-trees nod
 Their heads in sign of worship, Nature's
 God,
 These humbler adorations will receive.

MEMORIAL

“*DEM ANDENKEN
 MEINES FREUNDES
 ALOYS REDING MDCCCXVIII.*”

Aloys Reding, it will be remembered, was Captain-General of the Swiss forces, which, with a courage and perseverance worthy of the cause, opposed the flagitious and too successful attempt of Buonaparte to subjugate their country.

AROUND a wild and woody hill
 A gravelled pathway treading,
 We reached a votive Stone that bears
 The name of Aloys Reding.
 Well judged the Friend who placed it
 there 5
 For silence and protection;
 And haply with a finer care
 Of dutiful affection.
 The Sun regards it from the West;
 And, while in summer glory 10
 He sets, his sinking yields a type
 Of that pathetic story:
 And oft he tempts the patriot Swiss
 Amid the grove to linger;
 Till all is dim, save this bright Stone 15
 Touched by his golden finger.

XV.

COMPOSED IN ONE OF THE CATHOLIC CANTONS.

DOOMED as we are our native dust
 To wet with many a bitter shower,
 It ill befits us to disdain
 The altar, to deride the fane,
 Where simple Sufferers bend, in trust 5
 To win a happier hour.
 I love, where spreads the village lawn,
 Upon some knee-worn cell to gaze:
 Hail to the firm unmoving cross,
 Aloft, where pines their branches toss! 10
 And to the chapel far withdrawn,
 That lurks by lonely ways!
 Where'er we roam—along the brink
 Of Rhine—or by the sweeping Po,
 Through Alpine vale, or champaign wide,
 Whate'er we look on, at our side 16
 Be Charity!—to bid us think,
 And feel, if we would know.

XVI.

AFTER-THOUGHT².

[Composed 1832.—Published 1832.]

OH Life! without thy chequered scene
 Of right and wrong, of weal and woe,
 Success and failure, could a ground
 For magnanimity be found;
 For faith, 'mid ruined hopes, serene? 5
 Or whence could virtue flow?

[Composed 1837.—Published 1837.]

Pain entered through a ghastly breach—
 Nor while sin lasts must effort cease;
 Heaven upon earth's an empty boast;
 But, for the bowers of Eden lost, 10
 Mercy has placed within our reach
 A portion of God's peace.

¹ The three stanzas comprised under this title originally (1822) formed part of the poem No. xxiv. of this series, being the 5th, 4th, and 9th stanzas of that piece. In 1827 they were detached and arranged as now to form a separate poem. In 1832 a stanza (now stanza i. of After-thought, No. xvi.) was added to them. This again was taken from them in 1837, and formed, along with a second added stanza, into the independent poem entitled After-thought.—Ed.

SCENE ON THE LAKE OF BRIENTZ.

“WHAT know we of the Blest above
 But that they sing and that they love?”
 Yet, if they ever did inspire
 A mortal hymn, or shaped the choir,
 Now, where those harvest-Damsels float
 Homeward in their rugged Boat, 6 (While all the ruffling winds are fled—Each slumbering on some mountain’s
 head),
 Now, surely, hath that gracious aid
 Been felt, that influence is displayed. 10
 Pupils of Heaven, in order stand
 The rustic Maidens, every hand
 Upon a Sister’s shoulder laid,—
 To chant, as glides the boat along,
 A simple, but a touching, song; 15
 To chant, as Angels do above,
 The melodies of Peace in love!

XVIII.

ENGELBERG, THE HILL OF ANGELS¹.

FOR gentlest uses, oft-times Nature takes The work of Fancy from her willing
 hands;
 And such a beautiful creation makes As renders needless spells and magic wands,
 And for the boldest tale belief commands.
 When first mine eyes beheld that famous
 Hill 6
 The sacred ENGELBERG, celestial Bands,
 With intermingling motions soft and still,
 Hung round its top, on wings that changed their hues at will.
 Clouds do not name those Visitants;
 they were 10
 The very Angels whose authentic lays, Sung from that heavenly ground in middle air,
 Made known the spot where piety should raise
 A holy Structure to the Almighty’s praise.
 Resplendent Apparition! if in vain 15
 My ears did listen, ’twas enough to gaze;

And watch the slow departure of the train,
 Whose skirts the glowing Mountain thirsted to detain.

OUR LADY OF THE SNOW.

MEEK Virgin Mother, more benign
 Than fairest Star, upon the height
 Of thy own mountain², set to keep Lone vigils through the hours of sleep, 5
 What eye can look upon thy shrine
 Untroubled at the sight?
 These crowded offerings as they hang
 In sign of misery relieved,
 Even these, without intent of theirs, 10
 Report of comfortless despairs,
 Of many a deep and cureless pang
 And confidence deceived.

To Thee, in this aerial cleft,
 As to a common centre, tend 15
 All sufferers that no more rely
 On mortal succour—all who sigh
 And pine, of human hope bereft,
 Nor wish for earthly friend.

And hence, O Virgin Mother mild!
 Though plenteous flowers around thee 20
 blow,
 Not only from the dreary strife
 Of Winter, but the storms of life,
 Thee have thy Votaries aptly styled,
 OUR LADY OF THE SNOW.

Even for the Man who stops not here, 25
 But down the irriguous valley hies,
 Thy very name, O Lady! flings,
 O’er blooming fields and gushing springs
 A tender sense of shadowy fear,
 And chastening sympathies! 30

Nor falls that intermingling shade
 To summer-gladness unkind:
 It chastens only to requite
 With gleams of fresher, purer, light;
 While, o’er the flower-enamelled glade, 35
 More sweetly breathes the wind.

² Mount Righi.

But on!—a tempting downward way,
 A verdant path before us lies;
 Clear shines the glorious sun above;
 Then give free course to joy and love, 40
 Deeming “the evil of the day Sufficient for the wise.”

EFFUSION,

IN PRESENCE OF THE PAINTED TOWER OF TELL, AT ALTORF.

This Tower stands upon the spot where grew the Linden Tree against which his Son is said to have been placed, when the Father's archery was put to proof under circumstances so famous in Swiss Story.

WHAT though the Italian pencil wrought not here,

Nor such fine skill as did the meed bestow
 On Marathonian valour, yet the tear Springs forth in presence of this gaudy
 show,

While narrow cares their limits overflow.

Thrice happy, burghers, peasants, warriors old, 6

Infants in arms, and ye, that as ye go Homeward or schoolward, ape what ye
 behold;

Heroes before your time, in frolic fancy
 bold!

And when that calm Spectatress from
 on high 10

Looks down—the bright and solitary
 Moon,

Who never gazes but to beautify;
 And snow-fed torrents, which the blaze of noon

Roused into fury, murmur a soft tune
 That fosters peace, and gentleness recalls;

Then might the passing Monk receive a boon 16

Of saintly pleasure from these pictured
 walls,

While on the warlike groups the mellowing lustre falls.

How blest the souls who when their trials come

Yield not to terror or despondency, 20

But face like that sweet Boy their mortal
 doom,

Whose head the ruddy apple tops, while he

Expectant stands beneath the linden
 tree:

He quakes not like the timid forest game,
 But smiles—the hesitating shaft to free;

Assured that Heaven its justice will proclaim, 26

And to his Father give its own unerring aim.

XXI.

THE TOWN OF SCHWYTZ.

BY antique Fancy trimmed—though lowly, bred

To dignity—in thee, O SCHWYTZ! are seen
 The genuine features of the golden mean;

Equality by Prudence governèd,
 Or jealous Nature ruling in her stead; 5

And, therefore, art thou blest with peace,
 serene

As that of the sweet fields and meadows
 green

In unambitious compass round thee
 spread.

Majestic BERNE, high on her guardian
 steep,

Holding a central station of command, 10
 Might well be styled this noble body's

HEAD;

Thou, lodged 'mid mountainous entrenchments deep,

Its HEART; and ever may the heroic Land Thy name, O SCHWYTZ, in happy freedom keep!¹

XXII.

ON HEARING THE “RANZ DES VACHES” ON THE TOP OF THE PASS OF ST. GOTHARD.

I LISTEN—but no faculty of mine
 Avails those modulations to detect,

Which, heard in foreign lands, the Swiss affect

¹ Nearly 500 years (says Ebel, speaking of the French Invasion) had elapsed, when, for the first time, foreign soldiers were seen upon the frontiers of this small Canton, to impose upon it the laws of their governors.

With tenderest passion; leaving him to pine (So fame reports) and die,—his sweet-breathed kine 5
 Remembering, and green Alpine pastures decked With vernal flowers. Yet may we not reject
 The tale as fabulous.—Here while I recline, Mindful how others by this simple Strain
 Are moved, for me—upon this Mountain named 10
 Of God himself from dread pre-eminence—
 Aspiring thoughts, by memory reclaimed,
 Yield to the Music's touching influence;
 And joys of distant home my heart enchain.

XXIII.

FORT FUENTES.

The Ruins of Fort Fuentes form the crest of a rocky eminence that rises from the plain at the head of the lake of Como, commanding views up the Valteline, and toward the town of Chiavenna. The prospect in the latter direction is characterised by melancholy sublimity. We rejoiced at being favoured with a distinct view of those Alpine heights; not, as we had expected from the breaking up of the storm, steeped in celestial glory, yet in communion with clouds floating or stationary—scatterings from heaven. The Ruin is interesting both in mass and in detail. An Inscription, upon elaborately-sculptured marble lying on the ground, records that the Fort had been erected by Count Fuentes in the year 1600, during the reign of Philip the Third; and the Chapel, about twenty years after, by one of his Descendants. Marble pillars of gateways are yet standing, and a considerable part of the Chapel walls: a smooth green turf has taken place of the pavement, and we could see no trace of altar or image; but everywhere something to remind one of former splendour, and of devastation and tumult. In our ascent we had passed abundance of wild vines intermingled with bushes: near the ruins were some ill tended, but growing willingly; and rock, turf, and fragments of the pile, are alike covered or adorned with a variety of flowers, among which the rose-coloured pink was growing in great beauty. While descending, we discovered on the ground, apart from the path, and at a considerable distance from the ruined Chapel, a statue of a Child in pure white marble, uninjured by the explosion that had driven it so far down the hill. "How little," we exclaimed, "are these things valued here! Could we but transport this pretty Image to our own garden!"—Yet it seemed it would have been a pity any one should remove it from its couch in the wilderness, which may be its own for hundreds of years.—Extract from Journal.

DREAD hour! when, upheaved by war's sulphurous blast,
 This sweet-visaged Cherub of Parian stone
 So far from the holy enclosure was cast,
 To couch in this thicket of brambles alone,

To rest where the lizard may bask in the palm 5
 Of his half-open hand pure from blemish or speck;
 And the green, gilded snake, without troubling the calm
 Of the beautiful countenance, twine round his neck;

Where haply (kind service to Piety due!)
 When winter the grove of its mantle bereaves, 10
 Some bird (like our own honoured red-breast) may strew
 The desolate Slumberer with moss and with leaves.

FUENTES once harboured the good and the brave,
 Nor to her was the dance of soft pleasure unknown:
 Her banners for festal enjoyment did wave
 While the thrill of her fifes thro' the mountains was blown: 16

Now gads the wild vine o'er the pathless ascent:—
 O silence of Nature, how deep is thy sway,
 When the whirlwind of human destruction is spent,
 Our tumults appeased, and our strifes passed away! 20

XXIV.

THE CHURCH OF SAN SALVADOR.

SEEN FROM THE LAKE OF LUGANO.

This Church was almost destroyed by lightning a few years ago, but the altar and the image of the Patron Saint were untouched. The Mount, upon the summit of which the Church is built, stands amid the intricacies of the Lake of Lugano; and is, from a hundred points of view, its principal ornament, rising to the height of 2,000 feet, and, on one side, nearly perpendicular. The ascent is toilsome; but the traveller who performs it will be amply rewarded. Splendid fertility, rich woods and dazzling waters, seclusion and confinement of view contrasted with sea-like extent of plain fading into the sky; and this again, in an opposite quarter, with an horizon of the loftiest and boldest Alps—unite in composing a prospect more diversified by magnificence, beauty, and sublimity, than perhaps any other point in Europe, of so inconsiderable an elevation, commands.

THOU sacred Pile! whose turrets rise
From yon steep mountain's loftiest stage,
Guarded by lone San Salvador;
Sink (if thou must) as heretofore,
To sulphurous bolts a sacrifice, 5
But ne'er to human rage!

On Horeb's top, on Sinai, deigned
To rest the universal Lord:
Why leap the fountains from their cells
Where everlasting Bounty dwells?— 10
That, while the Creature is sustained,
His God may be adored.

Cliffs, fountains, rivers, seasons, times—
Let all remind the soul of heaven;
Our slack devotion needs them all; 15
And Faith—so oft of sense the thrall, While she, by aid of Nature, climbs—
May hope to be forgiven.

Glory, and patriotic Love,
And all the Poms of this frail "spot 20 Which men call Earth," have yearned to seek,

Associate with the simply meek,
Religion in the sainted grove,
And in the hallowed groat.

Thither, in time of adverse shocks, 25
Of fainting hopes and backward wills,
Did mighty Tell repair of old—
A Hero cast in Nature's mould,
Deliverer of the steadfast rocks
And of the ancient hills! 30

He, too, of battle-martyrs chief!
Who, to recall his daunted peers,
For victory shaped an open space,
By gathering with a wide embrace,
Into his single breast, a sheaf 35
Of fatal Austrian spears¹.

XXV.

THE ITALIAN ITINERANT, AND THE SWISS GOATHERD.

PART I.

I.

Now that the farewell tear is dried,
Heaven prosper thee, be hope thy guide!
Hope be thy guide, adventurous Boy;
The wages of thy travel, joy!
Whether for London bound—to trill 5
Thy mountain notes with simple skill;
Or on thy head to poise a show
Of Images in seemly row;
The graceful form of milk-white Steed,
Or Bird that soared with Ganymede; 10
Or through our hamlets thou wilt bear
The sightless Milton, with his hair
Around his placid temples curled;
And Shakspeare at his side—a freight,
If clay could think and mind were weight,
For him who bore the world! 16
Hope be thy guide, adventurous Boy;
The wages of thy travel, joy!

II.

But thou, perhaps, (alert as free Though serving sage philosophy), 20
Wilt ramble over hill and dale,
A Vender of the well-wrought Scale,

¹ Arnold Winkelried, at the battle of Sempach, broke an Austrian phalanx in this manner. The event is one of the most famous in the annals of Swiss heroism; and pictures and prints of it are frequent throughout the country.

Whose sentient tube instructs to time
 A purpose to a fickle clime :
 Whether thou choose this useful part, 25
 Or minister to finer art,
 Though robbed of many a cherished dream,
 And crossed by many a shattered scheme,
 What stirring wonders wilt thou see
 In the proud Isle of liberty ! 30
 Yet will the Wanderer sometimes pine With thoughts which no delights can
 chase,

Recall a Sister's last embrace,
 His Mother's neck entwine ;
 Nor shall forget the Maiden coy 35
 That would have loved the bright-haired
 Boy !

III.

My Song, encouraged by the grace
 That beams from his ingenuous face,
 For this Adventurer scruples not
 To prophesy a golden lot ; 40
 Due recompense, and safe return
 To Como's steeps—his happy bourne !
 Where he, aloft in garden-glade,
 Shall tend, with his own dark-eyed Maid,
 The towering maize, and prop the twig 45
 That ill supports the luscious fig ;
 Or feed his eye in paths sun-proof
 With purple of the trellis-roof,
 That through the jealous leaves escapes
 From Cadenabbia's pendent grapes. 50
 —Oh might he tempt that Goatherd-child
 To share his wanderings ! him whose look Even yet my heart can scarcely brook,
 So touchingly he smiled—
 As with a rapture caught from heaven—
 For unasked alms in pity given. 56

PART II.

I.

WITH nodding plumes, and lightly drest
 Like foresters in leaf-green vest,
 The Helvetian Mountaineers, on ground
 For Tell's dread archery renowned, 60
 Before the target stood—to claim
 The guerdon of the steadiest aim.
 Loud was the rifle-gun's report—
 A startling thunder quick and short !
 But, flying through the heights around, 65

Echo prolonged a tell-tale sound
 Of hearts and hands alike "prepared
 The treasures they enjoy to guard !"
 And, if there be a favoured hour
 When Heroes are allowed to quit 70
 The tomb, and on the clouds to sit
 With tutelary power,
 On their Descendants shedding grace—
 This was the hour, and that the place.

II.

But Truth inspired the Bards of old 75
 When of an iron age they told,
 Which to unequal laws gave birth,
 And drove Astræa from the earth.
 —A gentle Boy (perchance with blood
 As noble as the best endued, 80
 But seemingly a Thing despised ;
 Even by the sun and air unprized ;
 For not a tinge or flowery streak Appeared upon his tender cheek)
 Heart-deaf to those rebounding notes, 85
 Apart, beside his silent goats,
 Sate watching in a forest shed,
 Pale, ragged, with bare feet and head ;
 Mute as the snow upon the hill,
 And, as the saint he prays to, still. 90
 Ah, what avails heroic deed ?
 What liberty ? if no defence
 Be won for feeble Innocence.
 Father of all ! though wilful Manhood
 read
 His punishment in soul-distress, 95
 Grant to the morn of life its natural blessedness !

THE LAST SUPPER, BY LEONARDO DA VINCI, IN THE REFECTORY OF THE CONVENT OF MARIA DELLA GRAZIA—MILAN¹.

THO' searching damps and many an envious flaw
 Have marred this Work ; the calm ethereal grace,
 The love deep-seated in the Saviour's face,
 The mercy, goodness, have not failed to
 awe
 The Elements ; as they do melt and thaw

The heart of the Beholder—and erase 6
 (At least for one rapt moment) every trace
 Of disobedience to the primal law.
 The annunciation of the dreadful truth
 Made to the Twelve, survives: lip, forehead, cheek, 10
 And hand reposing on the board in ruth
 Of what it utters, while the unguilty seek Unquestionable meanings—still bespeak
 A labour worthy of eternal youth!

XXVII.

THE ECLIPSE OF THE SUN, 1820.

HIGH on her speculative tower
 Stood Science waiting for the hour
 When Sol was destined to endure
That darkening of his radiant face
 Which Superstition strove to chase, 5
 Erewhile, with rites impure.

Afloat beneath Italian skies,
 Through regions fair as Paradise
 We gaily passed,—till Nature wrought
 A silent and unlooked-for change, 10
 That checked the desultory range
 Of joy and sprightly thought.

Where'er was dipped the toiling oar,
 The waves danced round us as before,
 As lightly, though of altered hue, 15
 'Mid recent coolness, such as falls
 At noontide from umbrageous walls
 That screen the morning dew.

No vapour stretched its wings; no cloud
 Cast far or near a murky shroud; 20
 The sky an azure field displayed;
 'Twas sunlight sheathed and gently
 charmed,
 Of all its sparkling rays disarmed,
 And as in slumber laid,—

Or something night and day between, 25
 Like moonshine—but the hue was green;
 Still moonshine, without shadow, spread
 On jutting rock, and curvèd shore,
 Where gazed the peasant from his door,
 And on the mountain's head. 30

It tinged the Julian steeps—it lay,
 Lugano! on thy ample bay;
 The solemnising veil was drawn

O'er villas, terraces, and towers;
 To Albogasio's olive bowers, 35
 Porlezza's verdant lawn.

But Fancy with the speed of fire
 Hath past to Milan's loftiest spire,
 And there alights 'mid that aerial host
 Of Figures human and divine', 40
 White as the snows of Apennine Indúrated by frost.

Awe-stricken she beholds the array
 That guards the Temple night and day; Angels she sees—that might from heaven have flown, 45
 And Virgin-saints, who not in vain
 Have striven by purity to gain
 The beatific crown—

Sees long-drawn files, concentric rings
 Each narrowing above each;—the wings,
 The uplifted palms, the silent marble lips 51

The starry zone of sovereign height²—
 All steeped in this portentous light!
 All suffering dim eclipse!

Thus after Man had fallen (if aught 55
 These perishable spheres have wrought May with that issue be compared) Throngs of celestial visages, Darkening like water in the breeze,
 A holy sadness shared. 60

Lo! while I speak, the labouring Sun
 His glad deliverance has begun:
 The cypress waves her sombre plume
 More cheerily; and town and tower,
 The vineyard and the olive-bower, 65
 Their lustre re-assume!

O Ye, who guard and grace my home
 While in far-distant lands we roam, What countenance hath this Day put on for you?

While we look round with favoured eyes,
 Did sullen mists hide lake and skies 71
 And mountains from your view?

Or was it given you to behold
 Like vision, pensive though not cold,

² Above the highest circle of figures is a zone of metallic stars.

From the smooth breast of gay Winander-
mere? 75

Saw ye the soft yet awful veil
Spread over Grasmere's lovely dale, Helvellyn's brow severe?

I ask in vain—and know far less
If sickness, sorrow, or distress 80
Have spared my Dwelling to this hour;
Sad blindness! but ordained to prove
Our faith in Heaven's unfailing love
And all-controlling power.

XXVIII.

THE THREE COTTAGE GIRLS.

I.

How blest the Maid whose heart—yet
free

From Love's uneasy sovereignty—
Beats with a fancy running high,
Her simple cares to magnify;
Whom Labour, never urged to toil, 5
Hath cherished on a healthful soil;
Who knows not pomp, who heeds not
pelf;

Whose heaviest sin it is to look Askance upon her pretty Self Reflected in some crystal brook; 10 Whom grief hath spared—who sheds no
tear

But in sweet pity; and can hear
Another's praise from envy clear.

II.

Such (but O lavish Nature! why
That dark unfathomable eye, 15
Where lurks a Spirit that replies
To stillest mood of softest skies,
Yet hints at peace to be o'erthrown, Another's first, and then her own?)
Such, haply, yon ITALIAN Maid, 20
Our Lady's laggard Votaress,
Halting beneath the chestnut shade
To accomplish there her loveliness:
Nice aid maternal fingers lend;
A Sister serves with slacker hand; 25
Then, glittering like a star, she joins the festal band.

III.

How blest (if truth may entertain Coy fancy with a bolder strain)
The HELVETIAN Girl—who daily braves,
In her light skiff, the tossing waves, 30
And quits the bosom of the deep
Only to climb the rugged steep!
—Say whence that modulated shout!
From Wood-nymph of Diana's throng?
Or does the greeting to a rout 35
Of giddy Bacchanals belong?
Jubilant outcry! rock and glade
Resounded—but the voice obeyed
The breath of an Helvetic Maid.

IV.

Her beauty dazzles the thick wood; 40
Her courage animates the flood;
Her steps the elastic green-sward meets
Returning unreluctant sweets;
The mountains (as ye heard) rejoice
Aloud, saluted by her voice! 45
Blithe Paragon of Alpine grace,
Be as thou art—for through thy veins
The blood of Heroes runs its race!
And nobly wilt thou brook the chains
That, for the virtuous, Life prepares; 50
The fetters which the Matron wears;
The patriot Mother's weight of anxious cares!

V.

“Sweet HIGHLAND Girl¹! a very shower
Of beauty was thy earthly dower.”
When thou didst flit before mine eyes, 55
Gay vision under sullen skies,
While Hope and Love around thee played,
Near the rough Falls of Inversneyd!
Have they, who nursed the blossom, seen
No breach of promise in the fruit? 60
Was joy, in following joy, as keen
As grief can be in grief's pursuit?
When youth had flown did hope still bless Thy goings—or the cheerfulness 64
Of innocence survive to mitigate distress?

VI.

But from our course why turn—to tread
A way with shadows overspread;

¹ See address to a Highland Girl, p. 287.

Where what we gladliest would believe
 Is feared as what may most deceive? 69
 Bright Spirit, not with amaranth crowned
 But heath-bells from thy native ground,
 Time cannot thin thy flowing hair,
 Nor take one ray of light from Thee;
 For in my Fancy thou dost share
 The gift of immortality; 75
 And there shall bloom, with Thee allied,
 The Votress by Lugano's side;
 And that intrepid Nymph, on Uri's steep
 descried!

THE COLUMN INTENDED BY BUONAPARTE
 FOR A TRIUMPHAL EDIFICE IN MILAN, NOW LYING BY THE WAY-SIDE IN THE SIMPLON PASS.

AMBITION—following down this far-famed slope

Her Pioneer, the snow-dissolving Sun, While clarions prate of kingdoms to be
 won—

Perchance, in future ages, here may stop;
 Taught to mistrust her flattering horoscope
 By admonition from this prostrate Stone!
 Memento uninscribed of Pride o'erthrown,
 Vanity's hieroglyphic; a choice trope
 In Fortune's rhetoric. Daughter of the Rock,

Rest where thy course was stayed by Power divine! 10

The Soul transported sees, from hint of
 thine,

Crimes which the great Avenger's hand
 provoke,

Hears combats whistling o'er the ensanguined heath:

What groans! what shrieks! what quietness in death!

XXX.

STANZAS,

COMPOSED IN THE SIMPLON PASS.

VALLOMBROSA! I longed in thy shadiest
 wood

To slumber, reclined on the moss-covered
 floor,

To listen to ANIO's precipitous flood,

When the stillness of evening hath deepened its roar;

To range through the Temples of PAESTUM, to muse 5

In POMPEII preserved by her burial in
 earth;

On pictures to gaze where they drank in their hues;

And murmur sweet songs on the ground of their birth!

The beauty of Florence, the grandeur of Rome,

Could I leave them unseen, and not yield to regret? 10

With a hope (and no more) for a season to
 come,

Which ne'er may discharge the magnificent debt?

Thou fortunate Region! whose Greatness inurned

Awoke to new life from its ashes and dust;
 Twice-glorified fields! if in sadness I
 turned 15

From your infinite marvels, the sadness was just.

Now, risen ere the light-footed Chamois retires

From dew-sprinkled grass to heights guarded with snow,

Toward the mists that hang over the land of my Sires,

From the climate of myrtles contented I
 go. 20

My thoughts become bright like yon edging of Pines

On the steep's lofty verge: how it blackened the air!

But, touched from behind by the Sun, it now shines

With threads that seem part of his own silver hair.

Though the toil of the way with dear Friends we divide, 25

Though by the same zephyr our temples be fanned

As we rest in the cool orange-bower side
 by side,

A yearning survives which few hearts shall withstand:

Each step hath its value while homeward we move ;—
O joy when the girdle of England appears !
What moment in life is so conscious of
love, 31
Of love in the heart made more happy by tears ?

XXXI.

ECHO, UPON THE GEMMI.

WHAT beast of chase hath broken from the cover ?
Stern GEMMI listens to as full a cry,
As multitudinous a harmony
Of sounds as rang the heights of Latmos over,
When, from the soft couch of her sleeping
Lover, 5
Up-starting, Cynthia skimmed the mountain-dew
In keen pursuit—and gave, where'er she flew,
Impetuous motion to the Stars above her.
A solitary Wolf-dog, ranging on Through the bleak concave, wakes this wondrous chime 10
Of aery voices locked in unison,— Faint — far-off — near — deep — solemn and sublime !—
So, from the body of one guilty deed,
A thousand ghostly fears, and haunting thoughts, proceed !

XXXII.

PROCESSIONS.

SUGGESTED ON A SABBATH MORNING IN THE VALE OF CHAMOUNY.

To appease the Gods ; or public thanks to
yield ;
Or to solicit knowledge of events,
Which in her breast Futurity concealed ;
And that the past might have its true intentions
Feelingly told by living monuments— 5
Mankind of yore were prompted to devise Rites such as yet Persepolis presents
Graven on her cankered walls, solemnities
That moved in long array before admiring
eyes.

The Hebrews thus, carrying in joyful
state 10
Thick boughs of palm, and willows from the brook,
Marched round the altar—to commemorate
How, when their course they through the desert took,
Guided by signs which ne'er the sky forsook,
They lodged in leafy tents and cabins
low ; 15
Green boughs were borne, while, for the blast that shook
Down to the earth the walls of Jericho, Shouts rise, and storms of sound from lifted trumpets blow !
And thus, in order, 'mid the sacred grove Fed in the Libyan waste by gushing wells, 20
The priests and damsels of Ammonian
Jove
Provoked responses with shrill canticles ;
While, in a ship begirt with silver bells,
They round his altar bore the horned
God,
Old Cham, the solar Deity, who dwells 25
Aloft, yet in a tilting vessel rode,
When universal sea the mountains over-
flowed.
Why speak of Roman Poms ? the haughty claims
Of Chiefs triumphant after ruthless wars ;
The feast of Neptune—and the Cereal
Games, 30
With images, and crowns, and empty
cars ;
The dancing Salii—on the shields of Mars
Smiting with fury ; and a deeper dread Scattered on all sides by the hideous jars
Of Corybantian cymbals, while the head 35
Of Cybelè was seen, sublimely turreted !
At length a Spirit more subdued and soft Appeared—to govern Christian pageant-
ries :
The Cross, in calm procession, borne aloft
Moved to the chant of sober litanies. 40

Even such, this day, came wafted on the breeze

From a long train—in hooded vestments fair

Enwrapt—and winding, between Alpine trees

Spiry and dark, around their House of prayer,

Below the icy bed of bright ARGENTIERE. 45

Still in the vivid freshness of a dream,
The pageant haunts me as it met our eyes!

Still, with those white-robed Shapes—a living Stream,

The glacier Pillars join in solemn guise ¹

For the same service, by mysterious ties;

Numbers exceeding credible account 51

Of number, pure and silent Votaries

Issuing or issued from a wintry fount;

The impenetrable heart of that exalted Mount!

They, too, who send so far a holy gleam
While they the Church engird with motion slow, 56

A product of that awful Mountain seem,
Poured from his vaults of everlasting snow;

Not virgin lilies marshalled in bright row,
Not swans descending with the stealthy tide, 60

A livelier sisterly resemblance show
Than the fair Forms, that in long order glide,

Bear to the glacier band—those Shapes aloft desried.

Trembling, I look upon the secret springs
Of that licentious craving in the mind 65

To act the God among external things,

To bind, on apt suggestion, or unbind;

And marvel not that antique Faith inclined

To crowd the world with metamorphosis,
Vouchsafed in pity or in wrath assigned;
Such insolent temptations wouldst thou miss, 71

Avoid these sights; nor brood o'er Fable's dark abyss!

XXXIII.

ELEGIAC STANZAS.

The lamented Youth, whose untimely death gave occasion to these elegiac verses, was Frederick William Goddard, from Boston in North America. He was in his twentieth year, and had resided for some time with a clergyman in the neighbourhood of Geneva for the completion of his education. Accompanied by a fellow-pupil, a native of Scotland, he had just set out on a Swiss tour when it was his misfortune to fall in with a friend of mine who was hastening to join our party. The travellers, after spending a day together on the road from Berne and at Soleure, took leave of each other at night, the young men having intended to proceed directly to Zurich. But early in the morning my friend found his new acquaintances, who were informed of the object of his journey, and the friends he was in pursuit of, equipped to accompany him. We met at Lucerne the succeeding evening, and Mr. G. and his fellow-student became in consequence our travelling companions for a couple of days. We ascended the Righi together; and, after contemplating the sunrise from that noble mountain, we separated at an hour and on a spot well suited to the parting of those who were to meet no more. Our party descended through the valley of Our Lady of the Snow, and our late companions, to Art. We had hoped to meet in a few weeks at Geneva; but on the third succeeding day (on the 21st of August) Mr. Goddard perished, being overtaken in a boat while crossing the Lake of Zurich. His companion saved himself by swimming, and was hospitably received in the mansion of a Swiss gentleman (M. Keller) situated on the eastern coast of the lake. The corpse of poor Goddard was cast ashore on the estate of the same gentleman, who generously performed all the rites of hospitality which could be rendered to the dead as well as to the living. He caused a handsome mural monument to be erected in the church of Küssnacht, which records the premature fate of the young American, and on the shores too of the lake the traveller may read an inscription pointing out the spot where the body was deposited by the waves.

LULLED by the sound of pastoral bells,
Rude Nature's Pilgrims did we go,
From the dread summit of the Queen ²
Of mountains, through a deep ravine,

² Mount Righi—Regina Montium.

Where, in her holy chapel, dwells "Our Lady of the Snow."	5	Beloved by every gentle Muse He left his Transatlantic home : 50 Europe, a realised romance, Had opened on his eager glance ; What present bliss !—what golden views ! What stores for years to come !
The sky was blue, the air was mild ; Free were the streams and green the bowers ; As if, to rough assaults unknown, The genial spot had ever shown 10 A countenance that as sweetly smiled— The face of summer-hours.		Though lodged within no vigorous frame, His soul her daily tasks renewed, 56 Blithe as the lark on sun-gilt wings High poised—or as the wren that sings In shady places, to proclaim Her modest gratitude. 60
And we were gay, our hearts at ease ; With pleasure dancing through the frame We journeyed ; all we knew of care— 15 Our path that straggled here and there ; Of trouble—but the fluttering breeze ; Of Winter—but a name.		Not vain is sadly-uttered praise ; The words of truth's memorial vow Are sweet as morning fragrance shed From flowers 'mid GOLDAU's ruins bred ; As evening's fondly-lingering rays, 65 On RICH's silent brow.
If foresight could have rent the veil Of three short days—but hush—no more ! Calm is the grave, and calmer none 21 Than that to which thy cares are gone, Thou Victim of the stormy gale ; Asleep on ZURICH's shore !		Lamented youth ! to thy cold clay Fit obsequies the Stranger paid ; And piety shall guard the Stone Which hath not left the spot unknown 70 Where the wild waves resigned their prey— And that which marks thy bed.
Oh GODDARD !—what art thou?—a name— A sunbeam followed by a shade ! 26 Nor more, for aught that time supplies, The great, the experienced, and the wise : Too much from this frail earth we claim, And therefore are betrayed. 30		And, when thy Mother weeps for Thee, Lost Youth ! a solitary Mother ; This tribute from a casual Friend 75 A not unwelcome aid may lend, To feed the tender luxury, The rising pang to smother ¹ .
We met, while festive mirth ran wild, Where, from a deep lake's mighty urn, Forth slips, like an enfranchised slave, A sea-green river, proud to lave, With current swift and undefiled, 35 The towers of old LUCERNE.
We parted upon solemn ground Far-lifted towards the unfading sky ; But all our thoughts were then of Earth, That gives to common pleasures birth ; 40 And nothing in our hearts we found That prompted even a sigh.
Fetch, sympathising Powers of air, Fetch, ye that post o'er seas and lands, Herbs moistened by Virginian dew, 45 A most untimely grave to strew, Whose turf may never know the care Of kindred human hands !

XXXIV.

SKY-PROSPECT—FROM THE PLAIN OF
FRANCE.

Lo ! in the burning west, the craggy nape
Of a proud Ararat ! and, thereupon,
The Ark, her melancholy voyage done !
Yon rampant cloud mimics a lion's shape ;
There, combats a huge crocodile—agape 5

¹ The persuasion here expressed was not groundless. The first human consolation that the afflicted Mother felt was derived from this tribute to her son's memory, a fact which the author learned, at his own residence, from her Daughter, who visited Europe some years afterwards.—Goldau is one of the villages desolated by the fall of part of the Mountain Rossberg.

A golden spear to swallow! and that brown
And massy grove, so near yon blazing
town,
Stirs and recedes—destruction to escape!
Yet all is harmless—as the Elysian shades
Where Spirits dwell in undisturbed repose— 10
Silently disappears, or quickly fades:
Meek Nature's evening comment on the shows
That for oblivion take their daily birth
From all the fuming vanities of Earth!

XXXV.

ON BEING STRANDED NEAR THE HARBOUR OF BOULOGNE¹.

WHY cast ye back upon the Gallic shore,
Ye furious waves! a patriotic Son Of England—who in hope her coast had
won,
His project crowned, his pleasant travel
o'er?
Well—let him pace this noted beach once
more, 5
That gave the Roman his triumphal shells;
That saw the Corsican his cap and bells Haughtily shake, a dreaming Conqueror!—
Enough: my Country's cliffs I can behold,
And proudly think, beside the chafing
sea, 10
Of checked ambition, tyranny controlled,
And folly cursed with endless memory:
These local recollections ne'er can cloy;
Such ground I from my very heart enjoy!

XXXVI.

AFTER LANDING—THE VALLEY OF DOVER.
NOVEMBER, 1820.

WHERE be the noisy followers of the game
Which faction breeds? the turmoil where,
that passed Through Europe, echoing from the newsman's blast,

And filled our hearts with grief for England's shame?
Peace greets us;—rambling on without an aim 5
We mark majestic herds of cattle, free
To ruminatè, couched on the grassy lea;
And hear far-off the mellow horn proclaim
The Season's harmless pastime. Ruder
sound
Stirs not; enrapt I gaze with strange
delight, 10
While consciousnesses, not to be disowned, Here only serve a feeling to invite
That lifts the spirit to a calmer height,
And makes this rural stillness more profound.

XXXVII.

AT DOVER.

[Composed 1837.—Published: Sonnet-vol. of 1838;
ed. 1845.]

FROM the Pier's head, musing, and with increase
Of wonder, I have watched this sea-side
Town,
Under the white cliff's battlemented
crown,
Hushed to a depth of more than Sabbath
peace:
The streets and quays are thronged, but why disown 5
Their natural utterance? whence this strange release
From social noise—silence elsewhere unknown?—
A Spirit whispered, "Let all wonder
cease;
Ocean's o'erpowering murmurs have set
free
Thy sense from pressure of life's common din; 10
As the dread Voice that speaks from out
the sea
Of God's eternal Word, the Voice of
Time
Doth deaden, shocks of tumult, shrieks of crime,
The shouts of folly, and the groans of sin."

XXXVIII.

DESULTORY STANZAS,

UPON RECEIVING THE PRECEDING SHEETS
FROM THE PRESS.

[Composed 1822.—Published 1822.]

Is then the final page before me spread,
Nor further outlet left to mind or heart?
Presumptuous Book! too forward to be
read,

How can I give thee license to depart?
One tribute more: unbidden feelings
start

Forth from their coverts; slighted objects
rise;

My spirit is the scene of such wild art
As on Parnassus rules, when lightning
flies,

Visibly leading on the thunder's harmonies.

All that I saw returns upon my view, 10
All that I heard comes back upon my
ear,

All that I felt this moment doth renew;
And where the foot with no unmanly fear Recoiled—and wings alone could travel—
there

I move at ease; and meet contending
themes

That press upon me, crossing the career 15
Of recollections vivid as the dreams Of midnight,—cities, plains, forests, and mighty streams.

Where Mortal never breathed I dare to sit

Among the interior Alps, gigantic crew, 20
Who triumphed o'er diluvian power!—
and yet

What are they but a wreck and residue,
Whose only business is to perish!—true
To which sad course, these wrinkled Sons
of Time

Labour their proper greatness to sub-
due;

Speaking of death alone, beneath a clime
Where life and rapture flow in plenitude
sublime.

Fancy hath flung for me an airy bridge
Across thy long deep Valley, furious Rhône!

Arch that here rests upon the granite ridge

Of Monte Rosa—there on frailer stone
Of secondary birth, the Jung-frau's cone;
And, from that arch, down-looking on the
Vale

The aspect I behold of every zone;
A sea of foliage, tossing with the gale, 35
Blithe Autumn's purple crown, and Winter's icy mail!

Far as ST. MAURICE, from yon eastern FORKS¹,

Down the main avenue my sight can
range:

And all its branchy vales, and all that lurks

Within them, church, and town, and hut,
and grange,

For my enjoyment meet in vision strange;
Snows, torrents;—to the region's utmost
bound,

Life, Death, in amicable interchange;— But list! the avalanche—the hush pro-
found

That follows—yet more awful than that awful sound!

Is not the chamois suited to his place?
The eagle worthy of her ancestry?
—Let Empires fall; but ne'er shall Ye disgrace

Your noble birthright, ye that occupy
Your council-seats beneath the open
sky,

On Sarnen's Mount², there judge of fit and right,

In simple democratic majesty;
Soft breezes fanning your rough brows—
the might

And purity of nature spread before your
sight!

From this appropriate Court renowned LUCERNE

Calls me to pace her honoured Bridge¹—that cheers
 The Patriot's heart with pictures rude and
 stern,
 An uncouth Chronicle of glorious years.
 Like portraiture, from loftier source, endears
 That work of kindred frame, which spans the lake 60
 Just at the point of issue, where it fears
 The form and motion of a stream to
 take;
 Where it begins to stir, yet voiceless as a snake.

Volumes of sound, from the Cathedral
 rolled,
 This long-roofed Vista penetrate—but
 see, 65
 One after one, its tablets, that unfold
 The whole design of Scripture history;
 From the first tasting of the fatal Tree, Till the bright Star appeared in eastern
 skies,
 Announcing, ONE was born mankind to
 free; 70
 His acts, his wrongs, his final sacrifice;
 Lessons for every heart, a Bible for all
 eyes.

Our pride misleads, our timid likings kill.
 —Long may these homely Works devised
 of old,
 These simple efforts of Helvetian skill, 75
 Aid, with congenial influence, to uphold
 The State,—the Country's destiny to
 mould;
 Turning, for them who pass, the common
 dust
 Of servile opportunity to gold;
 Filling the soul with sentiments august— 80
 The beautiful, the brave, the holy, and the just!

No more; Time halts not in his noiseless march—
 Nor turns, nor winds, as doth the liquid
 flood;
 Life slips from underneath us, like that arch
 Of airy workmanship whereon we stood, 85 Earth stretched below, heaven in our neighbourhood.
 Go forth, my little Book! pursue thy way;
 Go forth, and please the gentle and the
 good;
 Nor be a whisper stifled, if it say That treasures, yet untouched, may grace some future Lay. 90

MEMORIALS OF A TOUR IN ITALY¹, 1837.

TO HENRY CRABB ROBINSON.

COMPANION! by whose buoyant Spirit cheered,
In whose experience trusting, day by day
Treasures I gained with zeal that neither feared
The toils nor felt the crosses of the way,
These records take, and happy should I be
Were but the Gift a meet Return to thee
For kindnesses that never ceased to flow,
And prompt self-sacrifice to which I owe
Far more than any heart but mine can know.

W. WORDSWORTH.

RYDAL MOUNT,
Feb. 14th, 1842.

The Tour of which the following Poems are very inadequate remembrances was shortened by report, too well founded, of the prevalence of Cholera at Naples. To make some amends for what was reluctantly left unseen in the South of Italy, we visited the Tuscan Sanctuaries among the Apennines, and the principal Italian Lakes among the Alps. Neither of those lakes, nor of Venice, is there any notice in these Poems, chiefly because I have touched upon them elsewhere. See, in particular, "Descriptive Sketches," "Memorials of a Tour on the Continent in 1820," and a Sonnet upon the extinction of the Venetian Republic.

MUSINGS NEAR AQUAPENDENTE.

APRIL, 1837.

[Composed 1837.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

YE Apennines! with all your fertile vales Deeply embosomed, and your winding
shores
Of either sea, an Islander by birth,

A Mountaineer by habit, would resound Your praise, in meet accordance with your claims 5
Bestowed by Nature, or from man's great
deeds
Inherited:—presumptuous thought!—it
fled Like vapour, like a towering cloud, dissolved.
Not, therefore, shall my mind give way to sadness;—
Yon snow-white torrent-fall, plumb down it drops 10
Yet ever hangs or seems to hang in air, Lulling the leisure of that high-perched
town,
AQUAPENDENTE, in her lofty site
Its neighbour and its namesake—town, and flood Forth flashing out of its own gloomy chasm 15
Bright sunbeams—the fresh verdure of this lawn Strewn with grey rocks, and on the horizon's verge,
O'er intervenient waste, through glimmering haze,
Unquestionably kenne'd, that cone-shaped
hill
With fractured summit, no indifferent
sight 20
To travellers, from such comforts as are
thine,
Bleak Radicofani! escaped with joy—
These are before me; and the varied scene
May well suffice, till noon-tide's sultry heat

¹ This group of Poems first appeared in the volume entitled Poems, Chiefly of Early and Late Years, published in 1842. The Sonnets all, or almost all, belong to the year, December, 1840—December, 1841. Where no note recording dates of composition and of publication is given, it is to be assumed that the poem was written in 1840–41, and published (as described above) in 1842.—ED.

Relax, to fix and satisfy the mind 25
 Passive yet pleased. What! with this Broom in flower
 Close at my side! She bids me fly to greet
 Her sisters, soon like her to be attired
 With golden blossoms opening at the feet
 Of my own Fairfield. The glad greeting
 given, 30
 Given with a voice and by a look returned
 Of old companionship, Time counts not minutes
 Ere, from accustomed paths, familiar
 fields,
 The local Genius hurries me aloft, 34
 Transported over that cloud-wooing hill,
 Seat Sandal, a fond suitor of the clouds,
 With dream-like smoothness, to Hel-velyn's top,
 There to alight upon crisp moss and range,
 Obtaining ampler boon, at every step,
 Of visual sovereignty—hills multitudinous, 40
 (Not Apennine can boast of fairer), hills Pride of two nations, wood and lake and
 plains,
 And prospect right below of deep coves shaped
 By skeleton arms, that, from the mountain's trunk
 Extended, clasp the winds, with mutual
 moan 45
 Struggling for liberty, while undis-
 mayed
 The shepherd struggles with them. Onward thence
 And downward by the skirt of Greenside
 fell,
 And by Glenridding-screes, and low Glen-coign,
 Places forsaken now, though loving still 50
 The Muses, as they loved them in the
 days
 Of the old minstrels and the border bards.—
 But here am I fast bound; and let it pass,
 The simple rapture;—who that travels far To feed his mind with watchful eyes could share 55
 Or wish to share it?—One there surely
 was,

“The Wizard of the North,” with anxious
 hope Brought to this genial climate, when disease
 Preyed upon body and mind—yet not the
 less
 Had his sunk eye kindled at those dear
 words 60
 That spake of bards and minstrels; and his spirit
 Had flown with mine to old Helvellyn's
 brow,
 Where once together, in his day of
 strength,
 We stood rejoicing, as if earth were free From sorrow, like the sky above our heads. 65

Years followed years, and when, upon
 the eve
 Of his last going from Tweed-side, thought
 turned,
 Or by another's sympathy was led,
 To this bright land, Hope was for him no
 friend,
 Knowledge no help; Imagination shaped No promise. Still, in more than ear-deep seats, 71
 Survives for me, and cannot but survive
 The tone of voice which wedded borrowed
 words
 To sadness not their own, when, with faint smile
 Forced by intent to take from speech its
 edge, 75
 He said, “When I am there, although 'tis
 fair,
 'Twill be another Yarrow.” Prophecy
 More than fulfilled, as gay Campania's
 shores
 Soon witnessed, and the city of seven hills,
 Her sparkling fountains, and her mouldering tombs; 80
 And more than all, that Eminence which showed
 Her splendours, seen, not felt, the while he stood
 A few short steps (painful they were) apart
 From Tasso's Convent-haven, and retired
 grave.

Peace to their Spirits! why should Poesy	85	Power must resolve to cleave to it through life,
Yield to the lure of vain regret, and hover In gloom on wings with confidence out- spread		Else it deserts him, surely as he lives. Saints would not grieve nor guardian angels frown
To move in sunshine?—Utter thanks, my Soul!		If one—while tossed, as was my lot to be, In a frail bark urged by two slender oars	120
Tempered with awe, and sweetened by compassion		Over waves rough and deep, that, when they broke,
For them who in the shades of sorrow dwell,	90	Dashed their white foam against the palace walls
That I—so near the term to human life Appointed by man's common heritage, Frail as the frailest, one withal (if that Deserve a thought) but little known to fame—		Of Genoa the superb—should there be led To meditate upon his own appointed tasks, However humble in themselves, with thoughts	125
Am free to rove where Nature's loveliest looks,	95	Raised and sustained by memory of Him Who oftentimes within those narrow bounds
Art's noblest relics, history's rich be- quests,		Rocked on the surge, there tried his spirit's strength
Failed to reanimate and but feebly cheered The whole world's Darling—free to rove at will		And grasp of purpose, long ere sailed his ship
O'er high and low, and if requiring rest, Rest from enjoyment only.		To lay a new world open.
Thanks poured forth	100	Nor less prized	130
For what thus far hath blessed my wander- ings, thanks		Be those impressions which incline the heart
Fervent but humble as the lips can breathe Where gladness seems a duty—let me guard		To mild, to lowly, and to seeming weak, Bend that way her desires. The dew, the storm—
Those seeds of expectation which the fruit Already gathered in this favoured Land Enfolds within its core. The faith be mine,	106	The dew whose moisture fell in gentle drops
That He who guides and governs all, approves		On the small hyssop destined to be- come,	135
When gratitude, though disciplined to look		By Hebrew ordinance devoutly kept, A purifying instrument—the storm That shook on Lebanon the cedar's top, And as it shook, enabling the blind roots Further to force their way, endowed its trunk	140
Beyond these transient spheres, doth wear a crown		With magnitude and strength fit to up- hold
Of earthly hope put on with trembling hand;	110	The glorious temple—did alike proceed From the same gracious will, were both an offspring
Nor is least pleased, we trust, when golden beams,		Of bounty infinite.
Reflected through the mists of age, from hours		Between Powers that aim Higher to lift their lofty heads, im- pelled	145
Of innocent delight, remote or recent, Shoot but a little way—'tis all they can— Into the doubtful future. Who would keep	115	By no profane ambition, Powers that thrive

By conflict, and their opposites, that trust
 In lowliness—a mid-way tract there lies
 Of thoughtful sentiment for every mind Pregnant with good. Young, Middle-aged, and Old, 150
 From century on to century, must have
 known
 The emotion—nay, more fitly were it
 said—
 The blest tranquillity that sunk so deep Into my spirit, when I paced, enclosed In Pisa's Campo Santo, the smooth
 floor 155
 Of its Arcades paved with sepulchral slabs,
 And through each window's open fret-work looked O'er the blank Area of sacred earth Fetched from Mount Calvary, or haply delved
 In precincts nearer to the Saviour's
 tomb, 160
 By hands of men, humble as brave, who fought
 For its deliverance—a capacious field
 That to descendants of the dead it holds
 And to all living mute memento breathes, More touching far than aught which on the walls 165
 Is pictured, or their epitaphs can speak,
 Of the changed City's long-departed
 power,
 Glory, and wealth, which, perilous as they are,
 Here did not kill, but nourished, Piety.
 And, high above that length of cloistral
 roof, 170
 Peering in air and backed by azure sky,
 To kindred contemplations ministers
 The Baptistery's dome, and that which swells
 From the Cathedral pile; and with the twain
 Conjoined in prospect mutable or fixed 175
 (As hurry on in eagerness the feet, Or pause) the summit of the Leaning-
 tower.
 Nor less remuneration waits on him
 Who having left the Cemetery stands In the Tower's shadow, of decline and
 fall 180

Admonished not without some sense of
 fear,
 Fear that soon vanishes before the sight
 Of splendour unextinguished, pomp unscathed,
 And beauty unimpaired. Grand in itself,
 And for itself, the assemblage, grand and
 fair 185
 To view, and for the mind's consenting
 eye
 A type of age in man, upon its front
 Bearing the world-acknowledged evidence
 Of past exploits, nor fondly after more Struggling against the stream of destiny,
 But with its peaceful majesty content. 191
 —Oh what a spectacle at every turn
 The Place unfolds, from pavement skinned with moss,
 Or grass-grown spaces, where the heaviest foot
 Provokes no echoes, but must softly
 tread; 195
 Where Solitude with Silence paired stops
 short
 Of Desolation, and to Ruin's scythe
 Decay submits not.
 But where'er my steps Shall wander, chiefly let me cull with
 care
 Those images of genial beauty, oft 200
 Too lovely to be pensive in themselves
 But by reflexion made so, which do best
 And fittest serve to crown with fragrant wreaths
 Life's cup when almost filled with years, like mine.
 —How lovely robed in forenoon light and shade, 205
 Each ministering to each, didst thou
 appear
 Savona, Queen of territory fair
 As aught that marvellous coast thro' all its length Yields to the Stranger's eye. Remembrance holds
 As a selected treasure thy one cliff, 210
 That, while it wore for melancholy crest
 A shattered Convent, yet rose proud to have Clinging to its steep sides a thousand herbs

And shrubs, whose pleasant looks gave proof how kind
 The breath of air can be where earth had else 215
 Seemed churlish. And behold, both far
 and near,
 Garden and field all decked with orange
 bloom,
 And peach and citron, in Spring's mildest breeze
 Expanding; and, along the smooth shore curved
 Into a natural port, a tideless sea, 220
 To that mild breeze with motion and with voice
 Softly responsive; and, attuned to all Those vernal charms of sight and sound,
 appeared Smooth space of turf which from the guardian fort Sloped seaward, turf whose tender April
 green, 225
 In coolest climes too fugitive, might even
 here
 Plead with the sovereign Sun for longer
 stay
 Than his unmitigated beams allow,
 Nor plead in vain, if beauty could preserve,
 From mortal change, aught that is born on earth 230
 Or doth on time depend.
 While on the brink
 Of that high Convent-crested cliff I
 stood,
 Modest Savona! over all did brood
 A pure poetic Spirit—as the breeze, Mild—as the verdure, fresh—the sunshine, bright— 235
 Thy gentle Chiabrera!—not a stone,
 Mural or level with the trodden floor,
 In Church or Chapel, if my curious quest Missed not the truth, retains a single
 name
 Of young or old, warrior, or saint, or sage,
 To whose dear memories his sepulchral
 verse 241
 Paid simple tribute, such as might have flowed
 From the clear spring of a plain English
 heart,
 Say rather, one in native fellowship
 With all who want not skill to couple
 grief 245
 With praise, as genuine admiration prompts.
 The grief, the praise, are severed from their dust,
 Yet in his page the records of that worth
 Survive, uninjured;—glory then to words, Honour to word-preserving Arts, and hail 250
 Ye kindred local influences that still,
 If Hope's familiar whispers merit faith,
 Await my steps when they the breezy
 height
 Shall range of philosophic Tusculum;
 Or Sabine vales explored inspire a wish To meet the shade of Horace by the
 side 256
 Of his Bandusian fount; or I invoke His presence to point out the spot where
 once
 He sate, and eulogised with earnest pen Peace, leisure, freedom, moderate desires; 260
 And all the immunities of rural life
 Extolled, behind Vacuna's crumbling fane.
 Or let me loiter, soothed with what is
 given,
 Nor asking more, on that delicious Bay,
 Parthenope's Domain—Virgilian haunt,
 Illustrated with never-dying verse, 266
 And, by the Poet's laurel-shaded tomb,
 Age after age to Pilgrims from all lands Endeared.
 And who—if not a man as cold
 In heart as dull in brain—while pacing
 ground 270
 Chosen by Rome's legendary Bards, high
 minds
 Out of her early struggles well inspired
 To localise heroic acts—could look Upon the spots with undelighted eye, Though even to their last syllable the Lays 275
 And very names of those who gave them
 birth
 Have perished?—Verily, to her utmost
 depth,
 Imagination feels what Reason fears not
 To recognise, the lasting virtue lodged

In those bold fictions that, by deeds assigned 280

To the Valerian, Fabian, Curian Race,
And others like in fame, created Powers
With attributes from History derived,
By Poesy irradiate, and yet graced,
Through marvellous felicity of skill, 285
With something more propitious to high aims

Than either, pent within her separate sphere,
Can oft with justice claim.

And not disdain-
ing
Union with those primeval energies
To virtue consecrate, stoop ye from your
height 290
Christian Traditions! at my Spirit's call Descend, and, on the brow of ancient Rome

As she survives in ruin, manifest
Your glories mingled with the brightest hues

Of her memorial halo, fading, fading, 295
But never to be extinct while Earth endures.

O come, if undishonoured by the prayer,
From all her Sanctuaries!—Open for my
feet

Ye Catacombs, give to mine eyes a glimpse

Of the Devout, as, 'mid your glooms convened 300

For safety, they of yore enclasped the
Cross

On knees that ceased from trembling, or intoned

Their orisons with voices half-suppressed,
But sometimes heard, or fancied to be
heard,

Even at this hour.

And thou Mamertine prison, 305
Into that vault receive me from whose depth

Issues, revealed in no presumptuous vision,

Albeit lifting human to divine,
A Saint, the Church's Rock, the mystic
Keys

Grasped in his hand; and lo! with upright sword 310

Prefiguring his own impendent doom,

The Apostle of the Gentiles; both prepared

To suffer pains with heathen scorn and hate

Inflicted;—blessèd Men, for so to Heaven
They follow their dear Lord!

Time flows—nor winds, 315
Nor stagnates, nor precipitates his course,
But many a benefit borne upon his breast
For human-kind sinks out of sight, is
gone,

No one knows how; nor seldom is put
forth 319

An angry arm that snatches good away,
Never perhaps to reappear. The Stream
Has to our generation brought and brings Innumerable gains; yet we, who now Walk in the light of day, pertain full surely

To a chilled age, most pitiably shut out From that which is and actuates, by
forms, 326

Abstractions, and by lifeless fact to fact Minutely linked with diligence unin-
spired,

Unrectified, unguided, unsustained, By godlike insight. To this fate is doomed 330

Science, wide-spread and spreading still as be

Her conquests, in the world of sense made
known.

So with the internal mind it fares; and so With morals, trusting, in contempt or
fear

Of vital principle's controlling law, 335
To her purblind guide Expediency;
and so

Suffers religious faith. Elate with view
Of what is won, we overlook or scorn

The best that should keep pace with it, and must,

Else more and more the general mind will droop, 340

Even as if bent on perishing. There
lives

No faculty within us which the Soul
Can spare, and humblest earthly Weal demands,

For dignity not placed beyond her reach,
Zealous co-operation of all means 345

Given or acquired, to raise us from the mire,
And liberate our hearts from low pursuits.

By gross Utilities enslaved we need 348
More of ennobling impulse from the past,
If to the future aught of good must come Sounder and therefore holier than the ends
Which, in the giddiness of self-applause,
We covet as supreme. O grant the crown
That Wisdom wears, or take his treacherous staff

From Knowledge!—If the Muse, whom I have served 355

This day, be mistress of a single pearl
Fit to be placed in that pure diadem;
Then, not in vain, under these chestnut
boughs

Reclined, shall I have yielded up my soul
To transports from the secondary founts Flowing of time and place, and paid to
both 361

Due homage; nor shall fruitlessly have striven,

By love of beauty moved, to enshrine in verse

Accordant meditations, which in times
Vexed and disordered, as our own, may
shed 365

Influence, at least among a scattered few,
To soberness of mind and peace of heart Friendly; as here to my repose hath been This flowering broom's dear neighbourhood, the light

And murmur issuing from yon pendent
flood, 370

And all the varied landscape. Let us now Rise, and to-morrow greet magnificent Rome¹.

II.

THE PINE OF MONTE MARIO AT ROME.

I SAW far off the dark top of a Pine Look like a cloud—a slender stem the tie

That bound it to its native earth—poised
high

'Mid evening hues, along the horizon line,

Striving in peace each other to out-
shine. 5

But when I learned the Tree was living
there,

Saved from the sordid axe by Beaumont's
care,

Oh, what a gush of tenderness was
mine!

The rescued Pine-tree, with its sky so
bright

And cloud-like beauty, rich in thoughts
of home, 10

Death-parted friends, and days too swift in flight,

Supplanted the whole majesty of Rome (Then first apparent from the Pincian
Height)

Crowned with St. Peter's everlasting Dome².

III.

AT ROME.

Is this, ye Gods, the Capitolian Hill?

Yon petty Steep in truth the fearful
Rock,

Tarpeian named of yore, and keeping
still

That name, a local Phantom proud to mock

The Traveller's expectation?—Could our
Will 5

Destroy the ideal Power within, 'twere
done

Thro' what men see and touch,—slaves wandering on,

Impelled by thirst of all but Heaven-taught skill.

Full oft, our wish obtained, deeply we
sigh;

Yet not unrecompensed are they who learn, 10

From that depression raised, to mount on
high

With stronger wing, more clearly to discern

Eternal things; and, if need be, defy Change, with a brow not insolent, though stern.

IV.

AT ROME.—REGRETS.—IN ALLUSION TO NIEBUHR, AND OTHER MODERN HISTORIANS.

THOSE old credulities, to nature dear,
 Shall they no longer bloom upon the stock
 Of History, stript naked as a rock
 'Mid a dry desert? What is it we hear?
 The glory of Infant Rome must disappear,
 Her morning splendours vanish, and their place
 Know them no more. If Truth, who veiled her face With those bright beams yet hid it not, must steer Henceforth a humbler course perplexed
 and slow;
 One solace yet remains for us who came Into this world in days when story lacked Severe research, that in our hearts we know
 How, for exciting youth's heroic flame,
 Assent is power, belief the soul of fact.

V.

CONTINUED.

COMPLACENT Fictions were they, yet the same
 Involved a history of no doubtful sense,
 History that proves by inward evidence
 From what a precious source of truth it came.
 Ne'er could the boldest Eulogist have dared
 Such deeds to paint, such characters to frame,
 But for coeval sympathy prepared
 To greet with instant faith their loftiest claim.
 None but a noble people could have loved Flattery in Ancient Rome's pure-minded style:
 Not in like sort the Runic Scald was moved;
 He, nursed 'mid savage passions that defile
 Humanity, sang feats that well might call
 For the blood-thirsty mead of Odin's riotous Hall.

VI.

PLEA FOR THE HISTORIAN.

FORBEAR to deem the Chronicler unwise, Ungentle, or untouched by seemly ruth,
 Who, gathering up all that Time's envious tooth
 Has spared of sound and grave realities,
 Firmly rejects those dazzling flatteries,
 Dear as they are to unsuspecting Youth,
 That might have drawn down Clio from the skies
 To vindicate the majesty of truth.
 Such was her office while she walked with men,
 A Muse, who, not unmindful of her Sire
 All-ruling Jove, whate'er the theme might be Revered her Mother, sage Mnemosyne,
 And taught her faithful servants how the lyre
 Should animate, but not mislead, the pen¹.

VII.

AT ROME.

THEY—who have seen the noble Roman's scorn
 Break forth at thought of laying down his head,
 When the blank day is over, garreted
 In his ancestral palace, where, from morn
 To night, the desecrated floors are worn
 By feet of purse-proud strangers; they—who have read
 In one meek smile, beneath a peasant's shed,
 How patiently the weight of wrong is borne;
 They—who have heard some learned Patriot treat
 Of freedom, with mind grasping the whole theme
 From ancient Rome, downwards through that bright dream
 Of Commonwealths, each city a starlike seat
 Of rival glory; they—fallen Italy—
 Nor must, nor will, nor can, despair of Thee!

 —sumes celebrare Clio?

VIII.

NEAR ROME, IN SIGHT OF ST. PETER'S.

LONG has the dew been dried on tree and
lawn;
O'er man and beast a not unwelcome boon
Is shed, the languor of approaching noon;
To shady rest withdrawing or withdrawn
Mute are all creatures, as this couchant fawn, 5
Save insect-swarms that hum in air
afloat,
Save that the Cock is crowing, a shrill
note,
Startling and shrill as that which roused the dawn.
—Heard in that hour, or when, as now,
the nerve Shrinks from the note as from a mistimed thing, 10
Oft for a holy warning may it serve,
Charged with remembrance of his sudden sting,
His bitter tears, whose name the Papal
Chair
And yon resplendent Church are proud to bear.

IX.

AT ALBANO.

DAYS passed—and Monte Calvo would not clear
His head from mist; and, as the wind sobbed through Albano's dripping Ilex avenue,
My dull forebodings in a Peasant's ear Found casual vent. She said, "Be of good cheer; 5
Our yesterday's procession did not sue
In vain; the sky will change to sunny
blue,
Thanks to our Lady's grace." I smiled
to hear,
But not in scorn:—the Matron's Faith may lack
The heavenly sanction needed to ensure Fulfilment; but, we trust, her upward
track 11
Stops not at this low point, nor wants the lure

Of flowers the Virgin without fear may
own,
For by her Son's blest hand the seed was sown.

X.

NEAR Anio's stream I spied a gentle Dove Perched on an olive branch, and heard her cooing
'Mid new-born blossoms that soft airs were wooing,
While all things present told of joy and
love.
But restless Fancy left that olive grove 5
To hail the exploratory Bird renewing Hope for the few, who, at the world's undoing,
On the great flood were spared to live and
move.
O bounteous Heaven! signs true as dove and bough
Brought to the ark are coming evermore, Given though we seek them not, but,
while we plough 11
This sea of life without a visible shore,
Do neither promise ask nor grace implore
In what alone is ours, the living Now.

XI.

FROM THE ALBAN HILLS, LOOKING TOWARDS ROME.

FORGIVE, illustrious Country! these deep
sighs,
Heaved less for thy bright plains and hills bestrown
With monuments decayed or overthrown,
For all that tottering stands or prostrate
lies,
Than for like scenes in moral vision shown, 5
Ruin perceived for keener sympathies;
Faith crushed, yet proud of weeds, her gaudy crown;
Virtues laid low, and mouldering energies.
Yet why prolong this mournful strain?—
Fallen Power,
Thy fortunes, twice exalted, might provoke 10

Verse to glad notes prophetic of the
hour
When thou, uprisen, shalt break thy double yoke,
And enter, with prompt aid from the Most High,
On the third stage of thy great destiny.

XII.

NEAR THE LAKE OF THRASYMENE.

WHEN here with Carthage Rome to conflict came,
An earthquake, mingling with the battle's shock,
Checked not its rage; unfelt the ground
did rock, Sword dropped not, javelin kept its deadly aim.— Now all is sun-bright peace. Of that day's shame, 5
Or glory, not a vestige seems to endure, Save in this Rill that took from blood the name¹
Which yet it bears, sweet Stream! as crystal pure.
So may all trace and sign of deeds aloof
From the true guidance of humanity, 10
Thro' Time and Nature's influence, purify
Their spirit; or, unless they for reproof Or warning serve, thus let them all, on
ground
That gave them being, vanish to a sound.

XIII.

NEAR THE SAME LAKE.

FOR action born, existing to be tried,
Powers manifold we have that intervene
To stir the heart that would too closely screen
Her peace from images to pain allied.
What wonder if at midnight, by the side
Of Sanguinetto or broad Thrasymene, 6
The clang of arms is heard, and phantoms
glide,
Unhappy ghosts in troops by moonlight
seen;
And singly thine, O vanquished Chief!
whose corse,

¹ Sanguinetto.

Unburied, lay hid under heaps of slain: 10
But who is He—the Conqueror? Would he force
His way to Rome? Ah, no,—round hill and plain Wandering, he haunts, at fancy's strong
command,
This spot—his shadowy death-cup in his hand.

XIV.

THE CUCKOO AT LAVERNA.

MAY 25, 1837.

[Composed June, July, 1837.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

LIST—'twas the Cuckoo.—O with what
delight
Heard I that voice! and catch it now, though faint,
Far off and faint, and melting into air,
Yet not to be mistaken. Hark again!
Those louder cries give notice that the
Bird, 5
Although invisible as Echo's self,
Is wheeling hitherward. Thanks, happy
Creature,
For this unthought-of greeting!
While allured
From vale to hill, from hill to vale led on,
We have pursued, through various lands,
a long 10
And pleasant course; flower after flower has blown,
Embellishing the ground that gave them
birth
With aspects novel to my sight; but still Most fair, most welcome, when they drank the dew
In a sweet fellowship with kinds beloved,
For old remembrance sake. And oft—where Spring 16
Displayed her richest blossoms among files
Of orange-trees bedecked with glowing fruit
Ripe for the hand, or under a thick shade
Of Ilex, or, if better suited to the hour, 20
The lightsome Olive's twinkling canopy—Oft have I heard the Nightingale and Thrush

Blending as in a common English grove
 Their love-songs; but, where'er my feet might roam,
 Whate'er assemblages of new and old, 25
 Strange and familiar, might beguile the
 way,
 A gratulation from that vagrant Voice
 Was wanting;—and most happily till
 now.

For see, Laverna! mark the far-famed
 Pile,
 High on the brink of that precipitous
 rock, 30
 Implanted like a Fortress, as in truth
 It is, a Christian Fortress, garrisoned
 In faith and hope, and dutiful obedience,
 By a few Monks, a stern society,
 Dead to the world and scorning earth-born joys. 35
 Nay—though the hopes that drew, the fears that drove,
 St. Francis, far from Man's resort, to abide
 Among these sterile heights of Apennine,
 Bound him, nor, since he raised yon
 House, have ceased
 To bind his spiritual Progeny, with rules
 Stringent as flesh can tolerate and live; 41
 His milder Genius (thanks to the good
 God
 That made us) over those severe restraints Of mind, that dread heart-freezing discipline,
 Doth sometimes here predominate, and
 works 45
 By unsought means for gracious purposes;
 For earth through heaven, for heaven, by changeful earth,
 Illustrated, and mutually endeared.

Rapt though He were above the power
 of sense,
 Familiarly, yet out of the cleansed heart
 Of that once sinful Being overflowed 51
 On sun, moon, stars, the nether elements,
 And every shape of creature they sustain, Divine affections; and with beast and
 bird (Stilled from afar—such marvel story tells— 55

By casual outbreak of his passionate
 words,
 And from their own pursuits in field or grove
 Drawn to his side by look or act of love Humane, and virtue of his innocent life)
 He went to hold companionship so free,
 So pure, so fraught with knowledge and
 delight, 61
 As to be likened in his Followers' minds
 To that which our first Parents, ere the
 fall
 From their high state darkened the Earth
 with fear,
 Held with all Kinds in Eden's blissful
 bowers. 65

Then question not that, 'mid the austere
 Band,
 Who breathe the air he breathed, tread
 where he trod,
 Some true Partakers of his loving spirit
 Do still survive, and, with those gentle
 hearts
 Consorted, Others, in the power, the
 faith, 70
 Of a baptized imagination, prompt
 To catch from Nature's humblest monitors
 Whate'er they bring of impulses sublime.

Thus sensitive must be the Monk, though pale
 With fasts, with vigils worn, depressed by
 years, 75
 Whom in a sunny glade I chanced to see,
 Upon a pine-tree's storm-uprooted trunk, Seated alone, with forehead sky-ward
 raised,
 Hands clasped above the crucifix he wore Appended to his bosom, and lips closed 80
 By the joint pressure of his musing mood
 And habit of his vow. That ancient
 Man—
 Nor haply less the Brother whom I
 marked,
 As we approached the Convent gate,
 aloft
 Looking far forth from his aerial cell, 85
 A young Ascetic—Poet, Hero, Sage,
 He might have been, Lover belike he
 was—

If they received into a conscious ear
 The notes whose first faint greeting startled me,
 Whose sedulous iteration thrilled with
 joy 90
 My heart—may have been moved like me to think,
 Ah! not like me who walk in the world's ways,
 On the great Prophet, styled the Voice
of One Crying amid the wilderness, and given,
 Now that their snows must melt, their herbs and flowers 95
 Revive, their obstinate winter pass away,
 That awful name to Thee, thee, simple Cuckoo,
 Wandering in solitude, and evermore Foretelling and proclaiming, ere thou
 leave 99
 This thy last haunt beneath Italian skies
 To carry thy glad tidings over heights Still loftier, and to climes more near the Pole.

Voice 'of the Desert, fare-thee-well ;
 sweet Bird !
 If that substantial title please thee more,
 Farewell !—but go thy way, no need hast
 thou 105
 Of a good wish sent after thee ; from
 bower
 To bower as green, from sky to sky as
 clear,
 Thee gentle breezes waft—or airs that meet Thy course and sport around thee softly fan—
 Till Night, descending upon hill and vale, Grants to thy mission a brief term of silence, 111
 And folds thy pinions up in blest repose.

XV.

AT THE CONVENT OF CAMALDOLI.

GRIEVE for the Man who hither came
 bereft,
 And seeking consolation from above ;
 Nor grieve the less that skill to him was left
 To paint this picture of his lady-love :

Can she, a blessed saint, the work approve? 5
 And O, good Brethren of the cowl, a thing
 So fair, to which with peril he must cling,
 Destroy in pity, or with care remove.
 That bloom—those eyes—can they assist to bind
 Thoughts that would stray from Heaven?
 The dream must cease 10
 To be ; by Faith, not sight, his soul must
 live ;
 Else will the enamoured Monk too surely find How wide a space can part from inward
 peace
 The most profound repose his cell can give.

XVI.

CONTINUED.

THE world forsaken, all its busy cares
 And stirring interests shunned with desperate flight,
 All trust abandoned in the healing might
 Of virtuous action ; all that courage dares,
 Labour accomplishes, or patience bears—
 Those helps rejected, they, whose minds
 perceive 6
 How subtly works man's weakness, sighs may heave
 For such a One beset with cloistral snares.
 Father of Mercy ! rectify his view,
 If with his vows this object ill agree ; 10
 Shed over it Thy grace, and thus subdue
 Imperious passion in a heart set free :—
 That earthly love may to herself be true,
 Give him a soul that cleaveth unto Thee¹.

XVII.

AT THE EREMIT OR UPPER CONVENT OF CAMALDOLI.

WHAT aim had they, the Pair of Monks, in size Enormous, dragged, while side by side
 they sate,
 By panting steers up to this convent gate?

How, with empurpled cheeks and pampered eyes,
Dare they confront the lean austerities 5
Of Brethren who, here fixed, on Jesu
wait
In sackcloth, and God's anger deprecate Through all that humbles flesh and mor-tifies?
Strange contrast!—verily the world of
dreams,
Where mingle, as for mockery combined,
Things in their very essences at strife, 11 Shows not a sight incongruous as the extremes
That everywhere, before the thoughtful
mind,
Meet on the solid ground of waking life¹.

AT VALLOMBROSA.

Thick as autumnal leaves that strew the brooks
In Vallombrosa, where Etrurian shades
High over-arch'd embower².

PARADISE LOST.

“VALLOMBROSA—I longed in thy shadiest
wood
To slumber, reclined on the moss-covered
floor!”
Fond wish that was granted at last, and
the Flood,
That lulled me asleep, bids me listen once
more.
Its murmur how soft! as it falls down the
steep, 5
Near that Cell—yon sequestered Retreat high in air—
Where our Milton was wont lonely vigils to keep
For converse with God, sought through study and prayer.
The Monks still repeat the tradition with
pride,
And its truth who shall doubt? for his Spirit is here; 10
In the cloud-piercing rocks doth her grandeur abide,

In the pines pointing heavenward her beauty austere;
In the flower-besprent meadows his genius we trace Turned to humbler delights, in which youth might confide,
That would yield him fit help while pre-figuring that Place 15
Where, if Sin had not entered, Love never had died.

When with life lengthened out came a desolate time,
And darkness and danger had compassed him round,
With a thought he would flee to these haunts of his prime,
And here once again a kind shelter be
found. 20
And let me believe that when nightly the
Muse
Did waft him to Sion, the glorified hill, Here also, on some favoured height, he would choose To wander, and drink inspiration at
will.

Vallombrosa! of thee I first heard in the page 25
Of that holiest of Bards, and the name for
my mind
Had a musical charm, which the winter of age
And the changes it brings had no power to unbind.
And now, ye Miltonian shades! under
you
I repose, nor am forced from sweet fancy to part, 30
While your leaves I behold and the brooks
they will strew,
And the realised vision is clasped to my
heart.

Even so, and unblamed, we rejoice as we
may
In Forms that must perish, frail objects
of sense;
Unblamed—if the Soul be intent on the
day 35
When the Being of Beings shall summon her hence.

For he and he only with wisdom is blest Who, gathering true pleasures wherever they grow,
 Looks up in all places, for joy or for
 rest,
 To the Fountain whence Time and Eternity flow. 40

AT FLORENCE.

UNDER the shadow of a stately Pile,
 The dome of Florence, pensive and alone, Nor giving heed to aught that passed the
 while,
 I stood, and gazed upon a marble stone,
 The laurell'd Dante's favourite seat. A
 throne, 5
 In just esteem, it rivals; though no style
 Be there of decoration to beguile
 The mind, depressed by thought of greatness flown.
 As a true man, who long had served the
 lyre,
 I gazed with earnestness, and dared no
 more. 10
 But in his breast the mighty Poet bore
 A Patriot's heart, warm with undying
 fire.
 Bold with the thought, in reverence I sate
 down,
 And, for a moment, filled that empty
 Throne.

BEFORE THE PICTURE OF THE BAPTIST, BY RAPHAEL, IN THE GALLERY AT FLORENCE.

THE Baptist might have been ordained to cry
 Forth from the towers of that huge Pile, wherein
 His Father served Jehovah; but how win
 Due audience, how for aught but scorn
 defy
 The obstinate pride and wanton revelry 5
 Of the Jerusalem below, her sin
 And folly, if they with united din

Drown not at once mandate and prophesy?
 Therefore the Voice spake from the Desert, thence
 To Her, as to her opposite in peace, 10
 Silence, and holiness, and innocence,
 To Her and to all Lands its warning sent,
 Crying with earnestness that might not
 cease,
 "Make straight a highway for the Lord—repent!"

XXI.

AT FLORENCE.—FROM MICHAEL ANGELO¹.

RAPT above earth by power of one fair
 face,
 Hers in whose sway alone my heart delights,
 I mingle with the blest on those pure
 heights
 Where Man, yet mortal, rarely finds a
 place.
 With Him who made the Work that Work accords 5
 So well, that by its help and through His
 grace
 I raise my thoughts, inform my deeds and
 words,
 Clasping her beauty in my soul's embrace.
 Thus, if from two fair eyes mine cannot
 turn,
 I feel how in their presence doth abide 10
 Light which to God is both the way and
 guide;
 And, kindling at their lustre, if I burn,
 My noble fire emits the joyful ray
 That through the realms of glory shines for aye.

¹ This and the following Sonnet may possibly have been two of the fifteen Sonnets which in 1805 Wordsworth essayed to translate from the Italian of Michael Angelo. A rough draft of No. xxii. is given by Mr. Dykes Campbell from a note-book belonging to S. T. Coleridge. See Coleridge's Poetical Works, p. 474. Mr. Campbell, unfortunately, does not give the date of the entry, or of the note-book.—Ed.

XXII.

AT FLORENCE.—FROM MICHAEL ANGELO.

ETERNAL Lord! eased of a cumbrous load,
 And loosened from the world, I turn to
 Thee;
 Shun, like a shattered bark, the storm,
 and flee
 To Thy protection for a safe abode.
 The crown of thorns, hands pierced upon the tree, 5
 The meek, benign, and lacerated face,
 To a sincere repentance promise grace,
 To the sad soul give hope of pardon free.
 With justice mark not Thou, O Light
 divine,
 My fault, nor hear it with Thy sacred
 ear; 10
 Neither put forth that way Thy arm
 severe;
 Wash with Thy blood my sins; thereto incline
 More readily the more my years require Help, and forgiveness speedy and entire.

XXIII.

AMONG THE RUINS OF A CONVENT
IN THE APENNINES.

YE Trees! whose slender roots entwine
 Altars that piety neglects;
 Whose infant arms enclasp the shrine
 Which no devotion now respects;
 If not a straggler from the herd 5
 Here ruminates, nor shrouded bird,
 Chanting her low-voiced hymn, take pride
 In aught that ye would grace or hide—
 How sadly is your love misplaced,
 Fair Trees, your bounty run to waste! 10
 Ye, too, wild Flowers! that no one heeds,
 And ye—full often spurned as weeds—
 In beauty clothed, or breathing sweetness
 From fractured arch and mouldering
 wall—
 Do but more touchingly recall 15
 Man's headstrong violence and Time's fleetness,
 Making the precincts ye adorn
 Appear to sight still more forlorn.

XXIV.

IN LOMBARDY.

SEE, where his difficult way that Old Man wins
 Bent by a load of Mulberry leaves!—most hard Appears his lot, to the small Worm's compared,
 For whom his toil with early day begins.
 Acknowledging no task-master, at will 5
 (As if her labour and her ease were twins)
She seems to work, at pleasure to lie
 still;—
 And softly sleeps within the thread she spins.
 So fare they—the Man serving as her Slave.
 Ere long their fates do each to each conform: 10
 Both pass into new being,—but the Worm,
 Transfigured, sinks into a hopeless grave;
His volent Spirit will, he trusts, ascend
 To bliss unbounded, glory without end.

XXV.

AFTER LEAVING ITALY.

FAIR Land! Thee all men greet with joy;
 how few,
 Whose souls take pride in freedom, virtue,
 fame,
 Part from thee without pity dyed in
 shame:
 I could not—while from Venice we withdrew,
 Led on till an Alpine strait confined our
 view 5
 Within its depths, and to the shore we came
 Of Lago Morto, dreary sight and name, Which o'er sad thoughts a sadder colour ing threw.
 Italia! on the surface of thy spirit,
 (Too aptly embled by that torpid lake)
 Shall a few partial breezes only creep?— 11
 Be its depths quickened; what thou dost inherit
 Of the world's hopes, dare to fulfil; awake, Mother of Heroes, from thy death-like sleep!

XXVI.

CONTINUED.

As indignation mastered grief, my tongue
Spake bitter words; words that did ill
agree

With those rich stores of Nature's imagery,
And divine Art, that fast to memory clung—

Thy gifts, magnificent Region, ever young
In the sun's eye, and in his sister's
sight 6

How beautiful! how worthy to be sung
In strains of rapture, or subdued delight!
I feign not; witness that unwelcome shock
That followed the first sound of German
speech, 10

Caught the far-winding barrier Alps
among.

In that announcement, greeting seemed to mock

Parting; the casual word had power to reach

My heart, and filled that heart with conflict strong.

COMPOSED AT RYDAL ON MAY MORNING, 1838.

of 1838; vol. of 1842.]

IF with old love of you, dear Hills! I
share

New love of many a rival image brought From far, forgive the wanderings of my
thought:

Nor art thou wronged, sweet May! when I compare

Thy present birth-morn with thy last, so
fair, 5

So rich to me in favours. For my lot
Then was, within the famed Egerian Grot
To sit and muse, fanned by its dewy air Mingling with thy soft breath! That morning too,

Warblers I heard their joy unbosoming 10
Amid the sunny, shadowy, Colosseum;
Heard them, unchecked by aught of sad-dening hue,

For victories there won by flower-crowned
Spring,
Chant in full choir their innocent Te Deum.

XXVIII.

THE PILLAR OF TRAJAN.

[Composed 1825.—Published 1827 1.]

WHERE towers are crushed, and unforbidden weeds

O'er mutilated arches shed their seeds;
And temples, doomed to milder change,
unfold

A new magnificence that vies with old;
Firm in its pristine majesty hath stood 5
A votive Column, spared by fire and
flood:—

And, though the passions of man's fretful
race

Have never ceased to eddy round its base,
Not injured more by touch of meddling
hands

Than a lone obelisk, 'mid Nubian sands, 10
Or aught in Syrian deserts left to save From death the memory of the good and brave.

Historic figures round the shaft embost
Ascend, with lineaments in air not lost:
Still as he turns, the charmed spectator
sees 15

Group winding after group, with dreamlike ease;

Triumphs in sun-bright gratitude dis-
played,

Or softly stealing into modest shade.
—So, pleased with purple clusters, to en-
twine

Some lofty elm-tree, mounts the daring
vine; 20

The woodbine so, with spiral grace, and breathes

Wide-spreading odours from her flowery wreaths.

1 Included among Poems of Sentiment and Reflection in edd. 1827-43. First placed in this Series in ed. 1845. The preceding Sonnet (xxvii.) was included amongst the Miscellaneous Sonnets in the volume of 1842, and first found its present place in ed. 1845.—Ed.

Borne by the Muse from rills in shepherds' ears
 Murmuring but one smooth story for all years,
 I gladly commune with the mind and heart 25
 Of him who thus survives by classic art,
 His actions witness, venerate his mien,
 And study Trajan as by Pliny seen;
 Behold how fought the Chief whose conquering sword Stretched far as earth might own a single lord; 30
 In the delight of moral prudence schooled,
 How feelingly at home the Sovereign ruled;
 Best of the good—in pagan faith allied
 To more than Man, by virtue deified.

Memorial Pillar! 'mid the wrecks of Time 35
 Preserve thy charge with confidence sublime—
 The exultations, pomps, and cares of Rome,
 Whence half the breathing world received its doom;
 Things that recoil from language; that, if shown 39
 By apter pencil, from the light had flown.
 A Pontiff, Trajan here the Gods implores,
There greets an Embassy from Indian shores;
 Lo! he harangues his cohorts—there the storm
 Of battle meets him in authentic form!
 Unharnessed, naked, troops of Moorish horse 45
 Sweep to the charge; more high, the Dacian force,
 To hoof and finger mailed;—yet, high or low,

None bleed, and none lie prostrate but the foe;
 In every Roman, through all turns of fate,
 Is Roman dignity inviolate; 50
 Spirit in him pre-eminent, who guides,
 Supports, adorns, and over all presides;
 Distinguished only by inherent state
 From honoured Instruments that round him wait;
 Rise as he may, his grandeur scorns the test 55
 Of outward symbol, nor will deign to rest
 On aught by which another is deprest.
 —Alas! that One thus disciplined could toil
 To enslave whole nations on their native soil;
 So emulous of Macedonian fame, 60
 That, when his age was measured with his aim,
 He drooped, 'mid else unclouded victories,
 And turned his eagles back with deep-drawn sighs:
 O weakness of the Great! O folly of the Wise!

Where now the haughty Empire that was spread 65
 With such fond hope? her very speech is dead;
 Yet glorious Art the power of Time defies,
 And Trajan still, through various enterprise,
 Mounts, in this fine illusion, toward the skies:
 Still are we present with the imperial Chief, 70
 Nor cease to gaze upon the bold Relief
 Till Rome, to silent marble unconfined, Becomes with all her years a vision of the Mind.

The Egyptian Maid;

OR,

The Romance of the Water Lily.

For the names and persons in the following poem see the "History of the renowned Prince Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table;" for the rest the Author is answerable; only it may be proper to add that the Lotus, with the bust of the Goddess appearing to rise out of the full-blown flower, was suggested by the beautiful work of ancient art, once included among the Townley Marbles, and now in the British Museum.

WHILE Merlin paced the Cornish sands,
Forth-looking toward the rocks of Scilly,
The pleased Enchanter was aware Of a bright Ship that seemed to hang in
air,

Yet was she work of mortal hands, 5
And took from men her name—THE WATER LILY.

Soft was the wind, that landward blew;
And, as the Moon, o'er some dark hill
ascendant,

Grows from a little edge of light
To a full orb, this Pinnacle bright 10
Became, as nearer to the coast she drew,
More glorious, with spread sail and streaming pendant.

Upon this wingèd Shape so fair
Sage Merlin gazed with admiration:
Her lineaments, thought he, surpass 15 Aught that was ever shown in magic
glass;

Was ever built with patient care;
Or, at a touch, produced by happiest transformation.

Now, though a Mechanist, whose skill Shames the degenerate grasp of modern science, 20

Grave Merlin (and belike the more

For practising occult and perilous lore)
Was subject to a freakish will That sapped good thoughts, or scared them with defiance.

Provoked to envious spleen, he cast 25
An altered look upon the advancing Stranger

Whom he had hailed with joy, and cried,

"My Art shall help to tame her pride—"
Anon the breeze became a blast,
And the waves rose, and sky portended danger. 30

With thrilling word, and potent sign Traced on the beach, his work the Sorcerer urges;

The clouds in blacker clouds are lost,
Like spiteful Fiends that vanish, crossed
By Fiends of aspect more malign; 35
And the winds roused the Deep with fiercer scourges.

But worthy of the name she bore
Was this Sea-flower, this buoyant Galley;
Supreme in loveliness and grace
Of motion, whether in the embrace 40
Of trusty anchorage, or scudding o'er
The main flood roughened into hill and valley.

Behold, how wantonly she laves
Her sides, the Wizard's craft confound-
ing;

Like something out of Ocean sprung 45
To be for ever fresh and young,
Breasts the sea-flashes, and huge waves Top-gallant high, rebounding and rebounding!

But Ocean under magic heaves,
And cannot spare the Thing he cherished: 50

Ah! what avails that she was fair,
Luminous, blithe, and debonair?
The storm has stripped her of her leaves;
The Lily floats no longer!—She hath perished.

Grieve for her, she deserves no less; 55
So like, yet so unlike, a living Creature!
No heart had she, no busy brain;
Though loved, she could not love again;
Though pitied, feel her own distress;
Nor aught that troubles us, the fools of
Nature. 60

Yet is there cause for gushing tears;
So richly was this Galley laden,
A fairer than herself she bore,
And, in her struggles, cast ashore;
A lovely One, who nothing hears 65
Of wind or wave—a meek and guileless Maiden.

Into a cave had Merlin fled From mischief, caused by spells himself had muttered;
And while, repentant all too late,
In moody posture there he sate, 70
He heard a voice, and saw, with half-raised head,
A Visitant by whom these words were uttered:—

“On Christian service this frail Bark Sailed” (hear me, Merlin!) “under high protection,
Though on her prow a sign of heathen
power 75
Was carved—a Goddess with a Lily
flower,
The old Egyptian's emblematic mark
Of joy immortal and of pure affection.

“Her course was for the British strand;
Her freight, it was a Damsel peer-
less;
God reigns above, and Spirits strong 81
May gather to avenge this wrong
Done to the Princess, and her Land Which she in duty left, sad but not cheer-
less.

“And to Caerleon's loftiest tower 85
Soon will the Knights of Arthur's Table
A cry of lamentation send;
And all will weep who there attend,
To grace that Stranger's bridal hour, 89
For whom the sea was made unnavi-gable.

“Shame! should a Child of royal line Die through the blindness of thy malice?”
Thus to the Necromancer spake
Nina, the Lady of the Lake,
A gentle Sorceress, and benign, 95
Who ne'er embittered any good man's chalice.

“What boots,” continued she, “to mourn?
To expiate thy sin endeavour:
From the bleak isle where she is laid, 99
Fetched by our art, the Egyptian Maid
May yet to Arthur's court be borne Cold as she is, ere life be fled for ever.

“My pearly Boat, a shining Light,
That brought me down that sunless river,
Will bear me on from wave to wave, 105
And back with her to this sea-cave;—
Then Merlin! for a rapid flight Through air, to thee my Charge will I deliver.

“The very swiftest of thy cars 109
Must, when my part is done, be ready;
Meanwhile, for further guidance, look Into thy own prophetic book;
And, if that fail, consult the Stars
To learn thy course; farewell! be prompt and steady.”

This scarcely spoken, she again 115
 Was seated in her gleaming shallop,
 That, o'er the yet-distempered Deep,
 Pursued its way with bird-like sweep,
 Or like a steed, without a rein,
 Urged o'er the wilderness in sportive gallop. 120

Soon did the gentle Nina reach
 That Isle without a house or haven;
 Landing, she found not what she sought,
 Nor saw of wreck or ruin aught 124
 But a carved Lotus cast upon the beach
 By the fierce waves, a flower in marble graven.

Sad relique, but how fair the while!
 For gently each from each retreating With backward curve, the leaves revealed
 The bosom half, and half concealed, 130
 Of a Divinity, that seemed to smile
 On Nina, as she passed, with hopeful greeting.

No quest was hers of vague desire,
 Of tortured hope and purpose shaken!
 Following the margin of a bay, 135
 She spied the lonely Cast-away,
 Unmarred, unstripped of her attire,
 But with closed eyes,—of breath and bloom forsaken.

Then Nina, stooping down, embraced,
 With tenderness and mild emotion, 140
 The Damsel, in that trance embound;
 And, while she raised her from the
 ground,
 And in the pearly shallop placed,
 Sleep fell upon the air, and stilled the ocean.

The turmoil hushed, celestial springs 145
 Of music opened, and there came a blending
 Of fragrance, underived from earth,
 With gleams that owed not to the sun
 their birth,
 And that soft rustling of invisible wings
 Which Angels make, on works of love descending. 150

And Nina heard a sweeter voice Than if the Goddess of the flower had spoken:

“Thou hast achieved, fair Dame! what none

Less pure in spirit could have done;
 Go, in thy enterprise rejoice! 155

Air, earth, sea, sky, and heaven, success betoken.”

So cheered, she left that Island bleak,
 A bare rock of the Scilly cluster;
 And, as they traversed the smooth brine,
 The self-illumined Brigantine 160
 Shed, on the Slumberer's cold wan cheek
 And pallid brow, a melancholy lustre.

Fleet was their course, and when they
 came

To the dim cavern, whence the river
 Issued into the salt-sea flood, 165

Merlin, as fixed in thought he stood,
 Was thus accosted by the Dame:

“Behold to thee my Charge I now deliver!

“But where attends thy chariot—
 where?”— 169

Quoth Merlin, “Even as I was bidden,
 So have I done; as trusty as thy barge
 My vehicle shall prove—O precious
 Charge!

If this be sleep, how soft! if death, how
 fair!

Much have my books disclosed, but the end is hidden.”

He spake; and gliding into view 175
 Forth from the grotto's dimmest chamber

Came two mute Swans, whose plumes of dusky white

Changed, as the pair approached the light,
 Drawing an ebon car, their hue
 (Like clouds of sunset) into lucid amber.

Once more did gentle Nina lift 181
 The Princess, passive to all changes:

The car received her:—then up-went Into the ethereal element

The Birds with progress smooth and swift 185

As thought, when through bright regions memory ranges.

Sage Merlin, at the Slumberer's side, Instructs the Swans their way to measure;

And soon Caerleon's towers appeared,
And notes of minstrelsy were heard 190
From rich pavilions spreading wide,
For some high day of long-expected pleasure.

Awe-stricken stood both Knights and Dames
Ere on firm ground the car alighted;
Eftsoons astonishment was past, 195
For in that face they saw the last
Last lingering look of clay, that tames
All pride; by which all happiness is blighted.

Said Merlin: "Mighty King, fair Lords,
Away with feast and tilt and tourney! 200
Ye saw, throughout this royal House,
Ye heard, a rocking marvellous
Of turrets, and a clash of swords
Self-shaken, as I closed my airy journey.

Lo! by a destiny well known 205
To mortals, joy is turned to sorrow;
This is the wished-for Bride, the Maid
Of Egypt, from a rock conveyed Where she by shipwreck had been thrown;
Ill sight! but grief may vanish ere the morrow." 210

"Though vast thy power, thy words are
weak," Exclaimed the King, "a mockery hateful;
Dutiful Child, her lot how hard!
Is this her piety's reward?
Those watery locks, that bloodless cheek!
O winds without remorse! O shore ungrateful! 216

"Rich robes are fretted by the moth; Towers, temples, fall by stroke of thunder;
Will that, or deeper thoughts, abate
A Father's sorrow for her fate? 220
He will repent him of his troth;
His brain will burn, his stout heart split asunder.

"Alas! and I have caused this woe;
For, when my prowess from invading Neighbours 224
Had freed his Realm, he plighted word
That he would turn to Christ our Lord,
And his dear Daughter on a Knight bestow
Whom I should choose for love and matchless labours.

"Her birth was heathen; but a fence
Of holy Angels round her hovered: 230
A Lady added to my court
So fair, of such divine report
And worship, seemed a recompense For fifty kingdoms by my sword recovered.

"Ask not for whom, O Champions true!
She was reserved by me her life's betrayer; 236
She who was meant to be a bride
Is now a corse: then put aside Vain thoughts, and speed ye, with observance due
Of Christian rites, in Christian ground to lay her." 240

"The tomb," said Merlin, "may not close Upon her yet, earth hide her beauty;
Not froward to thy sovereign will Esteem me, Liege! if I, whose skill
Wafted her hither, interpose 245
To check this pious haste of erring duty.

"My books command me to lay bare
The secret thou art bent on keeping:
Here must a high attest be given,
What Bridegroom was for her ordained by Heaven: 250
And in my glass significant there are Of things that may to gladness turn this weeping.

"For this, approaching, One by One, Thy Knights must touch the cold hand of the Virgin;
So, for the favoured One, the Flower may bloom 255
Once more: but, if unchangeable her
doom,
If life departed be for ever gone,
Some blest assurance, from this cloud emerging,

“May teach him to bewail his loss ;
 Not with a grief that, like a vapour,
 rises 260
 And melts ; but grief devout that shall endure,
 And a perpetual growth secure
 Of purposes which no false thought shall cross,
 A harvest of high hopes and noble enterprises.”

“So be it,” said the King ;—“anon, 265 Here, where the Princess lies, begin the trial ;
 Knights each in order as ye stand
 Step forth.”—To touch the pallid hand Sir Agravaine advanced ; no sign he won
 From Heaven or earth ;—Sir Kaye had like denial. 270

Abashed, Sir Dinas turned away ;
 Even for Sir Percival was no disclo-
 sure ;
 Though he, devoutest of all Champions, ere
 He reached that ebon car, the bier Whereon diffused like snow the Damsel
 lay, 275
 Full thrice had crossed himself in meek composure.

Imagine (but ye Saints ! who can ?)
 How in still air the balance trembled—
 The wishes, peradventure the despites
 That overcame some not ungenerous
 Knights ; 280
 And all the thoughts that lengthened out a span
 Of time to Lords and Ladies thus assembled.

What patient confidence was here !
 And there how many bosoms panted !
 While drawing toward the car Sir
 Gawaine, mailed 285
 For tournament, his beaver veiled,
 And softly touched ; but, to his princely
 cheer
 And high expectancy, no sign was granted.

Next, disencumbered of his harp,
 Sir Tristram, dear to thousands as a brother, 290
 Came to the proof, nor grieved that there ensued
 No change ;—the fair Izonda he had wooded
 With love too true, a love with pangs too sharp,
 From hope too distant, not to dread
 another.

Not so Sir Launcelot ;—from Heaven’s
 grace 295
 A sign he craved, tired slave of vain
 contrition ;
 The royal Guinever looked passing glad When his touch failed.—Next came Sir Galahad ;
 He paused, and stood entranced by that still face
 Whose features he had seen in noontide vision. 300

For late, as near a murmuring stream
 He rested ’mid an arbour green and shady,
 Nina, the good Enchantress, shed
 A light around his mossy bed ;
 And, at her call, a waking dream 305
 Prefigured to his sense the Egyptian Lady.

Now, while his bright-haired front he
 bowed,
 And stood, far-kenned by mantle furred
 with ermine,
 As o’er the insensate Body hung
 The enrapt, the beautiful, the young,
 Belief sank deep into the crowd 311
 That he the solemn issue would determine.

Nor deem it strange ; the Youth had won
 That very mantle on a day of glory,
 The day when he achieved that matchless feat, 315
 The marvel of the PERILOUS SEAT,
 Which whosoe’er approached of strength was shorn,
 Though King or Knight the most renowned in story.

He touched with hesitating hand—
 And lo! those Birds, far-famed through Love's dominions, 320
 The Swans, in triumph clap their
 wings;
 And their necks play, involved in rings,
 Like sinless snakes in Eden's happy
 land;—
 "Mine is she," cried the Knight;—again they clapped their pinions.

"Mine was she—mineshe is, though dead,
 And to her name my soul shall cleave in sorrow;" 326
 Whereat a tender twilight streak
 Of colour dawned upon the Damsel's
 cheek;
 And her lips, quickening with uncertain
 red,
 Seemed from each other a faint warmth to borrow. 330

Deep was the awe, the rapture high,
 Of love emboldened, hope with dread
 entwining,
 When, to the mouth, relenting Death
 Allowed a soft and flower-like breath,
 Precursor to a timid sigh, 335
 To lifted eyelids, and a doubtful shining.

In silence did King Arthur gaze
 Upon the signs that pass away or tarry;
 In silence watched the gentle strife
 Of Nature leading back to life; 340
 Then eased his soul at length by praise
 Of God, and Heaven's pure Queen—the blissful Mary.

Then said he, "Take her to thy heart,
 Sir Galahad! a treasure, that God giveth,
 Bound by indissoluble ties to thee 345
 Through mortal change and immortality;
 Be happy and unenvied, thou who art
 A goodly Knight that hath no peer that liveth!"

Not long the Nuptials were delayed;
 And sage tradition still rehearses 350
 The pomp, the glory of that hour
 When toward the altar from her bower
 King Arthur led the Egyptian Maid,
 And Angels carolled these far-echoed verses;—

Who shrinks not from alliance 355
 Of evil with good Powers
 To God proclaims defiance,
 And mocks whom he adores.

A Ship to Christ devoted
 From the Land of Nile did go; 360
 Alas! the bright Ship floated,
 An Idol at her prow.

By magic domination,
 The Heaven-permitted vent
 Of purblind mortal passion, 365
 Was wrought her punishment.

The Flower, the Form within it,
 What served they in her need?
 Her port she could not win it,
 Nor from mishap be freed. 370

The tempest overcame her,
 And she was seen no more;
 But gently, gently blame her—
 She cast a Pearl ashore.

The Maid to Jesu hearkened, 375
 And kept to Him her faith,
 Till sense in death was darkened,
 Or sleep akin to death.

But Angels round her pillow
 Kept watch, a viewless band; 380
 And, billow favouring billow,
 She reached the destined strand.

Blest Pair! what'er befall you,
 Your faith in Him approve
 Who from frail earth can call you 385
 To bowers of endless love!

THE RIVER DUDDON.

A SERIES OF SONNETS¹.

[Composed between 1806-1820.—Published 1820.]

The River Duddon rises upon Wrynose Fell, on the confines of Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Lancashire; and, having served as a boundary to the two last Counties for the space of about twenty-five miles, enters the Irish Sea, between the Isle of Walney and the Lordship of Millum.

TO THE REV. DR. WORDSWORTH

(WITH THE SONNETS TO THE RIVER DUDDON, AND OTHER POEMS IN THIS COLLECTION, 1820).

[Composed Christmastide, 1819.—Published 1820.]

The Minstrels played their Christmas tune
To-night beneath my cottage-eaves;
While, smitten by a lofty moon,
The encircling laurels, thick with leaves,
Gave back a rich and dazzling sheen, 5
That overpowered their natural green.

Through hill and valley every breeze
Had sunk to rest with folded wings:
Keen was the air, but could not freeze,
Nor check, the music of the strings; 10
So stout and hardy were the band
That scraped the chords with strenuous hand!

And who but listened?—till was paid
Respect to every Inmate's claim:
The greeting given, the music played, 15
In honour of each household name,
Duly pronounced with lusty call,
And "Merry Christmas" wished to all!

O Brother! I revere the choice
That took thee from thy native hills; 20
And it is given thee to rejoice:
Though public care full often tills
(Heaven only witness of the toll)
A barren and ungrateful soil.

Yet, would that Thou, with me and mine, 25
Hadst heard this never-falling rite;
And seen on other faces shine
A true revival of the light
Which Nature and these rustic Powers,
In simple childhood, spread through ours! 30

For pleasure hath not ceased to wait
On these expected annual rounds;
Whether the rich man's sumptuous gate
Call forth the unelaborate sounds,
Or they are offered at the door 35
That guards the lowliest of the poor.

How touching, when, at midnight, sweep
Snow-muffled winds, and all is dark,
To hear—and sink again to sleep!
Or, at an earlier call, to mark, 40
By blazing fire, the still suspense
Of self-complacent innocence;

The mutual nod,—the grave disguise
Of hearts with gladness brimming o'er;
And some unbidden tears that rise 45
For names once heard, and heard no more;
Tears brightened by the serenade
For infant in the cradle laid.

Ah! not for emerald fields alone,
With ambient streams more pure and bright 50
Than fabled Cytherea's zone
Glistening before the Thunderer's sight,
Is to my heart of hearts endeared
The ground where we were born and reared!

¹ These Sonnets (No. xxvii. excepted) appeared early in 1820, in a volume entitled The River Duddon, A Series of Sonnets: Vaudracour and Julia; and other Poems. To which is annexed A Topographical Description of the Country of the Lakes, in the North of England. They were written at various intervals between 1806 and 1820. Sonnet No. xiv. (O Mountain Stream!) was written before April, 1807, when it first appeared amongst the Miscellaneous Sonnets of Poems in Two Volumes; and Sonnet No. xxvii. (Fallen, and diffused) was published in 1819, along with The Waggoner; included, in the collective (4 vol.) ed. of 1820, amongst the Miscellaneous Sonnets; and, in ed. 1827, transferred to its present place in this Series.—Ed.

Hall, ancient Manners! sure defence, 55
 Where they survive, of wholesome laws;
 Remnants of love whose modest sense
 Thus into narrow room withdraws;
 Hall, Usages of pristine mould,
 And ye that guard them, Mountains old! 60

Bear with me, Brother! quench the thought
 That slights this passion, or condemns;
 If thee fond Fancy ever brought
 From the proud margin of the Thames,
 And Lambeth's venerable towers, 65
 To humbler streams, and greener bowers.

Yes, they can make, who fall to find,
 Short leisure even in busiest days;
 Moments, to cast a look behind,
 And profit by those kindly rays 70
 That through the clouds do sometimes steal,
 And all the far-off past reveal.

Hence, while the imperial City's din
 Beats frequent on thy satiate ear,
 A pleased attention I may win 75
 To agitations less severe,
 That neither overwhelm nor cloy,
 But fill the hollow vale with joy!

I.

NOT envying Latian shades—if yet they
 throw
 A grateful coolness round that crystal
 Spring,
 Bandusia, prattling as when long ago
 The Sabine Bard was moved her praise to
 sing;
 Careless of flowers that in perennial blow Round the moist marge of Persian foun- 6
 tains cling;
 Heedless of Alpine torrents thundering Through ice-built arches radiant as heaven's bow;
 I seek the birthplace of a native Stream.—
 All hail, ye mountains! hail, thou morning light! 10
 Better to breathe at large on this clear
 height
 Than toil in needless sleep from dream to
 dream:
 Pure flow the verse, pure, vigorous, free,
 and bright,
 For Duddon, long-loved Duddon, is my theme!

II.

CHILD of the clouds! remote from every taint
 Of sordid industry thy lot is cast;
 Thine are the honours of the lofty waste;
 Not seldom, when with heat the valleys
 faint,
 Thy handmaid Frost with spangled tissue
 quaint 5
 Thy cradle decks;—to chant thy birth, thou hast
 No meaner Poet than the whistling Blast,
 And Desolation is thy Patron-saint!
 She guards thee, ruthless Power! who would not spare
 Those mighty forests, once the bison's
 screen, 10
 Where stalked the huge deer to his shaggy lair¹
 Through paths and alleys roofed with darkest green;
 Thousands of years before the silent air
 Was pierced by whizzing shaft of hunter keen!

III.

How shall I paint thee?—Be this naked
 stone
 My seat, while I give way to such intent; Pleased could my verse, a speaking monu-
 ment,
 Make to the eyes of men thy features
 known. 4
 But as of all those tripping lambs not one Outruns his fellows, so hath Nature lent
 To thy beginning nought that doth present
 Peculiar ground for hope to build upon.
 To dignify the spot that gives thee birth
 No sign of hoar Antiquity's esteem 10 Appears, and none of modern Fortune's
 care;
 Yet thou thyself hast round thee shed a gleam
 Of brilliant moss, instinct with freshness
 rare;
 Prompt offering to thy Foster-mother,
 Earth!

¹ The deer alluded to is the Leigh, a gigantic species long since extinct.

IV.

TAKE, cradled Nursling of the mountain,
 take
 This parting glance, no negligent adieu !
 A Protean change seems wrought while I
 pursue
 The curves, a loosely-scattered chain doth
 make ;
 Or rather thou appear'st a glistening snake,
 Silent, and to the gazer's eye untrue, 6
 Thridding with sinuous lapse the rushes,
 through
 Dwarf willows gliding, and by ferny brake.
 Starts from a dizzy steep the undaunted
 Rill
 Robed instantly in garb of snow-white foam ; 10
 And laughing dares the Adventurer, who hath clomb
 So high, a rival purpose to fulfil ; Else let the dastard backward wend, and
 roam,
 Seeking less bold achievement, where he will !

V.

SOLE listener, Duddon ! to the breeze that
 played
 With thy clear voice, I caught the fitful
 sound
 Wafted o'er sullen moss and craggy mound—
 Unfruitful solitudes, that seemed to upbraid
 The sun in heaven !—but now, to form a
 shade 5
 For Thee, green alders have together wound
 Their foliage ; ashes flung their arms
 around ;
 And birch-trees risen in silver colonnade.
 And thou hast also tempted here to rise,
 'Mid sheltering pines, this Cottage rude and grey ; 10
 Whose ruddy children, by the mother's
 eyes
 Carelessly watched, sport through the summer day,
 Thy pleased associates :—light as endless
 May
 On infant bosoms lonely Nature lies.

VI.

FLOWERS.

ERE yet our course was graced with social
 trees
 It lacked not old remains of hawthorn
 bowers,
 Where small birds warbled to their para-mours ;
 And, earlier still, was heard the hum of
 bees ;
 I saw them ply their harmless robberies,
 And caught the fragrance which the sundry flowers, 6
 Fed by the stream with soft perpetual
 showers,
 Plenteously yielded to the vagrant breeze.
 There bloomed the strawberry of the wilderness ;
 The trembling eyebright showed her sapphire blue, 10
 The thyme her purple, like the blush of Even ;
 And if the breath of some to no caress
 Invited, forth they peeped so fair to view,
 All kinds alike seemed favourites of Heaven.

VII.

“CHANGE me, some God, into that breathing rose !”
 The love-sick Stripling fancifully sighs,
 The envied flower beholding, as it lies
 On Laura's breast, in exquisite repose ;
 Or he would pass into her bird, that throws 5
 The darts of song from out its wiry cage ; Enraptured,—could he for himself engage
 The thousandth part of what the Nymph
 bestows ;
 And what the little careless innocent
 Ungraciously receives. Too daring choice !
 There are whose calmer mind it would
 content 11
 To be an uncult floweret of the glen,
 Fearless of plough and scythe ; or darkling wren
 That tunes on Duddon's banks her slender voice.

VIII.

WHAT aspect bore the Man who roved or fled,
 First of his tribe, to this dark dell—who first
 In this pellucid Current slaked his thirst?
 What hopes came with him? what designs were spread Along his path? His unprotected bed 5
 What dreams encompassed? Was the intruder nursed
 In hideous usages, and rights accursed,
 That thinned the living and disturbed the dead?
 No voice replies;—both air and earth are mute;
 And Thou, blue Streamlet, murmuring yield'st no more 10
 Than a soft record, that, whatever fruit
 Of ignorance thou might'st witness heretofore,
 Thy function was to heal and to restore,
 To soothe and cleanse, not madden and pollute!

IX.

THE STEPPING-STONES.

THE struggling Rill insensibly is grown
 Into a Brook of loud and stately march,
 Crossed ever and anon by plank or arch;
 And, for like use, lo! what might seem a zone
 Chosen for ornament—stone matched with
 stone 5
 In studied symmetry, with interspace
 For the clear waters to pursue their race Without restraint. How swiftly have they flown,
 Succeeding—still succeeding! Here the
 Child
 Puts, when the high-swoln Flood runs fierce and wild, 10
 His budding courage to the proof; and
 here
 Declining Manhood learns to note the sly
 And sure encroachments of infirmity, Thinking how fast time runs, life's end how near!

X.

THE SAME SUBJECT.

NOT so that Pair whose youthful spirits
 dance
 With prompt emotion, urging them to
 pass;
 A sweet confusion checks the Shepherd-lass;
 Blushing she eyes the dizzy flood askance;
 To stop ashamed—too timid to advance; 5
 She ventures once again—another pause!
 His outstretched hand He tauntingly withdraws—
 She sues for help with piteous utterance!
 Chidden she chides again; the thrilling
 touch
 Both feel, when he renews the wished-for
 aid: 10
 Ah! if their fluttering hearts should stir too much,
 Should beat too strongly, both may be betrayed.
 The frolic Loves, who, from yon high rock, see
 The struggle, clap their wings for victory!

XI.

THE FAERY CHASM.

NO fiction was it of the antique age:
 A sky-blue stone, within this sunless cleft,
 Is of the very footmarks unbereft Which tiny Elves impressed;—on that smooth stage
 Dancing with all their brilliant equipage 5
 In secret revels—haply after theft
 Of some sweet Babe—Flower stolen, and coarse Weed left
 For the distracted Mother to assuage Her grief with, as she might!—But, where, oh! where
 Is traceable a vestige of the notes 10
 That ruled those dances wild in character?—
 Deep underground? Or in the upper air,
 On the shrill wind of midnight? or where floats
 O'er twilight fields the autumnal gossa-mer?

XII.

HINTS FOR THE FANCY.

ON, loitering Muse—the swift Stream chides us—on!
Albeit his deep-worn channel doth im-mure
Objects immense portrayed in miniature, Wild shapes for many a strange comparison!
Niagaras, Alpine passes, and anon 5
Abodes of Naiads, calm abysses pure, Bright liquid mansions, fashioned to endure
When the broad oak drops, a leafless skeleton,
And the solidities of mortal pride, Palace and tower, are crumbled into
dust!— 10
The Bard who walks with Duddon for his
guide,
Shall find such toys of fancy thickly set:
Turn from the sight, enamoured Muse—
we must;
And, if thou canst, leave them without regret!

XIII.

OPEN PROSPECT.

HAIL to the fields—with Dwellings sprinkled o'er,
And one small hamlet, under a green hill Clustering, with barn and byre, and spouting mill!
A glance suffices;—should we wish for
more,
Gay June would scorn us. But when bleak winds roar 5
Through the stiff lance-like shoots of pollard ash,
Dread swell of sound! loud as the gusts that lash
The matted forests of Ontario's shore
By wasteful steel unsmitten—then would I Turn into port; and, reckless of the gale, 10
Reckless of angry Duddon sweeping by,
While the warm hearth exalts the mantling ale,

Laugh with the generous household heartily

At all the merry pranks of Donnerdale!

XIV.

[Comp. before April, 1807 (1806?).—Pub. 1807 1.]

O MOUNTAIN Stream! the Shepherd and his Cot
Are privileged Inmates of deep solitude;
Nor would the nicest Anchorite exclude
A field or two of brighter green, or plot
Of tillage-ground, that seemeth like a
spot 5
Of stationary sunshine:—thou hast viewed These only, Duddon! with their paths
renewed
By fits and starts, yet this contents thee
not.
Thee hath some awful Spirit impelled to
leave,
Utterly to desert, the haunts of men, 10
Though simple thy companions were and
few;
And through this wilderness a passage
cleave
Attended but by thy own voice, save when
The clouds and fowls of the air thy way pursue!

XV.

FROM this deep chasm, where quivering sunbeams play
Upon its loftiest crags, mine eyes behold
A gloomy NICHE, capacious, blank, and
cold;
A concave free from shrubs and mosses
grey;
In semblance fresh, as if, with dire
affray, 5
Some Statue, placed amid these regions
old
For tutelary service, thence had rolled,
Startling the flight of timid Yesterday!
Was it by mortals sculptured?—weary slaves
Of slow endeavour! or abruptly cast 10
Into rude shape by fire, with roaring blast

Tempestuously let loose from central caves?
Or fashioned by the turbulence of waves,
Then, when o'er highest hills the Deluge passed?

XVI.

AMERICAN TRADITION.

SUCH fruitless questions may not long
beguile
Or plague the fancy 'mid the sculptured shows
Conspicuous yet where Oroonoko flows;
There would the Indian answer with a
smile
Aimed at the White Man's ignorance the
while, 5
Of the GREAT WATERS telling how they
rose,
Covered the plains, and, wandering where they chose,
Mounted through every intricate defile,
Triumphant.—Inundation wide and deep,
O'er which his Fathers urged, to ridge and steep 10
Else unapproachable, their buoyant way;
And carved, on mural cliff's undreaded
side,
Sun, moon, and stars, and beast of chase or prey;
Whate'er they sought, shunned, loved, or deified¹!

XVII.

RETURN.

A DARK plume fetch me from yon blasted
yew,
Perched on whose top the Danish Raven croaks;
Aloft, the imperial Bird of Rome invokes Departed ages, shedding where he flew Loose fragments of wild wailing, that bestrew 5
The clouds and thrill the chambers of the
rocks;
And into silence hush the timorous flocks,
That, calmly couching while the nightly
dew

Moistened each fleece, beneath the twinkling stars
Slept amid that lone Camp on Hardknot's height², 10
Whose Guardians bent the knee to Jove and Mars:
Or near that mystic Round of Druid
frame
Tardily sinking by its proper weight Deep into patient Earth, from whose smooth breast it came!

XVIII.

SEATHWAITE CHAPEL.

SACRED Religion! "mother of form and
fear,"
Dread arbitress of mutable respect,
New rites ordaining when the old are wrecked,
Or cease to please the fickle worshipper; Mother of Love! (that name best suits thee here) 5
Mother of Love! for this deep vale, protect Truth's holy lamp, pure source of bright
effect,
Gifted to purge the vapoury atmosphere
That seeks to stifle it;—as in those days
When this low Pile³ a Gospel Teacher
knew, 10
Whose good works formed an endless retinue:
A Pastor such as Chaucer's verse portrays;
Such as the heaven-taught skill of Herbert
drew;
And tender Goldsmith crowned with deathless praise!

XIX.

TRIBUTARY STREAM.

MY frame hath often trembled with de-
light
When hope presented some far-distant
good,
That seemed from heaven descending,
like the flood
Of yon pure waters, from their aery height
Hurrying, with lordly Duddon to unite; 5

² See Note, p. 908. ³ See Note p. 908.

Who, 'mid a world of images imprest
 On the calm depth of his transparent
 breast,
 Appears to cherish most that Torrent
 white,
 The fairest, softest, liveliest of them all!
 And seldom hath ear listened to a tune so
 More lulling than the busy hum of Noon, Swoln by that voice—whose murmur
 musical
 Announces to the thirsty fields a boon Dewy and fresh, till showers again shall fall.

XX.

THE PLAIN OF DONNERDALE.

THE old inventive Poets, had they seen,
 Or rather felt, the entrancement that detains
 Thy waters, Duddon! 'mid these flowery
 plains;
 The still repose, the liquid lapse serene, Transferred to bowers imperishably
 green,
 Had beautified Elysium! But these chains
 Will soon be broken;—a rough course
 remains,
 Rough as the past; where Thou, of placid
 mien,
 Innocuous as a firstling of the flock,
 And countenanced like a soft cerulean
 sky,
 Shalt change thy temper; and, with many a shock
 Given and received in mutual jeopardy, Dance, like a Bacchanal, from rock to
 rock,
 Tossing her frantic thyrsus wide and
 high!

XXI.

WHENCE that low voice?—A whisper from
 the heart,
 That told of days long past, when here
 I roved
 With friends and kindred tenderly be-
 loved;
 Some who had early mandates to depart,

Yet are allowed to steal my path athwart
 By Duddon's side; once more do we unite,
 Once more beneath the kind Earth's tranquil light;
 And smothered joys into new being start.
 From her unworthy seat, the cloudy stall
 Of Time, breaks forth triumphant Memory;
 Her glistening tresses bound, yet light
 and free
 As golden locks of birch, that rise and fall
 On gales that breathe too gently to recall Aught of the fading year's inclemency!

XXII.

TRADITION.

A LOVE-LOBN Maid, at some far-distant
 time,
 Came to this hidden pool, whose depths surpass
 In crystal clearness Dian's looking-glass;
 And, gazing, saw that Rose, which from the prime Derives its name, reflected as the chime
 Of echo doth reverberate some sweet
 sound:
 The starry treasure from the blue pro-
 found
 She longed to ravish;—shall she plunge, or climb
 The humid precipice, and seize the guest
 Of April, smiling high in upper air?
 Desperate alternative! what fiend could
 dare
 To prompt the thought?—Upon the steep
 rock's breast
 The lonely Primrose yet renews its bloom,
 Untouched memento of her hapless doom!

XXIII.

SHEEP-WASHING.

SAD thoughts, avaunt!—partake we their blithe cheer
 Who gathered in betimes the unshorn flock
 To wash the fleece, where haply bands of
 rock,

Checking the stream, make a pool smooth and clear

As this we look on. Distant Mountains
hear, 5

Hear and repeat, the turmoil that unites Clamour of boys with innocent despites Of barking dogs, and bleatings from strange fear.

And what if Duddon's spotless flood receive

Unwelcome mixtures as the uncouth
noise 10

Thickens, the pastoral River will forgive Such wrong; nor need we blame the licensed joys,

Though false to Nature's quiet equipoise:
Frank are the sports, the stains are fugitive.

XXIV.

THE RESTING-PLACE.

MID-NOON is past;—upon the sultry mead No zephyr breathes, no cloud its shadow
throws:

If we advance unstrengthened by repose,
Farewell the solace of the vagrant reed!
This Nook—with woodbine hung and stragglng weed, 5

Tempting recess as ever pilgrim chose,
Half grot, half arbour—proffers to enclose Body and mind, from molestation freed,
In narrow compass—narrow as itself:

Or if the Fancy, too industrious Elf, 10
Be loth that we should breathe awhile exempt

From new incitements friendly to our task, Here wants not stealthy prospect, that may tempt

Loose Idless to forego her wily mask.

XXV.

METHINKS 'twere no unprecedented feat
Should some benignant Minister of air
Lift, and encircle with a cloudy chair,
The One for whom my heart shall ever beat
With tenderest love;—or, if a safer seat 5
Atween his downy wings be furnished,
there

Would lodge her, and the cherished burden bear

O'er hill and valley to this dim retreat!

Rough ways my steps have trod;—too rough and long

For her companionship; here dwells soft
ease: 10

With sweets that she partakes not some distaste

Mingles, and lurking consciousness of
wrong;

Languish the flowers; the waters seem to
waste

Their vocal charm; their sparklings cease to please.

XXVI.

RETURN, Content! for fondly I pursued,
Even when a child, the Streams—unheard,
unseen;

Through tangled woods, impending rocks
between;

Or, free as air, with flying inquest viewed
The sullen reservoirs whence their bold
brood— 5

Pure as the morning, fretful, boisterous,
keen,

Green as the salt-sea billows, white and
green—

Poured down the hills, a choral multitude!

Nor have I tracked their course for scanty
gains;

They taught me random cares and truant
joys, 10

That shield from mischief and preserve from stains

Vague minds, while men are growing out of boys;

Maturer Fancy owes to their rough noise Impetuous thoughts that brook not servile reins.

XXVII.

[Composed probably between 1815-1819.—Published 1819¹.]

FALLEN, and diffused into a shapeless
heap,

Or quietly self-buried in earth's mould,
Is that embattled House, whose massy

Flung from yon cliff a shadow large and cold.

There dwelt the gay, the bountiful, the bold; 5

Till nightly lamentations, like the sweep
Of winds—though winds were silent—struck a deep

And lasting terror through that ancient Hold.

Its line of Warriors fled;—they shrunk when tried

By ghostly power:—but Time's unsparing
hand 10

Hath plucked such foes, like weeds, from out the land;

And now, if men with men in peace abide,
All other strength the weakest may with-
stand,

All worse assaults may safely be defied.

XXVIII.

JOURNEY RENEWED.

I ROSE while yet the cattle, heat-opprest, Crowded together under rustling trees Brushed by the current of the water-
breeze;

And for their sakes, and love of all that
rest,

On Duddon's margin, in the sheltering
nest; 5

For all the startled scaly tribes that slink
Into his coverts, and each fearless link
Of dancing insects forged upon his breast;
For these, and hopes and recollections
worn

Close to the vital seat of human clay; 10
Glad meetings, tender partings, that up-
stay

The drooping mind of absence, by vows sworn

In his pure presence near the trysting
thorn—

I thanked the Leader of my onward way.

XXIX.

No record tells of lance opposed to lance,
Horse charging horse, 'mid these retired domains;

Tells that their turf drank purple from the veins

Of heroes, fallen, or struggling to advance,
Till doubtful combat issued in a trance 5
Of victory, that struck through heart and reins

Even to the inmost seat of mortal pains,
And lightened o'er the pallid countenance.

Yet, to the loyal and the brave, who lie
In the blank earth, neglected and for-
lorn, 10

The passing Winds memorial tribute pay;
The Torrents chant their praise, inspiring
scorn

Of power usurped; with proclamation
high,

And glad acknowledgment, of lawful sway.

XXX.

WHO swerves from innocence, who makes divorce

Of that serene companion—a good name, Recovers not his loss; but walks with
shame,

With doubt, with fear, and haply with remorse:

And oft-times he—who, yielding to the
force 5

Of chance-temptation, ere his journey end,
From chosen comrade turns, or faithful
friend—

In vain shall rue the broken intercourse.
Not so with such as loosely wear the chain

That binds them, pleasant River! to thy
side:— 10

Through the rough copse wheel thou with hasty stride;

I choose to saunter o'er the grassy plain,
Sure, when the separation has been tried,
That we, who part in love, shall meet again.

XXXI.

THE KIRK OF ULPHA to the pilgrim's eye
Is welcome as a star, that doth present Its shining forehead through the peaceful rent

Of a black cloud diffused o'er half the sky:
Or as a fruitful palm-tree towering high 5
O'er the parched waste beside an Arab's
tent;

Or the Indian tree whose branches, downward bent,

Take root again, a boundless canopy.
 How sweet were leisure! could it yield no
 more Than 'mid that wave-washed Churchyard to recline, 10
 From pastoral graves extracting thoughts
 divine ;
 Or there to pace, and mark the summits hoar
 Of distant moon-lit mountains faintly
 shine,
 Soothed by the unseen River's gentle roar.

XXXII.

NOT hurled precipitous from steep to
 steep ;
 Lingering no more 'mid flower-enamelled lands
 And blooming thickets ; nor by rocky bands
 Held ; but in radiant progress toward the
 Deep
 Where mightiest rivers into powerless
 sleep 5
 Sink, and forget their nature—now expands
 Majestic Duddon, over smooth flat sands
 Gliding in silence with unfettered sweep!
 Beneath an ampler sky a region wide
 Is opened round him :—hamlets, towers, and towns, 10
 And blue-topped hills, behold him from
 afar ;
 In stately mien to sovereign Thames allied Spreading his bosom under Kentish
 downs,
 With commerce freighted, or triumphant war.

XXXIII.

CONCLUSION.

BUT here no cannon thunders to the gale ;
 Upon the wave no haughty pendants cast
 A crimson splendour : lowly is the mast

That rises here, and humbly spread, the
 sail ;
 While, less disturbed than in the narrow
 Vale 5
 Through which with strange vicissitudes
 he passed,
 The Wanderer seeks that receptacle vast
 Where all his unambitious functions fail.
 And may thy Poet, cloud-born Stream !
 be free—
 The sweets of earth contentedly resigned,
 And each tumultuous working left behind 11
 At seemly distance—to advance like Thee ; Prepared, in peace of heart, in calm of
 mind
 And soul, to mingle with Eternity !

XXXIV.

AFTER-THOUGHT.

*I THOUGHT of Thee, my partner and my
 guide,
 As being past away.—Vain sympathies !
 For, backward, Duddon! as I cast my
 eyes,
 I see what was, and is, and will abide ;
 Still glides the Stream, and shall for ever
 glide ; 5
 The Form remains, the Function never
 dies ;
 While we, the brave, the mighty, and the
 wise,
 We Men, who in our morn of youth defied
 The elements, must vanish ;—be it so !
 Enough, if something from our hands have
 power 10
 To live, and act, and serve the future hour ;
 And if, as toward the silent tomb we go,
 Through love, through hope, and faith's transcendent dower,
 We feel that we are greater than we know.*

YARROW REVISITED, AND OTHER POEMS.

COMPOSED (TWO EXCEPTED) DURING A TOUR IN SCOTLAND, AND ON THE ENGLISH BORDER, IN THE AUTUMN OF 1831¹.

TO

SAMUEL ROGERS, ESQ.,

AS A TESTIMONY OF FRIENDSHIP AND ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF INTELLECTUAL OBLIGATIONS, THESE MEMORIALS ARE AFFECTIONATELY INSCRIBED.

RYDAL MOUNT, Dec. 11, 1834.

The following Stanzas are a memorial of a day passed with Sir Walter Scott and other Friends visiting the Banks of the Yarrow under his guidance, immediately before his departure from Abbotsford, for Naples.

The title "Yarrow Revisited" will stand in no need of explanation for Readers acquainted with the Author's previous poems suggested by that celebrated Stream.

I.

THE gallant Youth, who may have gained,
Or seeks, a "winsome Marrow,"
Was but an Infant in the lap
When first I looked on Yarrow;
Once more, by Newark's Castle-gate 5
Long left without a warder,
I stood, looked, listened, and with Thee,
Great Minstrel of the Border!

Grave thoughts ruled wide on that sweet
day,
Their dignity installing 10
In gentle bosoms, while sere leaves
Were on the bough, or falling;

But breezes played, and sunshine gleamed—

The forest to embolden;
Reddened the fiery hues, and shot 15
Transparence through the golden.

For busy thoughts the Stream flowed on
In foamy agitation;
And slept in many a crystal pool
For quiet contemplation: 20
No public and no private care
The freeborn mind enthraling,
We made a day of happy hours,
Our happy days recalling.

Brisk Youth appeared, the Morn of
Youth, 25
With freaks of graceful folly,— Life's temperate Noon, her sober Eve,
Her Night not melancholy;
Past, present, future, all appeared
In harmony united, 30
Like guests that meet, and some from far,
By cordial love invited.

¹ The poems of this series, with two exceptions (conjectured by Prof. Knight to be Nos. xv. and xvii.), were written during the autumn of 1831, and first published in the vol. of 1835 entitled, Yarrow Revisited, and Other Poems. In order to avoid needless repetition, separate chronological notes will not be added to the individual poems of the series, save where the particulars of composition or publication differ in some respect from those now given.—Ed.

And if, as Yarrow, through the woods And down the meadow ranging, Did meet us with unaltered face, 35 Though we were changed and changing ; If, then , some natural shadows spread Our inward prospect over, The soul's deep valley was not slow Its brightness to recover. 40	And what, for this frail world, were all That mortals do or suffer, Did no responsive harp, no pen, Memorial tribute offer ? Yea, what were mighty Nature's self ? 85 Her features, could they win us, Unhelped by the poetic voice That hourly speaks within us ?
Eternal blessings on the Muse, And her divine employment ! The blameless Muse, who trains her Sons For hope and calm enjoyment ; Albeit sickness, lingering yet, 45 Has o'er their pillow brooded ; And Care waylays their steps—a Sprite Not easily eluded.	Nor deem that localised Romance Plays false with our affections ; 90 Unsanctifies our tears—made sport For fanciful dejections : Ah, no ! the visions of the past Sustain the heart in feeling Life as she is—our changeful Life, 95 With friends and kindred dealing.
For thee, O SCOTT ! compelled to change Green Eildon-hill and Cheviot 50 For warm Vesuvio's vine-clad slopes ; And leave thy Tweed and Tiviot For mild Sorrento's breezy waves ; May classic Fancy, linking With native Fancy her fresh aid, 55 Preserve thy heart from sinking !	Bear witness, Ye, whose thoughts that day In Yarrow's groves were centred ; Who through the silent portal arch Of mouldering Newark entered ; 100 And clomb the winding stair that once Too timidly was mounted By the "last Minstrel," (not the last !) Ere he his Tale recounted.
Oh ! while they minister to thee, Each vying with the other, May Health return to mellow Age, With Strength, her venturous brother ; And Tiber, and each brook and rill 61 Renowned in song and story, With unimagined beauty shine, Nor lose one ray of glory !	Flow on for ever, Yarrow Stream ! 105 Fulfil thy pensive duty, Well pleased that future Bards should chant For simple hearts thy beauty ; To dream-light dear while yet unseen, Dear to the common sunshine, 110 And dearer still, as now I feel, To memory's shadowy moonshine !
For Thou, upon a hundred streams, 65 By tales of love and sorrow, Of faithful love, undaunted truth, Hast shed the power of Yarrow ; And streams unknown, hills yet unseen, Wherever they invite Thee, 70 At parent Nature's grateful call, With gladness must requite Thee.	II. ON THE DEPARTURE OF SIR WALTER SCOTT FROM ABBOTSFORD, FOR NAPLES.
A gracious welcome shall be thine, Such looks of love and honour As thy own Yarrow gave to me 75 When first I gazed upon her ; Beheld what I had feared to see, Unwilling to surrender Dreams treasured up from early days, The holy and the tender. 80	[Composed September, 1831.—Published 1833 (Literary Souvenir of Alaric Watts) ; vol. of 1835.] A TROUBLE, not of clouds, or weeping rain, Nor of the setting sun's pathetic light Engendered, hangs o'er Eildon's triple height : Spirits of Power, assembled there, com- plain For kindred Power departing from their sight ; 5

While Tweed, best pleased in chanting a blithe strain,
 Saddens his voice again, and yet again.
 Lift up your hearts, ye Mourners! for the
 might
 Of the whole world's good wishes with him goes;
 Blessings and prayers in nobler retinue
 Than sceptred king or laurelled conqueror knows, II
 Follow this wondrous Potentate. Be true,
 Ye winds of ocean, and the midland sea,
 Wafting your Charge to soft Parthenope!

III.

A PLACE OF BURIAL IN THE SOUTH OF SCOTLAND.

PART fenced by man, part by a rugged
 steep
 That curbs a foaming brook, a Graveyard lies;
 The hare's best couching-place for fearless sleep;
 Which moonlit elves, far seen by credulous
 eyes,
 Enter in dance. Of church, or sabbath ties,
 No vestige now remains; yet thither creep
 Bereft Ones, and in lowly anguish weep
 Their prayers out to the wind and naked
 skies.
 Proud tomb is none; but rudely-sculpt-
 tured knights,
 By humble choice of plain old times, are seen IO
 Level with earth, among the hillocks
 green:
 Union not sad, when sunny daybreak
 smites
 The spangled turf, and neighbouring thickets ring
 With jubilate from the choirs of spring!

IV.

ON THE SIGHT OF A MANSE IN THE SOUTH OF SCOTLAND.

SAY, ye far-travelled clouds, far-seeing
 hills—
 Among the happiest-looking homes of men Scattered all Britain over, through deep glen,

On airy upland, and by forest rills,
 And o'er wide plains cheered by the lark that trills 5
 His sky-born warblings—does aught meet your ken
 More fit to animate the Poet's pen, Aught that more surely by its aspect fills
 Pure minds with sinless envy, than the
 Abode
 Of the good Priest: who, faithful through all hours IO
 To his high charge, and truly serving
 God,
 Has yet a heart and hand for trees and
 flowers,
 Enjoys the walks his predecessors trod, Nor covets lineal rights in lands and towers.

V.

COMPOSED IN ROSLIN CHAPEL DURING
 A STORM.

THE wind is now thy organist;—a clank
 (We know not whence) ministers for a bell
 To mark some change of service. As the swell
 Of music reached its height, and even when sank
 The notes, in prelude, ROSLIN! to a blank 5
 Of silence, how it thrilled thy sumptuous
 roof,
 Pillars, and arches,—not in vain time-
 proof,
 Though Christian rites be wanting! From what bank
 Came those live herbs? by what hand were they sown
 Where dew falls not, where rain-drops seem unknown? IO
 Yet in the Temple they a friendly niche Share with their sculptured fellows, that,
 green-grown,
 Copy their beauty more and more, and preach,
 Though mute, of all things blending into one.

VI.

THE TROSACHS.

THERE's not a nook within this solemn
 Pass
 But were an apt confessional for One Taught by his summer spent, his autumn
 gone,
 That Life is but a tale of morning grass Withered at eve. From scenes of art which chase 5
 That thought away, turn, and with watchful eyes
 Feed it 'mid Nature's old felicities, Rocks, rivers, and smooth lakes more clear than glass Untouched, unbreathed upon. Thrice happy quest,
 If from a golden perch of aspen spray 10
 (October's workmanship to rival May)
 The pensive warbler of the ruddy breast
 That moral sweeten by a heaven-taught
 lay,
 Lulling the year, with all its cares, to rest!

VII.

THE pibroch's note, discountenanced or
 mute ;
 The Roman kilt, degraded to a toy
 Of quaint apparel for a half-spoilt boy ;
 The target mouldering like ungathered
 fruit ; 4
 The smoking steam-boat eager in pursuit,
 As eagerly pursued ; the umbrella spread To weather-fend the Celtic herdsman's
 head—
 All speak of manners withering to the root,
 And of old honours, too, and passions
 high :
 Then may we ask, though pleased that thought should range 10
 Among the conquests of civility,
 Survives imagination—to the change Superior ? Help to virtue does she give ?
 If not, O Mortals, better cease to live !

VIII.

COMPOSED IN THE GLEN OF LOCH ETIVE.

“THIS Land of Rainbows spanning glens whose walls,
 Rock-built, are hung with rainbow-coloured mists—
 Of far-stretched Meres whose salt flood never rests—
 Of tuneful Caves and playful Waterfalls—Of Mountains varying momentarily their crests— 5
 Proud be this Land ! whose poorest huts are halls
 Where Fancy entertains becoming guests ;
 While native song the heroic Past recalls.”
 Thus, in the net of her own wishes caught,
 The Muse exclaimed ; but Story now must
 hide 10
 Her trophies, Fancy crouch ; the course of pride
 Has been diverted, other lessons taught,
 That make the Patriot-spirit bow her
 head
 Where the all-conquering Roman feared to tread.

IX.

EAGLES.

Composed at Dunollie Castle in the bay of Oban.
 DISHONOURED Rock and Ruin ! that, by law
 Tyrannic, keep the Bird of Jove em-
 barred
 Like a lone criminal whose life is spared.
 Vexed is he, and screams loud. The last
 I saw
 Was on the wing ; stooping, he struck with awe 5
 Man, bird, and beast ; then, with a consort
 paired,
 From a bold headland, their loved aery's
 guard,
 Flew high above Atlantic waves, to draw Light from the fountain of the setting
 sun.
 Such was this Prisoner once ; and when his plumes 10
 The sea-blast ruffles as the storm comes on,

Then, for a moment, he, in spirit, resumes
His rank 'mong freeborn creatures that live free,
His power, his beauty, and his majesty.

X.

IN THE SOUND OF MULL.

TRADITION, be thou mute! Oblivion,
throw

Thy veil in mercy o'er the records, hung Round strath and mountain, stamped by the ancient tongue

On rock and ruin darkening as we go,— Spots where a word, ghost-like, survives to show 5

What crimes from hate, or desperate love,
have sprung;

From honour misconceived, or fancied
wrong,

What feuds, not quenched but fed by mutual woe.

Yet, though a wild vindictive Race, untamed

By civil arts and labours of the pen, 10 Could gentleness be scorned by those fierce Men,

Who, to spread wide the reverence they claimed

For patriarchal occupations, named Yon towering Peaks, "Shepherds of Etive Glen¹?"

XI.

SUGGESTED AT TYNDRUM IN A STORM.

ENOUGH of garlands, of the Arcadian
crook,

And all that Greece and Italy have sung
Of Swains reposing myrtle groves among!
Ours couch on naked rocks,—will cross a
brook

Sworn with chill rains, nor ever cast a lock 5

This way or that, or give it even a thought
More than by smoothest pathway may be
brought

Into a vacant mind. Can written book Teach what they learn? Up, hardy Mountaineer!

And guide the Bard, ambitious to be One
Of Nature's privy council, as thou art, 11
On cloud-sequestered heights, that see and hear

To what dread Powers He delegates his
part

On Earth, who works in the heaven of heavens, alone.

XII.

THE EARL OF BREADALBANE'S RUINED MAN-SION, AND FAMILY BURIAL-PLACE, NEAR KILLIN.

WELL sang the Bard who called the grave, in strains

Thoughtful and sad, the "narrow house."
No style

Of fond sepulchral flattery can beguile Grief of her sting; nor cheat, where he detains

The sleeping dust, stern Death. How reconcile 5

With truth, or with each other, decked remains

Of a once warm Abode, and that new Pile,
For the departed, built with curious pains And mausolean pomp? Yet here they
stand

Together,—'mid trim walks and artful
bowers, 10

To be looked down upon by ancient hills,
That, for the living and the dead, demand
And prompt a harmony of genuine
powers;

Concord that elevates the mind, and stills.

XIII.

"REST AND BE THANKFUL."

At the Head of Glencroë.

DOUBLING and doubling with laborious
walk,

Who, that has gained at length the wished-for Height,

This brief this simple wayside Call can slight,

And rests not thankful? Whether cheered by talk

With some loved friend, or by the unseen hawk 5

Whistling to clouds and sky-born streams,
 that shine
 At the sun's outbreak, as with light divine, Ere they descend to nourish root and stalk
 Of valley flowers. Nor, while the limbs
 repose,
 Will we forget that, as the fowl can keep Absolute stillness, poised aloft in air, 11
 And fishes front, unmoved, the torrent's
 sweep,—
 So may the Soul, through powers that Faith bestows,
 Win rest, and ease, and peace, with bliss that Angels share.

XIV.

HIGHLAND HUT.

SEE what gay wild flowers deck this earth-built Cot, Whose smoke, forth-issuing whence and how it may,
 Shines in the greeting of the sun's first ray Like wreaths of vapour without stain or blot.
 The limpid mountain-rill avoids it not; 5
 And why shouldst thou?—If rightly trained and bred,
 Humanity is humble, finds no spot Which her Heaven-guided feet refuse to
 tread.
 The walls are cracked, sunk is the flowery
 roof,
 Undressed the pathway leading to the
 door; 10
 But love, as Nature loves, the lonely
 Poor;
 Search, for their worth, some gentle heart wrong-proof,
 Meek, patient, kind, and, were its trials fewer,
 Belike less happy.—Stand no more aloof! 1

XV.

THE HIGHLAND BROACH.

The exact resemblance which the old Broach (still in use, though rarely met with, among the Highlanders) bears to the Roman Fibula must strike every one, and concurs with the plaid and kilt to recall to mind the communication which the ancient Romans had with this remote country.

IF to Tradition faith be due,
 And echoes from old verse speak true,
 Ere the meek Saint, Columba, bore
 Glad tidings to Iona's shore,
 No common light of nature blessed 5
 The mountain region of the west,
 A land where gentle manners ruled O'er men in dauntless virtues schooled,
 That raised, for centuries, a bar
 Impervious to the tide of war: 10
 Yet peaceful Arts did entrance gain
 Where haughty Force had striven in vain;
 And, 'mid the works of skilful hands,
 By wanderers brought from foreign lands
 And various climes, was not unknown 15
 The clasp that fixed the Roman Gown;
 The Fibula, whose shape, I ween,
 Still in the Highland Broach is seen,
 The silver Broach of massy frame,
 Worn at the breast of some grave Dame
 On road or path, or at the door 21
 Of fern-thatched hut on heathy moor:
 But delicate of yore its mould,
 And the material finest gold;
 As might beseem the fairest Fair, 25
 Whether she graced a royal chair,
 Or shed, within a vaulted hall,
 No fancied lustre on the wall
 Where shields of mighty heroes hung,
 While Fingal heard what Ossian sung. 30

The heroic Age expired—it slept
 Deep in its tomb:—the bramble crept
 O'er Fingal's hearth; the grassy sod
 Grew on the floors his sons had trod:
 Malvina! where art thou? Their state 35
 The noblest-born must abdicate;
 The fairest, while with fire and sword
 Come Spoilers—horde impelling horde,
 Must walk the sorrowing mountains, drest
 By ruder hands in homelier vest. 40
 Yet still the female bosom lent,
 And loved to borrow, ornament;
 Still was its inner world a place
 Reached by the dews of heavenly grace;
 Still pity to this last retreat 45
 Clove fondly; to his favourite seat

Love wound his way by soft approach,
Beneath a massier Highland Broach.

When alternations came of rage
Yet fiercer, in a darker age; 50
And feuds, where, clan encountering clan,
The weaker perished to a man;
For maid and mother, when despair Might else have triumphed, baffling
prayer,

One small possession lacked not power,
Provided in a calmer hour, 56
To meet such need as might befall—
Roof, raiment, bread, or burial:
For woman, even of tears bereft,
The hidden silver Broach was left. 60

As generations come and go,
Their arts, their customs, ebb and flow;
Fate, fortune, sweep strong powers away,
And feeble, of themselves, decay;
What poor abodes the heirloom hide, 65
In which the castle once took pride!
Tokens, once kept as boasted wealth,
If saved at all, are saved by stealth.
Lo! ships, from seas by nature barred,
Mount along ways by man prepared; 70
And in far-stretching vales, whose streams
Seek other seas, their canvas gleams.
Lo! busy towns spring up, on coasts
Thronged yesterday by airy ghosts;
Soon, like a lingering star forlorn 75
Among the novelties of morn,
While young delights on old encroach,
Will vanish the last Highland Broach.

But when, from out their viewless bed,
Like vapours, years have rolled and
spread; 80

And this poor verse, and worthier lays,
Shall yield no light of love or praise;
Then, by the spade, or cleaving plough,
Or torrent from the mountain's brow,
Or whirlwind, reckless what his might 85
Entombs, or forces into light;
Blind Chance, a volunteer ally,
That oft befriends Antiquity,
And clears Oblivion from reproach, 89
May render back the Highland Broach¹.

¹ How much the Broach is sometimes prized by persons in humble stations may be gathered from an occurrence mentioned to me by a female

XVI.

THE BROWNIE.

Upon a small island, not far from the head of Loch Lomond, are some remains of an ancient building, which was for several years the abode of a solitary Individual, one of the last survivors of the clan of Macfarlane, once powerful in that neighbourhood. Passing along the shore opposite this island in the year 1814, the Author learned these particulars, and that this person then living there had acquired the appellation of "The Brownie." See "The Brownie's Cell," to which the following is a sequel.

"How disappeared he?" Ask the newt and toad;

Ask of his fellow-men, and they will tell
How he was found, cold as an icicle,
Under an arch of that forlorn abode;
Where he, unpropped, and by the gathering flood 5

Of years hemmed round, had dwelt, prepared to try

Privation's worst extremities, and die
With no one near save the omnipresent
God.

Verily so to live was an awful choice—
A choice that wears the aspect of a doom;
But in the mould of mercy all is cast 11
For Souls familiar with the eternal Voice;
And this forgotten Taper to the last Drove from itself, we trust, all frightful gloom.

XVII.

TO THE PLANET VENUS, AN EVENING STAR.

Composed at Loch Lomond.

THOUGH joy attend Thee orient at the
birth
Of dawn, it cheers the lofty spirit most
To watch thy course when Daylight, fled from earth,

friend. She had had an opportunity of benefiting a poor old woman in her own hut, who, wishing to make a return, said to her daughter in Erse, in a tone of plaintive earnestness, "I would give anything I have, but I hope she does not wish for my Broach!" and, uttering these words, she put her hand upon the Broach which fastened her kerchief, and which, she imagined, had attracted the eye of her benefactress.

In the grey sky hath left his lingering Ghost,
Perplexed as if between a splendour lost
And splendour slowly mustering. Since
the Sun, 6

The absolute, the world-absorbing One,
Relinquished half his empire to the host Emboldened by thy guidance, holy Star,
Holy as princely, who that looks on thee
Touching, as now, in thy humility 11
The mountain-borders of this seat of care, Can question that thy countenance is
bright,
Celestial Power, as much with love as light?

XVIII.

BOTHWELL CASTLE.

(Passed unseen, on account of stormy weather.)

IMMURED in Bothwell's towers, at times the Brave

(So beautiful is Clyde) forgot to mourn
The liberty they lost at Bannockburn.
Once on those steeps I roamed at large,
and have 4

In mind the landscape, as if still in sight;
The riverglides, the woods before me wave;
Then why repine that now in vain I crave
Needless renewal of an old delight?

Better to thank a dear and long-past day
For joy its sunny hours were free to give Than blame the present, that our wish hath crost. 11

Memory, like sleep, hath powers which dreams obey,

Dreams, vivid dreams, that are not fugitive;
How little that she cherishes is lost!

XIX.

PICTURE OF DANIEL IN THE LIONS' DEN, AT HAMILTON PALACE.

AMID a fertile region green with wood
And fresh with rivers, well did it become
The ducal Owner, in his palace-home
To naturalise this tawny Lion brood; Children of Art, that claim strange brotherhood 5

(Couched in their den) with those that roam at large

Over the burning wilderness, and charge

The wind with terror while they roar for food.

Satiate are these; and stilled to eye and
ear;

Hence, while we gaze, a more enduring
fear! 10

Yet is the Prophet calm, nor would the
cave

Daunt him—if his Companions, now bedrownd

Outstretched and listless, were by hunger roused:

Man placed him here, and God, he knows, can save.

XX.

THE AVON.

(A feeder of the Annan.)

AVON—a precious, an immortal name!

Yet is it one that other rivulets bear

Like this unheard-of, and their channels
wear

Like this contented, though unknown to Fame:

For great and sacred is the modest claim
Of Streams to Nature's love, where'er they flow; 6

And ne'er did Genius slight them, as they
go,

Tree, flower, and green herb, feeding without blame.

But Praise can waste her voice on work of tears,

Anguish, and death: full oft where innocent blood 10

Has mixed its current with the limpid
flood,

Her heaven-offending trophies Glory
rears:

Never for like distinction may the good Shrink from thy name, pure Rill, with unpleas'd ears.

XXI.

SUGGESTED BY A VIEW FROM AN EMINENCE
IN INGLEWOOD FOREST.

THE forest huge of ancient Caledon
Is but a name, no more is Inglewood, That swept from hill to hill, from flood to
flood:

On her last thorn the nightly moon has
shone ;
Yet still, though unappropriate Wild be
none, 5
Fair parks spread wide where Adam Bell might deign
With Clym o' the Clough, were they alive
again,
To kill for merry feast their venison.
Nor wants the holy Abbot's gliding Shade His church with monumental wreck bestrown ; 10
The feudal Warrior-chief, a Ghost un-
laid,
Hath still his castle, though a skeleton,
That he may watch by night, and lessons
con
Of power that perishes, and rights that fade.

XXII.

HART'S-HORN TREE, NEAR PENRITH.

HERE stood an Oak, that long had borne affixed
To his huge trunk, or, with more subtle
art,
Among its withering topmost branches
mixed,
The palmy antlers of a hunted Hart, Whom the Dog Hercules pursued—his
part 5
Each desperately sustaining, till at last Both sank and died, the life-veins of the chased
And chaser bursting here with one dire
smart.
Mutual the victory, mutual the defeat !
High was the trophy hung with pitiless
pride ; 10
Say, rather, with that generous sympathy
That wants not, even in rudest breasts, a
seat ;
And, for this feeling's sake, let no one chide
Verse that would guard thy memory, HART'S-HORN TREE !

XXIII.

FANCY AND TRADITION.

[Composed 1833.—Published 1835.]

THE Lovers took within this ancient
grove
Their last embrace ; beside those crystal springs
The Hermit saw the Angel spread his wings
For instant flight ; the Sage in yon alcove Sate musing ; on that hill the Bard would rove, 5
Not mute, where now the linnet only sings :
Thus everywhere to truth Tradition
clings,
Or Fancy localises Powers we love.
Were only History licensed to take note
Of things gone by, her meagre monuments 10
Would ill suffice for persons and events :
There is an ampler page for man to quote,
A readier book of manifold contents,
Studied alike in palace and in cot.

XXIV.

COUNTESS' PILLAR.

On the roadside between Penrith and Appleby, there stands a pillar with the following inscription :—
"This pillar was erected, in the year 1656, by Anne Countess Dowager of Pembroke, &c. for a memorial of her last parting with her pious mother, Margaret Countess Dowager of Cumberland, on the 2d of April, 1616 ; in memory whereof she hath left an annuity of £4 to be distributed to the poor of the parish of Brougham, every 2d day of April for ever, upon the stone table placed hard by. Laus Deo !" WHILE the Poor gather round, till the end of time
May this bright flower of Charity display
Its bloom, unfolding at the appointed day ;
Flower than the loveliest of the vernal
prime Lovelier—transplanted from heaven's purest clime ! 5
"Charity never faileth ;" on that creed,
More than on written testament or deed,
The pious Lady built with hope sublime.

Alms on this stone to be dealt out, for ever!

“LAUS DEO.” Many a Stranger passing
by 10
Has with that Parting mixed a filial sigh, Blest its humane Memorial’s fond endeavour;
And, fastening on those lines an eye tear-glazed,
Has ended, though no Clerk, with “God be praised!”

XXV.

ROMAN ANTIQUITIES.

(From the Roman Station at Old Penrith.)

How profitless the relics that we cull,
Troubling the last holds of ambitious
Rome,
Unless they chasten fancies that presume
Too high, or idle agitations lull!
Of the world’s flatteries if the brain be full, 5
To have no seat for thought were better
doom,
Like this old helmet, or the eyeless skull
Of him who gloried in its nodding plume.
Heaven out of view, our wishes what are
they?
Our fond regrets tenacious in their grasp?
The Sage’s theory? the Poet’s lay?— 11
Mere Fibulæ without a robe to clasp; Obsolete lamps, whose light no time recalls;
Urns without ashes, tearless lacrymals!

XXVI.

APOLOGY,

FOR THE FOREGOING POEMS.

No more: the end is sudden and abrupt,
Abrupt—as without preconceived design
Was the beginning; yet the several Lays
Have moved in order, to each other bound
By a continuous and acknowledged tie 5
Though unapparent—like those Shapes distinct

That yet survive ensculptured on the
walls

Of palaces, or temples, ’mid the wreck
Of famed Persepolis; each following each,
As might beseem a stately embassy, 10
In set array; these bearing in their hands
Ensign of civil power, weapon of war,
Or gift to be presented at the throne
Of the Great King; and others, as they go

In priestly vest, with holy offerings charged, 15

Or leading victims drest for sacrifice.
Nor will the Power we serve, that sacred
Power,

The Spirit of humanity, disdain
A ministration humble but sincere,
That from a threshold loved by every
Muse 20

Its impulse took—that sorrow-stricken
door,

Whence, as a current from its fountain-
head,

Our thoughts have issued, and our feelings
flowed,

Receiving, willingly or not, fresh strength
From kindred sources; while around us
sighed 25

(Life’s three first seasons having passed
away)

Leaf-scattering winds; and hoar-frost sprinklings fell

(Foretaste of winter) on the moorland
heights;

And every day brought with it tidings new

Of rash change, ominous for the public weal. 30

Hence, if dejection has too oft encroached
Upon that sweet and tender melancholy
Which may itself be cherished and caressed

More than enough; a fault so natural (Even with the young, the hopeful, or the
gay) 35

For prompt forgiveness will not sue in
vain.

The White Doe of Rylstone;

OR,

The Fate of the Nortons.

[Composed 1807-1808.—Published 1815 (4to); collective ed. 1820.]

ADVERTISEMENT.

During the Summer of 1807 I visited, for the first time, the beautiful country that surrounds Bolton Priory in Yorkshire; and the Poem of "The White Doe," founded upon a Tradition connected with that place, was composed at the close of the same year.

DEDICATION.

IN trellised shed with clustering roses gay,
And, MARY! oft beside our blazing fire,
When years of wedded life were as a day
Whose current answers to the heart's desire,
Did we together read in Spenser's Lay 5
How Una, sad of soul—in sad attire,
The gentle Una, of celestial birth,
To seek her Knight went wandering o'er the
earth.

Ah, then, Belovèd! pleasing was the smart,
And the tear precious in compassion shed 10
For Her, who, pierced by sorrow's thrilling dart,
Did meekly bear the pang unmerited;
Meek as that emblem of her lowly heart
The milk-white Lamb which in a line she led,—
And faithful, loyal in her innocence, 15
Like the brave Lion slain in her defence.

Notes could we hear as of a faery shell
Attuned to words with sacred wisdom fraught;
Free Fancy prized each specious miracle,
And all its finer inspiration caught; 20
Till in the bosom of our rustic Cell
We by a lamentable change were taught
That "bliss with mortal Man may not abide."
How nearly joy and sorrow are allied!

For us the stream of fiction ceased to flow, 25
For us the voice of melody was mute.
—But, as soft gales dissolve the dreary snow,
And give the timid herbage leave to shoot, Heaven's breathing influence failed not to bestow
A timely promise of unlooked-for fruit, 30
Fair fruit of pleasure and serene content
From blossoms wild of fancies innocent.

It soothed us—it beguiled us—then, to hear
Once more of troubles wrought by magic spell;
And griefs whose aery motion comes not near 35
The pangs that tempt the Spirit to rebel:
Then, with mild Una in her sober cheer,
High over hill and low adown the dell
Again we wandered, willing to partake
All that she suffered for her dear Lord's sake. 40

Then, too, this Song of mine once more could
please,
Where anguish, strange as dreams of restless sleep,
Is tempered and allayed by sympathies
Aloft ascending, and descending deep,
Even to the inferior Kinds; whom forest-trees 45
Protect from beating sunbeams, and the sweep
Of the sharp winds;—fair Creatures!—to whom
Heaven
A calm and sinless life, with love, hath given.

This tragic Story cheered us; for it speaks
Of female patience winning firm repose; 50
And, of the recompense that conscience seeks,
A bright, encouraging, example shows;
Needful when o'er wide realms the tempest breaks,
Needful amid life's ordinary woes;—
Hence not for them unfitted who would bless 55
A happy hour with holier happiness.

He serves the Muses erringly and ill,
Whose aim is pleasure light and fugitive:
O, that my mind were equal to fulfil
The comprehensive mandate which they give—60 Vain aspiration of an earnest will!
Yet in this moral Strain a power may live,
Belovèd Wife? such solace to impart
As it hath yielded to thy tender heart.

RYDAL MOUNT, WESTMORELAND,
April 20, 1815.

"Action is transitory—a step, a blow,
The motion of a muscle—this way or that—
'Tis done; and in the after-vacancy
We wonder at ourselves like men betrayed:
Suffering is permanent, obscure and dark,
And has the nature of infinity.¹
Yet through that darkness (infinite though it seem
And irremovable) gracious openings lie,
By which the soul—with patient steps of thought
Now toiling, wafted now on wings of prayer—
May pass in hope, and, though from mortal bonds
Yet undelivered, rise with sure ascent Even to the fountain-head of peace divine."

"They that deny a God destroy Man's nobility: for certainly Man is of kin to the Beast by his Body, and if he be not of kin to God by his Spirit, he is a base ignoble Creature. It destroys likewise Magnanimity, and the raising of humane Nature: for take an example of a Dog, and mark what a generosity and courage he will put on, when he finds himself maintained by a Man, who to him is instead of a God, or Melior Natura.
Which courage is manifestly such as that Creature without that confidence of a better Nature than his own could never attain. So Man, when he resteth and assureth himself upon Divine protection and favour, gathereth a force and faith which human Nature in itself could not obtain."

LORD BACON.

Canto First.

FROM Bolton's old monastic tower
The bells ring loud with gladsome power;
The sun shines bright; the fields are gay
With people in their best array
Of stole and doublet, hood and scarf, 5
Along the banks of crystal Wharf,
Through the Vale retired and lowly,
Trooping to that summons holy.
And, up among the moorlands, see
What sprinklings of blithe company! 10
Of lasses and of shepherd grooms,
That down the steep hills force their way,
Like cattle through the budded brooms;
Path, or no path, what care they?
And thus in joyous mood they hie 15
To Bolton's mouldering Priory.

¹ These six lines ("Action is transitory . . . infinity") are quoted from the Tragedy of The Borderers, Act III, Scene v. (ll. 1539-1544). The entire passage ("Action . . . divine") was added in 1837.—Ed.

What would they there?—full fifty
years
That sumptuous Pile, with all its peers,
Too harshly hath been doomed to taste
The bitterness of wrong and waste: 20
Its courts are ravaged; but the tower
Is standing with a voice of power,
That ancient voice which wont to call
To mass or some high festival;
And in the shattered fabric's heart 25
Remaineth one protected part;
A Chapel, like a wild-bird's nest,
Closely embowered and trimly drest;
And thither young and old repair,
This Sabbath-day, for praise and prayer.

Fast the churchyard fills;—anon 31
Look again, and they all are gone;
The cluster round the porch, and the folk
Who sate in the shade of the Prior's Oak!
And scarcely have they disappeared 35
Ere the prelusive hymn is heard:—
With one consent the people rejoice,
Filling the church with a lofty voice!
They sing a service which they feel:
For 'tis the sunrise now of zeal; 40
Of a pure faith the vernal prime—
In great Eliza's golden time.

A moment ends the fervent din,
And all is hushed, without and within;
For though the priest, more tranquilly,
Recites the holy liturgy, 46
The only voice which you can hear
Is the river murmuring near.
—When soft!—the dusky trees between,
And down the path through the open
green, 50
Where is no living thing to be seen;
And through yon gateway, where is
found,
Beneath the arch with ivy bound,
Free entrance to the churchyard ground—
Comes gliding in with lovely gleam, 55
Comes gliding in serene and slow,
Soft and silent as a dream,
A solitary Doe!
White she is as lily of June,
And beauteous as the silver moon 60

very woody path very like stabil.

When out of sight the clouds are driven
 And she is left alone in heaven ;
 Or like a ship some gentle day
 In sunshine sailing far away,
 A glittering ship, that hath the plain 65
 Of ocean for her own domain.

Lie silent in your graves, ye dead !
 Lie quiet in your churchyard bed !
 Ye living, tend your holy cares ;
 Ye multitude, pursue your prayers ; 70
 And blame not me if my heart and sight
 Are occupied with one delight !
 'Tis a work for sabbath hours
 If I with this bright Creature go :
 Whether she be of forest bowers, 75
 From the bowers of earth below ;
 Or a Spirit for one day given,
 A pledge of grace from purest heaven.

What harmonious pensive changes
 Wait upon her as she ranges 80
 Round and through this Pile of state Overthrown and desolate !
 Now a step or two her way
 Leads through space of open day,
 Where the enamoured sunny light 85
 Brightens her that was so bright ;
 Now doth a delicate shadow fall,
 Falls upon her like a breath,
 From some lofty arch or wall,
 As she passes underneath : 90
 Now some gloomy nook partakes
 Of the glory that she makes,—
 High-ribbed vault of stone, or cell,
 With perfect cunning framed as well
 Of stone, and ivy, and the spread 95
 Of the elder's bushy head ;
 Some jealous and forbidding cell,
 That doth the living stars repel,
 And where no flower hath leave to dwell.

The presence of this wandering Doe 100
 Fills many a damp obscure recess
 With lustre of a saintly show ;
 And, reappearing, she no less Sheds on the flowers that round her blow
 A more than sunny liveliness. 105
 But say, among these holy places,
 Which thus assiduously she paces,
 Comes she with a votary's task,
 Rite to perform, or boon to ask ?

Fair Pilgrim ! harbours she a sense 110
 Of sorrow, or of reverence ?
 Can she be grieved for quire or shrine,
 Crushed as if by wrath divine ?
 For what survives of house where God
 Was worshipped, or where Man abode ;
 For old magnificence undone ; 116
 Or for the gentler work begun
 By Nature, softening and concealing,
 And busy with a hand of healing ?
 Mourns she for lordly chamber's hearth
 That to the sapling ash gives birth ; 121
 For dormitory's length laid bare
 Where the wild rose blossoms fair ;
 Or altar, whence the cross was rent,
 Now rich with mossy ornament ? 125
 —She sees a warrior carved in stone,
 Among the thick weeds, stretched alone ;
 A warrior, with his shield of pride
 Cleaving humbly to his side,
 And hands in resignation prest, 130
 Palm to palm, on his tranquil breast ;
 As little she regards the sight
 As a common creature might :
 If she be doomed to inward care,
 Or service, it must lie elsewhere. 135
 —But hers are eyes serenely bright,
 And on she moves—with pace how light !
 Nor spares to stoop her head, and taste
 The dewy turf with flowers bestrown ;
 And thus she fares, until at last 140
 Beside the ridge of a grassy grave
 In quietness she lays her down ;
 Gentle as a weary wave
 Sinks, when the summer breeze hath died,
 Against an anchored vessel's side ; 145
 Even so, without distress, doth she Lie down in peace, and lovingly.

The day is placid in its going,
 To a lingering motion bound,
 Like the crystal stream now flowing 150
 With its softest summer sound :
 So the balmy minutes pass,
 While this radiant Creature lies Couched upon the dewy grass, Pensively with downcast eyes. 155
 —But now again the people raise
 With awful cheer a voice of praise ;
 It is the last, the parting song ;
 And from the temple forth they throng,

And quickly spread themselves abroad,
While each pursues his several road. 161
But some—a variegated band
Of middle-aged, and old, and young,
And little children by the hand
Upon their leading mothers hung— 165
With mute obeisance gladly paid
Turn towards the spot where, full in view,
The white Doe, to her service true,
Her sabbath couch has made.

It was a solitary mound ; 170
Which two spears' length of level ground
Did from all other graves divide :
As if in some respect of pride ;
Or melancholy's sickly mood,
Still shy of human neighbourhood ; 175
Or guilt, that humbly would express
A penitential loneliness.

“Look, there she is, my Child! draw
near ;

She fears not, wherefore should we fear?
She means no harm ;”—but still the Boy,
To whom the words were softly said, 181 Hung back, and smiled, and blushed for
joy,

A shame-faced blush of glowing red !
Again the Mother whispered low,
“Now you have seen the famous Doe ; 185
From Rylstone she hath found her way
Over the hills this sabbath day ;
Her work, whate'er it be, is done,
And she will depart when we are gone ;
Thus doth she keep, from year to year,
Her sabbath morning, foul or fair.” 191

Bright was the Creature, as in dreams
The Boy had seen her, yea, more bright ;
But is she truly what she seems ?
He asks with insecure delight, 195
Asks of himself, and doubts,—and still
The doubt returns against his will :
Though he, and all the standers-by,
Could tell a tragic history
Of facts divulged, wherein appear 200
Substantial motive, reason clear,
Why thus the milk-white Doe is found Couchant beside that lonely mound ;
And why she duly loves to pace
The circuit of this hallowed place. 205

Nor to the Child's enquiring mind
Is such perplexity confined :
For, spite of sober Truth that sees
A world of fixed remembrances
Which to this mystery belong, 210
If, undeceived, my skill can trace
The characters of every face,
There lack not strange delusion here,
Conjecture vague, and idle fear,
And superstitious fancies strong, 215
Which do the gentle Creature wrong.

That bearded, staff-supported Sire—
Who in his boyhood often fed
Full cheerily on convent-bread
And heard old tales by the convent-fire,
And to his grave will go with scars, 221
Relics of long and distant wars—
That Old Man, studious to expound
The spectacle, is mounting high
To days of dim antiquity ; 225
When Lady Aäliza mourned
Her Son, and felt in her despair
The pang of unavailing prayer ;
Her Son in Wharf's abysses drowned,
The noble Boy of Egremound. 230
From which affliction—when the grace
Of God had in her heart found place—
A pious structure, fair to see,
Rose up, this stately Priory !
The Lady's work ;—but now laid low ;
To the grief of her soul that doth come and go, 236
In the beautiful form of this innocent
Doe :
Which, though seemingly doomed in its breast to sustain A softened remembrance of sorrow and
pain,
Is spotless, and holy, and gentle, and
bright ; 240
And glides o'er the earth like an angel of
light.

Pass, pass who will, yon chantry
door ;
And through the chink in the fractured
floor
Look down, and see a griesly sight ;
A vault where the bodies are buried upright ! 245

There, face by face, and hand by hand,
The Claphams and Mauleverers stand ;
And, in his place, among son and sire,
Is John de Clapham, that fierce Esquire,
A valiant man, and a name of dread 250
In the ruthless wars of the White and Red ;

Who dragged Earl Pembroke from Ban-bury church

And smote off his head on the stones of the porch !

Look down among them, if you dare ;
Oft does the White Doe loiter there, 255
Prying into the darksome rent ;
Nor can it be with good intent :
So thinks that Dame of haughty air,
Who hath a Page her book to hold,
And wears a frontlet edged with gold. 260
Harsh thoughts with her high mood
agree—

Who counts among her ancestry
Earl Pembroke, slain so impiously !

That slender Youth, a scholar pale,
From Oxford come to his native vale, 265
He also hath his own conceit :
It is, thinks he, the gracious Fairy,
Who loved the Shepherd-lord to meet
In his wanderings solitary :
Wild notes she in his hearing sang, 270
A song of Nature's hidden powers ;
That whistled like the wind, and rang
Among the rocks and holly bowers.
'Twas said that She all shapes could
wear ;

And oftentimes before him stood, 275
Amid the trees of some thiek wood,
In semblance of a lady fair ;
And taught him signs, and showed him
sights,

In Craven's dens, on Cumbrian heights ;
When under cloud of fear he lay, 280
A shepherd clad in homely grey ;
Nor left him at his later day.
And hence when he, with spear and
shield,

Rode full of years to Flodden-field,
His eye could see the hidden spring, 285
And how the current was to flow ;
The fatal end of Scotland's King,
And all that hopeless overthrow.

But not in wars did he delight,
This Clifford wished for worthier might ;
Nor in broad pomp, or courtly state ; 291
Him his own thoughts did elevate,— Most happy in the shy recess
Of Barden's lowly quietness.
And choice of studious friends had he 295
Of Bolton's dear fraternity ;
Who, standing on this old church tower,
In many a calm propitious hour,
Perused, with him, the starry sky ;
Or, in their cells, with him did pry 300
For other lore,—by keen desire
Urged to close toil with chemic fire ;
In quest belike of transmutations
Rich as the mine's most bright creations.
But they and their good works are fled,
And all is now disquieted— 306
And peace is none, for living or dead !

Ah, pensive Scholar, think not so,
But look again at the radiant Doe !
What quiet watch she seems to keep, 310
Alone, beside that grassy heap !
Why mention other thoughts unmeet
For vision so composed and sweet ?
While stand the people in a ring,
Gazing, doubting, questioning ; 315
Yea, many overcome in spite Of recollections clear and bright ;
Which yet do unto some impart
An undisturbed repose of heart.
And all the assembly own a law 320
Of orderly respect and awe ;
But see—they vanish one by one,
And last, the Doe herself is gone.

Harp ! we have been full long beguiled
By vague thoughts, lured by fancies
wild ; 325

To which, with no reluctant strings,
Thou hast attuned thy murmurings ;
And now before this Pile we stand
In solitude, and utter peace :
But, Harp ! thy murmurs may not cease—
A Spirit, with his angelic wings, 331
In soft and breeze-like visitings,
Has touched thee—and a Spirit's hand :
A voice is with us—a command
To chant, in strains of heavenly glory, 335
A tale of tears, a mortal story !

Canto Second.

THE Harp in lowliness obeyed ;
 And first we sang of the greenwood shade
 And a solitary Maid ;
 Beginning, where the song must end, 340
 With her, and with her sylvan Friend ;
 The Friend, who stood before her sight,
 Her only unextinguished light ;
 Her last companion in a dearth
 Of love, upon a hopeless earth. 345

For She it was—this Maid, who wrought
 Meekly, with foreboding thought,
 In vermeil colours and in gold
 An unblest work ; which, standing by,
 Her Father did with joy behold,— 350
 Exulting in its imagery ;
 A Banner, fashioned to fulfil Too perfectly his headstrong will :
 For on this Banner had her hand 354
 Embroidered (such her Sire's command)
 The sacred Cross ; and figured there
 The five dear wounds our Lord did bear ;
 Full soon to be uplifted high,
 And float in rueful company !

It was the time when England's Queen Twelve years had reigned, a Sovereign dread ; 361
 Nor yet the restless crown had been Disturbed upon her virgin head ;
 But now the inly-working North
 Was ripe to send its thousands forth, 365
 A potent vassalage, to fight
 In Percy's and in Neville's right,
 Two Earls fast leagued in discontent,
 Who gave their wishes open vent ;
 And boldly urged a general plea, 370
 The rites of ancient piety
 To be triumphantly restored,
 By the stern justice of the sword !
 And that same Banner, on whose breast
 The blameless Lady had exprest 375
 Memorials chosen to give life
 And sunshine to a dangerous strife ;
 That Banner, waiting for the Call,
 Stood quietly in Rylstone-hall.

It came ; and Francis Norton said, 380
 "O Father ! rise not in this fray—
 The hairs are white upon your head ;

Dear Father, hear me when I say
 It is for you too late a day !
 Bethink you of your own good name : 385
 A just and gracious Queen have we,
 A pure religion, and the claim
 Of peace on our humanity.—
 'Tis meet that I endure your scorn ;
 I am your son, your eldest born ; 390
 But not for lordship or for land,
 My Father, do I clasp your knees ;
 The Banner touch not, stay your hand,
 This multitude of men disband,
 And live at home in blameless ease ; 395
 For these my brethren's sake, for me ;
 And, most of all, for Emily !"

Tumultuous noises filled the hall ;
 And scarcely could the Father hear That name—pronounced with a dying
 fall— 400
 The name of his only Daughter dear,
 As on the banner which stood near
 He glanced a look of holy pride,
 And his moist eyes were glorified ;
 Then did he seize the staff, and say : 405
 "Thou, Richard, bear'st thy father's name,
 Keep thou this ensign till the day
 When I of thee require the same :
 Thy place be on my better hand ;—
 And seven as true as thou, I see, 410
 Will cleave to this good cause and me."
 He spake, and eight brave sons straight-
 way
 All followed him, a gallant band !

Thus, with his sons, when forth he came
 The sight was hailed with loud acclaim
 And din of arms and minstrelsy, 416
 From all his warlike tenantry, All horsed and harnessed with him to ride,—
 A voice to which the hills replied !

But Francis, in the vacant hall, 420
 Stood silent under dreary weight,—
 A phantasm, in which roof and wall
 Shook, tottered, swam before his sight ;
 A phantasm like a dream of night !
 Thus overwhelmed, and desolate, 425
 He found his way to a postern-gate ;
 And, when he waked, his languid eye
 Was on the calm and silent sky ;

With air about him breathing sweet, 429
 And earth's green grass beneath his feet;
 Nor did he fail ere long to hear
 A sound of military cheer,
 Faint—but it reached that sheltered spot;
 He heard, and it disturbed him not.

There stood he, leaning on a lance 435
 Which he had grasped unknowingly,
 Had blindly grasped in that strong trance,
 That dimness of heart-agony;
 There stood he, cleansed from the despair
 And sorrow of his fruitless prayer. 440
 The past he calmly hath reviewed:
 But where will be the fortitude
 Of this brave man, when he shall see That Form beneath the spreading tree,
 And know that it is Emily? 445

He saw her where in open view
 She sate beneath the spreading yew—
 Her head upon her lap, concealing
 In solitude her bitter feeling:
 "Might ever son command a sire, 450
 The act were justified to-day."
 This to himself—and to the Maid,
 Whom now he had approached, he said—
 "Gone are they,—they have their desire;
 And I with thee one hour will stay, 455
 To give thee comfort if I may."

She heard, but looked not up, nor spake;
 And sorrow moved him to partake
 Her silence; then his thoughts turned
 round,
 And fervent words a passage found. 460

"Gone are they, bravely, though misled;
 With a dear Father at their head!
 The Sons obey a natural lord;
 The Father had given solemn word
 To noble Percy; and a force 465
 Still stronger, bends him to his course.
 This said, our tears to-day may fall
 As at an innocent funeral.
 In deep and awful channel runs
 This sympathy of Sire and Sons; 470
 Untried our Brothers have been loved
 With heart by simple nature moved;
 And now their faithfulness is proved:
 For faithful we must call them, bearing
 That soul of conscientious daring. 475

—There were they all in circle—there Stood Richard, Ambrose, Christopher,
 John with a sword that will not fail,
 And Marmaduke in fearless mail,
 And those bright Twins were side by side;
 And there, by fresh hopes beautified, 481
 Stood He, whose arm yet lacks the power
 Of man, our youngest, fairest flower!
 I, by the right of eldest born,
 And in a second father's place, 485
 Presumed to grapple with their scorn,
 And meet their pity face to face;
 Yea, trusting in God's holy aid,
 I to my Father knelt and prayed;
 And one, the pensive Marmaduke, 490
 Methought, was yielding inwardly,
 And would have laid his purpose by,
 But for a glance of his Father's eye,
 Which I myself could scarcely brook.

"Then be we, each and all, forgiven! 495
 Thou, chiefly thou, my Sister dear,
 Whose pangs are registered in heaven—
 The stifled sigh, the hidden tear,
 And smiles, that dared to take their place,
 Meek filial smiles, upon thy face, 500
 As that unhallowed Banner grew Beneath a loving old Man's view.
 Thy part is done—thy painful part;
 Be thou then satisfied in heart!
 A further, though far easier, task 505
 Than thine hath been, my duties ask;
 With theirs my efforts cannot blend,
 I cannot for such cause contend;
 Their aims I utterly forswear;
 But I in body will be there. 510
 Unarmed and naked will I go,
 Be at their side, come weal or woe:
 On kind occasions I may wait,
 See, hear, obstruct, or mitigate.
 Bare breast I take and an empty hand¹."— 515
 Therewith he threw away the lance,
 Which he had grasped in that strong
 trance;
 Spurned it, like something that would
 stand
 Between him and the pure intent
 Of love on which his soul was bent. 520

"For thee, for thee, is left the sense
 Of trial past without offence
 To God or man ; such innocence,
 Such consolation, and the excess
 Of an unmerited distress ; 525
 In that thy very strength must lie.
 —O Sister, I could prophesy !
 The time is come that rings the knell
 Of all we loved, and loved so well :
 Hope nothing, if I thus may speak 530
 To thee, a woman, and thence weak :
 Hope nothing, I repeat ; for we Are doomed to perish utterly :
 'Tis meet that thou with me divide
 The thought while I am by thy side, 535
 Acknowledging a grace in this,
 A comfort in the dark abyss.
 But look not for me when I am gone,
 And be no farther wrought upon :
 Farewell all wishes, all debate, 540
 All prayers for this cause, or for that !
 Weep, if that aid thee ; but depend Upon no help of outward friend ;
 Espouse thy doom at once, and cleave
 To fortitude without reprieve. 545
 For we must fall, both we and ours—
 This Mansion and these pleasant bowers, Walks, pools, and arbours, homestead,
 hall—
 Our fate is theirs, will reach them all ;
 The young horse must forsake his manger,
 And learn to glory in a Stranger ; 551
 The hawk forget his perch ; the hound
 Be parted from his ancient ground :
 The blast will sweep us all away—
 One desolation, one decay ! 555
 And even this Creature !" which words saying,
 He pointed to a lovely Doe,
 A few steps distant, feeding, straying ;
 Fair creature, and more white than snow !
 "Even she will to her peaceful woods 560
 Return, and to her murmuring floods,
 And be in heart and soul the same
 She was before she hither came ;
 Ere she had learned to love us all,
 Herself beloved in Rylstone-hall. 565
 —But thou, my Sister, doomed to be The last leaf on a blasted tree ;
 If not in vain we breathed the breath
 Together of a purer faith ;

If hand in hand we have been led, 570
 And thou, (O happy thought this day !)
 Not seldom foremost in the way ;
 If on one thought our minds have fed,
 And we have in one meaning read ;
 If, when at home our private weal 575
 Hath suffered from the shock of zeal,
 Together we have learned to prize
 Forbearance and self-sacrifice ;
 If we like combatants have fared,
 And for this issue been prepared ; 580
 If thou art beautiful, and youth
 And thought endue thee with all truth—
 Be strong ;—be worthy of the grace
 Of God, and fill thy destined place :
 A Soul, by force of sorrows high, 585
 Uplifted to the purest sky
 Of undisturbed humanity !"

He ended,—or she heard no more ;
 He led her from the yew-tree shade,
 And at the mansion's silent door, 590
 He kissed the consecrated Maid ;
 And down the valley then pursued,
 Alone, the armèd Multitude.

Canto Third.

Now joy for you who from the towers
 Of Brancepeth look in doubt and fear, 595
 Telling melancholy hours !
 Proclaim it, let your Masters hear
 That Norton with his band is near !
 The watchmen from their station high Pronounced the word,—and the Earls desery, 600
 Well-pleased, the armèd Company Marching down the banks of Were.

Said fearless Norton to the pair Gone forth to greet him on the plain—
 "This meeting, noble Lords ! looks fair,
 I bring with me a godcly train ; 606
 Their hearts are with you : hill and dale Have helped us : Ure we crossed, and Swale,
 And horse and harness followed—see
 The best part of their Yeomanry ! 610 —Stand forth, my Sons !—these eight are
 mine,
 Whom to this service I commend ;

Which way so'er our fate incline,
 These will be faithful to the end; 614
 They are my all"—voice failed him here—
 "My all save one, a Daughter dear!
 Whom I have left, Love's mildest birth,
 The meekest Child on this blessed earth.
 I had—but these are by my side,
 These Eight, and this is a day of pride!
 The time is ripe. With festive din 621
 Lo! how the people are flocking in,— Like hungry fowl to the feeder's hand
 When snow lies heavy upon the land."

He spake bare truth; for far and near
 From every side came noisy swarms 626
 Of Peasants in their homely gear;
 And, mixed with these, to Brancepeth
 came

Grave Gentry of estate and name,
 And Captains known for worth in arms;
 And prayed the Earls in self-defence 631
 To rise, and prove their innocence.—
 "Rise, noble Earls, put forth your might For holy Church, and the People's right!"

The Norton fixed, at this demand, 635
 His eye upon Northumberland,
 And said; "The Minds of Men will own
 No loyal rest while England's Crown Remains without an Heir, the bait
 Of strife and factions desperate; 640
 Who, paying deadly hate in kind Through all things else, in this can find
 A mutual hope, a common mind;
 And plot, and pant to overwhelm
 All ancient honour in the realm. 645
 —Brave Earls! to whose heroic veins
 Our noblest blood is given in trust,
 To you a suffering State complains,
 And ye must raise her from the dust.
 With wishes of still bolder scope 650
 On you we look, with dearest hope;
 Even for our Altars—for the prize
 In Heaven, of life that never dies;
 For the old and holy Church we mourn,
 And must in joy to her return. 655
 Behold!"—and from his Son whose stand Was on his right, from that guardian
 hand

He took the Banner, and unfurled
 The precious folds—"behold," said he,
 "The ransom of a sinful world; 660

Let this your preservation be;
 The wounds of hands and feet and side,
 And the sacred Cross on which Jesus died.
 —This bring I from an ancient hearth,
 These Records wrought in pledge of love
 By hands of no ignoble birth, 666
 A Maid o'er whom the blessed Dove
 Vouchsafed in gentleness to brood While she the holy work pursued."
 "Uplift the Standard!" was the cry 670
 From all the listeners that stood round,
 "Plant it,—by this we live or die."
 The Norton ceased not for that sound, But said; "The prayer which ye have
 heard,
 Much injured Earls! by these preferred,
 Is offered to the Saints, the sigh 676
 Of tens of thousands, secretly."
 "Uplift it!" cried once more the Band,
 And then a thoughtful pause ensued:
 "Uplift it!" said Northumberland— 680
 Whereat from all the multitude
 Who saw the Banner reared on high
 In all its dread emblazonry
 A voice of uttermost joy brake out:
 The transport was rolled down the river of Were, 685
 And Durham, the time-honoured Durham, did hear,
 And the towers of Saint Cuthbert were stirred by the shout!

Now was the North in arms:—they
 shine
 In warlike trim from Tweed to Tyne,
 At Percy's voice: and Neville sees 690
 His Followers gathering in from Tees,
 From Were, and all the little rills
 Concealed among the forkèd hills—
 Seven hundred Knights, Retainers all
 Of Neville, at their Master's call 695
 Had sate together in Raby Hall!
 Such strength that Earldom held of yore;
 Nor wanted at this time rich store
 Of well-appointed chivalry.
 —Not loth the sleepy lance to wield, 700
 And greet the old paternal shield,
 They heard the summons;—and, further-
 more,
 Horsemen and Foot of each degree,
 Unbound by pledge of fealty,

Appeared, with free and open hate 705
 Of novelties in Church and State;
 Knight, burgher, yeoman, and esquire,
 And Romish priest, in priest's attire.
 And thus, in arms, a zealous Band
 Proceeding under joint command, 710
 To Durham first their course they bear;
 And in Saint Cuthbert's ancient seat
 Sang mass,—and tore the book of prayer,—
 And trod the bible beneath their feet.
 Thence marching southward smooth
 and free 715
 "They mustered their host at Wetherby, Full sixteen thousand fair to see¹;"
 The Choicest Warriors of the North!
 But none for beauty and for worth
 Like those eight Sons—who, in a ring, 720
 (Ripe men, or blooming in life's spring)
 Each with a lance, erect and tall,
 A falchion, and a buckler small,
 Stood by their Sire, on Clifford-moor,
 To guard the Standard which he bore. 725
 On foot they girt their Father round;
 And so will keep the appointed ground Where'er their march: no steed will he Henceforth bestride;—triumphantly
 He stands upon the grassy sod, 730
 Trusting himself to the earth, and God.
 Rare sight to embolden and inspire!
 Proud was the field of Sons and Sire;
 Of him the most; and, sooth to say,
 No shape of man in all the array 735
 So graced the sunshine of that day.
 The monumental pomp of age
 Was with this goodly Personage;
 A stature undepressed in size,
 Unbent, which rather seemed to rise, 740
 In open victory o'er the weight
 Of seventy years, to loftier height;
 Magnific limbs of withered state;
 A face to fear and venerate; 744
 Eyes dark and strong; and on his head
 Bright locks of silver hair, thick spread,
 Which a brown morion half-concealed,
 Light as a hunter's of the field;
 And thus, with girdle round his waist,
 Whereon the Banner-staff might rest 750
 At need, he stood, advancing high
 The glittering, floating Pageantry.
 Who sees him?—thousands see, and One
 With unparticipated gaze;
 Who, 'mong those thousands, friend hath
 none, 755
 And treads in solitary ways.
 He, following wheresoe'er he might,
 Hath watched the Banner from afar,
 As shepherds watch a lonely star,
 Or mariners the distant light 760
 That guides them through a stormy
 night.
 And now, upon a chosen plot
 Of rising ground, yon heathy spot!
 He takes alone his far-off stand,
 With breast unmailed, unweaponed hand.
 Bold is his aspect; but his eye
 Is pregnant with anxiety,
 While, like a tutelary Power,
 He there stands fixed from hour to
 hour:
 Yet sometimes in more humble guise 770
 Upon the turf-clad height he lies Stretched, herdsman-like, as if to bask
 In sunshine were his only task,
 Or by his mantle's help to find
 A shelter from the nipping wind: 775
 And thus, with short oblivion blest,
 His weary spirits gather rest.
 Again he lifts his eyes; and lo!
 The pageant glancing to and fro;
 And hope is wakened by the sight, 780
 He thence may learn, ere fall of night,
 Which way the tide is doomed to flow.
 To London were the Chieftains bent;
 But what avails the bold intent?
 A Royal army is gone forth 785
 To quell the RISING OF THE NORTH;
 They march with Dudley at their head,
 And, in seven days' space, will to York be led!
 Can such a mighty host be raised
 Thus suddenly, and brought so near? 790
 The Earls upon each other gazed,
 And Neville's cheek grew pale with fear;
 For, with a high and valiant name,
 He bore a heart of timid frame;
 And bold if both had been, yet they 795
 "Against so many may not stay²."

² From the Old Ballad.

Back therefore will they hie to seize
 A strong Hold on the banks of Tees;
 There wait a favourable hour,
 Until Lord Dacre with his power 800
 From Naworth come; and Howard's aid
 Be with them openly displayed.

While through the Host, from man to
 man,

A rumour of this purpose ran,
 The Standard trusting to the care 805
 Of him who heretofore did bear
 That charge, impatient Norton sought
 The Chieftains to unfold his thought,
 And thus abruptly spake;—"We yield
 (And can it be?) an unfought field!— 810
 How oft has strength, the strength of
 heaven,

To few triumphantly been given!
 Still do our very children boast
 Of mitred Thurston—what a Host
 He conquered!—Saw we not the Plain (And flying shall behold again) 816
 Where faith was proved?—while to battle
 moved

The Standard, on the Sacred Wain
 That bore it, compassed round by a bold Fraternity of Barons old; 820
 And with those grey-haired champions
 stood,

Under the saintly ensigns three,
 The infant Heir of Mowbray's blood—
 All confident of victory!—
 Shall Percy blush, then, for his name? 825
 Must Westmoreland be asked with shame
 Whose were the numbers, where the loss,
 In that other day of Neville's Cross?
 When the Prior of Durham with holy
 hand

Raised, as the Vision gave command, 830
 Saint Cuthbert's Relic—far and near Kenned on the point of a lofty spear;
 While the Monks prayed in Maiden's
 Bower

To God descending in his power.
 Less would not at our need be due 835
 To us, who war against the Untrue;—
 The delegates of Heaven we rise,
 Convoked the impious to chastise:
 We, we, the sanctities of old
 Would re-establish and uphold: 840

Be warned"—His zeal the Chiefs confounded,

But word was given, and the trumpet sounded:

Back through the melancholy Host
 Went Norton, and resumed his post.
 Alas! thought he, and have I borne 845
 This Banner raised with joyful pride,
 This hope of all posterity,
 By those dread symbols sanctified;
 Thus to become at once the scorn
 Of babbling winds as they go by, 850
 A spot of shame to the sun's bright eye,
 To the light clouds a mockery!
 —"Even these poor eight of mine would stem—"

Half to himself, and half to them 854
 He spake—"would stem, or quell, a force
 Ten times their number, man and horse;
 This by their own unaided might,
 Without their father in their sight,
 Without the Cause for which they fight;
 A Cause, which on a needful day 860 Would breed us thousands brave as they."

—So speaking, he his reverend head
 Raised toward that Imagery once more:
 But the familiar prospect shed
 Despondency unfelt before: 865
 A shock of intimations vain,
 Dismay, and superstitious pain,
 Fell on him, with the sudden thought
 Of her by whom the work was wrought:—
 Oh! wherefore was her countenance
 bright 870

With love divine and gentle light?
 She would not, could not, disobey,
 But her Faith leaned another way.
 Ill tears she wept; I saw them fall,
 I overheard her as she spake 875
 Sad words to that mute Animal,
 The White Doe, in the hawthorn brake;
 She steeped, but not for Jesu's sake,
 This Cross in tears: by her, and One Unworthier far we are undone— 880
 Her recreant Brother—he prevailed
 Over that tender Spirit—assailed
 Too oft, alas! by her whose head
 In the cold grave hath long been laid:
 She first in reason's dawn beguiled 885
 Her docile, unsuspecting Child:

Far back—far back my mind must go
To reach the well-spring of this woe!

While thus he brooded, music sweet
Of border tunes was played to cheer 890
The footsteps of a quick retreat;
But Norton lingered in the rear, Stung with sharp thoughts; and, ere the
last

From his distracted brain was cast,
Before his Father, Francis stood, 895
And spake in firm and earnest mood.

“Though here I bend a suppliant knee
In reverence, and unarmed, I bear
In your indignant thoughts my share;
Am grieved this backward march to see
So careless and disorderly. 901
I scorn your Chiefs—men who would lead,
And yet want courage at their need:
Then look at them with open eyes!
Deserve they further sacrifice?— 905
If—when they shrink, nor dare oppose
In open field their gathering foes,
(And fast, from this decisive day, Yon multitude must melt away;)
If now I ask a grace not claimed 910
While ground was left for hope; unblamed
Be an endeavour that can do
No injury to them or you.
My Father! I would help to find A place of shelter, till the rage 915
Of cruel men do like the wind
Exhaust itself and sink to rest;
Be Brother now to Brother joined!
Admit me in the equipage
Of your misfortunes, that at least, 920
Whatever fate remain behind,
I may bear witness in my breast
To your nobility of mind!”

“Thou Enemy, my bane and blight!
Oh! bold to fight the Coward's fight 925
Against all good”—but why declare,
At length, the issue of a prayer
Which love had prompted, yielding scope
Too free to one bright moment's hope?
Suffice it that the Son, who strove 930
With fruitless effort to allay
That passion, prudently gave way;
Nor did he turn aside to prove His Brothers' wisdom or their love—

But calmly from the spot withdrew; 935
His best endeavours to renew,
Should e'er a kindlier time ensue.

Canto Fourth.

'Tis night: in silence looking down,
The Moon from cloudless ether sees
A Camp, and a beleaguered Town, 940
And Castle like a stately crown
On the steep rocks of winding Tees;—
And southward far, with moor between,
Hill-top, and flood, and forest green, 944
The bright Moon sees that valley small Where Rylstone's old sequestered Hall
A venerable image yields
Of quiet to the neighbouring fields;
While from one pillared chimney breathes
The smoke, and mounts in silver wreaths.
—The courts are hushed;—for timely
sleep 951
The greyhounds to their kennel creep;
The peacock in the broad ash-tree
Aloft is roosted for the night,
He who in proud prosperity 955
Of colours manifold and bright
Walked round, affronting the daylight;
And higher still, above the bower
Where he is perched, from yon lone
Tower
The hall-clock in the clear moonshine 960
With glittering finger points at nine.

Ah! who could think that sadness here
Hath any sway? or pain, or fear?
A soft and lulling sound is heard
Of streams inaudible by day; 965
The garden pool's dark surface, stirred
By the night insects in their play,
Breaks into dimples small and bright;
A thousand, thousand rings of light
That shape themselves and disappear 970
Almost as soon as seen:—and lo!
Not distant far, the milk-white Doe—
The same who quietly was feeding
On the green herb, and nothing heeding,
When Francis, uttering to the Maid 975
His last words in the yew-tree shade, Involved whate'er by love was brought Out of his heart, or crossed his thought,
Or chance presented to his eye,
In one sad sweep of destiny— 980

The same fair Creature, who hath found
 Her way into forbidden ground ;
 Where now—within this spacious plot
 For pleasure made, a goodly spot,
 With lawns and beds of flowers, and
 shades 985
 Of trellis-work in long arcades,
 And cirque and crescent framed by wall
 Of close-clipt foliage green and tall,
 Converging walks, and fountains gay,
 And terraces in trim array— 990
 Beneath yon cypress spiring high,
 With pine and cedar spreading wide
 Their darksome boughs on either side,
 In open moonlight doth she lie ;
 Happy as others of her kind, 995
 That, far from human neighbourhood,
 Range unrestricted as the wind,
 Through park, or chase, or savage wood.

But see the consecrated Maid
 Emerging from a cedar shade 1000
 To open moonshine, where the Doe
 Beneath the cypress-spire is laid ;
 Like a patch of April snow—
 Upon a bed of herbage green,
 Lingering in a woody glade 1005
 Or behind a rocky screen—
 Lonely relic ! which, if seen
 By the shepherd, is passed by
 With an inattentive eye.
 Nor more regard doth She bestow 1010
 Upon the uncomplaining Doe
 Now couched at ease, though oft this day
 Not unperplexed nor free from pain,
 When she had tried, and tried in vain,
 Approaching in her gentle way, 1015
 To win some look of love, or gain
 Encouragement to sport or play ;
 Attempts which still the heart-sick Maid
 Rejected, or with slight repaid.

Yet Emily is soothed ;—the breeze 1020
 Came fraught with kindly sympathies.
 As she approached yon rustic Shed Hung with late-flowering woodbine,
 spread
 Along the walls and overhead,
 The fragrance of the breathing flowers Revived a memory of those hours 1026
 When here, in this remote alcove,

(While from the pendent woodbine came Like odours, sweet as if the same)
 A fondly-anxious Mother strove 1030
 To teach her salutary fears
 And mysteries above her years.
 Yes, she is soothed : an Image faint,
 And yet not faint—a presence bright
 Returns to her—that blessed Saint 1035
 Who with mild looks and language mild Instructed here her darling Child,
 While yet a prattler on the knee,
 To worship in simplicity
 The invisible God, and take for guide
 The faith reformed and purified. 1041

'Tis flown—the Vision, and the sense
 Of that beguiling influence ;
 “But oh ! thou Angel from above,
 Mute Spirit of maternal love, 1045
 That stood'st before my eyes, more clear
 Than ghosts are fabled to appear Sent upon embassies of fear ;
 As thou thy presence hast to me
 Vouchsafed, in radiant ministry 1050
 Descend on Francis ; nor forbear
 To greet him with a voice, and say ;— ‘If hope be a rejected stay,
 Do thou, my christian Son, beware
 Of that most lamentable snare, 1055
 The self-reliance of despair !”

Then from within the embowered retreat
 Where she had found a grateful seat
 Perturbed she issues. She will go !
 Herself will follow to the war, 1060
 And clasp her Father's knees ;—ah, no !
 She meets the insuperable bar,
 The injunction by her Brother laid ;
 His parting charge—but ill obeyed—
 That interdicted all debate, 1065
 All prayer for this cause or for that ;
 All efforts that would turn aside
 The headstrong current of their fate :
Her duty is to stand and wait ;
 In resignation to abide 1070
 The shock, AND FINALLY SECURE O'ER PAIN AND GRIEF A TRIUMPH PURE.
 —She feels it, and her pangs are checked.
 But now, as silently she paced
 The turf, and thought by thought was chased, 1075

Came One who, with sedate respect, Approached, and, greeting her, thus
spake ;

“An old man’s privilege I take :
Dark is the time—a woeful day !
Dear daughter of affliction, say 1080
How can I serve you? point the way.”

“Rights have you, and may well be
bold :

You with my Father have grown old
In friendship—strive—for his sake go—
Turn from us all the coming woe : 1085
This would I beg ; but on my mind
A passive stillness is enjoined.
On you, if room for mortal aid
Be left, is no restriction laid ;
You not forbidden to recline 1090
With hope upon the Will divine.”

“Hope,” said the old Man, “must abide

With all of us, what’er betide.
In Craven’s Wilds is many a den,
To shelter persecuted men : 1095
Far under ground is many a cave,
Where they might lie as in the grave,
Until this storm hath ceased to rave :
Or let them cross the River Tweed,
And be at once from peril freed !” 1100

“Ah tempt me not!” she faintly
sighed ;

“I will not counsel nor exhort,
With my condition satisfied ;
But you, at least, may make report
Of what befalls ;—be this your task— 1105
This may be done ;—’tis all I ask !”

She spake—and from the Lady’s sight
The Sire, unconscious of his age,
Departed promptly as a Page Bound on some errand of delight. 1110
—The noble Francis—wise as brave, Thought he, may want not skill to save.
With hopes in tenderness concealed,
Unarmed he followed to the field ; 1114
Him will I seek : the insurgent Powers
Are now besieging Barnard’s Towers,— “Grant that the Moon which shines this
night
May guide them in a prudent flight !”

But quick the turns of chance and change,

And knowledge has a narrow range ; 1120
Whence idle fears, and needless pain,
And wishes blind, and efforts vain.—
The Moon may shine, but cannot be Their guide in flight—already she Hath witnessed their captivity. 1125
She saw the desperate assault
Upon that hostile castle made ;—
But dark and dismal is the vault
Where Norton and his sons are laid !
Disastrous issue !—he had said 1130 “This night yon faithless Towers must
yield,

Or we for ever quit the field.
—Neville is utterly dismayed,
For promise fails of Howard’s aid ;
And Dacre to our call replies 1135
That he is unprepared to rise.
My heart is sick ;—this weary pause
Must needs be fatal to our cause.
The breach is open—on the wall,
This night,—the Banner shall be planted !” 1140

—’Twas done: his Sons were with him—
all ;

They belt him round with hearts undaunted

And others follow ;—Sire and Son
Leap down into the court ;—“’Tis won”—
They shout aloud—but Heaven decreed
That with their joyful shout should close
The triumph of a desperate deed Which struck with terror friends and foes !

The friend shrinks back—the foe recoils
From Norton and his filial band ; 1150
But they, now caught within the toils,
Against a thousand cannot stand ;—
The foe from numbers courage drew,
And overpowered that gallant few.
“A rescue for the Standard !” cried 1155
The Father from within the walls ;
But, see, the sacred Standard falls !— Confusion through the Camp spread
wide :

Some fled ; and some their fears detained :
But ere the Moon had sunk to rest 1160
In her pale chambers of the west,
Of that rash levy nought remained.

Canto Fifth.

HIGH on a point of rugged ground
 Among the wastes of Rylstone Fell,
 Above the loftiest ridge or mound 1165
 Where foresters or shepherds dwell,
 An edifice of warlike frame
 Stands single—Norton Tower its name—
 It fronts all quarters, and looks round
 O'er path and road, and plain and dell,
 Dark moor, and gleam of pool and stream,
 Upon a prospect without bound.

The summit of this bold ascent—
 Though bleak and bare, and seldom free
 As Pendle-hill or Pennygent 1175
 From wind, or frost, or vapours wet—
 Had often heard the sound of glee
 When there the youthful Nortons met,
 To practise games and archery : 1179
 How proud and happy they ! the crowd
 Of Lookers-on how pleased and proud !
 And from the scorching noon-tide sun,
 From showers, or when the prize was
 won,

They to the Tower withdrew, and there Would mirth run round, with generous fare ; 1185
 And the stern old Lord of Rylstone-hall
 Was happiest, proudest, of them all !

But now, his Child, with anguish pale,
 Upon the height walks to and fro ;
 'Tis well that she hath heard the tale, 1190
 Received the bitterness of woe :
 For she had hoped, had hoped and feared,
 Such rights did feeble nature claim ;
 And oft her steps had hither steered,
 Though not unconscious of self-blame ;
 For she her brother's charge revered, 1196
 His farewell words ; and by the same,
 Yea, by her brother's very name,
 Had, in her solitude, been cheered. 1199

Beside the lonely watch-tower stood
 That grey-haired Man of gentle blood,
 Who with her Father had grown old
 In friendship ; rival hunters they,
 And fellow warriors in their day ;
 To Rylstone he the tidings brought ; 1205
 Then on this height the Maid had sought,
 And, gently as he could, had told

The end of that dire Tragedy,
 Which it had been his lot to see.

To him the Lady turned ; " You said
 That Francis lives, he is not dead ? " 1211

" Your noble brother hath been spared ;
 To take his life they have not dared ;
 On him and on his high endeavour 1214
 The light of praise shall shine for ever !
 Nor did he (such Heaven's will) in vain
 His solitary course maintain ;
 Not vainly struggled in the might
 Of duty, seeing with clear sight ;
 He was their comfort to the last, 1220
 Their joy till every pang was past.

" I witnessed when to York they
 came—
 What, Lady, if their feet were tied ;
 They might deserve a good Man's blame ;
 But marks of infamy and shame— 1225
 These were their triumph, these their
 pride ;

Nor wanted 'mid the pressing crowd
 Deep feeling, that found utterance loud,
 'Lo, Francis comes,' there were who cried,
 'A Prisoner once, but now set free ! 1230
 'Tis well, for he the worst defied
 Through force of natural piety ;
 He rose not in this quarrel, he,
 For concord's sake and England's good,
 Suit to his Brothers often made 1235
 With tears, and of his Father prayed—
 And when he had in vain withstood
 Their purpose—then did he divide,
 He parted from them ; but at their side
 Now walks in unanimity. 1240
 Then peace to cruelty and scorn,
 While to the prison they are borne,
 Peace, peace to all indignity !'

" And so in Prison were they laid—
 Oh hear me, hear me, gentle Maid, 1245
 For I am come with power to bless,
 By scattering gleams, through your distress,
 Of a redeeming happiness.
 Me did a reverent pity move
 And privilege of ancient love ; 1250
 And, in your service making bold,
 Entrance I gained to that strong-hold.

“Your Father gave me cordial greet-
ing;

But to his purposes, that burned
Within him, instantly returned: 1255
He was commanding and entreating,
And said—‘We need not stop, my Son!
Thoughts press, and time is hurrying
on’—
And so to Francis he renewed 1259
His words, more calmly thus pursued.

“‘Might this our enterprise have sped, Change wide and deep the Land had seen,
A renovation from the dead,
A spring-tide of immortal green: 1264
The darksome altars would have blazed
Like stars when clouds are rolled away;
Salvation to all eyes that gazed,
Once more the Rood had been upraised
To spread its arms, and stand for aye.
Then, then—had I survived to see 1270
New life in Bolton Priory;
The voice restored, the eye of Truth
Re-opened that inspired my youth;
To see her in her pomp arrayed—
This Banner (for such vow I made) 1275
Should on the consecrated breast
Of that same Temple have found rest:
I would myself have hung it high,
Fit offering of glad victory! 1279

“‘A shadow of such thought remains
To cheer this sad and pensive time;
A solemn fancy yet sustains
One feeble Being—bids me climb
Even to the last—one effort more
To attest my Faith, if not restore. 1285

“‘Hear then,’ said he, ‘while I im-
part,
My Son, the last wish of my heart.
The Banner strive thou to regain;
And, if the endeavour prove not vain,
Bear it—to whom if not to thee 1290
Shall I this lonely thought consign?—
Bear it to Bolton Priory,
And lay it on Saint Mary’s shrine;
To wither in the sun and breeze
’Mid those decaying sanctities. 1295
There let at least the gift be laid,
The testimony there displayed;

Bold proof that with no selfish aim,
But for lost Faith and Christ’s dear
name,
I helmeted a brow though white, 1300
And took a place in all men’s sight;
Yea, offered up this noble Brood,
This fair unrivalled Brotherhood,
And turned away from thee, my Son!
And left—but be the rest unsaid, 1305
The name untouched, the tear unshed;—
My wish is known, and I have done:
Now promise, grant this one request,
This dying prayer, and be thou blest!’

“Then Francis answered—‘Trust thy
Son, 1310
For, with God’s will, it shall be done!’—

“The pledge obtained, the solemn word
Thus scarcely given, a noise was heard,
And Officers appeared in state
To lead the prisoners to their fate. 1315
They rose, oh! wherefore should I fear
To tell, or, Lady, you to hear?
They rose—embraces none were given—They stood like trees when earth and
heaven 1319
Are calm; they knew each other’s worth,
And reverently the Band went forth.
They met, when they had reached the door,
One with profane and harsh intent
Placed there—that he might go before
And, with that rueful Banner borne 1325
Aloft in sign of taunting scorn,
Conduct them to their punishment:
So cruel Sussex, unrestrained
By human feeling, had ordained.
The unhappy Banner Francis saw, 1330
And, with a look of calm command
Inspiring universal awe,
He took it from the soldier’s hand;
And all the people that stood round 1334
Confirmed the deed in peace profound.
—High transport did the Father shed Upon his Son—and they were led,
Led on, and yielded up their breath;
Together died, a happy death!—
But Francis, soon as he had braved 1340
That insult, and the Banner saved,
Athwart the unresisting tide
Of the spectators occupied

In admiration or dismay, Bore instantly his Charge away." 1345

These things, which thus had in the
sight

And hearing passed of Him who stood
With Emily, on the Watch-tower height,
In Rylstone's woeful neighbourhood,
He told; and oftentimes with voice 1350
Of power to comfort or rejoice;
For deepest sorrows that aspire
Go high, no transport ever higher.

"Yes—God is rich in mercy," said
The old Man to the silent Maid, 1355
"Yet, Lady! shines, through this black
night,

One star of aspect heavenly bright;
Your brother lives—he lives—is come
Perhaps already to his home;
Then let us leave this dreary place." 1360
She yielded, and with gentle pace,
Though without one uplifted look,
To Rylstone-hall her way she took.

Canto Sixth.

WHY comes not Francis?—From the doleful City

He fled,—and, in his flight, could hear 1365
The death-sounds of the Minster-bell:
That sullen stroke pronounced farewell
To Marmaduke, cut off from pity!
To Ambrose that! and then a knell
For him, the sweet half-opened Flower!
For all—all dying in one hour! 1371

—Why comes not Francis? Thoughts of
love

Should bear him to his Sister dear
With the fleet motion of a dove;
Yea, like a heavenly messenger 1375
Of speediest wing, should he appear.

Why comes he not?—for westward fast
Along the plain of York he past;
Reckless of what impels or leads,
Unchecked he hurries on;—nor heeds 1380
The sorrow, through the Villages,
Spread by triumphant cruelties
Of vengeful military force,
And punishment without remorse.
He marked not, heard not, as he fled; 1385
All but the suffering heart was dead
For him abandoned to blank awe,

To vacancy, and horror strong:
And the first object which he saw,
With conscious sight, as he swept along—
It was the Banner in his hand! 1391
He felt—and made a sudden stand.

He looked about like one betrayed:
What hath he done? what promise made?
Oh weak, weak moment! to what end 1395
Can such a vain oblation tend,
And he the Bearer?—Can he go Carrying this instrument of woe,
And find, find anywhere, a right
To excuse him in his Country's sight? 1400
No; will not all men deem the change
A downward course, perverse and strange?
Here is it;—but how? when? must she,
The unoffending Emily,
Again this piteous object see? 1405

Such conflict long did he maintain,
Nor liberty nor rest could gain:
His own life into danger brought
By this sad burden—even that thought,
Exciting self-suspicion strong, 1410
Swayed the brave man to his wrong.
And how—unless it were the sense
Of all-disposing Providence,
Its will unquestionably shown—
How has the Banner clung so fast 1415
To a palsied, and unconscious hand;
Clung to the hand to which it passed Without impediment? And why
But that Heaven's purpose might be
known

Doth now no hindrance meet his eye, 1420
No intervention, to withstand Fulfilment of a Father's prayer
Breathed to a Son forgiven, and blest
When all resentments were at rest,
And life in death laid the heart bare?—
Then, like a spectre sweeping by, 1426
Rushed through his mind the prophecy
Of utter desolation made
To Emily in the yew-tree shade:
He sighed, submitting will and power 1430
To the stern embrace of that grasping
hour.

"No choice is left, the deed is mine—
Dead are they, dead!—and I will go,
And, for their sakes, come weal or woe,
Will lay the Relic on the shrine." 1435

So forward with a steady will
 He went, and traversed plain and hill;
 And up the vale of Wharf his way
 Pursued;—and, at the dawn of day,
 Attained a summit whence his eyes 1440
 Could see the Tower of Bolton rise.
 There Francis for a moment's space
 Made halt—but hark! a noise behind
 Of horsemen at an eager pace!
 He heard, and with misgiving mind. 1445
 —'Tis Sir George Bowes who leads the Band:

They come, by cruel Sussex sent;
 Who, when the Nortons from the hand
 Of death had drunk their punishment,
 Bethought him, angry and ashamed, 1450
 How Francis, with the Banner claimed
 As his own charge, had disappeared,
 By all the standers-by revered.

His whole bold carriage (which had quelled

Thus far the Opposer, and repelled 1455
 All censure, enterprise so bright
 That even bad men had vainly striven Against that overcoming light)
 Was then reviewed, and prompt word
 given,

That to what place soever fled 1460
 He should be seized, alive or dead.

The troop of horse have gained the
 height

Where Francis stood in open sight.
 They hem him round—"Behold the proof,"

They cried, "the Ensign in his hand! 1465
He did not arm, he walked aloof!
 For why?—to save his Father's land;
 Worst Traitor of them all is he,
 A Traitor dark and cowardly!"

"I am no Traitor," Francis said, 1470
 "Though this unhappy freight I bear;
 And must not part with. But beware;—
 Err not, by hasty zeal misled,
 Nor do a suffering Spirit wrong,
 Whose self-reproaches are too strong!"
 At this he from the beaten road 1476
 Retreated towards a brake of thorn,
 That like a place of vantage showed;
 And there stood bravely, though forlorn.

In self-defence with warlike brow 1480
 He stood,—nor weaponless was now;
 He from a Soldier's hand had snatched
 A spear,—and, so protected, watched
 The Assailants, turning round and round;
 But from behind with treacherous wound
 A Spearman brought him to the ground.
 The guardian lance, as Francis fell,
 Dropped from him; but his other hand
 The Banner clenched; till, from out the Band,

One, the most eager for the prize, 1490
 Rushed in; and—while, O grief to tell!
 A glimmering sense still left, with eyes
 Unclosed the noble Francis lay—
 Seized it, as hunters seize their prey;
 But not before the warm life-blood 1495
 Had tinged more deeply, as it flowed,
 The wounds the brodered Banner
 showed,
 Thy fatal work, O Maiden, innocent as
 good!

Proudly the Horsemen bore away
 The Standard; and where Francis lay 1500
 There was he left alone, unwept,
 And for two days unnoticed slept.
 For at that time bewildering fear Possessed the country, far and near;
 But, on the third day, passing by 1505
 One of the Norton Tenantry
 Espied the uncovered Corse; the Man
 Shrunk as he recognised the face,
 And to the nearest homesteads ran
 And called the people to the place. 1510
 —How desolate is Rylstone-hall!
 This was the instant thought of all;
 And if the lonely Lady there Should be; to her they cannot bear
 This weight of anguish and despair. 1515
 So, when upon sad thoughts had prest Thoughts sadder still, they deemed it
 best

That, if the Priest should yield assent
 And no one hinder their intent,
 Then, they, for Christian pity's sake, 1520
 In holy ground a grave would make;
 And straightway buried he should be
 In the Churchyard of the Priory.

Apart, some little space, was made
 The grave where Francis must be laid.

In no confusion or neglect 1526
 This did they,—but in pure respect
 That he was born of gentle blood ;
 And that there was no neighbourhood
 Of kindred for him in that ground : 1530
 So to the Churchyard they are bound,
 Bearing the body on a bier ;
 And psalms they sing—a holy sound
 That hill and vale with sadness hear.

But Emily hath raised her head, 1535
 And is again disquieted ;
 She must behold!—so many gone,
 Where is the solitary One?
 And forth from Rylstone-hall stepped she,—
 To seek her Brother forth she went, 1540
 And tremblingly her course she bent Toward Bolton's ruined Priory.
 She comes, and in the vale hath heard
 The funeral dirge ;—she sees the knot
 Of people, sees them in one spot— 1545
 And darting like a wounded bird
 She reached the grave, and with her
 breast
 Upon the ground received the rest,—
 The consummation, the whole ruth
 And sorrow of this final truth ! 1550

Canto Seventh.

“ Powers there are

That touch each other to the quick—in modes
 Which the gross world no sense hath to perceive,
 No soul to dream of !”

THOU Spirit, whose angelic hand
 Was to the harp a strong command,
 Called the submissive strings to wake
 In glory for this Maiden's sake,
 Say, Spirit ! whither hath she fled 1555
 To hide her poor afflicted head ?
 What mighty forest in its gloom
 Enfolds her ?—is a rifted tomb
 Within the wilderness her seat ?
 Some island which the wild waves
 beat— 1560
 Is that the Sufferer's last retreat ?
 Or some aspiring rock, that shrouds
 Its perilous front in mists and clouds ?

High-climbing rock, low sunless dale,
 Sea, desert, what do these avail ? 1565
 Oh take her anguish and her fears
 Into a deep recess of years !

'Tis done ;—despoil and desolation
 O'er Rylstone's fair domain have blown ;
 Pools, terraces, and walks are sown 1570
 With weeds ; the bowers are overthrown,
 Or have given way to slow mutation,
 While, in their ancient habitation
 The Norton name hath been unknown.
 The lordly Mansion of its pride 1575
 Is stripped ; the ravage hath spread wide
 Through park and field, a perishing
 That mocks the gladness of the Spring !
 And, with this silent gloom agreeing,
 Appears a joyless human Being, 1580
 Of aspect such as if the waste
 Were under her dominion placed.
 Upon a primrose bank, her throne
 Of quietness, she sits alone ;
 Among the ruins of a wood, 1585
 Erewhile a covert bright and green,
 And where full many a brave tree stood,
 That used to spread its boughs, and ring
 With the sweet bird's carolling.
 Behold her, like a virgin Queen, 1590
 Neglecting in imperial state
 These outward images of fate,
 And carrying inward a serene
 And perfect sway, through many a thought Of chance and change, that hath been
 brought 1595

To the subjection of a holy,
 Though stern and rigorous, melancholy !
 The like authority, with grace
 Of awfulness, is in her face,—
 There hath she fixed it ; yet it seems 1600
 To o'ershadow by no native right
 That face, which cannot lose the gleams,
 Lose utterly the tender gleams,
 Of gentleness and meek delight,
 And loving-kindness ever bright : 1605
 Such is her sovereign mien :—her dress
 (A vest with woollen cincture tied,
 A hood of mountain-wool undyed)
 Is homely,—fashioned to express
 A wandering Pilgrim's humbleness. 1610

And she hath wandered, long and far,
 Beneath the light of sun and star ;

¹ See Address to Kilchurn Castle (Memorials of a Tour in Scotland, 1808), ll. 6-9.—ED.

Hath roamed in trouble and in grief,
 Driven forward like a withered leaf,
 Yea, like a ship at random blown 1615
 To distant places and unknown.
 But now she dares to seek a haven
 Among her native wilds of Craven ;
 Hath seen again her Father's roof,
 And put her fortitude to proof ; 1620
 The mighty sorrow hath been borne,
 And she is thoroughly forlorn :
 Her soul doth in itself stand fast,
 Sustained by memory of the past
 And strength of Reason ; held above 1625
 The infirmities of mortal love ;
 Undaunted, lofty, calm, and stable,
 And awfully impenetrable.

And so—beneath a mouldered tree,
 A self-surviving leafless oak 1630
 By unregarded age from stroke
 Of ravage saved—sate Emily.
 There did she rest, with head reclined,
 Herself most like a stately flower, (Such have I seen) whom chance of
 birth 1635
 Hath separated from its kind,
 To live and die in a shady bowe,
 Single on the gladsome earth.

When, with a noise like distant thunder,
 A troop of deer came sweeping by ; 1640
 And, suddenly, behold a wonder !
 For One, among those rushing deer,
 A single One, in mid career
 Hath stopped, and fixed her large full eye
 Upon the Lady Emily ; 1645
 A Doe most beautiful, clear-white,
 A radiant creature, silver-bright !

Thus checked, a little while it stayed ;
 A little thoughtful pause it made ;
 And then advanced with stealth-like
 pace, 1650
 Drew softly near her, and more near—
 Looked round—but saw no cause for fear ;
 So to her feet the Creature came,
 And laid its head upon her knee,
 And looked into the Lady's face, 1655
 A look of pure benignity,
 And fond unclouded memory.
 It is, thought Emily, the same,
 The very Doe of other years !—

The pleading look the Lady viewed, 1660
 And, by her gushing thoughts subdued,
 She melted into tears—
 A flood of tears that flowed apace
 Upon the happy Creature's face.

Oh, moment ever blest ! O Pair 1665
 Beloved of Heaven, Heaven's chosen care,
 This was for you a precious greeting ;
 And may it prove a fruitful meeting !
 Joined are they, and the sylvan Doe
 Can she depart ? can she forego 1670
 The Lady, once her playful peer,
 And now her sainted Mistress dear ?
 And will not Emily receive
 This lovely chronicler of things
 Long past, delights and sorrowings ? 1675
 Lone Sufferer ! will not she believe
 The promise in that speaking face ;
 And welcome, as a gift of grace,
 The saddest thought the Creature brings ?

That day, the first of a re-union 1680
 Which was to teem with high communion,
 That day of balmy April weather,
 They tarried in the wood together.
 And when, ere fall of evening dew,
 She from her sylvan haunt withdrew, 1685
 The White Doe tracked with faithful pace
 The Lady to her dwelling-place ;
 That nook where, on paternal ground,
 A habitation she had found,
 The Master of whose humble board 1690
 Once owned her Father for his Lord ;
 A hut, by tufted trees defended, Where Rylstone brook with Wharf is blended.

When Emily by morning light Went forth, the Doe stood there in
 sight. 1695
 She shrunk :—with one frail shock of pain
 Received and followed by a prayer,
 She saw the Creature once again ;
 Shun will she not, she feels, will bear ;—
 But, wheresoever she looked round, 1700
 All now was trouble-haunted ground ;
 And therefore now she deems it good
 Once more this restless neighbourhood
 To leave.—Unwooded, yet unforbidden,
 The White Doe followed up the vale, 1705
 Up to another cottage, hidden

- In the deep fork of Amerdale ;
 And there may Emily restore Herself, in spots unseen before.
 —Why tell of mossy rock, or tree, 1710
 By lurking Dernbrook's pathless side,
 Haunts of a strengthening amity
 That calmed her, cheered, and fortified?
 For she hath ventured now to read
 Of time, and place, and thought, and deed— 1715
 Endless history that lies
 In her silent Follower's eyes ;
 Who with a power like human reason
 Discerns the favourable season,
 Skilled to approach or to retire,— 1720
 From looks conceiving her desire ;
 From look, deportment, voice, or mien,
 That vary to the heart within.
 If she too passionately wroathed
 Her arms, or over-deeply breathed, 1725
 Walked quick or slowly, every mood
 In its degree was understood ;
 Then well may their accord be true,
 And kindest intercourse ensue.
 —Oh ! surely 'twas a gentle rousing 1730
 When she by sudden glimpse espied
 The White Doe on the Mountain browsing,
 Or in the meadow wandered wide !
 How pleased, when down the Stragglersank
 Beside her, on some sunny bank ! 1735
 How soothed, when in thick bower enclosed,
 They, like a nested pair, reposed !
 Fair Vision ! when it crossed the Maid
 Within some rocky cavern laid,
 The dark cave's portal gliding by, 1740
 White as whitest cloud on high Floating through the azure sky.
 —What now is left for pain or fear ?
 That Presence, dearer and more dear,
 While they, side by side, were straying,
 And the shepherd's pipe was playing,
 Did now a very gladness yield
 At morning to the dewy field,
 And with a deeper peace endued
 The hour of moonlight solitude. 1750
- Undisturbed and undistrest, 1755
 Into a soul which now was blest
 With a soft spring-day of holy,
 Mild, and grateful, melancholy :
 Not sunless gloom or unenlightened,
 But by tender fancies brightened. 1760
- When the bells of Rylstone played
 Their sabbath music—"God us ayde !"
 That was the sound they seemed to speak ;
 Inscriptive legend which I ween
 May on these holy bells be seen, 1765
 That legend and her Grandsire's name ;
 And oftentimes the Lady meek
 Had in her childhood read the same ;
 Words which she slighted at that day ;
 But now, when such sad change was
 wrought, 1770
 And of that lonely name she thought,
 The bells of Rylstone seemed to say,
 While she sate listening in the shade,
 With vocal music, "God us ayde ;"
 And all the hills were glad to bear 1775
 Their part in this effectual prayer.
- Nor lacked she Reason's firmest power ;
 But with the White Doe at her side
 Up would she climb to Norton Tower, And thence look round her far and
 wide, 1780
 Her fate there measuring ;—all is stilled,—
 The weak One hath subdued her heart ;
 Behold the prophecy fulfilled,
 Fulfilled, and she sustains her part !
 But here her Brother's words have failed ; 1785
 Here hath a milder doom prevailed ;
 That she, of him and all bereft,
 Hath yet this faithful Partner left ;
 This one Associate that disproves
 His words remains for her, and loves. 1790
 If tears are shed, they do not fall
 For loss of him—for one, or all ;
 Yet sometimes, sometimes doth she weep
 Moved gently in her soul's soft sleep ;
 A few tears down her cheek descend 1795
 For this her last and living Friend.
- Bless, tender Hearts, their mutual lot,
 And bless for both this savage spot ;
 Which Emily doth sacred hold
 For reasons dear and manifold— 1800
- With her Companion, in such frame
 Of mind, to Rylstone back she came ;
 And, ranging through the wasted groves,
 Received the memory of old loves,

Here hath she, here before her sight,
Close to the summit of this height,
The grassy rock-encircled Pound
In which the Creature first was found.
So beautiful the timid Thrall 1805
(A spotless Youngling white as foam)
Her youngest Brother brought it home;
The youngest, then a lusty boy,
Bore it, or led, to Rylstone-hall
With heart brimful of pride and joy! 1810

But most to Bolton's sacred Pile,
On favouring nights, she loved to go;
There ranged through cloister, court, and
aisle,

Attended by the soft-paced Doe;
Nor feared she in the still moonshine 1815
To look upon Saint Mary's shrine;
Nor on the lonely turf that showed Where Francis slept in his last abode.
For that she came; there oft she sate
Forlorn, but not disconsolate: 1820
And when she from the abyss returned Of thought, she neither shrunk nor mourned;

Was happy that she lived to greet
Her mute Companion as it lay
In love and pity at her feet; 1825
How happy in its turn to meet
The recognition! the mild glance
Beamed from that gracious countenance;
Communication, like the ray
Of a new morning, to the nature 1830
And prospects of the inferior Creature!

A mortal Song we sing, by dower
Encouraged of celestial power;
Power which the viewless Spirit shed
By whom we were first visited; 1835 Whose voice we heard, whose hand and
wings

Swept like a breeze the conscious strings,
When, left in solitude, erewhile
We stood before this ruined Pile,
And, quitting unsubstantial dreams, 1840
Sang in this Presence kindred themes;
Distress and desolation spread Through human hearts, and pleasure
dead,—

Dead—but to live again on earth,
A second and yet nobler birth; 1845

Dire overthrow, and yet how high
The re-ascent in sanctity!
From fair to fairer; day by day
A more divine and loftier way!
Even such this blessed Pilgrim trod, 1850
By sorrow lifted towards her God;
Uplifted to the purest sky
Of undisturbed mortality.
Her own thoughts loved she; and could bend

A dear look to her lowly Friend; 1855
There stopped; her thirst was satisfied
With what this innocent spring supplied:
Her sanction inwardly she bore,
And stood apart from human cares:
But to the world returned no more, 1860
Although with no unwilling mind Help did she give at need, and joined
The Wharfedale peasants in their prayers.
At length, thus faintly, faintly tied
To earth, she was set free, and died. 1865
Thy soul, exalted Emily,
Maid of the blasted family,
Rose to the God from whom it came!
—In Rylstone Church her mortal frame
Was buried by her Mother's side. 1870

Most glorious sunset! and a ray Survives—the twilight of this day—
In that fair Creature whom the fields
Support, and whom the forest shields;
Who, having filled a holy place, 1875
Partakes, in her degree, Heaven's grace;
And bears a memory and a mind
Raised far above the law of kind;
Haunting the spots with lonely cheer Which her dear Mistress once held
dear: 1880

Loves most what Emily loved most—
The enclosure of this churchyard ground;
Here wanders like a gliding ghost,
And every sabbath here is found;
Comes with the people when the bells 1885
Are heard among the moorland dells, Finds entrance through yon arch, where
way

Lies open on the sabbath day;
Here walks amid the mournful waste
Of prostrate altars, shrines defaced, 1890
And floors encumbered with rich show
Of fret-work imagery laid low;

Paces softly, or makes halt,
 By fractured cell, or tomb, or vault;
 By plate of monumental brass 1895
 Dim-gleaming among weeds and grass,
 And sculptured Forms of Warriors brave:
 But chiefly by that single grave,
 That one sequestered hillock green,
 The pensive visitant is seen. 1900
 There doth the gentle Creature lie

With those adversities unmoved;
 Calm spectacle, by earth and sky
 In their benignity approved!
 And aye, methinks, this hoary Pile, 1905
 Subdued by outrage and decay,
 Looks down upon her with a smile,
 A gracious smile, that seems to say—
 "Thou, thou art not a Child of Time,
 But Daughter of the Eternal Prime!" 1910

ECCLESIASTICAL SONNETS.

IN SERIES¹.

[Composed mostly in 1821.—Published 1822.]

PART I.

FROM THE INTRODUCTION OF CHRISTIANITY INTO BRITAIN TO THE CONSUMMATION OF THE PAPAL DOMINION.

“A verse may catch a wandering Soul, that files
Profounder Tracts, and by a blest surprise Convert delight into a Sacrifice?”

I.

INTRODUCTION.

I, who accompanied with faithful pace
Cerulean Duddon from its cloud-fed
spring,
And loved with spirit ruled by his to sing
Of mountain-quiet and boon nature's
grace;
I, who essayed the nobler Stream to
trace
Of Liberty, and smote the plausive string Till the checked torrent, proudly triumph-
ing,
Won for herself a lasting resting-place;
Now seek upon the heights of Time the source
Of a HOLY RIVER, on whose banks are
found
Sweet pastoral flowers, and laurels that have crowned

Full oft the unworthy brow of lawless
force;
And, for delight of him who tracks its
course,
Immortal amaranth and palms abound.

II.

CONJECTURES.

If there be prophets on whose spirits
rest
Past things, revealed like future, they can tell
What Powers, presiding o'er the sacred
well
Of Christian Faith, this savage Island
blessed
With its first bounty. Wandering through the west,
Did holy Paul³ a while in Britain dwell,
And call the Fountain forth by miracle,
And with dread signs the nascent Stream invest?

¹ The Ecclesiastical Sonnets (first so called in 1837; previously Ecclesiastical Sketches) were written for the most part in 1821, and published in 1822. Chronological notes are attached only to those sonnets to which this observation does not apply.—Ed.

² This motto, from George Herbert, was added in 1827.—Ed.

³ See Note, p. 920.

Or He, whose bonds dropped off, whose prison doors
 Flew open, by an Angel's voice un-barred? 10
 Or some of humbler name, to these wild
 shores
 Storm-driven; who, having seen the cup
 of woe
 Pass from their Master, sojourned here to guard
 The precious Current they had taught to flow?

III.

TREPIDATION OF THE DRUIDS.

SCREAMS round the Arch-druid's brow the sea-mew¹—white
 As Menai's foam; and toward the mystic ring
 Where Augurs stand, the Future questioning,
 Slowly the cormorant aims her heavy
 flight,
 Portending ruin to each baleful rite 5
 That, in the lapse of ages, hath crept o'er Diluvian truths, and patriarchal lore.
 Haughty the Bard: can these meek doctrines blight
 His transports? wither his heroic strains?
 But all shall be fulfilled;—the Julian spear 10
 A way first opened; and, with Roman
 chains,
 The tidings come of Jesus crucified;
 They come—they spread—the weak, the suffering, hear;
 Receive the faith, and in the hope abide.

IV.

DRUIDICAL EXCOMMUNICATION.

MERCY and Love have met thee on thy
 road,
 Thou wretched Outcast, from the gift of
 fire
 And food cut off by sacerdotal ire,

¹ This water-fowl was, among the Druids, an emblem of those traditions connected with the Deluge that made an important part of their mysteries. The Cormorant was a bird of bad omen.

From every sympathy that Man bestowed!
 Yet shall it claim our reverence, that to
 God, 5
 Ancient of days! that to the eternal Sire,
 These jealous Ministers of law aspire,
 As to the one sole fount whence wisdom
 flowed,
 Justice, and order. Tremblingly escaped,
 As if with prescience of the coming
 storm, 10
 That intimation when the stars were shaped;
 And still, 'mid yon thick woods, the primal truth
 Glimmers through many a superstitious
 form
 That fills the Soul with unavailing ruth.

V.

UNCERTAINTY.

DARKNESS surrounds us; seeking, we are
 lost
 On Snowdon's wilds, amid Brigantian coves,
 Or where the solitary shepherd roves
 Along the plain of Sarum, by the ghost
 Of Time and shadows of Tradition crost;
 And where the boatman of the Western
 Isles 6
 Slackens his course—to mark those holy piles
 Which yet survive on bleak Iona's coast.
 Nor these, nor monuments of eldest
 name,
 Nor Taliesin's unforgotten lays, 10
 Nor characters of Greek or Roman fame,
 To an unquestionable Source have led;
 Enough—if eyes, that sought the fountain-head
 In vain, upon the growing Rill may gaze.

VI.

PERSECUTION.

LAMENT! for Diocletian's fiery sword
 Works busy as the lightning; but instinct
 With malice ne'er to deadliest weapon linked,
 Which God's ethereal storehouses afford:

Against the Followers of the incarnate
 Lord 5
 It rages ;—some are smitten in the field—
 Some pierced to the heart through the ineffectual shield
 Of sacred home ;—with pomp are others gored
 And dreadful respite. Thus was Alban tried,
 England's first Martyr, whom no threats could shake ; 10
 Self-offered victim, for his friend he died,
 And for the faith ; nor shall his name
 forsake
 That Hill, whose flowery platform seems to rise
 By Nature decked for holiest sacrifice¹.

VII.

RECOVERY.

As, when a storm hath ceased, the birds regain
 Their cheerfulness, and busily retrim
 Their nests, or chant a gratulating hymn
 To the blue ether and bespangled plain ;
 Even so, in many a re-constructed fane, 5
 Have the survivors of this Storm renewed
 Their holy rites with vocal gratitude :
 And solemn ceremonials they ordain
 To celebrate their great deliverance ;
 Most feelingly instructed 'mid their
 fear— 10
 That persecution, blind with rage extreme,
 May not the less, through Heaven's mild countenance,
 Even in her own despite, both feed and
 cheer ;
 For all things are less dreadful than they seem.

VIII.

TEMPTATIONS FROM ROMAN REFINEMENTS.

WATCH, and be firm ! for soul-subduing
 vice,
 Heart-killing luxury, on your steps await.

Fair houses, baths, and banquets delicate,
 And temples flashing, bright as polar ice,
 Their radiance through the woods—may yet suffice 5
 To sap your hardy virtue, and abate
 Your love of Him upon whose forehead
 sate
 The crown of thorns ; whose life-blood flowed, the price
 Of your redemption. Shun the insidious arts
 That Rome provides, less dreading from her frown 10
 Than from her wily praise, her peaceful gown,
 Language, and letters ;—these, though fondly viewed
 As humanising graces, are but parts
 And instruments of deadliest servitude !

IX.

DISSENSIONS.

THAT heresies should strike (if truth be scanned Presumptuously) their roots both wide and deep,
 Is natural as dreams to feverish sleep.
 Lo ! Discord at the altar dares to stand Uplifting toward high Heaven her fiery brand, 5
 A cherished Priestess of the new-baptized !
 But chastisement shall follow peace despised.
 The Pictish cloud darkens the enervate
 land
 By Rome abandoned ; vain are suppliant
 cries,
 And prayers that would undo her forced farewell ; 10
 For she returns not.—Awed by her own
 knell,
 She casts the Britons upon strange
 Allies,
 Soon to become more dreaded enemies Than heartless misery called them to repel.

X.

STRUGGLE OF THE BRITONS AGAINST THE BARBARIANS.

RISE!—they have risen : of brave Aneurin
ask
How they have scourged old foes, per-fidious friends :
The Spirit of Caractacus descends
Upon the Patriots, animates their task ;— Amazement runs before the towering casque
Of Arthur, bearing through the stormy
field
The virgin sculptured on his Christian
shield :—
Stretched in the sunny light of victory bask
The Host that followed Urien as he strode O'er heaps of slain ;—from Cambrian wood and moss
Druids descend, auxiliars of the Cross ; Bards, nursed on blue Plinlimmon's still
abode,
Rush on the fight, to harps preferring
swords,
And everlasting deeds to burning words !

XI.

SAXON CONQUEST.

NOR wants the cause the panic-striking
aid
Of hallelujahs¹ tost from hill to hill—
For instant victory. But Heaven's high
will Permits a second and a darker shade
Of Pagan night. Afflicted and dismayed,
The Relics of the sword flee to the mountains :
O wretched Land ! whose tears have flowed like fountains ;
Whose arts and honours in the dust are
laid
By men yet scarcely conscious of a care
For other monuments than those of
Earth ;
Who, as the fields and woods have given them birth,

Will build their savage fortunes only
there ;
Content, if foss, and barrow, and the girth
Of long-drawn rampart, witness what they were.

XII.

MONASTERY OF OLD BANGOR².

*THE oppression of the tumult—wrath and
scorn—
The tribulation—and the gleaming blades—*
Such is the impetuous spirit that pervades
The song of Taliesin ;—Ours shall mourn
The unarmed Host who by their prayers would turn
The sword from Bangor's walls, and guard the store
Of Aboriginal and Roman lore,
And Christian monuments, that now must burn
To senseless ashes. Mark ! how all things swerve
From their known course, or vanish like
a dream ;
Another language spreads from coast to coast ;
Only perchance some melancholy Stream
And some indignant Hills old names preserve,
When laws, and creeds, and people all are lost !

XIII.

CASUAL INCITEMENT.

A BRIGHT-HAIRED company of youthful slaves,
Beautiful strangers, stand within the pale
Of a sad market, ranged for public sale,
Where Tiber's stream the immortal City
laves :
ANGLI by name ; and not an ANGEL
waves
His wing who could seem lovelier to man's eye
Than they appear to holy Gregory ;

¹ See Note, p. 921.² See Note, p. 921.

Who, having learnt that name, salvation
 craves
 For Them, and for their Land. The earnest Sire,
 His questions urging, feels, in slender
 ties 10
 Of chiming sound, commanding sympathies ;
 DE-IRIANS—he would save them from God's IRE ;
 Subjects of Saxon ÆLLA—they shall sing
 Glad HALLE-lujahs to the eternal King !

XIV.

GLAD TIDINGS.

FOR ever hallowed be this morning fair, Blest be the unconscious shore on which ye tread,
 And blest the silver Cross, which ye, instead
 Of martial banner, in procession bear ;
 The Cross preceding Him who floats in
 air, 5
 The pictured Saviour !—By Augustin led,
 They come—and onward travel without
 dread,
 Chanting in barbarous ears a tuneful
 prayer—
 Sung for themselves, and those whom they would free !
 Rich conquest waits them :—the tempestuous sea 10
 Of Ignorance, that ran so rough and high
 And heeded not the voice of clashing
 swords,
 These good men humble by a few bare
 words,
 And calm with fear of God's divinity.

XV.

PAULINUS¹.

BUT to remote Northumbria's royal Hall, Where thoughtful Edwin, tutored in the school
 Of sorrow, still maintains a heathen rule,
 Who comes with functions apostolical ?
 Mark him, of shoulders curved, and stature tall, 5

Black hair, and vivid eye, and meagre
 cheek,
 His prominent feature like an eagle's beak ;
 A Man whose aspect doth at once appal
 And strike with reverence. The Monarch leans
 Toward the pure truths this Delegate propounds, 10
 Repeatedly his own deep mind he sounds
 With careful hesitation,—then convenes
 A synod of his Councillors :—give ear,
 And what a pensive Sage doth utter,
 hear !

XVI.

PERSUASION.

“MAN's life is like a Sparrow, mighty
 King !
 That—while at banquet with your Chiefs you sit Housed near a blazing fire—is seen to flit Safe from the wintry tempest. Fluttering,
 Here did it enter ; there, on hasty wing, 5 Flies out, and passes on from cold to
 cold ;
 But whence it came we know not, nor
 behold
 Whither it goes. Even such, that transient Thing,
 The human Soul ; not utterly unknown
 While in the Body lodged, her warm
 abode ; 10
 But from what world She came, what woe or weal
 On her departure waits, no tongue hath shown ;
 This mystery if the Stranger can reveal,
 His be a welcome cordially bestowed² !”

XVII.

CONVERSION.

PROMPT transformation works the novel
 Lore ;
 The Council closed, the Priest in full career
 Rides forth, an armèd man, and hurls a spear

² See Note, p. 921.

To desecrate the Fane which heretofore
 He served in folly. Woden falls, and Thor 5
 Is overturned; the mace, in battle heaved (So might they dream) till victory was achieved,
 Drops, and the God himself is seen no
 more.
 Temple and Altar sink, to hide their
 shame
 Amid oblivious weeds. "O come to me, 10
 Ye heavy laden!" such the inviting voice Heard near fresh streams¹; and thousands, who rejoice
 In the new Rite—the pledge of sanctity, Shall, by regenerate life, the promise claim.

XVIII.

APOLOGY.

NOR scorn the aid which Fancy oft doth lend
 The Soul's eternal interests to promote:
 Death, darkness, danger, are our natural
 lot;
 And evil Spirits may our walk attend
 For aught the wisest know or comprehend; 5
 Then be good Spirits free to breathe a note
 Of elevation; let their odours float Around these Converts; and their glories
 blend,
 The midnight stars outshining, or the blaze
 Of the noon-day. Nor doubt that golden cords 10
 Of good works, mingling with the visions,
 raise
 The Soul to purer worlds: and who the line
 Shall draw, the limits of the power define,
 That even imperfect faith to man affords?

XIX.

PRIMITIVE SAXON CLERGY².

How beautiful your presence, how benign, Servants of God! who not a thought will share
 With the vain world; who, outwardly as
 bare

As winter trees, yield no fallacious sign That the firm soul is clothed with fruit
 divine! 5
 Such Priest, when service worthy of his
 care
 Has called him forth to breathe the common air,
 Might seem a saintly Image from its
 shrine
 Descended:—happy are the eyes that meet
 The Apparition; evil thoughts are stayed At his approach, and low-bowed necks
 entreat 11
 A benediction from his voice or hand;
 Whence grace, through which the heart can understand,
 And vows, that bind the will, in silence
 made.

XX.

OTHER INFLUENCES.

AH, when the Body, round which in love
 we clung,
 Is chilled by death, does mutual service
 fail?
 Is tender pity then of no avail?
 Are intercessions of the fervent tongue
 A waste of hope?—From this sad source have sprung 5
 Rites that console the Spirit, under grief
 Which ill can brook more rational relief:
 Hence, prayers are shaped amiss, and dirges sung
 For Souls whose doom is fixed! The way is smooth
 For Power that travels with the human
 heart: 10
 Confession ministers the pang to soothe
 In him who at the ghost of guilt doth start.
 Ye holy Men, so earnest in your care,
 Of your own mighty instruments beware!

XXI.

SECLUSION.

LANCE, shield, and sword relinquished—at his side
 A bead-roll, in his hand a clasped book,
 Or staff more harmless than a shepherd's
 crook,

The war-worn Chieftain quits the world—to hide

His thin autumnal locks where Monks
abide 5

In cloistered privacy. But not to dwell
In soft repose he comes. Within his cell,
Round the decaying trunk of human pride,
At morn, and eve, and midnight's silent
hour,

Do penitential cogitations cling; 10
Like ivy, round some ancient elm, they twine

In grisly folds and strictures serpentine;
Yet, while they strangle, a fair growth they bring,

For recompense—their own perennial
bower.

XXII.

CONTINUED.

METHINKS that to some vacant hermitage
My feet would rather turn—to some dry
nook

Scooped out of living rock, and near a
brook

Hurled down a mountain-cove from stage
to stage,

Yet tempering, for my sight, its bustling rage 5

In the soft heaven of a translucent pool;
Thence creeping under sylvan arches cool,
Fit haunt of shapes whose glorious equi-
page

Would elevate my dreams. A beechen bowl,
A maple dish, my furniture should be; 10
Crisp, yellow leaves my bed; the hooting
owl

My night-watch: nor should e'er the crested fowl

From thorp or vill his matins sound
for me,

Tired of the world and all its industry.

XXIII.

REPROOF.

BUT what if One, through grove or flowery
mead,

Indulging thus at will the creeping feet
Of a voluptuous indolence, should meet

Thy hovering Shade, O venerable Bede!
The saint, the scholar, from a circle freed
Of toil stupendous, in a hallowed seat 6
Of learning, where thou heard'st the bil-lows beat

On a wild coast, rough monitors to feed
Perpetual industry. Sublime Recluse!
The recreant soul, that dares to shun the debt 10

Imposed on human kind, must first forget
Thy diligence, thy unrelaxing use
Of a long life; and, in the hour of death,
The last dear service of thy passing breath¹!

XXIV.

SAXON MONASTERIES, AND LIGHTS AND SHADES OF THE RELIGION.

By such examples moved to unbought
pains,

The people work like congregated bees;
Eager to build the quiet Fortresses
Where Piety, as they believe, obtains From Heaven a general blessing; timely rains 5

Or needful sunshine; prosperous enterprise,

Justice and peace:—bold faith! yet also rise

The sacred Structures for less doubtful gains.

The Sensual think with reverence of the palms

Which the chaste Votaries seek, beyond the grave; 10

If penance be redeemable, thence alms
Flow to the poor, and freedom to the slave;
And if full oft the Sanctuary save Lives black with guilt, ferocity it calms.

XXV.

MISSIONS AND TRAVELS.

NOT sedentary all: there are who roam
To scatter seeds of life on barbarous
shores;

Or quit with zealous step their knee-worn floors

¹ He expired dictating the last words of a translation of St. John's Gospel.

To seek the general mart of Christendom;
 Whence they, like richly-laden merchants,
 come 5
 To their belovèd cells:—or shall we say That, like the Red-cross Knight, they urge their way,
 To lead in memorable triumph home
 Truth, their immortal Una? Babylon, Learnèd and wise, hath perished utterly,
 Nor leaves her Speech one word to aid the sigh 11
 That would lament her;—Memphis, Tyre, are gone
 With all their Arts,—but classic lore glides on
 By these Religious saved for all posterity.

XXVI.

ALFRED.

BEHOLD a pupil of the monkish gown,
 The pious ALFRED, King to Justice dear!
 Lord of the harp and liberating spear;
 Mirror of Princes! Indigent Renown
 Might range the starry ether for a crown
 Equal to his deserts, who, like the year, 6
 Pours forth his bounty, like the day doth
 cheer,
 And awes like night with mercy-tempered frown.
 Ease from this noble miser of his time
 No moment steals; pain narrows not his cares¹. 10
 Though small his kingdom as a spark or gem,
 Of Alfred boasts remote Jerusalem,
 And Christian India, through her widespread clime,
 In sacred converse gifts with Alfred shares.

XXVII.

HIS DESCENDANTS.

WHEN thy great soul was freed from mortal chains,
 Darling of England! many a bitter
 shower
 Fell on thy tomb; but emulative power

Flowed in thy line through undegenerate
 veins.
 The Race of Alfred covet glorious pains 5
 When dangers threaten, dangers evernew!
 Black tempests bursting, blacker still in
 view!
 But manly sovereignty its hold retains;
 Theroot sincere, the branches bold to strive With the fierce tempest, while, within the round 10
 Of their protection, gentle virtues thrive;
 As oft, 'mid some green plot of open
 ground,
 Wide as the oak extends its dewy gloom,
 The fostered hyacinths spread their purple bloom.

XXVIII.

INFLUENCE ABUSED.

URGED by Ambition, who with subtlest
 skill
 Changes her means, the Enthusiast as a dupe
 Shall soar, and as a hypocrite can stoop,
 And turn the instruments of good to ill,
 Moulding the credulous people to his will.
 Such DUNSTAN:—from its Benedictine coop 6
 Issues the master Mind, at whose fell swoop
 The chaste affections tremble to fulfil
 Their purposes. Behold, pre-signified, The Might of spiritual sway! his thoughts, his dreams, 10
 Do in the supernatural world abide:
 So vaunt a throng of Followers, filled with pride
 In what they see of virtues pushed to extremes,
 And sorceries of talent misapplied.

XXIX.

DANISH CONQUESTS.

WOE to the Crown that doth the Cowl obey²!
 Dissension, checking arms that would restrain
 The incessant Rovers of the northern main,

² See Note, p. 921.

Helps to restore and spread a Pagan
sway :

But Gospel-truth is potent to allay 5
Fierceness and rage; and soon the cruel Dane

Feels, through the influence of her gentle
reign,

His native superstitions melt away.
Thus often, when thick gloom the east o'ershrouds,

The full-orbed Moon, slow-climbing, doth
appear 10

Silently to consume the heavy clouds;
How no one can resolve; but every eye
Around her sees, while air is hushed, a clear

And widening circuit of ethereal sky.

XXX.

CANUTE.

A PLEASANT music floats along the Mere,
From Monks in Ely chanting service high,
While-as Canute the King is rowing by:
"My Oarsmen," quoth the mighty King,
"draw near,

That we the sweet song of the Monks may hear!" 5

He listens (all past conquests and all
schemes

Of future vanishing like empty dreams)
Heart-touched, and haply not without a tear.

The Royal Minstrel, ere the choir is still,
While his free Barge skims the smooth flood along, 10

Gives to that rapture an accordant Rhyme¹.

O suffering Earth! be thankful; sternest
clime

And rudest age are subject to the thrill
Of heaven-descended Piety and Song.

XXXI.

THE NORMAN CONQUEST.

THE woman-hearted Confessor prepares
The evanescence of the Saxon line.
Hark! 'tis the tolling Curfew!—the stars
shine;

¹ Which is still extant.

But of the lights that cherish household
cares

And festive gladness, burns not one that dares 5

To twinkle after that dull stroke of thine, Emblem and instrument, from Thames to Tyne,

Of force that daunts, and cunning that ensnares!

Yet as the terrors of the lordly bell,
That quench, from hut to palace, lamps and fires, 10

Touch not the tapers of the sacred quires;
Even so a thralldom, studious to expel

Old laws, and ancient customs to derange,
To Creed or Ritual brings no fatal change.

XXXII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1837.]

COLDLY we spake. The Saxons, overpowered

By wrong triumphant through its own excess,

From fields laid waste, from house and home devoured

By flames, look up to heaven and crave redress

From God's eternal justice. Pitiless 5 Though men be, there are angels that can
feel

For wounds that death alone has power to heal,

For penitent guilt, and innocent distress.
And has a Champion risen in arms to try

His Country's virtue, fought, and breathes
no more; 10

Him in their hearts the people canonize;
And far above the mine's most precious ore

The least small pittance of bare mould they prize

Scooped from the sacred earth where his dear relics lie.

XXXIII.

THE COUNCIL OF CLERMONT.

"AND shall," the Pontiff asks, "profaneness flow

From Nazareth—source of Christian piety, From Bethlehem, from the Mounts of Agony

And glorified Ascension? Warriors, go,
With prayers and blessings we your path will sow; 5

Like Moses hold our hands erect, till ye
Have chased far off by righteous victory
These sons of Amalek, or laid them
low!"—

"GOD WILLETH IT," the whole assembly
cry;

Shout which the enraptured multitude astounds! 10

The Council-roof and Clermont's towers
reply;—

"God willeth it," from hill to hill rebounds,

And, in awe-stricken Countries far and
nigh,

Through "Nature's hollow arch" that voice resounds¹.

XXXIV.

CRUSADES.

THE turbaned Race are poured in thickening swarms

Along the west; though driven from Aquitaine,

The Crescent glitters on the towers of Spain;

And soft Italia feels renewed alarms;
The scimitar, that yields not to the charms 5

Of ease, the narrow Bosphorus will dis-
dain;

Nor long (that crossed) would Grecian hills detain

Their tents, and check the current of their arms.

Then blame not those who, by the mightiest lever

Known to the moral world, Imagination, Upheave, so seems it, from her natural station 11

All Christendom:—they sweep along (was never

So huge a host!)—to tear from the Un-believer

The precious Tomb, their haven of salvation.

¹ The decision of this council was believed to be instantly known in remote parts of Europe.

XXXV.

RICHARD I.

REDOUBTED King, of courage leonine,
I mark thee, Richard! urgent to equip Thy warlike person with the staff and scep;

I watch thee sailing o'er the midland
brine;

In conquered Cyprus see thy Bride decline 5

Her blushing cheek, love-vows upon her lip,

And see love-emblems streaming from thy ship,

As thence she holds her way to Palestine.
My Song, a fearless homager, would attend

Thy thundering battle-axe as it cleaves
the press 10

Of war, but duty summons her away
To tell—how, finding in the rash distress

Of those Enthusiasts a subservient friend,
To giddier heights hath clomb the Papal sway.

XXXVI.

AN' INTERDICT.

REALMS quake by turns: proud Arbitress
of grace,

The Church, by mandate shadowing forth the power

She arrogates o'er heaven's eternal door,
Closes the gates of every sacred place.

Straight from the sun and tainted air's
embrace 5

All sacred things are covered: cheerful
morn

Grows sad as night—no seemly garb is
worn,

Nor is a face allowed to meet a face
With natural smiles of greeting. Bells are dumb;

Ditches are graves—funereal rites denied;
And in the churchyard he must take his bride 11

Who dares be wedded! Fancies thickly
come

Into the pensive heart ill fortified,
And comfortless despairs the soul benumb.

XXXVII.

PAPAL ABUSES.

As with the Stream our voyage we
pursue,
The gross materials of this world present

A marvellous study of wild accident;
Uncouth proximities of old and new;
And bold transfigurations, more untrue 5
(As might be deemed) to disciplined
intent

Than aught the sky's fantastic element,
When most fantastic, offers to the view.
Saw we not Henry scourged at Becket's
Shrine?

Lo! John self-stripped of his insignia:—
crown, 10

Sceptre and mantle, sword and ring, laid
down

At a proud Legate's feet! The spears that line

Baronial halls the opprobrious insult
feel;

And angry Ocean roars a vain appeal.

XXXVIII.

SCENE IN VENICE.

BLACK Demons hovering o'er his mitred
head,

To Cæsar's Successor the Pontiff spake;
"Ere I absolve thee, stoop! that on thy neck

Levelled with earth this foot of mine may
tread."

Then he, who to the altar had been led, 5
He, whose strong arm the Orient could not check,

He, who had held the Soldan at his beck,

Stooped, of all glory disinherited,
And even the common dignity of man!— Amazement strikes the crowd: while many turn 10

Their eyes away in sorrow, others burn
With scorn, invoking a vindictive ban From outraged Nature; but the sense of most

In abject sympathy with power is lost.

XXXIX.

PAPAL DOMINION.

UNLESS to Peter's Chair the viewless wind Must come and ask permission when to
blow,

What further empire would it have?
for now

A ghostly Domination, unconfined
As that by dreaming Bards to Love
assigned, 5

Sits there in sober truth—to raise the low, Perplex the wise, the strong to over-
throw;

Through earth and heaven to bind and to unbind!—

Resist—the thunder quails thee!—crouch
—rebuff

Shall be thy recompense! from land to
land 10

The ancient thrones of Christendom are stuffed

For occupation of a magic wand,
And 'tis the Pope that wields it:— whether rough

Or smooth his front, our world is in his hand!

PART II.

TO THE CLOSE OF THE TROUBLES IN THE REIGN OF CHARLES I.

I.

[Composed ?.—Published 1845.]

How soon—alas! did Man, created pure—
By Angels guarded, deviate from the line
Prescribed to duty:—woeful forfeiture
He made by wilful breach of law divine.

With like perverseness did the Church abjure 5

Obedience to her Lord, and haste to
twine,

'Mid Heaven-born flowers that shall for aye endure,

Weeds on whose front the world had fixed her sign.

O Man,—if with thy trials thus it fares,
If good can smooth the way to evil choice,

From all rash censure be the mind kept
free; 11
He only judges right who weighs, compares,
And, in the sternest sentence which his
voice
Pronounces, ne'er abandons Charity.

II.

[Composed ?.—Published 1845.]

FROM false assumption rose, and fondly hailed
By superstition, spread the Papal power;
Yet do not deem the Autocracy prevailed
Thus only, even in error's darkest hour.
She daunts, forth-thundering from her spiritual tower 5
Brute rapine, or with gentle lure she tames.
Justice and Peace through Her uphold
their claims;
And Chastity finds many a sheltering
bower.
Realm there is none that if controlled or swayed
By her commands partakes not, in degree,
Of good, o'er manners arts and arms,
diffused: 11
Yes, to thy domination, Roman See,
Tho' miserably, oft monstrously, abused
By blind ambition, be this tribute paid.

III.

CISTERTIAN MONASTERY.

"*HERE Man more purely lives, less oft doth fall,
More promptly rises, walks with stricter
heed,
More safely rests, dies happier, is freed Earlier from burning fires, and gains withal
A brighter crown*."—On yon Cistercian wall
That confident assurance may be read; 6
And, to like shelter, from the world have fled
Increasing multitudes. The potent call Doubtless shall cheat full oft the heart's desires;
Yet, while the rugged Age on pliant knee
Vows to rapt Fancy humble fealty, 11

A gentler life spreads round the holy spires;
Where'er they rise, the sylvan waste
retires,
And aery harvests crown the fertile lea.

IV.

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

DEPLORABLE his lot who tills the ground,
His whole life long tills it, with heartless
toil
Of villain-service, passing with the soil
To each new Master, like a steer or hound, Or like a rooted tree, or stone earth-
bound; 5
But mark how gladly, through their own
domains,
The Monks relax or break these iron
chains;
While Mercy, uttering, through their voice, a sound Echoed in Heaven, cries out, "Ye Chiefs,
abate
These legalized oppressions! Man—whose
name 10
And nature God disdained not; Man—whose soul
Christ died for—cannot forfeit his high
claim
To live and move exempt from all control
Which fellow-feeling doth not mitigate!"

V.

MONKS AND SCHOOLMEN.

RECORD we too, with just and faithful pen,
That many hooded Cenobites there are,
Who in their private cells have yet a care
Of public quiet; unambitious Men,
Counsellors for the world, of piercing ken;
Whose fervent exhortations from afar 6
Move Princes to their duty, peace or war;
And oft-times in the most forbidding den
Of solitude, with love of science strong,
How patiently the yoke of thought they
bear! 10
How subtly glide its finest threads along!
Spirits that crowd the intellectual sphere
With mazy boundaries, as the astronomer With orb and cycle girds the starry throne.

VI.

OTHER BENEFITS.

AND, not in vain embodied to the sight,
 Religion finds even in the stern retreat
 Of feudal sway her own appropriate seat;
 From the collegiate pomps on Windsor's
 height
 Down to the humbler altar, which the Knight 5
 And his Retainers of the embattled hall
 Seek in domestic oratory small,
 For prayer in stillness, or the chanted
 rite;
 Then chiefly dear, when foes are planted
 round,
 Who teach the intrepid guardians of the
 place— 10
 Hourly exposed to death, with famine
 worn,
 And suffering under many a perilous
 wound—
 How sad would be their durance, if forlorn
 Of offices dispensing heavenly grace!

VII.

CONTINUED.

AND what melodious sounds at times
 prevail!
 And, ever and anon, how bright a gleam
 Pours on the surface of the turbid Stream!
 What heartfelt fragrance mingles with the gale
 That swells the bosom of our passing sail!
 For where, but on this River's margin,
 blow 6
 Those flowers of chivalry, to bind the
 brow
 Of hardihood with wreaths that shall not fail?—
 Fair Court of Edward! wonder of the
 world!
 I see a matchless blazonry unfurled 10
 Of wisdom, magnanimity, and love;
 And meekness tempering honourable
 pride;
 The lamb is couching by the lion's side,
 And near the flame-eyed eagle sits the dove.

VIII.

CRUSADERS.

FURL we the sails, and pass with tardy
 oars
 Through these bright regions, casting many a glance
 Upon the dream-like issues—the romance
 Of many-coloured life that Fortune pours Round the Crusaders, till on distant
 shores 5
 Their labours end; or they return to lie,
 The vow performed, in cross-legged effigy, Devoutly stretched upon their chancel
 floors.
 Am I deceived? Or is their requiem chanted
 By voices never mute when Heaven un-
 ties 10
 Her inmost, softest, tenderest harmonies;
 Requiem which Earth takes up with voice
 undaunted,
 When she would tell how Brave, and Good, and Wise,
 For their high guerdon not in vain have panted!

IX.

[Composed 1842.—Published 1845.]

As faith thus sanctified the warrior's crest
 While from the Papal Unity there came,
 What feebler means had failed to give,
 one aim
 Diffused thro' all the regions of the West;
 So does her Unity its power attest 5
 By works of Art, that shed, on the outward frame
 Of worship, glory and grace, which who shall blame
 That ever looked to heaven for final rest?
 Hail countless Temples! that so well befit
 Your ministry; that, as ye rise and take Form spirit and character from holy writ, 11
 Give to devotion, wheresoe'er awake, Pinions of high and higher sweep, and
 make
 The unconverted soul with awe submit.

X.

[Composed 1842.—Published 1845.]

WHERE long and deeply hath been fixed the root
In the blest soil of gospel truth, the Tree, (Blighted or scathed tho' many branches
be,
Put forth to wither, many a hopeful shoot)
Can never cease to bear celestial fruit. 5
Witness the Church that oft-times, with effect
Dear to the saints, strives earnestly to eject
Her bane, her vital energies recruit.
Lamenting, do not hopelessly repine
When such good work is doomed to be undone, 10
The conquests lost that were so hardly
won:—
All promises vouchsafed by Heaven will
shine
In light confirmed while years their course shall run,
Confirmed alike in progress and decline.

XI.

TRANSUBSTANTIATION.

ENOUGH! for see, with dim association
The tapers burn; the odorous incense feeds
A greedy flame; the pompous mass proceeds;
The Priest bestows the appointed consecration; 4
And, while the HOST is raised, its elevation
An awe and supernatural horror breeds;
And all the people bow their heads, like reeds
To a soft breeze, in lowly adoration.
This Valdo brooks not. On the banks of Rhone
He taught, till persecution chased him
thence, 10
To adore the Invisible, and Him alone.
Nor are his Followers loth to seek defence,
'Mid woods and wilds, on Nature's craggy
throne,
From rites that trample upon soul and sense.

XII.

THE VAUDOIS.

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

BUT whence came they who for the Saviour
Lord
Have long borne witness as the Scriptures teach?—
Ages ere Valdo raised his voice to preach
In Gallic ears the unadulterate Word,
Their fugitive Progenitors explored 5
Subalpine vales, in quest of safe retreats
Where that pure Church survives, though summer heats
Open a passage to the Romish sword, Far as it, dares to follow. Herbs self-
sown,
And fruitage gathered from the chestnut-
wood, 10
Nourish the sufferers then; and mists, that brood
O'er chasms with new-fallen obstacles
bestrown,
Protect them; and the eternal snow that daunts Aliens, is God's good winter for their haunts.

XIII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1835.]

PRAISED be the Rivers, from their mountain springs Shouting to Freedom, "Plant thy banners
here!"
To harassed Piety, "Dismiss thy fear,
And in our caverns smooth thy ruffled
wings!"
Nor be unthanked their final lingerings—Silent, but not to high-souled Passion's
ear— 6
'Mid reedy fens wide-spread and marshes
drear,
Their own creation. Such glad welcomings
As Po was heard to give where Venice
rose Hailed from aloft those Heirs of truth
divine 10
Who near his fountains sought obscure
repose,

Yet came prepared as glorious lights to
shine,
Should that be needed for their sacred
Charge;
Blest Prisoners They, whose spirits were at large!

XIV.

WALDENSES.

THOSE had given earliest notice, as the lark
Springs from the ground the morn to gratulate;
Or rather rose the day to antedate,
By striking out a solitary spark,
When all the world with midnight gloom was dark.— 5
Then followed the Waldensian bands, whom Hate
In vain endeavours to exterminate, Whom Obloquy pursues with hideous bark¹:
But they desist not;—and the sacred fire,
Rekindled thus, from dens and savage
woods 10
Moves, handed on with never-ceasing care, Through courts, through camps, o'er limitary floods;
Nor lacks this sea-girt Isle a timely share
Of the new Flame, not suffered to expire.

XV.

ARCHBISHOP CHICHELEY TO HENRY V.

“WHAT beast in wilderness or cultured
field
The lively beauty of the leopard shows?
What flower in meadow-ground or garden
grows
That to the towering lily doth not yield?
Let both meet only on thy royal shield! 5 Go forth, great King! claim what thy birth bestows;
Conquer the Gallic lily which thy foes Dare to usurp;—thou hast a sword to wield,
And Heaven will crown the right.”—The mitred Sire

Thus spake—and lo! a Fleet, for Gaul
address, 10
Ploughs her bold course across the wondering seas;
For, sooth to say, ambition, in the breast
Of youthful heroes, is no sullen fire,
But one that leaps to meet the fanning
breeze.

XVI.

WARS OF YORK AND LANCASTER.

THUS is the storm abated by the craft
Of a shrewd Counsellor, eager to protect The Church, whose power hath recently been checked,
Whose monstrous riches threatened. So the shaft
Of victory mounts high, and blood is quaffed 5
In fields that rival Cressy and Poitiers—
Pride to be washed away by bitter tears!
For deep as hell itself, the avenging draught
Of civil slaughter. Yet, while temporal
power
Is by these shocks exhausted, spiritual
truth 10
Maintains the else endangered gift of life;
Proceeds from infancy to lusty youth;
And, under cover of this woeful strife, Gathers unblighted strength from hour
to hour.

XVII.

WICLIFFE.

ONCE more the Church is seized with sudden fear,
And at her call is Wicliffe disinhumed:
Yea, his dry bones to ashes are consumed
And flung into the brook that travels
near;
Forthwith that ancient Voice which Streams can hear 5
Thus speaks (that Voice which walks upon
the wind,
Though seldom heard by busy human
kind)—
“As thou these ashes, little Brook! wilt
bear
Into the Avon, Avon to the tide
Of Severn, Severn to the narrow seas, 10

Into main Ocean they, this deed accurst
 An emblem yields to friends and enemies
 How the bold Teacher's Doctrine, sanctified By truth, shall spread, throughout the world dispersed."

XVIII.

CORRUPTIONS OF THE HIGHER CLERGY.

"WOE to you, Prelates! rioting in ease And cumbrous wealth—the shame of your estate;
 You, on whose progress dazzling trains await
 Of pompous horses; whom vain titles
 please;
 Who will be served by others on their knees, 5
 Yet will yourselves to God no service
 pay;
 Pastors who neither take nor point the
 way
 To Heaven; for, either lost in vanities
 Ye have no skill to teach, or if ye know
 And speak the word ——" Alas! of fearful things 10
 'Tis the most fearful when the people's
 eye
 Abuse hath cleared from vain imaginings;
 And taught the general voice to prophesy
 Of Justice armed, and Pride to be laid low.

XIX.

ABUSE OF MONASTIC POWER.

AND what is Penance with her knotted thong;
 Mortification with the shirt of hair, Wan cheek, and knees indurated with
 prayer,
 Vigils, and fastings rigorous as long;
 If cloistered Avarice scruple not to wrong
 The pious, humble, useful Secular, 6
 And rob the people of his daily care, Scorning that world whose blindness makes her strong?
 Inversion strange! that, unto One who
 lives
 For self, and struggles with himself alone,

The amplest share of heavenly favour gives; 11
 That to a Monk allots, both in the esteem
 Of God and man, place higher than to him Who on the good of others builds his own!

XX.

MONASTIC VOLUPTUOUSNESS.

YET more,—round many a Convent's blazing fire
 Unhallowed threads of revelry are spun;
 There Venus sits disguised like a Nun,— While Bacchus, clothed in semblance of a Friar,
 Pours out his choicest beverage high and higher 5
 Sparkling, until it cannot choose but run
 Over the bowl, whose silver lip hath won
 An instant kiss of masterful desire—To stay the precious waste. Through every brain
 The domination of the sprightly juice 10
 Spreads high conceits to madding Fancy
 dear,
 Till the arched roof, with resolute abuse
 Of its grave echoes, swells a choral strain Whose votive burthen is—"OUR KING-DOM'S HERE!"

XXI.

DISSOLUTION OF THE MONASTERIES.

TREATS come which no submission may assuage,
 No sacrifice avert, no power dispute;
 The tapers shall be quenched, the belfries
 mute,
 And, 'mid their choirs unroofed by selfish
 rage,
 The warbling wren shall find a leafy cage;
 The gadding bramble hang her purple
 fruit; 6
 And the green lizard and the gilded newt
 Lead unmolested lives, and die of age.
 The owl of evening and the woodland fox
 For their abode the shrines of Waltham
 choose: 10
 Proud Glastonbury can no more refuse To stoop her head before these desperate shocks—

She whose high pomp displaced, as story
tells,
Arimathean Joseph's wattled cells.

XXII.

THE SAME SUBJECT.

THE lovely Nun (submissive, but more meek
Through saintly habit than from effort
due
To unrelenting mandates that pursue With equal wrath the steps of strong and
weak)
Goes forth—unveiling timidly a cheek 5
Suffused with blushes of celestial hue,
While through the Convent's gate to open
view
Softly she glides, another home to seek.
Not Iris, issuing from her cloudy shrine,
An Apparition more divinely bright! 10
Not more attractive to the dazzled sight
Those watery glories, on the stormy brine Poured forth, while summer suns at distance
shine,
And the green vales lie hushed in sober
light!

XXIII.

CONTINUED.

YET many a Novice of the cloistral shade,
And many chained by vows, with eager
glee
The warrant hail, exulting to be free;
Like ships before whose keels, full long embayed
In polar ice, propitious winds have made Unlooked-for outlet to an open sea, 6
Their liquid world, for bold discovery,
In all her quarters temptingly displayed!
Hope guides the young; but when the old
must pass
The threshold, whither shall they turn to
find 10
The hospitality—the alms (alas!
Alms may be needed) which that House bestowed?
Can they, in faith and worship, train the
mind
To keep this new and questionable road?

XXIV.

SAINTS.

YE, too, must fly before a chasing hand, Angels and Saints, in every hamlet
mourned!
Ah! if the old idolatry be spurned, Let not your radiant Shapes desert the
Land:
Her adoration was not your demand, 5
The fond heart proffered it—the servile
heart;
And therefore are ye summoned to depart, Michael, and thou, St. George, whose flaming brand
The Dragon quelled; and valiant Margaret 9
Whose rival sword a like Opponent slew:
And rapt Cecilia, seraph-haunted Queen
Of harmony; and weeping Magdalene,
Who in the penitential desert met Gales sweet as those that over Eden blew!

XXV

THE VIRGIN.

MOTHER! whose virgin bosom was un-crossed
With the least shade of thought to sin allied;
Woman! above all women glorified,
Our tainted nature's solitary boast;
Purer than foam on central ocean tost; 5
Brighter than eastern skies at daybreak strewn
With fancied roses, than the unblemished
moon
Before her wane begins on heaven's blue
coast;
Thy Image falls to earth. Yet some, I
ween,
Not unforgiven the suppliant knee might bend, 10
As to a visible Power, in which did
blend
All that was mixed and reconciled in
Thee
Of mother's love with maiden purity,
Of high with low, celestial with terrene!

XXVI.

APOLOGY.

NOT utterly unworthy to endure
 Was the supremacy of crafty Rome;
 Age after age to the arch of Christendom
 Aerial keystone haughtily secure;
 Supremacy from Heaven transmitted
 pure, 5
 As many hold; and, therefore, to the tomb
 Pass, some through fire—and by the scaffold some—
 Like saintly Fisher, and unbending More.
 "Lightly for both the bosom's lord did
 sit Upon his throne;" unsoftened, undismayed 10
 By aught that mingled with the tragic
 scene
 Of pity or fear; and More's gay genius
 played
 With the inoffensive sword of native wit,
 Than the bare axe more luminous and keen.

XXVII.

IMAGINATIVE REGRETS.

DEEP is the lamentation! Not alone
 From Sages justly honoured by mankind;
 But from the ghostly tenants of the wind,
 Demons and Spirits, many a dolorous
 groan
 Issues for that dominion overthrown: 5
 Proud Tiber grieves, and far-off Ganges,
 blind
 As his own worshippers: and Nile, reclined
 Upon his monstrous urn, the farewell
 moan Renews. Through every forest, cave, and
 den,
 Where frauds were hatched of old, hath sorrow past— 10
 Hangs o'er the Arabian Prophet's native
 Waste,
 Where once his airy helpers schemed and planned
 'Mid spectral lakes bemocking thirsty
 men,
 And stalking pillars built of fiery sand.

XXVIII.

REFLECTIONS.

GRANT that by this unsparing hurricane Green leaves with yellow mixed are torn
 away,
 And goodly fruitage with the mother-
 spray;
 'Twere madness—wished we, therefore, to detain,
 With hands stretched forth in mollified
 disdain, 5
 The "trumpery" that ascends in bare
 display—
 Bulls, pardons, relics, cowls black, white,
 and grey—
 Upwhirled, and flying o'er the ethereal
 plain Fast bound for Limbo Lake. And yet not choice
 But habit rules the unreflecting herd, 10
 And airy bonds are hardest to disown;
 Hence, with the spiritual sovereignty transferred Unto itself, the Crown assumes a voice
 Of reckless mastery, hitherto unknown.

XXIX.

TRANSLATION OF THE BIBLE.

BUT, to outweigh all harm, the sacred
 Book,
 In dusty sequestration wrapt too long,
 Assumes the accents of our native tongue;
 And he who guides the plough, or wields
 the crook,
 With understanding spirit now may look Upon her records, listen to her song, 6
 And sift her laws—much wondering that the wrong,
 Which Faith has suffered, Heaven could calmly brook.
 Transcendent Boon! noblest that earthly
 King
 Ever bestowed to equalize and bless 10
 Under the weight of mortal wretched-
 ness!
 But passions spread like plagues, and thousands wild
 With bigotry shall tread the Offering Beneath their feet, detested and defiled.

XXX.

THE POINT AT ISSUE.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

FOR what contend the wise?—for nothing less Than that the Soul, freed from the bonds
 of Sense,
 And to her God restored by evidence Of things not seen, drawn forth from their recess,
 Root there, and not in forms, her holi-
 ness;— 5
 For Faith, which to the Patriarchs did dispense
 Sure guidance, ere a ceremonial fence Was needful round men thirsting to transgress;—
 For Faith, more perfect still, with which the Lord
 Of all, himself a Spirit, in the youth 10
 Of Christian aspiration, deigned to fill The temples of their hearts who, with his word
 Informed, were resolute to do his will,
 And worship him in spirit and in truth.

XXXI.

EDWARD VI.

“SWEET is the holiness of Youth”—so
 felt
 Time-honoured Chaucer speaking through that Lay
 By which the Prioress beguiled the way,
 And many a Pilgrim’s rugged heart did melt.
 Hadst thou, loved Bard! whose spirit often dwelt 5
 In the clear land of vision, but foreseen King, child, and seraph, blended in the
 mien
 Of pious Edward kneeling as he knelt
 In meek and simple infancy, what joy
 For universal Christendom had thrilled Thy heart! what hopes inspired thy genius, skilled, 11
 (O great Precursor, genuine morning Star)
 The lucid shafts of reason to employ,
 Piercing the Papal darkness from afar!

XXXII.

EDWARD SIGNING THE WARRANT FOR THE EXECUTION OF JOAN OF KENT.

THE tears of man in various measure gush
 From various sources; gently overflow
 From blissful transport some—from clefts
 of woe
 Some with ungovernable impulse rush;
 And some, coeval with the earliest blush
 Of infant passion, scarcely dare to show 6
 Their pearly lustre—coming but to go;
 And some break forth when others’ sorrows crush
 The sympathising heart. Nor these, nor yet
 The noblest drops to admiration known,
 To gratitude, to injuries forgiven— 11 Claim Heaven’s regard like waters that have wet
 The innocent eyes of youthful Monarchs
 driven
 To pen the mandates nature doth disown.

XXXIII.

REVIVAL OF POKERY.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

THE saintly Youth has ceased to rule, discrowned
 By unrelenting Death. O People keen For change, to whom the new looks always green!
 Rejoicing did they cast upon the ground Their Gods of wood and stone; and, at the sound 5
 Of counter-proclamation, now are seen, (Proud triumph is it for a sullen Queen!)
 Lifting them up, the worship to confound Of the Most High. Again do they invoke
 The Creature, to the Creature glory
 give; 10
 Again with frankincense the altars smoke
 Like those the Heathen served; and mass is sung;
 And prayer, man’s rational prerogative,
 Runs through blind channels of an unknown tongue.

XXXIV.

LATIMER AND RIDLEY.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

How fast the Marian death-list is unrolled!

See Latimer and Ridley in the might
Of Faith stand coupled for a common flight!

One (like those prophets whom God sent of old)

Transfigured¹, from this kindling hath foretold 5

A torch of inextinguishable light;
The Other gains a confidence as bold;
And thus they foil their enemy's despite.
The penal instruments, the shows of crime,

Are glorified while this once-mitred pair
Of saintly Friends the "murderer's chain partake, II

Corded, and burning at the social stake:"
Earth never witnessed object more sublime

In constancy, in fellowship more fair!

XXXV.

CRANMER.

OUTSTRETCHING flameward his upbraided
hand

(O God of mercy, may no earthly Seat
Of judgment such presumptuous doom
repeat!)

Amid the shuddering throng doth Cranmer stand;

Firm as the stake to which with iron
band 5

His frame is tied; firm from the naked
feet

To the bare head. The victory is complete;

The shrouded Body to the Soul's command

Answers with more than Indian forti-
tude,

Through all her nerves with finer sense endued, 10

Till breath departs in blissful aspiration:

Then, 'mid the ghastly ruins of the fire, Behold the unalterable heart entire,
Emblem of faith untouched, miraculous attestation²!

XXXVI.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE TROUBLES OF
THE REFORMATION.

AID, glorious Martyrs, from your fields
of light,

Our mortal ken! Inspire a perfect trust (While we look round) that Heaven's decrees are just:

Which few can hold committed to a fight
That shows, ev'n on its better side, the
might 5

Of proud Self-will, Rapacity, and Lust,
'Mid clouds enveloped of polemic dust,
Which showers of blood seem rather to incite

Than to allay. Anathemas are hurled From both sides; veteran thunders (the brute test 10

Of truth) are met by fulminations new—Tartarean flags are caught at, and unfurled—

Friends strike at friends—the flying shall pursue—

And Victory sickens, ignorant where to rest!

XXXVII.

ENGLISH REFORMERS IN EXILE.

SCATTERING, like birds escaped the fowler's net,

Some seek with timely flight a foreign strand;

Most happy, re-assembled in a land
By dauntless Luther freed, could they forget

Their Country's woes. But scarcely have they met, 5

Partners in faith, and brothers in distress, Free to pour forth their common thankfulness,

Ere hope declines:—their union is beset
With speculative notions rashly sown,

² For the belief in this fact, see the contemporary Historians.

Whence thickly-sprouting growth of poisonous weeds; ¹⁰
Their forms are broken staves; their passions, steeds
That master them. How enviably blest
Is he who can, by help of grace, enthrone
The peace of God within his single breast!

XXXVIII.

ELIZABETH.

HAIL, Virgin Queen! o'er many an envious bar
Triumphant, snatched from many a treacherous wile!
All hail, sage Lady, whom a grateful Isle Hath blest, respiring from that dismal
war Stilled by thy voice! But quickly from afar ⁵
Defiance breathes with more malignant
aim;
And alien storms with home-bred ferments claim
Portentous fellowship. Her silver car,
By sleepless prudence ruled, glides slowly on;
Unhurt by violence, from menaced taint Emerging pure, and seemingly more bright: ¹¹
Ah! wherefore yields it to a foul constraint
Black as the clouds its beams dispersed,
while shone,
By men and angels blest, the glorious
light?

XXXIX.

EMINENT REFORMERS.

METHINKS that I could trip o'er heaviest soil,
Light as a buoyant bark from wave to
wave,
Were mine the trusty staff that JEWEL
gave
To youthful HOOKER, in familiar style
The gift exalting, and with playful smile¹: ⁵

For thus equipped, and bearing on his
head
The Donor's farewell blessing, can he dread
Tempest, or length of way, or weight of toil?—
More sweet than odours caught by him who sails
Near spicy shores of Araby the blest, ¹⁰
A thousand times more exquisitely sweet,
The freight of holy feeling which we meet,
In thoughtful moments, wafted by the gales
From fields where good men walk, or bowers wherein they rest.

XL.

THE SAME.

HOLY and heavenly Spirits as they are,
Spotless in life, and eloquent as wise,
With what entire affection do they prize Their Church reformed! labouring with earnest care
To baffle all that may her strength impair; ⁵
That Church, the unperverted Gospel's
seat;
In their afflictions a divine retreat;
Source of their liveliest hope, and tenderest prayer!—
The truth exploring with an equal mind,
In doctrine and communion they have sought ¹⁰
Firmly between the two extremes to steer;
But theirs the wise man's ordinary lot,
To trace right courses for the stubborn
blind,
And prophesy to ears that will not hear.

XLI.

DISTRACTIONS.

MEN, who have ceased to reverence, soon
defy
Their forefathers; lo! sects are formed, and split
With morbid restlessness:—the ecstatic fit Spreads wide; though special mysteries multiply,

The Saints must govern is their common
cry; 5
And so they labour, deeming Holy Writ Disgraced by aught that seems content to sit
Beneath the roof of settled Modesty.
The Romanist exults; fresh hope he draws
From the confusion, craftily incites 10
The overweening, personates the mad—
To heap disgust upon the worthier Cause:
Totters the Throne; the new-born Church is sad,
For every wave against her peace unites.

XLII.

GUNPOWDER PLOT.

FEAR hath a hundred eyes that all agree To plague her beating heart; and there is
one (Nor idlest that!) which holds communion
With things that were not, yet were meant to be.
Aghast within its gloomy cavity 5
That eye (which sees as if fulfilled and done Crimes that might stop the motion of the
sun)
Beholds the horrible catastrophe
Of an assembled Senate unredeemed
From subterraneous Treason's darkling
power: 10
Merciless act of sorrow infinite!
Worse than the product of that dismal
night,
When gushing, copious as a thunder-
shower,
The blood of Huguenots through Paris streamed.

XLIII.

ILLUSTRATION.

THE JUNG-FRAU AND THE FALL OF THE RHINE NEAR SCHAFFHAUSEN.
THE Virgin-Mountain¹, wearing like a
Queen
A brilliant crown of everlasting snow,

Sheds ruin from her sides; and men
below
Wonder that aught of aspect so serene Can link with desolation. Smooth and
green, 5
And seeming, at a little distance, slow,
The waters of the Rhine; but on they
go Fretting and whitening, keener and more
keen;
Till madness seizes on the whole wide
Flood,
Turned to a fearful Thing whose nostrils
breathe 10
Blasts of tempestuous smoke—wherewith
he tries
To hide himself, but only magnifies;
And doth in more conspicuous torment
writhe,
Deafening the region in his ireful mood.

XLIV.

TROUBLES OF CHARLES THE FIRST.

EVEN such the contrast that, where'er we
move,
To the mind's eye Religion doth present;
Now with her own deep quietness content;
Then, like the mountain, thundering from above
Against the ancient pine-trees of the grove 5
And the Land's humblest comforts. Now her mood
Recalls the transformation of the flood, Whose rage the gentle skies in vain re-
prove,
Earth cannot check. O terrible excess
Of headstrong will! Can this be Piety?
No—some fierce Maniac hath usurped her
name; 11
And scourges England struggling to be
free:
Her peace destroyed! her hopes a wilderness!
Her blessings cursed—her glory turned to shame!

XLV.

LAUD¹.

PREJUDGED by foes determined not to spare,
An old weak Man for vengeance thrown
aside,

Laud, "in the painful art of dying" tried,
(Like a poor bird entangled in a snare Whose heart still flutters, though his wings forbear 5

To stir in useless struggle) hath relied On hope that conscious innocence supplied,

And in his prison breathes celestial air.
Why tarries then thy chariot? Wherefore
stay,

O Death! the ensanguined yet triumphant wheels, 10

Which thou prepar'st, full often, to convey (What time a State with madding faction reels)

The Saint or Patriot to the world that heals
All wounds, all perturbations doth allay?

XLVI.

AFFLICTIONS OF ENGLAND.

HARP! couldst thou venture, on thy boldest string,

The faintest note to echo which the blast
Caught from the hand of Moses as it
passed

O'er Sinai's top, or from the Shepherd-
king,

Early awake, by Siloa's brook, to sing 5
Of dread Jehovah; then should wood and
waste

Hear also of that name, and mercy cast
Off to the mountains, like a covering Of which the Lord was weary. Weep, oh! weep,

Weep with the good, beholding King and Priest 10

Despised by that stern God to whom they raise

Their suppliant hands; but holy is the feast

He keepeth; like the firmament his ways:
His statutes like the chambers of the deep.

PART III.

FROM THE RESTORATION TO THE PRE-SENT TIMES.

I.

I SAW the figure of a lovely Maid
Seated alone beneath a darksome tree,
Whose fondly-overhanging canopy
Set off her brightness with a pleasing shade.
No Spirit was she; that my heart betrayed, 5

For she was one I loved exceedingly;
But while I gazed in tender reverie (Or was it sleep that with my Fancy
played?)

The bright corporeal presence—form and
face—

Remaining still distinct grew thin and rare, 10

Like sunny mist;—at length the golden hair,

Shape, limbs, and heavenly features, keeping pace

Each with the other in a lingering race
Of dissolution, melted into air.

II.

PATRIOTIC SYMPATHIES.

LAST night, without a voice, that Vision
spake

Fear to my Soul, and sadness which might seem

Wholly dissevered from our present
theme;

Yet, my beloved Country! I partake
Of kindred agitations for thy sake; 5

Thou, too, dost visit oft my midnight
dream;

Thy glory meets me with the earliest beam

Of light, which tells that Morning is awake.

If aught impair thy beauty or destroy,
Or but forbode destruction, I deplore 10

With filial love the sad vicissitude;
If thou hast fallen, and righteous Heaven restore

The prostrate, then my spring-time is renewed,

And sorrow bartered for exceeding joy.

III.

CHARLES THE SECOND.

WHO comes—with rapture greeted, and
caressed

With frantic love—his kingdom to regain?
Him Virtue's Nurse, Adversity, in vain
Received, and fostered in her iron breast:
For all she taught of hardest and of best,
Or would have taught, by discipline of pain
And long privation, now dissolves amain,
Or is remembered only to give zest
To wantonness.—Away, Circean revels!

But for what gain? if England soon must sink 10

Into a gulf which all distinction levels—
That bigotry may swallow the good name,
And, with that draught, the life-blood:
misery, shame,

By Poets loathed; from which Historians shrink!

IV.

LATITUDINARIANISM.

YET Truth is keenly sought for, and the
wind

Charged with rich words poured out in thought's defence;

Whether the Church inspire that eloquence,

Or a Platonic Piety confined

To the sole temple of the inward mind; 5
And One there is who builds immortallays,
Though doomed to tread in solitary ways,
Darkness before and danger's voice behind;
Yet not alone, nor helpless to repel

Sad thoughts; for from above the starry sphere 10

Come secrets, whispered nightly to his ear;
And the pure spirit of celestial light

Shines through his soul—"that he may see and tell

Of things invisible to mortal sight."

V.

WALTON'S BOOK OF LIVES.

THERE are no colours in the fairest sky
So fair as these. The feather, whence the pen

Was shaped that traced the lives of these good men,

Dropped from an Angel's wing. With moistened eye

We read of faith and purest charity 5
In Statesman, Priest, and humble Citizen:
Oh could we copy their mild virtues, then What joy to live, what blessedness to
die!

Methinks their very names shine still and
bright;

Apart—like glow-worms on a summer
night; 10

Or lonely tapers when from far they fling
A guiding ray; or seen—like stars on high,
Satellites burning in a lucid ring

Around meek Walton's heavenly memory.

VI.

CLERICAL INTEGRITY.

NOR shall the eternal roll of praise reject
Those Unconforming; whom one rigorous
day

Drives from their Cures, a voluntary prey
To poverty, and grief, and disrespect,

And some to want—as if by tempests
wrecked 5

On a wild coast; how destitute! did They Feel not that Conscience never can betray,

That peace of mind is Virtue's sure effect.
Their altars they forego, their homes they quit,

Fields which they love, and paths they daily trod, 10

And cast the future upon Providence;

As men the dictate of whose inward sense Outweighs the world; whom self-deceiving
wit

Lures not from what they deem the cause
of God.

VII.

PERSECUTION OF THE SCOTTISH COVE-NANTERS.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

WHEN Alpine Vales threw forth a suppliant cry,

The majesty of England interposed
And the sword stopped; the bleeding wounds were closed;

And Faith preserved her ancient purity.

How little boots that precedent of good, 5
 Scorned or forgotten, Thou canst testify,
 For England's shame, O Sister Realm!
 from wood,
 Mountain, and moor, and crowded street, where lie
 The headless martyrs of the Covenant, Slain by Compatriot-protestants that
 draw 10
 From councils senseless as intolerant
 Their warrant. Bodies fall by wild sword-
 law;
 But who would force the Soul tilts with a straw
 Against a Champion cased in adamant.

VIII.

ACQUITTAL OF THE BISHOPS.

A VOICE, from long-expecting thousands
 sent,
 Shatters the air, and troubles tower and
 spire;
 For Justice hath absolved the innocent,
 And Tyranny is balked of her desire:
 Up, down, the busy Thames—rapid as
 fire 5
 Coursing a train of gunpowder—it went,
 And transport finds in every street a vent, Till the whole City rings like one vast
 quire.
 The Fathers urge the People to be still,
 With outstretched hands and earnest speech—in vain! 10
 Yea, many, haply wont to entertain
 Small reverence for the mitre's offices,
 And to Religion's self no friendly will,
 A Prelate's blessing ask on bended knees.

IX.

WILLIAM THE THIRD.

CALM as an under-current, strong to draw
 Millions of waves into itself, and run,
 From sea to sea, impervious to the sun
 And ploughing storm, the spirit of Nassau (Swerves not, how blest if by religious awe 5
 Swayed, and thereby enabled to contend With the wide world's commotions) from its end

Swerves not—diverted by a casual law.
 Had mortal action e'er a nobler scope?
 The Hero comes to liberate, not defy; 10
 And while he marches on with steadfast
 hope,
 Conqueror beloved! expected anxiously!
 The vacillating Bondman of the Pope Shrinks from the verdict of his steadfast eye.

X.

OBLIGATIONS OF CIVIL TO RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

UNGRATEFUL Country, if thou e'er forget
 The sons who for thy civil rights have bled!
 How, like a Roman, Sidney bowed his
 head,
 And Russell's milder blood the scaffold wet;
 But these had fallen for profitless regret 5
 Had not thy holy Church her champions
 bred,
 And claims from other worlds inspirited
 The star of Liberty to rise. Nor yet (Grave this within thy heart!) if spiritual
 things
 Be lost, through apathy, or scorn, or fear,
 Shalt thou thy humbler franchises support, 11
 However hardly won or justly dear:
 What came from heaven to heaven by nature clings,
 And, if dissevered thence, its course is short.

XI.

SACHEVEREL.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

A SUDDEN conflict rises from the swell
 Of a proud slavery met by tenets strained In Liberty's behalf. Fears, true or feigned,
 Spread through all ranks; and lo! the Sentinel
 Who loudest rang his pulpit 'larum bell, Stands at the Bar, absolved by female
 eyes 6
 Mingling their glances with grave flatteries

Lavished on Him—that England may rebel Against her ancient virtue. HIGH and
Low, Watchwords of Party, on all tongues are rife; 10
As if a Church, though sprung from heaven, must owe
To opposites and fierce extremes her
life,—
Not to the golden mean, and quiet flow
Of truths that soften hatred, temper strife.

XII.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

DOWN a swift Stream, thus far, a bold
design
Have we pursued, with livelier stir of
heart
Than his who sees, borne forward by the Rhine,
The living landscapes greet him, and
depart;
Sees spires fast sinking—up again to start!
And strives the towers to number, that
recline 6
O'er the dark steeps, or on the horizon line Striding with shattered crests his eye athwart.
So have we hurried on with troubled pleasure:
Henceforth, as on the bosom of a stream
That slackens, and spreads wide a watery
gleam, 11
We, nothing loth a lingering course to measure,
May gather up our thoughts, and mark at leisure
How widely spread the interests of our theme.

XIII.

ASPECTS OF CHRISTIANITY IN AMERICA.

I.—THE PILGRIM FATHERS.

[Composed 1842.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

WELL worthy to be magnified are they Who, with sad hearts, of friends and country took
A last farewell, their loved abodes forsook,

And hallowed ground in which their fathers lay;
Then to the new-found World explored
their way, 5
That so a Church, unforced, uncalled to
brook
Ritual restraints, within some sheltering
nook
Her Lord might worship and his word obey
In freedom. Men they were who could not bend;
Blest Pilgrims, surely, as they took for guide 10
A will by sovereign Conscience sancti-
fied;
Blest while their Spirits from the woods
ascend
Along a Galaxy that knows no end,
But in His glory who for Sinners died.

XIV.

[Composed 1842.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

FROM Rite and Ordinance abused they
fled
To Wilds where both were utterly un-
known;
But not to them had Providence foreshown What benefits are missed, what evils
bred,
In worship neither raised nor limited 5
Save by Self-will. Lo! from that distant
shore,
For Rite and Ordinance, Piety is led Back to the Land those Pilgrims left of yore,
Led by her own free choice. So Truth
and Love
By Conscience governed do their steps
retrace.— 10
Fathers! your Virtues, such the power
of grace,
Their spirit, in your Children, thus approve.
Transcendent over time, unbound by
place,
Concord and Charity in circles move.

XV.

III. CONCLUDED.—AMERICAN EPISCOPACY.

[Composed 1842.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

PATRIOTS informed with Apostolic light Were they who, when their Country had been freed,
 Bowing with reverence to the ancient
 creed,
 Fixed on the frame of England's Church their sight,
 And strove in filial love to reunite 5 What force had severed. Thence they fetched the seed
 Of Christian unity, and won a meed
 Of praise from Heaven. To Thee, O saintly WHITE,
 Patriarch of a wide-spreading family, Remotest lands and unborn times shall
 turn, 10
 Whether they would restore or build—to
 Thee,
 As one who rightly taught how zeal should
 burn,
 As one who drew from out Faith's holiest
 urn
 The purest stream of patient Energy.

XVI.

[Composed ?.—Published 1845.]

BISHOPS and Priests, blessèd are ye, if
 deep
 (As yours above all offices is high)
 Deep in your hearts the sense of duty lie; Charged as ye are by Christ to feed and keep
 From wolves your portion of His chosen
 sheep: 5
 Labouring as ever in your Master's sight, Making your hardest task your best
 delight,
 What perfect glory ye in Heaven shall reap!—
 But in the solemn Office which ye sought
 And undertook premonished, if unsound Your practice prove, faithless though but in thought, 11
 Bishops and Priests, think what a gulf
 profound

Awaits you then, if they were rightly
 taught
 Who framed the Ordinance by your lives disowned!

XVII.

PLACES OF WORSHIP.

As star that shines dependent upon star
 Is to the sky while we look up in love;
 As to the deep fair ships which though they move
 Seem fixed, to eyes that watch them from
 afar;
 As to the sandy desert fountains are, 5
 With palm-groves shaded at wide intervals,
 Whose fruit around the sun-burnt Native falls
 Of roving tired or desultory war—
 Such to this British Isle her christian
 Fanes,
 Each linked to each for kindred services;
 Her Spires, her Steeple-towers with glittering vanes 11 Far-kenned, her Chapels lurking among
 trees,
 Where a few villagers on bended knees
 Find solace which a busy world disdains.

XVIII.

PASTORAL CHARACTER.

A GENIAL hearth, a hospitable board,
 And a refined rusticity, belong
 To the neat mansion, where, his flock
 among,
 The learned Pastor dwells, their watchful
 Lord.
 Though meek and patient as a sheathèd
 sword; 5
 Though pride's least lurking thought appear a wrong
 To human kind; though peace be on his
 tongue,
 Gentleness in his heart—can earth afford
 Such genuine state, pre-eminence so free,
 As when, arrayed in Christ's authority, 10
 He from the pulpit lifts his awful hand;
 Conjures, implores, and labours all he can
 For re-subjecting to divine command
 The stubborn spirit of rebellious man?

XIX.

THE LITURGY.

YES, if the intensities of hope and fear
 Attract us still, and passionate exercise
 Of lofty thoughts, the way before us lies Distinct with signs, through which in set career,
 As through a zodiac, moves the ritual
 year 5
 Of England's Church; stupendous mysteries!
 Which whoso travels in her bosom eyes,
 As he approaches them, with solemn
 cheer.
 Upon that circle traced from sacred story
 We only dare to cast a transient glance, Trusting in hope that Others may advance 11
 With mind intent upon the King of Glory,
 From his mild advent till his countenance Shall dissipate the seas and mountains hoary.

XX.

BAPTISM.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

DEAR be the Church that, watching o'er the needs
 Of Infancy, provides a timely shower
 Whose virtue changes to a christian
 Flower
 A Growth from sinful Nature's bed of weeds!—
 Fitliest beneath the sacred roof proceeds 5
 The ministration; while parental Love Looks on, and Grace descendeth from above
 As the high service pledges now, now pleads.
 There, should vain thoughts outspread their wings and fly
 To meet the coming hours of festal mirth,
 The tombs—which hear and answer that brief cry, 11
 The Infant's notice of his second birth—
 Recall the wandering Soul to sympathy With what man hopes from Heaven, yet fears from Earth.

XXI.

SPONSORS.

[Composed ?.—Published 1832.]

FATHER! to God himself we cannot give
 A holier name! then lightly do not bear Both names conjoined, but of thy spiritual
 care
 Be duly mindful: still more sensitive
 Do Thou, in truth a second Mother, strive Against disheartening custom, that by
 Thee 6
 Watched, and with love and pious industry
 Tended at need, the adopted Plant may thrive
 For everlasting bloom. Benign and pure This Ordinance, whether loss it would supply, 10
 Prevent omission, help deficiency,
 Or seek to make assurance doubly sure.
 Shame if the consecrated Vow be found
 An idle form, the Word an empty sound!

XXII.

CATECHISING.

FROM Little down to Least, in due degree, Around the Pastor, each in new-wrought vest,
 Each with a vernal posy at his breast,
 We stood, a trembling, earnest Company!
 With low soft murmur, like a distant bee,
 Some spake, by thought-perplexing fears betrayed; 6
 And some a bold unerring answer made:
 How fluttered then thy anxious heart for
 me,
 Belovèd Mother! Thou whose happy
 hand
 Had bound the flowers I wore, with faithful tie: 10
 Sweet flowers! at whose inaudible command
 Her countenance, phantom-like, doth re-
 appear:
 O lost too early for the frequent tear,
 And ill requited by this heartfelt sigh!¹

CONFIRMATION.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

THE Young-ones gathered in from hill
and dale,
With holiday delight on every brow :
'Tis past away ; far other thoughts prevail ;
For they are taking the baptismal Vow
Upon their conscious selves ; their own lips speak 5
The solemn promise. Strongest sinews
fail,
And many a blooming, many a lovely,
cheek
Under the holy fear of God turns pale ;
While on each head his lawn-robed servant lays
An apostolic hand, and with prayer seals
The Covenant. The Omnipotent will raise 11
Their feeble Souls ; and bear with his regrets,
Who, looking round the fair assemblage, feels
That ere the Sun goes down their childhood sets.

XXIV.

CONFIRMATION CONTINUED.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

I SAW a Mother's eye intensely bent
Upon a Maiden trembling as she knelt ;
In and for whom the pious Mother felt Things that we judge of by a light too
faint :
Tell, if ye may, some star-crowned Muse, or Saint ! 5
Tell what rushed in, from what she was relieved—
Then, when her Child the hallowing touch
received,
And such vibration through the Mother
went
That tears burst forth amain. Did gleams
appear ?
Opened a vision of that blissful place 10

Where dwells a Sister-child ? And was power given
Part of her lost One's glory back to trace Even to this Rite ? For thus She knelt, and, ere
The summer-leaf had faded, passed to Heaven.

XXV.

SACRAMENT.

By chain yet stronger must the Soul be tied :
One duty more, last stage of this ascent,
Brings to thy food, mysterious Sacrament !
The Offspring, haply at the Parent's side ;
But not till They, with all that do abide 5
In Heaven, have lifted up their hearts to laud
And magnify the glorious name of God, Fountain of Grace, whose Son for sinners
died.
Ye, who have duly weighed the summons,
pause
No longer : ye, whom to the saving rite 10
The Altar calls ; come early under laws
That can secure for you a path of light Through gloomiest shade ; put on (nor dread its weight)
Armour divine, and conquer in your
cause !

XXVI.

THE MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

THE Vested Priest before the Altar
stands ;
Approach, come gladly, ye prepared, in
sight
Of God and chosen friends, your troth to plight
With the symbolic ring, and willing
hands
Solemnly joined. Now sanctify the bands
O Father !—to the Espoused thy blessing
give, 6
That mutually assisted they may live

Obedient, as here taught, to thy commands.

So prays the Church, to consecrate a Vow
"The which would endless matrimony
make;" 10

Union that shadows forth and doth partake

A mystery potent human love to endow With heavenly, each more prized for the other's sake;

Weep not, meek Bride! uplift thy timid brow.

XXVII.

THANKSGIVING AFTER CHILDBIRTH.

[Composed 1842 (?).—Published 1845.]

WOMAN! the Power who left His throne
on high,

And deigned to wear the robe of flesh we
wear,

The Power that thro' the straits of Infancy

Did pass dependent on maternal care,
His own humanity with Thee will share, 5 Pleased with the thanks that in His People's eye

Thou offerest up for safe Delivery From Childbirth's perilous throes. And should the Heir

Of thy fond hopes hereafter walk inclined
To courses fit to make a mother rue 10
That ever he was born, a glance of mind
Cast upon this observance may renew
A better will; and, in the imagined view
Of thee thus kneeling, safety he may find.

XXVIII.

VISITATION OF THE SICK.

[Composed 1842 (?).—Published 1845.]

THE Sabbath bells renew the inviting peal;

Glad music! yet there be that, worn with
pain

And sickness, listen where they long have lain,

In sadness listen. With maternal zeal Inspired, the Church sends ministers to kneel 5

Beside the afflicted; to sustain with
prayer,

And soothe the heart confession hath laid
bare—

That pardon, from God's throne, may set its seal

On a true Penitent. When breath departs
From one disburthened so, so comforted, His Spirit Angels greet; and ours be
hope 11

That, if the Sufferer rise from his sick-
bed,

Hence he will gain a firmer mind, to cope
With a bad world, and foil the Tempter's arts.

XXIX.

THE COMMINATION SERVICE.

[Composed 1842 (?).—Published 1845.]

SHUN not this Rite, neglected, yea abhorred,

By some of unreflecting mind, as calling Man to curse man, (thought monstrous and appalling).

Go thou and hear the threatenings of the Lord;

Listening within his Temple see his sword Unsheathed in wrath to strike the offender's head, 6

Thy own, if sorrow for thy sin be dead,
Guilt unrepented, pardon unimplored.

Two aspects bears Truth needful for salvation;

Who knows not that?—yet would this delicate age 10

Look only on the Gospel's brighter page:
Let light and dark duly our thoughts

employ;

So shall the fearful words of Commination Yield timely fruit of peace and love and joy.

XXX.

FORMS OF PRAYER AT SEA.

[Composed 1842 (?).—Published 1845.]

To kneeling Worshippers no earthly floor
Gives holier invitation than the deck

Of a storm-shattered Vessel saved from Wreck

(When all that Man could do availed no
more)

By Him who raised the Tempest and restrains:

Happy the crew who this have felt, and pour

Forth for His mercy, as the Church
ordains,

Solemn thanksgiving. Nor will they implore

In vain who, for a rightful cause, give
breath

To words the Church prescribes aiding the lip

For the heart's sake, ere ship with hostile
ship

Encounters, armed for work of pain and
death.

Suppliants! the God to whom your cause ye trust

Will listen, and ye know that He is just.

XXXI.

FUNERAL SERVICE.

[Composed 1842.—Published 1845.]

FROM the Baptismal hour, thro' weal and
woe,

The Church extends her care to thought and deed;

Nor quits the Body when the Soul is
freed,

The mortal weight cast off to be laid low.
Blest Rite for him who hears in faith,

"I know"

That my Redeemer liveth,"—hears each
word

That follows—striking on some kindred chord

Deep in the thankful heart;—yet tears will flow.

Man is as grass that springeth up at morn,
Grows green, and is cut down and wither-eth

Ere nightfall—truth that well may claim
a sigh,

Its natural echo; but hope comes reborn
At Jesu's bidding. We rejoice, "O

Death,

Where is thy Sting?—O Grave, where is thy Victory?"

XXXII.

RURAL CEREMONY¹.

CLOSING the sacred Book which long has fed

Our meditations, give we to a day

Of annual joy one tributary lay;

This day, when, forth by rustic music
led,

The village Children, while the sky is red
With evening lights, advance in long

array

Through the still churchyard, each with garland gay,

That, carried sceptre-like, o'ertops the
head

Of the proud Bearer. To the wide church-
door,

Charged with these offerings which their fathers bore

For decoration in the Papal time,

The innocent Procession softly moves:—
The spirit of Laud is pleased in heaven's pure clime,

And Hooker's voice the spectacle approves!

XXXIII.

REGRETS.

WOULD that our scrupulous Sires had dared to leave

Less scanty measure of those graceful rites

And usages, whose due return invites

A stir of mind too natural to deceive;

Giving to Memory help when she would weave

A crown for Hope!—I dread the boasted
lights

That all too often are but fiery blights,

Killing the bud o'er which in vain we grieve.

Go, seek, when Christmas snows discomfort bring,

The counter Spirit found in some gay
church

Green with fresh holly, every pew a perch

In which the linnet or the thrush might
sing,
Merry and loud and safe from prying
search,
Strains offered only to the genial Spring.

XXXIV.

MUTABILITY.

FROM low to high doth dissolution climb,
And sink from high to low, along a
scale
Of awful notes, whose concord shall not
fail;
A musical but melancholy chime,
Which they can hear who meddle not with crime, 5
Nor avarice, nor over-anxious care.
Truth fails not; but her outward forms that bear
The longest date do melt like frosty rime,
That in the morning whitened hill and
plain
And is no more; drop like the tower
sublime 10
Of yesterday, which royally did wear
His crown of weeds, but could not even sustain
Some casual shout that broke the silent
air,
Or the unimaginable touch of Time.

XXXV.

OLD ABBEYS.

MONASTIC Domes! following my downward way,
Untouched by due regret I marked your
fall!
Now, ruin, beauty, ancient stillness, all Dispose to judgments temperate as we lay
On our past selves in life's declining day:
For as, by discipline of Time made wise,
We learn to tolerate the infirmities
And faults of others—gently as he may,
So with our own the mild Instructor deals,
Teaching us to forget them or forgive. 10
Perversely curious, then, for hidden ill
Why should we break Time's charitable seals?
Once ye were holy, ye are holy still;
Your spirit freely let me drink, and live.

XXXVI.

EMIGRANT FRENCH CLERGY.

[Composed ?.—Published 1827.]

EVEN while I speak, the sacred roofs of
France
Are shattered into dust; and self-exiled
From altars threatened, levelled, or defiled,
Wander the Ministers of God, as chance
Opens a way for life, or consonance 5
Of faith invites. More welcome to no land
The fugitives than to the British strand, Where priest and layman with the vigilance
Of true compassion greet them. Creed and test
Vanish before the unreserved embrace 10
Of catholic humanity:—distrest
They came,—and, while the moral tempest roars
Throughout the Country they have left,
our shores
Give to their Faith a fearless resting-place.

XXXVII.

CONGRATULATION.

THUS all things lead to Charity, secured
By THEM who blessed the soft and happy
gale
That landward urged the great Deliverer's
sail,
Till in the sunny bay his fleet was moored!
Propitious hour! had we, like them,
endured 5
Sore stress of apprehension¹, with a mind Sickened by injuries, dreading worse designed,
From month to month trembling and un-assured,
How had we then rejoiced! But we have
felt,
As a loved substance, their futurity: 10 Good, which they dared not hope for, we have seen;

A State whose generous will through earth is dealt ;
A State—which, balancing herself between
Licence and slavish order, dares be free.

XXXVIII.

NEW CHURCHES.

BUT liberty, and triumphs on the Main,
And laurelled armies, not to be with-
stood—
What serve they? if, on transitory good Intent, and sedulous of abject gain,
The State (ah, surely not preserved in vain!)
Forbear to shape due channels which the
Flood
Of sacred truth may enter—till it brood O'er the wide realm, as o'er the Egyptian
plain
The all-sustaining Nile. No more—the
time
Is conscious of her want; through England's bounds,
In rival haste, the wished-for Temples
rise!
I hear their sabbath bells' harmonious chime
Float on the breeze—the heavenliest of all sounds
That vale or hill prolongs or multiplies!

XXXIX.

CHURCH TO BE ERECTED.

BE this the chosen site; the virgin sod,
Moistened from age to age by dewy eve,
Shall disappear, and grateful earth receive
The corner-stone from hands that build to God.
Yon reverend hawthorns, hardened to the rod
Of winter storms, yet budding cheerfully;
Those forest oaks of Druid memory,
Shall long survive, to shelter the Abode
Of genuine Faith. Where, haply, 'mid this band
Of daisies, shepherds sate of yore and wove
May-garlands, there let the holy altar
stand

For kneeling adoration;—while—above,
Broods, visibly portrayed, the mystic
Dove,
That shall protect from blasphemy the Land.

XL.

CONTINUED.

MINE ear has rung, my spirit sunk sub-
dued,
Sharing the strong emotion of the crowd,
When each pale brow to dread hosannas
bowed While clouds of incense mounting veiled the rood,
That glimmered like a pine-tree dimly viewed
Through Alpine vapours. Such appalling rite
Our Church prepares not, trusting to the
might
Of simple truth with grace divine imbued;
Yet will we not conceal the precious
Cross,
Like men ashamed: the Sun with his first smile
Shall greet that symbol crowning the low
Pile:
And the fresh air of incense-breathing morn
Shall woefully embrace it; and green
moss
Creep round its arms through centuries unborn.

XLI.

NEW CHURCHYARD.

THE encircling ground, in native turf
arrayed,
Is now by solemn consecration given
To social interests, and to favouring
Heaven;
And where the rugged colts their gambols
played,
And wild deer bounded through the forest glade,
Unchecked as when by merry Outlaw
driven,
Shall hymns of praise resound at morn
and even;
And soon, full soon, the lonely Sexton's spade

Shall wound the tender sod. Encincture small,
 But infinite its grasp of weal and woe ! 10 Hopes, fears, in never-ending ebb and
 flow ;—
 The spousal trembling, and the “dust to dust,”
 The prayers, the contrite struggle, and the trust
 That to the Almighty Father looks through all.

XLII.

CATHEDRALS, ETC.

OPEN your gates, ye everlasting Piles !
 Types of the spiritual Church which God hath reared ;
 Not loth we quit the newly-hallowed sward
 And humble altar, 'mid your sumptuous aisles
 To kneel, or thrud your intricate defiles, 5
 Or down the nave to pace in moti6n slow ;
 Watching, with upward eye, the tall tower grow
 And mount, at every step, with living wiles
 Instinct—to rouse the heart and lead the
 will
 By a bright ladder to the world above. 10
 Open your gates, ye Monuments of love Divine ! thou Lincoln, on thy sovereign
 hill !
 Thou, stately York ! and Ye, whose splendours cheer
 Isis and Cam, to patient Science dear !

XLIII.

INSIDE OF KING'S COLLEGE CHAPEL, CAMBRIDGE¹.

TAX not the royal Saint with vain ex-
 pence,
 With ill-matched aims the Architect who planned—
 Albeit labouring for a scanty band

Of white-robed Scholars only—this immense
 And glorious Work of fine intelligence ! 5 Give all thou canst ; high Heaven rejects the lore
 Of nicely-calculated less or more ;
 So deemed the man who fashioned for the
 sense
 These lofty pillars, spread that branching
 roof
 Self-poised, and scooped into ten thousand cells, 10
 Where light and shade repose, where music dwells Lingerin—and wandering on as loth to
 die ;
 Like thoughts whose very sweetness yieldeth proof
 That they were born for immortality.

XLIV.

THE SAME.

WHAT awful perspective ! while from our
 sight
 With gradual stealth the lateral windows
 hide
 Their Portraitsures, their stone-work glim-mered, dyed
 In the soft chequerings of a sleepy light.
 Martyr, or King, or sainted Eremite, 5
 Whoe'er ye be, that thus, yourselves un-
 seen,
 Imbue your prison-bars with solemn sheen,
 Shine on, until ye fade with coming
 Night !—
 But, from the arms of silence—list ! O list !
 The music bursteth into second life ; 10
 The notes luxuriate, every stone is kissed
 By sound, or ghost of sound, in mazy
 strife ;
 Heart-thrilling strains, that cast, before
 the eye
 Of the devout, a veil of ecstasy !

XLV.

CONTINUED.

THEY dreamt not of a perishable home Who thus could build. Be mine, in hours of fear
 Or grovelling thought, to seek a refuge
 here ;

Or through the aisles of Westminster to
 roam ;
 Where bubbles burst, and folly's dancing
 foam 5
 Melts, if it cross the threshold ; where the wreath
 Of awe-struck wisdom droops : or let my
 path
 Lead to that younger Pile, whose sky-like dome
 Hath typified by reach of daring art
 Infinity's embrace ; whose guardian crest,
 The silent Cross, among the stars shall spread II
 As now, when She hath also seen her
 breast
 Filled with mementos, satiate with its part Of grateful England's overflowing Dead.

XLVI.

EJACULATION.

GLORY to God! and to the Power who came
 In filial duty, clothed with love divine,
 That made His human tabernacle shine
 Like Ocean burning with purpureal flame ;
 Or like the Alpine Mount, that takes its
 name 5
 From roseate hues, far kenne'd at morn
 and even,
 In hours of peace, or when the storm is driven
 Along the nether region's rugged frame !
 Earth prompts—Heaven urges ; let us seek the light,

Studious of that pure intercourse begun to When first our infant brows their lustre
 won ;
 So, like the Mountain, may we grow
 more bright
 From unimpeded commerce with the Sun,
 At the approach of all-involving night.

XLVII.

CONCLUSION.

WHY sleeps the future, as a snake enrolled,
 Coil within coil, at noon-tide ? For the
 WORD
 Yields, if with unpresumptuous faith explored,
 Power at whose touch the sluggard shall unfold
 His drowsy rings. Look forth!—that Stream behold, 5
 THAT STREAM upon whose bosom we have passed Floating at ease while nations have effaced
 Nations, and Death has gathered to his
 fold
 Long lines of mighty Kings—look forth,
 my Soul ! 9
 (Nor in this vision be thou slow to trust)
 The living Waters, less and less by guilt Stained and polluted, brighten as they roll,
 Till they have reached the eternal City—
 built
 For the perfected Spirits of the just !

EVENING VOLUNTARIES.

I.

[Composed 1832.—Published 1835.]

CALM is the fragrant air, and loth to lose Day's grateful warmth, tho' moist with falling dews.

Look for the stars, you'll say that there are none;

Look up a second time, and, one by one,
You mark them twinkling out with silvery
light, 5

And wonder how they could elude the
sight!

The birds, of late so noisy in their bowers,
Warbled a while with faint and fainter
powers,

But now are silent as the dim-seen flowers:
Nor does the village Church-clock's iron tone 10

The time's and season's influence disown;
Nine beats distinctly to each other bound In drowsy sequence—how unlike the
sound

That, in rough winter, oft inflicts a fear
On fireside listeners, doubting what they
hear! 15

The shepherd, bent on rising with the sun,
Had closed his door before the day was done,

And now with thankful heart to bed doth
creep,

And joins his little children in their sleep.
The bat, lured forth where trees the lane
o'ershade, 20

Flits and refits along the close arcade;
The busy dor-hawk chases the white moth
With burring note, which Industry and Sloth

Might both be pleased with, for it suits them both.

A stream is heard—I see it not, but
know 25

By its soft music whence the waters flow:

Wheels and the tread of hoofs are heard
no more;

One boat there was, but it will touch the
shore

With the next dipping of its slackened
oar;

Faint sound, that, for the gayest of the gay, 30

Might give to serious thought a moment's
sway,

As a last token of man's toilsome day!

II.

ON A HIGH PART OF THE COAST OF CUMBERLAND.

Easter Sunday, April 7.

THE AUTHOR'S SIXTY-THIRD BIRTH- DAY.

[Composed April 7, 1833.—Published 1835.]

THE Sun, that seemed so mildly to retire, Flung back from distant climes a streaming fire,

Whose blaze is now subdued to tender
gleams,

Prelude of night's approach with soothing
dreams.

Look round;—of all the clouds not one is moving; 5

'Tis the still hour of thinking, feeling, loving.

Silent, and steadfast as the vaulted sky,
The boundless plain of waters seems to lie:—

Comes that low sound from breezes rustling o'er

The grass-crowned headland that conceals the shore? 10

No; 'tis the earth-voice of the mighty sea, Whispering how meek and gentle he can be!

Thou Power supreme! who, arming to rebuke
 Offenders, dost put off the gracious look,
 And clothe thyself with terrors like the
 flood 15
 Of Ocean roused into his fiercest mood,
 Whatever discipline thy Will ordain
 For the brief course that must for me
 remain;
 Teach me with quick-eared spirit to rejoice
 In admonitions of thy softest voice! 20 Whate'er the path these mortal feet may
 trace,
 Breathe through my soul the blessing of thy grace,
 Glad, through a perfect love, a faith
 sincere Drawn from the wisdom that begins with
 fear,
 Glad to expand; and, for a season, free 25
 From finite cares, to rest absorbed in Thee!

III.

(BY THE SEA-SIDE.)

[Composed 1833.—Published 1835.]

THE sun is couched, the sea-fowl gone to
 rest,
 And the wild storm hath somewhere found a nest;
 Air slumbers—wave with wave no longer strives,
 Only a heaving of the deep survives,
 A tell-tale motion! soon will it be laid, 5
 And by the tide alone the water swayed.
 Stealthy withdrawals, interminglings mild
 Of light with shade in beauty reconciled—
 Such is the prospect far as sight can
 range,
 The soothing recompense, the welcome
 change. 10
 Where now the ships that drove before
 the blast,
 Threatened by angry breakers as they
 passed;
 And by a train of flying clouds bemocked;
 Or, in the hollow surge, at anchor rocked As on a bed of death? Some lodge in
 peace, 15

Saved by His care who bade the tempest
 cease;
 And some, too heedless of past danger,
 court
 Fresh gales to waft them to the far-off
 port;
 But near, or hanging sea and sky between,
 Not one of all those winged powers is
 seen, 20
 Seen in her course, nor 'mid this quiet
 heard;
 Yet oh! how gladly would the air be stirred
 By some acknowledgment of thanks and
 praise,
 Soft in its temper as those vesper lays Sung to the Virgin while accordant
 oars 25
 Urge the slow bark along Calabrian
 shores;
 A sea-born service through the mountains
 felt
 Till into one loved vision all things melt:
 Or like those hymns that soothe with graver sound
 The gulfy coast of Norway iron-bound; 30
 And, from the wide and open Baltic, rise
 With punctual care, Lutheran harmonies.
 Hush, not a voice is here! but why repine,
 Now when the star of eve comes forth to
 shine
 On British waters with that look benign? 35
 Ye mariners, that plough your onward
 way,
 Or in the haven rest, or sheltering bay,
 May silent thanks at least to God be given
 With a full heart; "our thoughts are heard in heaven!"

IV.

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

NOR in the lucid intervals of life
 That come but as a curse to party-strife;
 Not in some hour when Pleasure with a
 sigh
 Of languor puts his rosy garland by;
 Not in the breathing-times of that poor
 slave 5
 Who daily piles up wealth in Mammon's
 cave—

Is Nature felt, or can be; nor do words,
Which practised talent readily affords,
Prove that her hand has touched responsive chords;
Nor has her gentle beauty power to move 10
With genuine rapture and with fervent love
The soul of Genius, if he dare to take Life's rule from passion craved for passion's sake;
Untaught that meekness is the cherished bent
Of all the truly great and all the innocent. 15

But who is innocent? By grace divine,
Not otherwise, O Nature! we are thine,
Through good and evil thine, in just degree
Of rational and manly sympathy.
To all that Earth from pensive hearts is stealing, 20
And Heaven is now to gladdened eyes revealing,
Add every charm the Universe can show Through every change its aspects undergo—Care may be respited, but not repealed;
No perfect cure grows on that bounded field. 25
Vain is the pleasure, a false calm the peace,
If He, through whom alone our conflicts cease,
Our virtuous hopes without relapse advance,
Come not to speed the Soul's deliverance;
To the distempered Intellect refuse 30
His gracious help, or give what we abuse.

V.

(BY THE SIDE OF RYDAL MERE.)

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

THE linnets' warble, sinking towards a close,
Hints to the thrush 'tis time for their repose;
The shrill-voiced thrush is heedless, and again
The monitor revives his own sweet strain;

But both will soon be mastered, and the copse 5
Be left as silent as the mountain-tops,
Ere some commanding star dismiss to rest
The throng of rooks, that now, from twig or nest, (After a steady flight on home-bound wings,
And a last game of mazy hoverings 10
Around their ancient grove) with cawing noise
Disturb the liquid music's equipoise.

O Nightingale! Who ever heard thy song Might here be moved, till Fancy grows so strong
That listening sense is pardonably cheated
Where wood or stream by thee was never greeted. 16
Surely, from fairest spots of favoured lands,
Were not some gifts withheld by jealous hands,
This hour of deepening darkness here would be
As a fresh morning for new harmony; 20
And lays as prompt would hail the dawn of Night:
A dawn she has both beautiful and bright,
When the East kindles with the full moon's light;
Not like the rising sun's impatient glow
Dazzling the mountains, but an overflow
Of solemn splendour, in mutation slow.

Wanderer by spring with gradual progress led,
For sway profoundly felt as widely spread;
To king, to peasant, to rough sailor, dear,
And to the soldier's trumpet-wearied ear;
How welcome wouldst thou be to this green Vale 31
Fairer than Tempe! Yet, sweet Nightingale!
From the warm breeze that bears thee on, alight
At will, and stay thy migratory flight;
Build, at thy choice, or sing, by pool or fount, 35
Who shall complain, or call thee to account?

The wisest, happiest, of our kind are they That ever walk content with Nature's
way,

God's goodness—measuring bounty as it
may;

For whom the gravest thought of what they miss, 40

Chastening the fulness of a present bliss,
Is with that wholesome office satisfied,
While unrepining sadness is allied
In thankful bosoms to a modest pride.

VI.

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

SOFT as a cloud is yon blue Ridge—the Mere

Seems firm as solid crystal, breathless,
clear,

And motionless; and, to the gazer's eye,
Deeper than ocean, in the immensity
Of its vague mountains and unreal sky! 5

But, from the process in that still retreat,
Turn to minuter changes at our feet;

Observe how dewy Twilight has withdrawn

The crowd of daisies from the shaven lawn,
And has restored to view its tender
green, 10

That, while the sun rode high, was lost beneath their dazzling sheen.

—An emblem this of what the sober Hour Can do for minds disposed to feel its
power!

Thus oft, when we in vain have wished
away

The petty pleasures of the garish day, 15
Meek eve shuts up the whole usurping
host

(Unbashful dwarfs each glittering at his post)

And leaves the disencumbered spirit free
To reassume a staid simplicity.

'Tis well—but what are helps of time and place, 20

When wisdom stands in need of nature's
grace;

Why do good thoughts, invoked or not,
descend,

Like Angels from their bowers, our virtues to befriend;

If yet To-morrow, unbelied, may say,
“I come to open out, for fresh display,
The elastic vanities of yesterday?” 26

VII.

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

THE leaves that rustled on this oak-crowned hill,

And sky that danced among those leaves, are still;

Rest smooths the way for sleep; in field and bower

Soft shades and dews have shed their blended power

On drooping eyelid and the closing
flower; 5

Sound is there none at which the faintest
heart

Might leap, the weakest nerve of superstition start;

Save when the Owllet's unexpected scream Pierces the ethereal vault; and ('mid the
gleam

Of unsubstantial imagery, the dream, 10
From the hushed vale's realities, transferred

To the still lake) the imaginative Bird Seems, 'mid inverted mountains, not un-
heard.

Grave Creature!—whether, while the moon shines bright

On thy wings opened wide for smoothest
flight, 15

Thou art discovered in a roofless tower, Rising from what may once have been a lady's bower;

Or spied where thou sitt'st moping in thy mew

At the dim centre of a churchyard yew;
Or from a rifted crag or ivy tod 20

Deep in a forest, thy secure abode, Thou giv'st, for pastime's sake, by shriek or shout,

A puzzling notice of thy whereabouts—
May the night never come, nor day be
seen,

When I shall scorn thy voice or mock thy
mien! 25

In classic ages men perceived a soul
Of sapience in thy aspect, headless Owl!

Thee Athens revered in the studious
 grove;
 And near the golden sceptre grasped by Jove,
 His Eagle's favourite perch, while round him sate 30
 The Gods revolving the decrees of Fate,
 Thou, too, wert present at Minerva's side:—
 Hark to that second larum!—far and
 wide
 The elements have heard, and rock and cave replied.

VIII.

[Composed June 8, 1802.—Published 1807; omitted from edd. 1815-1832; republished 1835.]

This Impromptu appeared, many years ago, among the Author's poems, from which, in subsequent editions, it was excluded. It is reprinted at the request of the Friend in whose presence the lines were thrown off.

THE sun has long been set,
 The stars are out by twos and threes,
 The little birds are piping yet
 Among the bushes and trees;
 There's a cuckoo, and one or two thrushes,
 And a far-off wind that rushes, 6
 And a sound of water that gushes,
 And the cuckoo's sovereign cry
 Fills all the hollow of the sky.
 Who would go "parading" 10
 In London, "and masquerading,"
 On such a night of June
 With that beautiful soft half-moon,
 And all these innocent blisses?
 On such a night as this is! 15

IX.

COMPOSED UPON AN EVENING OF EXTRAORDINARY SPLENDOUR AND BEAUTY.

[Composed 1818.—Published 1820.]

I.

HAD this effulgence disappeared
 With flying haste, I might have sent,
 Among the speechless clouds, a look
 Of blank astonishment;
 But 'tis endued with power to stay, 5
 And sanctify one closing day,

That frail Mortality may see—
 What is?—ah no, but what can be!
 Time was when field and watery cove
 With modulated echoes rang, 10
 While choirs of fervent Angels sang
 Their vespers in the grove;
 Or, crowning, star-like, each some sovereign height,
 Warbled, for heaven above and earth
 below,
 Strains suitable to both.—Such holy rite,
 Methinks, if audibly repeated now 16
 From hill or valley, could not move
 Sublimier transport, purer love, Than doth this silent spectacle—the
 gleam—
 The shadow—and the peace supreme! 20

II.

No sound is uttered,—but a deep
 And solemn harmony pervades
 The hollow vale from steep to steep,
 And penetrates the glades.
 Far-distant images draw nigh, 25
 Called forth by wondrous potency
 Of beamy radiance, that imbues
 Whate'er it strikes with gem-like hues!
 In vision exquisitely clear,
 Herds range along the mountain side; 30
 And glistening antlers are descried;
 And gilded flocks appear.
 Thine is the tranquil hour, purpureal
 Eve!
 But long as god-like wish, or hope divine,
 Informs my spirit, ne'er can I believe 35
 That this magnificence is wholly thine!
 —From worlds not quickened by the sun
 A portion of the gift is won;
 An intermingling of Heaven's pomp is
 spread
 On ground which British shepherds
 tread! 40

III.

And if there be whom broken ties
 Afflict, or injuries assail,
 Yon hazy ridges to their eyes
 Present a glorious scale,
 Climbing suffused with sunny air, 45
 To stop—no record hath told where!

And tempting Fancy to ascend,
 And with immortal Spirits blend !
 —Wings at my shoulders seem to play ;
 But, rooted here, I stand and gaze 50
 On those bright steps that heavenward
 raise
 Their practicable way.
 Come forth, ye drooping old men, look
 abroad,
 And see to what fair countries ye are
 bound !
 And if some traveller, weary of his road,
 Hath slept since noon-tide on the grassy
 ground, 56
 Ye Genii ! to his covert speed ;
 And wake him with such gentle heed
 As may attune his soul to meet the
 dower
 Bestowed on this transcendent hour ! 60

IV.

Such hues from their celestial Urn
 Were wont to stream before mine eye,
 Where'er it wandered in the morn
 Of blissful infancy.
 This glimpse of glory, why renewed ? 65
 Nay, rather speak with gratitude ;
 For, if a vestige of those gleams
 Survived, 'twas only in my dreams.
 Dread Power ! whom peace and calmness
 serve
 No less than Nature's threatening voice,
 If aught unworthy be my choice, 71
 From THEE if I would swerve ;
 Oh, let Thy grace remind me of the light
 Full early lost, and fruitlessly deplored ;
 Which, at this moment, on my waking
 sight 75
 Appears to shine, by miracle restored ;
 My soul, though yet confined to earth,
 Rejoices in a second birth !
 —'Tis past, the visionary splendour fades ;
 And night approaches with her shades. 80

Note—The multiplication of mountain-ridges, described at the commencement of the third Stanza of this Ode as a kind of Jacob's Ladder, leading to Heaven, is produced either by watery vapours, or sunny haze ;—in the present instance by the latter cause. Allusions to the Ode entitled "Intimations of Immortality" pervade the last Stanza of the foregoing Poem.

X.

COMPOSED BY THE SEA-SHORE.

[Composed 1833.—Published 1845.]

WHAT mischief cleaves to unsubdued regret,
 How fancy sickens by vague hopes beset ;
 How baffled projects on the spirit prey,
 And fruitless wishes eat the heart away,
 The Sailor knows ; he best, whose lot is
 cast 5
 On the relentless sea that holds him fast
 On chance dependent, and the fickle star
 Of power, through long and melancholy
 war.
 O sad it is, in sight of foreign shores,
 Daily to think on old familiar doors, 10
 Hearths loved in childhood, and ancestral
 floors ;
 Or, tossed about along a waste of foam,
 To ruminate on that delightful home Which with the dear Betrothèd was to
 come ;
 Or came and was and is, yet meets the eye
 Never but in the world of memory ; 16
 Or in a dream recalled, whose smoothest
 range
 Is crossed by knowledge, or by dread, of
 change,
 And if not so, whose perfect joy makes
 sleep
 A thing too bright for breathing man to
 keep. 20
 Hail to the virtues which that perilous life
 Extracts from Nature's elemental strife ;
 And welcome glory won in battles fought
 As bravely as the foe was keenly sought.
 But to each gallant Captain and his crew
 A less imperious sympathy is due, 26
 Such as my verse now yields, while moonbeams play
 On the mute sea in this unruffled bay ;
 Such as will promptly flow from every
 breast,
 Where good men, disappointed in the quest 30
 Of wealth and power and honours, long for rest ;
 Or, having known the splendours of success,
 Sigh for the obscurities of happiness.

XI.

[Composed ?.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

THE Crescent-moon, the Star of Love,
 Glories of evening, as ye there are seen
 With but a span of sky between—Speak one of you, my doubts remove,
 Which is the attendant Page and which the Queen? 5

XII.

TO THE MOON.

COMPOSED BY THE SEASIDE,—ON THE COAST OF CUMBERLAND.

[Composed 1835.—Published 1837.]

WANDERER! that stoop'st so low, and com'st so near
 To human life's unsettled atmosphere;
 Who lov'st with Night and Silence to partake,
 So might it seem, the cares of them that wake;
 And, through the cottage-lattice softly peeping, 5
 Dost shield from harm the humblest of the sleeping;
 What pleasure once encompassed those sweet names
 Which yet in thy behalf the Poet claims,
 An idolizing dreamer as of yore!—
 I slight them all; and, on this sea-beat
 shore 10
 Sole-sitting, only can to thoughts attend
 That bid me hail thee as the SAILOR'S
 FRIEND;
 So call thee for heaven's grace through thee made known
 By confidence supplied and mercy shown,
 When not a twinkling star or beacon's
 light 15
 Abates the perils of a stormy night;
 And for less obvious benefits, that find Their way, with thy pure help, to heart and mind;
 Both for the adventurer starting in life's
 prime;
 And veteran ranging round from clime to
 clime, 20

Long-baffled hope's slow fever in his veins,
 And wounds and weakness oft his labour's sole remains.

The aspiring Mountains and the winding Streams,
 Empress of Night! are gladdened by thy
 beams;

A look of thine the wilderness pervades, 25
 And penetrates the forest's inmost shades;
 Thou, chequering peaceably the minster's
 gloom,

Guid'st the pale Mourner to the lost one's tomb;

Canst reach the Prisoner—to his grated
 cell

Welcome, though silent and intangible!—
 And lives there one, of all that come and
 go 31

On the great waters toiling to and fro,
 One, who has watched thee at some quiet
 hour

Enthroned aloft in undisputed power,
 Or crossed by vapoury streaks and clouds that move 35

Catching the lustre they in part reprove—
 Nor sometimes felt a fitness in thy sway
 To call up thoughts that shun the glare
 of day,

And make the serious happier than the gay?

Yes, lovely Moon! if thou so mildly
 bright 40

Dost rouse, yet surely in thy own despite,
 To fiercer mood the frenzy-stricken
 brain,

Let me a compensating faith maintain;
 That there's a sensitive, a tender, part Which thou canst touch in every human
 heart, 45

For healing and composure.—But as least
 And mightiest billows ever have confessed
 Thy domination; as the whole vast Sea Feels through her lowest depths thy sovereignty;

So shines that countenance with especial
 grace 50

On them who urge the keel her plains to
 trace

Furrowing its way right onward. The most rude,
 Cut off from home and country, may have
 stood—
 Even till long gazing hath bedimmed his
 eye,
 Or the mute rapture ended in a sigh— 55
 Touched by accordance of thy placid
 cheer,
 With some internal lights to memory dear,
 Or fancies stealing forth to soothe the
 breast
 Tired with its daily share of earth's unrest,—
 Gentle awakenings, visitations meek ; 60
 A kindly influence whereof few will speak, Though it can wet with tears the hardest
 cheek.

And when thy beauty in the shadowy
 cave
 Is hidden, buried in its monthly grave ;
 Then, while the Sailor, 'mid an open sea Swept by a favouring wind that leaves thought free, 66
 Paces the deck—no star perhaps in sight,
 And nothing save the moving ship's own
 light
 To cheer the long dark hours of vacant
 night—
 Oft with his musings does thy image blend,
 In his mind's eye thy crescent horns ascend,
 And thou art still, O Moon, that SAILOR'S FRIEND !

XIII.

TO THE MOON.

(RYDAL.)

[Composed 1835.—Published 1837.]

QUEEN of the stars !—so gentle, so benign,
 That ancient Fable did to thee assign,
 When darkness creeping o'er thy silver
 brow Warned thee these upper regions to forego,
 Alternate empire in the shades below— 5
 A Bard, who, lately near the wide-spread
 sea
 Traversed by gleaming ships, looked up
 to thee

With grateful thoughts, doth now thy rising hail
 From the close confines of a shadowy vale.
 Glory of night, conspicuous yet serene, 10
 Nor less attractive when by glimpses
 seen Through cloudy umbrage, well might that fair face,
 And all those attributes of modest grace,
 In days when Fancy wrought unchecked
 by fear,
 Down to the green earth fetch thee from thy sphere, 15
 To sit in leafy woods by fountains clear !

O still beloved (for thine, meek Power, are charms
 That fascinate the very Babe in arms, While he, uplifted towards thee, laughs outright,
 Spreading his little palms in his glad Mother's sight) 20
 O still beloved, once worshipped ! Time, that frowns
 In his destructive flight on earthly crowns, Spares thy mild splendour ; still those far-shot beams
 Tremble on dancing waves and rippling
 streams
 With stainless touch, as chaste as when thy praise 25
 Was sung by Virgin-choirs in festal lays ;
 And through dark trials still dost thou explore
 Thy way for increase punctual as of yore,
 When teeming Matrons—yielding to rude
 faith
 In mysteries of birth and life and death 30
 And painful struggle and deliverance—
 prayed
 Of thee to visit them with lenient aid.
 What though the rites be swept away, the fanes
 Extinct that echoed to the votive strains ;
 Yet thy mild aspect does not, cannot,
 cease
 Love to promote and purity and peace ;
 And Fancy, unproved, even yet may
 trace 37
 Faint types of suffering in thy beamless
 face.

Then, silent Monitress! let us—not blind
To worlds unthought of till the searching
mind 40
Of Science laid them open to mankind—
Told, also, how the voiceless heavens declare
God's glory; and acknowledging thy
share
In that blest charge; let us—without offence
To aught of highest, holiest, influence—Receive whatever good 'tis given thee to dispense. 46
May sage and simple, catching with one
eye
The moral intimations of the sky, Learn from thy course, where'er their own be taken,
"To look on tempests, and be never shaken;" 50
To keep with faithful step the appointed
way
Eclipsing or eclipsed, by night or day,
And from example of thy monthly range
Gently to brook decline and fatal change; Meek, patient, steadfast, and with loftier
scope, 55
Than thy revival yields, for gladsome
hope!

TO LUCCA GIORDANO.

[Composed 1846.—Published 1850.]

GIORDANO, verily thy Pencil's skill Hath here portrayed with Nature's happiest grace
The fair Endymion couched on Latmos-
hill;
And Dian gazing on the Shepherd's
face
In rapture,—yet suspending her embrace,
As not unconscious with what power the thrill 6
Of her most timid touch his sleep would
chase,
And, with his sleep, that beauty calm and
still.

Oh may this work have found its last retreat
Here in a Mountain-bard's secure abode,
One to whom, yet a School-boy, Cynthia
showed 11
A face of love which he in love would
greet,
Fixed, by her smile, upon some rocky
seat;
Or lured along where green-wood paths he trod.

RYDAL MOUNT, 1846.

XV.

[Composed 1846.—Published 1850.]

WHO but is pleased to watch the moon on
high Travelling where she from time to time enshrouds
Her head, and nothing loth her Majesty
Renounces, till among the scattered clouds
One with its kindling edge declares that
soon 5
Will reappear before the uplifted eye
A Form as bright, as beautiful a moon,
To glide in open prospect through clear
sky.
Pity that such a promise e'er should prove
False in the issue, that yon seeming space
Of sky should be in truth the steadfast
face 11
Of a cloud flat and dense, through which must move
(By transit not unlike man's frequent doom)
The Wanderer lost in more determined
gloom.

XVI.

[Composed 1846.—Published 1850.]

WHERE lies the truth? has Man, in wisdom's creed,
A pitiable doom; for respite brief
A care more anxious, or a heavier grief?
Is he ungrateful, and doth little heed

God's bounty, soon forgotten ; or indeed, Must Man, with labour born, awake to sorrow 6
 When Flowers rejoice and Larks with rival speed
 Spring from their nests to bid the Sun good morrow ?
 They mount for rapture as their songs
 proclaim

Warbled in hearing both of earth and
 sky ; 10
 But o'er the contrast wherefore heave
 a sigh ?
 Like those aspirants let us soar—our aim,
 Through life's worst trials, whether shocks or snares,
 A happier, brighter, purer Heaven than theirs.

POEMS

COMPOSED OR SUGGESTED DURING A TOUR, IN THE SUMMER OF 1833¹.

Having been prevented by the lateness of the season, in 1831, from visiting Staffa and Iona, the author made these the principal objects of a short tour in the summer of 1833, of which the following Series of Poems is a Memorial. The course pursued was down the Cumberland river Derwent, and to Whitehaven; thence (by the Isle of Man, where a few days were passed) up the Frith of Clyde to Greenock, then to Oban, Staffa, Iona; and back towards England, by Loch Awe, Inverary, Loch Goll-head, Greenock, and through parts of Renfrewshire, Ayrshire, and Dumfries-shire, to Carlisle, and thence up the river Eden, and homewards by Ullswater.

I.

ADIEU, Rydalian Laurels! that have grown
And spread as if ye knew that days might come
When ye would shelter in a happy home,
On this fair Mount, a Poet of your own,
One who ne'er ventured for a Delphic
crown 5
To sue the God; but, haunting your green
shade
All seasons through, is humbly pleased to braid
Ground-flowers, beneath your guardianship, self-sown.
Farewell! no Minstrels now with harp new-strung
For summer wandering quit their household bowers; 10
Yet not for this wants Poesy a tongue
To cheer the Itinerant on whom she pours
Her spirit, while he crosses lonely moors,
Or musing sits forsaken halls among.

II.

WHY should the Enthusiast, journeying through this Isle,
Repine as if his hour were come too late?
Not unprotected in her mouldering state,
Antiquity salutes him with a smile,
'Mid fruitful fields that ring with jocund
toil, 5

And pleasure-grounds where Taste, refined Co-mate
Of Truth and Beauty, strives to imitate,
Far as she may, primeval Nature's style.
Fair Land! by Time's parental love made
free,
By Social Order's watchful arms embraced; 10
With unexampled union meet in thee,
For eye and mind, the present and the
past;
With golden prospect for futurity,
If that be revered which ought to last.

III.

THEY called Thee MERRY ENGLAND, in old time;
A happy people won for thee that name
With envy heard in many a distant
clime;
And, spite of change, for me thou keep'st
the same
Endearing title, a responsive chime 5
To the heart's fond belief; though some
there are Whose sterner judgments deem that word a snare
For inattentive Fancy, like the lime
Which foolish birds are caught with.
Can, I ask,
This face of rural beauty be a mask 10
For discontent, and poverty, and crime;

¹ The Poems of this Series were for the most part composed in 1833, and published for the first time in the volume of 1835 entitled Yarrow Revisited, and Other Poems. Chronological notes are attached only to those pieces to which this observation does not apply. See Nos. XXVII., XLIII., and XLVI.—ED.

These spreading towns a cloak for lawless
will?

Forbid it, Heaven!—and MERRY ENG-LAND still

Shall be thy rightful name, in prose and rhyme!

IV.

TO THE RIVER GRETA, NEAR KESWICK.

GRETA, what fearful listening! when huge
stones

Rumble along thy bed, block after block:
Or, whirling with reiterated shock,

Combat, while darkness aggravates the
groans:

But if thou (like Cocytus from the moans Heard on thy rueful margin) thence wert
named 6

The Mourner, thy true nature was de-famed,

And the habitual murmur that atones
For thy worst rage, forgotten. Oft as
Spring

Decks, on thy sinuous banks, her thousand thrones, 10

Seats of glad instinct and love's carolling,

The concert, for the happy, then may vie
With liveliest peals of birth-day harmony:

To a grieved heart the notes are benisons.

V.

TO THE RIVER DERWENT.

AMONG the mountains were we nursed, loved Stream!

Thou near the eagle's nest—within brief
sail,

I, of his bold wing floating on the gale,
Where thy deep voice could lull me!
Faint the beam

Of human life when first allowed to
gleam 5

On mortal notice.—Glory of the vale,
Such thy meek outset, with a crown,
though frail,

Kept in perpetual verdure by the steam
Of thy soft breath!—Less vivid wreath entwined

Nemean victor's brow; less bright was worn, 10

Meed of some Roman chief—in triumph
borne

With captives chained; and shedding from his car

The sunset splendours of a finished war
Upon the proud enslavers of mankind!

VI.

IN SIGHT OF THE TOWN OF COCKER-MOUTH.

(Where the Author was born, and his Father's remains are laid.)

A POINT of life between my Parent's dust,
And yours, my buried Little-ones! am I;
And to those graves looking habitually
In kindred quiet I repose my trust.

Death to the innocent is more than just, 5
And, to the sinner, mercifully bent;

So may I hope, if truly I repent
And meekly bear the ills which bear I must:

And You, my Offspring! that do still remain,

Yet may outstrip me in the appointed
race, 10

If e'er, through fault of mine, in mutual
pain

We breathed together for a moment's
space,

The wrong, by love provoked, let love
arraign,

And only love keep in your hearts a place.

VII.

ADDRESS FROM THE SPIRIT OF COCKER-MOUTH CASTLE.

"THOU look'st upon me, and dost fondly
think,

Poet! that, stricken as both are by years,
We, differing once so much, are now
Compeers,

Prepared, when each has stood his time,
to sink

Into the dust. Erewhile a sterner link 5
United us; when thou, in boyish play,
Entering mydungeon, didst become a prey

To soul-appalling darkness. Not a blink
Of light was there;—and thus did I, thy Tutor,
Make thy young thoughts acquainted with the grave; 10
While thou wert chasing the winged butterfly
Through my green courts; or climbing, a bold suitor,
Up to the flowers whose golden progeny Still round my shattered brow in beauty wave.”

VIII.

NUN'S WELL, BRIGHAM.

THE cattle crowding round this beverage
clear
To slake their thirst, with reckless hoofs have trod
The encircling turf into a barren clod;
Through which the waters creep, then disappear,
Born to be lost in Derwent flowing near;
Yet o'er the brink, and round the limestone cell 6
Of the pure spring (they call it the “Nun's
Well,”
Name that first struck by chance my startled ear)
A tender Spirit broods—the pensive
Shade 9
Of ritual honours to this Fountain paid
By hooded Votresses with saintly cheer;
Albeit oft the Virgin-mother mild Looked down with pity upon eyes beguiled
Into the shedding of “too soft a tear.”

IX.

TO A FRIEND.

On the banks of the Derwent.

PASTOR and Patriot!—at whose bidding
rise
These modest walls, amid a flock that need,
For one who comes to watch them and to feed,
A fixed Abode—keep down presageful
sighs.
Threats, which the unthinking only can despise, 5

Perplex the Church; but be thou firm,— be true
To thy first hope, and this good work
pursue,
Poor as thou art. A welcome sacrifice Dost Thou prepare, whose sign will be the smoke
Of thy new hearth; and sooner shall its wreaths, 10
Mounting while earth her morning incense breathes,
From wandering fiends of air receive a yoke,
And straightway cease to aspire, than God disdain
This humble tribute as ill-timed or vain.

X.

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS.

Landing at the mouth of the Derwent, Workington.
DEAR to the Loves, and to the Graces
vowed,
The Queen drew back the wimple that she wore;
And to the throng, that on the Cumbrian
shore
Her landing hailed, how touchingly she bowed!
And like a Star (that, from a heavy cloud
Of pine-tree foliage poised in air, forth darts, 6
When a soft summer gale at evening parts
The gloom that did its loveliness enshroud)
She smiled; but Time, the old Saturnian seer,
Sighed on the wing as her foot pressed the strand, 10
With step prelusive to a long array
Of woes and degradations hand in hand—
Weeping captivity, and shuddering fear Stilled by the ensanguined block of Fotheringay!

XI.

STANZAS

SUGGESTED IN A STEAMBOAT OFF SAINT BEES' HEADS, ON THE COAST OF CUM-BERLAND.
IF Life were slumber on a bed of down,
Toil unimposed, vicissitude unknown,

Sad were our lot : no hunter of the hare Exults like him whose javelin from the lair Has roused the lion ; no one plucks the
 rose, 5
 Whose proffered beauty in safe shelter blows
 'Mid a trim garden's summer luxuries,
 With joy like his who climbs, on hands and knees,
 For some rare plant, yon Headland of
 St. Bees.

This independence upon oar and sail, 10
 This new indifference to breeze or gale,
 This straight-lined progress, furrowing
 a flat lea,
 And regular as if locked in certainty—Depress the hours. Up, Spirit of the storm !
 That Courage may find something to perform ; 15
 That Fortitude, whose blood disdains to freeze
 At Danger's bidding, may confront the
 seas,
 Firm as the towering Headlands of
 St. Bees.

Dread cliff of Baruth ! that wild wish may sleep,
 Bold as if men and creatures of the Deep Breathed the same element ; too many wrecks 21
 Have struck thy sides, too many ghastly decks
 Hast thou looked down upon, that such a thought Should here be welcome, and in verse enwrought :
 With thy stern aspect better far agrees 25
 Utterance of thanks that we have past with ease,
 As millions thus shall do, the Headlands of St. Bees.
 Yet, while each useful Art augments her
 store,
 What boots the gain if Nature should lose more?
 And Wisdom, as she holds a Christian
 place 30
 In man's intelligence sublimed by grace ?

When Bega sought of yore the Cumbrian
 coast,
 Tempestuous winds her holy errand
 crossed :
 She knelt in prayer—the waves their wrath appease ;
 And, from her vow well weighed in Heaven's decrees, 35
 Rose, where she touched the strand, the Chantry of St. Bees.
 "Cruel of heart were they, bloody of
 hand,"
 Who in these Wilds then struggled for
 command ;
 The strong were merciless, without hope the weak ;
 Till this bright Stranger came, fair as day-break, 40
 And as a cresset true that darts its length
 Of beamy lustre from a tower of strength ;
 Guiding the mariner through troubled seas,
 And cheering oft his peaceful reveries,
 Like the fixed Light that crowns yon
 Headland of St. Bees. 45
 To aid the Votaress, miracles believed Wrought in men's minds, like miracles
 achieved ;
 So piety took root ; and Song might tell
 What humanizing virtues near her cell Sprang up, and spread their fragrance wide around ; 50
 How savage bosoms melted at the sound
 Of gospel-truth enchained in harmonies Wafted o'er waves, or creeping through close trees,
 From her religious Mansion of St. Bees.
 When her sweet Voice, that instrument
 of love, 55
 Was glorified, and took its place, above
 The silent stars, among the angelic quire,
 Her chantry blazed with sacrilegious fire,
 And perished utterly ; but her good deeds
 Had sown the spot, that witnessed them, with seeds 60
 Which lay in earth expectant, till a breeze With quickening impulse answered their mute pleas,
 And lo ! a statelier pile, the Abbey of
 St. Bees.

There are the naked clothed, the hungry
fed;

And Charity extendeth to the dead 65
Her intercessions made for the soul's rest
Of tardy penitents; or for the best Among the good (when love might else have slept,

Sickened, or died) in pious memory kept:
Thanks to the austere and simple Devotees, 70

Who, to that service bound by venial fees,

Keep watch before the altars of St. Bees.

Are not, in sooth, their Requiem's sacred ties

Woven out of passion's sharpest agonies, Subdued, composed, and formalized by
art, 75

To fix a wiser sorrow in the heart?
The prayer for them whose hour is past
away

Says to the Living, profit while ye may!
A little part, and that the worst, he sees
Who thinks that priestly cunning holds the keys 80

That best unlock the secrets of St. Bees.

Conscience, the timid being's inmost light,
Hope of the dawn and solace of the night,
Cheers these Recluses with a steady ray
In many an hour when judgment goes
astray. 85

Ah! scorn not hastily their rule who try
Earth to despise, and flesh to mortify;
Consume with zeal, in wingèd ecstasies
Of prayer and praise forget their rosaries,
Nor hear the loudest surges of St. Bees. 90

Yet none so prompt to succour and protect

The forlorn traveller, or sailor wrecked
On the bare coast; nor do they grudge
the boon

Which staff and cockle hat and sandal shoon

Claim for the pilgrim: and, though chidings sharp 95

May sometimes greet the strolling minstrel's harp,

It is not then when, swept with sportive
ease,

It charms a feast-day throng of all degrees,
Brightening the archway of revered St.
Bees.

How did the cliffs and echoing hills rejoice 100

What time the Benedictine Brethren's
voice,

Imploring, or commanding with meet
pride,

Summoned the Chiefs to lay their feuds
aside,

And under one blest ensign serve the
Lord

In Palestine. Advance, indignant Sword!
Flaming till thou from Paynim hands release 106

That Tomb, dread centre of all sanctities Nursed in the quiet Abbey of St. Bees.

But look we now to them whose minds
from far

Follow the fortunes which they may not share. 110

While in Judea Fancy loves to roam,
She helps to make a Holy-land at home:
The Star of Bethlehem from its sphere invites

To sound the crystal depth of maiden rights;

And wedded Life, through scriptural mysteries, 115

Heavenward ascends with all her charities, Taught by the hooded Celibates of St.
Bees.

Nor be it e'er forgotten how by skill
Of cloistered Architects, free their souls to fill

With love of God, throughout the Land were raised 120

Churches, on whose symbolic beauty
gazed

Peasant and mail-clad Chief with pious
awe;

As at this day men seeing what they saw,

Or the bare wreck of faith's solemnities,
Aspire to more than earthly destinies; 125

Witness yon Pile that greets us from
St. Bees.

Yet more; around those Churches, gathered Towns
Safe from the feudal Castle's haughty frowns;
Peaceful abodes, where Justice might uphold
Her scales with even hand, and culture
mould 130
The heart to pity, train the mind in care
For rules of life, sound as the Time could
bear.

Nor dost thou fail, thro' abject love of ease,
Or hindrance raised by sordid purposes,
To bear thy part in this good work,
St. Bees. 135

Who with the ploughshare clove the barren moors,
And to green meadows changed the swampy shores?

Thinned the rank woods; and for the cheerful grange Made room where wolf and boar were used to range?

Who taught, and showed by deeds, that gentler chains 140
Should bind the vassal to his lord's domains?

The thoughtful Monks, intent their God
to please,
For Christ's dear sake, by human sympathies

Poured from the bosom of thy Church,
St. Bees!

But all availed not; by a mandate given Through lawless will the Brotherhood was driven 146
Forth from their cells; their ancient House laid low

In Reformation's sweeping overthrow.
But now once more the local Heart
revives,

The inextinguishable Spirit strives. 150 Oh may that Power who hushed the stormy seas,

And cleared a way for the first Votaries,
Prosper the new-born College of St. Bees!

Alas! the Genius of our age, from Schools Less humble, draws her lessons, aims, and rules. 155

To Prowess guided by her insight keen Matter and Spirit are as one Machine;
Boastful Idolatress of formal skill
She in her own would merge the eternal
will:

Better, if Reason's triumphs match with
these, 160

Her flight before the bold credulities
That furthered the first teaching of St.
Bees¹.

XII.

IN THE CHANNEL, BETWEEN THE COAST OF CUMBERLAND AND THE ISLE OF
MAN.

RANGING the heights of Scawfell or Black-comb,

In his lone course the Shepherd oft will pause,

And strive to fathom the mysterious laws
By which the clouds, arrayed in light or
gloom,

On Mona settle, and the shapes assume 5
Of all her peaks and ridges. What he draws

From sense, faith, reason, fancy, of the
cause,

He will take with him to the silent tomb.
Or by his fire, a child upon his knee, Haply the untaught Philosopher may
speak 10

Of the strange sight, nor hide his theory
That satisfies the simple and the meek,
Blest in their pious ignorance, though weak
To cope with Sages undevoutly free.

XIII.

AT SEA OFF THE ISLE OF MAN.

BOLD words affirmed, in days when faith was strong

And doubts and scruples seldom teased
the brain,

That no adventurer's bark had power to
gain

These shores if he approached them bent on wrong;

¹ See "Excursion," seventh part; and "Ecclesiastical Sketches," second part, near the beginning.

For, suddenly up-conjured from the Main, 5
Mists rose to hide the Land—that search, though long
And eager, might be still pursued in vain.
O Fancy, what an age was that for song!
That age, when not by laws inanimate,
As men believed, the waters were impelled, 10
The air controlled, the stars their courses
held;
But element and orb on acts did wait
Of Powers endued with visible form, instinct
With will, and to their work by passion linked.

XIV.

DESIRE we past illusions to recall?
To reinstate wild Fancy, would we hide Truths whose thick veil Science has drawn aside?
No,—let this Age, high as she may, instal
In her esteem the thirst that wrought man's fall, 5
The universe is infinitely wide;
And conquering Reason, if self-glorified, Can nowhere move uncrossed by some new wall
Or gulf of mystery, which thou alone,
Imaginative Faith! canst overleap, 10
In progress toward the fount of Love,— the throne
Of Power whose ministers the records
keep
Of periods fixed, and laws established,
less
Flesh to exalt than prove its nothingness.

XV.

ON ENTERING DOUGLAS BAY, ISLE OF
MAN.

“Dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori.”

THE feudal Keep, the bastions of Cohorn,
Even when they rose to check or to repel Tides of aggressive war, oft served as
well
Greedy ambition, armed to treat with
scorn

Just limits; but yon Tower, whose smiles adorn 5
This perilous bay, stands clear of all
offence;
Blest work it is of love and innocence,
A Tower of refuge built for the else
forlorn.
Spare it, ye waves, and lift the mariner,
Struggling for life, into its saving arms!
Spare, too, the human helpers! Do they stir 11
'Mid your fierce shock like men afraid to
die?
No; their dread service nerves the heart
it warms,
And they are led by noble HILLARY.¹

XVI.

BY THE SEA-SHORE, ISLE OF MAN.

WHY stand we gazing on the sparkling
Brine,
With wonder smit by its transparency,
And all-enraptured with its purity?— Because the unstained, the clear, the crystalline,
Have ever in them something of benign;
Whether in gem, in water, or in sky, 6
A sleeping infant's brow, or wakeful eye
Of a young maiden, only not divine.
Scarcely the hand forbears to dip its palm
For beverage drawn as from a mountain-
well. 10
Temptation centres in the liquid Calm;
Our daily raiment seems no obstacle
To instantaneous plunging in, deep Sea!
And revelling in long embrace with thee².

XVII.

ISLE OF MAN.

A YOUTH too certain of his power to wade
On the smooth bottom of this clear bright
sea,
To sight so shallow, with a bather's glee, Leapt from this rock, and but for timely

² The sea-water on the coast of the Isle of Man is singularly pure and beautiful.

He, by the alluring element betrayed, 5
 Had perished. Then might Sea-nymphs (and with sighs
 Of self-reproach) have chanted elegies
 Bewailing his sad fate, when he was laid In peaceful earth: for, doubtless, he was frank,
 Utterly in himself devoid of guile; 10
 Knew not the double-dealing of a smile;
 Nor aught that makes men's promises
 a blank,
 Or deadly snare: and He survives to bless
 The Power that saved him in his strange distress.

XVIII.

ISLE OF MAN.

DID pangs of grief for lenient time too
 keen,
 Grief that devouring waves had caused—or guilt
 Which they had witnessed, sway the man who built This Homestead, placed where nothing could be seen,
 Nought heard, of ocean troubled or serene?
 A tired Ship-soldier on paternal land, 6
 That o'er the channel holds august command,
 The dwelling raised,—a veteran Marine.
 He, in disgust, turned from the neighbouring sea
 To shun the memory of a listless life 10
 That hung between two callings. May no strife
 More hurtful here beset him, doomed
 though free,
 Self-doomed, to worse inaction, till his eye Shrink from the daily sight of earth and sky!

XIX.

BY A RETIRED MARINER.

A Friend of the Author.

FROM early youth I ploughed the restless
 Main,
 My mind as restless and as apt to change;
 Through every clime and ocean did I range,
 In hope at length a competence to gain;

For poor to Sea I went, and poor I still remain. 5
 Year after year I strove, but strove in vain,
 And hardships manifold did I endure,
 For Fortune on me never deigned to
 smile;
 Yet I at last a resting-place have found,
 With just enough life's comforts to procure,
 In a snug Cove on this our favoured Isle,
 A peaceful spot where Nature's gifts
 abound;
 Then sure I have no reason to complain,
 Though poor to Sea I went, and poor
 I still remain.

XX.

AT BALA-SALA, ISLE OF MAN.

Supposed to be written by a Friend.

BROKEN in fortune, but in mind entire
 And sound in principle, I seek repose
 Where ancient trees this convent-pile enclose¹,
 In ruin beautiful. When vain desire Intrudes on peace, I pray the eternal Sire
 To cast a soul-subduing shade on me, 6
 A grey-haired, pensive, thankful Refugee;
 A shade—but with some sparks of heavenly fire Once to these cells vouchsafed. And when I note
 The old Tower's brow yellowed as with the beams 10
 Of sunset ever there, albeit streams
 Of stormy weather-stains that semblance
 wrought,
 I thank the silent Monitor, and say
 "Shine so, my aged brow, at all hours of the day!"

XXI.

TYNWALD HILL.

ONCE on the top of Tynwald's formal mound (Still marked with green turf circles narrowing Stage above stage) would sit this Island's King,

¹ Rushen Abbey.

The laws to promulgate, enrobed and crowned;
 While, compassing the little mound around, 5
 Degrees and Orders stood, each under each:
 Now, like to things within fate's easiest reach,
 The power is merged, the pomp a grave has found.
 Off with yon cloud, old Snafell! that thine eye
 Over three Realms may take its widest range; 10
 And let, for them, thy fountains utter strange Voices, thy winds break forth in prophecy,
 If the whole State must suffer mortal change,
 Like Mona's miniature of sovereignty.

XXII.

DESPOND who will—I heard a voice exclaim,
 "Though fierce the assault, and shattered the defence,
 It cannot be that Britain's social frame,
 The glorious work of time and providence,
 Before a flying season's rash pretence 5
 Should fall; that She, whose virtue put to shame,
 When Europe prostrate lay, the Conqueror's aim,
 Should perish, self-subverted. Black and dense
 The cloud is; but brings that a day of doom
 To Liberty? Her sun is up the while, 10
 That orb whose beams round Saxon Alfred shone:
 Then laugh, ye innocent Vales! ye Streams, sweep on,
 Nor let one billow of our heaven-blest Isle
 Toss in the fanning wind a humbler plume."

XXIII.

IN THE FRITH OF CLYDE, AILSA CRAG.
 During an Eclipse of the Sun, July 17.
 SINCE risen from ocean, ocean to defy,
 Appeared the Crag of Ailsa, ne'er did morn
 With gleaming lights more gracefully adorn
 His sides, or wreath with mist his forehead high:
 Now, faintly darkening with the sun's eclipse, 5
 Still is he seen, in lone sublimity,
 Towering above the sea and little ships;
 For dwarfs the tallest seem while sailing by,
 Each for her haven; with her freight of Care,
 Pleasure, or Grief, and Toil that seldom looks 10
 Into the secret of to-morrow's fare;
 Though poor, yet rich, without the wealth of books,
 Or aught that watchful Love to Nature owes
 For her mute Powers, fixed Forms, or transient Shows.

XXIV.

ON THE FRITH OF CLYDE.
 In a Steamboat.
 ARRAN! a single-crested Teneriffe,
 A St. Helena next—in shape and hue,
 Varying her crowded peaks and ridges blue;
 Who but must covet a cloud-seat, or skiff
 Built for the air, or winged Hippogriff? 5
 That he might fly, where no one could pursue,
 From this dull Monster and her sooty crew;
 And, as a God, light on thy topmost cliff.
 Impotent wish! which reason would despise
 If the mind knew no union of extremes,
 No natural bond between the boldest schemes 11

Ambition frames and heart-humilities.
Beneath stern mountains many a soft vale lies,
And lofty springs give birth to lowly streams.

XXV.

ON REVISITING DUNOLLY CASTLE.

See former Series, p. 388.

THE captive Bird was gone;—to cliff or moor
Perchance had flown, delivered by the
storm;
Or he had pined, and sunk to feed the
worm:
Him found we not: but, climbing a tall
tower,
There saw, impaved with rude fidelity 5
Of art mosaic, in a roofless floor,
An Eagle with stretched wings, but beam-less eye—
An Eagle that could neither wail nor soar.
Effigy of the Vanished—(shall I dare
To call thee so?) or symbol of fierce deeds
And of the towering courage which past
times
Rejoiced in—take, whate'er thou be, a share, II
Not undeserved, of the memorial rhymes
That animate my way where'er it leads!

XXVI.

THE DUNOLLY EAGLE.

NOT to the clouds, not to the cliff, he flew;
But when a storm, on sea or mountain
bred,
Came and delivered him, alone he sped
Into the castle-dungeon's darkest mew.
Now near his master's house in open view
He dwells, and hears indignant tempests
howl, 6
Kennelled and chained. Ye tame domestic fowl,
Beware of him! Thou, saucy cockatoo, Look to thy plumage and thy life!—The roe,
Fleet as the west wind, is for him no quarry; 10
Balanced in ether he will never tarry, Eyeing the sea's blue depths. Poor Bird!
even so

Doth man of brother man a creature make
That clings to slavery for its own sad sake.

XXVII.

WRITTEN IN A BLANK LEAF OF MACPHERSON'S OSSIAN.

[Composed 1824.—Published 1827.]

OFt have I caught, upon a fitful breeze,
Fragments of far-off melodies,
With ear not coveting the whole,
A part so charmed the pensive soul:
While a dark storm before my sight 5
Was yielding, on a mountain height
Loose vapours have I watched, that won Prismatic colours from the sun;
Nor felt a wish that heaven would show
The image of its perfect bow. 10
What need, then, of these finished Strains?
Away with counterfeit Remains!
An abbey in its lone recess,
A temple of the wilderness, Wrecks though they be, announce with feeling 15
The majesty of honest dealing.
Spirit of Ossian! if imbound
In language thou may'st yet be found,
If aught (intrusted to the pen
Or floating on the tongues of men, 20
Albeit shattered and impaired)
Subsist thy dignity to guard,
In concert with memorial claim
Of old grey stone, and high-born name
That cleaves to rock or pillared cave 25
Where moans the blast, or beats the wave,
Let Truth, stern arbitress of all,
Interpret that Original,
And for presumptuous wrongs atone;—
Authentic words be given, or none! 30
Time is not blind;—yet He, who spares
Pyramid pointing to the stars,
Hath preyed with ruthless appetite
On all that marked the primal flight
Of the poetic ecstasy 35
Into the land of mystery.
No tongue is able to rehearse
One measure, Orpheus! of thy verse;
Musæus, stationed with his lyre
Supreme among the Elysian quire, 40
Is, for the dwellers upon earth,
Mute as a lark ere morning's birth.

Why grieve for these, though past away
 The music, and extinct the lay?
 When thousands, by severer doom, 45
 Full early to the silent tomb
 Have sunk, at Nature's call; or strayed
 From hope and promise, self-betrayed;
 The garland withering on their brows;
 Stung with remorse for broken vows; 50
 Frantic—else how might they rejoice?
 And friendless, by their own sad choice!

Hail, Bards of mightier grasp! on you
 I chiefly call, the chosen Few,
 Who cast not off the acknowledged guide,
 Who faltered not, nor turned aside; 56
 Whose lofty genius could survive
 Privation, under sorrow thrive;
 In whom the fiery Muse revered
 The symbol of a snow-white beard, 60
 Bedewed with meditative tears
 Dropped from the lenient cloud of years.

Brothers in soul! though distant times
 Produced you nursed in various climes,
 Ye, when the orb of life had waned, 65
 A plenitude of love retained:
 Hence, while in you each sad regret
 By corresponding hope was met,
 Ye lingered among human kind,
 Sweet voices for the passing wind; 70
 Departing sunbeams, loth to stop,
 Though smiling on the last hill-top!
 Such to the tender-hearted maid
 Even ere her joys begin to fade;
 Such, haply, to the rugged chief 75
 By fortune crushed, or tamed by grief;
 Appears, on Morven's lonely shore,
 Dim-gleaming through imperfect lore,
 The Son of Fingal; such was blind
 Maeonides of ampler mind; 80
 Such Milton, to the fountain-head Of glory by Urania led!

XXVIII.

CAVE OF STAFFA.

WE saw, but surely, in the motley crowd,
 Not One of us has felt the far-famed sight;
 How could we feel it? each the other's blight,
 Hurried and hurrying, volatile and loud.
 O for those motions only that invite 5

The Ghost of Fingal to his tuneful Cave
 By the breeze entered, and wave after
 wave
 Softly embosoming the timid light!
 And by one Votary who at will might
 stand 9
 Gazing and take into his mind and heart,
 With undistracted reverence, the effect
 Of those proportions where the almighty
 hand
 That made the worlds, the sovereign Architect,
 Has deigned to work as if with human
 Art!

XXIX.

CAVE OF STAFFA.

After the Crowd had departed.

THANKS for the lessons of this Spot—fit
 school
 For the presumptuous thoughts that would assign Mechanic laws to agency divine;
 And, measuring heaven by earth, would overrule
 Infinite Power. The pillared vestibule, 5
 Expanding yet precise, the roof embowed, Might seem designed to humble man,
 when proud
 Of his best workmanship by plan and tool.
 Down-bearing with his whole Atlantic
 weight
 Of tide and tempest on the Structure's base, 10
 And flashing to that Structure's topmost
 height,
 Ocean has proved its strength, and of its
 grace
 In calms is conscious, finding for his freight
 Of softest music some responsive place.

XXX.

CAVE OF STAFFA.

YE shadowy Beings, that have rights and claims
 In every cell of Fingal's mystic Grot, Where are ye? Driven or venturing to the spot,

Our fathers glimpses caught of your thin
Frames,
And, by your mien and bearing, knew your names; 5
And they could hear his ghostly song who trod
Earth, till the flesh lay on him like a load, While he struck his desolate harp without hopes or aims.
Vanished ye are, but subject to recall;
Why keep we else the instincts whose dread law 10
Ruled here of yore, till what men felt they saw,
Not by black arts but magic natural!
If eyes be still sworn vassals of belief,
Yon light shapes forth a Bard, that shade a Chief.

XXXI.

FLOWERS ON THE TOP OF THE PILLARS
AT THE ENTRANCE OF THE CAVE.

HOPE smiled when your nativity was cast, Children of Summer! Ye fresh Flowers that brave
What Summer here escapes not, the fierce
wave,
And whole artillery of the western blast, Battering the Temple's front, its long-drawn nave 5
Smiting, as if each moment were their last.
But ye, bright Flowers, on frieze and architrave
Survive, and once again the Pile stands
fast:
Calm as the Universe, from specular towers
Of heaven contemplated by Spirits pure
With mute astonishment, it stands sustained 11
Through every part in symmetry, to endure,
Unhurt, the assault of Time with all his
hours,
As the supreme Artificer ordained.

XXXII.

IONA.

ON to Iona!—What can she afford
To us save matter for a thoughtful sigh,
Heaved over ruin with stability

In urgent contrast? To diffuse the WORD (Thy Paramount, mighty Nature! and Time's Lord) 5
Her Temples rose, 'mid pagan gloom; but why,
Even for a moment, has our verse deplored
Their wrongs, since they fulfilled their destiny?
And when, subjected to a common doom
Of mutability, those far-famed Piles 10
Shall disappear from both the sister Isles,
Iona's Saints, forgetting not past days,
Garlands shall wear of amaranthine bloom,
While heaven's vast sea of voices chants their praise.

XXXIII.

IONA.

Upon Landing.

How sad a welcome! To each voyager
Some ragged child holds up for sale a store
Of wave-worn pebbles, pleading on the
shore
Where once came monk and nun with gentle stir,
Blessings to give, news ask, or suit prefer.
Yet is yon neat trim church a grateful speck 6
Of novelty amid the sacred wreck Strewn far and wide. Think, proud Philosopher!
Fallen though she be, this Glory of the
west,
Still on her sons the beams of mercy
shine; 10
And "hopes, perhaps more heavenly bright than thine,
A grace by thee unsought and unpossessed,
A faith more fixed, a rapture more divine Shall gild their passage to eternal rest."

XXXIV.

THE BLACK STONES OF IONA.

[See Martin's Voyage among the Western Isles.] HERE on their knees men swore: the stones were black,
Black in the people's minds and words, yet they
Were at that time, as now, in colour grey.

But what is colour, if upon the rack
 Of conscience souls are placed by deeds that lack 5
 Concord with oaths? What differ night and day
 Then, when before the Perjured on his way Hell opens, and the heavens in vengeance crack
 Above his head uplifted in vain prayer
 To Saint, or Fiend, or to the Godhead
 whom 10
 He had insulted—Peasant, King, or Thane?
 Fly where the culprit may, guilt meets a
 doom;
 And, from invisible worlds at need laid
 bare,
 Come links for social order's awful chain.

XXXV.

HOMEWARD return. Isle of Columba's Cell, Where Christian piety's soul-cheering
 spark (Kindled from Heaven between the light and dark
 Of time) shone like the morning-star,
 farewell!—
 And fare thee well, to Fancy visible, 5 Remote St. Kilda, lone and loved sea-mark
 For many a voyage made in her swift bark,
 When with more hues than in the rainbow
 dwell
 Thou a mysterious intercourse dost hold, 9
 Extracting from clear skies and air serene,
 And out of sun-bright waves, a lucid veil,
 That thickens, spreads, and, mingling fold with fold,
 Makes known, when thou no longer canst
 be seen,
 Thy whereabouts, to warn the approaching sail.

XXXVI.

GREENOCK.

Per me si va nella Città dolente.

WE have not passed into a doleful City,
 We who were led to-day down a grim dell,
 By some too boldly named "the Jaws of Hell:"

Where be the wretched ones, the sights for pity?
 These crowded streets resound no plaintive ditty:— 5
 As from the hive where bees in summer
 dwell,
 Sorrow seems here excluded; and that
 knell,
 It neither damps the gay, nor checks the witty.
 Alas! too busy Rival of old Tyre, Whose merchants Princes were, whose decks were thrones; 10
 Soon may the punctual sea in vain re-
 spire
 To serve thy need, in union with that
 Clyde
 Whose nursling current brawls o'er mossy
 stones,
 The poor, the lonely, herdsman's joy and pride.

XXXVII.

"THERE!" said a Stripling, pointing with meet pride
 Towards a low roof with green trees half concealed,
 "Is Mosgiel Farm; and that's the very
 field
 Where Burns ploughed up the Daisy."
 Far and wide
 A plain below stretched seaward, while,
 descried 5
 Above sea-clouds, the Peaks of Arran
 rose;
 And, by that simple notice, the repose
 Of earth, sky, sea, and air, was vivified.
 Beneath "the random field of clod or
 stone"
 Myriads of daisies have shone forth in
 flower 10
 Near the lark's nest, and in their natural
 hour
 Have passed away; less happy than the
 One
 That, by the unwilling ploughshare, died to prove
 The tender charm of poetry and love.

XXXVIII.

THE RIVER EDEN, CUMBERLAND.

EDEN! till now thy beauty had I viewed
 By glimpses only, and confess with shame
 That verse of mine, whate'er its varying
 mood,
 Repeats but once the sound of thy sweet
 name:
 Yet fetched from Paradise that honour
 came, 5
 Rightfully borne; for Nature gives thee
 flowers
 That have no rivals among British bowers;
 And thy bold rocks are worthy of their
 fame.
 Measuring thy course, fair Stream! at length I pay
 To my life's neighbour dues of neighbourhood; 10
 But I have traced thee on thy winding
 way
 With pleasure sometimes by this thought restrained—
 For things far off we toil, while many a
 good
 Not sought, because too near, is never gained.

XXXIX.

MONUMENT OF MRS. HOWARD

(by Nollekens),

In Wetheral Church, near Corby, on the banks of the Eden.
 STRETCHED on the dying Mother's lap, lies dead
 Her new-born Babe; dire ending of bright
 hope!
 But Sculpture here, with the divinest
 scope
 Of luminous faith, heavenward hath raised that head
 So patiently; and through one hand has
 spread 5
 A touch so tender for the insensate Child—(Earth's lingering love to parting reconciled,
 Brief parting, for the spirit is all but fled)—

That we, who contemplate the turns of
 life

Through this still medium, are consoled
 and cheered; 10

Feel with the Mother, think the severed
 Wife

Is less to be lamented than revered;
 And own that Art, triumphant over strife
 And pain, hath powers to Eternity endeared.

XL.

SUGGESTED BY THE FOREGOING.

TRANQUILITY! the sovereign aim wert
 thou

In heathen schools of philosophic lore;
 Heart-stricken by stern destiny of yore
 The Tragic Muse thee served with thoughtful vow;

And what of hope Elysium could allow 5
 Was fondly seized by Sculpture, to restore Peace to the Mourner. But when He who wore

The crown of thorns around his bleeding
 brow

Warmed our sad being with celestial
 light,

Then Arts, which still had drawn a softening grace 10

From shadowy fountains of the Infinite,
 Communed with that Idea face to face:
 And move around it now as planets run,
 Each in its orbit round the central Sun.

XLI.

NUNNERY.

THE floods are roused, and will not soon be weary;

Down from the Pennine Alps¹ how fiercely sweeps

CROGLIN, the stately Eden's tributary!
 He raves, or through some moody passage
 creeps

Plotting new mischief—out again he leaps Into broad light, and sends, through regions airy, 6

That voice which soothed the Nuns while on the steeps

They knelt in prayer, or sang to blissful Mary.
 That union ceased: then, cleaving easy
 walks
 Through crags, and smoothing paths beset with danger, 10
 Came studious Taste; and many a pensive stranger
 Dreams on the banks, and to the river talks.
 What change shall happen next to Nunnery Dell?
 Canal, and Viaduct, and Railway, tell!

XLII.

STEAMBOATS, VIADUCTS, AND RAIL-
 WAYS.

MOTIONS and Means, on land and sea at
 war
 With old poetic feeling, not for this,
 Shall ye, by Poets even, be judged amiss!
 Nor shall your presence, howsoe'er it mar
 The loveliness of Nature, prove a bar 5
 To the Mind's gaining that prophetic sense
 Of future change, that point of vision, whence
 May be discovered what in soul ye are.
 In spite of all that beauty may disown
 In your harsh features, Nature doth embrace 10
 Her lawful offspring in Man's art; and
 Time, Pleased with your triumphs o'er his brother Space,
 Accepts from your bold hands the proferred crown
 Of hope, and smiles on you with cheer sublime.

XLIII.

THE MONUMENT COMMONLY CALLED LONG MEG AND HER DAUGHTERS, NEAR THE RIVER EDEN.

[Composed 1821.—Published 1822¹; ed. 1827.]

A WEIGHT of awe, not easy to be borne,
 Fell suddenly upon my Spirit—cast
 From the dread bosom of the unknown
 past,

¹ In the little book entitled, A Description of the Scenery of the Lakes, etc.—ED.

When first I saw that family forlorn.
 Speak Thou, whose massy strength and stature scorn 5
 The power of years—pre-eminent, and placed
 Apart, to overlook the circle vast—Speak, Giant-mother! tell it to the Morn
 While she dispels the cumbrous shades of
 Night;
 Let the Moon hear, emerging from a
 cloud; 10
 At whose behest uprose on British ground
 That Sisterhood, in hieroglyphic round Forth-shadowing, some have deemed, the infinite
 The inviolable God, that tames the proud?²

XLIV.

LOWTHER.

LOWTHER! in thy majestic Pile are seen Cathedral pomp and grace, in apt accord
 With the baronial castle's sterner mien;
 Union significant of God adored,
 And charters won and guarded by the
 sword 5
 Of ancient honour; whence that goodly
 state
 Of polity which wise men venerate,
 And will maintain, if God his help afford.
 Hourly the democratic torrent swells;
 For airy promises and hopes suborned 10
 The strength of backward-looking thoughts is scorned.
 Fall if ye must, ye Towers and Pinnacles,
 With what ye symbolise; authentic Story
 Will say, Ye disappeared with England's Glory!

XLV.

TO THE EARL OF LONSDALE.

"Magistratus indicat virum."

LONSDALE! it were unworthy of a Guest, Whose heart with gratitude to thee inclines,
 If he should speak, by fancy touched, of signs

² See Note, p. 925.

On thy Abode harmoniously imprest,
 Yet be unmoved with wishes to attest 5
 How in thy mind and moral frame agree Fortitude, and that Christian Charity Which, filling, consecrates the human
 breast.

And if the Motto on thy 'scutcheon teach
 With truth, "THE MAGISTRACY SHOWS
 THE MAN;" 10

That searching test thy public course has
 stood;

As will be owned alike by bad and good,
 Soon as the measuring of life's little span Shall place thy virtues out of Envy's reach¹.

XXVI.

THE SOMNAMBULIST.

[Composed before 1827 (1807-8?).—Published 1835.]

LIST, ye who pass by Lyulph's Tower²

At eve; how softly then Doth Aira-force, that torrent hoarse,
 Speak from the woody glen!
 Fit music for a solemn vale! 5
 And holier seems the ground
 To him who catches on the gale
 The spirit of a mournful tale,
 Embodied in the sound.

Not far from that fair site whereon 10
 The Pleasure-house is reared,
 As story says, in antique days
 A stern-browed house appeared;
 Foil to a Jewel rich in light
 There set, and guarded well; 15
 Cage for a Bird of plumage bright,
 Sweet-voiced, nor wishing for a flight
 Beyond her native dell.

To win this bright Bird from her cage,
 To make this Gem their own, 20
 Came Barons bold, with store of gold,
 And Knights of high renown;

But one She prized, and only one;
 Sir Eglamore was he;
 Full happy season, when was known, 25
 Ye Dales and Hills! to you alone
 Their mutual loyalty—

Known chiefly, Aira! to thy glen,
 Thy brook, and bowers of holly;
 Where Passion caught what Nature
 taught, 30

That all but love is folly;
 Where Fact with Fancy stooped to play;
 Doubt came not, nor regret—
 To trouble hours that winged their way,
 As if through an immortal day 35
 Whose sun could never set.

But in old times Love dwelt not long Sequestered with repose;
 Best throve the fire of chaste desire,
 Fanned by the breath of foes. 40
 "A conquering lance is beauty's test,
 And proves the Lover true;"
 So spake Sir Eglamore, and pressed
 The drooping Emma to his breast,
 And looked a blind adieu. 45

They parted.—Well with him it fared
 Through wide-spread regions errant;
 A knight of proof in love's behoof,
 The thirst of fame his warrant:
 And She her happiness can build 50
 On woman's quiet hours;
 Though faint, compared with spear and
 shield,
 The solace beads and masses yield,
 And needlework and flowers.

Yet blest was Emma when she heard 55
 Her Champion's praise recounted;
 Though brain would swim, and eyes grow
 dim,
 And high her blushes mounted;
 Or when a bold heroic lay
 She warbled from full heart; 60 Delightful blossoms for the May
 Of absence! but they will not stay,
 Born only to depart.

Hope wanes with her, while lustre fills Whatever path he chooses; 65
 As if his orb, that owns no curb,
 Received the light hers loses.

² A pleasure-house built by the late Duke of Norfolk upon the banks of Ullswater. FORCE is the word used in the Lake District for Water-fall.

- He comes not back ; an ampler space
Requires for nobler deeds ;
He ranges on from place to place, 70
Till of his doings is no trace,
But what her fancy breeds.
- His fame may spread, but in the past
Her spirit finds its centre ;
Clear sight She has of what he was, 75
And that would now content her.
"Still is he my devoted Knight?"
The tear in answer flows ;
Month falls on month with heavier
weight ;
Day sickens round her, and the night 80
Is empty of repose.
- In sleep She sometimes walked abroad,
Deep sighs with quick words blending, Like that pale Queen whose hands are
seen
With fancied spots contending ; 85
But she is innocent of blood,—
The moon is not more pure
That shines aloft, while through the wood
She thrids her way, the sounding Flood
Her melancholy lure ! 90
- While 'mid the fern-brake sleeps the doe,
And owls alone are waking,
In white arrayed, glides on the Maid
The downward pathway taking,
That leads her to the torrent's side 95
And to a holly bower ;
By whom on this still night descried ?
By whom in that lone place espied ?
By thee, Sir Eglamore !
- A wandering Ghost, so thinks the Knight,
His coming step has thwarted, 101 Beneath the boughs that heard their vows,
Within whose shade they parted.
Hush, hush, the busy Sleeper see !
Perplexed her fingers seem, 105
As if they from the holly tree
Green twigs would pluck, as rapidly Flung from her to the stream.
- What means the Spectre? Why intent
To violate the Tree, 110
Thought Eglamore, by which I swore Unfading constancy ?
- Here am I, and to-morrow's sun,
To her I left, shall prove That bliss is ne'er so surely won 115
As when a circuit has been run
Of valour, truth, and love.
- So from the spot whereon he stood,
He moved with stealthy pace ;
And, drawing nigh, with his living eye,
He recognised the face ; 121
And whispers caught, and speeches small,
Some to the green-leaved tree,
Some muttered to the torrent-fall ;—
"Roar on, and bring him with thy call ;
I heard, and so may He !" 126
- Soul-shattered was the Knight, nor knew
If Emma's Ghost it were,
Or boding Shade, or if the Maid
Her very self stood there. 130
He touched ; what followed who shall
tell ?
The soft touch snapped the thread
Of slumber—shrieking back she fell,
And the Stream whirled her down the
dell
Along its foaming bed. 135
- In plunged the Knight!—when on firm
ground
The rescued Maiden lay,
Her eyes grew bright with blissful light,
Confusion passed away ;
She heard, ere to the throne of grace 140
Her faithful Spirit flew,
His voice—beheld his speaking face ;
And, dying, from his own embrace,
She felt that he was true.
- So was he reconciled to life : 145
Brief words may speak the rest ;
Within the dell he built a cell,
And there was Sorrow's guest ;
In hermits' weeds repose he found,
From vain temptations free ; 150
Beside the torrent dwelling—bound
By one deep heart-controlling sound,
And awed to piety.
- Wild stream of Aira, hold thy course,
Nor fear memorial lays, 155
Where clouds that spread in solemn
shade,
Are edged with golden rays !

Dear art thou to the light of heaven,
 Though minister of sorrow ;
 Sweet is thy voice at pensive even ; 160
 And thou, in lovers' hearts forgiven,
 Shalt take thy place with Yarrow !

XLVII.

TO CORDELIA M——.

Hallsteads, Ullswater.

NOT in the mines beyond the western main,
 You say, Cordelia, was the metal sought,
 Which a fine skill, of Indian growth, has
 wrought
 Into this flexible yet faithful Chain ;
 Nor is it silver of romantic Spain ; 5
 But from our loved Helvellyn's depths was brought,
 Our own domestic mountain. Thing and
 thought
 Mix strangely ; trifles light, and partly
 vain,
 Can prop, as you have learnt, our nobler
 being :
 Yes, Lady, while about your neck is wound 10
 (Your casual glance oft meeting) this bright cord,

What witchery, for pure gifts of inward
 seeing,
 Lurks in it, Memory's Helper, Fancy's
 Lord,
 For precious tremblings in your bosom
 found !

XLVIII.

MOST sweet it is with unuplifted eyes
 To pace the ground, if path be there or
 none,
 While a fair region round the traveller
 lies
 Which he forbears again to look upon ; 4
 Pleased rather with some soft ideal scene,
 The work of Fancy, or some happy tone
 Of meditation, slipping in between The beauty coming and the beauty gone.
 If Thought and Love desert us, from that
 day
 Let us break off all commerce with the Muse : 10
 With Thought and Love companions of our way,
 Whate'er the senses take or may refuse,
 The Mind's internal heaven shall shed her dews
 Of inspiration on the humblest lay.

POEMS OF SENTIMENT AND REFLECTION.

I.

EXPOSTULATION AND REPLY.

“WHY, William, on that old grey stone,
Thus for the length of half a day,
Why, William, sit you thus alone,
And dream your time away?

“Where are your books?—that light bequeathed 5
To Beings else forlorn and blind!
Up! up! and drink the spirit breathed
From dead men to their kind.

“You look round on your Mother Earth,
As if she for no purpose bore you; 10
As if you were her first-born birth,
And none had lived before you!”

One morning thus, by Esthwaite lake,
When life was sweet, I knew not why,
To me my good friend Matthew spake, 15
And thus I made reply:

“The eye—it cannot choose but see;
We cannot bid the ear be still;
Our bodies feel, where'er they be,
Against or with our will. 20

“Nor less I deem that there are Powers
Which of themselves our minds impress;
That we can feed this mind of ours
In a wise passiveness.

“Think you, 'mid all this mighty sum 25
Of things for ever speaking,
That nothing of itself will come,
But we must still be seeking?

“—Then ask not wherefore, here, alone,
Conversing as I may, 30
I sit upon this old grey stone,
And dream my time away.”

II.

THE TABLES TURNED.

AN EVENING SCENE ON THE SAME SUBJECT.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1798.]

UP! up! my Friend, and quit your books;

Or surely you'll grow double:
Up! up! my Friend, and clear your looks;

Why all this toil and trouble?

The sun, above the mountain's head, 5
A freshening lustre mellow Through all the long green fields has
spread,
His first sweet evening yellow.

Books! 'tis a dull and endless strife:
Come, hear the woodland linnet, 10
How sweet his music! on my life,
There's more of wisdom in it.

And hark! how blithe the throstle sings!
He, too, is no mean preacher:
Come forth into the light of things, 15
Let Nature be your Teacher.

She has a world of ready wealth,
Our minds and hearts to bless—
Spontaneous wisdom breathed by health,
Truth breathed by cheerfulness. 20

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

Sweet is the lore which Nature brings; 25
Our meddling intellect Mis-shapes the beauteous forms of
things:—
We murder to dissect.

Enough of Science and of Art ;
 Close up those barren leaves ; 30
 Come forth, and bring with you a heart
 That watches and receives.

LINES WRITTEN IN EARLY SPRING.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1798.]

I HEARD a thousand blended notes,
 While in a grove I sate reclined,
 In that sweet mood when pleasant
 thoughts
 Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

To her fair works did Nature link 5
 The human soul that through me ran ;
 And much it grieved my heart to think
 What man has made of man.

Through primrose tufts, in that green
 bower,
 The periwinkle trailed its wreaths ; 10
 And 'tis my faith that every flower
 Enjoys the air it breathes.

The birds around me hopped and played,
 Their thoughts I cannot measure :—
 But the least motion which they made, 15
 It seemed a thrill of pleasure.

The budding twigs spread out their fan,
 To catch the breezy air ;
 And I must think, do all I can,
 That there was pleasure there. 20

If this belief from heaven be sent,
 If such be Nature's holy plan,
 Have I not reason to lament
 What man has made of man ?

IV.

A CHARACTER.

[Composed probably September or October, 1800.
 —Published 1800.]

I MARVEL how Nature could ever find
 space
 For so many strange contrasts in one human face :
 There's thought and no thought, and there's paleness and bloom
 And bustle and sluggishness, pleasure and gloom.

There's weakness, and strength both redundant and vain ; 5
 Such strength as, if ever affliction and
 pain

Could pierce through a temper that's soft to disease,

Would be rational peace—a philosopher's
 ease.

There's indifference, alike when he fails or succeeds,

And attention full ten times as much as there needs ; 10

Pride where there's no envy, there's so much of joy ;

And mildness, and spirit both forward and coy .

There's freedom, and sometimes a diffident stare

Of shame scarcely seeming to know that she's there,

There's virtue, the title it surely may
 claim, 15

Yet wants heaven knows what to be worthy the name.

This picture from nature may seem to depart,

Yet the Man would at once run away with your heart ;

And I for five centuries right gladly would be

Such an odd such a kind happy creature as he. 20

V.

TO MY SISTER.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1798.]

It is the first mild day of March :
 Each minute sweeter than before,
 The redbreast sings from the tall larch
 That stands beside our door.

There is a blessing in the air, 5
 Which seems a sense of joy to yield
 To the bare trees, and mountains bare,
 And grass in the green field.

My sister ! ('tis a wish of mine)
 Now that our morning meal is done, 10
 Make haste, your morning task resign ;
 Come forth and feel the sun.

Edward will come with you;—and, pray,
Put on with speed your woodland dress;
And bring no book: for this one day 15
We'll give to idleness.

No joyless forms shall regulate
Our living calendar:
We from to-day, my Friend, will date
The opening of the year. 20

Love, now a universal birth,
From heart to heart is stealing,
From earth to man, from man to earth:
—It is the hour of feeling.

One moment now may give us more 25
Than years of toiling reason:
Our minds shall drink at every pore
The spirit of the season.

Some silent laws our hearts will make,
Which they shall long obey: 30
We for the year to come may take
Our temper from to-day.

And from the blessed power that rolls
About, below, above,
We'll frame the measure of our souls: 35
They shall be tuned to love.

Then come, my Sister! come, I pray,
With speed put on your woodland dress;
And bring no book: for this one day
We'll give to idleness. 40

VI.

SIMON LEE,

THE OLD HUNTSMAN;

With an incident in which he was concerned.

[Composed 1798.—Published 1798.]

In the sweet shire of Cardigan, 4
Not far from pleasant Ivor-hall, 4
An old Man dwells, a little man, 4
'Tis said he once was tall. 3
Full five-and-thirty years he lived 5
A running huntsman merry; 3
And still the centre of his cheek 4
Is red as a ripe cherry. 3

No man like him the horn could sound,
And hill and valley rang with glee 10
When Echo banded, round and round,
The halloo of Simon Lee.

In those proud days, he little cared
For husbandry or tillage;
To blither tasks did Simon rouse 15
The sleepers of the village.

He all the country could outrun,
Could leave both man and horse behind;
And often, ere the chase was done,
He reeled, and was stone-blind. 20
And still there's something in the world
At which his heart rejoices;
For when the chiming hounds are out,
He dearly loves their voices!

But, oh the heavy change!—bereft 25
Of health, strength, friends, and kindred,
see!

Old Simon to the world is left
In liveried poverty.
His Master's dead,—and no one now
Dwells in the Hall of Ivor; 30
Men, dogs, and horses, all are dead;
He is the sole survivor.

And he is lean and he is sick;
His body, dwindled and awry,
Rests upon ankles swoln and thick; 35
His legs are thin and dry.
One prop he has, and only one,
His wife, an aged woman,
Lives with him, near the waterfall,
Upon the village Common. 40

Beside their moss-grown hut of clay,
Not twenty paces from the door,
A scrap of land they have, but they Are poorest of the poor.
This scrap of land he from the heath 45
Enclosed when he was stronger;
But what to them avails the land
Which he can till no longer?

Oft, working by her Husband's side,
Ruth does what Simon cannot do; 50
For she, with scanty cause for pride,
Is stouter of the two.
And, though you with your utmost skill
From labour could not wean them,
'Tis little, very little—all 55
That they can do between them.

Few months of life has he in store
As he to you will tell,
For still, the more he works, the more
Do his weak ankles swell. 60

My gentle Reader, I perceive
 How patiently you've waited,
 And now I fear that you expect
 Some tale will be related.

O Reader! had you in your mind 65
 Such stores as silent thought can bring,
 O gentle Reader! you would find
 A tale in every thing.
 What more I have to say is short,
 And you must kindly take it: 70
 It is no tale; but, should you think,
 Perhaps a tale you'll make it.

One summer-day I chanced to see
 This old Man doing all he could
 To unearth the root of an old tree, 75
 A stump of rotten wood.
 The mattock tottered in his hand;
 So vain was his endeavour,
 That at the root of the old tree
 He might have worked for ever. 80

"You're overtasked, good Simon Lee, Give me your tool," to him I said;
 And at the word right gladly he Received my proffered aid.
 I struck, and with a single blow 85
 The tangled root I severed,
 At which the poor old Man so long
 And vainly had endeavoured.

The tears into his eyes were brought.
 And thanks and praises seemed to run 90
 So fast out of his heart, I thought They never would have done.
 —I've heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds
 With coldness still returning;
 Alas! the gratitude of men 95
 Hath oftener left me mourning.

VII.

WRITTEN IN GERMANY,

ON ONE OF THE COLDEST DAYS OF THE CENTURY.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

The Reader must be apprised that the Stoves in North Germany generally have the Impression of a galloping horse upon them, this being part of the Brunswick Arms.

A PLAGUE on your languages, German and Norse!

Let me have the song of the kettle;

And the tongs and the poker, instead of that horse
 That gallops away with such fury and
 force
 On this dreary dull plate of black metal. 5

See that Fly,—a disconsolate creature!
 perhaps
 A child of the field or the grove;
 And, sorrow for him! the dull treacherous
 heat 70
 Has seduced the poor fool from his winter
 retreat,
 And he creeps to the edge of my stove. 10

Alas! how he fumbles about the domains
 Which this comfortless oven environ!
 He cannot find out in what track he must
 crawl,
 Now back to the tiles, then in search of the wall,
 And now on the brink of the iron. 15

Stock-still there he stands like a traveller bemazed:
 The best of his skill he has tried;
 His feelers, methinks, I can see him put
 forth 85
 To the east and the west, to the south and the north,
 But he finds neither guide-post nor guide.

His spindles sink under him, foot, leg, and thigh! 21
 His eyesight and hearing are lost;
 Between life and death his blood freezes and thaws;
 And his two pretty pinions of blue dusky gauze
 Are glued to his sides by the frost. 25

No brother, no mate has he near him—while I Can draw warmth from the cheek of my
 Love;
 As blest and as glad, in this desolate
 gloom,
 As if green summer grass were the floor of my room,
 And woodbines were hanging above. 30

Yet, God is my witness, thou small helpless Thing!
 Thy life I would gladly sustain

Till summer come up from the south, and with crowds
Of thy brethren a march thou shouldst sound through the clouds,
And back to the forests again! 35

VIII.

A POET'S EPITAPH.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

ART thou a Statist in the van
Of public conflicts trained and bred?
—First learn to love one living man;
Then may'st thou think upon the dead.

A Lawyer art thou?—draw not nigh! 5
Go, carry to some fitter place
The keenness of that practised eye,
The hardness of that sallow face.

Art thou a Man of purple cheer?
A rosy Man, right plump to see? 10 Approach; yet, Doctor, not too near,
This grave no cushion is for thee.

Or art thou one of gallant pride,
A Soldier and no man of chaff?
Welcome!—but lay thy sword aside, 15
And lean upon a peasant's staff.

Physician art thou?—one, all eyes,
Philosopher!—a fingering slave,
One that would peep and botanize
Upon his mother's grave? 20

Wrapt closely in thy sensual fleece,
O turn aside,—and take, I pray,
That he below may rest in peace,
Thy ever-dwindling soul, away!

A Moralist perchance appears; 25
Led, Heaven knows how! to this poor sod:

And he has neither eyes nor ears;
Himself his world, and his own God;

One to whose smooth-rubbed soul can cling
Nor form, nor feeling, great or small; 30
A reasoning, self-sufficing thing,
An intellectual All-in-all!

Shut close the door; press down the latch;
Sleep in thy intellectual crust;
Nor lose ten tickings of thy watch 35
Near this unprofitable dust

But who is He, with modest looks,
And clad in homely russet brown?
He murmurs near the running brooks
A music sweeter than their own. 40

He is retired as noontide dew,
Or fountain in a noon-day grove;
And you must love him, ere to you
He will seem worthy of your love.

The outward shows of sky and earth, 45
Of hill and valley, he has viewed;
And impulses of deeper birth
Have come to him in solitude.

In common things that round us lie
Some random truths he can impart,— 50
The harvest of a quiet eye
That broods and sleeps on his own heart.

But he is weak; both Man and Boy,
Hath been an idler in the land;
Contented if he might enjoy 55
The things which others understand.

—Come hither in thy hour of strength;
Come, weak as is a breaking wave!
Here stretch thy body at full length;
Or build thy house upon this grave. 60

TO THE DAISY.

[Composed 1802.—Published 1807.]

BRIGHT Flower! whose home is every-
where,

Bold in maternal Nature's care,
And all the long year through the heir
Of joy and sorrow;

Methinks that there abides in thee 5
Some concord with humanity,
Given to no other flower I see
The forest thorough!

Is it that Man is soon deprest?
A thoughtless Thing! who, once unblest,
Does little on his memory rest, 11
Or on his reason,
And Thou wouldst teach him how to
find

A shelter under every wind,
A hope for times that are unkind 15
And every season?

Thou wander'st the wide world about,
 Unchecked by pride or scrupulous doubt,
 With friends to greet thee, or without,
 Yet pleased and willing ; 20
 Meek, yielding to the occasion's call,
 And all things suffering from all.
 Thy function apostolical
 In peace fulfilling.

X.

MATTHEW.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

In the School of —— is a tablet, on which are inscribed, in gilt letters, the Names of the several persons who have been Schoolmasters there since the foundation of the School, with the time at which they entered upon and quitted their office. Opposite to one of those Names the Author wrote the following lines.

IF Nature, for a favourite child,
 In thee hath tempered so her clay,
 That every hour thy heart runs wild,
 Yet never once doth go astray,

Read o'er these lines ; and then review 5
 This tablet, that thus humbly rears
 In such diversity of hue
 Its history of two hundred years.

—When through this little wreck of fame,
 Cipher and syllable ! thine eye 10
 Has travelled down to Matthew's name,
 Pause with no common sympathy.

And if a sleeping tear should wake,
 Then be it neither checked nor stayed :
 For Matthew a request I make 15
 Which for himself he had not made.

Poor Matthew, all his frolics o'er,
 Is silent as a standing pool ;
 Far from the chimney's merry roar,
 And murmur of the village school. 20

The sighs which Matthew heaved were
 sighs

Of one tired out with fun and madness ;
 The tears which came to Matthew's eyes
 Were tears of light, the dew of gladness.

Yet sometimes, when the secret cup 25
 Of still and serious thought went round,
 It seemed as if he drank it up—
 He felt with spirit so profound.

—Thou soul of God's best earthly mould !
 Thou happy Soul ! and can it be 30
 That these two words of glittering gold
 Are all that must remain of thee ?

XI.

THE TWO APRIL MORNINGS.

WE walked along, while bright and red Uprose the morning sun ;
 And Matthew stopped, he looked, and
 said,

“The will of God be done !”

A village schoolmaster was he, 5
 With hair of glittering grey ;
 As blithe a man as you could see
 On a spring holiday.

And on that morning, through the grass,
 And by the steaming rills, 10
 We travelled merrily, to pass
 A day among the hills.

“Our work,” said I, “was well begun,
 Then from thy breast what thought,
 Beneath so beautiful a sun, 15
 So sad a sigh has brought ?”

A second time did Matthew stop ;
 And fixing still his eye
 Upon the eastern mountain-top,
 To me he made reply : 20

“Yon cloud with that long purple cleft
 Brings fresh into my mind
 A day like this which I have left Full thirty years behind.

“And just above yon slope of corn 25
 Such colours, and no other,
 Were in the sky, that April morn,
 Of this the very brother.

“With rod and line I sued the sport
 Which that sweet season gave, 30
 And, to the churchyard come, stopped
 short
 Beside my daughter's grave.

“Nine summers had she scarcely seen,
 The pride of all the vale ;
 And then she sang ;—she would have
 been 35

A very nightingale.

"Six feet in earth my Emma lay ;
And yet I loved her more,
For so it seemed, than till that day
I e'er had loved before. 40

"And, turning from her grave, I met,
Beside the churchyard yew,
A blooming Girl, whose hair was wet
With points of morning dew.

"A basket on her head she bare ; 45
Her brow was smooth and white :
To see a child so very fair,
It was a pure delight !

"No fountain from its rocky cave
E'er tripped with foot so free ; 50
She seemed as happy as a wave
That dances on the sea.

"There came from me a sigh of pain
Which I could ill confine ;
I looked at her, and looked again : 55
And did not wish her mine !"

Matthew is in his grave, yet now,
Methinks, I see him stand,
As at that moment, with a bough
Of wilding in his hand. 60

XII.

THE FOUNTAIN.

A CONVERSATION.

[Composed 1799.—Published 1800.]

We talked with open heart, and tongue
Affectionate and true,
A pair of friends, though I was young,
And Matthew seventy-two.

We lay beneath a spreading oak, 5
Beside a mossy seat ;
And from the turf a fountain broke,
And gurgled at our feet.

"Now, Matthew !" said I, "let us match
This water's pleasant tune 10
With some old border-song, or catch
That suits a summer's noon ;

"Or of the church-clock and the chimes
Sing here beneath the shade,
That half-mad thing of witty rhymes 15
Which you last April made !"

In silence Matthew lay, and eyed
The spring beneath the tree ;
And thus the dear old Man replied,
The grey-haired man of glee : 20

"No check, no stay, this Streamlet fears ;
How merrily it goes !
'Twill murmur on a thousand years,
And flow as now it flows.

"And here, on this delightful day, 25
I cannot choose but think How oft, a vigorous man, I lay Beside this fountain's brink.

"My eyes are dim with childish tears,
My heart is idly stirred, 30
For the same sound is in my ears
Which in those days I heard.

"Thus fares it still in our decay :
And yet the wiser mind
Mourns less for what age takes away 35
Than what it leaves behind.

"The blackbird amid leafy trees,
The lark above the hill,
Let loose their carols when they please,
Are quiet when they will. 40

"With Nature never do they wage
A foolish strife ; they see
A happy youth, and their old age
Is beautiful and free :

"But we are pressed by heavy laws ; 45
And often, glad no more,
We wear a face of joy, because We have been glad of yore.

"If there be one who need bemoan
His kindred laid in earth, 50
The household hearts that were his own ;
It is the man of mirth.

"My days, my Friend, are almost gone,
My life has been approved,
And many love me ! but by none 55
Am I enough beloved."

"Now both himself and me he wrongs,
The man who thus complains !
I live and sing my idle songs
Upon these happy plains ; 60

“And, Matthew, for thy children dead
I’ll be a son to thee!”
At this he grasped my hand, and said, “Alas! that cannot be.”

We rose up from the fountain-side; 65
And down the smooth descent
Of the green sheep-track did we glide;
And through the wood we went;
And, ere we came to Leonard’s rock,
He sang those witty rhymes 70
About the crazy old church-clock,
And the bewildered chimes.

XIII.

PERSONAL TALK.

[Composed ?.—Published 1807.]

I.

I AM not One who much or oft delight
To season my fireside with personal talk,—
Of friends, who live within an easy walk,
Or neighbours, daily, weekly, in my
sight:
And, for my chance-acquaintance, ladies
bright, 5
Sons, mothers, maidens withering on the stalk,
These all wear out of me, like Forms with chalk Painted on rich men’s floors, for one feast-
night.
Better than such discourse doth silence
long,
Long, barren silence, square with my
desire; 10
To sit without emotion, hope, or aim,
In the loved presence of my cottage-fire,
And listen to the flapping of the flame,
Or kettle whispering its faint under-song.

II.

“Yet life,” you say, “is life; we have seen and see, 15
And with a living pleasure we describe;
And fits of sprightly malice do but bribe
The languid mind into activity.

Sound sense, and love itself, and mirth and glee
Are fostered by the comment and the gibe.” 20
Even be it so: yet still among your tribe,
Our daily world’s true Worldlings, rank not me!
Children are blest, and powerful; their world lies
More justly balanced; partly at their feet,
And part far from them:—sweetest
melodies 25
Are those that are by distance made more sweet;
Whose mind is but the mind of his own
eyes,
He is a Slave; the meanest we can meet!

III.

Wings have we,—and as far as we can go
We may find pleasure: wilderness and
wood, 30
Blank ocean and mere sky, support that mood
Which with the lofty sanctifies the low.
Dreams, books, are each a world; and books, we know,
Are a substantial world, both pure and
good:
Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood, 35
Our pastime and our happiness will
grow.
There find I personal themes, a plenteous
store,
Matter wherein right voluble I am,
To which I listen with a ready ear;
Two shall be named, pre-eminently dear,—
The gentle Lady married to the Moor; 41
And heavenly Una with her milk-white Lamb.

IV.

Nor can I not believe but that hereby Great gains are mine; for thus I live remote
From evil-speaking; rancour, never
sought, 45

Comes to me not; malignant truth, or lie.

Hence have I genial seasons, hence have I Smooth passions, smooth discourse, and joyous thought:

And thus from day to day my little boat

Rocks in its harbour, lodging peaceably.

Blessings be with them—and eternal
praise,

Who gave us nobler loves, and nobler
cares—

The Poets, who on earth have made us
heirs

Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays!

Oh! might my name be numbered among
theirs,

Then gladly would I end my mortal
days.

XIV.

ILLUSTRATED BOOKS AND NEWSPAPERS.

[Composed 1846.—Published 1850.]

DISCOURSE was deemed Man's noblest attribute,

And written words the glory of his
hand;

Then followed Printing with enlarged
command

For thought—dominion vast and absolute
For spreading truth, and making love expand.

Now prose and verse sunk into disrepute Must lacquey a dumb Art that best can
suit

The taste of this once-intellectual Land.

A backward movement surely have we
here,

From manhood—back to childhood; for
the age—

Back towards caverned life's first rude career.

Avant this vile abuse of pictured page!
Must eyes be all in all, the tongue and
ear

Nothing? Heaven keep us from a lower stage!

XV.

TO THE SPADE OF A FRIEND.

(AN AGRICULTURIST.)

Composed while we were labouring together in his pleasure-ground.

[Composed (probably) 1806.—Published 1807.]

SPADE! with which Wilkinson hath tilled his lands,

And shaped these pleasant walks by Emont's side,

Thou art a tool of honour in my hands;
I press thee, through the yielding soil,
with pride. 4

Rare master has it been thy lot to know;
Long hast Thou served a man to reason true; Whose life combines the best of high and
low,

The labouring many and the resting few;

Health, meekness, ardour, quietness secure,
And industry of body and of mind;

And elegant enjoyments, that are pure
As nature is;—too pure to be refined. 10

Here often hast Thou heard the Poet sing
In concord with his river murmuring by;
Or in some silent field, while timid spring
Is yet uncheered by other minstrelsy. 16

Who shall inherit Thee when death has
laid

Low in the darksome cell thine own dear
lord?

That man will have a trophy, humble
Spade!

A trophy nobler than a conqueror's sword. 19

If he be one that feels, with skill to part False praise from true, or, greater from
the less,

Thee will he welcome to his hand and
heart,

Thou monument of peaceful happiness!

He will not dread with Thee a toilsome
day—

Thee his loved servant, his inspiring
mate!

And, when Thou art past service, worn
away,

No dull oblivious nook shall hide thy fate.

His thrift thy uselessness will never scorn;
 An heir-loom in his cottage wilt Thou
 be:— 30
 High will he hang thee up, well pleased to adorn
 His rustic chimney with the last of Thee!

XVI.

A NIGHT THOUGHT.

[Composed ?.—Published 1837 (The Tribute: edited by Lord Northampton); vol. of 1842.]

Lo! where the Moon along the sky
 Sails with her happy destiny;
 Oft is she hid from mortal eye
 Or dimly seen,
 But when the clouds asunder fly 5
 How bright her mien!

Far different we—a froward race,
 Thousands though rich in Fortune's grace
 With cherished sullenness of pace
 Their way pursue, 10
 Ingrates who wear a smileless face
 The whole year through.

If kindred humours e'er would make
 My spirit droop for drooping's sake,
 From Fancy following in thy wake, 15
 Bright ship of heaven!
 A counter impulse let me take
 And be forgiven.

INCIDENT

CHARACTERISTIC OF A FAVOURITE DOG.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

ON his morning rounds the Master
 Goes to learn how all things fare;
 Searches pasture after pasture,
 Sheep and cattle eyes with care;
 And, for silence or for talk, 5
 He hath comrades in his walk;
 Four dogs, each pair of different breed, Distinguished two for scent, and two for speed.

See a hare before him started!
 —Off they fly in earnest chase; 10
 Every dog is eager-hearted,
 All the four are in the race:

And the hare whom they pursue,
 Knows from instinct what to do;
 Her hope is near: no turn she makes; 15
 But, like an arrow, to the river takes.

Deep the river was, and crusted
 Thinly by a one night's frost;
 But the nimble Hare hath trusted 20
 To the ice, and safely crost;
 She hath crost, and without heed
 All are following at full speed,
 When, lo! the ice, so thinly spread, Breaks—and the greyhound, DART, is overhead!

Better fate have PRINCE and SWALLOW—
 See them cleaving to the sport! 26
 MUSIC has no heart to follow,
 Little MUSIC, she stops short.
 She hath neither wish nor heart,
 Hers is now another part: 30
 A loving creature she, and brave!
 And fondly strives her struggling friend to save.

From the brink her paws she stretches,
 Very hands as you would say!
 And afflicting moans she fetches, 35
 As he breaks the ice away.
 For herself she hath no fears,—
 Him alone she sees and hears,— Makes efforts with complainings; nor gives o'er Until her fellow sinks to re-appear no
 more. 40

XVIII.

TRIBUTE

TO THE MEMORY OF THE SAME DOG.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

LIE here, without a record of thy worth,
 Beneath a covering of the common earth!
 It is not from unwillingness to praise,
 Or want of love, that here no Stone we
 raise;
 More thou deserv'st; but this man gives to man, 5
 Brother to brother, this is all we can.
 Yet they to whom thy virtues made thee
 dear
 Shall find thee through all changes of the
 year:

This Oak points out thy grave; the silent tree

Will gladly stand a monument of thee. 10

We grieved for thee, and wished thy end were past;

And willingly have laid thee here at last: For thou hadst lived till every thing that cheers

In thee had yielded to the weight of years; Extreme old age had wasted thee away, 15 And left thee but a glimmering of the day; Thy ears were deaf, and feeble were thy knees,—

I saw thee stagger in the summer breeze, Too weak to stand against its sportive breath,

And ready for the gentlest stroke of death. 20

It came, and we were glad; yet tears were shed;

Both man and woman wept when thou wert dead;

Not only for a thousand thoughts that were,

Old household thoughts, in which thou hadst thy share;

But for some precious boons vouchsafed to thee, 25

Found scarcely anywhere in like degree! For love, that comes wherever life and sense

Are given by God, in thee was most intense;

A chain of heart, a feeling of the mind, A tender sympathy, which did thee bind

Not only to us Men, but to thy Kind: 31

Yea, for thy fellow-brutes in thee we saw A soul of love, love's intellectual law:—

Hence, if we wept, it was not done in shame;

Our tears from passion and from reason came, 35

And, therefore, shalt thou be an honoured name!

FIDELITY.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

A BARKING sound the Shepherd hears, A cry as of a dog or fox;

He halts—and searches with his eyes Among the scattered rocks:

And now at distance can discern 5

A stirring in a brake of fern; And instantly a dog is seen, Glancing through that covert green.

The Dog is not of mountain breed; Its motions, too, are wild and shy; 10

With something, as the Shepherd thinks, Unusual in its cry:

Nor is there any one in sight All round, in hollow or on height;

Nor shout, nor whistle strikes his ear; 15

What is the creature doing here? It was a cove, a huge recess,

That keeps, till June, December's snow; A lofty precipice in front,

A silent tarn¹ below! 20

Far in the bosom of Helvellyn, Remote from public road or dwelling, Pathway, or cultivated land; From trace of human foot or hand.

There sometimes doth a leaping fish 25

Send through the tarn a lonely cheer; The crags repeat the raven's croak,

In symphony austere; Thither the rainbow comes—the cloud—

And mists that spread the flying shroud; And sunbeams; and the sounding blast, That, if it could, would hurry past; 32

But that enormous barrier holds it fast. Not free from boding thoughts, a while

The Shepherd stood; then makes his way O'er rocks and stones, following the Dog

As quickly as he may; Nor far had gone before he found

A human skeleton on the ground; The appalled Discoverer with a sigh 40

Looks round, to learn the history. From those abrupt and perilous rocks

The Man had fallen, that place of fear! At length upon the Shepherd's mind

It breaks, and all is clear: 45

He instantly recalled the name, And who he was, and whence he came;

Remembered, too, the very day On which the Traveller passed this way.

¹ Tarn is a small Mere or Lake, mostly high up in the mountains.

But hear a wonder, for whose sake 50
 This lamentable tale I tell !
 A lasting monument of words
 This wonder merits well.
 The Dog, which still was hovering nigh,
 Repeating the same timid cry, 55
 This Dog, had been through three months'
 space
 A dweller in that savage place.

Yes, proof was plain that, since the day
 When this ill-fated Traveller died,
 The Dog had watched about the spot, 60
 Or by his master's side :
 How nourished here through such long
 time
 He knows, who gave that love sublime ;
 And gavè that strength of feeling, great Above all human estimate ! 65

ODE TO DUTY.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

"Jam non consilio bonus, sed more eò perductus, ut non tantum rectè facere possim, sed nisi rectè facere non possim."

STERN Daughter of the Voice of God !
 O Duty ! if that name thou love
 Who art a light to guide, a rod
 To check the erring, and reprove ;
 Thou, who art victory and law 5
 When empty terrors overawe ;
 From vain temptations dost set free ;
 And calm'st the weary strife of frail humanity !

There are who ask not if thine eye
 Be on them ; who, in love and truth, 10
 Where no misgiving is, rely Upon the genial sense of youth :
 Glad Hearts ! without reproach or blot ;
 Who do thy work, and know it not :
 Oh ! if through confidence misplaced 15
 They fail, thy saving arms, dread Power !
 around them cast.

Serene will be our days and bright,
 And happy will our nature be,
 When love is an unerring light,
 And joy its own security. 20

And they a blissful course may hold
 Even now, who, not unwisely bold,
 Live in the spirit of this creed ;
 Yet seek thy firm support, according to their need.

I, loving freedom, and untried ; 25
 No sport of every random gust,
 Yet being to myself a guide,
 Too blindly have reposed my trust :
 And oft, when in my heart was heard Thy timely mandate, I deferred 30
 The task, in smoother walks to stray ;
 But thee I now would serve more strictly,
 if I may.

Through no disturbance of my soul,
 Or strong compunction in me wrought,
 I supplicate for thy control ; 35
 But in the quietness of thought :
 Me this unchartered freedom tires ;
 I feel the weight of chance-desires :
 My hopes no more must change their
 name,
 I long for a repose that ever is the
 same. 40

[Yet not the less would I throughout Still act according to the voice
 Of my own wish ; and feel past doubt
 That my submissiveness was choice :
 Not seeking in the school of pride
 For "precepts over dignified,"
 Denial and restraint I prize
 No farther than they breed a second Will more wise¹.]

Stern Lawgiver ! yet thou dost wear
 The Godhead's most benignant grace ;
 Nor know we anything so fair
 As is the smile upon thy face :
 Flowers laugh before thee on their beds 45
 And fragrance in thy footing treads ;
 Thou dost preserve the stars from wrong ;
 And the most ancient heavens, through Thee, are fresh and strong.

To humbler functions, awful Power !
 I call thee : I myself commend 50
 Unto thy guidance from this hour ;
 Oh, let my weakness have an end !

Give unto me, made lowly wise,
 The spirit of self-sacrifice;
 The confidence of reason give; 55
 And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me live!

XXI,

CHARACTER OF THE HAPPY WARRIOR.

[Composed December 1805 or January 1806.—
 Published 1807.]

WHO is the happy Warrior? Who is he That every man in arms should wish
 to be?

—It is the generous Spirit, who, when
 brought

Among the tasks of real life, hath
 wrought

Upon the plan that pleased his boyish
 thought: 5

Whose high endeavours are an inward
 light

That makes the path before him always
 bright:

Who, with a natural instinct to discern What knowledge can perform, is diligent to learn;

Abides by this resolve, and stops not
 there, 10

But makes his moral being his prime
 care;

Who, doomed to go in company with
 Pain,

And Fear, and Bloodshed, miserable
 train!

Turns his necessity to glorious gain;
 In face of these doth exercise a power 15

Which is our human nature's highest
 dower;

Controls them and subdues, transmutes, bereaves

Of their bad influence, and their good receives:

By objects, which might force the soul to abate

Her feeling, rendered more compassionate; 20

Is placable—because occasions rise
 So often that demand such sacrifice;

More skilful in self-knowledge, even more pure,

As tempted more; more able to endure,
 As more exposed to suffering and distress; 25

Thence, also, more alive to tenderness.
 —'Tis he whose law is reason; who depends

Upon that law as on the best of friends;
 Whence, in a state where men are tempted
 still

To evil for a guard against worse ill, 30
 And what in quality or act is best

Doth seldom on a right foundation rest,
 He labours good on good to fix, and owes

To virtue every triumph that he knows:
 —Who, if he rise to station of command,

Rises by open means; and there will
 stand 36

On honourable terms, or else retire,
 And in himself possess his own desire;

Who comprehends his trust, and to the same

Keeps faithful with a singleness of aim;
 And therefore does not stoop, nor lie in
 wait 41

For wealth, or honours, or for worldly
 state;

Whom they must follow; on whose head must fall,

Like showers of manna, if they come
 at all:

Whose powers shed round him in the common strife, 45

Or mild concerns of ordinary life,
 A constant influence, a peculiar grace;

But who, if he be called upon to face
 Some awful moment to which Heaven has joined Great issues, good or bad for human

 kind, 50

Is happy as a Lover; and attired
 With sudden brightness, like a Man

inspired;

And, through the heat of conflict, keeps the law

In calmness made, and sees what he foresaw;

Or if an unexpected call succeed, 55
 Come when it will, is equal to the need:

—He who, though thus endued as with a
 sense

And faculty for storm and turbulence,

Is yet a Soul whose master-bias leans
To homefelt pleasures and to gentle scenes ; 60

Sweet images ! which, wheresoe'er he be,
Are at his heart ; and such fidelity
It is his darling passion to approve ;
More brave for this, that he hath much to
love :—

'Tis, finally, the Man, who, lifted high, 65
Conspicuous object in a Nation's eye,
Or left unthought-of in obscurity,—
Who, with a toward or untoward lot, Prosperous or adverse, to his wish or not—
Plays, in the many games of life, that one Where what he most doth value must be won : 71

Whom neither shape of danger can dismay,
Nor thought of tender happiness betray ;
Who, not content that former worth stand fast,

Looks forward, persevering to the last, 75
From well to better, daily self-surpass :
Who, whether praise of him must walk
the earth

For ever, and to noble deeds give birth,
Or he must fall, to sleep without his fame,
And leave a dead unprofitable name— 80
Finds comfort in himself and in his cause ;
And, while the mortal mist is gathering,
draws

His breath in confidence of Heaven's applause :

This is the happy Warrior ; this is He 84
That every Man in arms should wish to be.

XXII.

THE FORCE OF PRAYER¹ ;

OR,

THE FOUNDING OF BOLTON PRIORY.

A TRADITION.

[Composed 1807.—Published 1815 (4to, along with The White Doe of Rylstone) ; ed. 1815.]

“What is good for a bootless bent ?”

With these dark words begins my Tale ;
And their meaning is, whence can comfort
spring

When Prayer is of no avail ?

“What is good for a bootless bent ?” 5
The Falconer to the Lady said ;
And she made answer “ENDLESS SORROW !”
For she knew that her Son was dead.

She knew it by the Falconer's words, 9
And from the look of the Falconer's eye ;
And from the love which was in her soul
For her youthful Romilly.

—Young Romilly through Barden woods
Is ranging high and low ;
And holds a greyhound in a leash, 15
To let slip upon buck or doe.

The pair have reached that fearful chasm,
How tempting to bestride !
For lordly Wharf is there pent in
With rocks on either side. 20

The striding-place is called THE STRID,
A name which it took of yore :
A thousand years hath it borne that
name,
And shall a thousand more.

And hither is young Romilly come, 25
And what may now forbid
That he, perhaps for the hundredth time,
Shall bound across THE STRID ?

He sprang in glee,—for what cared he
That the river was strong, and the rocks were steep?— 30
But the greyhound in the leash hung
back,
And checked him in his leap.

The Boy is in the arms of Wharf,
And strangled by a merciless force ;
For never more was young Romilly seen
Till he rose a lifeless corse. 36

Now there is stillness in the vale,
And long, unspeaking, sorrow :
Wharf shall be to pitying hearts
A name more sad than Yarrow. 40

If for a Lover the Lady wept,
A solace she might borrow From death, and from the passion of
death :—
Old Wharf might heal her sorrow.

She weeps not for the wedding-day 45
Which was to be to-morrow :
Her hope was a further-looking hope,
And hers is a mother's sorrow.
He was a tree that stood alone,
And proudly did its branches wave ; 50
And the root of this delightful tree
Was in her husband's grave !

Long, long in darkness did she sit,
And her first words were, " Let there be In Bolton, on the field of Wharf, 55
A stately Priory ! "

The stately Priory was reared ;
And Wharf, as he moved along,
To matins joined a mournful voice,
Nor failed at even-song. 60

And the Lady prayed in heaviness
That looked not for relief !
But slowly did her succour come,
And a patience to her grief.

Oh ! there is never sorrow of heart 65
That shall lack a timely end,
If but to God we turn, and ask
Of Him to be our friend !

XXIII.

A FACT, AND AN IMAGINATION ;

OR,

CANUTE AND ALFRED, ON THE SEA-SHORE.

[Composed 1816.—Published 1820.]

THE Danish Conqueror, on his royal
chair,
Mustering a face of haughty sovereignty,
To aid a covert purpose, cried—" O ye Approaching Waters of the deep, that
share
With this green isle my fortunes, come not where 5
Your Master's throne is set."—Deaf was the Sea ;
Her waves rolled on, respecting his decree
Less than they heed a breath of wanton
air.
—Then Canute, rising from the invaded
throne,

Said to his servile Courtiers,—" Poor the
reach, 10
The undisguised extent, of mortal sway !
He only is a King, and he alone Deserves the name (this truth the billows preach)
Whose everlasting laws, sea, earth, and heaven obey."

This just reproof the prosperous Dane
Drew from the influx of the main, 16
For some whose rugged northern mouths would strain
At oriental flattery ;
And Canute (fact more worthy to be known)
From that time forth did for his brows
disown 20
The ostentatious symbol of a crown ;
Esteeming earthly royalty
Contemptible as vain.

Now hear what one of elder days,
Rich theme of England's fondest praise, 25
Her darling Alfred, might have spoken ;
To cheer the remnant of his host
When he was driven from coast to coast, Distressed and harassed, but with mind unbroken :

" My faithful followers, lo ! the tide is spent 30
That rose, and steadily advanced to fill The shores and channels, working Nature's
will Among the mazy streams that backward
went,
And in the sluggish pools where ships are pent :
And now, his task performed, the flood stands still, 35
At the green base of many an inland
hill,
In placid beauty and sublime content !
Such the repose that sage and hero find ;
Such measured rest the sedulous and good
Of humbler name ; whose souls do, like
the flood 40
Of Ocean, press right on ; or gently wind,
Neither to be diverted nor withstood Until they reach the bounds by Heaven assigned."

XXIV.

[Composed 1816.—Published 1820.]

"A LITTLE onward lend thy guiding hand To these dark steps, a little further on!"

—What trick of memory to my voice hath brought

This mournful iteration? For though Time,

The Conqueror, crowns the Conquered, on this brow 5

Planting his favourite silver diadem,

Nor he, nor minister of his—intent

To run before him, hath enrolled me yet,

Though not unmenaced, among those who lean

Upon a living staff, with borrowed sight.

—O my own Dora, my beloved child! 11

Should that day come—but hark! the birds salute

The cheerful dawn, brightening for me the east;

For me, thy natural leader, once again

Impatient to conduct thee, not as erst 15

A tottering infant, with compliant stoop

From flower to flower supported; but to curb

Thy nymph-like step swift-bounding o'er the lawn,

Along the loose rocks, or the slippery verge

Of foaming torrents.—From thy orisons

Come forth; and, while the morning air is yet 21

Transparent as the soul of innocent youth,

Let me, thy happy guide, now point thy way,

And now precede thee, winding to and fro,

Till we by perseverance gain the top 25

Of some smooth ridge, whose brink precipitous

Kindles intense desire for powers withheld
From this corporeal frame; whereon who stands

Is seized with strong incitement to push forth

His arms, as swimmers use, and plunge—dread thought, 30

For pastime plunge—into the "abrupt abyss,"

Where ravens spread their plummy vans,
at ease!

And yet more gladly thee would I conduct

Through woods and spacious forests,—to behold

There how the Original of human art, 35
Heaven-prompted Nature, measures and erects

Her temples, fearless for the stately work, Though waves, to every breeze, its high-arched roof,

And storms the pillars rock. But we such schools

Of reverential awe will chiefly seek 40
In the still summer noon, while beams of light,

Reposing here, and in the aisles beyond
Traceably gliding through the dusk, recall

To mind the living presences of nuns;

A gentle, pensive, white-robed sisterhood,

Whose saintly radiance mitigates the gloom 46

Of those terrestrial fabrics, where they serve,

To Christ, the Sun of righteousness, espoused.

Now also shall the page of classic lore,
To these glad eyes from bondage freed,

again 50

Lie open; and the book of Holy Writ,

Again unfolded, passage clear shall yield

To heights more glorious still, and into shades

More awful, where, advancing hand in hand,

We may be taught, O Darling of my care!

To calm the affections, elevate the soul,

And consecrate our lives to truth and love.

XXV.

ODE TO LYCORIS.

MAY, 1817.

[Composed May, 1817.—Published 1820.]

I.

AN age hath been when Earth was proud
Of lustre too intense

To be sustained; and Mortals bowed

The front in self-defence.

Who then, if Dian's crescent gleamed, 5
 Or Cupid's sparkling arrow streamed
 While on the wing the Urchin played,
 Could fearlessly approach the shade?
 —Enough for one soft vernal day,
 If I, a bard of ebbing time, 10
 And nurtured in a fickle clime,
 May haunt this hornèd bay;
 Whose amorous water multiplies
 The fitting halcyon's vivid dyes; 14
 And smooths her liquid breast—to show
 These swan-like specks of mountain snow, White as the pair that slid along the plains
 Of heaven, when Venus held the reins!

II.

In youth we love the darksome lawn
 Brushed by the owlet's wing; 20
 Then, Twilight is preferred to Dawn,
 And Autumn to the Spring.
 Sad fancies do we then affect,
 In luxury of disrespect
 To our own prodigal excess 25
 Of too familiar happiness.
 Lycoris (if such name befit Thee, thee my life's celestial sign!)
 When Nature marks the year's decline,
 Be ours to welcome it; 30
 Pleased with the harvest hope that runs
 Before the path of milder suns;
 Pleased while the sylvan world displays
 Its ripeness to the feeding gaze; Pleased when the sullen winds resound the knell 35
 Of the resplendent miracle.

III.

But something whispers to my heart
 That, as we downward tend,
 Lycoris! life requires an art
 To which our souls must bend; 40
 A skill—to balance and supply;
 And, ere the flowing fount be dry,
 As soon it must, a sense to sip,
 Or drink, with no fastidious lip.
 Then welcome, above all, the Guest 45
 Whose smiles, diffused o'er land and sea,
 Seem to recall the Deity
 Of youth into the breast:

May pensive Autumn ne'er present
 A claim to her disparagement! 50
 While blossoms and the budding spray
 Inspire us in our own decay;
 Still, as we nearer draw to life's dark
 goal,
 Be hopeful Spring the favourite of the Soul!

XXVI.

TO THE SAME.

[Composed 1817.—Published 1820.]

ENOUGH of climbing toil!—Ambition
 treads
 Here, as 'mid busier scenes, ground steep and rough,
 Or slippery even to peril! and each step,
 As we for most uncertain recompense Mount toward the empire of the fickle
 clouds, 5
 Each weary step, dwarfing the world
 below,
 Induces, for its old familiar sights,
 Unacceptable feelings of contempt,
 With wonder mixed—that Man could e'er be tied,
 In anxious bondage, to such nice array 10
 And formal fellowship of petty things!
 —Oh! 'tis the heart that magnifies this
 life,
 Making a truth and beauty of her own;
 And moss-grown alleys, circumscribing
 shades, 14
 And gurgling rills, assist her in the work
 More efficaciously than realms outspread,
 As in a map, before the adventurer's
 gaze—
 Ocean and Earth contending for regard.
 The umbrageous woods are left—how far beneath!
 But lo! where darkness seems to guard the mouth 20
 Of yon wild cave, whose jagged brows are fringed
 With flaccid threads of ivy, in the still
 And sultry air, depending motionless.
 Yet cool the space within, and not un-
 cheered
 (As whoso enters shall ere long perceive)
 By stealthy influx of the timid day 26

Mingling with night, such twilight to compose
 As Numa loved; when, in the Egerian grot,
 From the sage Nymph appearing at his wish
 He gained whate'er a regal mind might ask, 30
 Or need, of counsel breathed through lips
 divine.

Long as the heat shall rage, let that dim cave

Protect us, there deciphering as we may Diluvian records; or the sighs of Earth
 Interpreting; or counting for old Time 35
 His minutes, by reiterated drops,
 Audible tears, from some invisible source
 That deepens upon fancy—more and more Drawn toward the centre whence those sighs creep forth

To awe the lightness of humanity. 40
 Or, shutting up thyself within thyself,
 There let me see thee sink into a mood
 Of gentler thought, protracted till thine eye
 Be calm as water when the winds are gone,
 And no one can tell whither. Dearest
 Friend! 45

We two¹ have known such happy hours
 together

That, were power granted to replace them (fetched

From out the pensive shadows where they lie)

In the first warmth of their original sun-
 shine,

Loth should I be to use it: passing sweet
 Are the domains of tender memory! 51

XXVII.

SEPTEMBER, 1819.

[Composed September, 1819.—Published 1820.]

THE sylvan slopes with corn-clad fields
 Are hung, as if with golden shields,
 Bright trophies of the sun!
 Like a fair sister of the sky,
 Unruffled doth the blue lake lie, 5
 The mountains looking on.

¹ "We two": edd. 1820-1843; "we too": edd. 1845, 1849-50.—Ed.

And, sooth to say, yon vocal grove,
 Albeit uninspired by love,
 By love untaught to ring,
 May well afford to mortal ear 10
 An impulse more profoundly dear
 Than music of the Spring.

For that from turbulence and heat
 Proceeds, from some uneasy seat
 In nature's struggling frame, 15
 Some region of impatient life:
 And jealousy, and quivering strife,
 Therein a portion claim.

This, this is holy;—while I hear
 These vespers of another year, 20
 This hymn of thanks and praise,
 My spirit seems to mount above
 The anxieties of human love,
 And earth's precarious days.

But list!—though winter storms be nigh,
 Unchecked is that soft harmony: 26
 There lives Who can provide
 For all His creatures; and in Him,
 Even like the radiant Seraphim,
 These choristers confide.

XXVIII.

UPON THE SAME OCCASION.

[Composed September, 1819.—Published 1820].

DEPARTING summer hath assumed
 An aspect tenderly illumed,
 The gentlest look of spring;
 That calls from yonder leafy shade
 Unfaded, yet prepared to fade, 5
 A timely carolling.

No faint and hesitating trill,
 Such tribute as to winter chill
 The lonely redbreast pays!
 Clear, loud, and lively is the din, 10
 From social warblers gathering in Their harvest of sweet lays.

Nor doth the example fail to cheer
 Me, conscious that my leaf is sere,
 And yellow on the bough:— 15
 Fall, rosy garlands, from my head!
 Ye myrtle wreaths, your fragrance shed
 Around a younger brow!

Yet will I temperately rejoice ;
Wide is the range, and free the choice 20
Of undiscordant themes ;
Which, haply, kindred souls may prize
Not less than vernal ecstasies,
And passion's feverish dreams.

For deathless powers to verse belong, 25
And they like Demi-gods are strong
On whom the Muses smile ;
But some their function have disclaimed,
Best pleased with what is aptliest framed
To enervate and defile. 30

Not such the initiatory strains
Committed to the silent plains
In Britain's earliest dawn :
Trembled the groves, the stars grew pale,
While all-too-daringly the veil 35
Of nature was withdrawn !

Nor such the spirit-stirring note
When the live chords Alcæus smote,
Inflamed by sense of wrong ;
Woe ! woe to Tyrants ! from the lyre 40
Broke threateningly, in sparkles dire
Of fierce vindictive song.

And not unhallowed was the page
By wingèd Love inscribed, to assuage
The pangs of vain pursuit ; 45
Love listening while the Lesbian Maid
With finest touch of passion swayed
Her own Æolian lute.

O ye, who patiently explore
The wreck of Herculean lore, 50
What rapture ! could ye seize
Some Theban fragment, or unroll
One precious, tender-hearted, scroll Of pure Simonides.

That were, indeed, a genuine birth 55
Of poesy ; a bursting forth
Of genius from the dust :
What Horace gloried to behold,
What Maro loved, shall we enfold ?
Can haughty Time be just ! 60

XXIX.

MEMORY.

[Composed 1823.—Published 1827.]

A PEN—to register ; a key—
That winds through secret wards ;

Are well assigned to Memory
By allegoric Bards.

As aptly, also, might be given 5
A Pencil to her hand ;
That, softening objects, sometimes even Outstrips the heart's demand ;

That smoothes foregone distress, the lines
Of lingering care subdued, 10
Long-vanished happiness refines,
And clothes in brighter hues ;

Yet, like a tool of Fancy, works
Those Spectres to dilate
That startle Conscience, as she lurks 15
Within her lonely seat.

O ! that our lives, which flee so fast,
In purity were such,
That not an image of the past
Should fear that pencil's touch ! 20

Retirement then might hourly look Upon a soothing scene,
Age steal to his allotted nook
Contented and serene ;

With heart as calm as lakes that sleep, 25
In frosty moonlight glistening ;
Or mountain rivers, where they creep
Along a channel smooth and deep,
To their own far-off murmurs listening.

XXX.

[Composed 1829.—Published 1835.]

THIS Lawn, a carpet all alive
With shadows flung from leaves—to strive
In dance, amid a press
Of sunshine, an apt emblem yields
Of Worldlings revelling in the fields 5
Of strenuous idleness ;

Less quick the stir when tide and breeze
Encounter, and to narrow seas
Forbid a moment's rest ;
The medley less when boreal Lights 10
Glance to and fro, like aery Sprites
To feats of arms address !

Yet, spite of all this eager strife,
This ceaseless play, the genuine life
That serves the steadfast hours, 15
Is in the grass beneath, that grows Unheeded, and the mute repose
Of sweetly-breathing flowers.

XXXI.

HUMANITY.

The Rocking-stones, alluded to in the beginning of the following verses, are supposed to have been used, by our British ancestors, both for judicial and religious purposes. Such stones are not uncommonly found, at this day, both in Great Britain and in Ireland.

WHAT though the Accused, upon his own appeal

To righteous Gods when man has ceased to feel,

Or at a doubting Judge's stern command,
Before the STONE OF POWER no longer stand—

To take his sentence from the balanced Block, 5

As, at his touch, it rocks, or seems to rock ;

Though, in the depths of sunless groves,
no more

The Druid-priest the hallowed Oak adore ;
Yet, for the Initiate, rocks and whispering trees

Do still perform mysterious offices ! 10
And functions dwell in beast and bird that sway

The reasoning mind, or with the fancy play,

Inviting, at all seasons, ears and eyes
To watch for undelusive auguries :—

Not uninspired appear their simplest ways ; 15

Their voices mount symbolical of praise—
To mix with hymns that Spirits make and hear ;

And to fallen man their innocence is dear.

Enraptured Art draws from those sacred springs

Streams that reflect the poetry of things !
Where Christian Martyrs stand in hues portrayed, 21

That, might a wish avail, would never fade,

Borne in their hands the lily and the palm

Shed round the altar a celestial calm ;

There, too, behold the lamb and guileless dove 25

Prest in the tenderness of virgin love
To saintly bosoms !—Glorious is the blending

Of right affections climbing or descending Along a scale of light and life, with cares
Alternate ; carrying holy thoughts and prayers 30

Up to the sovereign seat of the Most High ;

Descending to the worm in charity ;
Like those good Angels whom a dream of night

Gave, in the field of Luz, to Jacob's sight
All, while he slept, treading the pendent stairs 35

Earthward or heavenward, radiant messengers,

That, with a perfect will in one accord
Of strict obedience, serve the Almighty Lord ;

And with untired humility forbore
To speed their errand by the wings they wore. 40

What a fair world were ours for verse to paint,

If Power could live at ease with self-restraint !

Opinion bow before the naked sense
Of the great Vision,—faith in Providence ;
Merciful over all his creatures, just 45

To the least particle of sentient dust ;
But fixing by immutable decrees

Seedtime and harvest for his purposes !
Then would be closed the restless oblique eye

That looks for evil like a treacherous spy ;
Disputes would then relax, like stormy winds 51

That into breezes sink ; impetuous minds
By discipline endeavour to grow meek
As Truth herself, whom they profess to seek.

Then Genius, shunning fellowship with Pride, 55

Would braid his golden locks at Wisdom's side ;

Love ebb and flow untroubled by caprice ;
And not alone harsh tyranny would cease,

To regulate the motion of our dreams
 For kindly issues—as through every clime Was felt near murmuring brooks in earliest time;
 As, at this day, the rudest swains who
 dwell 15
 Where torrents roar, or hear the tinkling
 knell
 Of water-breaks, with grateful heart could tell.

THOUGHTS ON THE SEASONS.

[Composed 1829.—Published 1835.]

FLATTERED with promise of escape
 From every hurtful blast, Spring takes, O sprightly May! thy
 shape,
 Her loveliest and her last.
 Less fair is summer riding high 5
 In fierce solstitial power, Less fair than when a lenient sky
 Brings on her parting hour.
 When earth repays with golden sheaves
 The labours of the plough, 10
 And ripening fruits and forest leaves
 All brighten on the bough;
 What pensive beauty autumn shows,
 Before she hears the sound
 Of winter rushing in, to close 15
 The emblematic round!
 Such be our Spring, our Summer such;
 So may our Autumn blend
 With hoary Winter, and Life touch,
 Through heaven-born hope, her end! 20

XXXIV.

TO —.

UPON THE BIRTH OF HER FIRST-BORN
CHILD, MARCH, 1833.

[Composed March, 1833.—Published 1835.]

"Tum porro puer, ut saevius projectus ab undis Navita, nudus humi jacet," &c.—LUCRETIVS.

LIKE a shipwrecked Sailor tost
 By rough waves on a perilous coast,
 Lies the Babe, in helplessness

And in tenderest nakedness,
 Flung by labouring Nature forth 5
 Upon the mercies of the earth.
 Can its eyes beseech?—no more Than the hands are free to implore:
 Voice but serves for one brief cry;
 Plaint was it? or prophecy 10
 Of sorrow that will surely come?
 Omen of man's grievous doom!

But, O Mother! by the close Duly granted to thy throes;
 By the silent thanks, now tending 15
 Incentive-like to Heaven, descending
 Now to mingle and to move
 With the gush of earthly love,
 As a debt to that frail Creature,
 Instrument of struggling Nature 20
 For the blissful calm, the peace
 Known but to this one release—
 Can the pitying spirit doubt
 That for human-kind springs out
 From the penalty a sense 25
 Of more than mortal recompense?

As a floating summer cloud,
 Though of gorgeous drapery proud,
 To the sun-burnt traveller,
 Or the stooping labourer, 30
 Oft-times makes its bounty known
 By its shadow round him thrown;
 So, by chequerings of sad cheer,
 Heavenly Guardians, brooding near,
 Of their presence tell—too bright 35
 Haply for corporeal sight!
 Ministers of grace divine
 Feelingly their brows incline
 O'er this seeming Castaway
 Breathing, in the light of day, 40
 Something like the faintest breath
 That has power to baffle death—
 Beautiful, while very weakness
 Captivates like passive meekness.

And, sweet Mother! under warrant 45
 Of the universal Parent,
 Who repays in season due
 Them who have, like thee, been true
 To the filial chain let down
 From his everlasting throne, 50
 Angels hovering round thy couch,
 With their softest whispers vouch,

That—whatever griefs may fret,
 Cares entangle, sins beset,
 This thy First-born, and with tears 55
 Stain her cheek in future years—
 Heavenly succour, not denied
 To the babe, whate'er betide,
 Will to the woman be supplied !

Mother ! blest be thy calm ease ; 60
 Blest the starry promises,—
 And the firmament benign
 Hallowed be it, where they shine !
 Yes, for them whose souls have scope
 Ample for a wingèd hope, 65
 And can earthward bend an ear
 For needful listening, pledge is here,
 That, if thy new-born Charge shall tread
 In thy footsteps, and be led
 By that other Guide, whose light 70
 Of manly virtues, mildly bright,
 Gave him first the wished-for part
 In thy gentle virgin heart ;
 Then, amid the storms of life
 Presignified by that dread strife 75
 Whence ye have escaped together,
 She may look for serene weather ;
 In all trials sure to find Comfort for a faithful mind ;
 Kindlier issues, holier rest, 80
 Than even now await her prest,
 Conscious Nursling, to thy breast !

XXXV.

THE WARNING.

A SEQUEL TO THE FOREGOING.

[Composed 1833.—Published 1835.]

LIST, the winds of March are blowing ;
 Her ground-flowers shrink, afraid of showing
 Their meek heads to the nipping air,
 Which ye feel not, happy pair !
 Sunk into a kindly sleep. 5
 We, meanwhile, our hope will keep ;
 And if Time leagued with adverse Change (Too busy fear !) shall cross its range, Whatsoever check they bring,
 Anxious duty hindering, 10
 To like hope our prayers will cling.

Thus, while the ruminating spirit feeds
 Upon the events of home as life proceeds,
 Affections pure and holy in their source
 Gain a fresh impulse, run a livelier course ;
 Hopes that within the Father's heart
 prevail, 16
 Are in the experienced Grandsire's slow to fail ;
 And if the harp pleased his gay youth, it rings
 To his grave touch with no unready
 strings,
 While thoughts press on, and feelings overflow, 20
 And quick words round him fall like flakes of snow.

Thanks to the Powers that yet maintain their sway,
 And have renewed the tributary Lay.
 Truths of the heart flock in with eager
 pace,
 And FANCY greets them with a fond embrace ; 25
 Swift as the rising sun his beams extends She shoots the tidings forth to distant
 friends ;
 Their gifts she hails (deemed precious, as they prove
 For the unconscious Babe so prompt a
 love !)—
 But from this peaceful centre of delight Vague sympathies have urged her to take flight : 31
 Rapt into upper regions, like the bee
 That sucks from mountain-heath her honey fee,
 Or, like the warbling lark intent to shroud
 His head in sunbeams or a bowery cloud,
 She soars—and here and there her pinions
 rest 36
 On proud towers, like this humble cottage, blest
 With a new visitant, an infant guest—Towers where red streamers flout the breezy sky
 In pomp foreseen by her creative eye, 40
 When feasts shall crowd the hall, and steeple bells
 Glad proclamation make, and heights and dells

Catch the blithe music as it sinks and swells,
 And harboured ships, whose pride is on the sea,
 Shall hoist their topmost flags in sign of glee,
 Honouring the hope of noble ancestry. 45

But who (though neither reckoning ills assigned
 By Nature, nor reviewing in the mind
 The track that was, and is, and must be, worn 49
 With weary feet by all of woman born)—
 Shall now by such a gift with joy be moved,
 Nor feel the fulness of that joy reproved?
 Not He, whose last faint memory will command
 The truth that Britain was his native land;
 Whose infant soul was tutored to confide
 In the cleansed faith for which her martyrs died; 56
 Whose boyish ear the voice of her renown
 With rapture thrilled; whose Youth revered the crown
 Of Saxon liberty that Alfred wore, Alfred, dear Babe, thy great Progenitor!
 —Not He, who from her mellowed practice drew 61
 His social sense of just, and fair, and true;
 And saw, thereafter, on the soil of France
 Rash Polity begin her maniac dance,
 Foundations broken up, the deeps run wild, 65
 Nor grieved to see (himself not unbelieved)—
 Woke from the dream, the dreamer to upbraid,
 And learn how sanguine expectations fade
 When novel trusts by folly are betrayed,—
 To see Presumption, turning pale, refrain From further havoc, but repent in vain,—
 Good aims lie down, and perish in the road 72
 Where guilt had urged them on with ceaseless goad,
 Proofs thickening round her that on public ends
 Domestic virtue vitally depends, 75

That civic strife can turn the happiest hearth
 Into a grievous sore of self-tormenting earth.

Can such a One, dear Babe! though glad and proud
 To welcome thee, repel the fears that crowd
 Into his English breast, and spare to quake
 Less for his own than for thy innocent sake? 81
 Too late—or, should the providence of God
 Lead, through dark ways by sin and sorrow trod,
 Justice and peace to a secure abode,
 Too soon—thou com'st into this breathing world; 85
 Ensigns of mimic outrage are unfurled.
 Who shall preserve or prop the tottering Realm?
 What hand suffice to govern the state-helm?
 If in the aims of men the surest test
 Of good or bad (whate'er be sought for or profest) 90
 Lie in the means required, or ways ordained,
 For compassing the end, else never gained;
 Yet governors and governed both are blind
 To this plain truth, or fling it to the wind;
 If to expedience principle must bow; 95
 Past, future, shrinking up beneath the incumbent Now;
 If cowardly concession still must feed
 The thirst for power in men who ne'er concede;
 Nor turn aside, unless to shape a way
 For domination at some riper day; 100
 If generous Loyalty must stand in awe
 Of subtle Treason, in his mask of law,
 Or with bravado insolent and hard,
 Provoking punishment, to win reward;
 If office help the factious to conspire, 105
 And they who should extinguish, fan the fire—
 Then, will the sceptre be a straw, the crown
 Sit loosely, like the thistle's crest of down;

To be blown off at will, by Power that spares it
In cunning patience, from the head that wears it. 110

Lost people, trained to theoretic feud!
Lost above all, ye labouring multitude!
Bewildered whether ye, by slanderous
tongues

Deceived, mistake calamities for wrongs;
And over fancied usurpations brood, 115
Oft snapping at revenge in sullen mood;
Or, from long stress of real injuries fly
To desperation for a remedy;

In bursts of outrage spread your judgments wide,

And to your wrath cry out, "Be thou our guide;" 120

Or, bound by oaths, come forth to tread earth's floor

In marshalled thousands, darkening street and moor

With the worst shape mock-patience ever wore;

Or, to the giddy top of self-esteem
By Flatterers carried, mount into a
dream 125

Of boundless suffrage, at whose sage behest

Justice shall rule, disorder be suppress,
And every man sit down as Plenty's
Guest!

—O for a bridle bitted with remorse
To stop your Leaders in their headstrong
course! 130

Oh may the Almighty scatter with His
grace

These mists, and lead you to a safer place,
By paths no human wisdom can fore-
trace!

May He pour round you, from worlds far above

Man's feverish passions, His pure light of
love, 135

That quietly restores the natural mien
To hope, and makes truth willing to be
seen!

Else shall your blood-stained hands in frenzy reap

Fields gaily sown when promises were cheap.— 139

Why is the Past belied with wicked art,
The Future made to play so false a part, Among a people famed for strength of
mind,

Foremost in freedom, noblest of man-
kind?

We act as if we joyed in the sad tune Storms make in rising, valued in the moon 145

Nought but her changes. Thus, ungrateful Nation!

If thou persist, and, scorning modera-
tion,

Spread for thyself the snares of tribulation,

Whom, then, shall meekness guard? What saving skill

Lie in forbearance, strength in standing
still? 150

—Soon shall the widow (for the speed of
Time

Nought equals when the hours are winged with crime)

Widow, or wife, implore on tremulous
knee,

From him who judged her lord, a like decree;

The skies will weep o'er old men desolate: 155

Ye little-ones! Earth shudders at your fate,

Outcasts and homeless orphans——

But turn, my Soul, and from the sleeping pair

Learn thou the beauty of omniscient care!
Be strong in faith, bid anxious thoughts lie still; 160

Seek for the good and cherish it—the ill Oppose, or bear with a submissive will.

XXXVI.

[Composed 1833.—Published 1835.]

If this great world of joy and pain

Revolve in one sure track;

If freedom, set, will rise again,

And virtue, flown, come back;

Woe to the purblind crew who fill 5

The heart with each day's care;

Nor gain, from past or future, skill

To bear, and to forbear!

XXXVII.

THE LABOURER'S NOON-DAY HYMN.

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

UP to the throne of God is borne
 The voice of praise at early morn,
 And he accepts the punctual hymn
 Sung as the light of day grows dim :
 Nor will he turn his ear aside 5
 From holy offerings at noontide.
 Then here reposing let us raise
 A song of gratitude and praise.

What though our burthen be not light
 We need not toil from morn to night ; 10
 The respite of the mid-day hour
 Is in the thankful Creature's power.

Blest are the moments, doubly blest,
 That, drawn from this one hour of rest,
 Are with a ready heart bestowed 15
 Upon the service of our God !

Each field is then a hallowed spot,
 An altar is in each man's cot,
 A church in every grove that spreads
 Its living roof above our heads. 20

Look up to Heaven ! the industrious Sun
 Already half his race hath run ;
He cannot halt nor go astray,
 But our immortal Spirits may.

Lord ! since his rising in the East, 25
 If we have faltered or transgressed,
 Guide, from thy love's abundant source,
 What yet remains of this day's course :

Help with thy grace, through life's short
 day,

Our upward and our downward way ; 30
 And glorify for us the west,
 When we shall sink to final rest.

XXXVIII.

ODE.

COMPOSED ON MAY MORNING.

[Composed 1826.—Published 1835.]

WHILE from the purpling east departs
 The star that led the dawn,
 Blithe Flora from her couch upstarts,
 For May is on the lawn.

A quickening hope, a freshening glee, 5
 Foreran the expected Power, Whose first-drawn breath from bush and
 tree
 Shakes off that pearly shower.

All Nature welcomes Her whose sway
 Tempers the year's extremes ; 10
 Who scattereth lustres o'er noon-day,
 Like morning's dewy gleams ;
 While mellow warble, sprightly trill, 5
 The tremulous heart excite ;
 And hums the balmy air to still 15
 The balance of delight.

Time was, blest Power ! when youths and maids

At peep of dawn would rise,
 And wander forth, in forest glades
 Thy birth to solemnize. 20
 Though mute the song—to grace the rite
 Untouched the hawthorn bough,
 Thy Spirit triumphs o'er the slight ;
 Man changes, but not Thou !

Thy feathered Lieges bill and wings 25
 In love's disport employ ;
 Warmed by thy influence, creeping things
 Awake to silent joy :
 Queen art thou still for each gay plant
 Where the slim wild deer roves ; 30
 And served in depths where fishes haunt
 Their own mysterious groves.

Cloud-piercing peak, and trackless heath,
 Instinctive homage pay ;
 Nor wants the dim-lit cave a wreath 35
 To honour thee, sweet May !
 Where cities fanned by thy brisk airs
 Behold a smokeless sky,
 Their puniest flower-pot-nursling dares 40
 To open a bright eye.

And if, on this thy natal morn,
 The pole, from which thy name
 Hath not departed, stands forlorn
 Of song and dance and game ; 45
 Still from the village-green a vow
 Aspires to thee address,
 Wherever peace is on the brow,
 Or love within the breast.

Yes ! where Love nestles thou canst
 teach
 The soul to love the more ; 50

Hearts also shall thy lessons reach
That never loved before.
Strip it the haughty one of pride,
The bashful freed from fear,
While rising, like the ocean-tide, 55
In flows the joyous year.

Hush, feeble lyre ! weak words refuse
The service to prolong !
To yon exulting thrush the Muse
Entrusts the imperfect song ; 60
His voice shall chant, in accents clear,
Throughout the live-long day,
Till the first silver star appear,
The sovereignty of May.

XXXIX.

TO MAY.

[Composed 1826-34.—Published 1835.]

THOUGH many suns have risen and set
Since thou, blithe May, wert born,
And Bards, who hailed thee, may forget
Thy gifts, thy beauty scorn ;
There are who to a birthday strain 5
Confine not harp and voice,
But evermore throughout thy reign
Are grateful and rejoice !

Delicious odours ! music sweet,
Too sweet to pass away ! 10
Oh for a deathless song to meet
The soul's desire—a lay
That, when a thousand years are told,
Should praise thee, genial Power !
Through summer heat, autumnal cold, 15
And winter's dreariest hour.

Earth, sea, thy presence feel—nor less,
If yon ethereal blue
With its soft smile the truth express,
The heavens have felt it too. 20
The inmost heart of man if glad Partakes a livelier cheer ;
And eyes that cannot but be sad
Let fall a brightened tear.

Since thy return, through days and weeks 25
Of hope that grew by stealth,
How many wan and faded cheeks
Have kindled into health !

The Old, by thee revived, have said,
“ Another year is ours ; ” 30
And wayworn Wanderers, poorly fed,
Have smiled upon thy flowers.

Who tripping lips a merry song
Amid his playful peers ?
The tender Infant who was long 35
A prisoner of fond fears ;
But now, when every sharp-edged blast
Is quiet in its sheath,
His Mother leaves him free to taste
Earth's sweetness in thy breath. 40

Thy help is with the weed that creeps
Along the humblest ground ;
No cliff so bare but on its steeps
Thy favours may be found ;
But most on some peculiar nook 45
That our own hands have drest,
Thou and thy train are proud to look,
And seem to love it best.

And yet how pleased we wander forth
When May is whispering, “ Come ! 50
Choose from the bowers of virgin earth
The happiest for your home ; Heaven's bounteous love through me is
spread
From sunshine, clouds, winds, waves,
Drops on the mouldering turret's head, 55
And on your turf-clad graves ! ”

Such greeting heard, away with sighs
For lilies that must fade,
Or “ the rathe primrose as it dies Forsaken ” in the shade ! 60
Vernal fruitions and desires
Are linked in endless chase ;
While, as one kindly growth retires,
Another takes its place.

And what if thou, sweet May, hast
known 65
Mishap by worm and blight ;
If expectations newly blown
Have perished in thy sight ;
If loves and joys, while up they sprung,
Were caught as in a snare ; 70
Such is the lot of all the young,
However bright and fair.

Lo ! Streams that April could not check
Are patient of thy rule ;

Gurgling in foamy water-break, Loitering in glassy pool :	75	The shade and light, both there and every- where,
By thee, thee only, could be sent Such gentle mists as glide, Curling with unconfirmed intent, On that green mountain's side.	80	And through the very atmosphere she breathes, Broad, clear, and toned harmoniously, with skill That might from nature have been learnt in the hour
How delicate the leafy veil Through which yon house of God Gleams 'mid the peace of this deep dale By few but shepherds trod ! And lowly huts, near beaten ways,	85	When the lone shepherd sees the morning spread Upon the mountains. Look at her, whoe'er Thou be that, kindling with a poet's soul, Hast loved the painter's true Promethean craft
No sooner stand attired In thy fresh wreaths, than they for praise Peep forth, and are admired.		Intensely—from Imagination take
Season of fancy and of hope, Permit not for one hour	90	The treasure,—what mine eyes behold see thou, Even though the Atlantic ocean roll between.
A blossom from thy crown to drop, Nor add to it a flower ! Keep, lovely May, as if by touch Of self-restraining art, This modest charm of not too much,	95	A silver line, that runs from brow to crown And in the middle parts the braided hair, Just serves to show how delicate a soil The golden harvest grows in ; and those eyes, Soft and capacious as a cloudless sky Whose azure depth their colour emulates, Must needs be conversant with upward looks, Prayer's voiceless service ; but now, seek- ing nought
Part seen, imagined part !		35 And shunning nought, their own peculiar life Of motion they renounce, and with the head Partake its inclination towards earth In humble grace, and quiet pensiveness Caught at the point where it stops short of sadness.

LINES

SUGGESTED BY A PORTRAIT FROM THE PENCIL OF F. STONE.

BEGUILED into forgetfulness of care Due to the day's unfinished task ; of pen Or book regardless, and of that fair scene In Nature's prodigality displayed Before my window, oftentimes and long	5	Partake its inclination towards earth In humble grace, and quiet pensiveness Caught at the point where it stops short of sadness.
I gaze upon a Portrait whose mild gleam Of beauty never ceases to enrich The common light ; whose stillness charms the air, Or seems to charm it, into like repose ; Whose silence, for the pleasure of the ear,	10	Offspring of soul-bewitching Art, make me Thy confidant ! say, whence derived that air Of calm abstraction ? Can the ruling thought Be with some lover far away, or one Crossed by misfortune, or of doubted faith ?
Surpasses sweetest music. There she sits With emblematic purity attired In a white vest, white as her marble neck Is, and the pillar of the throat would be But for the shadow by the drooping chin Cast into that recess—the tender shade,		45

Inapt conjecture! Childhood here, a
 moon
 Crescent in simple loveliness serene,
 Has but approached the gates of woman-
 hood,
 Not entered them; her heart is yet unpierced
 By the blind Archer-god; her fancy
 free: 50
 The fount of feeling, if unsought else-
 where,
 Will not be found.

Her right hand, as it lies
 Across the slender wrist of the left arm
 Upon her lap reposing, holds—but mark How slackly, for the absent mind permits 55
 No firmer grasp—a little wild-flower,
 joined
 As in a posy, with a few pale ears
 Of yellowing corn, the same that overtopped
 And in their common birthplace sheltered it Till they were plucked together; a blue
 flower 60
 Called by the thrifty husbandman a weed;
 But Ceres, in her garland, might have
 worn
 That ornament, unblamed. The floweret,
 held
 In scarcely conscious fingers, was, she knows,
 (Her Father told her so) in youth's gay
 dawn 65
 Her Mother's favourite; and the orphan
 Girl,
 In her own dawn—a dawn less gay and
 bright,
 Loves it, while there in solitary peace
 She sits, for that departed Mother's sake.
 —Not from a source less sacred is derived (Surely I do not err) that pensive air 71
 Of calm abstraction through the face
 diffused
 And the whole person.
 Words have something told
 More than the pencil can, and verily
 More than is needed, but the precious
 Art 75
 Forgives their interference—Art divine,

That both creates and fixes, in despite Of Death and Time, the marvels it hath
 wrought.

Strange contrasts have we in this world
 of ours!

That posture, and the look of filial love 80 Thinking of past and gone, with what is left .

Dearly united, might be swept away
 From this fair Portrait's fleshly Archetype, Even by an innocent fancy's slightest freak

Banished, nor ever, haply, be restored 85
 To their lost place, or meet in harmony
 So exquisite; but here do they abide,
 Enshrined for ages. Is not then the Art
 Godlike, a humble branch of the divine,
 In visible quest of immortality, 90 Stretched forth with trembling hope?—In every realm,

From high Gibraltar to Siberian plains,
 Thousands, in each variety of tongue
 That Europe knows, would echo this appeal;

One above all, a Monk who waits on God
 In the magnific Convent built of yore 96
 To sanctify the Escorial palace. He—Guiding, from cell to cell and room to
 room,

A British Painter (eminent for truth
 In character, and depth of feeling, shown By labours that have touched the hearts of kings, 101

And are endeared to simple cottagers)—
 Came, in that service, to a glorious work, Our Lord's Last Supper, beautiful as when first

The appropriate Picture, fresh from Titian's hand, 105
 Graced the Refectory: and there, while both

Stood with eyes fixed upon that masterpiece,

The hoary Father in the Stranger's ear Breathed out these words:—"Here daily do we sit, 109

Thanks given to God for daily bread, and
 here

Pondering the mischiefs of these restless
 times,

And thinking of my Brethren, dead, dispersed,
 Or changed and changing, I not seldom gaze
 Upon this solemn Company unmoved
 By shock of circumstance, or lapse of years, 115
 Until I cannot but believe that they—
 They are in truth the Substance, we the Shadows.”

So spake the mild Jeronymite, his griefs
 Melting away within him like a dream Ere he had ceased to gaze, perhaps to
 speak : 120
 And I, grown old, but in a happier land, Domestic Portrait! have to verse con-
 signed
 In thy calm presence those heart-moving
 words :
 Words that can soothe, more than they
 agitate ;
 Whose spirit, like the angel that went
 down 125
 Into Bethesda's pool, with healing virtue Informs the fountain in the human breast
 Which by the visitation was disturbed.
 —But why this stealing tear? Companion mute,
 On thee I look, not sorrowing ; fare thee
 well, 130
 My Song's Inspirer, once again farewell !¹

XLI.

THE FOREGOING SUBJECT RESUMED.

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

AMONG a grave fraternity of Monks,
 For One, but surely not for One alone,
 Triumphs, in that great work, the Painter's skill,
 Humbling the body, to exalt the soul ;
 Yet representing, amid wreck and wrong

¹ The pile of buildings composing the palace and convent of San Lorenzo, has, in common usage, lost its proper name in that of the Escorial, a village at the foot of the hill upon which the splendid edifice, built by Philip the Second, stands. It need scarcely be added that Wilkie is the painter alluded to.

And dissolution and decay, the warm 6
 And breathing life of flesh, as if already Clothed with impassive majesty, and graced
 With no mean earnest of a heritage Assigned to it in future worlds. Thou, 10
 too, 10
 With thy memorial flower, meek Portraiture !
 From whose serene companionship I
 passed
 Pursued by thoughts that haunt me still ;
 thou also—
 Though but a simple object, into light Called forth by those affections that endear 15
 The private hearth ; though keeping thy sole seat
 In singleness, and little tried by time,
 Creation, as it were, of yesterday—
 With a congenial function art endued
 For each and all of us, together joined 20
 In course of nature under a low roof
 By charities and duties that proceed
 Out of the bosom of a wiser vow.
 To a like salutary sense of awe Or sacred wonder, growing with the
 power 25
 Of meditation that attempts to weigh,
 In faithful scales, things and their opposites,
 Can thy enduring quiet gently raise A household small and sensitive,—whose
 love,
 Dependent as in part its blessings are 30
 Upon frail ties dissolving or dissolved On earth, will be revived, we trust, in heaven².

² In the class entitled “Musings,” in Mr. Southey's Minor Poems, is one upon his own miniature Picture, taken in childhood, and another upon a landscape painted by Gaspar Poussin. It is possible that every word of the above verses, though similar in subject, might have been written had the author been unacquainted with those beautiful effusions of poetic sentiment. But, for his own satisfaction, he must be allowed thus publicly to acknowledge the pleasure those two Poems of his Friend have given him, and the grateful influence they have upon his mind as often as he reads them, or thinks of them.

XLII.

[Composed 1844.—Published 1845.]

So fair, so sweet, withal so sensitive,
 Would that the little Flowers were born to live, Conscious of half the pleasure which they
 give;

That to this mountain-daisy's self were
 known
 The beauty of its star-shaped shadow,
 thrown 5
 On the smooth surface of this naked
 stone!

And what if hence a bold desire should mount
 High as the Sun, that he could take account
 Of all that issues from his glorious fount!

So might he ken how by his sovereign
 aid 10
 These delicate companionships are
 made;
 And how he rules the pomp of light and
 shade;

And were the Sister-power that shines by
 night
 So privileged, what a countenance of de-
 light
 Would through the clouds break forth on human sight! 15

Fond fancies! wheresoe'er shall turn thine
 eye
 On earth, air, ocean, or the starry
 sky,
 Converse with Nature in pure sympathy;

All vain desires, all lawless wishes
 quelled,
 Be Thou to love and praise alike impelled, 20
 Whatever boon is granted or withheld.

XLIII.

UPON SEEING A COLOURED DRAW-ING OF THE BIRD OF PARADISE IN AN ALBUM.

[Composed 1835-6.—Published 1837.]

WHO rashly strove thy Image to portray?
 Thou buoyant minion of the tropic air;
 How could he think of the live creature—
 gay

With a divinity of colours, drest
 In all her brightness, from the dancing
 crest 5

Far as the last gleam of the filmy train
 Extended and extending to sustain The motions that it graces—and for-
 bear

To drop his pencil! Flowers of every
 clime
 Depicted on these pages smile at time; 10
 And gorgeous insects copied with nice
 care

Are here, and likenesses of many a shell
 Tossed ashore by restless waves,
 Or in the diver's grasp fetched up from caves

Where sea-nymphs might be proud to
 dwell: 15
 But whose rash hand (again I ask) could
 dare,

'Mid casual tokens and promiscuous
 shows,
 To circumscribe this Shape in fixed repose;

Could imitate for indolent survey,
 Perhaps for touch profane, 20 Plumes that might catch, but cannot keep, a stain;

And, with cloud-streaks lightest and loftiest, share
 The sun's first greeting, his last farewell
 ray!

Resplendent Wanderer! followed with glad eyes
 Where'er her course; mysterious Bird! 25
 To whom, by wondering Fancy stirred,
 Eastern Islanders have given
 A holy name—the Bird of Heaven!

And even a title higher still,
 The Bird of God ! whose blessed will 30
 She seems performing as she flies
 Over the earth and through the skies
 In never-wearied search of Paradise—Region that crowns her beauty with the
 name
 She bears for us—for us how blest, 35
 How happy at all seasons, could like aim

Uphold our Spirits urged to kindred flight On wings that fear no glance of God's pure sight,
 No tempest from his breath, their promised rest
 Seeking with indefatigable quest 40 Above a world that deems itself most wise
 When most enslaved by gross realities !

SONNETS

DEDICATED TO LIBERTY AND ORDER.

I.

COMPOSED AFTER READING A NEWS-PAPER OF THE DAY.

[Composed 1831.—Published 1835.]

“PEOPLE! your chains are severing link by link;
Soon shall the Rich be levelled down—the
Poor
Meet them half way.” Vain boast! for These, the more
They thus would rise, must low and lower sink
Till, by repentance stung, they fear to
think; 5
While all lie prostrate, save the tyrant
few
Bent in quick turns each other to undo,
And mix the poison, they themselves must drink.
Mistrust thyself, vain Country! cease to
cry, “Knowledge will save me from the threatened woe.” 10
For if than other rash ones more thou
know,
Yet on presumptuous wing as far would fly
Above thy knowledge as they dared to go,
Thou wilt provoke a heavier penalty.

II.

UPON THE LATE GENERAL FAST.
MARCH, 1832.

[Composed 1832.—Published 1838.]

RELUCTANT call it was; the rite delayed;
And in the Senate some there were who doffed
The last of their humanity, and scoffed
At providential judgments, undismayed
By their own daring. But the People
prayed 5

As with one voice; their flinty heart grew soft

With penitential sorrow, and aloft
Their spirit mounted, crying, “God us
aid!”

Oh that with aspirations more intense,
Chastised by self-abasement more pro-
found, 10

This People, once so happy, so renowned
For liberty, would seek from God defence
Against far heavier ill, the pestilence
Of revolution, impiously unbound!

III.

[Composed probably 1838.—Published 1838.]

SAID Secrecy to Cowardice and Fraud, Falseness and Treachery, in close council
met,

Deep under ground, in Pluto's cabinet, “The frost of England's pride will soon be thawed;

Hooded the open brow that overawed 5
Our schemes; the faith and honour, never
yet

By us with hope encountered, be upset;—
For once I burst my bands, and cry, applaud!”

Then whispered she, “The Bill is carrying
out!”

They heard, and, starting up, the Brood
of Night 10

Clapped hands, and shook with glee their matted locks;

All Powers and Places that abhor the
light

Joined in the transport, echoed back their shout,

Hurrah for——¹, hugging his Ballot-box!

[Composed 1838.—Published 1838.]

BLEST Statesman He, whose Mind's unselfish will Leaves him at ease among grand thoughts:
whose eye
Sees that, apart from magnanimity,
Wisdom exists not; nor the humbler skill
Of Prudence, disentangling good and ill
With patient care. What tho' assaults run high,
They daunt not him who holds his ministry,
Resolute, at all hazards, to fulfil Its duties;—prompt to move, but firm to wait,— Knowing, things rashly sought are rarely
found; 10
That, for the functions of an ancient
State—
Strong by her charters, free because im-
bound,
Servant of Providence, not slave of Fate—
Perilous is sweeping change, all chance unsound.

V.

IN ALLUSION TO VARIOUS RECENT HIS-TORIES AND NOTICES OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

PORTENTOUS change when History can
appear
As the cool Advocate of foul device;
Reckless audacity extol, and jeer
At consciences perplexed with scruples nice!
They who bewail not, must abhor, the sneer 5
Born of Conceit, Power's blind Idolater;
Or haply sprung from vaunting Cowardice
Betrayed by mockery of holy fear.
Hath it not long been said the wrath of
Man
Works not the righteousness of God? Oh
bend, 10
Bend, ye Perverse! to judgments from
on High,

Laws that lay under Heaven's perpetual ban

All principles of action that transcend
The sacred limits of humanity.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

WHO ponders National events shall find
An awful balancing of loss and gain,
Joy based on sorrow, good with ill combined,
And proud deliverance issuing out of
pain
And direful throes; as if the All-ruling
Mind, 5
With whose perfection it consists to ordain
Volcanic burst, earthquake, and hurricane,
Dealt in like sort with feeble human kind
By laws immutable. But woe for him Who thus deceived shall lend an eager
hand 10
To social havoc. Is not Conscience ours,
And Truth, whose eye guilt only can make dim;
And Will, whose office, by divine command,
Is to control and check disordered Powers?

VII.

CONCLUDED.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

LONG-FAVOURED England! be not thou mised
By monstrous theories of alien growth, Lest alien frenzy seize thee, waxing
wroth,
Self-smitten till thy garments reek dyed red
With thy own blood, which tears in torrents shed 5
Fail to wash out, tears flowing ere thy troth
Be plighted, not to ease but sullen sloth,
Or wan despair—the ghost of false hope
fled
Into a shameful grave. Among thy youth,

My Country! if such warning be held
 dear, 10
 Then shall a Veteran's heart be thrilled
 with joy,
 One who would gather from eternal truth,
 For time and season, rules that work to
 cheer—
 Not scourge, to save the People—not destroy.

VIII.

[Composed 1839.—Published 1842.]

MEN of the Western World! in Fate's dark book
 Whence these opprobrious leaves of dire portent?
 Think ye your British Ancestors forsook
 Their native Land, for outrage provident;
 From unsubmitive necks the bridle
 shook 5
 To give, in their Descendants, freer vent
 And wider range to passions turbulent,
 To mutual tyranny a deadlier look?
 Nay, said a voice, soft as the south wind's
 breath,
 Dive through the stormy surface of the
 flood 10
 To the great current flowing underneath;
 Explore the countless springs of silent
 good;
 So shall the truth be better understood,
 And thy grieved Spirit brighten strong in faith.

TO THE PENNSYLVANIANS.

[Composed probably January or February, 1845.
—Published 1845.]

DAYS undefiled by luxury or sloth,
 Firm self-denial, manners grave and staid,
 Rights equal, laws with cheerfulness
 obeyed,
 Words that require no sanction from an oath,
 And simple honesty a common growth— 5
 This high repute, with bounteous Nature's
 aid,
 Won confidence, now ruthlessly betrayed

At will, your power the measure of your troth!—
 All who revere the memory of Penn Grieve for the land on whose wild woods his name 10
 Was fondly grafted with a virtuous aim,
 Renounced, abandoned by degenerate Men
 For state-dishonour black as ever came To upper air from Mammon's loathsome
 den.

AT BOLOGNA, IN REMEMBRANCE OF
THE LATE INSURRECTIONS, 1837.

I.

[Composed probably 1837.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

AH why deceive ourselves! by no mere fit
 Of sudden passion roused shall men attain True freedom where for ages they have lain
 Bound in a dark abominable pit,
 With life's best sinews more and more unknit. 5
 Here, there, a banded few who loathe the chain
 May rise to break it: effort worse than
 vain
 For thee, O great Italian nation, split Into those jarring fractions.—Let thy
 scope
 Be one fixed mind for all; thy rights
 approve 10
 To thy own conscience gradually renewed;
 Learn to make Time the father of wise
 Hope;
 Then trust thy cause to the arm of Fortitude,
 The light of Knowledge, and the warmth
 of Love.

HARD task! exclaim the undisciplined, to lean
 On Patience coupled with such slow endeavour,
 That long-lived servitude must last for ever.

Perish the grovelling few, who, prest
 between Wrongs and the terror of redress, would wean 5
 Millions from glorious aims. Our chains to sever
 Let us break forth in tempest now or never!—
 What, is there then no space for golden mean
 And gradual progress?—Twilight leads
 to day,
 And, even within the burning zones of
 earth, 10
 The hastiest sunrise yields a temperate
 ray;
 The softest breeze to fairest flowers gives
 birth:
 Think not that Prudence dwells in dark abodes,
 She scans the future with the eye of gods.

III.

[Composed probably 1837.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

As leaves are to the tree whereon they grow
 And wither, every human generation
 Is to the Being of a mighty nation, Locked in our world's embrace through weal and woe;
 Thought that should teach the zealot to forego 5
 Rash schemes, to abjure all selfish agitation,
 And seek through noiseless pains and moderation
 The unblemished good they only can bestow.
 Alas! with most, who weigh futurity Against time present, passion holds the scales: 10
 Hence equal ignorance of both prevails,
 And nations sink; or, struggling to be
 free,

Are doomed to flounder on, like wounded whales
 Tossed on the bosom of a stormy sea.

XIII.

[Composed January or February, 1845.—Published 1845.]

YOUNG ENGLAND—what is then become
 of Old,
 Of dear Old England? Think they she is
 dead,
 Dead to the very name? Presumption fed On empty air! That name will keep its
 hold
 In the true filial bosom's inmost fold 5
 For ever.—The Spirit of Alfred, at the
 head
 Of all who for her rights watched, toiled and bled,
 Knows that this prophecy is not too bold.
 What—how! shall she submit in will and deed
 To Beardless Boys—an imitative race, 10
 The servum pecus of a Gallic breed?
 Dear Mother! if thou must thy steps re-
 trace,
 Go where at least meek Innocency dwells;
 Let Babes and Sucklings be thy oracles.

XIV.

[Composed ?.—Published 1842.]

FEEL for the wrongs to universal ken
 Daily exposed, woe that unshrouded lies;
 And seek the Sufferer in his darkest den,
 Whether conducted to the spot by sighs And moanings, or he dwells (as if the wren 5
 Taught him concealment) hidden from all
 eyes
 In silence and the awful modesties
 Of sorrow;—feel for all, as brother Men!
 Rest not in hope want's icy chain to thaw
 By casual boons and formal charities; 10
 Learn to be just, just through impartial
 law;
 Far as ye may, erect and equalize;
 And, what ye cannot reach by statute,
 draw
 Each from his fountain of self-sacrifice!

SONNETS UPON THE PUNISHMENT OF DEATH.

IN SERIES.

[Composed 1839-40.—Published December, 1841 (Quarterly Review); vol. of 1842.]

I.

SUGGESTED BY THE VIEW OF LANCASTER CASTLE (ON THE ROAD FROM THE SOUTH).

THIS Spot—at once unfolding sight so fair

Of sea and land, with yon grey towers that still

Rise up as if to lord it over air—
Might soothe in human breasts the sense of ill,

Or charm it out of memory; yea, might fill

The heart with joy and gratitude to God⁵
For all his bounties upon man bestowed:
Why bears it then the name of “Weeping Hill”?

Thousands, as toward yon old Lancastrian Towers,

A prison’s crown, along this way they past¹⁰

For lingering durancè or quick death with shame,

From this bare eminence thereon have cast

Their first look—blinded as tears fell in showers

Shed on their chains; and hence that doleful name.

II.

TENDERLY do we feel by Nature’s law
For worst offenders: though the heart will heave
With indignation, deeply moved we grieve,

In after-thought, for Him who stood in awe

Neither of God nor man, and only saw, 5
Lost wretch, a horrible device enthroned
On proud temptations, till the victim groaned

Under the steel his hand had dared to draw.

But O, restrain compassion, if its course,
As oft befalls, prevent or turn aside 10
Judgments and aims and acts whose higher source

Is sympathy with the unforewarned, who died

Blameless—with them that shuddered o’er his grave,

And all who from the law firm safety crave.

III.

THE Roman Consul doomed his sons to die

Who had betrayed their country. The stern word

Afforded (may it through all time afford)
A theme for praise and admiration high.

Upon the surface of humanity 5
He rested not; its depths his mind explored;

He felt; but his parental bosom’s lord
Was Duty,—Duty calmed his agony.

And some, we know, when they by wilful act

A single human life have wrongly taken,
Pass sentence on themselves, confess the fact, 11

And, to atone for it, with soul unshaken

Kneel at the feet of Justice, and, for
faith

Broken with all mankind, solicit death.

IV.

Is Death, when evil against good has fought

With such fell mastery that a man may
dare

By deeds the blackest purpose to lay
bare—

Is Death, for one to that condition
brought,—

For him, or any one,—the thing that ought

To be most dreaded? Lawgivers, beware,
Lest, capital pains remitting till ye spare
The murderer, ye, by sanction to that
thought,

Seemingly given, debase the general mind;
Tempt the vague will tried standards to
disown;

Nor only palpable restraints unbind,
But upon Honour's head disturb the
crown,

Whose absolute rule permits not to withstand

In the weak love of life his least command.

V.

NOT to the object specially designed,

Howe'er momentous in itself it be,

Good to promote or curb depravity,

Is the wise Legislator's view confined.

His Spirit, when most severe, is oft most
kind;

As all Authority in earth depends

On Love and Fear, their several powers
he blends,

Copying with awe the one Paternal
mind.

Uncaught by processes in show humane,
He feels how far the act would derogate

From even the humblest functions of the State;

If she, self-shorn of Majesty, ordain

That never more shall hang upon her
breath

The last alternative of Life or Death.

VI.

YE brood of Conscience—Spectres! that frequent

The bad man's restless walk, and haunt his bed—

Fiends in your aspect, yet beneficent

In act, as hovering Angels when they
spread

Their wings to guard the [unconscious
Innocent—

Slow be the Statutes of the land to share
A laxity that could not but impair

Your power to punish crime, and so prevent.

And ye, Beliefs! coiled serpent-like about

The adage on all tongues, "Murder will
out,"

How shall your ancient warnings work for good

In the full might they hitherto have shown,

If for deliberate shedder of man's blood Survive not Judgment that requires his own?

VII.

BEFORE the world had past her time of
youth

While polity and discipline were weak,
The precept eye for eye, and tooth for tooth,

Came forth—a light, though but as of daybreak,

Strong as could then be borne. A Master
meek

Proscribed the spirit fostered by that
rule,

Patience his law, long-suffering his school,
And love the end, which all through peace must seek.

But lamentably do they err who strain
His mandates, given rash impulse to control

And keep vindictive thirstings from the

soul,
So far that, if consistent in their scheme,
They must forbid the State to inflict a

pain,
Making of social order a mere dream.

VIII.

FIR retribution, by the moral code Determined, lies beyond the State's embrace,

Yet, as she may, for each peculiar case
She plants well-measured terrors in the
road

Of wrongful acts. Downward it is and broad, 5

And, the main fear once doomed to banishment,

Far oftener then, bad ushering worse
event,

Blood would be spilt that in his dark
abode

Crime might lie better hid. And, should the change

Take from the horror due to a foul deed,
Pursuit and evidence so far must fail, 11

And, guilt escaping, passion then might plead

In angry spirits for her old free range,
And the "wild justice of revenge" prevail.

IX.

THOUGH to give timely warning and deter
Is one great aim of penalty, extend

Thy mental vision further and ascend
Far higher, else full surely shalt thou err.

What is a State? The wise behold in her 5
A creature born of time, that keeps one eye

Fixed on the statutes of Eternity,
To which her judgments reverently defer.

Speaking through Law's dispassionate voice the State 9

Endues her conscience with external life
And being, to preclude or quell the strife

Of individual will, to elevate
The grovelling mind, the erring to recall,
And fortify the moral sense of all.

X.

OUR bodily life, some plead, that life the shrine

Of an immortal spirit, is a gift
So sacred, so informed with light divine,

That no tribunal, though most wise to sift Deed and intent, should turn the Being

adrift 5

Into that world where penitential tear
May not avail, nor prayer have for God's
ear

A voice—that world whose veil no hand can lift

For earthly sight. "Eternity and Time," They urge, "have interwoven claims and
rights 10

Not to be jeopardised through foulest
crime:

The sentence rule by mercy's heaven-born
lights."

Even so; but measuring not by finite sense Infinite Power, perfect Intelligence.

XI.

AH, think how one compelled for life to abide

Locked in a dungeon needs must eat the
heart

Out of his own humanity, and part With every hope that mutual cares provide;

And, should a less unnatural doom confide 5

In life-long exile on a savage coast,
Soon the relapsing penitent may boast

Of yet more heinous guilt, with fiercer
pride.

Hence thoughtful Mercy, Mercy sage and
pure,

Sanctions the forfeiture that Law demands, 10

Leaving the final issue in His hands Whose goodness knows no change, whose love is sure,

Who sees, foresees; who cannot judge

amiss,
And wafts at will the contrite soul to bliss.

XII.

SEE the Condemned alone within his cell
And prostrate at some moment when

remorse
Stings to the quick, and, with resistless

force,
Assaults the pride she strove in vain to quell.

Then mark him, him who could so long rebel, 5

The crime confessed, a kneeling Penitent
 Before the Altar, where the Sacrament Softens his heart, till from his eyes outwell
 Tears of salvation. Welcome death! while
 Heaven
 Does in this change exceedingly rejoice;
 While yet the solemn heed the State hath
 given
 Helps him to meet the last Tribunal's
 voice
 In faith, which fresh offences, were he cast
 On old temptations, might for ever blast.

XIII.

CONCLUSION.

YES, though He well may tremble at the
 sound
 Of his own voice, who from the judgment-
 seat
 Sends the pale Convict to his last retreat
 In death; though Listeners shudder all around,
 They know the dread requital's source
 profound; 5
 Nor is, they feel, its wisdom obsolete—
 (Would that it were!) the sacrifice un-
 meet
 For Christian Faith. But hopeful signs
 abound;
 The social rights of man breathe purer
 air;
 Religion deepens her preventive care; 10

Then, moved by needless fear of past
 abuse,
 Strike not from Law's firm hand that awful rod,
 But leave it thence to drop for lack of
 use:
 Oh, speed the blessed hour, Almighty
 God!

XIV.

APOLOGY.

THE formal World relaxes her cold chain
 For One who speaks in numbers; ampler
 scope
 His utterance finds; and, conscious of the
 gain,
 Imagination works with bolder hope
 The cause of grateful reason to sustain; 5
 And, serving Truth, the heart more strongly beats Against all barriers which his labour meets
 In lofty place, or humble Life's domain.
 Enough;—before us lay a painful road,
 And guidance have I sought in duteous
 love 10
 From Wisdom's heavenly Father. Hence hath flowed Patience, with trust that, whatsoe'er the
 way
 Each takes in this high matter, all may move
 Cheered with the prospect of a brighter
 day.

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS.

I.

EPISTLE

TO SIR GEORGE HOWLAND BEAUMONT, BART.

From the South-west Coast of Cumberland.—1811.

[Composed 1811.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

FAR from our home by Grasmere's quiet
Lake,

From the Vale's peace which all her fields partake,

Here on the bleakest point of Cumbria's
shore

We sojourn stunned by Ocean's ceaseless
roar;

While, day by day, grim neighbour! huge Black Comb 5

Frowns deepening visibly his native
gloom,

Unless, perchance rejecting in despite What on the Plain we have of warmth and light,

In his own storms he hides himself from
sight.

Rough is the time; and thoughts, that would be free 10

From heaviness, oft fly, dear Friend, to
thee;

Turn from a spot where neither sheltered
road

Nor hedge-row screen invites my steps
abroad;

Where one poor Plane-tree, having as it
might

Attained a stature twice a tall man's
height, 15

Hopeless of further growth, and brown and sere

Through half the summer, stands with top cut sheer,

Like an unshifting weathercock which proves

How cold the quarter that the wind best
loves,

Or like a Centinel that, evermore 20 Darkening the window, ill defends the
door

Of this unfinished house—a Fortress bare,
Where strength has been the Builder's only care;

Whose rugged walls may still for years
demand

The final polish of the Plasterer's hand. 25
—This Dwelling's Inmate more than three weeks' space

And oft a Prisoner in the cheerless place,
I—of whose touch the fiddle would com-

plain,

Whose breath would labour at the flute in
vain,

In music all unversed, nor blessed with
skill 30

A bridge to copy, or to paint a mill,
Tired of my books, a scanty company!

And tired of listening to the boisterous
sea—

Pace between door and window muttering rhyme,

An old resource to cheat a froward time!
Though these dull hours (mine is it, or their shame?) 36

Would tempt me to renounce that humble
aim.

—But if there be a Muse who, free to take

Her seat upon Olympus, doth forsake Those heights (like Phœbus when his golden locks 40

He veiled, attendant on Thessalian flocks)
And, in disguise, a Milkmaid with her pail

Trips down the pathways of some winding
dale;

Or, like a Mermaid, warbles on the
shores
To fishers mending nets beside their doors; 45
Or, Pilgrim-like, on forest moss reclined, Gives plaintive ditties to the heedless
wind,
Or listens to its play among the boughs
Above her head and so forgets her vows—
If such a Visitant of Earth there be 50
And she would deign this day to smile on me
And aid my verse, content with local bounds
Of natural beauty and life's daily rounds, Thoughts, chances, sights, or doings, which we tell Without reserve to those whom we love
well— 55
Then haply, Beaumont! words in current
clear
Will flow, and on a welcome page appear
Duly before thy sight, unless they perish
here.

What shall I treat of? News from Mona's Isle?
Such have we, but unvaried in its style;
No tales of Runagates fresh landed,
whence 61
And wherefore fugitive or on what pre-
tence;
Of feasts, or scandal, eddying like the
wind
Most restlessly alive when most confined.
Ask not of me, whose tongue can best appease 65
The mighty tumults of the HOUSE OF
KEYS;
The last year's cup whose Ram or Heifer
gained,
What slopes are planted, or what mosses drained:
An eye of fancy only can I cast
On that proud pageant now at hand or
past, 70
When full five hundred boats in trim
array,
With nets and sails outspread and streamers gay,

And chanted hymns and stiller voice of
prayer,
For the old Manx-harvest to the Deep repair,
Soon as the herring-shoals at distance
shine 75
Like beds of moonlight shifting on the brine.

Mona from our Abode is daily seen,
But with a wilderness of waves between;
And by conjecture only can we speak
Of aught transacted there in bay or creek;
No tidings reach us thence from town or
field, 81
Only faint news her mountain-sunbeams
yield,
And some we gather from the misty air,
And some the hovering clouds, our telegraph, declare.
But these poetic mysteries I withhold; 85
For Fancy hath her fits both hot and cold,
And should the colder fit with You be on When You might read, my credit would be gone.

Let more substantial themes the pen
engage,
And nearer interests culled from the opening stage 90
Of our migration.—Ere the welcome dawn Had from the east her silver star withdrawn,
The Wain stood ready, at our Cottage-
door, Thoughtfully freighted with a various
store;
And long or ere the uprising of the Sun O'er dew-damp'd dust our journey was begun, 96
A needful journey, under favouring skies,
Through peopled Vales; yet something in the guise
Of those old Patriarchs when from well to well
They roamed through Wastes where now the tented Arabs dwell. 100 Say first, to whom did we the charge
confide,
Who promptly undertook the Wain to guide

Up many a sharply-twining road and
 down,
 And over many a wide hill's craggy
 crown,
 Through the quick turns of many a hollow
 nook, 105
 And the rough bed of many an unbridged
 brook?
 A blooming Lass—who in her better hand Bore a light switch, her sceptre of command
 When, yet a slender Girl, she often led,
 Skilful and bold, the horse and burthened sled¹ 110
 From the peat-yielding Moss on Gowdar's
 head.
 What could go wrong with such a Charioter
 For goods and chattels, or those Infants
 dear,
 A Pair who smilingly sat side by side,
 Our hope confirming that the salt-sea
 tide, 115
 Whose free embraces we were bound to seek,
 Would their lost strength restore and freshen the pale cheek?
 Such hope did either Parent entertain Pacing behind along the silent lane.

Blithe hopes and happy musings soon took flight, 120
 For lo! an uncouth melancholy sight—
 On a green bank a creature stood forlorn
 Just half protruded to the light of morn,
 Its hinder part concealed by hedge-row
 thorn.
 The Figure called to mind a beast of prey Stript of its frightful powers by slow
 decay, 126
 And, though no longer upon rapine bent,
 Dim memory keeping of its old intent.
 We started, looked again with anxious
 eyes,
 And in that griesly object recognise 130
 The Curate's Dog—his long-tried friend, for they,
 As well we knew, together had grown
 grey.

The Master died, his drooping servant's
 grief
 Found at the Widow's feet some sad
 relief;
 Yet still he lived in pining discontent,
 Sadness which no indulgence could prevent; 136
 Hence whole day wanderings, broken nightly sleeps
 And lonesome watch that out of doors he keeps;
 Not oftentimes, I trust, as we, poor brute!
 Espied him on his legs sustained, blank,
 mute, 140
 And of all visible motion destitute,
 So that the very heaving of his breath Seemed stopt, though by some other power than death.
 Long as we gazed upon the form and face,
 A mild domestic pity kept its place, 145
 Unscared by thronging fancies of strange
 hue
 That haunted us in spite of what we knew.
 Even now I sometimes think of him as lost
 In second-sight appearances, or crost By spectral shapes of guilt, or to the
 ground, 150
 On which he stood, by spells unnatural
 bound,
 Like a gaunt shaggy Porter forced to wait
 In days of old romance at Archimago's gate.

Advancing Summer, Nature's law fulfilled, 154
 The choristers in every grove had stilled;
 But we, we lacked not music of our own,
 For lightsome Fanny had thus early
 thrown,
 Mid the gay prattle of those infant
 tongues,
 Some notes prelusive, from the round of songs
 With which, more zealous than the liveliest bird 160
 That in wild Arden's brakes was ever heard,
 Her work and her work's partners she can cheer,
 The whole day long, and all days of the
 year.

¹ A local word for sledge.

Thus gladdened from our own dear
Vale we pass

And soon approach Diana's Looking-glass!
To Loughrigg-tarn, round clear and bright as heaven, 166

Such name Italian fancy would have
given,

Ere on its banks the few grey cabins rose
That yet disturb not its concealed repose
More than the feeblest wind that idly
blows. 170

Ah, Beaumont! when an opening in
the road
Stopped me at once by charm of what it
showed,

The encircling region vividly exprest Within the mirror's depth, a world at
rest—

Sky streaked with purple, grove and craggy *bield*¹, 175

And the smooth green of many a pen-dent field,

And, quieted and soothed, a torrent
small,

A little daring would-be waterfall,
One chimney smoking and its azure
wreath,

Associate all in the calm Pool beneath,
With here and there a faint imperfect
gleam 181

Of water-lilies veiled in misty steam—
What wonder at this hour of stillness
deep,

A shadowy link 'tween wakefulness and
sleep,

When Nature's self, amid such blending,
seems 185

To render visible her own soft dreams,
If, mixed with what appeared of rock,
lawn, wood,

Fondly embosomed in the tranquil flood,
A glimpse I caught of that Abode, by
Thee

Designed to rise in humble privacy, 190
A lowly Dwelling, here to be outspread, Like a small Hamlet, with its bashful
head

Half hid in native trees. Alas 'tis not,
Nor ever was; I sighed, and left the spot
Unconscious of its own untoward lot, 195
And thought in silence, with regret too
keen,

Of unexperienced joys that might have
been;

Of neighbourhood and intermingling arts,
And golden summer days uniting cheerful hearts.

But time, irrevocable time, is flown, 200
And let us utter thanks for blessings
sown

And reaped—what hath been, and what is, our own.

Not far we travelled ere a shout of glee,
Startling us all, dispersed my reverie;
Such shout as many a sportive echo meeting 205

Of-times from Alpine chalets sends a greeting.

Whence the blithe hail? behold a Peasant
stand

On high, a kerchief waving in her hand!
Not unexpectant that by early day

Our little Band would thrid this mountain-way, 210

Before her cottage on the bright hill-side
She hath advanced with hope to be descried.

Right gladly answering signals we dis-
played,

Moving along a tract of morning shade,
And vocal wishes sent of like good will

To our kind Friend high on the sunny
hill— 216

Luminous region, fair as if the prime Were tempting all astir to look aloft or climb;

Only the centre of the shining cot
With door left open makes a gloomy spot, Emblem of those dark corners sometimes
found 221

Within the happiest breast on earthly
ground.

Rich prospect left behind of stream and vale,

And mountain-tops, a barren ridge we
scale;

¹ A word common in the country, signifying shelter, as in Scotland.

Descend and reach, in Yewdale's depths,
 a plain 225
 With haycocks studded, striped with yellowing grain—
 An area level as a Lake and spread
 Under a rock too steep for man to tread,
 Where sheltered from the north and bleak north-west
 Aloft the Raven hangs a visible nest, 230 Fearless of all assaults that would her brood molest.
 Hot sunbeams fill the steaming vale; but hark,
 At our approach, a jealous watch-dog's
 bark,
 Noise that brings forth no liveried Page
 of state,
 But the whole household, that our coming
 wait. 235
 With Young and Old warm greetings we exchange,
 And jocund smiles, and toward the lowly Grange
 Press forward by the teasing dogs un-scared.
 Entering, we find the morning meal prepared:
 So down we sit, though not till each had
 cast 240
 Pleased looks around the delicate repast—
 Rich cream, and snow-white eggs fresh from the nest,
 With amber honey from the mountain's
 breast;
 Strawberries from lane or woodland, offering wild 244
 Of children's industry, in hillocks piled;
 Cakes for the nonce, and butter fit to lie
 Upon a lordly dish; frank hospitality
 Where simple art with bounteous nature vied,
 And cottage comfort shunned not seemly
 pride.

Kind Hostess! Handmaid also of the feast, 250
 If thou be lovelier than the kindling East, Words by thy presence unrestrained may
 speak
 Of a perpetual dawn from brow and
 cheek

Instinct with light whose sweetest promise lies,
 Never retiring, in thy large dark eyes, 255
 Dark but to every gentle feeling true,
 As if their lustre flowed from ether's purest blue.

Let me not ask what tears may have been wept
 By those bright eyes, what weary vigils
 kept,
 Beside that hearth what sighs may have been heaved 260
 For wounds inflicted, nor what toil relieved
 By fortitude and patience, and the grace
 Of heaven in pity visiting the place.
 Not unadvisedly those secret springs
 I leave unsearched: enough that memory
 clings, 265
 Here as elsewhere, to notices that make
 Their own significance for hearts awake,
 To rural incidents, whose genial powers Filled with delight three summer morning hours.

More could my pen report of grave or gay
 That through our gipsy travel cheered the
 way; 271
 But, bursting forth above the waves, the
 Sun
 Laughs at my pains, and seems to say,
 "Be done."
 Yet, Beaumont, thou wilt not, I trust,
 reprove
 This humble offering made by Truth to
 Love, 275
 Nor chide the Muse that stooped to break a spell
 Which might have else been on me yet:—
 FAREWELL.

UPON PERUSING THE FOREGOING EPISTLE THIRTY YEARS AFTER ITS COMPOSITION.

[Composed 1841.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

SOON did the Almighty Giver of all rest Take those dear young Ones to a fearless
 nest;
 And in Death's arms has long reposed the
 Friend
 For whom this simple Register was penned.

Thanks to the moth that spared it for our eyes; 5
And Strangers even the slighted Scroll may prize,
Moved by the touch of kindred sympathies.
For—save the calm repentance sheds o'er
strife
Raised by remembrances of misused life,
The light from past endeavours purely willed 10
And by Heaven's favour happily fulfilled;
Save hope that we, yet bound to Earth,
may share
The joys of the Departed—what so fair
As blameless pleasure, not without some
tears,
Reviewed through Love's transparent veil of years? 15

Note.—LOUGHRIFF TARN, alluded to in the foregoing Epistle, resembles, though much smaller in compass, the Lake Nemi, or Speculum Dianæ as it is often called, not only in its clear waters and circular form, and the beauty immediately surrounding it, but also as being overlooked by the eminence of Langdale Pikes as Lake Nemi is by that of Monte Calvo. Since this Epistle was written Loughriff Tarn has lost much of its beauty by the felling of many natural clumps of wood, relics of the old forest, particularly upon the farm called "The Oaks," from the abundance of that tree which grew there.

It is to be regretted, upon public grounds, that Sir George Beaumont did not carry into effect his intention of constructing here a Summer Retreat in the style I have described; as his taste would have set an example how buildings, with all the accommodations modern society requires, might be introduced even into the most secluded parts of this country without injuring their native character. The design was not abandoned from failure of inclination on his part, but in consequence of local untowardness which need not be particularised.

II.

GOLD AND SILVER FISHES IN A VASE.

[Composed 1829.—Published 1835.]

THE soaring lark is blest as proud
When at heaven's gate she sings;
The roving bee proclaims aloud
Her flight by vocal wings;

While Ye, in lasting durance pent,
Your silent lives employ
For something more than dull content,
Though haply less than joy.

Yet might your glassy prison seem
A place where joy is known, 10
Where golden flash and silver gleam
Have meanings of their own;
While, high and low, and all about,
Your motions, glittering Elves!
Ye weave—no danger from without, 15
And peace among yourselves.

Type of a sunny human breast
Is your transparent cell;
Where Fear is but a transient guest,
No sullen Humours dwell; 20
Where, sensitive of every ray
That smites this tiny sea,
Your scaly panoplies repay
The loan with usury.

How beautiful!—Yet none knows why 25
This ever-graceful change,
Renewed—renewed incessantly—
Within your quiet range.
Is it that ye with conscious skill
For mutual pleasure glide; 30
And sometimes, not without your will,
Are dwarfed, or magnified?

Fays, Genii of gigantic size!
And now, in twilight dim,
Clustering like constellated eyes 35
In wings of Cherubim,
When the fierce orbs abate their glare;—
Whate'er your forms express, Whate'er ye seem, whate'er ye are—
All leads to gentleness. 40

Cold though your nature be, 'tis pure;
Your birthright is a fence
From all that haughtier kinds endure
Through tyranny of sense.
Ah! not alone by colours bright 45
Are Ye to heaven allied;
When, like essential Forms of light,
Ye mingle, or divide.

For day-dreams soft as e'er beguiled
Day-thoughts while limbs repose; 50
For moonlight fascinations mild,
Your gift, ere shutters close—

Accept, mute Captives! thanks and
 praise;
 And may this tribute prove That gentle admirations raise 55
 Delight resembling love.

III.

LIBERTY.

SEQUEL TO THE PRECEDING.

Addressed to a friend; the gold and silver fishes having been removed to a pool in the pleasure-ground of Rydal Mount.

"The liberty of a people consists in being governed by laws which they have made for themselves, under whatever form it be of government. The liberty of a private man, in being master of his own time and actions, as far as may consist with the laws of God and of his country. Of this latter we are here to discourse."—COWLEY.

[Composed 1829.—Published 1835.]

THOSE breathing Tokens of your kind regard, (Suspect not, Anna, that their fate is hard;
 Not soon does aught to which mild fancies
 cling
 In lonely spots, become a slighted thing;)
 Those silent Inmates now no longer share,
 Nor do they need, our hospitable care, 6
 Removed in kindness from their glassy
 Cell
 To the fresh waters of a living Well—
 An elfin pool so sheltered that its rest
 No winds disturb; the mirror of whose
 breast 10
 Is smooth as clear, save where with dim-ples small
 A fly may settle, or a blossom fall.
 —There swims, of blazing sun and beating
 shower
 Fearless (but how obscured!) the golden
 Power,
 That from his bauble prison used to cast
 Gleams by the richest jewel unsurpass; 16
 And near him, darkling like a sullen Gnome,
 The silver Tenant of the crystal dome;

Dissevered both from all the mysteries
 Of hue and altering shape that charmed all eyes. 20
 Alas! they pined, they languished while they shone;
 And, if not so, what matters beauty gone
 And admiration lost, by change of place
 That brings to the inward creature no disgrace?
 But if the change restore his birthright,
 then, 25
 Whate'er the difference, boundless is the
 gain.
 Who can divine what impulses from God Reach the caged lark, within a town-
 abode,
 From his poor inch or two of daisied sod?
 O yield him back his privilege!—No sea 30
 Swells like the bosom of a man set free;
 A wilderness is rich with liberty.
 Roll on, ye spouting whales, who die or keep
 Your independence in the fathomless
 Deep!
 Spread, tiny nautilus, the living sail; 35
 Dive, at thy choice, or brave the freshening
 gale!
 If unproved the ambitious eagle mount
 Sunward to seek the daylight in its fount, Bays, gulfs, and ocean's Indian width,
 shall be,
 Till the world perishes, a field for thee! 40

While musing here I sit in shadow cool,
 And watch these mute Companions, in the pool,
 (Among reflected boughs of leafy trees)
 By glimpses caught—disporting at their
 ease,
 Enlivened, braced, by hardy luxuries, 45
 I ask what warrant fixed them (like a spell
 Of witchcraft fixed them) in the crystal
 cell;
 To wheel with languid motion round and
 round,
 Beautiful, yet in mournful durance bound.
 Their peace, perhaps, our lightest footfall marred; 50
 On their quick sense our sweetest music jarred;

And whither could they dart, if seized
with fear?
No sheltering stone, no tangled root was
near.
When fire or taper ceased to cheer the
room,
They wore away the night in starless
gloom; 55
And when the sun first dawned upon the
streams,
How faint their portion of his vital beams!
Thus, and unable to complain, they fared, While not one joy of ours by them was shared.

Is there a cherished bird (I venture
now 60
To snatch a sprig from Chaucer's reverend
brow)—
Is there a brilliant fondling of the cage, Though sure of plaudits on his costly
stage,
Though fed with dainties from the snow-white hand
Of a kind mistress, fairest of the land, 65
But gladly would escape; and, if need
were,
Scatter the colours from the plumes that
bear
The emancipated captive through blithe
air
Into strange woods, where he at large
may live
On best or worst which they and Nature
give? 70
The beetle loves his unpretending track,
The snail the house he carries on his
back;
The far-fetched worm with pleasure would disown
The bed we give him, though of softest
down;
A noble instinct; in all kinds the same, 75
All ranks! What Sovereign, worthy of the name,
If doomed to breathe against his lawful
will
An element that flatters him—to kill,
But would rejoice to barter outward show
For the least boon that freedom can bestow? 80

But most the Bard is true to inborn
right,
Lark of the dawn, and Philomel of night,
Exults in freedom, can with rapture vouch
For the dear blessings of a lowly couch,
A natural meal—days, months, from Nature's hand; 85
Time, place, and business, all at his command!—
Who bends to happier duties, who more
wise
Than the industrious Poet, taught to prize,
Above all grandeur, a pure life uncrossed
By cares in which simplicity is lost? 90
That life—the flowery path that winds by stealth—
Which Horace needed for his spirit's
health;
Sighed for, in heart and genius, overcome
By noise and strife, and questions wearisome,
And the vain splendours of Imperial
Rome?— 95
Let easy mirth his social hours inspire,
And fiction animate his sportive lyre,
Attuned to verse that, crowning light
Distress
With garlands, cheats her into happiness;
Give me the humblest note of those sad
strains 100
Drawn forth by pressure of his gilded chains,
As a chance-sunbeam from his memory
fell
Upon the Sabine farm he loved so well;
Or when the prattle of Bandusia's spring
Haunted his ear—he only listening— 105
He proud to please, above all rivals, fit
To win the palm of gaiety and wit;
He, doubt not, with involuntary dread, Shrinking from each new favour to be
shed,
By the world's Ruler, on his honoured
head! 110

In a deep vision's intellectual scene,
Such earnest longings and regrets as keen Depressed the melancholy Cowley, laid Under a fancied yew-tree's luckless
shade;

A doleful bower for penitential song, 115 Where Man and Muse complained of mutual wrong;

While Cam's ideal current glided by,
And antique towers nodded their fore-heads high,

Citadels dear to studious privacy.
But Fortune, who had long been used to sport 120

With this tried Servant of a thankless
Court,

Relenting met his wishes; and to you
The remnant of his days at least was true;
You, whom, though long deserted, he loved best;

You, Muses, books, fields, liberty, and rest!

Far happier they who, fixing hope and
aim 126

On the humanities of peaceful fame,
Enter betimes with more than martial fire
The generous course, aspire, and still aspire;

Upheld by warnings heeded not too late
Stifle the contradictions of their fate, 131
And to one purpose cleave, their Being's godlike mate!

Thus, gifted Friend, but with the placid
brow

That woman ne'er should forfeit, keep thy vow;

With modest scorn reject what'er would
blind 135

The ethereal eyesight, cramp the winged
mind!

Then, with a blessing granted from above
To every act, word, thought, and look of love, Life's book for Thee may lie unclosed, till
age

Shall with a thankful tear bedrop its latest page¹. 140

¹ There is now, alas! no possibility of the anticipation, with which the above Epistle concludes, being realised: nor were the verses ever seen by the Individual for whom they were intended. She accompanied her husband, the Rev. Wm. Fletcher, to India, and died of cholera, at the age of thirty-two or thirty-three years, on her way from Sbalapore to Bombay, deeply lamented by all who knew her.

Her enthusiasm was ardent, her piety stead-

POOR ROBIN².

[Composed March, 1840.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

Now when the primrose makes a splendid
show,

And lilies face the March-winds in full
blow,

And humbler growths as moved with one
desire

Put on, to welcome spring, their best
attire,

Poor Robin is yet flowerless; but how
gay 5

With his red stalks upon this sunny day!
And, as his tufts of leaves he spreads,
content

With a hard bed and scanty nourishment, Mixed with the green, some shine not lacking power

To rival summer's brightest scarlet flower;
And flowers they well might seem to passers-by 11

If looked at only with a careless eye;
Flowers—or a richer produce (did it suit
The season) sprinklings of ripe strawberry fruit.

But while a thousand pleasures come unsought, 15

Why fix upon his wealth or want a
thought?

Is the string touched in prelude to a lay
Of pretty fancies that would round him
play

When all the world acknowledged elfin
sway?

fast; and her great talents would have enabled her to be eminently useful in the difficult path of life to which she had been called. The opinion she entertained of her own performances, given to the world under her maiden name, Jewsbury, was modest and humble, and, indeed, far below their merits; as is often the case with those who are making trial of their powers, with a hope to discover what they are best fitted for. In one quality, viz. quickness in the motions of her mind, she had, within the range of the Author's acquaintance, no equal.

² The small wild Geranium known by that term.

Or does it suit our humour to commend 20
 Poor Robin as a sure and crafty friend, Whose practice teaches, spite of names to
 show

Bright colours whether they deceive or no?—

Nay, we would simply praise the free
 good-will

With which, though slighted, he, on naked
 hill 25

Or in warm valley, seeks his part to fill ;
 Cheerful alike if bare of flowers as now,
 Or when his tiny gems shall deck his
 brow :

Yet more, we wish that men by men
 despised,

And such as lift their foreheads over-
 prized, 30

Should sometimes think, where'er they chance to spy

This child of Nature's own humility,
 What recompense is kept in store or left
 For all that seem neglected or bereft ;

With what nice care equivalents are
 given, 35

How just, how bountiful, the hand of Heaven.

V.

THE GLEANER.

[Composed 1828.—Published, as "The Country Girl," 1829 (The Keepsake); ed. 1832.]

THAT happy gleam of vernal eyes,
 Those locks from summer's golden skies,

That o'er thy brow are shed ;

That cheek—a kindling of the morn,
 That lip—a rose-bud from the thorn, 5

I saw ; and Fancy sped

To scenes Arcadian, whispering, through soft air,

Of bliss that grows without a care,
 And happiness that never flies—

(How can it where love never dies?) 10

Whispering of promise, where no blight
 Can reach the innocent delight ;

Where pity, to the mind conveyed
 In pleasure, is the darkest shade

That Time, unwrinkled grandsire, flings
 From his smoothly gliding wings. 16

What mortal form, what earthly face
 Inspired the pencil, lines to trace,
 And mingle colours, that should breed
 Such rapture, nor want power to feed ; 20
 For had thy charge been idle flowers,
 Fair Damsel ! o'er my captive mind,
 To truth and sober reason blind,
 'Mid that soft air, those long-lost bowers,
 The sweet illusion might have hung, for
 hours. 25

Thanks to this tell-tale sheaf of corn,
 That touchingly bespeaks thee born
 Life's daily tasks with them to share
 Who, whether from their lowly bed
 They rise, or rest the weary head, 30
 Ponder the blessing they entreat
 From Heaven, and feel what they repeat, While they give utterance to the prayer
 That asks for daily bread.

VI.

TO A REDBREAST

(IN SICKNESS).

[Composed ?.—Published : vol. of 1842.]

STAY, little cheerful Robin ! stay,
 And at my casement sing,
 Though it should prove a farewell lay
 And this our parting spring.

Though I, alas ! may ne'er enjoy 5
 The promise in thy song ;
 A charm, that thought can not destroy,
 Doth to thy strain belong.

Methinks that in my dying hour
 Thy song would still be dear, 10
 And with a more than earthly power
 My passing Spirit cheer.

Then, little Bird, this boon confer,
 Come, and my requiem sing,
 Nor fail to be the harbinger 15
 Of everlasting Spring.

VII.

[Composed 1846.—Published 1850.]

I KNOW an aged Man constrained to dwell
 In a large house of public charity,
 Where he abides, as in a Prisoner's cell,
 With numbers near, alas ! no company.

When he could creep about, at will,
 though poor 5
 And forced to live on alms, this old Man
 fed

A Redbreast, one that to his cottage door
 Came not, but in a lane partook his bread.

There, at the root of one particular tree,
 An easy seat this worn-out Labourer
 found 10

While Robin pecked the crumbs upon his knee

Laid one by one, or scattered on the
 ground.

Dear intercourse was theirs, day after
 day;

What signs of mutual gladness when they met!

Think of their common peace, their simple play, 15

The parting moment and its fond regret.

Months passed in love that failed not to fulfil,

In spite of season's change, its own
 demand,

By fluttering pinions here and busy bill;
 There by caresses from a tremulous hand.

Thus in the chosen spot a tie so strong 21
 Was formed between the solitary pair,
 That when his fate had housed him 'mid a throng

The Captive shunned all converse proferred there.

Wife, children, kindred, they were dead and gone; 25

But, if no evil hap his wishes crossed,
 One living Stay was left, and on that
 one

Some recompense for all that he had lost.

O that the good old Man had power to prove,

By message sent through air or visible
 token, 30

That still he loves the Bird, and still must love;

That friendship lasts though fellowship is broken!

VIII.

SONNET.

TO AN OCTOGENARIAN.

[Composed 1846.—Published 1850.]

AFFECTIONS lose their object; Time brings
 forth

No successors; and, lodged in memory,
 If love exist no longer, it must die,—

Wanting accustomed food, must pass
 from earth,

Or never hope to reach a second birth. 5
 This sad belief, the happiest that is left To thousands, share not Thou; howe'er

bereft,

Scorned, or neglected, fear not such a dearth.

Though poor and destitute of friends thou
 art,

Perhaps the sole survivor of thy race, 10
 One to whom Heaven assigns that mournful part

The utmost solitude of age to face,
 Still shall be left some corner of the heart

Where Love for living Thing can find a place.

IX.

FLOATING ISLAND.

These lines are by the Author of the Address to the Wind, &c., published heretofore along with my poems. Those to a Redbreast are by a deceased female Relative.

[Composed ?.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

HARMONIOUS Powers with Nature work
 On sky, earth, river, lake and sea;
 Sunshine and cloud, whirlwind and breeze,
 All in one duteous task agree.

Once did I see a slip of earth 5
 (By throbbing waves long undermined)

Loosed from its hold; how, no one knew,
 But all might see it float, obedient to the
 wind;

Might see it, from the mossy shore
 Dissevered, float upon the Lake, 10

Float with its crest of trees adorned On which the warbling birds their pastime take.

Food, shelter, safety, there they find ;
 There berries ripen, flowerets bloom ;
 There insects live their lives, and die ; 15
 A peopled world it is ; in size a tiny
 room.

And thus through many seasons' space
 This little Island may survive ;
 But Nature, though we mark her not,
 Will take away, may cease to give. 20

Perchance when you are wandering forth
 Upon some vacant sunny day,
 Without an object, hope, or fear, Thither your eyes may turn—the Isle is passed away ;

Buried beneath the glittering Lake, 25
 Its place no longer to be found ;
 Yet the lost fragments shall remain
 To fertilise some other ground.

X.

[Composed ?.—Published 1850.]

How beautiful the Queen of Night, on
 high

Her way pursuing among scattered clouds, Where, ever and anon, her head she shrouds

Hidden from view in dense obscurity.
 But look, and to the watchful eye 5
 A brightening edge will indicate that
 soon

We shall behold the struggling Moon
 Break forth,—again to walk the clear blue
 sky.

“Late, late yestreen I saw the new moone Wi' the auld moone in hie arme.”

Ballad of Sir Patrick Spence, Percy's Reliques.

[Composed 1826.—Published 1827.]

ONCE I could hail (how'er serene the
 sky)

The Moon re-entering her monthly round,
 No faculty yet given me to espy
 The dusky Shape within her arms im-
 bound,

That thin memento of effulgence lost 5
 Which some have named her Predecessor's ghost.

Young, like the Crescent that above me
 shone,

Nought I perceived within it dull or dim ;
 All that appeared was suitable to One Whose fancy had a thousand fields to skim ; 10

To expectations spreading with wild
 growth,

And hope that kept with me her plighted
 troth.

I saw (ambition quickening at the view)
 A silver boat launched on a boundless
 flood ;

A pearly crest, like Dian's when it threw Its brightest splendour round a leafy
 wood ; 16

But not a hint from under-ground, no sign

Fit for the glimmering brow of Proser-
 pine.

Or was it Dian's self that seemed to
 move

Before me?—nothing blemished the fair
 sight ; 20

On her I looked whom jocund Fairies
 love,

Cynthia, who puts the little stars to
 flight,

And by that thinning magnifies the great,
 For exaltation of her sovereign state.

And when I learned to mark the spectral
 Shape 25

As each new Moon obeyed the call of
 Time,

If gloom fell on me, swift was my escape ;

Such happy privilege hath life's gay
 Prime,

To see or not to see, as best may please
 A buoyant Spirit, and a heart at ease. 30

Now, dazzling Stranger ! when thou meet'st my glance,

Thy dark Associate ever I discern ;
 Emblem of thoughts too eager to advance

While I salute my joys, thoughts sad or stern ;

Shades of past bliss, or phantoms that, to gain 35
Their fill of promised lustre, wait in vain.

So changes mortal Life with fleeting years ;

A mournful change, should Reason fail to bring

The timely insight that can temper fears,
And from vicissitude remove its sting ; 40

While Faith aspires to seats in that domain

Where joys are perfect—neither wax nor wane.

XII.

TO THE LADY FLEMING,

ON SEEING THE FOUNDATION PREPARING FOR THE ERECTION OF RYDAL CHAPEL, WESTMORELAND.

[Composed 1823.—Published 1827.]

I.

BLEST is this Isle—our native Land ;
Where battlement and moated gate

Are objects only for the hand
Of hoary Time to decorate ;

Where shady hamlet, town that breathes
Its busy smoke in social wreaths, 6

No rampart's stern defence require,
Nought but the heaven-directed spire,

And steeple tower (with pealing bells Far-heard)—our only citadels. 10

II.

O Lady ! from a noble line
Of chieftains sprung, who stoutly bore

The spear, yet gave to works divine
A bounteous help in days of yore,

(As records mouldering in the Dell 15
Of Nightshade¹ haply yet may tell ;)

Thee kindred aspirations moved
To build, within a vale beloved,

For Him upon whose high behests
All peace depends, all safety rests. 20

¹ Bekangs Ghyll—or the dell of Nightshade—in which stands St. Mary's Abbey in Low Furness.

III.

How fondly will the woods embrace
This daughter of thy pious care,

Lifting her front with modest Grace
To make a fair recess more fair ;

And to exalt the passing hour ; 25
Or soothe it with a healing power

Drawn from the Sacrifice fulfilled,
Before this rugged soil was tilled,

Or human habitation rose
To interrupt the deep repose ! 30

IV.

Well may the villagers rejoice !
Nor heat, nor cold, nor weary ways,

Will be a hindrance to the voice
That would unite in prayer and praise ;

More duly shall wild wandering Youth
Receive the curb of sacred truth, 36

Shall tottering Age, bent earthward, hear
The Promise, with uplifted ear ;

And all shall welcome the new ray Imparted to their sabbath-day. 40

V.

Nor deem the Poet's hope misplaced,
His fancy cheated—that can see

A shade upon the future cast,
Of time's pathetic sanctity ;

Can hear the monitory clock 45
Sound o'er the lake with gentle shock

At evening, when the ground beneath
Is ruffled o'er with cells of death ;

Where happy generations lie,
Here tutored for eternity. 50

VI.

Lives there a man whose sole delights
Are trivial pomp and city noise,

Hardening a heart that loathes or slights
What every natural heart enjoys ?

Who never caught a noon-tide dream 55
From murmur of a running stream ;

Could strip, for aught the prospect yields
To him, their verdure from the fields ;

And take the radiance from the clouds
In which the sun his setting shrouds. 60

VII.

A soul so pitiably forlorn,
 If such do on this earth abide,
 May season apathy with scorn,
 May turn indifference to pride ;
 And still be not unblest—compared 65
 With him who grovels, self-debarred
 From all that lies within the scope
 Of holy faith and Christian hope ;
 Or, shipwrecked, kindles on the coast
 False fires, that others may be lost. 70

VIII.

Alas ! that such perverted zeal
 Should spread on Britain's favoured
 ground !
 That public order, private weal,
 Should e'er have felt or feared a wound
 From champions of the desperate law 75
 Which from their own blind hearts they
 draw ;
 Who tempt their reason to deny
 God, whom their passions dare defy,
 And boast that they alone are free
 Who reach this dire extremity ! 80

IX.

But turn we from these "bold bad"
 men ;
 The way, mild Lady ! that hath led Down to their "dark opprobrious den,"
 Is all too rough for Thee to tread. 85
 Softly as morning vapours glide
 Down Rydal-cove from Fairfield's side,
 Should move the tenor of his song
 Who means to charity no wrong ;
 Whose offering gladly would accord With this day's work, in thought and word. 90

X.

Heaven prosper it ! may peace, and love,
 And hope, and consolation, fall,
 Through its meek influence, from above,
 And penetrate the hearts of all ;
 All who, around the hallowed Fane, 95
 Shall sojourn in this fair domain ;
 Grateful to Thee, while service pure,
 And ancient ordinance, shall endure,
 For opportunity bestowed 99
 To kneel together, and adore their God !

XIII.

ON THE SAME OCCASION.

Oh ! gather whencesoe'er ye safely may
 The help which slackening Piety requires ;
 Nor deem that he perforce must go astray
 Who treads upon the footmarks of his sies.

Our churches, invariably perhaps, stand east and west, but why is by few persons exactly known ; nor, that the degree of deviation from due east often noticeable in the ancient ones was determined, in each particular case, by the point in the horizon, at which the sun rose upon the day of the saint to whom the church was dedicated. These observances of our ancestors, and the causes of them, are the subject of the following stanzas.

[Composed 1823.—Published 1827.]

WHEN in the antique age of bow and spear
 And feudal rapine clothed with iron mail,
 Came ministers of peace, intent to rear
 The Mother Church in yon sequestered
 vale ;

Then, to her Patron Saint a previous rite 5 Resounded with deep swell and solemn
 close,

Through unremitting vigils of the night,
 Till from his couch the wished-for Sun uprose.

He rose, and straight—as by divine command,

They, who had waited for that sign to trace Their work's foundation, gave with careful hand 11

To the high altar its determined place ;

Mindful of Him Who in the Orient born
 There lived, and on the cross His life resigned,

And Who, from out the regions of the
 morn, 15

Issuing in pomp, shall come to judge mankind.

So taught their creed ;—nor failed the eastern sky,

'Mid these more awful feelings, to infuse
 The sweet and natural hopes that shall not die,

Long as the sun his gladsome course
 renews. 20

For us hath such prelusive vigil ceased ;
 Yet still we plant, like men of elder days
 Our Christian altar faithful to the east, Whence the tall window drinks the morning rays ;

That obvious emblem giving to the eye 25
 Of meek devotion, which erewhile it gave,
 That symbol of the day-spring from on high,
 Triumphant o'er the darkness of the grave.

XIV.

THE HORN OF EGREMONT CASTLE.

ERE the Brothers through the gateway Issued forth with old and young,
 To the Horn Sir Eustace pointed
 Which for ages there had hung.
 Horn it was which none could sound, 5
 No one upon living ground,
 Save He who came as rightful Heir
 To Egremont's Domains and Castle fair.

Heirs from times of earliest record
 Had the House of Lucie born, 10
 Who of right had held the Lordship Claimed by proof upon the Horn :
 Each at the appointed hour
 Tried the Horn,—it owned his power ;
 He was acknowledged : and the blast, 15 Which good Sir Eustace sounded, was the last.

With his lance Sir Eustace pointed,
 And to Hubert thus said he,
 "What I speak this Horn shall witness
 For thy better memory. 20
 Hear, then, and neglect me not !
 At this time, and on this spot,
 The words are uttered from my heart,
 As my last earnest prayer ere we depart.

"On good service we are going 25
 Life to risk by sea and land,
 In which course if Christ our Saviour
 Do my sinful soul demand,
 Hither come thou back straightway,
 Hubert, if alive that day ; 30 Return, and sound the Horn, that we May have a living House still left in thee !"

"Fear not," quickly answered Hubert ;
 "As I am thy Father's son,

What thou askest, noble Brother, 35
 With God's favour shall be done."
 So were both right well content :
 Forth they from the Castle went,
 And at the head of their Array
 To Palestine the Brothers took their way.

Side by side they fought (the Lucies 41 Were a line for valour famed)
 And where'er their strokes alighted,
 There the Saracens were tamed.
 Whence, then, could it come—the
 thought— 45

By what evil spirit brought ?
 Oh ! can a brave Man wish to take His Brother's life, for Lands' and Castle's sake ?

"Sir !" the Ruffians said to Hubert,
 "Deep he lies in Jordan flood." 50
 Stricken by this ill assurance,
 Pale and trembling Hubert stood.
 "Take your earnings."—Oh ! that I Could have seen my Brother die !
 It was a pang that vexed him then ; 55
 And oft returned, again, and yet again.

Months passed on, and no Sir Eustace !
 Nor of him were tidings heard ;
 Wherefore, bold as day, the Murderer
 Back again to England steered. 60
 To his Castle Hubert sped ;
 Nothing has he now to dread.
 But silent and by stealth he came,
 And at an hour which nobody could name.

None could tell if it werè night-time, 65
 Night or day, at even or morn ;
 No one's eye had seen him enter,
 No one's ear had heard the Horn.
 But bold Hubert lives in glee :
 Months and years went smilingly ; 70
 With plenty was his table spread ;
 And bright the Lady is who shares his bed.

Likewise he had sons and daughters ;
 And, as good men do, he sate
 At his board by these surrounded, 75
 Flourishing in fair estate.
 And while thus in open day
 Once he sate, as old books say,
 A blast was uttered from the Horn,
 Where by the Castle-gate it hung forlorn.

'Tis the breath of good Sir Eustace ! 81
 He is come to claim his right :
 Ancient castle, woods, and mountains
 Hear the challenge with delight.
 Hubert ! though the blast be blown 85
 He is helpless and alone :
 Thou hast a dungeon, speak the word !
 And there he may be lodged, and thou be Lord.

Speak !—astounded Hubert cannot ;
 And, if power to speak he had, 90
 All are daunted, all the household
 Smitten to the heart, and sad.
 'Tis Sir Eustace ; if it be Living man, it must be he !
 Thus Hubert thought in his dismay, 95
 And by a postern-gate he slunk away.

Long, and long was he unheard of :
 To his Brother then he came,
 Made confession, asked forgiveness,
 Asked it by a brother's name, 100
 And by all the saints in heaven ;
 And of Eustace was forgiven :
 Then in a convent went to hide
 His melancholy head, and there he died.

But Sir Eustace, whom good angels 105
 Had preserved from murderers' hands,
 And from Pagan chains had rescued,
 Lived with honour on his lands.
 Sons he had, saw sons of theirs :
 And through ages, heirs of heirs, 110
 A long posterity renowned, Sounded the Horn which they alone could sound.

XV.

GOODY BLAKE AND HARRY GILL.

A TRUE STORY.

OH ! what's the matter ? what's the matter ?
 What is 't that ails young Harry Gill ?
 That evermore his teeth they chatter,
 Chatter, chatter, chatter still !
 Of waistcoats Harry has no lack, 5
 Good duffle grey, and flannel fine ;
 He has a blanket on his back,
 And coats enough to smother nine.

In March, December, and in July,
 'Tis all the same with Harry Gill ; 10
 The neighbours tell, and tell you truly,
 His teeth they chatter, chatter still.
 At night, at morning, and at noon,
 'Tis all the same with Harry Gill ;
 Beneath the sun, beneath the moon, 15
 His teeth they chatter, chatter still !
 Young Harry was a lusty drover,
 And who so stout of limb as he ?
 His cheeks were red as ruddy clover ;
 His voice was like the voice of three. 20
 Old Goody Blake was old and poor ;
 Ill fed she was, and thinly clad ;
 And any man who passed her door
 Might see how poor a hut she had.
 All day she spun in her poor dwelling : 25
 And then her three hours' work at night,
 Alas ! 'twas hardly worth the telling,
 It would not pay for candle-light.
 Remote from sheltered village-green,
 On a hill's northern side she dwelt, 30
 Where from sea-blasts the hawthorns lean,
 And hoary dews are slow to melt.
 By the same fire to boil their pottage,
 Two poor old Dames, as I have known,
 Will often live in one small cottage ; 35
 But she, poor Woman ! housed alone.
 'Twas well enough, when summer came,
 The long, warm, lightsome summer-day,
 Then at her door the canty Dame
 Would sit, as any linnnet, gay. 40
 But when the ice our streams did fetter,
 Oh then how her old bones would shake !
 You would have said, if you had met her,
 'Twas a hard time for Goody Blake.
 Her evenings then were dull and dead : 45
 Sad case it was, as you may think,
 For very cold to go to bed ;
 And then for cold not sleep a wink.
 O joy for her ! when'er in winter
 The winds at night had made a rout ; 50
 And scattered many a lusty splinter
 And many a rotten bough about.
 Yet never had she, well or sick,
 As every man who knew her says,
 A pile beforehand, turf or stick, 55
 Enough to warm her for three days.

Now, when the frost was past enduring,
And made her poor old bones to ache,
Could any thing be more alluring
Than an old hedge to Goody Blake? 60
And, now and then, it must be said,
When her old bones were cold and chill,
She left her fire, or left her bed,
To seek the hedge of Harry Gill.

Now Harry he had long suspected 65
This trespass of old Goody Blake;
And vowed that she should be detected—
That he on her would vengeance take.
And oft from his warm fire he'd go,
And to the fields his road would take; 70
And there, at night, in frost and snow,
He watched to seize old Goody Blake.

And once, behind a rick of barley,
Thus looking out did Harry stand:
The moon was full and shining clearly, 75
And crisp with frost the stubble land.
—He hears a noise—he's all awake—
Again?—on tip-toe down the hill
He softly creeps—'tis Goody Blake;
She's at the hedge of Harry Gill! 80

Right glad was he when he beheld her:
Stick after stick did Goody pull:
He stood behind a bush of elder,
Till she had filled her apron full.
When with her load she turned about, 85
The by-way back again to take;
He started forward, with a shout,
And sprang upon poor Goody Blake.

And fiercely by the arm he took her,
And by the arm he held her fast, 90
And fiercely by the arm he shook her,
And cried, "I've caught you then at last!"

Then Goody, who had nothing said,
Her bundle from her lap let fall;
And, kneeling on the sticks, she prayed 95
To God that is the judge of all.

She prayed, her withered hand uprearing,
While Harry held her by the arm—
"God! who art never out of hearing,
O may he never more be warm!" 100
The cold, cold moon above her head,
Thus on her knees did Goody pray;
Young Harry heard what she had said:
And icy cold he turned away.

He went complaining all the morrow 105
That he was cold and very chill:
His face was gloom, his heart was sorrow,
Alas! that day for Harry Gill!
That day he wore a riding-coat,
But not a whit the warmer he: 110
Another was on Thursday brought,
And ere the Sabbath he had three.

'Twas all in vain, a useless matter,
And blankets were about him pinned;
Yet still his jaws and teeth they clatter,
Like a loose casement in the wind. 116
And Harry's flesh it fell away;
And all who see him say, 'tis plain,
That, live as long as live he may,
He never will be warm again. 120

No word to any man he utters,
A-bed or up, to young or old;
But ever to himself he mutters,
"Poor Harry Gill is very cold."
A-bed or up, by night or day; 125
His teeth they chatter, chatter still.
Now think, ye farmers all, I pray,
Of Goody Blake and Harry Gill!

PRELUDE.

PREFIXED TO THE VOLUME ENTITLED
"POEMS CHIEFLY OF EARLY AND LATE YEARS."

[Composed March, 1842.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

IN desultory walk through orchard grounds,
Or some deep chestnut grove, oft have I paused
The while a Thrush, urged rather than restrained
By gusts of vernal storm, attuned his
song
To his own genial instincts; and was
heard 5
(Though not without some plaintive tones
between)
To utter, above showers of blossom swept From tossing boughs, the promise of a calm,
Which the unsheltered traveller might receive

With thankful spirit. The descant, and
the wind 10
That seemed to play with it in love or
scorn,
Encouraged and endeared the strain of
words
That haply flowed from me, by fits of silence
Impelled to livelier pace. But now, my Book!
Charged with those lays, and others of like mood, 15
Or loftier pitch if higher rose the theme,
Go, single—yet aspiring to be joined With thy Forerunners that through many a year
Have faithfully prepared each other's
way—
Go forth upon a mission best fulfilled 20
When and wherever, in this changeful
world,
Power hath been given to please for higher ends
Than pleasure only; gladdening to prepare
For wholesome sadness, troubling to refine,
Calming to raise; and, by a sapient Art Diffused through all the mysteries of our
Being, 26
Softening the toils and pains that have not ceased
To cast their shadows on our mother Earth Since the primeval doom. Such is the
grace
Which, though unsued for, fails not to descend 30
With heavenly inspiration; such the aim That Reason dictates; and, as even the wish
Has virtue in it, why should hope to me
Be wanting that sometimes, where fancied ills
Harass the mind and strip from off the
bowers 35
Of private life their natural pleasantness,
A Voice—devoted to the love whose seeds Are sown in every human breast, to beauty
Lodged within compass of the humblest
sight,

To cheerful intercourse with wood and
field, 40
And sympathy with man's substantial griefs—
Will not be heard in vain? And in those days
When unforeseen distress spreads far and
wide
Among a People mournfully cast down,
Or into anger roused by venal words 45
In recklessness flung out to overturn
The judgment, and divert the general
heart
From mutual good—some strain of thine, my Book!
Caught at propitious intervals, may win
Listeners who not unwillingly admit 50
Kindly emotion tending to console
And reconcile; and both with young and old
Exalt the sense of thoughtful gratitude
For benefits that still survive, by faith
In progress, under laws divine, maintained. 55

TO A CHILD.

WRITTEN IN HER ALBUM.

[Composed 1834.—Published 1835.]

SMALL service is true service while it lasts:
Of humblest Friends, bright Creature!
scorn not one:
The Daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dew-drop from the Sun.

LINES

WRITTEN IN THE ALBUM OF THE COUNTESS OF LONSDALE.

[Composed November 5, 1834.—Published 1835.]

LADY! a Pen (perhaps with thy regard, Among the Favoured, favoured not the least)
Left, 'mid the Records of this Book inscribed,

Deliberate traces, registers of thought
 And feeling, suited to the place and time
 That gave them birth:—months passed, and still this hand, 6
 That had not been too timid to imprint Words which the virtues of thy Lord
 inspired,
 Was yet not bold enough to write of
 Thee.
 And why that scrupulous reserve? In sooth 10
 The blameless cause lay in the Theme
 itself.
 Flowers are there many that delight to strive
 With the sharp wind, and seem to court
 the shower,
 Yet are by nature careless of the sun
 Whether he shine on them or not; and some, 15
 Where'er he moves along the unclouded
 sky,
 Turn a broad front full on his flattering
 beams:
 Others do rather from their notice shrink,
 Loving the dewy shade,—a humble band,
 Modest and sweet, a progeny of earth, 20
 Congenial with thy mind and character,
 High-born Augusta!
 Witness, Towers and Groves!
 And Thou, wild Stream, that giv'st the honoured name
 Of Lowther to this ancient Line, bear witness
 From thy most secret haunts; and ye Parterres, 25
 Which She is pleased and proud to call her own,
 Witness how oft upon my noble Friend
Mute offerings, tribute from an inward
 sense
 Of admiration and respectful love,
 Have waited—till the affections could no
 more 30
 Endure that silence, and broke out in
 song,
 Snatches of music taken up and dropt
 Like those self-solacing, those under,
 notes
 Trilled by the redbreast, when autumnal
 leaves

Are thin upon the bough. Mine, only
 mine, 35
 The pleasure was, and no one heard the
 praise,
 Checked, in the moment of its issue, checked
 And reprehended, by a fancied blush
 From the pure qualities that called it
 forth.

Thus Virtue lives debarred from Virtue's meed; 40
 Thus, Lady, is retiredness a veil
 That, while it only spreads a softening charm
 O'er features looked at by discerning
 eyes,
 Hides half their beauty from the common
 gaze;
 And thus, even on the exposed and breezy hill 45
 Of lofty station, female goodness walks,
 When side by side with lunar gentleness,
 As in a cloister. Yet the grateful Poor (Such the immunities of low estate,
 Plain Nature's enviable privilege, 50
 Her sacred recompense for many wants) Open their hearts before Thee, pouring
 out
 All that they think and feel, with tears
 of joy;
 And benedictions not unheard in heaven:
 And friend in the ear of friend, where speech is free 55
 To follow truth, is eloquent as they.

Then let the Book receive in these prompt lines
 A just memorial; and thine eyes consent
 To read that they, who mark thy course,
 behold
 A life declining with the golden light 60
 Of summer, in the season of sere leaves;
 See cheerfulness undamped by stealing
 Time;
 See studied kindness flow with easy
 stream,
 Illustrated with inborn courtesy;
 And an habitual disregard of self 65
 Balanced by vigilance for others' weal.

And shall the Verse not tell of lighter
 -gifts
 With these ennobling attributes con-
 -joined
 And blended, in peculiar harmony,
 By Youth's surviving spirit? What agile
 grace! 70
 A nymph-like liberty, in nymph-like
 form,
 Beheld with wonder; whether floor or
 path
 Thou tread; or sweep—borne on the managed steed—
 Fleet as the shadows, over down or field, Driven by strong winds at play among the clouds. 75

Yet one word more—one farewell word—a wish
 Which came, but it has passed into a
 prayer—
 That, as thy sun in brightness is de-clining,
 So—at an hour yet distant for their sakes Whose tender love, here faltering on the
 way 80
 Of a diviner love, will be forgiven—
 So may it set in peace, to rise again
 For everlasting glory won by faith.

GRACE DARLING.

[Composed 1843.—Published 1845.]

AMONG the dwellers in the silent fields
 The natural heart is touched, and public
 way
 And crowded street resound with ballad
 strains,
 Inspired by ONE whose very name be-speaks
 Favour divine, exalting human love; 5 Whom, since her birth on bleak Northumbria's coast,
 Known unto few but prized as far as
 known,
 A single Act endears to high and low
 Through the whole land—to Manhood, moved in spite
 Of the world's freezing cares—to generous
 Youth— 10

To Infancy, that lisps her praise—to Age Whose eye reflects it, glistening through a tear
 Of tremulous admiration. Such true fame
 Awaits her now; but, verily, good deeds
 Do no imperishable record find 15
 Save in the rolls of heaven, where hers
 may live
 A theme for angels, when they celebrate
 The high-souled virtues which forgetful
 earth
 Has witnessed. Oh! that winds and waves could speak
 Of things which their united power called
 forth 20
 From the pure depths of her humanity!
 A Maiden gentle, yet, at duty's call,
 Firm and unflinching, as the Lighthouse
 reared
 On the Island-rock, her lonely dwelling-
 -place;
 Or like the invincible Rock itself that braves, 25
 Age after age, the hostile elements,
 As when it guarded holy Cuthbert's cell.

All night the storm had raged, nor ceased, nor paused,
 When, as day broke, the Maid, through
 misty air,
 Espies far off a Wreck, amid the surf, 30
 Beating on one of those disastrous isles—
 Half of a Vessel, half—no more; the rest
 Had vanished, swallowed up with all that there
 Had for the common safety striven in vain, Or thither thronged for refuge. With quick glance 35
 Daughter and Sire through optic-glass discern,
 Clinging about the remnant of this Ship,
 Creatures—how precious in the Maiden's
 sight!
 For whom, belike, the old Man grieves still more Than for their fellow-sufferers engulfed
 Where every parting agony is hushed, 41
 And hope and fear mix not in further strife.
 "But courage, Father! let us out to sea—
 A few may yet be saved." The Daughter's
 words,

Her earnest tone, and look beaming with
faith, 45
Dispel the Father's doubts: nor do they lack

The noble-minded Mother's helping hand
To launch the boat; and with her blessing
cheered,

And inwardly sustained by silent prayer,
Together they put forth, Father and Child!
Each grasps an oar, and struggling on they go— 51

Rivals in effort; and, alike intent Here to elude and there surmount, they watch

The billows lengthening, mutually crossed And shattered, and re-gathering their
might; 55

As if the tumult, by the Almighty's will Were, in the conscious sea, roused and prolonged

That woman's fortitude—so tried, so proved—

May brighten more and more!

True to the mark,

They stem the current of that perilous gorge, 60

Their arms still strengthening with the strengthening heart,

Though danger, as the Wreck is neared, becomes

More imminent. Not unseen do they approach;

And rapture, with varieties of fear
Incessantly conflicting, thrills the frames

Of those who, in that dauntless energy, 66
Foretaste deliverance; but the least perturbed

Can scarcely trust his eyes, when he perceives

That of the pair—tossed on the waves to bring

Hope to the hopeless, to the dying, life—
One is a Woman, a poor earthly sister, 71

Or, be the Visitant other than she seems,
A guardian Spirit sent from pitying

Heaven,
In woman's shape. But why prolong the
tale,

Casting weak words amid a host of
thoughts 75

Armed to repel them? Every hazard faced

And difficulty mastered, with resolve That no one breathing should be left to perish,

This last remainder of the crew are all Placed in the little boat, then o'er the
deep 80

Are safely borne, landed upon the beach,
And, in fulfilment of God's mercy, lodged Within the sheltering Lighthouse.— Shout, ye Waves!

Send forth a song of triumph. Waves and Winds,

Exult in this deliverance wrought through
faith 85

In Him whose Providence your rage hath served!

Ye screaming Sea-mews, in the concert
join!

And would that some immortal Voice—a
Voice

Fitly attuned to all that gratitude Breathes out from floor or couch, through pallid lips 90

Of the survivors—to the clouds might
bear—

Blended with praise of that parental love, Beneath whose watchful eye the Maiden
grew

Pious and pure, modest and yet so brave, Though young so wise, though meek so resolute— 95

Might carry to the clouds and to the
stars,

Yea, to celestial Choirs, GRACE DARLING'S
name!

XX.

THE RUSSIAN FUGITIVE.

PART I.

[Composed 1830.—Published 1835.]

ENOUGH of rose-bud lips, and eyes
Like harebells bathed in dew,
Of cheek that with carnation vies,
And veins of violet hue;
Earth wants not beauty that may scorn 5
A likening to frail flowers;
Yea, to the stars, if they were born
For seasons and for hours.

- Through Moscow's gates, with gold un-barred,
Stepped One at dead of night, 10
Whom such high beauty could not guard
From meditated blight ;
By stealth she passed, and fled as fast
As doth the hunted fawn,
Nor stopped, till in the dappling east 15
Appeared unwelcome dawn.
- Seven days she lurked in brake and field,
Seven nights her course renewed,
Sustained by what her scrip might yield,
Or berries of the wood ; 20
At length, in darkness travelling on,
When lowly doors were shut,
'The haven of her hope she won,
Her Foster-mother's hut.
- "To put your love to dangerous proof 25
I come," said she, "from far ;
For I have left my Father's roof,
In terror of the Czar."
No answer did the Matron give,
No second look she cast, 30
But hung upon the Fugitive, Embracing and embraced.
- She led the Lady to a seat
Beside the glimmering fire,
Bathed duteously her wayworn feet, 35
Prevented each desire :—
The cricket chirped, the house-dog dozed,
And on that simple bed,
Where she in childhood had reposed,
Now rests her weary head. 40
- When she, whose couch had been the sod,
Whose curtain pine or thorn,
Had breathed a sigh of thanks to God,
Who comforts the forlorn ;
While over her the Matron bent 45
Sleep sealed her eyes, and stole Feeling from limbs with travel spent,
And trouble from the soul.
- Refreshed, the Wanderer rose at morn,
And soon again was dight 50
In those unworthy vestments worn
Through long and perilous flight ;
And "O beloved Nurse," she said,
"My thanks with silent tears
Have unto Heaven and You been paid : 55
Now listen to my fears !
- "Have you forgot?"—and here she smiled—
"The babbling flatteries
You lavished on me when a child
Disporting round your knees? 60
I was your lambkin, and your bird,
Your star, your gem, your flower ;
Light words, that were more lightly
heard
In many a cloudless hour !
- "The blossom you so fondly praised 65
Is come to bitter fruit ;
A mighty One upon me gazed ;
I spurned his lawless suit,
And must be hidden from his wrath :
You, Foster-father dear, 70
Will guide me in my forward path ;
I may not tarry here !
- "I cannot bring to utter woe
Your proved fidelity."—
"Dear child, sweet Mistress, say not so !
For you we both would die." 76
"Nay, nay, I come with semblance
feigned
And cheek embrowned by art ;
Yet, being inwardly unstained,
With courage will depart." 80
- "But whither would you, could you, flee!
A poor Man's counsel take ;
The Holy Virgin gives to me
A thought for your dear sake ;
Rest, shielded by our Lady's grace, 85
And soon shall you be led Forth to a safe abiding-place,
Where never foot doth tread."

PART II.

- THE dwelling of this faithful pair
In a straggling village stood, 90
For One who breathed unquiet air
A dangerous neighbourhood ;
But wide around lay forest ground
With thicket's rough and blind ;
And pine-trees made a heavy shade 95
Impervious to the wind.
- And there, sequestered from the sight,
Was spread a treacherous swamp,
On which the noonday sun shed light
As from a lonely lamp ; 100

And midway in the unsafe morass,
 A single Island rose
 Of firm dry ground, with healthful grass
 Adorned, and shady boughs.

The Woodman knew, for such the craft
 This Russian vassal plied, 106
 That never fowler's gun, nor shaft
 Of archer, there was tried ;
 A sanctuary seemed the spot
 From all intrusion free ; 110
 And there he planned an artful Cot
 For perfect secrecy.

With earnest pains unchecked by dread
 Of Power's far-stretching hand,
 The bold good Man his labour sped 115
 At nature's pure command ;
 Heart-soothed, and busy as a wren,
 While, in a hollow nook,
 She moulds her sight-eluding den
 Above a murmuring brook. 120

His task accomplished to his mind,
 The twain ere break of day
 Creep forth, and through the forest wind
 Their solitary way ;
 Few words they speak, nor dare to slack
 Their pace from mile to mile, 126
 Till they have crossed the quaking marsh,
 And reached the lonely Isle.

The sun above the pine-trees showed
 A bright and cheerful face ; 130
 And Ina looked for her abode,
 The promised hiding-place ;
 She sought in vain, the Woodman smiled ;
 No threshold could be seen,
 Nor roof, nor window ;—all seemed wild
 As it had ever been. 136

Advancing, you might guess an hour,
 The front with such nice care
 Is masked, "if house it be or bower,"
 But in they entered are ; 140
 As shaggy as were wall and roof
 With branches intertwined,
 So smooth was all within, air-proof,
 And delicately lined :

And hearth was there, and maple dish,
 And cups in seemly rows, 146
 And couch—all ready to a wish
 For nurture or repose ;

And Heaven doth to her virtue grant
 That there she may abide 150
 In solitude, with every want
 By cautious love supplied.

No queen before a shouting crowd
 Led on in bridal state,
 E'er struggled with a heart so proud, 155
 Entering her palace gate ;
 Rejoiced to bid the world farewell,
 No saintly anchoress
 E'er took possession of her cell
 With deeper thankfulness. 160

"Father of all, upon thy care
 And mercy am I thrown ;
 Be thou my safeguard!"—such her prayer
 When she was left alone,
 Kneeling amid the wilderness 165
 When joy had passed away,
 And smiles, fond efforts of distress
 To hide what they betray !

The prayer is heard, the Saints have
 seen,
 Diffused through form and face, 170
 Resolves devotedly serene ;
 That monumental grace
 Of Faith, which doth all passions tame
 That Reason should control ;
 And shows in the untrembling frame 175
 A statue of the soul.

PART III.

'Tis sung in ancient minstrelsy
 That Phœbus wont to wear
 The leaves of any pleasant tree
 Around his golden hair ; 180
 Till Daphne, desperate with pursuit
 Of his imperious love,
 At her own prayer transformed, took root,
 A laurel in the grove.

Then did the Penitent adorn 185
 His brow with laurel green ;
 And 'mid his bright locks never shorn
 No meaner leaf was seen ;
 And poets sage, through every age,
 About their temples wound 190
 The bay ; and conquerors thanked the Gods,
 With laurel chaplets crowned.

Into the mists of fabling Time
 So far runs back the praise
 Of Beauty, that disdains to climb 195
 Along forbidden ways;
 That scorns temptation; power defies
 Where mutual love is not;
 And to the tomb for rescue flies
 When life would be a blot. 200

To this fair Votress a fate
 More mild doth Heaven ordain
 Upon her Island desolate;
 And words, not breathed in vain,
 Might tell what intercourse she found,
 Her silence to endear; 206
 What birds she tamed, what flowers the
 ground
 Sent forth her peace to cheer.

To one mute Presence, above all,
 Her soothed affections clung, 210
 A picture on the cabin wall
 By Russian usage hung—
 The Mother-maid, whose countenance
 bright
 With love abridged the day;
 And, communed with by taper-light, 215
 Chased spectral fears away.

And oft, as either Guardian came,
 The joy in that retreat
 Might any common friendship shame,
 So high their hearts would beat; 220
 And to the lone Recluse, whate'er
 They brought, each visiting
 Was like the crowding of the year
 With a new burst of spring.

But when she of her Parents thought, 225
 The pang was hard to bear;
 And, if with all things not enwrought,
 That trouble still is near.
 Before her flight she had not dared
 Their constancy to prove, 230
 Too much the heroic Daughter feared
 The weakness of their love.

Dark is the past to them, and dark
 The future still must be,
 Till pitying Saints conduct her bark 235
 Into a safer sea—
 Or gentle Nature close her eyes,
 And set her Spirit free

From the altar of this sacrifice,
 In vestal purity. 240

Yet, when above the forest-glooms
 The white swans southward passed,
 High as the pitch of their swift plumes
 Her fancy rode the blast;
 And bore her toward the fields of France,
 Her Father's native land, 246
 To mingle in the rustic dance,
 The happiest of the band!

Of those beloved fields she oft
 Had heard her Father tell 250
 In phrase that now with echoes soft Haunted her lonely cell;
 She saw the hereditary bowers,
 She heard the ancestral stream;
 The Kremlin and its haughty towers 255
 Forgotten like a dream!

PART IV.

THE ever-changing Moon had traced
 Twelve times her monthly round,
 When through the unfrequented Waste
 Was heard a startling sound; 260
 A shout thrice sent from one who chased
 At speed a wounded deer,
 Bounding through branches interlaced,
 And where the wood was clear.

The fainting creature took the marsh, 265
 And toward the Island fled, While plovers screamed with tumult harsh Above his antlered head;
 This, Ina saw; and, pale with fear,
 Shrunk to her citadel; 270
 The desperate deer rushed on, and near
 The tangled covert fell.

Across the marsh, the game in view,
 The Hunter followed fast,
 Nor paused, till o'er the stag he blew 275
 A death-proclaiming blast;
 Then, resting on her upright mind,
 Came forth the Maid—"In me
 Behold," she said, "a stricken Hind Pursued by destiny! 280

"From your department, Sir! I deem
 That you have worn a sword,
 And will not hold in light esteem
 A suffering woman's word;

- There is my covert, there perchance 285
 I might have lain concealed,
 My fortunes hid, my countenance
 Not even to you revealed.
- “Tears might be shed, and I might pray,
 Crouching and terrified, 290
 That what has been unveiled to-day,
 You would in mystery hide;
 But I will not defile with dust
 The knee that bends to adore
 The God in heaven;—attend, be just; 295
 This ask I, and no more!
- “I speak not of the winter’s cold
 For summer’s heat exchanged,
 While I have lodged in this rough hold,
 From social life estranged; 300
 Nor yet of trouble and alarms:
 High Heaven is my defence;
 And every season has soft arms
 For injured Innocence.
- “From Moscow to the Wilderness 305
 It was my choice to come,
 Lest virtue should be harbourless,
 And honour want a home;
 And happy were I, if the Czar
 Retain his lawless will, 310
 To end life here like this poor deer,
 Or a lamb on a green hill.”
- “Are you the Maid,” the Stranger cried,
 “From Gallic parents sprung, 315
 Whose vanishing was rumoured wide,
 Sad theme for every tongue;
 Who foiled an Emperor’s eager quest?
 You, Lady, forced to wear
 These rude habiliments, and rest
 Your head in this dark lair!” 320
- But wonder, pity, soon were quelled;
 And in her face and mien
 The soul’s pure brightness he beheld Without a veil between:
 He loved, he hoped,—a holy flame 325
 Kindled ’mid rapturous tears;
 The passion of a moment came
 As on the wings of years.
- “Such bounty is no gift of chance,” Exclaimed he: “righteous Heaven, 330
- Preparing your deliverance,
 To me the charge hath given.
 The Czar full oft in words and deeds
 Is stormy and self-willed;
 But, when the Lady Catherine pleads, 335
 His violence is stilled.
- “Leave open to my wish the course,
 And I to her will go;
 From that humane and heavenly source
 Good, only good, can flow.” 340
 Faint sanction given, the Cavalier
 Was eager to depart,
 Though question followed question, dear
 To the Maiden’s filial heart.
- Light was his step,—his hopes, more
 light, 345
 Kept pace with his desires;
 And the fifth morning gave him sight
 Of Moscow’s glittering spires.
 He sued:—heart-smitten by the wrong,
 To the lorn Fugitive 350
 The Emperor sent a pledge as strong As sovereign power could give.
- O more than mighty change! If e’er Amazement rose to pain,
 And joy’s excess produced a fear 355
 Of something void and vain;
 ’Twas when the Parents, who had mourned
 So long the lost as dead,
 Beheld their only Child returned
 The household floor to tread. 360
- Soon gratitude gave way to love
 Within the Maiden’s breast;
 Delivered and Deliverer move
 In bridal garments drest;
 Meek Catherine had her own reward; 365
 The Czar bestowed a dower;
 And universal Moscow shared
 The triumph of that hour.
- Flowers strewed the ground; the nuptial feast
 Was held with costly state; 370
 And there, ’mid many a noble guest,
 The Foster-parents sate;
 Encouraged by the imperial eye,
 They shrank not into shade;
 Great was their bliss, the honour high 375
 To them and nature paid!

INSCRIPTIONS.

I.

IN THE GROUNDS OF COLEORTON, THE SEAT OF SIR GEORGE BEAUMONT, BART., LEICESTERSHIRE.

[Composed 1808.—Published 1815.]

THE embowering rose, the acacia, and the
pine,

Will not unwillingly their place resign ;
If but the Cedar thrive that near them
stands,

Planted by Beaumont's and by Wordsworth's hands.

One wooed the silent Art with studious pains: 5

These groves have heard the Other's pensive strains ;

Devoted thus, their spirits did unite
By interchange of knowledge and delight.
May Nature's kindest powers sustain
the Tree,

And Love protect it from all injury ! 10
And when its potent branches, wide out-
thrown,

Darken the brow of this memorial Stone,
Here may some Painter sit in future days,
Some future Poet meditate his lays ; 14
Not mindless of that distant age renowned
When Inspiration hovered o'er this ground,
The haunt of him who sang how spear and
shield

In civil conflict met on Bosworth-field ;
And of that famous Youth, full soon removed

From earth, perhaps by Shakespeare's self approved, 20

Fletcher's Associate, Jonson's Friend beloved.

II.

IN A GARDEN OF THE SAME.

[Composed 1811 (?).—Published 1815.]

OFF is the medal faithful to its trust
When temples, columns, towers, are laid in dust ;

And 'tis a common ordinance of fate
That things obscure and small outlive the great :

Hence, when yon mansion and the flowery trim 5

Of this fair garden, and its alleys dim,
And all its stately trees, are passed away,
This little Niche, unconscious of decay, Perchance may still survive. And be it
known

That it was scooped within the living
stone,— 10

Not by the sluggish and ungrateful pains
Of labourer plodding for his daily gains,
But by an industry that wrought in love ;
With help from female hands, that proudly strove

To aid the work, what time these walks and bowers 15

Were shaped to cheer dark winter's lonely hours.

III.

WRITTEN AT THE REQUEST OF SIR GEORGE BEAUMONT, BART., AND IN HIS NAME, FOR AN URN, PLACED BY HIM AT THE TERMINATION OF A NEWLY-PLANTED AVENUE, IN THE SAME GROUNDS.

[Composed November, 1811.—Published 1815.]

YE Lime-trees, ranged before this hallowed Urn,

Shoot forth with lively power at Spring's
return ;

And be not slow a stately growth to rear
Of pillars, branching off from year to year, Till they have learned to frame a dark-some aisle ;— 5

That may recall to mind that awful Pile Where Reynolds, 'mid our country's noblest dead,

In the last sanctity of fame is laid.

—There, though by right the excelling Painter sleep
 Where Death and Glory a joint sabbath
 keep, 10
 Yet not the less his Spirit would hold dear Self-hidden praise, and Friendship's private tear:
 Hence, on my patrimonial grounds, have I Raised this frail tribute to his memory;
 From youth a zealous follower of the Art
 That he professed; attached to him in
 heart; 16
 Admiring, loving, and with grief and pride Feeling what England lost when Reynolds died.

IV.

FOR A SEAT IN THE GROVES OF COLEORTON.

[Composed November 19, 1811.—Published 1815.] BENEATH yon eastern ridge, the craggy
 bound,
 Rugged and high, of Charnwood's forest
 ground,
 Stand yet, but, Stranger! hidden from thy view,
 The ivied Ruins of forlorn GRACE DIEU;
 Erst a religious House, which day and night
 With hymns resounded, and the chanted
 rite: 6
 And when those rites had ceased, the Spot gave birth
 To honourable Men of various worth:
 There, on the margin of a streamlet wild,
 Did Francis Beaumont sport, an eager
 child; 10
 There, under shadow of the neighbouring
 rocks,
 Sang youthful tales of shepherds and their flocks;
 Unconscious prelude to heroic themes,
 Heart-breaking tears, and melancholy
 dreams
 Of slighted love, and scorn, and jealous rage,
 With which his genius shook the buskined
 stage. 16
 Communities are lost, and Empires die,
 And things of holy use unhallowed lie;
 They perish;—but the Intellect can raise,
 From airy words alone, a Pile that ne'er decays. 20

V.

WRITTEN WITH A PENCIL UPON A STONE IN THE WALL OF THE HOUSE (AN OUT-HOUSE), ON THE ISLAND AT GRASMERE.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

RUDE is this Edifice, and Thou hast seen Buildings, albeit rude, that have maintained
 Proportions more harmonious, and approached
 To closer fellowship with ideal grace.
 But take it in good part:—alas! the poor
 Vitruvius of our village had no help 6
 From the great City; never, upon leaves
 Of red Morocco folio saw displayed,
 In long succession, pre-existing ghosts
 Of Beauties yet unborn—the rustic Lodge Antique, and Cottage with verandah
 graced, 11
 Nor lacking, for fit company, alcove,
 Green-house, shell-grot, and moss-lined hermitage.
 Thou see'st a homely Pile, yet to these
 walls
 The heifer comes in the snow-storm, and
 here 15
 The new-dropped lamb finds shelter from
 the wind.
 And hither does one Poet sometimes row
 His pinnace, a small vagrant barge, up-piled
 With plenteous store of heath and withered fern,
 (A lading which he with his sickle cuts, 20 Among the mountains) and beneath this
 roof
 He makes his summer couch, and here at noon
 Spreads out his limbs, while, yet unshorn,
 the Sheep,
 Panting beneath the burthen of their wool,
 Lie round him, even as if they were a part Of his own Household: nor, while from his bed 26
 He looks, through the open door-place, toward the lake
 And to the stirring breezes, does he want Creations lovely as the work of sleep—
 Fair sights, and visions of romantic joy!

VI.

WRITTEN WITH A SLATE PENCIL ON A STONE, ON THE SIDE OF THE MOUN-TAIN OF BLACK COMB.

[Composed 1813.—Published 1815.]

STAY, bold Adventurer; rest awhile thy limbs

On this commodious Seat! for much remains

Of hard ascent before thou reach the top Of this huge Eminence,—from blackness
named,

And, to far-travelled storms of sea and
land, 5

A favourite spot of tournament and war!
But thee may no such boisterous visitants

Molest; may gentle breezes fan thy brow;
And neither cloud conceal, nor misty air
Bedim, the grand terraqueous'spectacle, 10
From centre to circumference, unveiled!
Know, if thou grudge not to prolong thy
rest,

That on the summit whither thou art
bound,

A geographic Labourer pitched his tent,
With books supplied and instruments of
art, 15

To measure height and distance; lonely
task,

Week after week pursued!—To him was
given

Full many a glimpse (but sparingly bestowed

On timid man) of Nature's processes

Upon the exalted hills. He made report That once, while there he plied his studious
work 21

Within that canvass Dwelling, colours,
lines,

And the whole surface of the out-spread map,

Became invisible: for all around

Had darkness fallen—unthreatened, un-proclaimed— 25

As if the golden day itself had been

Extinguished in a moment; total gloom,
In which he sate alone, with unclosed
eyes,

Upon the blinded mountain's silent top!

VII.

WRITTEN WITH A SLATE PENCIL UPON A STONE, THE LARGEST OF A HEAP LYING NEAR A DESERTED QUARRY, UPON ONE OF THE ISLANDS AT RYDAL.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

STRANGER! this hillock of mis-shapen
stones

Is not a Ruin spared or made by time, Nor, as perchance thou rashly deem'st, the Cairn

Of some old British Chief: 'tis nothing
more

Than the rude embryo of a little Dome 5 Or Pleasure-house, once destined to be built

Among the birch-trees of this rocky isle.
But, as it chanced, Sir William having
learned

That from the shore a full-grown man might wade, 9

And make himself a freeman of this spot
At any hour he chose, the prudent Knight
Desisted, and the quarry and the mound
Are monuments of his unfinished task.

The block on which these lines are traced,
perhaps,

Was once selected as the corner-stone 15
Of that intended Pile, which would have
been

Some quaint odd plaything of elaborate
skill,

So that, I guess, the linnet and the thrush,

And other little builders who dwell here,
Had wondered at the work. But blame him not, 20

For old Sir William was a gentle Knight,
Bred in this vale, to which he appertained
With all his ancestry. Then peace to him,
And for the outrage which he had devised
Entire forgiveness!—But if thou art one 25
On fire with thy impatience to become An inmate of these mountains,—if, disturbed

By beautiful conceptions, thou hast hewn
Out of the quiet rock the elements

Of thy trim Mansion destined soon to blaze 30

In snow-white splendour,—think again ;
 and, taught
 By old Sir William and his quarry, leave Thy fragments to the bramble and the
 rose ;
 There let the vernal slow-worm sun him-
 self,
 And let the redbreast hop from stone to stone. 35

VIII.

[Composed 1830 (? 1831).—Published 1835.]

IN these fair vales hath many a Tree
 At Wordsworth's suit been spared ;
 And from the builder's hand this Stone,
 For some rude beauty of its own,
 Was rescued by the Bard : 5
 So let it rest ; and time will come
 When here the tender-hearted
 May heave a gentle sigh for him,
 As one of the departed.

IX.

[Composed 1826.—Published 1835.]

THE massy Ways, carried across these
 heights
 By Roman perseverance, are destroyed,
 Or hidden under ground, like sleeping worms.
 How venture then to hope that Time will spare
 This humble Walk? Yet on the mountain's side 5
 A POET'S hand first shaped it; and the
 steps
 Of that same Bard—repeated to and fro
 At morn, at noon, and under moonlight
 skies
 Through the vicissitudes of many a year—
 Forbade the weeds to creep o'er its grey
 line. 10
 No longer, scattering to the heedless winds
 The vocal raptures of fresh poesy,
 Shall he frequent these precincts; locked
 no more
 In earnest converse with belovèd Friends,
 Here will he gather stores of ready bliss, 15
 As from the beds and borders of a garden Choice flowers are gathered! But, if Power may spring

Out of a farewell yearning—favoured more Than kindred wishes mated suitably With vain regrets—the Exile would consign 20
 This Walk, his loved possession, to the
 care
 Of those pure Minds that reverence the Muse.

INSCRIPTIONS SUPPOSED TO BE FOUND IN AND NEAR A HERMIT'S CELL.

[This group (x.—xiv.) was composed 1818.—Published 1820.]

I.

HOPES what are they?—Beads of morning
 Strung on slender blades of grass ;
 Or a spider's web adorning
 In a strait and treacherous pass.
 What are fears but voices airy? 5
 Whispering harm where harm is not ;
 And deluding the unwary
 Till the fatal bolt is shot !
 What is glory?—in the socket
 See how dying tapers fare ! 10
 What is pride?—a whizzing rocket
 That would emulate a star.
 What is friendship?—do not trust her,
 Nor the vows which she has made ;
 Diamonds dart their brightest lustre 15
 From a palsy-shaken head.
 What is truth?—a staff rejected ;
 Duty?—an unwelcome clog ;
 Joy?—a moon by fits reflected
 In a swamp or watery bog ; 20
 Bright, as if through ether steering,
 To the Traveller's eye it shone :
 He hath hailed it re-appearing—
 And as quickly it is gone ;
 Such is Joy—as quickly hidden, 25
 Or mis-shapen to the sight,
 And by sullen weeds forbidden
 To resume its native light.
 What is youth?—a dancing billow,
 (Winds behind, and rocks before !) 30
 Age?—a drooping, tottering willow
 On a flat and lazy shore.

What is peace?—when pain is over,
And love ceases to rebel,
Let the last faint sigh discover 35
That precedes the passing-knell!

XI.

INSCRIBED UPON A ROCK.

II.

PAUSE, Traveller! whosoe'er thou be Whom chance may lead to this retreat,
Where silence yields reluctantly
Even to the fleecy straggler's bleat;
Give voice to what my hand shall trace, 5
And fear not lest an idle sound
Of words unsuited to the place
Disturb its solitude profound.

I saw this Rock, while vernal air
Blew softly o'er the russet heath, 10
Uphold a Monument as fair
As church or abbey furnisheth.

Unsullied did it meet the day,
Like marble, white, like ether, pure;
As if, beneath, some hero lay, 15
Honoured with costliest sepulture.

My fancy kindled as I gazed;
And, ever as the sun shone forth,
The flattered structure glistened, blazed,
And seemed the proudest thing on earth.

But frost had reared the gorgeous Pile 21
Unsound as those which Fortune builds—
To undermine with secret guile,
Sapped by the very beam that gilds.

And, while I gazed, with sudden shock 25
Fell the whole Fabric to the ground;
And naked left this dripping Rock,
With shapeless ruin spread around!

XII.

III.

HAST thou seen, with flash incessant,
Bubbles gliding under ice,
Bodied forth and evanescent,
No one knows by what device?

Such are thoughts!—A wind-swept meadow 5
Mimicking a troubled sea,
Such is life; and death a shadow
From the rock eternity!

XIII.

NEAR THE SPRING OF THE HERMITAGE

IV.

TROUBLED long with warring notions
Long impatient of Thy rod,
I resign my soul's emotions
Unto Thee, mysterious God!

What avails the kindly shelter 5
Yielded by this craggy rent,
If my spirit toss and welter
On the waves of discontent?

Parching Summer hath no warrant
To consume this crystal Well; 10
Rains, that make each rill a torrent,
Neither sully it nor swell.

Thus, dishonouring not her station,
Would my Life present to Thee,
Gracious God, the pure oblation 15
Of divine tranquillity!

NOR seldom, clad in radiant vest, Deceitfully goes forth the Morn;
Not seldom Evening in the west
Sinks smilingly forsworn.

The smoothest seas will sometimes prove,
To the confiding Bark, untrue; 6
And, if she trust the stars above
They can be treacherous too.

The umbrageous Oak, in pomp outspread,
Full oft, when storms the welkin rend, 10
Draws lightning down upon the head
It promised to defend.

But Thou art true, incarnate Lord,
Who didst vouchsafe for man to die;
Thy smile is sure, Thy plighted word 15
No change can falsify!

I bent before Thy gracious throne,
And asked for peace on suppliant knee;
And peace was given,—nor peace alone,
But faith sublimed to ecstasy! 20

FOR THE SPOT WHERE THE HERMITAGE STOOD ON ST. HERBERT'S ISLAND, DERWENT-WATER.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

IF thou in the dear love of some one
Friend
Hast been so happy that thou know'st what thoughts
Will sometimes in the happiness of love
Make the heart sink, then wilt thou reverence
This quiet spot; and, Stranger! not un-
moved 5
Wilt thou behold this shapeless heap of
stones,
The desolate ruins of St. Herbert's Cell.
Here stood his threshold; here was spread the roof
That sheltered him, a self-secluded Man,
After long exercise in social cares 10
And offices humane, intent to adore
The Deity, with undistracted mind,
And meditate on everlasting things,
In utter solitude.—But he had left A Fellow-labourer, whom the good Man
loved 15
As his own soul. And, when with eye
upraised
To heaven he knelt before the crucifix,

While o'er the lake the cataract of Lodore
Pealed to his orisons, and when he paced Along the beach of this small isle and
thought 20
Of his Companion, he would pray that both (Now that their earthly duties were fulfilled)
Might die in the same moment. Nor in
vain
So prayed he:—as our chronicles report, Though here the Hermit numbered his last day 25
Far from St. Cuthbert his beloved Friend, Those holy Men both died in the same
hour.

ON THE BANKS OF A ROCKY STREAM.

[Composed ?.—Published 1850.]

BEHOLD an emblem of our human mind Crowded with thoughts that need a settled
home,
Yet, like to eddying balls of foam Within this whirlpool, they each other
chase
Round and round, and neither find 5
An outlet nor a resting-place!
Stranger, if such disquietude be thine,
Fall on thy knees and sue for help divine.

SELECTIONS FROM CHAUCER.

I.

THE PRIORESS' TALE.

"Call up him who left half told
The story of Cambuscan bold."

In the following Poem no further deviation from the original has been made than was necessary for the fluent reading and instant understanding of the Author: so much, however, is the language altered since Chaucer's time, especially in pronunciation, that much was to be removed, and its place supplied with as little incongruity as possible. The ancient accent has been retained in a few conjunctions, as also and away, from a conviction that such sprinklings of antiquity would be admitted, by persons of taste, to have a graceful accordance with the subject. The fierce bigotry of the Prioress forms a fine background for her tender-hearted sympathies with the Mother and Child; and the mode in which the story is told amply atones for the extravagance of the miracle.

[Written 1801.—Published 1820.]

I.

"O LORD, our Lord! how wondrously," (quoth she)

"Thy name in this large world is spread
abroad!

For not alone by men of dignity
Thy worship is performed and precious
laud;

But by the mouths of children, gracious
God!

Thy goodness is set forth; they when they
lie

Upon the breast Thy name do glorify.

II.

"Wherefore in praise, the worthiest that
I may,

Jesu! of Thee, and the white Lily-flower Which did Thee bear, and is a Maid for
aye,

To tell a story I will use my power;
Not that I may increase her honour's
dower,

For she herself is honour, and the root
Of goodness, next her Son, our soul's best boot.

III.

"O Mother Maid! O Maid and Mother
free!

O bush unburnt! burning in Moses'
sight!

That down didst ravish from the Deity,
Through humbleness, the Spirit that did alight

Upon thy heart, whence, through that glory's might,

Conceived was the Father's sapience, 20
Help me to tell it in thy reverence!

IV.

"Lady! thy goodness, thy magnificence,
Thy virtue, and thy great humility,
Surpass all science and all utterance;

For sometimes, Lady! ere men pray to
thee

Thou goest before in thy benignity, 25

The light to us vouchsafing of thy prayer,
To be our guide unto thy Son so dear.

v.

“My knowledge is so weak, O blissful
Queen!
To tell abroad thy mighty worthiness, 30
That I the weight of it may not sustain;
But as a child of twelvemonths old or less,
That laboureth his language to express,
Even so fare I; and therefore, I thee pray, Guide thou my song which I of thee shall
say. 35

VI.

“There was in Asia, in a mighty town,
’Mong Christian folk, a street where Jews
might be,
Assigned to them and given them for their own
By a great Lord, for gain and usury,
Hateful to Christ and to His company; 40
And through this street who list might ride and wend;
Free was it, and unbarred at either end.

VII.

“A little school of Christian people stood Down at the farther end, in which there were
A nest of children come of Christian
blood, 45
That learned in that school from year to
year
Such sort of doctrine as men used there,
That is to say, to sing and read also,
As little children in their childhood do.

VIII.

“Among these children was a Widow’s
son, 50
A little scholar¹, scarcely seven years old,
Who day by day unto this school hath
gone,
And eke, when he the image did behold
Of Jesu’s Mother, as he had been told,
This Child was wont to kneel adown and
say 55
Ave Marie, as he goeth by the way.

IX.

“This Widow thus her little Son hath
taught
Our blissful Lady, Jesu’s Mother dear,
To worship aye, and he forgat it not;
For simple² infant hath a ready ear. 60
Sweet is the holiness of youth: and hence,
Calling to mind this matter when I may,
Saint Nicholas in my presence standeth
aye,
For he so young to Christ did reverence.

X.

“This little Child, while in the school he
sate 65
His Primer conning with an earnest
cheer,
The whilst the rest their anthem-book
repeat
The Alma Redemptoris did he hear;
And as he durst he drew him near and
near,
And harkened to the words and to the
note, 70
Till the first verse he learned it all by rote.

XI.

“This Latin knew he nothing what it
said,
For he too tender was of age to know;
But to his comrade he repaired, and
prayed
That he the meaning of this song would
show, 75
And unto him declare why men sing so;
This oftentimes, that he might be at ease,
This child did him beseech on his bare knees.

XII.

“His Schoolfellow, who elder was than he, Answered him thus:—‘This song, I have heard say, 80
Was fashioned for our blissful Lady free;
Her to salute, and also her to pray
To be our help upon our dying day:
If there is more in this, I know it not;
Song do I learn,—small grammar I have got.’ 85

² Sely (Chaucer); i.e. happy. Line 61 was interpolated by Wordsworth.—Ed.

XIII.

“And is this song fashioned in reverence
Of Jesu’s Mother?” said this Innocent;
‘Now, certès, I will use my diligence
To con it all ere Christmas-tide be spent;
Although I for my Primer shall be shent,
And shall be beaten three times in an
hour, 91
Our Lady I will praise with all my power.

XIV.

“His Schoolfellow, whom he had so be-
sought,
As they went homeward taught him
privily
And then he sang it well and fearlessly,
From word to word according to the
note: 96
Twice in a day it passèd through his
throat;
Homeward and schoolward whensoever he
went,
On Jesu’s Mother fixed was his intent.

XV.

“Through all the Jewry (this before said I) 100
This little Child, as he came to and fro,
Full merrily then would he sing and cry,
O Alma Redemptoris! high and low:
The sweetness of Christ’s Mother piercèd so
His heart, that her to praise, to her to pray, 105
He cannot stop his singing by the way.

XVI.

“The Serpent, Satan, our first foe, that hath
His wasp’s nest in Jew’s heart, upswelled
— ‘O woe,
O Hebrew people!’ said he in his wrath,
‘Is it an honest thing? Shall this be so?
That such a Boy where’er he lists shall go In your despite, and sing his hymns and saws,
Which is against the reverence of our laws!’

XVII.

“From that day forward have the Jews conspired 114
Out of the world this Innocent to chase;
And to this end a Homicide they hired,
That in an alley had a privy place,
And, as the Child ’gan to the school to
pace,
This cruel Jew him seized, and held him
fast
And cut his throat, and in a pit him
cast. 120

XVIII.

“I say that him into a pit they threw,
A loathsome pit, whence noisome scents
exhale;
O cursèd folk! away, ye Herods new!
What may your ill intentions you avail?
Murder will out; certès it will not fail;
Know, that the honour of high God may
spread, 126
The blood cries out on your accursèd deed.

XIX.

“O Martyr ’stablished in virginity!
Now may’st thou sing for aye before the
throne,
Following the Lamb celestial,” quoth
she, 130
“Of which the great Evangelist, Saint John,
In Patmos wrote, who saith of them that go
Before the Lamb singing continually,
That never fleshly woman they did know.

XX.

“Now this poor Widow waiteth all that
night 135
After her little Child, and he came not;
For which, by earliest glimpse of morning
light,
With face all pale with dread and busy
thought,
She at the School and elsewhere him hath
sought,
Until thus far she learned, that he had
been 140
In the Jews’ street, and there he last was seen.

XXI.

“With Mother’s pity in her breast enclosed
 She goeth, as she were half out of her mind,
 To every place wherein she hath supposed
 By likelihood her little Son to find; 145
 And ever on Christ’s Mother meek and kind
 She cried, till to the Jewry she was brought,
 And him among the accursèd Jews she sought.

XXII.

“She asketh, and she piteously deth pray
 To every Jew that dwelleth in that place
 To tell her if her child had passed that way; 151
 They all said—Nay; but Jesu of His grace Gave to her thought, that in a little space
 She for her Son in that same spot did cry
 Where he was cast into a pit hard by. 155

XXIII.

“O Thou great God that dost perform
 Thy laud
 By mouths of Innocents, lo! here Thy might;
 This gem of chastity, this emerald,
 And eke of martyrdom this ruby bright,
 There, where with mangled throat he lay upright, 160
 The Alma Redemptoris ’gan to sing
 So loud, that with his voice the place did ring.

XXIV.

“The Christian folk that through the Jewry went Come to the spot in wonder at the thing;
 And hastily they for the Provost sent; 165
 Immediately he came, not tarrying,
 And praiseth Christ that is our heavenly King,
 And eke His Mother, honour of Mankind:
 Which done, he bade that they the Jews should bind.

XXV.

“This Child with piteous lamentation then 170
 Was taken up, singing his song alway;
 And with procession great and pomp of men
 To the next Abbey him they bare away;
 His Mother swooning by the body lay:
 And scarcely could the people that were near 175
 Remove this second Rachel from the bier.

XXVI.

“Torment and shameful death to every one
 This Provost doth for those bad Jews prepare
 That of this murder wist, and that anon:
 Such wickedness his judgments cannot spare; 180
 Who will do evil, evil shall he bear;
 Them therefore with wild horses did he draw,
 And after that he hung them by the law.

XXVII.

“Upon his bier this Innocent doth lie
 Before the altar while the Mass doth last: 185
 The Abbot with his convent’s company
 Then sped themselves to bury him full fast;
 And, when they holy water on him cast,
 Yet spake this Child when sprinkled was the water;
 And sang, O Alma Redemptoris Mater! 190

XXVIII.

“This Abbot, for he was a holy man,
 As all Monks are, or surely ought to be,
 In supplication to the Child began Thus saying, ‘O dear Child! I summon thee
 In virtue of the holy Trinity 195
 Tell me the cause why thou dost sing this hymn, Since that thy throat is cut, as it doth seem.’

XXIX.

“My throat is cut unto the bone, I trow,¹
 Said this young Child, ‘and by the law of
 kind
 I should have died, yea many hours ago;
 But Jesus Christ, as in the books ye find,²⁰¹
 Will that His glory last, and be in mind;
 And, for the worship of His Mother dear,
 Yet may I sing, O Alma! loud and clear.

XXX.

“This well of mercy, Jesu’s Mother sweet,²⁰⁵
 After my knowledge I have loved alway;
 And in the hour when I my death did
 meet
 To me she came, and thus to me did say, ‘Thou in thy dying sing this holy lay,’
 As ye have heard; and soon as I had sung²¹⁰
 Methought she laid a grain upon my tongue.

XXXI.

“Wherefore I sing, nor can from song refrain,
 In honour of that blissful Maiden free,
 Till from my tongue off-taken is the grain;
 And after that thus said she unto me;²¹⁵
 ‘My little Child, then will I come for
 thee
 Soon as the grain from off thy tongue they take:
 Be not dismayed, I will not thee forsake!’

XXXII.

“This holy Monk, this Abbot—him mean I, Touched then his tongue, and took away
 the grain;²²⁰
 And he gave up the ghost full peacefully;
 And, when the Abbot had this wonder
 seen,
 His salt tears trickled down like showers
 of rain;
 And on his face he dropped upon the
 ground,
 And still he lay as if he had been bound.

XXXIII.

“Eke the whole Convent on the pavement lay,²²⁶
 Weeping and praising Jesu’s Mother
 dear;
 And after that they rose, and took their
 way,
 And lifted up this Martyr from the bier,
 And in a tomb of precious marble clear²³⁰
 Enclosed his uncorrupted body sweet¹.— Where’er he be, God grant us him to meet!

XXXIV.

“Young Hew of Lincoln! in like sort laid
 low
 By cursèd Jews—thing well and widely
 known,
 For it was done a little while ago—²³⁵
 Pray also thou for us, while here we tarry Weak sinful folk, that God, with pitying
 eye,
 In mercy would His mercy multiply
 On us, for reverence of His Mother Mary!”

II.

THE CUCKOO AND THE NIGHTIN-
GALE.

[Written 1801.—Published 1841 (R. H. Horne’s
The Poems of Geoffrey Chaucer, Modernised); vol. of 1842.]

I.

THE God of Love—ah, benedicite!
 How mighty and how great a Lord is he!
 For he of low hearts can make high, of high
 He can make low, and unto death bring
 nigh;
 And hard hearts he can make them kind and free. 5

II.

Within a little time, as hath been found,
 He can make sick folk whole and fresh and sound;
 Them who are whole in body and in
 mind,
 He can make sick,—bind can he and un-
 bind
 All that he will have bound, or have un-
 bound. 10

¹ Enclosed they his little body sweet (Chaucer).
 —ED.

III.

To tell his might my wit may not suffice;
Foolish men he can make them out of
wise;—
For he may do all that he will devise;
Loose livers he can make abate their
vice,
And proud hearts can make tremble in a trice. 15

IV.

In brief, the whole of what he will, he
may;
Against him dare not any wight say nay;
To humble or afflict whome'er he will,
To gladden or to grieve, he hath like
skill;
But most his might he sheds on the eve of May. 20

V.

For every true heart, gentle heart and
free,
That with him is, or thinketh so to be,
Now against May shall have some stirring—whether
To joy, or be it to some mourning; never
At other time, methinks, in like degree. 25

VI.

For now when they may hear the small birds' song,
And see the budding leaves the branches
throng,
This unto their remembrance doth bring All kinds of pleasure mix'd with sorrow-
ing;
And longing of sweet thoughts that ever
long. 30

VII.

And of that longing heaviness doth come,
Whence oft great sickness grows of heart
and home;
Sick are they all for lack of their desire;
And thus in May their hearts are set on
fire,
So that they burn forth in great martyrdom. 35

VIII.

In sooth, I speak from feeling, what though now
Old am I, and to genial pleasure slow;
Yet have I felt of sickness through the
May,
Both hot and cold, and heart-aches every
day,—
How hard, alas! to bear, I only know. 40

IX.

Such shaking doth the fever in me keep Through all this May that I have little
sleep;
And also 'tis not likely unto me,
That any living heart should sleepy be In which Love's dart its fiery point doth steep. 45

But tossing lately on a sleepless bed,
I of a token thought which Lovers heed;
How among them it was a common tale,
That it was good to hear the Nightingale,
Ere the vile Cuckoo's note be utterèd. 50

XI.

And then I thought anon as it was day,
I gladly would go somewhere to essay
If I perchance a Nightingale might hear,
For yet had I heard none, of all that year,
And it was then the third night of the May.

XII.

And soon as I a glimpse of day espied, 56
No longer would I in my bed abide,
But straight way to a wood that was hard by,
Forth did I go, alone and fearlessly,
And held the pathway down by a brook-
side; 60

XIII.

Till to a lawn I came all white and green,
I in so fair a one had never been.
The ground was green, with daisy powdered over;
Tall were the flowers, the grove a lofty cover¹,
All green and white; and nothing else was
seen. 65

¹ The flowers and the grass alike all high (Chaucer); i.e. grass and daisies being of equal height.—Ed.

XIV.

There sate I down among the fair fresh
flowers,
And saw the birds come tripping from their bowers,
Where they had rested them all night;
and they,
Who were so joyful at the light of day, Began to honour May with all their powers. 70

XV.

Well did they know that service all by rote,
And there was many and many a lovely
note,
Some, singing loud, as if they had complained;
Some with their notes another manner
feigned;
And some did sing all out with the full throat. 75

XVI.

They pruned themselves, and made themselves right gay,
Dancing and leaping light upon the spray;
And ever two and two together were,
The same as they had chosen for the year,
Upon Saint Valentine's returning day. 80

XVII.

Meanwhile the stream, whose bank I sate
upon,
Was making such a noise as it ran on accordant to the sweet Birds' harmony; Methought that it was the best melody which ever to man's ear a passage won. 85

XVIII.

And for delight, but how I never wot,
I in a slumber and a swoon was caught,
Not all asleep and yet not waking wholly;
And as I lay, the Cuckoo, bird unholy, 89 Broke silence, or I heard him in my thought.

XIX.

And that was right upon a tree fast by,
And who was then ill satisfied but I?

Now, God, quoth I, that died upon the rood,
From thee and thy base throat, keep all that's good,
Full little joy have I now of thy cry. 95

XX.

And, as I with the Cuckoo thus 'gan
chide,
In the next bush that was me fast beside,
I heard the lusty Nightingale so sing,
That her clear voice made a loud rioting, Echoing thorough all the green wood
wide. 100

XXI.

Ah! good sweet Nightingale! for my heart's cheer,
Hence hast thou stayed a little while too
long;
For we have had the sorry Cuckoo here,
And she hath been before thee with her
song;
Evil light on her! she hath done me wrong. 105

XXII.

But hear you now a wondrous thing, I
pray;
As long as in that swooning-fit I lay, Methought I wist right well what these birds meant,
And had good knowing both of their
intent,
And of their speech, and all that they would say. 110

XXIII.

The Nightingale thus in my hearing
spake:—
Good Cuckoo, seek some other bush or brake,
And, prithe, let us that can sing dwell
here;
For every wight eschews thy song to hear,
Such uncouth singing verily dost thou
make. 115

XXIV.

What! quoth she then, what is't that ails thee now?
It seems to me I sing as well as thou;

For mine's a song that is both true and plain,—

Although I cannot quaver so in vain
As thou dost in thy throat, I wot not how. 120

XXV.

All men may understanding have of me,
But, Nightingale, so may they not of thee;

For thou hast many a foolish and quaint cry:—

Thou say'st OSEE, OSEE, then how may I Have knowledge, I thee pray, what this may be? 125

XXVI.

Ah, fool! quoth she, wist thou not what it is?

Oft as I say OSEE, OSEE, I wis,
Then mean I, that I should be wonderous fain

That shamefully they one and all were slain,

Whoever against Love mean aught amiss.

XXVII.

And also would I that they all were dead,
Who do not think in love their life to lead;

For who is loth the God of Love to obey,
Is only fit to die, I dare well say,

And for that cause OSEE I cry; take heed! 135

XXVIII.

Ay, quoth the Cuckoo, that is a quaint law,

That all must love or die; but I withdraw,
And take my leave of all such company,

For mine intent it neither is to die,
Nor ever while I live Love's yoke to draw. 140

XXIX.

For lovers, of all folk that be alive,
The most disquiet have and least do thrive;

Most feeling have of sorrow, woe and care,
And the least welfare cometh to their share;

What need is there against the truth to strive? 145

XXX.

What! quoth she, thou art all out of thy mind,

That in thy churlishness a cause canst find

To speak of Love's true Servants in this mood;

For in this world no service is so good
To every wight that gentle is of kind. 150

XXXI.

For thereof comes all goodness and all worth;

All gentilles and honour thence come forth;

Thence worship comes, content and true heart's pleasure,

And full-assurèd trust, joy without measure, 154

And jollity, fresh cheerfulness, and mirth;

XXXII.

And bounty, lowliness, and courtesy,
And seemliness, and faithful company,

And dread of shame that will not do amiss;

For he that faithfully Love's servant is,
Rather than be disgraced, would chuse to die. 160

XXXIII.

And that the very truth it is which I
Now say—in such belief I'll live and die;

And Cuckoo, do thou so, by my advice,
Then, quoth she, let me never hope for bliss,

If with that counsel I do e'er comply. 165

XXXIV.

Good Nightingale! thou speakest wonderous fair,

Yet for all that, the truth is found elsewhere;

For Love in young folk is but rage, I wis;

And Love in old folk a great dotage is;
Who most it useth, him 'twill most impair. 170

XXXV.

For thereof come all contraries to glad-
ness ;
Thence sickness comes, and overwhelming sadness,
Mistrust and jealousy, despite, debate,
Dishonour, shame, envy importunate, Pride, anger, mischief, poverty, and madness. 175

XXXVI.

Loving is aye an office of despair,
And one thing is therein which is not
fair ;
For whoso gets of love a little bliss,
Unless it alway stay with him, I wis
He may full soon go with an old man's hair. 180

XXXVII.

And, therefore, Nightingale! do thou keep nigh,
For trust me well, in spite of thy quaint
cry,
If long time from thy mate thou be, or far,
Thou'lt be as others that forsaken are ;
Then shalt thou raise a clamour as do I.

XXXVIII.

Fie, quoth she, on thy name, Bird ill
beseen! 186
The God of Love afflict thee with all teen,
For thou art worse than mad a thousand
fold ;
For many a one hath virtues manifold,
Who had been nought, if Love had never been. 190

XXXIX.

For evermore his servants Love amend-
eth,
And he from every blemish them defendeth ;
And maketh them to burn, as in a fire,
In loyalty, and worshipful desire,
And, when it likes him, joy enough them sendeth. 195

XL.

Thou Nightingale! the Cuckoo said, be
still,
For Love no reason hath but his own
will ;—
For to th' untrue he oft gives ease and
joy ;
True lovers doth so bitterly annoy,
He lets them perish through that grievous
ill. 200

XLI.

With such a master would I never be¹ ;
For he, in sooth, is blind, and may not
see,
And knows not when he hurts and when he heals ;
Within this court full seldom Truth
avails,
So diverse in his wilfulness is he. 205

XLII.

Then of the Nightingale did I take note, How from her inmost heart a sigh she
brought,
And said, Alas! that ever I was born,
Not one word have I now, I am so
forlorn,—
And with that word, she into tears burst
out. 210

XLIII.

Alas, alas! my very heart will break,
Quoth she, to hear this churlish bird thus
speak
Of Love, and of his holy services ;
Now, God of Love! thou help me in some wise,
That vengeance on this Cuckoo I may wreak. 215

XLIV.

And so methought I started up anon,
And to the brook I ran and got a stone,
Which at the Cuckoo hardily I cast,
And he for dread did fly away full fast ;
And glad, in sooth, was I when he was
gone. 220

¹ From a manuscript in the Bodleian, as are also stanzas 44 and 45, which are necessary to complete the sense.

XLV.

And as he flew, the Cuckoo, ever and aye, Kept crying, "Farewell!—farewell, Pop-injay!"

As if in scornful mockery of me;
And on I hunted him from tree to tree,
Till he was far, all out of sight, away. 225

XLVI.

Then straightway came the Nightingale
to me,
And said, Forsooth, my friend, do I thank thee,
That thou wert near to rescue me; and
now,
Unto the God of Love I make a vow,
That all this May I will thy songstress
be. 230

XLVII.

Well satisfied, I thanked her, and she
said,
By this mishap no longer be dismayed,
Though thou the Cuckoo heard, ere thou heard'st me;
Yet if I live it shall amended be,
When next May comes, if I am not afraid. 235

XLVIII.

And one thing will I counsel thee also,
The Cuckoo trust not thou, nor his Love's
saw;
All that she said is an outrageous lie.
Nay, nothing shall me bring thereto,
quoth I,
For Love, and it hath done me mighty
woe. 240

XLIX.

Yea, hath it? use, quoth she, this medicine;
This May-time, every day before thou dine,
Go look on the fresh daisy; then say I,
Although for pain thou may'st be like to
die,
Thou wilt be eased, and less wilt droop and pine. 245

And mind always that thou be good and
true,
And I will sing one song, of many new,
For love of thee, as loud as I may cry; 248
And then did she begin this song full
high,
"Beshrew all them that are in love untrue."

LI.

And soon as she had sung it to the end,
Now farewell, quoth she, for I hence must wend;
And, God of Love, that can right well and may,
Send unto thee as mickle joy this day,
As ever he to Lover yet did send. 255

LII.

Thus takes the Nightingale her leave of
me;
I pray to God with her always to be,
And joy of love to send her evermore;
And shield us from the Cuckoo and her
lore,
For there is not so false a bird as she. 260

LIII.

Forth then she flew, the gentle Nightin-
gale,
To all the Birds that lodged within that
dale,
And gathered each and all into one
place;
And them besought to hear her doleful case,
And thus it was that she began her tale.

LIV.

The Cuckoo—'tis not well that I should
hide 266
How she and I did each the other chide,
And without ceasing, since it was day-
light;
And now I pray you all to do me right
Of that false Bird whom Love can not abide. 270

LV.

Then spake one Bird, and full assent all gave;
 This matter asketh counsel good as grave,
 For birds we are—all here together brought;
 And, in good sooth, the Cuckoo here is not; 274
 And therefore we a Parliament will have.

LVI.

And thereat shall the Eagle be our Lord,
 And other Peers whose names are on record;
 A summons to the Cuckoo shall be sent,
 And judgment there be given; or that intent
 Failing, we finally shall make accord. 280

LVII.

And all this shall be done, without a nay,
 The morrow after Saint Valentine's day,
 Under a maple that is well beseen,
 Before the chamber-window of the Queen,
 At Woodstock, on the meadow green and gay. 285

LVIII.

She thankèd them; and then her leave she took,
 And flew into a hawthorn by that brook;
 And there she sate and sung—upon that tree—
 “For term of life Love shall have hold of me”—
 So loudly, that I with that song awoke.
 Unlearned Book and rude, as well I know, 291
 For beauty thou hast none, nor eloquence,
 Who did on thee the hardiness bestow
 To appear before my Lady? but a sense
 Thou surely hast of her benevolence, 295
 Whereof her hourly bearing proof doth give;
 For of all good she is the best alive.
 Alas, poor Book! for thy unworthiness,
 To show to her some pleasant meanings writ
 In winning words, since through her gentleness, 300

Thee she accepts as for her service fit!
 Oh! it repents me I have neither wit
 Nor leisure unto thee more worth to give;
 For of all good she is the best alive.

Beseech her meekly with all lowliness, 305
 Though I be far from her I reverence,
 To think upon my truth and steadfastness,
 And to abridge my sorrow's violence,
 Caused by the wish, as knows your sapience,

She of her liking proof to me would give;
 For of all good she is the best alive. 311

L'ENVOY.

Pleasure's Aurora, Day of gladness!
 Luna by night, with heavenly influence
 Illumined! root of beauty and goodness,
 Write, and allay by your beneficence, 315
 My sighs breathed forth in silence,— comfort give!

Since of all good you are the best alive.

EXPLICIT.

III.

TROILUS AND CRESIDA.

[Written 1801.—Same dates of publication as II.]

NEXT morning Troilus began to clear
 His eyes from sleep, at the first break of day,

And unto Pandarus, his own Brother dear,
 For love of God, full piteously did say,
 We must the Palace see of Cresida; 5
 For since we yet may have no other feast,
 Let us behold her Palace at the least!

And therewithal to cover his intent¹
 A cause he found into the Town to go,
 And they right forth to Cresid's Palace went; 10

But, Lord, this simple Troilus was woe,
 Him thought his sorrowful heart would break in two;

For when he saw her doors fast bolted all,
 Well nigh for sorrow down he 'gan to fall.

Therewith when this true Lover 'gan behold, 15
 How shut was every window of the place,

¹ His meiny for to blend (Chaucer); i.e. to hoodwink his followers.—Ed.

Like frost he thought his heart was icy cold ;
For which, with changèd, pale, and deadly face,

Without word uttered, forth he 'gan to
pace ;

And on his purpose bent so fast to ride,
That no wight his continuance¹ espied. 21

Then said he thus,—O Palace desolate !
O house of houses, once so richly dight !
O Palace empty and disconsolate !
Thou lamp of which extinguished is the
light ; 25

O Palace whilom day that now art night,
Thou ought'st to fall and I to die ; since she
Is gone who held us both in sovereignty.

O, of all houses once the crownèd boast !
Palace illumined with the sun of bliss ; 30
O ring of which the ruby now is lost, O cause of woe, that cause has been of
bliss :

Yet, since I may no better, would I kiss Thy cold doors ; but I dare not for this
rout ;

Farewell, thou shrine of which the Saint is out ! 35

Therewith he cast on Pandarus an eye,
With changèd face, and piteous to be-
hold ;

And when he might his time aright espy,
Aye as he rode, to Pandarus he told
Both his new sorrow and his joys of old,
So piteously, and with so dead a hue, 41
That every wight might on his sorrow rue.

Forth from the spot he rideth up and
down,

And everything to his remembrance
Came as he rode by places of the town 45
Where he had felt such perfect pleasure
once.

Lo, yonder saw I mine own Lady dance,
And in that Temple she with her bright
eyes,

My Lady dear, first bound me captive-
wise.

And yonder with joy-smitten heart have I Heard my own Cressid's laugh ; and once at play 51

I yonder saw her eke full blissfully ;
And yonder once she unto me 'gan say—
Now, my sweet Troilus, love me well, I pray !

And there so graciously did me behold,
That hers unto the death my heart I
hold. 56

And at the corner of that self-same house
Heard I my most beloved Lady dear,
So womanly, with voice melodious 59
Singing so well, so goodly, and so clear,
That in my soul methinks I yet do hear
The blissful sound ; and in that very
place
My Lady first me took unto her grace.

O blissful God of Love ! then thus he
cried,

When I the process have in memory, 65
How thou hast wearied me on every side,
Men thence a book might make, a history ;
What need to seek a conquest over me,
Since I am wholly at thy will ? what joy Hast thou thy own liege subjects to destroy ? 70

Dread Lord ! so fearful when provoked, thine ire

Well hast thou wreaked on me by pain and grief ;

Now mercy, Lord ! thou know'st well I desire

Thy grace above all pleasures first and chief ;

And live and die I will in thy belief ; 75
For which I ask for guerdon but one
boon,

That Cressida again thou send me soon.

Constrain her heart as quickly to return,
As thou dost mine with longing her to see,
Then know I well that she would not sojourn. 80

Now, blissful Lord, so cruel do not be Unto the blood of Troy, I pray of thee,
As Juno was unto the Theban blood,
From whence to Thebes came griefs in multitude.

And after this he to the gate did go 85
Whence Cressid rode, as if in haste she
was ;

¹ Countenance (Chaucer).—ED.

And up and down there went, and to
and fro,

And to himself full oft he said, alas!
From hence my hope and solace forth did pass.

O would the blissful God now for his joy,
I might her see again coming to Troy! 91

And up to yonder hill was I her guide;
Alas, and there I took of her my leave;
Yonder I saw her to her Father ride,
For very grief of which my heart shall
cleave;— 95

And hither home I came when it was eve;
And here I dwell an outcast from all joy,
And shall, unless I see her soon in Troy.

And of himself did he imagine oft,
That he was blighted, pale, and waxen less Than he was wont; and that in whispers
soft 101

Men said, what may it be, can no one guess

Why Troilus hath all this heaviness?
All which he of himself conceited wholly
Out of his weakness and his melancholy.

Another time he took into his head, 106
That every wight, who in the way passed
by,

Had of him ruth, and fancied that they
said,

I am right sorry Troilus will die:
And thus a day or two drove wearily; 110
As ye have heard; such life 'gan he to lead

As one that standeth betwixt hope and dread.

For which it pleased him in his songs to
show

The occasion of his woe, as best he might;
And made a fitting song, of words but
few, 115

Somewhat his woeful heart to make more
light;

And when he was removed from all men's
sight,

With a soft voice, he of his Lady dear,
That absent was, 'gan sing as ye may hear.

O star, of which I lost have all the light, 120
With a sore heart well ought I to bewail,

That ever dark in torment, night by night, Toward my death with wind I steer and sail¹;

For which upon the tenth night if thou fail With thy bright beams to guide me but one hour, 125
My ship and me Charybdis will devour.

As soon as he this song had thus sung
through,

He fell again into his sorrows old;
And every night, as was his wont to do,
Troilus stood the bright moon to behold;
And all his trouble to the moon he told, 131
And said: I wis, when thou art horn'd anew,

I shall be glad if all the world be true.

Thy horns were old as now upon that
morrow,

When hence did journey my bright Lady
dear, 135

That cause is of my torment and my sorrow;

For which, oh, gentle Luna, bright and
clear,

For love of God, run fast above thy sphere;
For when thy horns begin once more to
spring,

Then shall she come, that with her bliss may bring. 140

The day is more, and longer every night
Than they were wont to be—for he thought so;

And that the sun did take his course not
right,

By longer way than he was wont to go;
And said, I am in constant dread I trow,
That Phæton his son is yet alive, 146
His too fond father's car amiss to drive.

Upon the walls fast also would he walk,
To the end that he the Grecian host might
see; 149

And ever thus he to himself would talk:—
Lo! yonder is my own bright Lady free;
Or yonder is it that the tents must be;
And thence does come this air which is so
sweet,

That in my soul I feel the joy of it.

¹ With wind in stern I sail (Chaucer).—ED.

And certainly this wind, that more and
 more 155
 By moments thus increaseth in my
 face,
 Is of my Lady's sighs heavy and sore ;
 I prove it thus ; for in no other space
 Of all this town, save only in this place, Feel I a wind, that soundeth so-like
 pain ; 160
 It saith, Alas, why severed are we twain ?

A weary while in pain he tosseth thus,
 Till fully passed and gone was the ninth
 night ;
 And ever at his side stood Pandarus,
 Who busily made use of all his might 165
 To comfort him, and make his heart more
 light ;
 Giving him always hope, that she the morrow
 Of the tenth day will come, and end his sorrow.

POEMS REFERRING TO THE PERIOD OF OLD AGE.

I.

THE OLD CUMBERLAND BEGGAR.

The class of Beggars, to which the Old Man here described belongs, will probably soon be extinct. It consisted of poor, and, mostly, old and infirm persons, who confined themselves to a stated round in their neighbourhood, and had certain fixed days, on which, at different houses, they regularly received alms, sometimes in money, but mostly in provisions.

[Composed 1797.—Published 1800.]

I SAW an aged Beggar in my walk ;
 And he was seated, by the highway side,
 On a low structure of rude masonry Built at the foot of a huge hill, that they Who lead their horses down the steep rough road 5
 May thence remount at ease. The aged
 Man
 Had placed his staff across the broad smooth stone
 That overlays the pile ; and, from a bag
 All white with flour, the dole of village
 dames,
 He drew his scraps and fragments, one
 by one ; 10
 And scanned them with a fixed and serious look
 Of idle computation. In the sun,
 Upon the second step of that small pile,
 Surrounded by those wild unpeopled hills,
 He sat, and ate his food in solitude : 15
 And ever, scattered from his palsied hand,
 That, still attempting to prevent the
 waste,
 Was baffled still, the crumbs in little
 showers
 Fell on the ground ; and the small mountain birds,

Not venturing yet to peck their destined meal, 20
 Approached within the length of half his staff.

Him from my childhood have I known ;
 and then
 He was so old, he seems not older now ;
 He travels on, a solitary Man,
 So helpless in appearance, that for him 25
 The sauntering Horseman throws not with a slack
 And careless hand his alms upon the
 ground,
 But stops,—that he may safely lodge the coin
 Within the old Man's hat ; nor quits him so,
 But still, when he has given his horse the rein, 30
 Watches the aged Beggar with a look Sidelong, and half-reverted. She who tends
 The toll-gate, when in summer at her
 door
 She turns her wheel, if on the road she sees
 The aged Beggar coming, quits her work,
 And lifts the latch for him that he may
 pass. 36
 The post-boy, when his rattling wheels
 o'ertake
 The aged Beggar in the woody lane, Shouts to him from behind ; and, if thus warned
 The old man does not change his course,
 the boy 40
 Turns with less noisy wheels to the road-
 side,
 And passes gently by, without a curse
 Upon his lips or anger at his heart.

He travels on, a solitary Man ;
 His age has no companion. On the
 ground 45
 His eyes are turned, and, as he moves
 along,
They move along the ground ; and, ever-
 more,
 Instead of common and habitual sight
 Of fields with rural works, of hill and
 dale,
 And the blue sky, one little span of earth Is all his prospect. Thus, from day to day, 51
 Bow-bent, his eyes for ever on the ground,
 He plies his weary journey ; seeing still,
 And seldom knowing that he sees, some
 straw,
 Some scattered leaf, or marks which, in one track, 55
 The nails of cart or chariot-wheel have
 left Impressed on the white road,—in the same line,
 At distance still the same. Poor Traveller !
 His staff trails with him ; scarcely do his
 feet
 Disturb the summer dust ; he is so still 60
 In look and motion, that the cottage curs, Ere he has passed the door, will turn
away,
 Weary of barking at him. Boys and girls,
 The vacant and the busy, maids and youths,
 And urchins newly breeched—all pass him by : 65
 Him even the slow-paced waggon leaves
 behind.
 But deem not this Man useless.—Statesmen ! ye
 Who are so restless in your wisdom, ye Who have a broom still ready in your
 hands
 To rid the world of nuisances ; ye proud, Heart-swollen, while in your pride ye contemplate 71
 Your talents, power, or wisdom, deem him not
 A burthen of the earth ! 'Tis Nature's law
 That none, the meanest of created things,

Of forms created the most vile and brute, 75
 The dullest or most noxious, should exist Divorced from good—a spirit and pulse of good,
 A life and soul, to every mode of being Inseparably linked. Then be assured That least of all can aught—that ever owned 80
 The heaven-regarding eye and front sublime
 Which man is born to—sink, howe'er de-
 pressed,
 So low as to be scorned without a sin ;
 Without offence to God cast out of view ;
 Like the dry remnant of a garden-flower 85
 Whose seeds are shed, or as an implement Worn out and worthless. While from door to door,
 This old Man creeps, the villagers in him
 Behold a record which together binds
 Past deeds and offices of charity, 90
 Else unremembered, and so keeps alive
 The kindly mood in hearts which lapse of
 years,
 And that half-wisdom 'half-experience
 gives,
 Make slow to feel, and by sure steps resign
 To selfishness and cold oblivious cares. 95
 Among the farms and solitary huts,
 Hamlets and thinly-scattered villages, Where'er the aged Beggar takes his rounds,
 The mild necessity of use compels
 To acts of love ; and habit does the work
 Of reason ; yet prepares that after-joy Which reason cherishes, And thus the
 soul, 102
 By that sweet taste of pleasure unpursued, Doth find herself insensibly disposed
 To virtue and true goodness.
 Some there are,
 By their good works exalted, lofty minds,
 And meditative, authors of delight
 And happiness, which to the end of time Will live, and spread, and kindle : even such minds
 In childhood, from this solitary Being, 110
 Or from like wanderer, haply have received

In his poems on memory's on space & memory

(A thing more precious far than all that books

Or the solicitudes of love can do !)
That first mild touch of sympathy and
thought,

In which they found their kindred with a world 115

Where want and sorrow were. The easy
man

Who sits at his own door,—and, like the pear

That overhangs his head from the green
wall,

Feeds in the sunshine; the robust and
young,

The prosperous and unthinking, they who
live 120

Sheltered, and flourish in a little grove
Of their own kindred;—all behold in him

A silent monitor, which on their minds
Must needs impress a transitory thought

Of self-congratulation, to the heart 125
Of each recalling his peculiar boons,

His charters and exemptions; and, per-
chance,

Though he to no one give the fortitude
And circumspection needful to preserve

His present blessings, and to husband up
The respite of the season, he, at least, 131

And 'tis no vulgar service, makes them
felt.

Yet further.—Many, I believe, there are

Who live a life of virtuous decency, Men who can hear the Decalogue and
feel 135

No self-reproach; who of the moral law
Established in the land where they abide

Are strict observers; and not negligent
In acts of love to those with whom they
dwell,

Their kindred, and the children of their
blood. 140

Praise be to such, and to their slumbers
peace!

—But of the poor man ask, the abject
poor;

Go, and demand of him, if there be here
In this cold abstinence from evil deeds,

And these inevitable charities, 145

Wherewith to satisfy the human soul?

No—man is dear to man; the poorest poor
Long for some moments in a weary life

When they can know and feel that they have been,

Themselves, the fathers and the dealers-
out 150

Of some small blessings; have been kind to such

As needed kindness, for this single cause,
That we have all of us one human heart.

—Such pleasure is to one kind Being
known,

My neighbour, when with punctual care,
each week, 155

Duly as Friday comes, though pressed herself

By her own wants, she from her store of meal

Takes one unsparing handful for the scrip
Of this old Mendicant, and, from her door

Returning with exhilarated heart, 160 Sits by her fire, and builds her hope in heaven.

Then let him pass, a blessing on his
head!

And while in that vast solitude to which The tide of things has borne him, he appears 164

To breathe and live but for himself alone,
Unblamed, uninjured, let him bear about
The good which the benignant law of
Heaven

Has hung around him: and, while life is his,

Still let him prompt the unlettered villagers

To tender offices and pensive thoughts.
—Then let him pass, a blessing on his
head! 171

And, long as he can wander, let him
breathe

The freshness of the valleys; let his blood
Struggle with frosty air and winter snows;

And let the chartered wind that sweeps the heath 175

Beat his grey locks against his withered
face.

Reverence the hope whose vital anxious-
ness

Gives the last human interest to his heart.
 May never HOUSE, misnamed of INDUSTRY,
 Make him a captive!—for that pent-up
 din, 180
 Those life-consuming sounds that clog the
 air,
 Be his the natural silence of old age!
 Let him be free of mountain solitudes;
 And have around him, whether heard or
 not,
 The pleasant melody of woodland birds.
 Few are his pleasures: if his eyes have
 now 186
 Been doomed so long to settle upon earth
 That not without some effort they behold
 The countenance of the horizontal sun,
 Rising or setting, let the light at least Find a free entrance to their languid orbs, 191
 And let him, where and when he will, sit
 down
 Beneath the trees, or on a grassy bank
 Of highway side, and with the little birds Share his chance-gathered meal; and,
 finally, 195
 As in the eye of Nature he has lived,
 So in the eye of Nature let him die!

II.

THE FARMER OF TILSBURY VALE.

[Composed 1800.—Published July 21, 1800 (Morning Post); ed. 1815.]

'Tis not for the unfeeling, the falsely refined,
 The squeamish in taste, and the narrow
 of mind,
 And the small critic wielding his delicate
 pen,
 That I sing of old Adam, the pride of old
 men.
 He dwells in the centre of London's wide
 Town; 5
 His staff is a sceptre—his grey hairs a
 crown;
 And his bright eyes look brighter, set off by the streak
 Of the unfaded rose that still blooms on his cheek.

'Mid the dews, in the sunshine of morn,—
 'mid the joy
 Of the fields, he collected that bloom, when a boy; 10
 That countenance there fashioned, which, spite of a stain
 That his life hath received, to the last will remain.
 A Farmer he was; and his house far and
 near
 Was the boast of the country for excellent
 cheer;
 How oft have I heard in sweet Tilsbury
 Vale 15
 Of the silver-rimmed horn whence he dealt his mild ale!
 Yet Adam was far as the farthest from ruin,
 His fields seemed to know what their Master was doing;
 And turnips, and corn-land, and meadow,
 and lea,
 All caught the infection—as generous as
 he. 20
 Yet Adam prized little the feast and the bowl,—
 The fields better suited the ease of his
 soul:
 He strayed through the fields like an indolent wight,
 The quiet of nature was Adam's delight.
 For Adam was simple in thought; and the poor, 25
 Familiar with him, made an inn of his
 door:
 He gave them the best that he had; or,
 to say
 What less may mislead you, they took it
 away.
 Thus thirty smooth years did he thrive
 on his farm:
 The Genius of plenty preserved him from harm: 30
 At length, what to most is a season of sorrow,
 His means are run out,—he must beg, or must borrow.

- To the neighbours he went,—all were free with their money ;
For his hive had so long been replenished with honey,
That they dreamt not of dearth ;—He continued his rounds, 35 Knocked here—and knocked there, pounds still adding to pounds.
- He paid what he could with his ill-gotten
pelf,
And something, it might be, reserved for himself :
Then (what is too true) without hinting a
word,
Turned his back on the country—and off like a bird. 40
- You lift up your eyes!—but I guess that you frame
A judgment too harsh of the sin and the
shame ;
In him it was scarcely a business of art,
For this he did all in the ease of his
heart.
- To London—a sad emigration I ween—With his grey hairs he went from the brook and the green ; 46
And there, with small wealth but his legs and his hands,
As lonely he stood as a crow on the sands.
- All trades, as need was, did old Adam assume,—
Served as stable-boy, errand-boy, porter, and groom ; 50
But nature is gracious, necessity kind,
And, in spite of the shame that may lurk in his mind,
- He seems ten birthdays younger, is green and is stout ;
Twice as fast as before does his blood run
about ;
You would say that each hair of his beard was alive, 55
And his fingers as busy as bees in a hive.
- For he's not like an Old Man that leisurely goes
About work that he knows, in a track that he knows ;
- But often his mind is compelled to demur,
And you guess that the more then his body must stir. 60
- In the throng of the town like a stranger is he,
Like one whose own country's far over
the sea ;
And Nature, while through the great city
he hies,
Full ten times a day takes his heart by surprise.
- This gives him the fancy of one that is
young, 65
More of soul in his face than of words on his tongue ;
Like a maiden of twenty he trembles and
sighs,
And tears of fifteen will come into his
eyes.
- What's a tempest to him, or the dry parching heats?
Yet he watches the clouds that pass over the streets ; 70
With a look of such earnestness often will
stand,
You might think he'd twelve reapers at work in the Strand.
- Where proud Covent-garden, in desolate
hours
Of snow and hoar-frost, spreads her fruits and her flowers,
Old Adam will smile at the pains that have made 75
Poor winter look fine in such strange masquerade.
- 'Mid coaches and chariots, a waggon of
straw,
Like a magnet, the heart of old Adam can draw ;
With a thousand soft pictures his memory will teem,
And his hearing is touched with the sounds of a dream. 80
- Up the Haymarket hill he oft whistles his
way,
Thrusts his hands in a waggon, and smells at the hay ;

He thinks of the fields he so often hath mown,
And is happy as if the rich freight were his own.

But chiefly to Smithfield he loves to repair,— 85
If you pass by at morning, you'll meet with him there.
The breath of the cows you may see him
inhale,
And his heart all the while is in Tilsbury
Vale.

Now farewell, old Adam! when low thou art laid,
May one blade of grass spring up over thy head; 90
And I hope that thy grave, wheresoever
it be,
Will hear the wind sigh through the leaves of a tree.

III.

THE SMALL CELANDINE.

[Composed 1804.—Published 1807.]

THERE is a Flower, the lesser Celandine, That shrinks, like many more, from cold and rain;
And, the first moment that the sun may
shine,
Bright as the sun himself, 'tis out again!
When hailstones have been falling, swarm on swarm, 5
Or blasts the green field and the trees dis-trest,
Oft have I seen it muffled up from harm,
In close self-shelter, like a Thing at rest.
But lately, one rough day, this Flower I
passed
And recognised it, though an altered
form, 10
Now standing forth an offering to the
blast,
And buffeted at will by rain and storm.
I stopped, and said with inly-muttered
voice,
"It doth not love the shower, nor seek the cold:

This neither is its courage nor its choice,
But its necessity in being old. 16

"The sunshine may not cheer it, nor the
dew;
It cannot help itself in its decay;
Stiff in its members, withered, changed of hue."
And, in my spleen, I smiled that it was
grey. 20

To be a Prodigal's Favourite—then, worse
truth,
A Miser's Pensioner—behold our lot!
O Man, that from thy fair and shining
youth
Age might but take the things Youth needed not!

IV.

THE TWO THIEVES;

OR,

THE LAST STAGE OF AVARICE.

[Composed 1800.—Published 1800.]

O NOW that the genius of Bewick were
mine,
And the skill which he learned on the banks of the Tyne,
Then the Muses might deal with me just as they chose,
For I'd take my last leave both of verse and of prose.

What feats would I work with my magical
hand! 5
Book-learning and books should be banished the land:
And, for hunger and thirst and such troublesome calls,
Every ale-house should then have a feast on its walls.

The traveller would hang his wet clothes on a chair;
Let them smoke, let them burn, not a straw would he care! 10
For the Prodigal Son, Joseph's Dream and his sheaves,
Oh, what would they be to my tale of two Thieves?

The One, yet unbreeched, is not three birthdays old,
His Grandsire that age more than thirty times told ;
There are ninety good seasons of fair and foul weather 15
Between them, and both go a-pilfering
together.

With chips is the carpenter strewing his
floor ?
Is a cart-load of turf at an old woman's
door ?
Old Daniel his hand to the treasure will slide !
And his Grandson's as busy at work by his side. 20

Old Daniel begins ; he stops short—and his eye,
Through the lost look of dotage, is cunning and sly :
'Tis a look which at this time is hardly
his own,
But tells a plain tale of the days that are
flown.

He once had a heart which was moved by the wires 25
Of manifold pleasures and many desires :
And what if he cherished his purse ?
'Twas no more Than treading a path trod by thousands before.

'Twas a path trod by thousands ; but Daniel is one
Who went something farther than others have gone, 30
And now with old Daniel you see how it fares ;
You see to what end he has brought his grey hairs.

The pair sally forth hand in hand : ere
the sun
Has peered o'er the beeches, their work is begun :
And yet, into whatever sin they may
fall, 35
This child but half knows it, and that not at all.

They hunt through the streets with deliberate tread,
And each, in his turn, becomes leader or
led ;
And, wherever they carry their plots and their wives,
Every face in the village is dimpled with smiles. 40

Neither checked by the rich nor the needy
they roam ;
For the grey-headed Sire has a daughter at home,
Who will gladly repair all the damage
that's done ;
And three, were it asked, would be rendered for one.

Old Man ! whom so oft I with pity have eyed, 45
I love thee, and love the sweet Boy at thy
side :
Long yet may'st thou live ! for a teacher
we see
That lifts up the veil of our nature in thee.

ANIMAL TRANQUILLITY AND
DECAY.

[Composed 1798 (? 1797).—Published 1798.]

THE little hedgerow birds,
That peck along the road, regard him
not.

He travels on, and in his face, his step,
His gait, is one expression : every limb,
His look and bending figure, all bespeak A man who does not move with pain, but moves 6

With thought.—He is insensibly subdued
To settled quiet : he is one by whom All effort seems forgotten ; one to whom Long patience hath such mild composure
given, 10

That patience now doth seem a thing of which

He hath no need. He is by nature led
To peace so perfect that the young behold With envy, what the Old Man hardly feels.

TRANSLATED FROM CHIABRERA.

[Composed ?.—Published 1837.]

WEEP not, belovèd Friends! nor let the
air
For me with sighs be troubled. Not from
life
Have I been taken; this is genuine life
And this alone—the life which now I live
In peace eternal; where desire and joy 5 Together move in fellowship without
end.—

Francesco Ceni willed that, after death,
His tombstone thus should speak for him.
And surely Small cause there is for that fond wish of ours

Long to continue in this world; a world
That keeps not faith, nor yet can point a hope II
To good, whereof itself is destitute.

[Composed 1809 or 1810.—Published February 22,
1810 (The Friend); ed. 1815.]

PERHAPS some needful service of the State Drew TITUS from the depth of studious
bowers,
And doomed him to contend in faithless
courts,
Where gold determines between right and
wrong.
Yet did at length his loyalty of heart 5
And his pure native genius, lead him
back
To wait upon the bright and gracious
Muses, Whom he had early loved. And not in
vain
Such course he held! Bologna's learned schools

Were gladdened by the Sage's voice, and
hung 10
With fondness on those sweet Nestorian
strains.

There pleasure crowned his days; and all his thoughts
A roseate fragrance breathed¹.—O human
life,
That never art secure from dolorous
change!

Behold a high injunction suddenly 15
To Arno's side hath brought him, and he charmed

A Tuscan audience: but full soon was called
To the perpetual silence of the grave.
Mourn, Italy, the loss of him who stood
A Champion steadfast and invincible, 20
To quell the rage of literary War!

O THOU who movest onward with a mind Intent upon thy way, pause, though in haste!

'Twill be no fruitless moment. I was born

Within Savona's walls, of gentle blood.
On Tiber's banks my youth was dedicate To sacred studies; and the Roman Shepherd 6

Gave to my charge Urbino's numerous flock.

Well did I watch, much laboured, nor had power

To escape from many and strange indignities;

1 Ivi vivea giocondo e i suoi pensieri
Erano tutti rose.

The Translator had not skill to come nearer to his original.

Was smitten by the great ones of the
 world, 10
 But did not fall; for Virtue braves all
 shocks,
 Upon herself resting immovably.
 Me did a kindlier fortune then invite
 To serve the glorious Henry, King of France,
 And in his hands I saw a high reward 15
 Stretched out for my acceptance,—but Death came.
 Now, Reader, learn from this my fate,
 how false,
 How treacherous to her promise, is the
 world;
 And trust in God—to whose eternal doom Must bend the sceptred Potentates of
 earth. 20

[Composed 1809.—Published December 28, 1809
 (The Friend); ed. 1815.]

THERE never breathed a man who, when his life
 Was closing, might not of that life relate Toils long and hard.—The warrior will report
 Of wounds, and bright swords flashing in the field,
 And blast of trumpets. He who hath been doomed 5
 To bow his forehead in the courts of kings,
 Will tell of fraud and never-ceasing hate,
 Envy and heart-inquietude, derived From intricate cabals of treacherous
 friends.
 I, who on shipboard lived from earliest
 youth, 10
 Could represent the countenance horrible
 Of the vexed waters, and the indignant
 rage
 Of Auster and Boötes. Fifty years
 Over the well-steered galleys did I rule:—
 From huge Pelorus to the Atlantic pillars, 15
 Rises no mountain to mine eyes unknown;
 And the broad gulfs I traversed oft and oft.
 Of every cloud which in the heavens might stir

I knew the force; and hence the rough sea's pride
 Availed not to my Vessel's overthrow. 20
 What noble pomp and frequent have not I
 On regal decks beheld! yet in the end
 I learned that one poor moment can suffice
 To equalize the lofty and the low.
 We sail the sea of life—a Calm One finds, 25
 And One a Tempest—and, the voyage o'er,
 Death is the quiet haven of us all.
 If more of my condition ye would know,
 Savona was my birthplace, and I sprang
 Of noble parents: seventy years and three Lived I—then yielded to a slow disease.

TRUE is it that Ambrosio Salinero
 With an untoward fate was long involved
 In odious litigation; and full long, Fate harder still! had he to endure asaults
 Of racking malady. And true it is 5
 That not the less a frank courageous heart
 And buoyant spirit triumphed over pain;
 And he was strong to follow in the steps
 Of the fair Muses. Not a covert path Leads to the dear Parnassian forest's shade,
 That might from him be hidden; not a
 track 11
 Mounts to pellucid Hippocrene, but he Had traced its windings.—This Savona
 knows,
 Yet no sepulchral honours to her Son
 She paid, for in our age the heart is ruled
 Only by gold. And now a simple stone Inscribed with this memorial here is raised 17
 By his bereft, his lonely, Chiabrera.
 Think not, O Passenger! who read'st the
 lines
 That an exceeding love hath dazzled me;
 No—he was One whose memory ought to
 spread 21
 Where'er Permessus bears an honoured
 name,
 And live as long as its pure stream shall
 flow.

DESTINED to war from very infancy
Was I, Roberto Dati, and I took
In Malta the white symbol of the Cross:
Nor in life's vigorous season did I shun Hazard or toil; among the sands was seen
Of Lybia; and not seldom, on the banks
Of wide Hungarian Danube, 'twas my lot
To hear the sanguinary trumpet sounded.
So lived I, and repined not at such fate:
This only grieves me, for it seems a wrong, ¹⁰
That stripped of arms I to my end am
brought
On the soft down of my paternal home.
Yet haply Arno shall be spared all cause
To blush for me. Thou, loiter not nor halt
In thy appointed way, and bear in mind
How fleeting and how frail is human life!

O FLOWER of all that springs from gentle
blood,
And all that generous nurture breeds to
make
Youth amiable; O friend so true of soul
To fair Aglaia; by what envy moved, Lelius! has death cut short thy brilliant day ⁵
In its sweet opening? and what dire mishap
Has from Savona torn her best delight?
For thee she mourns, nor e'er will cease
to mourn;
And, should the out-pourings of her eyes suffice not
For her heart's grief, she will entreat
Sebeto ¹⁰
Not to withhold his bounteous aid, Sebeto Who saw thee, on his margin, yield to
death,
In the chaste arms of thy beloved Love!
What profit riches? what does youth avail?
Dust are our hopes;—I, weeping bitterly, Penned these sad lines, nor can forbear to pray ¹⁶

That every gentle Spirit hither led May read them not without some bitter
tears.

NOT without heavy grief of heart did He
On whom the duty fell (for at that time
The father sojourned in a distant land)
Deposit in the hollow of this tomb
A brother's Child, most tenderly beloved!
FRANCESCO was the name the Youth had borne, ⁶
POZZOBONNELLI his illustrious house;
And, when beneath this stone the Corse was laid,
The eyes of all Savona streamed with tears.
Alas! the twentieth April of his life ¹⁰
Had scarcely flowered: and at this early
time,
By genuine virtue he inspired a hope That greatly cheered his country: to his kin
He promised comfort; and the flattering
thoughts
His friends had in their fondness entertained ¹, ¹⁵
He suffered not to languish or decay.
Now is there not good reason to break forth
Into a passionate lament?—O Soul!
Short while a Pilgrim in our nether world,
Do thou enjoy the calm empyreal air; ²⁰
And round this earthly tomb let roses rise,
An everlasting spring! in memory
Of that delightful fragrance which was
once
From thy mild manners quietly exhaled.

¹ In justice to the Author, I subjoin the original:

_____ e degli amici
Non lascjava languire i bel pensieri.

Here laid in mortal darkness, wouldst prefer

A prayer to the Redeemer of the world.
This to the dead by sacred right belongs;
All else is nothing.—Did occasion suit 6
To tell his worth, the marble of this tomb
Would ill suffice: for Plato's lore sublime,
And all the wisdom of the Stagyrice, Enriched and beautified his studious
mind: 10

With Archimedes also he conversed
As with a chosen friend; nor did he leave Those laureat wreaths ungathered which the Nymphs

Twine near their loved Permessus.—
Finally,
Himself above each lower thought up-lifting, 15

His ears he closed to listen to the songs Which Sion's Kings did consecrate of
old;

And his Permessus found on Lebanon.
A blessèd Man! who of protracted days
Made not, as thousands do, a vulgar
sleep; 20

But truly did He live his life. Urbino, Take pride in him!—O Passenger, fare-
well!

By a blest Husband guided, Mary came From nearest kindred, Vernon her new
name;

She came, though meek of soul, in seemly
pride
Of happiness and hope, a youthful Bride.
O dread reverse! if aught be so, which proves 5

That God will chasten whom he dearly
loves.

Faith bore her up through pains in mercy
given,
And troubles that were each a step to
Heaven:

Two Babes were laid in earth before she
died;

A third now slumbers at the Mother's
side; 10

Its Sister-twin survives, whose smiles afford

A trembling solace to her widowed Lord.

Reader! if to thy bosom cling the pain
Of recent sorrow combated in vain;
Or if thy cherished grief have failed to thwart 15

Time still intent on his insidious part, Lulling the mourner's best good thoughts asleep,

Pilfering regrets we would, but cannot,
keep;

Bear with Him—judge Him gently who makes known

His bitter loss by this memorial Stone; 20
And pray that in his faithful breast the
grace

Of resignation find a hallowed place.

II.

[Composed 1812 (?).—Published 1837.]

Six months to six years added he remained

Upon this sinful earth, by sin unstained:
O blessèd Lord! whose mercy then removed

A Child whom every eye that looked on
loved;

Support us, teach us calmly to resign
What we possessed, and now is wholly thine!

III.

CENOTAPH.

In affectionate remembrance of Frances Fermor, whose remains are deposited in the church of Claines, near Worcester, this stone is erected by her sister, Dame Margaret, wife of Sir George Beaumont, Bart., who, feeling not less than the love of a brother for the deceased, commends this memorial to the care of his heirs and successors in the possession of this place.

By vain affections unenthralled,
Though resolute when duty called
To meet the world's broad eye,
Pure as the holiest cloistered nun
That ever feared the tempting sun, 5
Did Fermor live and die.

This Tablet, hallowed by her name,
 One heart-relieving tear may claim;
 But if the pensive gloom
 Of fond regret be still thy choice, 10
 Exalt thy spirit, hear the voice
 Of Jesus from her tomb!

"I AM THE WAY, THE TRUTH, AND THE LIFE."

EPITAPH

IN THE CHAPEL-YARD OF LANGDALE, WESTMORELAND.

By playful smiles, (alas! too oft
 A sad heart's sunshine) by a soft
 And gentle nature, and a free
 Yet modest hand of charity,
 Through life was OWEN LLOYD endeared 5
 To young and old; and how revered
 Had been that pious spirit, a tide
 Of humble mourners testified,
 When, after pains dispensed to prove
 The measure of God's chastening love, 10
 Here, brought from far, his corse found
 rest,—

Fulfilment of his own request;—
 Urged less for this Yew's shade, though he Planted with such fond hope the tree;
 Less for the love of stream and rock, 15
 Dear as they were, than that his Flock,
 When they no more their Pastor's voice
 Could hear to guide them in their choice
 Through good and evil, help might have,
 Admonished, from his silent grave, 20
 Of righteousness, of sins forgiven,
 For peace on earth and bliss in heaven.

ADDRESS TO THE SCHOLARS OF
 THE VILLAGE SCHOOL OF ———.

[Composed 1798.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

I COME, ye little noisy Crew,
 Not long your pastime to prevent;
 I heard the blessing which to you
 Our common Friend and Father sent.
 I kissed his cheek before he died; 5
 And when his breath was fled,

I raised, while kneeling by his side,
 His hand:—it dropped like lead.
 Your hands, dear Little-ones, do all
 That can be done, will never fall 10
 Like his till they are dead.
 By night or day, blow foul or fair,
 Ne'er will the best of all your train
 Play with the locks of his white hair,
 Or stand between his knees again. 15

Here did he sit confined for hours;
 But he could see the woods and plains,
 Could hear the wind and mark the showers Come streaming down the streaming panes.

Now stretched beneath his grass-green
 mound 20
 He rests a prisoner of the ground.
 He loved the breathing air,
 He loved the sun, but if it rise
 Or set, to him where now he lies,
 Brings not a moment's care. 25
 Alas! what idle words; but take
 The Dirge which for our Master's sake
 And yours, love prompted me to make.
 The rhymes so homely in attire
 With learnèd ears may ill agree, 30
 But chanted by your Orphan Quire
 Will make a touching melody.

DIRGE.

Mourn, Shepherd, near thy old grey stone;
 Thou Angler, by the silent flood;
 And mourn when thou art all alone, 35
 Thou Woodman, in the distant wood!

Thou one blind Sailor, rich in joy
 Though blind, thy tunes in sadness hum;
 And mourn, thou poor half-witted Boy!
 Born deaf, and living deaf and dumb. 40

Thou drooping sick Man, bless the Guide
 Who checked or turned thy headstrong
 youth,

As he before had sanctified
 Thy infancy with heavenly truth.
 Ye Striplings, light of heart and gay, 45
 Bold settlers on some foreign shore,
 Give, when your thoughts are turned this
 way,
 A sigh to him whom we deplore.

For us who here in funeral strain
With one accord our voices raise, 50
Let sorrow overcharged with pain
Be lost in thankfulness and praise.

And when our hearts shall feel a sting
From ill we meet or good we miss,
May touches of his memory bring 55
Fond healing, like a mother's kiss.

BY THE SIDE OF THE GRAVE SOME YEARS AFTER.

LONG time his pulse hath ceased to beat;
But benefits, his gift, we trace—
Expressed in every eye we meet
Round this dear Vale, his native place. 60

To stately Hall and Cottage rude
Flowed from his life what still they hold,
Light pleasures, every day renewed;
And blessings half a century old.

Oh true of heart, of spirit gay, 65
Thy faults, where not already gone
From memory, prolong their stay
For charity's sweet sake alone.

Such solace find we for our loss;
And what beyond this thought we crave
Comes in the promise from the Cross, 71
Shining upon thy happy grave¹.

ELEGIAC STANZAS,

SUGGESTED BY A PICTURE OF PEELE CASTLE, IN A STORM, PAINTED BY SIR GEORGE BEAUMONT.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1807.]

I WAS thy neighbour once, thou rugged
Pile!

Four summer weeks I dwelt in sight of
thee:

I saw thee every day; and all the while Thy Form was sleeping on a glassy sea.

So pure the sky, so quiet was the air! 5
So like, so very like, was day to day!
Whene'er I looked, thy Image still was
there;

It trembled, but it never passed away.

¹ See upon the subject of the three foregoing pieces "Matthew," &c., &c., pp. 486—488.

How perfect was the calm! it seemed no
sleep;

No mood, which season takes away, or brings: 10

I could have fancied that the mighty
Deep

Was even the gentlest of all gentle
Things.

Ah! THEN, if mine had been the Painter's
hand,

To express what then I saw; and add the gleam, 14

The light that never was, on sea or land,
The consecration, and the Poet's dream;

I would have planted thee, thou hoary
Pile

Amid a world how different from this!
Beside a sea that could not cease to smile;
On tranquil land, beneath a sky of bliss.

Thou shouldst have seemed a treasure-house divine 21

Of peaceful years; a chronicle of heaven;—
Of all the sunbeams that did ever shine
The very sweetest had to thee been given.

A Picture had it been of lasting ease, 25
Elysian quiet, without toil or strife;
No motion but the moving tide, a breeze,
Or merely silent Nature's breathing life.

Such, in the fond illusion of my heart,
Such Picture would I at that time have
made: 30

And seen the soul of truth in every part,
A steadfast peace that might not be betrayed.

So once it would have been,—'tis so no
more;

I have submitted to a new control:
A power is gone, which nothing can restore; 35

A deep distress hath humanised my Soul.

Not for a moment could I now behold
A smiling sea, and be what I have been:
The feeling of my loss will ne'er be old;
This, which I know, I speak with mind
serene. 40

Then, Beaumont, Friend! who would have been the Friend,
If he had lived, of Him whom I deplore,
This work of thine I blame not, but commend;

This sea in anger, and that dismal shore.

O 'tis a passionate Work!—yet wise and
well, 45

Well chosen is the spirit that is here;
That Hulk which labours in the deadly
swell,

This rueful sky, this pageantry of fear!

And this huge Castle, standing here
sublime,

I love to see the look with which it braves, 50

Cased in the unfeeling armour of old
time,

The lightning, the fierce wind, and trampling waves.

Farewell, farewell the heart that lives
alone,

Housed in a dream, at distance from the
Kind!

Such happiness, wherever it be known,
Is to be pitied; for 'tis surely blind. 56

But welcome fortitude, and patient cheer,
And frequent sights of what is to be borne!

Such sights, or worse, as are before me
here.—

Not without hope we suffer and we mourn. 60

VII.

TO THE DAISY.

[Composed 1805.—Published 1815.]

SWEET Flower! belike one day to have A place upon thy Poet's grave,

I welcome thee once more:

But He, who was on land, at sea,

My Brother, too, in loving thee, 5

Although he loved more silently,

Sleeps by his native shore.

Ah! hopeful, hopeful was the day

When to that Ship he bent his way,

To govern and to guide: 10

His wish was gained: a little time

Would bring him back in manhood's prime
And free for life, these hills to climb,
With all his wants supplied.

And full of hope day followed day 15

While that stout Ship at anchor lay

Beside the shores of Wight;

The May had then made all things green;

And, floating there, in pomp serene,

That Ship was goodly to be seen, 20

His pride and his delight!

Yet then, when called ashore, he sought

The tender peace of rural thought:

In more than happy mood

To your abodes, bright daisy Flowers! 25

He then would steal at leisure hours,

And loved you glittering in your bowers,

A starry multitude.

But hark the word!—the ship is gone;—

Returns from her long course:—anon 30

Sets sail:—in season due,

Once more on English earth they stand:

But, when a third time from the land

They parted, sorrow was at hand

For Him and for his crew. 35

Ill-fated Vessel!—ghastly shock!

—At length delivered from the rock,

The deep she hath regained;

And through the stormy night they steer;

Labouring for life, in hope and fear, 40

To reach a safer shore—how near,

Yet not to be attained!

“Silence!” the brave Commander cried;

To that calm word a shriek replied,

It was the last death-shriek. 45

—A few (my soul oft sees that sight)

Survive upon the tall mast's height;

But one dear remnant of the night—

For Him in vain I seek.

Six weeks beneath the moving sea 50

He lay in slumber quietly;

Unforced by wind or wave

To quit the Ship for which he died,

(All claims of duty satisfied;)

And there they found him at her side; 55

And bore him to the grave.

Vain service! yet not vainly done

For this, if other end were none,

That He, who had been cast
Upon a way of life unmeet 60
For such a gentle Soul and sweet,
Should find an undisturbed retreat
Near what he loved, at last—

That neighbourhood of grove and field
To Him a resting-place should yield, 65
A meek man and a brave!
The birds shall sing and ocean make
A mournful murmur for his sake;
And Thou, sweet Flower, shalt sleep and
wake
Upon his senseless grave. 70

VIII.

ELEGIAC VERSES,

IN MEMORY OF MY BROTHER, JOHN WORDSWORTH,

Commander of the E. I. Company's ship, the Earl of Abergavenny, in which he perished by calamitous shipwreck, Feb. 6th, 1805. Composed near the Mountain track, that leads from Grasmere through Gridale Hawes, where it descends towards Patterdale.

[Composed 1805.—Published: vol. of 1842.]

I.

THE Sheep-boy whistled loud, and lo!
That instant, startled by the shock,
The Buzzard mounted from the rock Deliberate and slow:
Lord of the air, he took his flight; 5
Oh! could he on that woeful night
Have lent his wing, my Brother dear,
For one poor moment's space to Thee,
And all who struggled with the Sea,
When safety was so near. 10

II.

Thus in the weakness of my heart
I spoke (but let that pang be still)
When rising from the rock at will,
I saw the Bird depart.
And let me calmly bless the Power 15
That meets me in this unknown Flower, Affecting type of him I mourn!
With calmness suffer and believe,
And grieve, and know that I must grieve,
Not cheerless, though forlorn. 20

III.

Here did we stop; and here looked round
While each into himself descends,
For that last thought of parting Friends
That is not to be found. 24
Hidden was Grasmere Vale from sight,
Our home and his, his heart's delight,
His quiet heart's selected home.
But time before him melts away,
And he hath feeling of a day
Of blessedness to come. 30

IV.

Full soon in sorrow did I weep,
Taught that the mutual hope was dust,
In sorrow, but for higher trust,
How miserably deep!
All vanished in a single word, 35
A breath, a sound, and scarcely heard.
Sea—Ship—drowned—Shipwreck—so it
came,
The meek, the brave, the good, was gone;
He who had been our living John
Was nothing but a name. 40

V.

That was indeed a parting! oh,
Glad am I, glad that it is past;
For there were some on whom it cast Unutterable woe.
But they as well as I have gains;— 45
From many a humble source, to pains
Like these, there comes a mild release;
Even here I feel it, even this Plant
Is in its beauty ministrant
To comfort and to peace. 50

VI.

He would have loved thy modest grace, Meek Flower! To Him I would have
said,
"It grows upon its native bed
Beside our Parting-place;
There, cleaving to the ground, it lies 55
With multitude of purple eyes,
Spangling a cushion green like moss;
But we will see it, joyful tide!
Some day, to see it in its pride,
The mountain will we cross." 60

VII.

—Brother and friend, if verse of mine
 Have power to make thy virtues known,
 Here let a monumental Stone
 Stand—sacred as a Shrine ;
 And to the few who pass this way, 65
 Traveller or Shepherd, let it say,
 Long as these mighty rocks endure,—
 Oh do not Thou too fondly brood,
 Although deserving of all good,
 On any earthly hope, however pure!¹ 70

SONNET.

[Composed 1846.—Published 1850.]

WHY should we weep or mourn, Angelic
 boy,
 For such thou wert ere from our sight
 removed,
 Holy, and ever dutiful—beloved
 From day to day with never-ceasing joy,
 And hopes as dear as could the heart
 employ 5
 In aught to earth pertaining? Death has proved
 His might, nor less his mercy, as behoved—
 Death conscious that he only could destroy
 The bodily frame. That beauty is laid low
 To moulder in a far-off field of Rome; 10
 But Heaven is now, blest Child, thy Spirit's home:
 When such divine communion, which we
 know,
 Is felt, thy Roman burial-place will be Surely a sweet remembrancer of Thee.

Composed at Grasmere, during a walk one Evening, after a stormy day, the Author having just read in a Newspaper that the dissolution of Mr. Fox was hourly expected.
 [Composed September (?), 1806.—Published 1807.]
 LOUD is the Vale! the Voice is up With which she speaks when storms are
 gone,

¹ The plant alluded to is the Moss Campion (Silene acaulis, of Linnæus). See Note, p. 925.
 See among the Poems on the "Naming of Places," No. VI.

A mighty unison of streams!
 Of all her Voices, One!
 Loud is the Vale;—this inland Depth 5
 In peace is roaring like the Sea;
 Yon star upon the mountain-top
 Is listening quietly.

Sad was I, even to pain deprest,
 Importunate and heavy load!² 10
 The Comforter hath found me here,
 Upon this lonely road;

And many thousands now are sad—
 Wait the fulfilment of their fear;
 For he must die who is their stay, 15
 Their glory disappear.

A Power is passing from the earth
 To breathless Nature's dark abyss;
 But when the great and good depart
 What is it more than this— 20

That Man, who is from God sent forth,
 Doth yet again to God return?—
 Such ebb and flow must ever be,
 Then wherefore should we mourn?

XI.

INVOCATION TO THE EARTH.

FEBRUARY, 1816.

[Composed February, 1816.—Published 1816.]

I.

"REST, rest, perturbèd Earth!
 O rest, thou doleful Mother of Man-
 kind!"

A Spirit sang in tones more plaintive than
 the wind:

"From regions where no evil thing has
 birth

I come—thy stains to wash away, 5
 Thy cherished fetters to unbind,
 And open thy sad eyes upon a milder
 day.

The Heavens are thronged with martyrs that have risen

From out thy noisome prison;
 The penal caverns groan 10

² Importuna e grave salma.
 MICHAEL ANGELO.

With tens of thousands rent from off the
tree
Of hopeful life,—by battle's whirlwind blown
Into the deserts of Eternity.
Unpitied havoc! Victims unlamented!
But not on high, where madness is resented, 15
And murder causes some sad tears to flow,
Though, from the widely-sweeping blow,
The choirs of Angels spread, triumphantly augmented.

II.

“False Parent of Mankind!
Obdurate, proud, and blind, 20
I sprinkle thee with soft celestial dews,
Thy lost, maternal heart to re-infuse!
Scattering this far-fetched moisture from my wings,
Upon the act a blessing I implore, 24
Of which the rivers in their secret springs,
The rivers stained so oft with human gore,
Are conscious;—may the like return no
more!
May Discord—for a Seraph's care
Shall be attended with a bolder prayer—
May she, who once disturbed the seats of
bliss 30
These mortal spheres above,
Be chained for ever to the black abyss!
And thou, O rescued Earth, by peace and
love,
And merciful desires, thy sanctity approve!” 34
The Spirit ended his mysterious rite,
And the pure vision closed in darkness infinite.

LINES

WRITTEN ON A BLANK LEAF IN A COPY OF THE AUTHOR'S POEM “THE EX-CURSION,” UPON HEARING OF THE DEATH OF THE LATE VICAR OF KENDAL.

[Composed November 13, 1814.—Published 1815.]
To public notice, with reluctance strong,
Did I deliver this unfinished Song;

Yet for one happy issue;—and I look
With self-congratulation on the Book Which pious, learned, MURFIT saw and
read;— 5
Upon my thoughts his saintly Spirit fed;
He conned the new-born Lay with grateful heart—
Foreboding not how soon he must de-
part;
Unweeting that to him the joy was given Which good men take with them from earth to heaven. 10

XIII.

ELEGIAC STANZAS.

(ADDRESSED TO SIR G. H. B. UPON THE DEATH OF HIS SISTER-IN-LAW.)

[Composed probably Dec. 1824.—Published 1827.]

O FOR a dirge! But why complain?
Ask rather a triumphal strain
When FERMOR'S race is run;
A garland of immortal boughs
To twine around the Christian's brows, 5
Whose glorious work is done.
We pay a high and holy debt;
No tears of passionate regret
Shall stain this votive lay;
Ill-worthy, Beaumont! were the grief 10
That flings itself on wild relief
When Saints have passed away.
Sad doom, at Sorrow's shrine to kneel,
For ever covetous to feel,
And impotent to bear! 15
Such once was hers—to think and think
On severed love, and only sink
From anguish to despair!
But nature to its inmost part Faith had refined; and to her heart 20
A peaceful cradle given:
Calm as the dew-drop's, free to rest
Within a breeze-fanned rose's breast
Till it exhales to Heaven.
Was ever Spirit that could bend 25
So graciously?—that could descend,
Another's need to suit,
So promptly from her lofty throne?—
In works of love, in these alone,
How restless, how minute! 30

Pale was her hue; yet mortal cheek
 Ne'er kindled with a livelier streak
 When aught had suffered wrong,— When aught that breathes had felt a
 wound;
 Such look the Oppressor might confound,
 However proud and strong. 36
 But hushed be every thought that springs
 From out the bitterness of things;
 Her quiet is secure;
 No thorns can pierce her tender feet, 40
 Whose life was, like the violet, sweet,
 As climbing jasmine, pure—

As snowdrop on an infant's grave,
 Or lily heaving with the wave
 That feeds it and defends; 45
 As Vesper, ere the star hath kissed
 The mountain top, or breathed the mist
 That from the vale ascends.

Thou takest not away, O Death!
 Thou strikest—absence perisheth, 50
 Indifference is no more;
 The future brightens on our sight;
 For on the past hath fallen a light
 That tempts us to adore.

XIV.

ELEGIAC MUSINGS.

IN THE GROUNDS OF COLEORTON HALL,
 THE SEAT OF THE LATE SIR G. H.
 BEAUMONT, BART.

In these grounds stands the Parish Church, wherein is a mural monument bearing an inscription which, in deference to the earnest request of the deceased, is confined to name, dates, and these words:—"Enter not into judgment with thy servant, O Lord!"

[Composed November, 1830.—Published 1835.]

WITH copious eulogy in prose or rhyme Graven on the tomb we struggle against
 Time,
 Alas, how feebly! but our feelings rise
 And still we struggle when a good man
 dies.
 Such offering BEAUMONT dreaded and forbade, 5
 A spirit meek in self-abasement clad.

Yet here at least, though few have numbered days
 That shunned so modestly the light of
 praise,
 His graceful manners, and the temperate
 ray
 Of that arch fancy which would round him play, 10
 Brightening a converse never known to swerve
 From courtesy and delicate reserve;
 That sense, the bland philosophy of life,
 Which checked discussion ere it warmed to strife;
 Those rare accomplishments, and varied
 powers, 15
 Might have their record among sylvan
 bowers.
 Oh, fled for ever! vanished like a blast
 That shook the leaves in myriads as it
 passed;—
 Gone from this world of earth, air, sea,
 and sky,
 From all its spirit-moving imagery, 20
 Intensely studied with a painter's eye,
 A poet's heart; and, for congenial view,
 Portrayed with happiest pencil, not un-
 true
 To common recognitions while the line 24
 Flowed in a course of sympathy divine;—
 Oh! severed, too abruptly, from delights
 That all the seasons shared with equal rights;—
 Rapt in the grace of undismantled age,
 From soul-felt music, and the treasured
 page
 Lit by that evening lamp which loved to
 shed 30
 Its mellow lustre round thy honoured
 head;
 While Friends beheld thee give with eye,
 voice, mien,
 More than theatric force to Shakspeare's
 scene;—
 If thou hast heard me—if thy Spirit know Aught of these bowers and whence their pleasures flow; 35
 If things in our remembrance held so
 dear,
 And thoughts and projects fondly cherished here,

To thy exalted nature only seem Time's vanities, light fragments of earth's dream—

Rebuke us not!—The mandate is obeyed
That said, "Let praise be mute where I am laid;" 41

The holier deprecation, given in trust
To the cold marble, waits upon thy dust;
Yet have we found how slowly genuine
grief

From silent admiration wins relief. 45
Too long abashed thy Name is like a rose That doth "within itself its sweetness
close;"

A drooping daisy changed into a cup
In which her bright-eyed beauty is shut up.
Within these groves, where still are flitting by 50

Shades of the Past, oft noticed with a sigh,
Shall stand a votive Tablet, haply free,
When towers and temples fall, to speak of Thee!

If sculptured emblems of our mortal doom
Recall not there the wisdom of the Tomb,
Green ivy risen from out the cheerful earth
Will fringe the lettered stone; and herbs spring forth,

Whose fragrance, by soft dews and rain unbound,

Shall penetrate the heart without a wound;
While truth and love their purposes fulfil,
Commemorating genius, talent, skill, 61
That could not lie concealed where Thou wert known;

Thy virtues He must judge, and He alone,
The God upon whose mercy they are thrown.

XV.

WRITTEN AFTER THE DEATH OF CHARLES LAMB.

[Composed November, 1835.—Published 1837.]

To a good Man of most dear memory
This Stone is sacred. Here he lies apart From the great city where he first drew
breath,

Was reared and taught; and humbly earned his bread,

To the strict labours of the merchant's desk 5

By duty chained. Not seldom did those tasks

Tease, and the thought of time so spent depress,

His spirit, but the recompense was high;
Firm Independence, Bounty's rightful
sire;

Affections, warm as sunshine, free as air;
And when the precious hours of leisure
came, 11

Knowledge and wisdom, gained from converse sweet

With books, or while he ranged the crowded streets

With a keen eye, and overflowing heart:
So genius triumphed over seeming wrong,
And poured out truth in works by thoughtful love 16

Inspired—works potent over smiles and
tears.

And as round mountain-tops the lightning plays,

Thus innocently sported, breaking forth
As from a cloud of some grave sympathy,
Humour and wild instinctive wit, and all
The vivid flashes of his spoken words. 22

From the most gentle creature nursed in
fields

Had been derived the name he bore—
a name,

Wherever Christian altars have been raised, 25

Hallowed to meekness and to innocence;
And if in him meekness at times gave way, Provoked out of herself by troubles
strange,

Many and strange, that hung about his
life;

Still, at the centre of his being, lodged 30
A soul by resignation sanctified:

And if too often, self-reproached, he felt
That innocence belongs not to our kind,
A power that never ceased to abide in him,
Charity, 'mid the multitude of sins 35

That she can cover, left not his exposed
To an unforgiving judgment from just
Heaven.

O, he was good, if e'er a good Man lived!

From a reflecting mind and sorrowing
heart

Those simple lines flowed with an earnest
 wish, 40
 Though but a doubting hope, that they might serve
 Fitly to guard the precious dust of him Whose virtues called them forth. That aim is missed ;
 For much that truth most urgently required
 Had from a faltering pen been asked in
 vain : 45
 Yet, haply, on the printed page received,
 The imperfect record, there, may stand unblamed
 As long as verse of mine shall breathe the
 air
 Of memory, or see the light of love.

Thou wert a scorner of the fields, my
 Friend, 50
 But more in show than truth ; and from
 the fields,
 And from the mountains, to thy rural
 grave
 Transported, my soothed spirit hovers o'er Its green untrodden turf, and blowing
 flowers ;
 And taking up a voice shall speak (tho'
 still 55
 Awed by the theme's peculiar sanctity Which words less free presumed not even to touch)
 Of that fraternal love, whose heaven-lit lamp
 From infancy, through manhood, to the last
 Of threescore years, and to thy latest
 hour, 60
 Burnt on with ever-strengthening light, enshrined
 Within thy bosom.

“Wonderful” hath been The love established between man and
 man, “Passing the love of women ;” and between Man and his help-mate in fast wedlock
 joined 65
 Through God, is raised a spirit and soul
 of love
 Without whose blissful influence Paradise

Had been no Paradise ; and earth were
 now
 A waste where creatures bearing human
 form, Direst of savage beasts, would roam in
 fear, 70
 Joyless and comfortless. Our days glide
 on ;
 And let him grieve who cannot choose but grieve
 That he hath been an Elm without his Vine,
 And her bright dower of clustering chari-
 ties,
 That, round his trunk and branches,
 might have clung 75
 Enriching and adorning. Unto thee,
 Not so enriched, not so adorned, to thee
 Was given (say rather thou of later birth Wert given to her) a Sister—'tis a word
 Timidly uttered, for she lives, the meek,
 The self-restraining, and the ever-kind ; 81
 In whom thy reason and intelligent heart Found—for all interests, hopes, and tender
 cares,
 All softening, humanising, hallowing
 powers,
 Whether withheld, or for her sake un-
 sought— 85
 More than sufficient recompense !
 Her love
 (What weakness prompts the voice to tell it here ?)
 Was as the love of mothers ; and when
 years,
 Lifting the boy to man's estate, had called
 The long-protected to assume the part 90
 Of a protector, the first filial tie
 Was undissolved ; and, in or out of sight,
 Remained imperishably interwoven
 With life itself. Thus, 'mid a shifting
 world,
 Did they together testify of time 95
 And season's difference—a double tree With two collateral stems sprung from one root ;
 Such were they—such thro' life they might have been
 In union, in partition only such ;
 Otherwise wrought the will of the Most
 High ; 100
 Yet, thro' all visitations and all trials,

Still they were faithful; like two vessels launched

From the same beach one ocean to explore With mutual help, and sailing—to their league

True, as inexorable winds, or bars 105
Floating or fixed of polar ice, allow.

But turn we rather, let my spirit turn
With thine, O silent and invisible Friend!
To those dear intervals, nor rare nor brief,
When reunited, and by choice withdrawn From miscellaneous converse, ye were
taught 111

That the remembrance of foregone distress,
And the worse fear of future ill (which oft Doth hang around it, as a sickly child
Upon its mother) may be both alike 115
Disarmed of power to unsettle present
good

So prized, and things inward and outward
held

In such an even balance, that the heart Acknowledges God's grace, his mercy
feels,

And in its depth of gratitude is still. 120

O gift divine of quiet sequestration!
The hermit, exercised in prayer and
praise,

And feeding daily on the hope of heaven,
Is happy in his vow, and fondly cleaves
To life-long singleness; but happier far Was to your souls, and, to the thoughts of others, 126

A thousand times more beautiful appeared,

Your dual loneliness. The sacred tie Is broken; yet why grieve? for Time but holds

His moiety in trust, till Joy shall lead 130
To the blest world where parting is unknown.

XVI.

EXTEMPORE EFFUSION UPON THE DEATH OF JAMES HOGG.

[Composed November, 1835.—Published December 12, 1835 (The Athenæum); ed. 1837.]

WHEN first, descending from the moor-
lands,

I saw the Stream of Yarrow glide

Along a bare and open valley,
The Ettrick Shepherd was my guide.

When last along its banks I wandered, 5
Through groves that had begun to shed
Their golden leaves upon the pathways,
My steps the Border-minstrel led.

The mighty Minstrel breathes no longer,
'Mid mouldering ruins low he lies; 10
And death upon the braes of Yarrow,
Has closed the Shepherd-poet's eyes:

Nor has the rolling year twice measured,
From sign to sign, its steadfast course,
Since every mortal power of Coleridge 15
Was frozen at its marvellous source;

The rapt One, of the godlike forehead,
The heaven-eyed creature sleeps in earth:
And Lamb, the frolic and the gentle,
Has vanished from his lonely hearth. 20

Like clouds that rake the mountain-summits,

Or waves that own no curbing hand,
How fast has brother followed brother,
From sunshine to the sunless land!

Yet I, whose lids from infant slumber 25
Were earlier raised, remain to hear
A timid voice, that asks in whispers,
"Who next will drop and disappear?"

Our haughty life is crowned with dark-
ness,

Like London with its own black wreath,
On which with thee, O Crabbe! forth-looking, 31

I gazed from Hampstead's breezy heath.

As if but yesterday departed,
Thou too art gone before; but why,
O'er ripe fruit, seasonably gathered, 35
Should frail survivors heave a sigh?

Mourn rather for that holy Spirit,
Sweet as the spring, as ocean deep;
For Her who, ere her summer faded,
Has sunk into a breathless sleep. 40

No more of old romantic sorrows,
For slaughtered Youth or love-lorn Maid!
With sharper grief is Yarrow smitten,
And Ettrick mourns with her their Poet
dead!

INSCRIPTION

FOR A MONUMENT IN CROSTHWAITE
CHURCH, IN THE VALE OF KESWICK.

[Composed 1843.—Published 1845.]

YE vales and hills whose beauty hither
drew

The poet's steps, and fixed him here, on you His eyes have closed! And ye, lov'd books, no more

Shall Southey feed upon your precious lore,
To works that ne'er shall forfeit their renown, 5

Adding immortal labours of his own—
Whether he traced historic truth, with zeal
For the State's guidance, or the Church's
weal,

Or Fancy, disciplined by studious art, Inform'd his pen, or wisdom of the
heart,

Or judgments sanctioned in the Patriot's
mind 11

By reverence for the rights of all man-
kind.

Wide were his aims, yet in no human
breast

Could private feelings meet for holier
rest.

His joys, his griefs, have vanished like a cloud 15

From Skiddaw's top; but he to heaven was vowed

Through his industrious life, and Christian
faith

Calmed in his soul the fear of change and death.

O D E.

INTIMATIONS OF IMMORTALITY FROM RECOLLECTIONS OF EARLY CHILDHOOD.

The Child is father of the Man;
And I could wish my days to be Bound each to each by natural plety.

[Composed 1803 (? 1802)—1806.—Published 1807.]

I.

THERE was a time when meadow, grove,
and stream,

The earth, and every common sight,
To me did seem

Apparelled in celestial light,

The glory and the freshness of a dream.

It is not now as it hath been of yore;—

Turn wheresoe'er I may,

By night or day,

The things which I have seen I now can see no more.

II.

The Rainbow comes and goes, 10

And lovely is the Rose,

The Moon doth with delight

Look round her when the heavens are
bare,

Waters on a starry night

Are beautiful and fair; 15

The sunshine is a glorious birth;

But yet I know, where'er I go,

That there hath past away a glory from the earth.

III.

Now, while the birds thus sing a joyous
song,

And while the young lambs bound 20
As to the tabor's sound,

To me alone there came a thought of
grief:

A timely utterance gave that thought relief,

And I again am strong:

The cataracts blow their trumpets from the steep; 25

No more shall grief of mine the season
wrong;

I hear the Echoes through the mountains
throng,

The Winds come to me from the fields of
sleep,

And all the earth is gay;

Land and sea 30

Give themselves up to jollity,

And with the heart of May

Doth every Beast keep holiday;—

Thou Child of Joy,

Shout round me, let me hear thy shouts, thou happy Shepherd-boy! 35

IV.

Ye blessèd Creatures, I have heard the
call

Ye to each other make; I see

The heavens laugh with you in your jubilee;

My heart is at your festival,

My head hath its coronal, 40

The fulness of your bliss, I feel—I feel it
all.

Oh evil day! if I were sullen

While Earth herself is adorning,

This sweet May-morning,

And the Children are culling 45

On every side,

In a thousand valleys far and wide,

Fresh flowers; while the sun shines

warm,

And the Babe leaps up on his Mother's arm:—

I hear, I hear, with joy I hear! 50

—But there's a Tree, of many, one,

A single Field which I have looked upon,
Both of them speak of something that is
gone:

The Pansy at my feet

Doth the same tale repeat: 55

Whither is fled the visionary gleam?

Where is it now, the glory and the dream?

V.

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,

Hath had elsewhere its setting, 60

And cometh from afar:

Not in entire forgetfulness,

And not in utter nakedness,

But trailing clouds of glory do we come

From God, who is our home: 65

Heaven lies about us in our infancy!

Shades of the prison-house begin to close

Upon the growing Boy,

But He beholds the light, and whence it flows,

He sees it in his joy; 70

The Youth, who daily farther from the east

Must travel, still is Nature's Priest,

And by the vision splendid

Is on his way attended;

At length the Man perceives it die away,

And fade into the light of common day. 76

VI.

Earth fills her lap with pleasures of her
own;

Yearnings she hath in her own natural
kind,

And, even with something of a Mother's
mind,

And no unworthy aim, 80

The homely Nurse doth all she can

To make her Foster-child, her Inmate
Man,

Forget the glories he hath known,

And that imperial palace whence he came.

VII.

Behold the Child among his new-born blisses, 85

A six years' Darling of a pigmy size!

See, where 'mid work of his own hand he
lies,

Fretted by sallies of his mother's kisses,

With light upon him from his father's
eyes!
See, at his feet, some little plan or chart,
Some fragment from his dream of human
life, 91
Shaped by himself with newly-learned art;
A wedding or a festival,
A mourning or a funeral;
And this hath now his heart, 95
And unto this he frames his song:
Then will he fit his tongue
To dialogues of business, love, or strife;
But it will not be long Ere this be thrown aside, 100
And with new joy and pride
The little Actor cons another part; Filling from time to time his "humorous
stage"
With all the Persons, down to palsied
Age,
That Life brings with her in her equipage;
As if his whole vocation 106
Were endless imitation.

VIII.

Thou, whose exterior semblance doth belie
Thy Soul's immensity; Thou best Philosopher, who yet dost
keep 110
Thy heritage, thou Eye among the blind,
That, deaf and silent, read'st the eternal
deep,
Haunted for ever by the eternal mind,— Mighty Prophet! Seer blest!
On whom those truths do rest, 115
Which we are toiling all our lives to find,
In darkness lost, the darkness of the
grave;
Thou, over whom thy Immortality
Broods like the Day, a Master o'er a Slave,
A Presence which is not to be put by; 120
[To whom the grave
Is but a lonely bed without the sense or
sight
Of day or the warm light,
A place of thought where we in waiting lie;¹]

¹ Found in edd. 1807 and 1815; omitted from ed. 1820 and all subsequent issues in consequence of Coleridge's adverse criticism. See Biographia Literaria, chap. xxii.—Ed.

Thou little Child, yet glorious in the
might 125
Of heaven-born freedom on thy being's
height,
Why with such earnest pains dost thou provoke
The years to bring the inevitable yoke, Thus blindly with thy blessedness at
strife?
Full soon thy Soul shall have her earthly freight, 130
And custom lie upon thee with a weight,
Heavy as frost, and deep almost as life!

IX.

O joy! that in our embers
Is something that doth live,
That nature yet remembers 135
What was so fugitive!
The thought of our past years in me doth breed
Perpetual benediction: not indeed
For that which is most worthy to be
blest;
Delight and liberty, the simple creed 140
Of Childhood, whether busy or at rest,
With new-fledged hope still fluttering in his breast:—
Not for these I raise
The song of thanks and praise;
But for those obstinate questionings
Of sense and outward things, 146
Fallings from us, vanishings;
Blank misgivings of a Creature
Moving about in worlds not realised,
High instincts before which our mortal
Nature 150
Did tremble like a guilty Thing surprised:
But for those first affections,
Those shadowy recollections,
Which, be they what they may, 154
Are yet the fountain-light of all our day,
Are yet a master-light of all our seeing;
Uphold us, cherish, and have power to make Our noisy years seem moments in the being
Of the eternal Silence: truths that wake,
To perish never: - 160
Which neither listlessness, nor mad endeavour,

Nor Man nor Boy,
 Nor all that is at enmity with joy,
 Can utterly abolish or destroy !
 Hence in a season of calm weather
 Though inland far we be, 166
 Our Souls have sight of that immortal
 sea
 Which brought us hither,
 Can in a moment travel thither,
 And see the Children sport upon the
 shore, 170
 And hear the mighty waters rolling evermore.

X.

Then sing, ye Birds, sing, sing a joyous
 song !
 And let the young Lambs bound
 As to the tabor's sound !
 We in thought will join your throng, 175
 Ye that pipe and ye that play, Ye that through your hearts to-
 day
 Feel the gladness of the May !
 What though the radiance which was once so bright
 Be now for ever taken from my sight, 180 Though nothing can bring back the
 hour
 Of splendour in the grass, of glory in the
 flower ;
 We will grieve not, rather find Strength in what remains behind ;
 In the primal sympathy 185
 Which having been must ever be ;

In the soothing thoughts that spring
 Out of human suffering ;
 In the faith that looks through
 death,
 In years that bring the philosophic mind.

XI.

And O, ye Fountains, Meadows, Hills,
 and Groves, 191
 Forebode not any severing of our loves !
 Yet in my heart of hearts I feel your
 might ;
 I only have relinquish'd one delight
 To live beneath your more habitual sway.
 I love the Brooks which down their channels fret, 196
 Even more than when I tripp'd lightly as they ;
 The innocent brightness of a new-born Day
 Is lovely yet ;
 The Clouds that gather round the setting
 sun 200
 Do take a sober colouring from an eye
 That hath kept watch o'er man's mortality ;
 Another race hath been, and other palms are won.
 Thanks to the human heart by which we
 live,
 Thanks to its tenderness, its joys, and
 fears, 205
 To me the meanest flower that blows can
 give Thoughts that do often lie too deep for
 tears.

APPENDIX: POEMS OF 1793¹.

An Evening Walk. Arise

James
REPRINTED FROM THE QUARTO OF 1793. C

AN EVENING WALK. AN EPISTLE; IN VERSE. ADDRESSED TO A YOUNG LADY, FROM THE LAKES OF THE NORTH OF ENGLAND. BY W. WORDSWORTH, B.A., OF ST. JOHN'S, CAMBRIDGE. LONDON: PRINTED FOR J. JOHNSON, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD. 1793.

ARGUMENT.

General Sketch of the Lakes.—Author's Regret of his Youth passed amongst them.—Short description of Noon.—Cascade Scene.—Noontide Retreat.—Precipice and Sloping Lights.—Face of Nature as the Sun declines.—Mountain Farm, and the Cock.—Slate Quarry.—Sunset.—Superstition of the Country, connected with that Moment.—Swans.—Female Beggar.—Twilight Objects.—Twilight Sounds.—Western Lights.—Spirits.—Night.—Moonlight.—Hope.—Night Sounds.—Conclusion.

FAR from my dearest friend, 'tis mine to rove Thro' bare grey dell, high wood, and pas- toral cove ; His wizard course where hoary Derwent takes Thro' craggs, and forest glooms, and open- ing lakes, Staying his silent waves, to hear the roar 5 That stuns the tremulous cliffs of high Lodore : Where silver rocks the savage prospect cheer Of giant yews that frown on Rydale's mere ; Where peace to Grasmere's lonely island leads, To willow hedgerows, and to emerald meads ; 10	Leads to her bridge, rude church, and cottag'd grounds, Her rocky sheepwalks, and her woodland bounds ; Where, bosom'd deep, the shy Winander ² peeps 'Mid clust'ring isles, and holly-sprinkl'd steeps ; Where twilight glens endear my Esth- waite's shore, 15 And memory of departed pleasures, more. Fair scenes ! with other eyes, than once, I gaze, The ever-varying charm your round dis- plays, Than when, erewhile, I taught, "a happy child," The echoes of your rocks my carols wild : 20

² These lines are only applicable to the middle part of that lake.

Then did no ebb of cheerfulness demand
Sad tides of joy from Melancholy's hand;
In youth's wild eye the livelong day was
bright,

The sun at morning, and the stars of
night,

Alike, when first the vales the bittern
fills, 25

Or the first woodcocks¹ roam'd the moonlight hills.

Return Delights! with whom my road
began,

When Life rear'd laughing up her morning sun;

When Transport kiss'd away my april tear,
"Rocking as in a dream the tedious
year;" 30

When link'd with thoughtless Mirth I cours'd the plain,

And hope itself was all I knew of pain.

For then, ev'n then, the little heart would beat

At times, while young Content forsook
her seat,

And wild Impatience, panting upward, show'd 35

Where tipp'd with gold the mountain-summits glow'd.

Alas! the idle tale of man is found

Depicted in the dial's moral round;

With Hope Reflexion blends her social rays

To gild the total tablet of his days; 40

Yet still, the sport of some malignant
Pow'r,

He knows but from its shade the present
hour.

While, Memory at my side, I wander here, Starts at the simplest sight th' unbidden
tear, 44

A form discover'd at the well-known seat,

A spot, that angles at the riv'let's feet,

The ray the cot of morning trav'ling nigh,

And sail that glides the well-known alders
by.

But why, ungrateful, dwell on idle pain?
To shew her yet some joys to me remain,
Say, will my friend, with soft affection's ear,
The history of a poet's ev'ning hear?

When, in the south, the wan noon brooding still,

Breath'd a pale steam around the glaring
hill,

And shades of deep embattl'd clouds were
seen 55

Spotting the northern cliffs with lights
between;

Gazing the tempting shades to them
deny'd,

When stood the shorten'd herds amid the tide,

Where, from the barren wall's unshelter'd
end,

Long rails into the shallow lake extend;

When schoolboys stretch'd their length
upon the green 61

And round the humming elm, a glimmering scene!

In the brown park, in flocks, the troubl'd
deer

Shook the still twinkling tail and glanc-
ing ear;

When horses in the wall-girt intake²
stood, 65

Unshaded, eying far below, the flood,

Crouded behind the swain, in mute distress,

With forward neck the closing gate to
press;

And long, with wistful gaze, his walk survey'd

Till dipp'd his pathway in the river
shade; 70

—Then Quiet led me up the huddling rill, Bright'ning with water-breaks the sombrous gill³;

To where, while thick above the branches
close,

In dark-brown bason its wild waves repose,

¹ In the beginning of winter, these mountains, in the moonlight nights, are covered with immense quantities of woodcocks; which, in the dark nights, retire into the woods.

² The word intake is local, and signifies a mountain-inclosure.

³ Gill is also, I believe, a term confined to this country. Glen, gill, and dingle, have the same meaning.

Inverted shrubs, and moss of darkest
green, 75

Cling from the rocks, with pale wood-
weeds between;

Save that, atop, the subtle sunbeams
shine,

On wither'd briars that o'er the craggs
recline;

Sole light admitted here, a small cascade, Illumes with sparkling foam the twilight
shade. 80

Beyond, along the visto of the brook,
Where antique roots its bustling path
o'erlook,

The eye reposes on a secret bridge¹ Half grey, half shagg'd with ivy to its ridge.

—Sweet rill, farewell! To-morrow's noon
again, 85

Shall hide me wooing long thy wildwood
strain;

But now the sun has gain'd his western
road,

And eve's mild hour invites my steps
abroad.

While, near the midway cliff, the silver'd kite

In many a whistling circle wheels her
flight; 90

Slant wat'ry lights, from parting clouds
a-pace,

Travel along the precipice's base;
Chearing its naked waste of scatter'd
stone

By lichens grey, and scanty moss o'er-
grown,

Where scarce the foxglove peeps, and
thistle's beard, 95

And desert stone-chat, all day long, is
heard.

How pleasant, as the yellowing sun declines,

And with long rays and shades the landscape shines;

To mark the birches' stems all golden
light,

That lit the dark slant woods with silvery
white! 100

The willows weeping trees, that twinkling hoar,

Glanc'd oft upturn'd along the breezy
shore,

Low bending o'er the colour'd water, fold
Their moveless boughs and leaves like threads of gold;

The skiffs with naked masts at anchor
laid, 105

Before the boat-house peeping thro' the
shade;

Th'unwearing glance of woodman's echo'd
stroke;

And curling from the trees the cottage
smoke.

Their pannier'd train a groupe of potters
goad,

Winding from side to side up the steep
road; 110

The peasant from yon cliff of fearful edge Shot, down the headlong pathway darts
his sledge;

Bright beams the lonely mountain horse
illumine,

Feeding'mid purple heath, "green rings," and broom;

While the sharp slope the slacken'd team
confounds, 115

Downward³ the pond'rous timber-wain
resounds;

Beside their sheltering cross⁴ of wall, the flock

Feeds on in light, nor thinks of winter's shock;

In foamy breaks the rill, with merry
song,

Dash'd down the rough rock, lightly leaps
along; 120

² "Vivid rings of green." GREENWOOD'S Poem on Shooting.

³ "Down the rough slope the pond'rous waggon rings." BEATTIE.

⁴ These rude structures, to protect the flocks, are frequent in this country: the traveller may recollect one in Withburne, another upon Whin-latter.

¹ The reader, who has made the tour of this country, will recognize in this description the features which characterize the lower waterfall in the gardens of Rydale.

From lonesome chapel at the mountain's
feet,
Three humble bells their rustic chime
repeat;
Sounds from the water-side the hammer'd
boat;
And blasted quarry thunders heard remote.

Ev'n here, amid the sweep of endless
woods, 125
Blue pomp of lakes, high cliffs, and falling floods,
Not undelightful are the simplest charms
Found by the verdant door of mountain farms.

Sweetly¹ ferocious round his native walks, Gaz'd by his sister-wives, the monarch
stalks; 130
Spur clad his nervous feet, and firm his
tread,

A crest of purple tops his warrior head.
Bright sparks his black and haggard eye-
ball hurls

Afar, his tail he closes and unfurls;
Whose state, like pine-trees, waving to
and fro, 135

Droops, and o'er canopies his regal brow,
On tiptoe rear'd he blows his clarion
throat,

Threaten'd by faintly answering farms
remote.

Bright'ning the cliffs between where
sombrous pine,

And yew-trees o'er the silver rocks re-cline, 140

I love to mark the quarry's moving trains, Dwarf pannier'd steeds, and men, and
numerous wains:

How busy the enormous hive within,
While Echo dallies with the various din!
Some, hardly heard their chissel's clink-ing sound, 145

Toil, small as pigmies, in the gulph pro-
found;

Some, dim between th' aerial cliffs desery'd,

O'erwalk the viewless plank from side to
side;

These by the pale-blue rocks that ceaseless ring

Glad from their airy baskets hang and
sing. 150

Hung o'er a cloud, above the steep that rears

It's edge all flame, the broad'ning sun
appears;

A long blue bar it's ægis orb divides,
And breaks the spreading of it's golden
tides;

And now it touches on the purple steep
That flings his shadow on the pictur'd
deep. 156

Cross the calm lakes blue shades the cliffs
aspire,

With tow'rs and woods a "prospect all on
fire;"

The coves and secret hollows thro' a ray
Of fainter gold a purple gleam betray;

The gilded turf arrays in richer green 161
Each speck of lawn the broken rocks
between;

Deep yellow beams the scatter'd boles
illuminate,

Far in the level forest's central gloom;
Waving his hat, the shepherd in the vale

Directs his winding dog the cliffs to scale,
That, barking busy 'mid the glittering rocks,

Hunts, where he points, the intercepted flocks;

Where oaks o'erhang the road the radiance
shoots

On tawny earth, wild weeds, and twisted
roots; 170

The Druid² stones their lighted fane un-
fold,

And all the babbling brooks are liquid
gold;

² Not far from Broughton is a Druid monument, of which I do not recollect that any tour descriptive of this country makes mention. Perhaps this poem may fall into the hands of some curious traveller, who may thank me for informing him, that up the Duddon, the river which forms the estuary at Broughton, may be found some of the most romantic scenery of these mountains.

In this description of the cock, I remembered a spirited one of the same animal in the P'Agriculture, ou Les Georgiques Françaises of M. Ros-suet.

Sunk¹ to a curve the day-star lessens
still,
Gives one bright glance, and sinks behind the hill.

In these lone vales, if aught of faith may
claim, 175
Thin silver hairs, and ancient hamlet
fame;
When up the hills, as now, retreats the
light,
Strange apparitions mock the village
sight.

A desperate form appears, that spurs his steed,
Along the midway cliffs with violent
speed; 180
Unhurt pursues his lengthen'd flight, while all Attend, at every stretch, his headlong
fall.

Anon, in order mounts a gorgeous show
Of horsemen shadows winding to and fro;
And now the van is gilt with evening's beam, 185
The rear thro' iron brown betrays a sullen
gleam;
Lost² gradual o'er the heights in pomp
they go,
While silent stands th' admiring vale
below;

Till, but the lonely beacon all is fled,
That tips with eve's last gleam his spiry
head. 190
Now while the solemn evening Shadows
sail,
On red slow-waving pinions down the
vale,
And, fronting the bright west in stronger
lines,
The oak its dark'ning boughs and foliage
twines,

I love beside the flowing lake to stray,
Where winds the road along the secret
bay; 196

By rills that tumble down³ the woody
steeps,
And run in transport to the dimpling
deeps;

Along the "wild meand'ring" shore to
view, Obsequious Grace the winding swan pursue. 200

He swells his lifted chest, and backward flings
His bridling neck between his tow'ring
wings;

Stately, and burning in his pride, divides
And glorying looks around, the silent
tides:

On as he floats, the silver'd waters glow,
Proud of the varying arch and moveless form of snow. 206

While tender Cares and mild domestic
Loves,
With furtive watch pursue her as she moves;

The female with a meeker charm succeeds,
And her brown little ones around her
leads, 210

Nibbling the water lilies as they pass,
Or playing wanton with the floating
grass:

She in a mother's care, her beauty's
pride
Forgets, unweari'd watching every side,
She calls them near, and with affection
sweet 215

Alternately³ they relieve their weary feet; Alternately³ they mount her back, and
rest

Close by her mantling wings' embraces
prest.

Long may ye roam these hermit waves
that sleep,

In birch besprinkl'd cliffs embosom'd
deep; 220

These fairy holms untrodden, still, and
green,

Whose shades protect the hidden wave
serene;

² See a description of an appearance of this kind in Clark's "Survey of the Lakes," accompanied with vouchers of its veracity that may amuse the reader.

³ This is a fact of which I have been an eye-witness.

Whence fragrance scents the water's desart gale,
The violet, and the lily¹ of the vale;
Where, tho' her far-off twilight ditty
steal, 225
They not the trip of harmless milkmaid
feel.

Yon tuft conceals your home, your cottage
bow'r,
Fresh water rushes strew the verdant
floor;
Long grass and willows form the woven
wall,
And swings above the roof the poplar
tall. 230
Thence issuing oft, unwieldy as ye
stalk,
Ye crush with broad black feet your flow'ry walk;
Safe from your door ye hear at breezy
morn,
The hound, the horse's tread, and mellow
horn;
At peace inverted your lithe necks ye lave, 235
With the green bottom strewing o'er the
wave;
No ruder sound your desart haunts invades,
Than waters dashing wild, or rocking
shades.
Ye ne'er, like hapless human wanderers,
throw
Your young on winter's winding sheet of
snow. 240

Fair swan! by all a mother's joys caress'd, Haply some wretch has ey'd, and call'd thee bless'd;
Who faint, and beat by summer's breathless ray,
Hath dragg'd her babes along this weary
way;
While arrowy fire extorting feverish
groans, 245
Shot stinging through her stark o'erlabour'd bones.

—With backward gaze, lock'd joints, and
step of pain,
Her seat scarce left, she strives, alas! in
vain,
To teach their limbs along the burning
road
A few short steps to totter with their load, 250
Shakes her numb arm that slumbers with its weight,
And eyes through tears the mountain's
shadeless height;
And bids her soldier come her woes to
share,
Asleep on Bunker's charnel hill² afar;
For hope's deserted well why wistful
look? 255
Chok'd is the pathway, and the pitcher broke.

I see her now, deny'd to lay her head,
On cold blue nights, in hut or straw-built
shed;
Turn to a silent smile their sleepy cry,
By pointing to a shooting star on high:
I hear, while in the forest depth he sees,
The Moon's fix'd gaze between the opening trees,
In broken sounds her elder grief demand,
And skyward lift, like one that prays, his
hand,
If, in that country, where he dwells
afar, 265
His father views that good, that kindly
star;
—Ah me! all light is mute amid the
gloom,
The interunar cavern of the tomb.
—When low-hung clouds each star of
summer hide,
And fireless are the valleys far and
wide, 270
Where the brook brawls along the painful
road,
Dark with bat haunted ashes stretching
broad,
The distant clock forgot, and chilling dew, Pleas'd thro' the dusk their breaking smiles to view,

² Substituted in Errata for the words of the text:—"Minden's charnel plain."—Ed.

Oft has she taught them on her lap to play Delighted, with the glow-worm's harmless ray 276
 Toss'd light from hand to hand; while on the ground
 Small circles of green radiance gleam
 around.

Oh! when the bitter showers her path
 assail,
 And roars between the hills the torrent
 gale, 280
 —No more her breath can thaw their fingers cold,
 Their frozen arms her neck no more can
 fold;

Scarce heard, their chattering lips her shoulder chill,
 And her cold back their colder bosoms
 thrill;
 All blind she wilders o'er the lightless
 heath, 285
 Led by Fear's cold wet hand, and dogg'd by Death;

Death, as she turns her neck the kiss to seek,
 Breaks off the dreadful kiss with angry
 shriek.

Snatch'd from her shoulder with despairing moan,
 She clasps them at that dim-seen roofless
 stone.— 290

“Now ruthless Tempest launch thy deadliest dart!
 Fall fires—but let us perish heart to
 heart.”

Weak roof a cowering form two babes to
 shield,
 And faint the fire a dying heart can yield;
 Press the sad kiss, fond mother! vainly
 fears 295

Thy flooded cheek to wet them with its
 tears;
 Soon shall the Light'ning hold before thy
 head

His torch, and shew them slumbering in their bed,

No tears can chill them, and no bosom
 warms,

Thy breast their death-bed, coffin'd in thine arms. 300

Sweet are the sounds that mingle from
 afar,

Heard by calm lakes, as peeps the folding
 star,

Where the duck dabbles 'mid the rustling
 sedge,

And feeding pike starts from the water's
 edge,

Or the swan stirs the reeds, his neck and
 bill 305

Wetting, that drip upon the water still;
 And heron, as resounds the trodden shore,

Shoots upward, darting his long neck
 before.

While, by the scene compos'd, the breast subsides,

Nought wakens or disturbs it's tranquil
 tides; 310

Nought but the char that for the may-fly leaps,

And breaks the mirror of the circling
 deeps;

Or clock, that blind against the wanderer
 born,

Drops at his feet, and stills his droning
 horn.

—The whistling swain that plods his ringing way 315

Where the slow waggon winds along the bay;

The sugh¹ of swallow flocks that twitter-ing sweep,

The solemn curfew swinging long and
 deep;

The talking boat that moves with pensive
 sound,

Or drops his anchor down with plunge
 profound; 320

Of boys that bathe remote the faint uproar,

And restless piper wearying out the shore;
 These all to swell the village murmurs
 blend,

That soften'd from the water-head
 descend.

¹ “Sugh,” a Scotch word, expressive, as Mr. Gilpin explains it, of the sound of the motion of a stick through the air, or of the wind passing through the trees. See Burn's Cotter's Saturday Night

While in sweet cadence rising small and
still 325

The far-off minstrels of the haunted hill,
As the last bleating of the fold expires,
Tune in the mountain dells their water lyres.

Now with religious awe the farewell light Blends with the solemn colouring of the
night; 330

'Mid groves of clouds that crest the moun-
tain's brow,

And round the West's proud lodge their shadows throw,

Like Una¹ shining on her gloomy way,
The half seen form of Twilight roams
astray;

Thence, from three paly loopholes mild
and small, 335

Slow lights upon the lake's still bosom
fall,

Beyond the mountain's giant reach that hides

In deep determin'd gloom his subject
tides.

—'Mid the dark steeps repose the shadowy
streams,

As touch'd with dawning moonlight's hoary gleams, 340

Long streaks of fairy light the wave illuminate

With bordering lines of intervening gloom,
Soft o'er the surface creep the lustres pale Tracking with silvery path the change-ful gale.

—'Tis restless magic all; at once the
bright 345

Breaks on the shade, the shade upon the
light,

Fair Spirits are abroad; in sportive chase Brushing with lucid wands the water's
face,

While music stealing round the glimmering deeps

Charms the tall circle of th' enchanted
steeps. 350

—As thro' th' astonish'd woods the notes
ascend,

The mountain streams their rising song suspend;

Below Eve's listening Star the sheep walk stills

It's drowsy tinklings on th' attentive
hills;

The milkmaid stops her ballad, and her pail 355

Stays it's low murmur in th' unbreathing
vale;

No night-duck clamours for his wilder'd
mate,

Aw'd, while below the Genii hold their
state.

—The pomp is fled, and mute the wondrous strains,

No wrack of all the pageant scene remains, 360

So² vanish those fair Shadows, human joys,
But Death alone their vain regret destroys.

Unheeded Night has overcome the vales,
On the dark earth the baff'd vision fails,

If peep between the clouds a star on
high, 365

There turns for glad repose the weary
eye;

The latest lingerer of the forest train,
The lone black fir, forsakes the faded
plain;

Last evening sight, the cottage smoke no
more,

Lost in the deepen'd darkness, glimmers
hoar; 370

High towering from the sullen dark-brown
mere,

Like a black wall, the mountain steeps
appear,

Thence red from different heights with restless gleam

Small cottage lights across the water
stream,

Nought else of man or life remains behind 375

To call from other worlds the wilder'd
mind,

¹ Alluding to this passage of Spenser—

“Her angel face
As the great eye of Heaven shined bright,
And made a sunshine in that shady place.”

² “So break those glittering shadows, human joys.”
YOUNG.

Till pours the wakeful bird her solemn strains

Heard¹ by the night-calm of the wat'ry plains.

—No purple prospects now the mind employ

Glowing in golden sunset tints of joy, 380
But o'er the sooth'd accordant heart we feel

A sympathetic twilight slowly steal,
And ever, as we fondly muse, we find
The soft gloom deep'ning on the tranquil mind.

Stay! pensive, sadly-pleasing visions, stay! 385

Ah no! as fades the vale, they fade away.
Yet still the tender, vacant gloom remains,

Still the cold cheek its shuddering tear retains.

The bird, with fading light who ceas'd to thread

Silent the hedge or steaming rivulet's bed, 390

From his grey re-appearing tower shall soon

Salute with boding note the rising moon,
Frosting with hoary light the pearly ground,

And pouring deeper blue to Æther's bound;

Rejoic'd her solemn pomp of clouds to fold 395

In robes of azure, fleecy white, and gold,
While rose and poppy, as the glow-worm fades,

Chequer with paler red the thicket shades.
Now o'er the eastern hill, where Darkness broods

O'er all its vanish'd dells, and lawns, and woods 400

Where but a mass of shade the sight can trace,

She lifts in silence up her lovely face;
Above the gloomy valley flings her light,
Far to the western slopes with hamlets white;

And gives, where woods the chequer'd upland strew, 405

To the green corn of summer autumn's hue.
Thus Hope, first pouring from her blessed horn

Her dawn, far lovelier than the Moon's own morn;

'Till higher mounted, strives in vain to cheer

The weary hills, impervious, black'ning near; 410

—Yet does she still, undaunted, throw the while

On darling spots remote her tempting smile.

—Ev'n now she decks for me a distant scene,

(For dark and broad the gulph of time between)

Gilding that cottage with her fondest ray,
(Sole bourn, sole wish, sole object of my way; 416

How fair it's lawn and silvery woods appear!

How sweet it's streamlet murmurs in mine ear!

Where we, my friend, to golden days shall rise,

'Till our small share of hardly-painingsighs
(For sighs will ever trouble human breath)

Creep hush'd into the tranquil breast of Death.

But now the clear-bright Moon her zenith gains,

And rimy without speck extend the plains;

The deepest dell the mountain's breast displays, 425

Scarce hides a shadow from her searching rays;

From the dark-blue "faint silvery threads" divide

The hills, while gleams below the azure tide;

The scene is waken'd, yet its peace unbroke,

By silver'd wreaths of quiet charcoal smoke, 430

That, o'er the ruins of the fallen wood,
Steal down the hills, and spread along the flood.

¹ "Charming the night-calm with her powerful song." A line of one of our older poets.

The song of mountain streams unheard by
 day,
 Now hardly heard, beguiles my home-
 ward way.
 All air is, as the sleeping water, still, 435
 List'ning th' aëreal music of the hill,
 Broke only by the slow clock tolling deep,
 Or shout that wakes the ferry-man from
 sleep,
 Soon follow'd by his hollow-parting oar,
 And echo'd hoof approaching the far
 shore; 440

Sound of clos'd gate, across the water
 born,
 Hurrying the feeding hare thro' rustling
 corn;
 The tremulous sob of the complaining
 owl;
 And at long intervals the mill-dog's
 howl;
 The distant forge's swinging thump pro-
 found; 445
 Or yell in the deep woods of lonely
 hound.

Descriptive Sketches.

REPRINTED FROM THE QUARTO OF 1793.

DESCRIPTIVE SKETCHES. IN VERSE. TAKEN DURING A PEDESTRIAN TOUR IN THE ITALIAN, GRISON, SWISS, AND SAVOYARD ALPS. BY W. WORDSWORTH, B.A., OF ST. JOHN'S, CAMBRIDGE. "LOCA PASTORUM DESERTA ATQUE OTIA DIA."—Lucret. "CASTELLA IN TUMULIS—ET LONGE SALTUS LATEQUE VACANTES."—Virgil. LONDON: PRINTED FOR J. JOHNSON, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD. 1793.

TO THE REV. ROBERT JONES, FELLOW OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

DEAR SIR,—However desirous I might have been of giving you proofs of the high place you hold in my esteem, I should have been cautious of wounding your delicacy by thus publicly addressing you, had not the circumstance of my having accompanied you amongst the Alps, seemed to give this dedication a propriety sufficient to do away any scruples which your modesty might otherwise have suggested.

In inscribing this little work to you I consult my heart. You know well how great is the difference between two companions lolling in a post chaise, and two travellers plodding slowly along the road, side by side, each with his little knapsack of necessaries upon his shoulders. How much more of heart between the two latter!

I am happy in being conscious I shall have one reader who will approach the conclusion of these few pages with regret. You they must certainly interest, in remind you of moments to which you can hardly look back without a pleasure not the less dear from a shade of melancholy. You will meet with few images without recollecting the spot where we observed them together, consequently, whatever is feeble in my design, or spiritless in my colouring, will be amply supplied by your own memory.

With still greater propriety I might have inscribed to you a description of some of the features of your native mountains, through which we have wandered together, in the same manner, with so much pleasure. But the sea-sunsets which give such splendour to the vale of Clwyd, Snowdon, the chair of Idris, the quiet village of Bethkelert, Menai and her druids, the Alpine steeps of the Conway, and the still more interesting windings of the wizard stream of the Dee remain yet untouched. Apprehensive that my pencil may never be exercised on these subjects, I cannot let slip this opportunity of thus publicly assuring you with how much affection and esteem, I am, Dear Sir, Your most obedient very humble servant.
W. WORDSWORTH.

WERE there, below, a spot of holy ground,
By Pain and her sad family unfound, Sure, Nature's GOD that spot to man had giv'n,
Where murmuring rivers join the song of ev'n ;
Where falls the purple morning far and
wide 5
In flakes of light upon the mountain-
side ;
Where summer Suns in ocean sink to
rest,
Or moonlight Upland lifts her hoary
breast ;
Where Silence, on her night of wing, o'er-broods
Unfathom'd dells and undiscover'd woods ;
Where rocks and groves the power of waters shakes 11
In cataracts, or sleeps in quiet lakes.
But doubly pitying Nature loves to show'r Soft on his wounded heart her healing
pow'r,
Who plods o'er hills and vales his road
forlorn, 15
Wooing her varying charms from eve to
morn.

No sad vacuities his heart annoy,
Blows not a Zephyr but it whispers
joy ;

For him lost flowers their idle sweets
exhale ;
He tastes the meanest note that swells
the gale ; 20
For him sod-seats the cottage-door adorn,
And peeps the far-off spire, his evening
bourn !
Dear is the forest frowning o'er his head,
And dear the green-sward to his velvet
tread ;
Moves there a cloud o'er mid-day's flaming
eye? 25
Upward he looks—and calls it luxury ;
Kind Nature's charities his steps attend,
In every babbling brook he finds a friend,
While chast'ning thoughts of sweetest use, bestow'd
By Wisdom, moralize his pensive road.
Host of his welcome inn, the noon-tide
bow'r, 31
To his spare meal he calls the passing
poor ;
He views the Sun uprear his golden fire,
Or sink, with heart alive like Memnon's¹
lyre ;
Blesses the Moon that comes with kindest
ray 35
To light him shaken by his viewless way.
With bashful fear no cottage children steal
From him, a brother at the cottage meal,
His humble looks no shy restraint impart,
Around him plays at will the virgin heart.
While unsuspected wheels the village
dance, 41
The maidens eye him with inquiring
glance,
Much wondering what sad stroke of craz-ing Care
Or desperate Love could lead a wanderer
there.
Me, lur'd by hope her sorrows to remove, 45
A heart, that could not much itself approve,
O'er Gallia's wastes of corn dejected led, Her² road elms rustling thin above my
head,

¹ The lyre of Memnon is reported to have emitted melancholy or cheerful tones, as it was touched by the sun's evening or morning rays.

² There are few people whom it may be neces-

Or through her truant pathway's native
 charms,
 By secret villages and lonely farms, 50
 To where the Alps, ascending white in
 air,
 Toy with the Sun, and glitter from afar.
 Ev'n now I sigh at hoary Chartreuse'
 doom
 Weeping beneath his chill of mountain
 gloom.
 Where now is fled that Power whose frown
 severe 55
 Tam'd "sober Reason" till she crouch'd in fear?
 That breath'd a death-like peace these woods around,
 Broke only by th' unvaried torrent's
 sound,
 Or prayer-bell by the dull cicada)
 drown'd.
 The cloister startles at the gleam of arms,
 And Blasphemy the shuddering fane
 alarms; 61
 Nod the cloud-piercing pines their troubl'd
 heads,
 Spires, rocks, and lawns, a browner night
 o'erspreads.
 Strong terror checks the female peasant's
 sighs,
 And start th' astonish'd shades at female
 eyes. 65
 The thundering tube the aged angler hears,
 And swells the groaning torrent with his
 tears.
 From Bruno's forest screams the frighted jay,
 And slow th' insulted eagle wheels away.
 The cross with hideous laughter Demons
 mock, 70
 By angels¹ planted on the aerial rock.
 The "parting Genius" sighs with hollow
 breath
 Along the mystic streams of Life and Death²,

Swelling the outcry dull, that long re-
 sounds
 Portentous, thro' her old woods' trackless
 bounds, 75
 Deepening her echoing torrents' awful
 peal
 And bidding paler shades her form conceal, Vallombre³, 'mid her falling fanes, deplores,
 For ever broke, the sabbath of her bow'rs.
 More pleas'd, my foot the hidden margin roves 80
 Of Como bosom'd deep in chestnut groves.
 No meadows thrown between, the giddy
 steeps
 Tower, bare or silvan, from the narrow deeps.
 To towns, whose shades of no rude sound complain,
 To ringing team unknown and grating
 wain, 85
 To flat-roof'd towns, that touch the water's
 bound,
 Or lurk in woody sunless glens profound,
 Or from the bending rocks obtrusive cling,
 And o'er the whiten'd wave their shadows
 fling;
 Wild round the steeps the little⁴ pathway twines, 90
 And Silence loves it's purple roof of vines.
 The viewless lingerer hence, at evening,
 sees
 From rock-hewn steps the sail between
 the trees;
 Or marks, mid opening cliffs, fair darkey'd maids
 Tend the small harvest of their garden
 glades, 95
 Or, led by distant warbling notes, surveys,
 With hollow ringing ears and darkening
 gaze,

⁴ If any of my readers should ever visit the Lake of Como, I recommend it to him to take a stroll along this charming little pathway; he must chuse the evening, as it is on the western side of the Lake. We pursued it from the foot of the water to its head: it is once interrupted by a ferry.

sary to inform, that the sides of many of the post-roads in France are planted with a row of trees.

¹ Alluding to crosses seen on the tops of the spiry rocks of the Chartreuse, which have every appearance of being inaccessible.

- Binding the charmed soul in powerless
trance,
Lip-dewing Song and ringlet-tossing
Dance,
Where sparkling eyes and breaking smiles
illuminate 100
The bosom'd cabin's lyre-enliven'd gloom;
Or stops the solemn mountain-shades to
view
Stretch, o'er their pictur'd mirror, broad
and blue,
Tracking the yellow sun from steep to
steep,
As up th' opposing hills, with tortoise foot, they creep. 105
Here half a village shines, in gold ar-
ray'd,
Bright as the moon, half hides itself in
shade.
From the dark sylvan roofs the restless
spire,
Inconstant glancing, mounts like springing fire, 109
There, all unshaded, blazing forests throw
Rich golden verdure on the waves below.
Slow glides the sail along th' illumined
shore,
And steals into the shade the lazy oar.
Soft bosoms breathe around contagious
sighs,
And amorous music on the water dies.
Heedless how Pliny, musing here, survey'd
Old Roman boats and figures thro' the
shade,
Pale Passion, overpower'd, retires and woos
The thicket, where th' unlisten'd stock-dove coos.
How bless'd, delicious Scene! the eye that greets 120
Thy open beauties, or thy lone retreats;
Th' unwearied sweep of wood thy cliffs
that scales,
The never-ending waters of thy vales;
The cots, those dim religious groves em-
bow'r,
Or, under rocks that from the water tow'r
Insinuated, sprinkling all the shore, 126
Each with his household boat beside the
door,
Whose flaccid sails in forms fantastic
droop,
Bright'ning the gloom where thick the forests stoop;
—Thy torrents shooting from the clear-
blue sky, 130
Thy towns, like swallows' nests that cleave
on high;
That glimmer hoar in eve's last light, descri'd
Dim from the twilight water's shaggy
side,
Whence lutes and voices down th' enchanted woods
Steal, and compose the oar-forgotten
floods, 135
While Evening's solemn bird melodious weeps,
Heard, by star-spotted bays, beneath the
steeps;
—Thy lake, mid smoking woods, that blue and grey Gleams, streak'd or dappled, hid from morning's ray
Slow-travelling down the western hills, to fold 140
It's green-ting'd margin in a blaze of gold;
From thickly-glittering spires the matin-
bell
Calling the woodman from his desert cell,
A summons to the sound of oars, that pass, Spotting the steaming deeps, to early mass; 145
Slow swells the service o'er the water
born,
While fill each pause the ringing woods of
morn.
Farewel! those forms that, in thy noon-tide shade,
Rest, near their little plots of wheaten
glade;
Those steadfast eyes, that beating breasts inspire 150
To throw the "sultry ray" of young Desire;
Those lips, whose tides of fragrance come,
and go,
Accordant to the cheek's unquiet glow;
Those shadowy breasts in love's soft light array'd,
And rising, by the moon of passion sway'd.

—Thy fragrant gales and lute-resounding streams, 156
Breathe o'er the failing soul voluptuous
dreams ;
While Slavery, forcing the sunk mind to
dwell
On joys that might disgrace the captive's
cell,
Her shameless timbrel shakes along thy
marge, 160
And winds between thine isles the vocal barge.
Yet, arts are thine that rock th' un-sleeping heart,
And smiles to Solitude and Want im-
part.
I lov'd, mid thy most desert woods
astray,
With pensive step to measure my slow
way¹, 165
By lonely, silent cottage-doors to roam,
The far-off peasant's day-deserted home ;
Once did I pierce to where a cabin
stood,
The redbreast peace had bury'd it in
wood,
There, by the door a hoary-headed sire Touch'd with his wither'd hand an aged
lyre ; 171
Beneath an old-grey oak as violets lie, Stretch'd at his feet with steadfast, upward eye,
His children's children join'd the holy
sound,
A hermit—with his family around. 175
Hence shall we seek where fair Locarno
smiles
Embower'd in walnut slopes and citron
isles,
Or charms that smile on Tusa's evening
stream,
While mid dim towers and woods her²
waters gleam :

PETRARCH.

² The river along whose banks you descend in crossing the Alps by the Semplon pass. From the striking contrast of it's features, this pass I should imagine to be the most interesting among the Alps.

From the bright wave, in solemn gloom,
retire 180
The dull-red steeps, and darkening still,
aspire,
To where afar rich orange lustres glow
Round undistinguish'd clouds, and rocks,
and snow ;
Or, led where Viamala's chasms confine
Th' indignant waters of the infant Rhine, Bend o'er th' abyss?—the else impervious
gloom 186
His burning eyes with fearful light
illuminate.
The Grison gypsey here her tent has plac'd,
Sole human tenant of the piny waste ;
Her tawny skin, dark eyes, and glossy locks, 190
Bend o'er the smoke that curls beneath the rocks.

—The mind condemn'd, without reprieve,
to go
O'er life's long deserts with it's charge of
woe,
With sad congratulation joins the
train,
Where beasts and men together o'er the plain } 195
Move on,—a mighty caravan of pain ;
Hope, strength, and courage, social suffering brings,
Freshening the waste of sand with shades
and springs.
—She solitary through the desert drear
Spontaneous wanders, hand in hand with
Fear. 200

A giant moan along the forest swells Protracted, and the twilight storm foretells,
And, ruining from the cliffs their deafening load Tumbles, the wildering Thunder slips
abroad ;
On the high summits Darkness comes and goes, 205
Hiding their fiery clouds, their rocks, and
snows ;
The torrent, travers'd by the lustre broad,
Starts like a horse beside the flashing road ;

In the roof'd¹ bridge, at that despairing
hour,
She seeks a shelter from the battering show'r. 210
—Fierce comes the river down; the crashing wood Gives way, and half it's pines torment
the flood;
Fearful², beneath, the Water-spirits call,
And the bridge vibrates, tottering to its
fall.
—Heavy, and dull, and cloudy is the
night, 215
No star supplies the comfort of it's light,
Glimmer the dim-lit Alps, dilated, round,
And one sole light shifts in the vale
profound;
While, opposite, the waning moon hangs
still,
And red, above her melancholy hill. 220
By the deep quiet gloom appall'd, she sighs, Stoops her sick head, and shuts her weary
eyes.
—Breaking th' ascending roar of desert
floods,
And insect buzz, that stuns the sultry
woods,
She hears, upon the mountain forest's brow,
The death-dog, howling loud and long,
below; 226
On viewless fingers counts the valleyclock,
Followed by drowsy crow of midnight cock.
—Bursts from the troubl'd Larch's giant
boughs
The pie, and chattering breaks the night's
repose. 230
Low barks the fox: by Havoc rouz'd the
bear,
Quits, growling, the white bones that strew his lair;
The dry leaves stir as with the serpent's
walk,
And, far beneath, Banditti voices talk;

Behind her hill the Moon, all crimson, rides, 235
And his red eyes the slinking water
hides;
Then all is hushed; the bushes rustle near,
And with strange tinglings sings her fainting ear.
—Vex'd by the darkness, from the piny
gulf
Ascending, nearer howls the famish'd
wolf, 240
While thro' the stillness scatters wild
dismay,
Her babe's small cry, that leads him to his prey.
Now, passing Urseren's open vale
serene,
Her quiet streams, and hills of downy
green,
Plunge with the Russ embrown'd by Terror's breath, 245
Where danger roofs the narrow walks of
death;
By floods, that, thundering from their dizzy height,
Swell more gigantic on the steadfast sight;
Black drizzling craggs, that beaten by
the din,
Vibrate, as if a voice complain'd within;
Bare steeps, where Desolation stalks,
afraid, 251
Unsteadfast, by a blasted yew upstay'd;
By cells³ whose image, trembling as he prays,
Awe struck, the kneeling peasant scarce
surveys;
Loose-hanging rocks the Day's bless'd eye that hide, 255
And crosses⁴ rear'd to Death on every
side,
Which with cold kiss Devotion planted
near,
And, bending, water'd with the human
tear,

¹ Most of the bridges among the Alps are of wood and covered: these bridges have a heavy appearance, and rather injure the effect of the scenery in some places.

² "Red came the river down, and loud, and oft
The angry Spirit of the water shriek'd."

HOME'S Douglas.

³ The Catholic religion prevails here. These cells are, as is well known, very common in the Catholic countries, planted, like Roman tombs, along the road side.

⁴ Crosses commemorative of the deaths of travellers by the fall of snow, and other accidents very common along this dreadful road.

Soon fading "silent" from her upward
eye,

Unmov'd with each rude form of Danger
nigh, 260

Fix'd on the anchor left by him who saves Alike in whelming snows and roaring
waves.

On as we move, a softer prospect opes,
Calm huts, and lawns between, and sylvan slopes.

While mists, suspended on th' expiring
gale, 265

Moveless o'er-hang the deep secluded vale,
The beams of evening, slipping soft between,

Light up of tranquil joy a sober scene;
Winding it's dark-green wood and eme-erald glade,

The still vale lengthens underneath the
shade; 270

While in soft gloom the scattering bowers
recede,

Green dewy lights adorn the freshen'd
mead,

Where solitary forms illumin'd stray Turning with quiet touch the valley's hay,

On the low¹ brown wood-huts delighted
sleep 275

Along the brighten'd gloom reposing
deep.

While pastoral pipes and streams the
landscape lull,

And bells of passing mules that tinkle
dull,

In solemn shapes before th' admiring eye
Dilated hang the misty pines on high,

Huge convent domes with pinnacles and tow'rs, 281

And antique castles seen thro' drizzling show'rs.

From such romantic dreams my soul
awake,

Lo! Fear looks silent down on Uri's lake,
By whose unpathway'd margin still and dread 285

Was never heard the plodding peasant's
tread.

Tower like a wall the naked rocks, or
reach

Far o'er the secret water dark with beach,
More high, to where creation seems to
end,

Shade above shade the desert pines ascend, 290

And still, below, where mid the savage
scene

Peeps out a little speck of smiling green,
There with his infants man undaunted
creeps

And hangs his small wood-hut upon the
steeps.

A garden-plot the desert air perfumes,
'Mid the dark pines a little orchard blooms, 296

A zig-zag path from the domestic skiff Threading the painful cragg surmounts the cliff.

—Before those hermit doors, that never
know 299

The face of traveller passing to and fro,
No peasant leans upon his pole, to tell
For whom at morning toll'd the funeral
bell,

Their watch-dog ne'er his angry bark for-
goes,

Touch'd by the beggar's moan of human
woes,

The grassy seat beneath their casement
shade 305

The pilgrim's wistful eye hath never stay'd.

—There, did the iron Genius not dis-
dain

The gentle Power that haunts the myrtle
plain,

There might the love-sick maiden sit, and chide

Th' insuperable rocks and severing tide,
There watch at eve her lover's sun-gilt
sail 311

Approaching, and upbraid the tardy gale,
There list at midnight till is heard no
more,

Below, the echo of his parting oar,
There hang in fear, when growls the frozen stream, 315

To guide his dangerous tread the taper's
gleam.

¹ The houses in the more retired Swiss valleys are all built of wood.

'Mid stormy vapours ever driving by,
 Where ospreys, cormorants, and herons
 cry,
 Where hardly giv'n the hopeless waste to
 cheer
 Deny'd the bread of life the foodful ear, Dwindles the pear on autumn's latest
 spray, 321
 And apple sickens pale in summer's ray, Ev'n here Content has fix'd her smiling
 reign
 With Independence child of high Dis-
 dain.
 Exulting mid the winter of the skies,
 Shy as the jealous chamois, Freedom
 flies, 326
 And often grasps her sword, and often
 eyes,
 Her crest a bough of Winter's bleakest
 pine,
 Strange "weeds" and alpine plants her helm entwine,
 And wildly-pausing oft she hangs aghast, While thrills the "Spartan fife" between
 the blast. 331
 'Tis storm; and hid in mist from hour
 to hour
 All day the floods a deeper murmur
 pour,
 And mournful sounds, as of a Spirit
 lost,
 Pipe wild along the hollow-blustering
 coast, 335
 'Till the Sun walking on his western
 field
 Shakes from behind the clouds his flashing shield.
 Triumphant on the bosom of the storm,
 Glances the fire-clad eagle's wheeling
 form;
 Eastward, in long perspective glittering,
 shine 340
 The wood-crown'd cliffs that o'er the lake
 recline;
 Wide o'er the Alps a hundred streams
 unfold,
 At once to pillars turn'd that flame with
 gold;
 Behind his sail the peasant strives to shun
 The west that burns like one dilated sun,

Where in a mighty crucible expire 346
 The mountains, glowing hot, like coals of fire¹.
 But lo! the boatman, over-aw'd, before
 The pictur'd fane of Tell suspends his oar;
 Confused the Marathonian tale appears,
 While burn in his full eyes the glorious
 tears. 351
 And who but feels a power of strong controul,
 Felt only there, oppress his labouring
 soul,
 Who walks, where honour'd men of ancient days
 Have wrought with god-like arm the deeds of praise? 355
 Say, who, by thinking on Canadian hills,
 Or wild Aosta lull'd by Alpine rills,
 On Zutphen's plain; or where with soften'd gaze
 The old grey stones the plaided chief surveys,
 Can guess the high resolve, the cherish'd
 pain 360
 Of him whom passion rivets to the plain,
 Where breath'd the gale that caught
 Wolfe's happiest sigh,
 And the last sun-beam fell on Bayard's eye,
 Where bleeding Sydney from the cup retir'd,
 And glad Dundee in "faint huzza's" expir'd. 365

¹ I had once given to these sketches the title of Picturesque; but the Alps are insulted in applying to them that term. Whoever, in attempting to describe their sublime features, should confine himself to the cold rules of painting would give his reader but a very imperfect idea of those emotions which they have the irresistible power of communicating to the most impassive imaginations. The fact is, that controuling influence, which distinguishes the Alps from all other scenery, is derived from images which disdain the pencil. Had I wished to make a picture of this scene I had thrown much less light into it. But I consulted nature and my feelings. The ideas excited by the stormy sunset I am here describing owed their sublimity to that deluge of light, or rather of fire, in which nature had wrapped the immense forms around me; any intrusion of shade, by destroying the unity of the impression, had necessarily diminished it's grandeur.

But now with other soul I stand alone
 Sublime upon this far-surveying cone,
 And watch from pike¹ to pike amid the
 sky

Small as a bird the chamois-chaser fly.
 'Tis his with fearless step at large to roam Thro' wastes, of Spirits wing'd the solemn
 home, 371
 Thro'² vacant worlds where Nature never gave

A brook to murmur or a bough to wave,
 Which unsubstantial Phantoms sacred
 keep;

Thro' worlds where Life and Sound, and Motion sleep, 375
 Where Silence still her death-like reign extends,

Save when the startling cliff unfrequent
 rends:

In the deep snow the mighty ruin drown'd, Mocks the dull ear of Time with deaf
 abortive sound;

—To mark a planet's pomp and steady
 light 380

In the least star of scarce-appearing night,
 And neighbouring moon, that coasts the vast profound,

Wheel pale and silent her diminish'd
 round,

While far and wide the icy summits blaze
 Rejoicing in the glory of her rays; 385
 The star of noon that glitters small and
 bright,

Shorn of his beams, insufferably white,
 And flying fleet behind his orb to view
 Th' interminable sea of sable blue.

—Of cloudless suns no more ye frost-built
 spires 390

Refract in rainbow hues the restless fires!
 Ye dewy mists the arid rocks o'er-spread Whose slippery face derides his deathful
 tread!

—To wet the peak's impracticable sides
 He opens of his feet the sanguine tides,

¹ Pike is a word very commonly used in the north of England, to signify a high mountain of the conic form, as Langdale pike, &c.

² For most of the images in the next sixteen verses I am indebted to M. Raymond's interesting observations annexed to his translation of Coxe's Tour in Switzerland.

Weak and more weak the issuing current
 eyes 396

Lapp'd by the panting tongue of thirsty skies³.

—At once bewildering mists around him
 close,

And cold and hunger are his least of
 woes; 399

The Demon of the snow with angry roar
 Descending, shuts for aye his prison door.
 Craz'd by the strength of hope at morn
 he eyes

As sent from heav'n the raven of the skies,
 Then with despair's whole weight his spirits sink,

No bread to feed him, and the snow his
 drink, 405

While ere his eyes can close upon the
 day,

The eagle of the Alps o'er shades his prey.
 —Meanwhile his wife and child with cruel hope

All night the door at every moment ope;
 Haply that child in fearful doubt may
 gaze, 410

Passing his father's bones in future days,
 Start at the reliques of that very thigh,
 On which so oft he prattled when a boy.

Hence shall we turn where, heard with
 fear afar,

Thunders thro' echoing pines the headlong Aar? 415

Or rather stay to taste the mild delights
 Of pensive Underwalden's⁴ pastoral
 heights?

—Is there who mid these awful wilds
 has seen

The native Genii walk the mountain
 green?

Or heard, while other worlds their charms
 reveal, 420

Soft music from th' aerial summit steal?

³ The rays of the sun drying the rocks frequently produce on their surface a dust so subtle and slippery, that the wretched chamois-chasers are obliged to bleed themselves in the legs and feet in order to secure a footing.

⁴ The people of this Canton are supposed to be of a more melancholy disposition than the other inhabitants of the Alps: this, if true, may proceed from their living more secluded.

While o'er the desert, answering every
close,
Rich steam of sweetest perfume comes
and goes.
—And sure there is a secret Power that reigns
Here, where no trace of man the spot
profanes, 425
Nought but the herds that pasturing upward creep,
Hung dim-discover'd from the dangerous
steep,
Or summer hamlet¹, flat and bare, on high
Suspended, mid the quiet of the sky. 429
How still! no irreligious sound or sight
Rouzes the soul from her severe delight.
An idle voice the sabbath region fills
Of Deep that calls to Deep across the hills,
Broke only by the melancholy sound
Of drowsy bells for ever tinkling round;
Faint wail of eagle melting into blue 436
Beneath the cliffs, and pine-woods steady
sugh²;
The solitary heifer's deepen'd low;
Or rumbling heard remote of falling snow.
Save that, the stranger seen below, the
boy 440
Shouts from the echoing hills with savage
joy.
When warm from myrtle bays and tranquil seas,
Comes on, to whisper hope, the vernal breeze³,
When hums the mountain bee in May's glad ear,
And emerald isles to spot the heights
appear, 445
When shouts and lowing herds the valley
fill,
And louder torrents stun the noon-tide
hill,

¹ These summer hamlets are most probably (as I have seen observed by a critic in the Gentleman's Magazine) what Virgil alludes to in the expression "Castella in tumulis."

² Sugh, a Scotch word expressive of the sound of the wind through the trees.

³ This wind, which announces the spring to the Swiss, is called in their language FOEN; and is according to M. Raymond the Syroco of the Italians.

When fragrant scents beneath th' enchanted tread
Spring up, his little all around him spread,
The pastoral Swiss begins the cliffs to
scale, 450
To silence leaving the deserted vale,
Up the green mountain tracking Summer's feet,
Each twilight earlier call'd the Sun to
meet,
With earlier smile the ray of morn to view
Fall on his shifting hut that gleams mid smoking dew; 455
Bless'd with his herds, as in the patriarch's age,
The summer long to feed from stage to
stage;
O'er azure pikes serene and still, they go,
And hear the rattling thunder far below;
Or lost at eve in sudden mist the day 460 Attend, or dare with minute-steps their
way;
Hang from the rocks that tremble o'er
the steep,
And tempt the icy valley yawning deep,
O'er-walk the chasmy torrent's foam-lit
bed,
Rock'd on the dizzy larch's narrow tread,
Whence Danger leans, and pointing ghastly, joys 466
To mock the mind with "desperation's toys";
Or steal beneath loose mountains, halfdeterr'd,
That sigh and shudder to the lowing herd.
—I see him, up the midway cliff he creeps
To where a scanty knot of verdure peeps, Thence down the steep a pile of grass he throws
The fodder of his herds in winter snows.
Far different life to what tradition hoar Transmits of days more bless'd in times of yore⁴. 475

⁴ This tradition of the golden age of the Alps, as M. Raymond observes, is highly interesting, interesting not less to the philosopher than to the poet. Here I cannot help remarking, that the superstitions of the Alps appear to be far from possessing that poetical character which so eminently distinguishes those of Scotland and the other mountainous northern countries. The

Then Summer lengthen'd out his season bland,
 And with rock-honey flow'd the happy
 land.
 Continual fountains welling cheer'd the
 waste,
 And plants were wholesome, now of deadly taste.
 Nor Winter yet his frozen stores had pil'd 480
 Usurping where the fairest herbage
 smil'd ;
 Nor Hunger forc'd the herds from pastures bare
 For scanty food the treacherous cliffs to dare.
 Then the milk-thistle bad those herds
 demand
 Three times a day the pail and welcome
 hand. 485
 But human vices have provok'd the rod
 Of angry Nature to avenge her God.
 Thus does the father to his sons relate,
 On the lone mountain top, their chang'd
 estate. 489
 Still, Nature, ever just, to him imparts
 Joys only given to uncorrupted hearts.
 —'Tis morn : with gold the verdant mountain glows,
 More high, the snowy peaks with hues of
 rose.
 Far stretch'd beneath the many-tinted
 hills,
 A mighty waste of mist the valley fills,
 A solemn sea ! whose vales and mountains round 496
 Stand motionless, to awful silence bound.
 A gulf of gloomy blue, that opens wide
 And bottomless, divides the midway tide.
 Like leaning masts of stranded ships
 appear 500
 The pines that near the coast their summits rear
 Of cabins, woods, and lawns a pleasant
 shore
 Bounds calm and clear the chaos still and hoar ;

Devil with his horns, &c., seems to be, in their idea, the principal agent that brings about the sublime natural revolutions that take place daily before their eyes.

Loud thro' that midway gulf ascending,
 sound Unnumber'd streams with hollow roar
 profound. 505
 Mounts thro' the nearer mist the chaunt
 of birds,
 And talking voices, and the low of herds,
 The bark of dogs, the drowsy tinkling bell,
 And wild-wood mountain lutes of saddest
 swell.
 Think not, suspended from the cliff on
 high 510
 He looks below with undelighted eye.
 —No vulgar joy is his, at even tide Stretch'd on the scented mountain's purple side.
 For as the pleasures of his simple day
 Beyond his native valley hardly stray, 515 Nought round it's darling precincts can
 he find
 But brings some past enjoyment to his
 mind,
 While Hope that ceaseless leans on Pleasure's urn
 Binds her wild wreathes, and whispers his return.
 Once Man entirely free, alone and
 wild, 520
 Was bless'd as free—for he was Nature's
 child.
 He, all superior but his God disdain'd, Walk'd none restraining, and by none
 restrain'd,
 Confess'd no law but what his reason
 taught,
 Did all he wish'd, and wish'd but what he ought. 525
 As Man in his primæval dower ar-
 ray'd
 The image of his glorious sire display'd,
 Ev'n so, by vestal Nature guarded, here
 The traces of primæval Man appear.
 The native dignity no forms debase, 530
 The eye sublime, and surly lion-grace.
 The slave of none, of beasts alone the lord,
 He marches with his flute, his book, and
 sword,
 Well taught by that to feel his rights,
 prepar'd
 With this "the blessings he enjoys to guard." 535

And as on glorious ground he draws his
breath,
Where Freedom oft, with Victory and
Death,
Hath seen in grim array amid their Storms
Mixed with auxiliar Rocks, three hundred Forms¹;
While twice ten thousand corselets at the
view 540
Dropp'd loud at once, Oppression shriek'd, and flew.
Oft as those sainted Rocks before him
spread,
An unknown power connects him with the dead.
For images of other worlds are there,
Awful the light, and holy is the air. 545
Uncertain thro' his fierce uncultur'd soul
Like lighted tempests troubled transports
roll;
To viewless realms his Spirit towers
amain,
Beyond the senses and their little reign.
And oft, when pass'd that solemn vision
by, 550
He holds with God himself communion
high,
When the dread peal of swelling torrents fills
The sky-roof'd temple of the eternal
hills,
And savage Nature humbly joins the
rite,
While flash her upward eyes severe de-
light. 555
Or gazing from the mountain's silent brow, Bright stars of ice and azure worlds of
snow,

¹ Alluding to several battles which the Swiss in very small numbers have gained over their oppressors, the house of Austria; and in particular, to one fought at Naeffels near Glarus, where three hundred and thirty men defeated an army of between fifteen and twenty thousand Austrians. Scattered over the valley are to be found eleven stones, with this inscription 1358, the year the battle was fought, marking out as I was told upon the spot, the several places where the Austrians attempting to make a stand were repulsed anew.

Where needle peaks of granite shooting
bare
Tremble in ever-varying tints of air, Great joy by horror tam'd dilates his
heart, 560
And the near heav'ns their own delights impart.
—When the Sun bids the gorgeous scene
farewell,
Alps overlooking Alps their state up-
swell;
Huge Pikes of Darkness named, of Fear²
and Storms,
Lift, all serene, their still, illumin'd
forms, 565
In sea-like reach of prospect round him
spread,
Ting'd like an angel's smile all rosy red.
When downward to his winter hut he
goes,
Dear and more dear the lessening circle
grows,
The hut which from the hills his eyes employs 570
So oft, the central point of all his joys.
And as a swift by tender cares oppress'd
Peeps often ere she dart into her nest,
So to th' untrodden floor, where round him looks His father helpless as the babe he
rocks, 575
Oft he descends to nurse the brother
pair,
Till storm and driving ice blockade him
there;
There hears, protected by the woods
behind,
Secure, the chiding of the baffled wind, Hears Winter, calling all his Terrors
round, 580
Rush down the living rocks with whirlwind sound.
Thro' Nature's vale his homely pleasures
glide
Unstain'd by envy, discontent, and pride,
The bound of all his vanity to deck
With one bright bell a favourite heifer's
neck; 585

² As Schreck-Horn, the pike of terror. Wetter-Horn the pike of storms, &c., &c.

Content upon some simple annual feast, Remember'd half the year, and hop'd the
rest,

If dairy produce, from his inner hoard,
Of thrice ten summers consecrate the board.

—Alas! in every clime a flying ray 590

Is all we have to cheer our wintry way,
Condemn'd, in mists and tempests ever
rife,

To pant slow up the endless Alp of life.
“Here,” cried a swain, whose venerable
head

Bloom'd with the snow-drops of Man's narrow bed, 595

Last night, while by his dying fire, as clos'd

The day, in luxury my limbs repos'd, “Here Penury oft from misery's mount will guide

Ev'n to the summer door his icy tide,
And here the avalanche of Death destroy
The little cottage of domestic Joy. 601

But, ah! th' unwilling mind may more than trace

The general sorrows of the human race :
The churlish gales, that unremitting blow
Cold from necessity's continual snow, 605

To us the gentle groups of bliss deny
That on the noon-day bank of leisure lie.
Yet more; the tyrant Genius, still at strife
With all the tender Charities of life,

When close and closer they begin to strain, 610

No fond hand left to staunch th' unclosing
vein,

Tearing their bleeding ties leaves Age to groan

On his wet bed, abandon'd and alone.
For ever, fast as they of strength become
To pay the filial debt, for food to roam,

The father forc'd by Powers that only deign 616

That solitary Man disturb their reign,
From his bare nest amid the storms of
heaven

Drives, eagle-like, his sons as he was driven,

His last dread pleasure! watches to the
plain— 620

And never, eagle-like, beholds again.”

When the poor heart has all its joys resign'd,

Why does their sad remembrance cleave
behind?

Lo! by the lazy Seine the exile roves,
Or where thick sails illumine Batavia's
groves; 625

Soft o'er the waters mournful measures
swell,

Unlocking bleeding Thought's “memorial
cell;”

At once upon his heart Despair has set
Her seal, the mortal tear his cheek has wet;
Strong poison not a form of steel can brave

Bows his young hairs with sorrow to the grave¹. 631

Gay lark of hope thy silent song resume!

Fair smiling lights the purpled hills
illumine!

Soft gales and dews of life's delicious
morn,

And thou! lost fragrance of the heart
return! 635

Soon² flies the little joy to man allow'd,
And tears before him travel like a cloud.

For come Diseases on, and Penury's rage,
Labour, and Pain, and Grief, and joyless
Age,

And Conscience dogging close his bleeding
way 640

Cries out, and leads her Spectres to their prey,

'Till Hope-deserted, long in vain his
breath

Implores the dreadful untried sleep of
Death.

—Mid savage rocks and seas of snow that
shine

Between interminable tracts of pine, 645

Round a lone fane the human Genii
mourn,

Where fierce the rays of woe collected burn.

¹ The effect of the famous air, called in French Ranz des Vaches, upon the Swiss troops removed from their native country is well known, as also the injunction of not playing it on pain of death, before the regiments of that nation, in the service of France and Holland.

² Optima quaeque dies, &c.

—From viewless lamps a ghastly dimness
 falls,
 And ebbs uncertain on the troubled walls,
 Dim dreadful faces thro' the gloom
 appear, 650
 Abortive Joy, and Hope that works in
 fear,
 While strives a secret Power to hush the croud, Pain's wild rebellious burst proclaims her rights aloud.
 Oh give not me that eye of hard disdain
 That views undimm'd Einsiedlen's wretched fane¹. 655
 Mid muttering prayers all sounds of torment meet,
 Dire clap of hands, distracted chase of
 feet,
 While loud and dull ascends the weeping
 cry,
 Surely in other thoughts contempt may
 die.
 If the sad grave of human ignorance
 bear 660
 One flower of hope—Oh pass and leave it
 there.
 —The tall Sun, tip-toe on an Alpine
 spire,
 Flings o'er the desert blood-red streams of fire.
 At such an hour there are who love to stray,
 And meet the gladdening pilgrims on their way. 665
 —Now with joy's tearful kiss each other
 greet,
 Nor longer naked be your way-worn feet,
 For ye have reach'd at last the happy
 shore,
 Where the charm'd worm of pain shall gnaw no more.
 How gayly murmur and how sweetly
 taste 670
 The fountains² rear'd for you amid the
 waste!

Yes I will see you when ye first behold
 Those turrets tipp'd by hope with morning gold,
 And watch, while on your brows the cross ye make,
 Round your pale eyes a wintry lustre
 wake. 675
 —Without one hope her written griefs to blot,
 Save in the land where all things are forgot,
 My heart, alive to transports long un-
 known,
 Half wishes your delusion were it's
 own.
 Last let us turn to where Chamouny³
 shields, 680
 Bosom'd in gloomy woods, her golden
 fields,
 Five streams of ice amid her cots descend,
 And with wild flowers and blooming
 orchards blend,
 A scene more fair than what the Grecian
 feigns
 Of purple lights and even vernal
 plains. 685
 Here lawns and shades by breezy rivulets
 fann'd,
 Here all the Seasons revel hand in
 hand.
 —Red stream the cottage lights; the landscape fades, Erroneous wavering mid the twilight
 shades.
 Alone ascends that mountain nam'd of white⁴ 690
 That dallies with the Sun the summer
 night.
 Six thousand years amid his lonely bounds
 The voice of Ruin, day and night, re-
 sounds.

for the accommodation of the pilgrims, in their ascent of the mountain. Under those sheds the sentimental traveller and the philosopher may find interesting sources of meditation.

³ This word is pronounced upon the spot Chamouny, I have taken the liberty of reading it long thinking it more musical.

⁴ It is only from the higher part of the valley of Chamouny that Mont Blanc is visible.

¹ This shrine is resorted to, from a hope of relief, by multitudes, from every corner of the Catholic world, labouring under mental or bodily afflictions.

² Rude fountains built and covered with sheds

Where Horror-led his sea of ice assails,
 Havoc and Chaos blast a thousand vales,
 In waves, like two enormous serpents,
 wind 696
 And drag their length of deluge train
 behind.
 Between the pine's enormous boughs descry'd
 Serene he towers, in deepest purple dy'd; Glad Day-light laughs upon his top of
 snow, 700
 Glitter the stars above, and all is black
 below.
 At such an hour I heav'd the human
 sigh,
 When roar'd the sullen Arve in anger by,
 That not for thee, delicious vale! unfold Thy reddening orchards, and thy fields of
 gold; 705
 That thou, the slave of slaves¹, art
 doom'd to pine,
 While no Italian arts their charms combine }
 To teach the skirt of thy dark cloud to
 shine; }
 For thy poor babes that, hurrying from the door,
 With pale-blue hands, and eyes that fix'd
 implore, 710
 Dead muttering lips, and hair of hungry
 white,
 Besiege the traveller whom they half
 affright.
 —Yes, were it mine, the cottage meal to
 share Forc'd from my native mountains bleak and bare;
 O'er Anet's² hopeless seas of marsh to stray, 715
 Her shrill winds roaring round my lonely
 way;
 To scent the sweets of Piedmont's breathing rose,
 And orange gale that o'er Lugano blows;
 In the wide range of many a weary round,
 Still have my pilgrim feet unfailling
 found, 720

As despot courts their blaze of gems
 display,
 Ev'n by the secret cottage far away }
 The lily of domestic joy decay;
 While Freedom's farthest, hamlets blessings share,
 Found still beneath her smile, and only
 there. 725
 The casement shade more luscious woodbine binds,
 And to the door a neater pathway winds,
 At early morn the careful housewife, led
 To cull her dinner from it's garden bed,
 Of weedless herbs a healthier prospect
 sees, 730
 While hum with busier joy her happy
 bees;
 In brighter rows her table wealth aspires,
 And laugh with merrier blaze her evening fires;
 Her infant's cheeks with fresher roses glow,
 And wilder graces sport around their
 brow; 735
 By clearer taper lit a cleanlier board Receives at supper hour her tempting hoard;
 The chamber hearth with fresher boughs is spread,
 And whiter is the hospitable bed.
 —And thou! fair favoured region! which
 my soul 740
 Shall love, 'till Life has broke her golden
 bowl,
 Till Death's cold touch her cistern-wheel
 assail,
 And vain regret and vain desire shall fail;
 Tho' now, where erst the grey-clad peasant stray'd,
 To break the quiet of the village shade Gleam war's³ discordant habits thro' the
 trees, 746
 And the red banner mock the sullen
 breeze;
 'Tho' now no more thy maids their voices
 suit
 To the low-warbled breath of twilight
 lute,

¹ It is scarce necessary to observe that these lines were written before the emancipation of Savoy.

² A vast extent of marsh so called near the lake of Neufchatel.

³ This, as may be supposed, was written before France became the seat of war.

And heard, the pausing village hum between, 750
No solemn songstress lull the fading green, Scared by the fife, and rumbling drum's
alarms,
And the short thunder, and the flash of
arms;
While, as Night bids the startling uproar
die,
Sole sound, the sould¹ renews his mournful cry: 755
—Yet, hast thou found that Freedom
spreads her pow'r
Beyond the cottage hearth, the cottage
door:
All nature smiles; and owns beneath her
eyes
Her fields peculiar, and peculiar skies.
Yes, as I roam'd where Loiret's² waters
glide 760
Thro' rustling aspens heard from side to
side,

¹ An insect so called, which emits a short, melancholy cry, heard, at the close of the summer evenings, on the banks of the Loire.

² The river Loiret, which has the honour of giving name to a department, rises out of the earth at a place, called La Source, a league and a half south-east of Orleans, and taking at once the character of a considerable stream, winds under a most delicious bank on its left, with a flat country of meadows, woods, and vineyards on its right, till it falls into the Loire about three or four leagues below Orleans. The hand of false taste has committed on its banks those outrages which the Abbé de Lille so pathetically deprecates in those charming verses descriptive of the Seine, visiting in secret the retreat of his friend Watelet. Much as the Loiret, in its short course, suffers from injudicious ornament, yet are there spots to be found upon its banks as soothing as meditation could wish for: the curious traveller may meet with some of them where it loses itself among the mills in the neighbourhood of the villa called La Fontaine. The walks of La Source, where it takes its rise, may, in the eyes of some people, derive an additional interest from the recollection that they were the retreat of Bollingbroke during his exile, and that here it was that his philosophical works were chiefly composed. The inscriptions of which he speaks in one of his letters to Swift descriptive of this spot, are not, I believe, now extant. The gardens have been modelled within these twenty years according to a plan evidently not dictated by the taste of the friend of Pope.

When from October clouds a milder
light
Fell, where the blue flood rippled into
white,
Methought from every cot the watchful
bird Crowed with ear-piercing power 'till then unheard; 765
Each clacking mill, that broke the mur-
muring streams,
Rock'd the charm'd thought in more delightful dreams,
Chasing those long long dreams the falling leaf
Awoke a fainter pang of moral grief;
The measured echo of the distant flail 770
Winded in sweeter cadence down the
vale;
A more majestic tide the water³ roll'd
And glowed the sun-gilt groves in richer
gold:
—Tho' Liberty shall soon, indignant, raise Red on his hills his beacon's comet
blaze;
Bid from on high his lonely cannon
sound,
And on ten thousand hearths his shout
rebound;
His larum-bell from village-tow'r to tow'r Swing on th' astounded ear it's dull undying roar:
Yet, yet rejoice, tho' Pride's perverted ire 780
Rouze Hell's own aid, and wrap thy hills
in fire.
Lo! from th' innocuous flames, a lovely
birth!
With it's own Virtues springs another
earth:
Nature, as in her prime, her virgin reign Begins, and Love and Truth compose her
train; 785
With pulseless hand, and fix'd unwearied
gaze,
Unbreathing Justice her still beam surveys:

³ The duties upon many of the French rivers were so exorbitant that the poorer people, deprived of the benefit of water carriage, were obliged to transport their goods by land.

No more, along thy vales and viny groves,
 Whole hamlets disappearing as he moves,
 With cheeks o'erspread by smiles of baleful glow, 790
 On his pale horse shall fell Consumption
 go.
 Oh give, great God, to Freedom's waves to ride
 Sublime o'er Conquest, Avarice, and
 Pride,
 To break, the vales where Death with Famine scow'rs,
 And dark Oppression builds her thickribb'd tow'rs; 795
 Where Machination her fell soul re-
 signs,
 Fled panting to the centre of her mines;
 Where Persecution decks with ghastly
 smiles
 Her bed, his mountains mad Ambition
 piles;
 Where Discord stalks dilating, every
 hour, 800
 And crouching fearful at the feet of Pow'r,

Like Lightnings eager for th' almighty
 word,
 Look up for sign of havoc, Fire and Sword¹,
 —Give them, beneath their breast while Gladness springs,
 To brood the nations o'er with Nile-like
 wings; 805
 And grant that every sceptred child of
 clay,
 Who cries, presumptuous, "here their tides shall stay,"
 Swept in their anger from th' affrighted
 shore,
 With all his creatures sink—to rise, no
 more.
 To-night, my friend, within this humble
 cot 810
 Be the dead load of mortal ills forgot,
 Renewing, when the rosy summits glow
 At morn, our various journey, sad and slow.

 Leash'd in like bounds, should Famine,
 Sword, and Fire,
 Crouch for employment.

LINES

WRITTEN AS A SCHOOL EXERCISE AT HAWKSHEAD, ANNO ÆTATIS 14.

[Composed 1784-5.—Published 1851 (Memoirs of W.).

“I was called upon, among other scholars,” Wordsworth says, “to write verses upon the completion of the second centenary from the foundation of the school in 1585, by Archbishop Sandys. The verses were much admired, far more than they deserved, for they were but a tame imitation of Pope’s versification, and a little in his style. This exercise, however, put it into my head to compose verses from the impulse of my own mind, and I wrote, while yet a schoolboy, a long poem running upon my own adventures, and the scenery of the country in which I was brought up. The only part of that poem which has been preserved is the conclusion of it, which stands at the beginning of my collected Poems.” (See Extract from the Conclusion of a Poem, &c., page 1.)—Ed.

“And has the Sun his flaming chariot
driven
Two hundred times around the ring of
heaven,
Since Science first, with all her sacred
train,
Beneath yon roof began her heavenly
reign?
While thus I mused, methought, before
mine eyes,
The Power of EDUCATION seemed to rise;
Not she whose rigid precepts trained the
boy
Dead to the sense of every finer joy;
Nor that vile wretch who bade the tender
age
Spurn Reason’s law and humour Passion’s
rage;
But she who trains the generous British
youth
In the bright paths of fair majestic Truth:
Emerging slow from Academus’ grove
In heavenly majesty she seem’d to move.

Stern was her forehead, but a smile serene ‘Soften’d the terrors of her awful mien.’¹⁶ Close at her side were all the powers, design’d

To curb, exalt, reform the tender mind:
With panting breast, now pale as winter
snows,

Now flush’d as Hebe, Emulation rose; ²⁰
Shame follow’d after with reverted eye,
And hue far deeper than the Tyrian dye;
Last Industry appear’d with steady pace,
A smile sat beaming on her pensive face.
I gazed upon the visionary train, ²⁵ Threw back my eyes, return’d, and gazed
again.

When lo! the heavenly goddess thus began,
Through all my frame the pleasing accents
ran.

““When Superstition left the golden
light

And fled indignant to the shades of night;
When pure Religion rear’d the peaceful breast ³¹

And lull’d the warring passions into rest, Drove far away the savage thoughts that roll

In the dark mansions of the bigot’s soul,
Enlivening Hope display’d her cheerful ray,
And beam’d on Britain’s sons a brighter day; ³⁶

So when on Ocean’s face the storm subsides, Hush’d are the winds and silent are the
tides;

The God of day, in all the pomp of light, Moves through the vault of heaven, and dissipates the night; ⁴⁰

Wide o’er the main a trembling lustre plays,
The glittering waves reflect the dazzling
blaze;

Science with joy saw Superstition fly
Before the lustre of Religion’s eye;
With rapture she beheld Britannia smile, Clapp’d her strong wings, and sought the cheerful isle, ⁴⁶

The shades of night no more the soul involve,
She sheds her beam, and, lo! the shades
dissolve;

No jarring monks, to gloomy cell confined,
 With mazy rules perplex the weary mind;
 No shadowy forms entice the soul aside, 51
 Secure she walks, Philosophy her guide.
 Britain, who long her warriors had adored,
 And deem'd all merit centred in the sword;
 Britain, who thought to stain the field was
 fame, 55
 Now honour'd Edward's less than Bacon's
 name.
 Her sons no more in listed fields advance
 To ride the ring, or toss the beamy lance;
 No longer steel their indurated hearts
 To the mild influence of the finer arts; 60
 Quick to the secret grotto they retire
 To court majestic truth, or wake the golden
 lyre;
 By generous Emulation taught to rise,
 The seats of learning brave the distant
 skies.
 Then noble Sandys, inspir'd with great
 design, 65
 Reared Hawkshead's happy roof, and call'd it mine.
 There have I loved to show the tender age
 The golden precepts of the classic page;
 To lead the mind to those Elysian plains
 Where, throned in gold, immortal Science
 reigns; 70
 Fair to the view is sacred Truth display'd,
 In all the majesty of light array'd,
 To teach, on rapid wings, the curious soul
 To roam from heaven to heaven, from pole to pole,
 From thence to search the mystic cause of
 things 75
 And follow Nature to her secret springs;
 Nor less to guide the fluctuating youth
 Firm in the sacred paths of moral truth,
 To regulate the mind's disordered frame,
 And quench the passions kindling into flame; 80
 The glimmering fires of Virtue to enlarge,
 And purge from Vice's dross my tender
 charge.
 Oft have I said, the paths of Fame pursue,
 And all that Virtue dictates, dare to do;
 Go to the world, peruse the book of man,
 And learn from thence thy own defects to scan; 86
 Severely honest, break no plighted trust, But coldly rest not here—be more than just;
 Join to the rigours of the sires of Rome
 The gentler manners of the private dome;
 When Virtue weeps in agony of woe, 91 Teach from the heart the tender tear to
 flow;
 If Pleasure's soothing song thy soul entice,
 Or all the gaudy pomp of splendid Vice,

Arise superior to the Siren's power, 95
 The wretch, the short-lived vision of an
 hour;
 Soon fades her cheek, her blushing beauties
 fly,
 As fades the chequer'd bow that paints the
 sky.

“So shall thy sire, whilst hope his breast inspires,
 And wakes anew life's glimmering trembling fires, 100
 Hear Britain's sons rehearse thy praise
 with joy,
 Look up to heaven, and bless his darling
 boy.
 If e'er these precepts quell'd the passions'
 strife,
 If e'er they smooth'd the rugged walks of
 life,
 If e'er they pointed forth the blissful way
 That guides the spirit to eternal day, 106
 Do thou, if gratitude inspire thy breast,
 Spurn the soft fetters of lethargic rest.
 Awake, awake! and snatch the slumbering
 lyre,
 Let this bright morn and Sandys the song
 inspire.' 110

“I look'd obedience: the celestial Fair Smiled like the morn, and vanish'd into
 air.”

SONNET, ON SEEING MISS HELEN MARIA WILLIAMS WEEP AT A TALE OF DISTRESS.

[Composed 1787.—Published March, 1787 (The European Magazine, Vol. XI, p. 202); never reprinted by W.]

SHE wept.—Life's purple tide began to
 flow
 In languid streams through every thrilling
 vein;
 Dim were my swimming eyes—my pulse beat slow,
 And my full heart was swell'd to dear delicious pain. 4
 Life left my loaded heart, and closing eye;
 A sigh recall'd the wanderer to my breast;
 Dear was the pause of life, and dear the
 sigh
 That call'd the wanderer home, and home to rest.
 That tear proclaims—in thee each virtue
 dwells,
 And bright will shine in misery's midnight
 hour; 10
 As the soft star of dewy evening tells

What radiant fires were drown'd by day's malignant pow'r,
That only wait the darkness of the night
To cheer the wand'ring wretch with hospitable light.

THE BIRTH OF LOVE.

[Composed 1795 (?).—Published 1795.]

Reprinted from a vol. entitled Poems by Francis Wrangham, M.A. A translation (signed Wordsworth) of some French stanzas signed Anon.; never reprinted by Wordsworth—Ed.

WHEN Love was born of heavenly line,
What dire intrigues disturbed Cythera's
joy!
Till VENUS cried, "A mother's heart is
mine;
None but myself shall nurse my boy."

But, infant as he was, the child 5
In that divine embrace enchanted lay;
And, by the beauty of the vase beguil'd,
Forgot the beverage—and pin'd away.

"And must my offspring languish in my
sight?"
(Alive to all a mother's pain, 10
The Queen of Beauty thus her court ad-dress'd)
"No: Let the most discreet of all my
train
Receive him to her breast:
Think all, he is the God of young
delight." 14

Then TENDERNESS with CANDOUR join'd,
And GAIETY the charming office sought;
Nor even DELICACY stayed behind:
But none of those fair Graces brought Wherewith to nurse the child—and still he pin'd.
Some fond hearts to COMPLIANCE seem'd inclin'd; 20
But she had surely spoil'd the boy:
And sad experience forbade a thought
On the wild Goddess of VOLUPTUOUS
JOY.

Long undecided lay th' important choice,
Till of the beauteous court, at length, a
voice 25
Pronounced the name of HOPE:—The conscious child
Stretched forth his little arms and smil'd.

'Tis said ENJOYMENT (who averr'd
The charge belong'd to her alone)
Jealous that HOPE had been preferr'd 30
Laid snares to make the babe her own.

Of INNOCENCE the garb she took,
The blushing mien and downcast look;
And came her services to proffer:
And HOPE (what has not HOPE believ'd!)
By that seducing air deceiv'd, 36
Accepted of the offer.

It happen'd that, to sleep inclin'd,
Deluded HOPE for one short hour
To that false INNOCENCE's power 40
Her little charge consign'd.

The Goddess then her lap with sweetmeats fill'd
And gave, in handfuls gave, the treacherous store:
A wild delirium first the infant thrill'd;
But soon upon her breast he sunk—to wake no more. 45

THE CONVICT.

[Composed ?.—Published 1798; never reprinted
by W.]

THE glory of evening was spread through
the west;
—On the slope of a mountain I stood,
While the joy that precedes the calm season of rest
Rang loud through the meadow and
wood.

"And must we then part from a dwelling so fair?" 5
In the pain of my spirit I said,
And with a deep sadness I turned, to repair
To the cell where the convict is laid.

The thick-ribbèd walls that o'ershadow the gate
Resound; and the dungeons unfold: 10
I pause; and at length, through the glimmering grate,
That outcast of pity behold.

His black matted hair on his shoulder is
bent,
And deep is the sigh of his breath,
And with steadfast dejection his eyes are
intent 15
On the fetters that link him to death.

'Tis sorrow enough on that visage to gaze,
That body dismiss'd from his care;
Yet my fancy has pierced to his heart, and pourtrays
More terrible images there. 20

His bones are consumed, and his life-blood is dried,

With wishes the past to undo ;
And his crime, through the pains that o'erwhelm him, descried,
Still blackens and grows on his view.

When from the dark synod, or bloodreeking field, 25
To his chamber the monarch is led,
All soothers of sense their soft virtue shall
yield,
And quietness pillow his head.

But if grief, self-consumed, in oblivion would doze,
And conscience her tortures appease, 30
'Mid tumult and uproar this man must
repose ;
In the comfortless vault of disease.

When his fetters at night have so press'd on his limbs,
That the weight can no longer be borne,
If, while a half-slumber his memory bedims, 35
The wretch on his pallet should turn,

While the jail-mastiff howls at the dull
clanking chain,
From the roots of his hair there shall start
A thousand sharp punctures of coldsweating pain,
And terror shall leap at his heart. 40

But now he half-raises his deep-sunken
eye,
And the motion unsettles a tear ;
The silence of sorrow it seems to supply,
And asks of me why I am here.

" Poor victim ! no idle intruder has stood With o'erweening complacence our state to compare, 46
But one, whose first wish is the wish to be
good,
Is come as a brother thy sorrows to
share.

" At thy name though compassion her nature resign,
Though in virtue's proud mouth thy report be a stain, 50
My care, if the arm of the mighty were
mine,
Would plant thee where yet thou migh'tst blossom again."

ANDREW JONES.

[Composed probably 1800.—Published 1800, 1802, 1805 (Lyrical Ballads) ; ed. 1815 ; omitted from
edd. 1820—1849-50.]

I HATE that Andrew Jones ; he'll breed
His children up to waste and pillage.
I wish the press-gang or the drum
Would, with its rattling music, come,
And sweep him from the village ! 5

I said not this, because he loves
Through the long day to swear and tittle ;
But for the poor dear sake of one
To whom a foul deed he had done,
A friendless Man, a travelling Cripple ! 10

For this poor crawling helpless wretch
Some Horseman who was passing by,
A penny on the ground had thrown ;
But the poor Cripple was alone
And could not stoop—no help was nigh.

Inch-thick the dust lay on the ground 16
For it had long been droughty weather ;
So with his staff the Cripple wrought Among the dust till he had brought
The halfpennies together. 20

It chanc'd that Andrew pass'd that way
Just at the time ; and there he found
The Cripple in the mid-day heat
Standing alone, and at his feet
He saw the penny on the ground. 25

He stooped and took the penny up :
And when the Cripple nearer drew,
Quoth Andrew, " Under half-a-crown,
What a man finds is all his own,
And so, my Friend, good-day to you." 30

And hence I say, that Andrew's boys
Will all be train'd to waste and pillage ;
And wish'd the press-gang, or the drum
Would, with its rattling music, come,
And sweep him from the village ! 35

"ON NATURE'S INVITATION DO I COME."

[Composed probably in 1800.—Published 1851.]

ON Nature's invitation do I come,
By Reason sanctioned. Can the choice mislead,
That made the calmest, fairest spot on
earth,
With all its unappropriated good,
My own ; and not mine only, for with me

Entrenched—say rather peacefully em-
bowed— 6

Under yon orchard, in yon humble cot,
A younger orphan of a Home extinct,
The only daughter of my parents dwells :
Aye, think on that, my heart, and cease to stir ; 10

Pause upon that, and let the breathing
frame

No longer breathe, but all be satisfied.
Oh, if such silence be not thanks to God
For what hath been bestowed, then where, where then

Shall gratitude find rest? Mine eyes did ne'er 15

Fix on a lovely object, nor my mind
Take pleasure in the midst of happy
thoughts,

But either she, whom now I have, who now Divides with me this loved abode, was
there,

Or not far off. Where'er my footsteps
turned, 20

Her voice was like a hidden Bird that sang ;
The thought of her was like a flash of light
Or an unseen companionship, a breath
Or fragrance independent of the wind.

In all my goings, in the new and old 25
Of all my meditations, and in this Favourite of all, in this the most of all. . . .

Embrace me then, ye hills, and close me in.
Now in the clear and open day I feel 29
Your guardianship : I take it to my heart ;
'Tis like the solemn shelter of the night.

But I would call thee beautiful ; for mild,
And soft, and gay, and beautiful thou art,
Dear valley, having in thy face a smile,
Though peaceful, full of gladness. Thou art pleased, 35

Pleased with thy crags, and woody steeps, thy Lake,

Its one green Island, and its winding shores,
The multitude of little rocky hills,
Thy Church, and cottages of mountain-
stone

Clustered like stars some few, but single
most, 40

And lurking dimly in their shy retreats,
Or glancing at each other cheerful looks,
Like separated stars with clouds between.

“BLEAK SEASON WAS IT, TURBU-LENT AND WILD.”

[Composed (possibly) in 1800.—Published 1851.]

BLEAK season was it, turbulent and wild, When hitherward we journeyed, side by
side,

Through bursts of sunshine and through flying showers,

Paced the long Vales, how long they were,
and yet

How fast that length of way was left behind, 5

Wensley's rich Vale and Sedbergh's naked
heights.

The frosty wind, as if to make amends
For its keen breath, was aiding to our
steps,

And drove us onward as two ships at sea ;
Or, like two birds, companions in mid-air,
Parted and reunited by the blast. 11

Stern was the face of nature ; we rejoiced
In that stern countenance ; for our souls thence drew

A feeling of their strength. The naked
trees,

The icy brooks, as on we passed, appeared To question us, “Whence come ye? To what end?” 16

AMONG ALL LOVELY THINGS MY LOVE HAD BEEN.

[Composed April 12, 1802.—Published 1807 ;
never reprinted by W.]

AMONG all lovely things my Love had
been ;

Had noted well the stars, all flowers that grew

About her home ; but she had never seen
A Glow-worm, never one, and this I knew.

While riding near her home one stormy
night 5

A single Glow-worm did I chance to espy ;
I gave a fervent welcome to the sight,
And from my Horse I leapt ; great joy had I.

Upon a leaf the Glow-worm did I lay,
To bear it with me through the stormy
night : 10

And, as before, it shone without dismay ;
Albeit putting forth a fainter light.

When to the Dwelling of my Love I came,
I went into the Orchard quietly ;

And left the Glow-worm, blessing it by
name, 15

Laid safely by itself, beneath a Tree.

Wordsworth in his Memoirs of the poet (1851),

Grasmere* ;—a poem which, being copyright, is not included in this volume. For two other extracts from the same poem see Water-Fowl, page 218, and the Preface to The Excursion.—

¹ Nos. VI. and VII. are extracts, given by Bishop

The whole next day, I hoped, and hoped
with fear;
At night the Glow-worm shone beneath
the Tree:
I led my Lucy to the spot, "Look here!"
Oh! joy it was for her, and joy for me!¹

SONNET².

[Composed?—Published October 10, 1803 (Morning Post); never reprinted by W.]

I FIND it written of Simonides
That travelling in strange countries once he found
A corpse that lay expos'd upon the
ground,
For which, with pains, he caused due obsequies
To be performed, and paid all holy fees. 5
Soon after, this man's Ghost unto him
came
And told him not to sail as was his aim,
On board a ship then ready for the seas.
Simonides, admonished by the ghost,
Remained behind; the ship the following
day 10
Set sail, was wrecked, and all on board were lost.
Thus was the tenderest Poet that could be,
Who sang in ancient Greece his moving
lay,
Saved out of many by his piety.

GEORGE AND SARAH GREEN³.

[Composed 1808.—Published September, 1839 (Tail's Edinburgh Magazine); never printed
by W.]

WHO weeps for strangers? Many wept
For George and Sarah Green;
Wept for that pair's unhappy fate,
Whose grave may here be seen.

¹ The incident described in this poem took place in 1795—probably at Racedown—between the poet and his sister Dorothy.—Ed.

² This sonnet bears no signature in the Morning Post, but Coleridge, in an unpublished letter, assigns it to Wordsworth. Cf. line 12 with line 53 of the Poem, No. II, on September, 1819 (Poems of Sentiment, XXVIII; p. 498), and with a passage in the Essay on Epitaphs (page 929) in which the story of this sonnet is related in prose.—Ed.

³ See De Quincey's Early Memorials of Grassmere.—Ed.

By night, upon these stormy fells, 5
Did wife and husband roam;
Six little ones at home had left,
And could not find that home.

For any dwelling-place of man
As vainly did they seek. 10
He perish'd; and a voice was heard—
The widow's lonely shriek.

Not many steps, and she was left
A body without life—
A few short steps were the chain that
bound 15
The husband to the wife.

Now do those sternly-featured hills
Look gently on this grave;
And quiet now are the depths of air,
As a sea without a wave. 20

But deeper lies the heart of peace
In quiet more profound;
The heart of quietness is here
Within this churchyard bound.

And from all agony of mind 25
It keeps them safe, and far
From fear and grief, and from all need
Of sun or guiding star.

O darkness of the grave! how deep,
After that living night— 30
That last and dreary living one
Of sorrow and affright?

O sacred marriage-bed of death,
That keeps them side by side
In bond of peace, in bond of love, 35
That may not be untied!

TRANSLATION OF PART OF THE FIRST BOOK OF THE ÆNEID.

[Written c. 1816.—Published 1832 (The Philological Museum); not reprinted by W.]

TO THE EDITORS OF THE "PHILOLOGICAL MUSEUM."

Your letter, reminding me of an expectation I some time since held out to you of allowing some specimens of my translation from the Æneid to be printed in the "Philological Museum," was not very acceptable; for I had abandoned the thought of ever sending into the world any part of that experiment—for it was nothing more—an experiment begun for amusement, and I now think a less fortunate one than when I first named it to you. Having been displeas'd in modern translations with the additions of incongruous matter, I began to translate with a resolve to keep clear of that fault, by adding nothing; but I became convinced that a spirited translation can scarcely be accomplished in the English language without admitting a principle of compensation. On this point, however, I do not wish to insist, and merely send the following passage, taken at random, from a wish to comply with your request.—W. W.

BUT Cytherea, studious to invent
Arts yet untried, upon new counsels bent, Resolves that Cupid, chang'd in form and
face

To young Ascanius, should assume his
place;

Present the maddening gifts, and kindle
heat

Of passion at the bosom's inmost seat.
She dreads the treacherous house, the double tongue;

She burns, she frets—by Juno's rancour
stung;

The calm of night is powerless to remove These cares, and thus she speaks to winged
Love:

“O son, my strength, my power! who dost despise

(What, save thyself, none dares through earth and skies)

The giant-quelling bolts of Jove, I flee,
O son, a suppliant to thy deity!

What perils meet Æneas in his course, 15
How Juno's hate with unrelenting force Pursues thy brother—this to thee is
known;

And oft-times hast thou made my griefs thine own.

Him now the generous Dido by soft chains
Of bland entreaty at her court detains; 20
Junonian hospitalities prepare
Such apt occasion that I dread a snare.

Hence, ere some hostile God can intervene, Would I, by previous wiles, inflame the queen

With passion for Æneas, such strong love That at my beck, mine only, she shall
move. 26

Hear, and assist;—the father's mandate
calls

His young Ascanius to the Tyrian walls;
He comes, my dear delight,—and costliest
things

Preserv'd from fire and flood for presents
brings. 30

Him will I take, and in close covert keep,
'Mid groves Idalian, lull'd to gentle sleep,
Or on Cythera's far-sequestered steep,
That he may neither know what hope is
mine,

Nor by his presence traverse the design. 35
Do thou, but for a single night's brief
space,

Dissemble; be that boy in form and face!

And when enraptured Dido shall receive Thee to her arms, and kisses interweave
With many a fond embrace, while joy runs
high,

And goblets crown the proud festivity, 40
Instil thy subtle poison, and inspire,
At every touch, an unsuspected fire.”

Love, at the word, before his mother's
sight

Puts off his wings, and walks, with proud
delight, 45

Like young Iulus; but the gentlest dews
Of slumber Venus sheds, to circumsure
The true Ascanius steep'd in placid rest;
Then wafts him, cherish'd on her careful
breast,

Through upper air to an Idalian glade, 50
Where he on soft amaracus is laid,
With breathing flowers embraced, and fragrant shade.

But Cupid, following cheerily his guide
Achates, with the gifts to Carthage hied;
And, as the hall he entered, there, between
The sharers of her golden couch, was seen Reclin'd in festal pomp the Tyrian queen.

The Trojans too (Æneas at their head),
On couches lie, with purple overspread:
Meantime in canisters is heap'd the bread,
Pellucid water for the hands is borne, 60
And napkins of smooth texture, finely shorn.

Within are fifty handmaids, who prepare,
As they in order stand, the dainty fare;
And fume the household deities with store
Of odorous incense; while a hundred more Match'd with an equal number of like age,
But each of manly sex, a docile page,
Marshal the banquet, giving with due grace
To cup or viand its appointed place. 70

The Tyrians rushing in, an eager band, Their painted couches seek, obedient to command.

They look with wonder on the gifts—they gaze

Upon Iulus, dazzled with the rays That from his ardent countenance are flung, 75

And charm'd to hear his simulating tongue;
Nor pass unprais'd the robe and veil divine,
Round which the yellow flowers and wandering foliage twine.

But chiefly Dido, to the coming ill Devoted, strives in vain her vast desires to
fill; 80

She views the gifts; upon the child then turns

Insatiable looks, and gazing burns.
To ease a father's cheated love he hung
Upon Æneas, and around him clang;

Then seeks the queen; with her his arts he tries; 85

She fastens on the boy enamour'd eyes, Clasps in her arms, nor weens (O lot unblest!)

How great a God, incumbent o'er her breast,
Would fill it with his spirit. He, to please
His Acidalian mother, by degrees 90
Blots out Sichaens, studious to remove
The dead, by influx of a living love,
By stealthy entrance of a perilous guest,
'Troubling a heart that had been long at rest.

Now when the viands were withdrawn, and ceas'd 95

The first division of the splendid feast, While round a vacant board the chiefs
recline,

Huge goblets are brought forth; they crown the wine;

Voices of gladness roll the walls around;
Those gladsome voices from the courts
rebound; 100

From gilded rafters many a blazing light
Depends, and torches overcome the night.
The minutes fly—till, at the queen's command,

A bowl of state is offered to her hand:
Then she, as Belus wont, and all the line From Belus, filled it to the brim with wine; 106

Silence ensued. "O Jupiter, whose care
Is hospitable dealing, grant my prayer!
Productive day be this of lasting joy
To Tyrians, and these exiles driven from Troy; 110

A day to future generations dear!
Let Bacchus, donor of soul-quick'ning
cheer,

Be present; kindly Juno, be thou near!
And, Tyrians, may your choicest favours
wait

Upon this hour, the bond to celebrate!"
She spake and shed an offering on the board; 116

Then sipp'd the bowl whence she the wine had pour'd

And gave to Bitias, urging the prompt lord;
He rais'd the bowl, and took a long deep
draught;

Then every chief in turn the beverage
quaff'd. 120

Graced with redundant hair, Iopas sings
The lore of Atlas, to resounding strings,
The labours of the Sun, the lunar wanderings;

Whence human kind, and brute; what natural powers

Engender lightning, whence are falling
showers. 125

He chaunts Arcturus,—that fraternal
twain

The glittering Bears,—the Pleiads fraught with rain;

—Why suns in winter, shunning heaven's steep heights

Post seaward,—what impedes the tardy
nights.

The learned song from Tyrian hearers
draws 130

Loud shouts,—the Trojans echo the applause.

—But, lengthening out the night with converse new,

Large draughts of love unhappy Dido
drew;

Of Priam ask'd, of Hector,—o'er and o'er—

What arms the son of bright Aurora
wore;— 135

What steeds the car of Diomed could boast;

Among the leaders of the Grecian host How looked Achilles—their dread paramount—

"But nay—the fatal wiles, O guest, recount,

Retrace the Grecian cunning from its
source, 140

Your own grief and your friends'—your wandering course;

For now, till this seventh summer have ye rang'd

The sea, or trod the earth, to peace estrang'd."

AUTHOR'S VOYAGE DOWN THE RHINE
(THIRTY YEARS AGO).

[Composed probably 1821.—Published 1822 (Memorials of a Tour on the Continent, 1820);
never reprinted by W.]

THE confidence of Youth our only Art,
And Hope gay Pilot of the bold design,
We saw the living Landscapes of the Rhine,

Reach after reach, salute us and depart;
Slow sink the Spires,—and up again they start! 5

But who shall count the Towers as they
recline

O'er the dark steeps, or on the horizon
line

Striding, with shattered crests, the eye
athwart?

More touching still, more perfect was the pleasure,
 When hurrying forward till the slack'ning
 stream
 Spread like a spacious Mere, we there could measure
 A smooth free course along the watery
 gleam,
 Think calmly on the past, and mark at leisure
 Features which else had vanished like a dream.

A CENTO MADE BY WORDSWORTH.

[Published 1835 (Yarrow Revisited and other Poems); never reprinted by W.]

For printing [the following piece] some reason should be given, as not a word of it is original: it is simply a fine stanza of Akenside, connected with a still finer from Beattie, by a couplet from Thomson. This practice, in which the author sometimes indulges, of linking together, in his own mind, favourite passages from different authors, seems in itself unobjectionable: but, as the publishing such compilations might lead to confusion in literature, he should deem himself inexcusable in giving this specimen, were it not from a hope that it might open to others a harmless source of private gratification.—W. W.

THRONED in the Sun's descending car
 What Power unseen diffuses far
 This tenderness of mind?
 What Genius smiles on yonder flood?
 What God in whispers from the wood
 Bids every thought be kind?

O ever pleasing Solitude,
 Companion of the wise and good,
 Thy shades, thy silence, now be mine,
 Thy charms my only theme;
 My haunt the hollow cliff whose Pine Waves o'er the gloomy stream;
 Whence the scared Owl on pinions grey Breaks from the rustling boughs,
 And down the lone vale sails away
 To more profound repose!

PROTEST AGAINST THE BALLOT.
(1838.)

[Composed 1838.—Published 1838 (collected vol. of Sonnets); 1839 (Supplement to ed. 1842); afterwards omitted by W.]

FORTH rushed from Envy sprung and Self-conceit,
 A Power misnamed the SPIRIT of RE-
 FORM,
 And through the astonished Island swept in storm,
 Threatening to lay all Orders at her feet That crossed her way. Now stoops she to entreat
 Licence to hide at intervals her head
 Where she may work, safe, undisquieted,
 In a close Box, covert for Justice meet.
 St. George of England! keep a watchful
 eye
 Fixed on the Suitor; frustrate her request—
 Stifle her hope; for, if the State comply,
 From such Pandorian gift may come a Pest
 Worse than the Dragon that bowed low his crest,
 Pierced by thy spear in glorious victory.

ON A PORTRAIT OF I. F. [ISABELLA FENWICK], PAINTED BY MARGA-RET GILLIES¹.

WE gaze—nor grieve to think that we must die,
But that the precious love this friend hath
sown

Within our hearts, the love whose flower hath blown

Bright as if heaven were ever in its eye,
Will pass so soon from human memory; 5
And not by strangers to our blood alone,
But by our best descendants be unknown, Unthought of—this may surely claim a
sigh.

Yet, blessed Art, we yield not to dejection;
Thou against Time so feelingly dost strive.
Where'er, preserved in this most true reflection, 11

An image of her soul is kept alive,
Some lingering fragrance of the pure affection,

Whose flower with us will vanish, must survive.

TO I. F.

THE star which comes at close of day to
shine

More heavenly bright than when it leads the morn,

Is Friendship's emblem, whether the forlorn

She visiteth, or, shedding light benign
Through shades that solemnize Life's calm decline, 5

Doth make the happy happier. This have we

Learnt, Isabel, from thy society,
Which now we too unwillingly resign

Though for brief absence. But farewell!
the page

Glimmers before my sight through thankful tears, 10

Such as start forth, not seldom, to approve
Our truth, when we, old yet unchilled by age,

"WHEN SEVERN'S SWEEPING FLOOD HAD OVERTHROWN."

In 1842 a bazaar was held in Cardiff Castle to raise funds for the building of a Church. Wordsworth assisted by contributing this Sonnet, which was printed and sold along with verses by James Montgomery and others (cf. Prof. Knight's note, in his edition of the Poems, Vol. VIII.).—Ed.

WHEN Severn's sweeping flood had overthrown

St. Mary's Church, the preacher then would cry:—

"Thus, Christian people, God his might hath shown

That ye to him your love may testify;
Haste, and rebuild the pile."—But not a stone 5

Resumed its place. Age after age went by,
And Heaven still lacked its due, though piety

In secret did, we trust, her loss bemoan.
But now her Spirit hath put forth its
claim 9

In Power, and Poesy would lend her voice;
Let the new Church be worthy of its aim,
That in its beauty Cardiff may rejoice!

Oh! in the past if cause there was for
shame,

Let not our times halt in their better
choice.

THE EAGLE AND THE DOVE.

[Composed 1842 (?).—Published 1842 (La Petite Chouannerie ou Histoire d'un Collège Breton sous l'Empire. By A. F. Rio).]

SHADE of Caractacus, if spirits love
The cause they fought for in their earthly
home,

To see the Eagle ruffled by the Dove
May soothe thy memory of the chains of Rome.

These children claim thee for their sire;
the breath 5

Of thy renown, from Cambrian mountains, fans

A flame within them that despises death
And glorifies the truant youth of Vannes.

With thy own scorn of tyrants they advance,
 But truth divine has sanctified their rage,
 A silver cross enchased with Flowers of France ¹¹
 Their badge, attests the holy fight they wage.

The shrill defiance of the young crusade
 Their veteran foes mock as an idle noise;
 But unto Faith and Loyalty comes aid ¹⁵
 From Heaven, gigantic force to beardless boys.

LINES

INSCRIBED IN A COPY OF HIS POEMS
 SENT TO THE QUEEN FOR THE ROYAL LIBRARY AT WINDSOR.

DEIGN, Sovereign Mistress! to accept a
 lay,
 No Laureate offering of elaborate art;
 But salutation taking its glad way
 From deep recesses of a loyal heart.

Queen, Wife and Mother! may All-judging Heaven ⁵
 Shower with a bounteous hand on Thee and Thine
 Felicity that only can be given On earth to goodness blest by grace
 divine.

Lady! devoutly honoured and beloved Through every realm confided to thy sway; ¹⁰
 May'st thou pursue thy course by God approved,
 And He will teach thy people to obey.

As thou art wont, thy sovereignty adorn With woman's gentleness, yet firm and staid;
 So shall that earthly crown thy brows have worn ¹⁵
 Be changed for one whose glory cannot
 fade.

And now by duty urged, I lay this Book
 Before thy Majesty, in humble trust
 That on its simplest pages thou wilt look With a benign indulgence more than just. ²⁰

Nor wilt thou blame an aged Poet's prayer,
 That issuing hence may steal into thy
 mind
 Some solace under weight of royal care,
 Or grief—the inheritance of humankind.

For know we not that from celestial spheres, ²⁵
 When Time was young, an inspiration
 came (Oh were it mine!) to hallow saddest tears,
 And help life onward in its noblest aim.

ODE ON THE INSTALLATION OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT
 AS CHANCELLOR OF THE UNIVER-SITY OF CAMBRIDGE, JULY, 1847¹.

[Composed 1847.—Published 1847.]

FOR thirst of power that Heaven dis-
 owns,
 For temples, towers, and thrones
 Too long insulted by the Spoiler's shock, Indignant Europe cast
 Her stormy foe at last ⁵
 To reap the whirlwind on a Libyan rock.
 War is passion's basest game
 Madly played to win a name:
 Up starts some tyrant, Earth and Heaven to dare,
 The servile million bow; ¹⁰
 But will the Lightning glance aside to spare
 The Despot's laurelled brow?

War is mercy, glory, fame,
 Waged in Freedom's holy cause,
 Freedom, such as man may claim ¹⁵
 Under God's restraining laws.
 Such is Albion's fame and glory,
 Let rescued Europe tell the story.
 But lo! what sudden cloud has darkened
 all
 The land as with a funeral pall? ²⁰
 The Rose of England suffers blight,
 The Flower has drooped, the Isle's delight;
 Flower and bud together fall;
 A Nation's hopes lie crushed in Claremont's desolate Hall.

Time a chequered mantle wears— ²⁵
 Earth awakes from wintry sleep:
 Again the Tree a blossom bears;
 Cease, Britannia, cease to weep!
 Hark to the peals on this bright May-
 morn!
 They tell that your future Queen is born.
 A Guardian Angel fluttered ³¹

¹ The poet's nephew Christopher (late Bishop of Lincoln) aided in the composition of this "commanded" Ode.—ED.

One word he softly uttered,
It named the future Queen; 34
And a joyful cry through the Island rang,
As clear and bold as the trumpet's clang,
As bland as the reed of peace :—
" VICTORIA be her name !"
For righteous triumphs are the base Whereon Britannia rests her peaceful fame. 40

Time, in his mantle's sunniest fold
Uplifted in his arms the child,
And while the fearless infant smiled,
Her happier destiny foretold :—
" Infancy, by Wisdom mild, 45
Trained to health and artless beauty ;
Youth, by pleasure unbeguiled
From the lore of lofty duty ;
Womanhood in pure renown,
Seated on her lineal throne ; 50
Leaves of myrtle in her Crown,
Fresh with lustre all their own.
Love, the treasure worth possessing
More than all the world beside,
This shall be her choicest blessing, 55
Oft to royal hearts denied."

That eve, the Star of Brunswick shone
With steadfast ray benign
On Gotha's ducal roof, and on The softly flowing Leine, 60
Nor failed to gild the spires of Bonn,
And glittered on the Rhine.
Old Camus, too, on that prophetic night
Was conscious of the ray ;
And his willows whispered in its light, 65
Not to the Zephyr's sway,
But with a Delphic life, in sight
Of this auspicious day—
This day, when Granta hails her chosen
Lord,
And, proud of her award, 70
Confiding in that Star serene, Welcomes the Consort of a happy Queen.

Prince, in these collegiate bowers,
Where science, leagued with holier truth,
Guards the sacred heart of youth, 75
Solemn monitors are ours.
These reverend aisles, these hallowed
towers,
Raised by many a hand august,
Are haunted by majestic Powers,
The Memories of the Wise and Just, 80
Who, faithful to a pious trust,
Here, in the Founder's Spirit sought
To mould and stamp the ore of thought
In that bold form and impress high
That best betoken patriot loyalty. 85
Not in vain those Sages taught,— True disciples, good as great,

Have pondered here their country's weal,
Weighed the Future by the Past,
Learned how social frames may last, 90
And how a Land may rule its fate
By constancy inviolate,
Though worlds to their foundations reel
The sport of factious Hate or godless Zeal.

Albert, in thy race we cherish 95
A Nation's strength that will not perish
While England's sceptred Line
True to the King of Kings is found ;
Like that Wise ancestor of thine
Who threw the Saxon shield o'er Luther's
life 100
When first, above the yells of bigot strife,
The trumpet of the Living Word
Assumed a voice of deep portentous sound,
From gladdened Elbe to startled Tiber
heard.
What shield more sublime 105
E'er was blazoned or sung ?
And the PRINCE whom we greet
From its Hero is sprung.
Resound, resound the strain
That hails him for our own ! 110
Again, again, and yet again,
For the Church, the State, the Throne !
And that Presence fair and bright,
Ever blest wherever seen,
Who deigns to grace our festal rite, 115
The Pride of the Islands, VICTORIA
THE QUEEN !

QUINZAIN

CONJECTURALLY ASSIGNED TO WORDS-
WORTH.

[Composed ?.—Published 1802 (Morning Post) ;
never reprinted by W.]

A writer (E. H. C.) in the Athenæum of November 4, 1893, suggests that the following lines, which appeared in the Morning Post on February 9, 1802, were probably composed by Wordsworth. "It may be remembered," writes E. H. C., "that the phrase 'monthly grave' is to be found in Lines to the Moon (1835); and in one of Wordsworth's latest sonnets, that To Lucca Giordano, the aged poet turns with pleasure to the delightful vision of 'young Endymion, couched on Latmos Hill.'" The suggestion is undoubtedly a happy one. The rhyme-arrangement of these lines resembles that of the piece beginning, With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st the Sky, which first appeared in Poems in Two Volumes (1807), but may have been written in or about 1802. Both pieces appear to be experiments in metre. They are neither sonnets nor quatorzains, but quinzains, or stanzas consisting of fifteen lines each; though that published in 1807 was subsequently curtailed by one line and placed amongst the Miscellaneous Sonnets (1815 onwards). Moreover, the turn of the sentence in lines 8 and 9—the repetition of the substantive (Nymphs) in apposition, qualified by an adjective or adjectival phrase—is of frequent occurrence in Wordsworth's poetry. Cf. Misc. Son., Part II, xx., ll. 7, 8:—

“As if to vindicate her beauty's right,
Her beauty thoughtlessly disparaged.”—Ed.

WRITTEN IN A GROTTTO.

O Moon! if e'er I joyed when thy soft light Danc'd to the murmuring rill on Lo-mond's wave,
Or sighed for thy sweet presence some dark
night,
When thou wert hidden in thy monthly
grave;

If e'er, on wings which active fancy gave,
I sought thy golden vale with dancing
flight,
Then, stretcht at ease in some sequestered
cave,
Gaz'd on thy lovely Nymphs with fond
delight,
Thy Nymphs with more than earthly beauty bright;
If e'er thy beam, as Smyrna's shepherds
tell,
Soft as the gentle kiss of amorous maid
On the closed eyes of young Endymion fell,
That he might wake to clasp thee in the
shade:
Each night, while I recline within this cell, Guide hither, O sweet Moon, the maid I love so well.

The Prelude;

OR,
Growth of a Poet's Mind;

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL POEM.

[BY THE EDITOR OF 1850.]

THE following Poem was commenced in the beginning of the year 1799, and completed in the summer of 1805¹.

The design and occasion of the work are described by the Author in his Preface to the "Excursion," first published in 1814, where he thus speaks:—

"Several years ago, when the Author retired to his native mountains with the hope of being enabled to construct a literary work that might live, it was a reasonable thing that he should take a review of his own mind, and examine how far Nature and Education had qualified him for such an employment.

"As subsidiary to this preparation, he undertook to record, in verse, the origin and progress of his own powers, as far as he was acquainted with them.

"That work, addressed to a dear friend, most distinguished for his knowledge and genius, and to whom the Author's intellect is deeply indebted, has been long finished; and the result of the investigation which gave rise to it, was a determination to compose a philosophical Poem, containing views of Man, Nature, and Society, and to be entitled the "Recluse;" as having for its principal subject the sensations and opinions of a poet living in retirement.

"The preparatory poem is biographical, and conducts the history of the Author's mind to the point when he was emboldened to hope that his faculties were sufficiently matured for entering upon the arduous labour which he had proposed to himself; and the two works have the same kind of relation to each other, if he may so express himself, as the Ante-chapel has to the body of a Gothic Church. Continuing this allusion, he may be permitted to add, that his minor pieces, which have been long before the public, when they shall be properly arranged, will be found by the attentive reader to have such connection with the main work as may give them claim to be likened to the little cells, oratories, and sepulchral recesses, ordinarily included in those edifices."

Such was the Author's language in the year 1814.

It will thence be seen, that the present Poem was intended to be introductory to the "Recluse," and that the "Recluse," if completed, would have consisted of Three Parts. Of these, the Second Part alone, viz. the "Excursion," was finished, and given to the world by the Author.

The First Book of the First Part of the "Recluse" still [1850] remains in manuscript; but the Third Part was only planned. The materials of which it would have been formed have, however, been incorporated, for the most part, in the Author's other Publications, written subsequently to the "Excursion."

The Friend, to whom the present Poem is addressed, was the late SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE, who was resident in Malta, for the restoration of his health, when the greater part of it was composed.

Mr. Coleridge read a considerable portion of the Poem while he was abroad; and his feelings, on hearing it recited by the Author (after his return to his own country) are recorded in his Verses, addressed to Mr. Wordsworth, which will be found in the "Sibylline Leaves," p. 197, ed. 1817, or "Poetical Works, by S. T. Coleridge," vol. 1., p. 206.

The Prelude.

BOOK FIRST.

INTRODUCTION—CHILDHOOD AND SCHOOL-TIME.

OH THERE is blessing in this gentle breeze,
A visitant that while it fans my cheek
Doth seem half-conscious of the joy it brings
From the green fields, and from yon azure sky.
Whate'er its mission, the soft breeze can
 come 5
To none more grateful than to me; escaped
From the vast city, where I long had pined
A discontented sojourner: now free,
Free as a bird to settle where I will.
What dwelling shall receive me? in what
 vale 10
Shall be my harbour? underneath what
 grove
Shall I take up my home? and what clear stream
Shall with its murmur lull me into rest?
The earth is all before me. With a heart Joyous, nor scared at its own liberty, 15
I look about; and should the chosen
 guide
Be nothing better than a wandering
 cloud,
I cannot miss my way. I breathe again!
Trances of thought and mountings of the
 mind
Come fast upon me: it is shaken off, 20
That burthen of my own unnatural self,
The heavy weight of many a weary day
Not mine, and such as were not made
 for me.
Long months of peace (if such bold word accord
With any promises of human life), 25 Long months of ease and undisturbed
 delight

Are mine in prospect; whither shall I
 turn,
By road or pathway, or through trackless
 field,
Up hill or down, or shall some floating
 thing 29
Upon the river point me out my course?

Dear Liberty! Yet what would it avail
But for a gift that consecrates the joy?
For I, methought, while the sweet breath of heaven
Was blowing on my body, felt within A correspondent breeze, that gently
 moved 35
With quickening virtue, but is now become
A tempest, a redundant energy,
Vexing its own creation. Thanks to both,
And their congenial powers, that, while they join
In breaking up a long-continued frost, 40 Bring with them vernal promises, the
 hope
Of active days urged on by flying hours,— Days of sweet leisure, taxed with patient
 thought
Abstruse, nor wanting punctual service
 high, 44
Matins and vespers of harmonious verse!

Thus far, O Friend! did I, not used to
 make
A present joy the matter of a song, Pour forth that day my soul in measured
 strains
That would not be forgotten, and are
 here.
Recorded: to the open fields I told 50
A prophecy: poetic numbers came

Spontaneously to clothe in priestly robe
 A renovated spirit singled out,
 Such hope was mine, for holy services.
 My own voice cheered me, and, far more,
 the mind's 55
 Internal echo of the imperfect sound ;
 To both I listened, drawing from them
 both
 A cheerful confidence in things to come.

Content and not unwilling now to give
 A respite to this passion, I paced on 60
 With brisk and eager steps; and came,
 at length,
 To a green shady place, where down I sat
 Beneath a tree, slackening my thoughts
 by choice,
 And settling into gentler happiness.
 'Twas autumn, and a clear and placid day,
 With warmth, as much as needed, from a
 sun 66
 Two hours declined towards the west ;
 a day
 With silver clouds, and sunshine on the grass,
 And in the sheltered and the sheltering
 grove
 A perfect stillness. Many were the
 thoughts 70
 Encouraged and dismissed, till choice was made
 Of a known Vale, whither my feet should
 turn,
 Nor rest till they had reached the very
 door
 Of the one cottage which methought I
 saw. 74
 No picture of mere memory ever looked
 So fair; and while upon the fancied scene
 I gazed with growing love, a higher
 power
 Than Fancy gave assurance of some work
 Of glory there forthwith to be begun,
 Perhaps too there performed. Thus long
 I mused, 80
 Nor e'er lost sight of what I mused upon, Save when, amid the stately grove of oaks,
 Now here, now there, an acorn, from its cup

Dislodged, through sere leaves rustled, or
 at once
 To the bare earth dropped with a startling sound. 85
 From that soft couch I rose not, till the
 sun
 Had almost touched the horizon; casting
 then
 A backward glance upon the curling
 cloud
 Of city smoke, by distance ruralised ;
 Keen as a Truant or a Fugitive, 90
 But as a Pilgrim resolute, I took,
 Even with the chance equipment of that
 hour,
 The road that pointed toward the chosen
 - Vale.
 It was a splendid evening, and my soul
 Once more made trial of her strength, nor lacked 95
 Æolian visitations; but the harp
 Was soon defrauded, and the banded
 host
 Of harmony dispersed in straggling
 sounds,
 And lastly utter silence! "Be it so;
 Why think of anything but present
 good?" 100
 So, like a home-bound labourer, I pursued My way beneath the mellowing sun, that shed
 Mild influence; nor left in me one wish
 Again to bend the Sabbath of that time To a servile yoke. What need of many
 words? 105
 A pleasant loitering journey, through three days
 Continued, brought me to my hermitage.
 I spare to tell of what ensued, the life
 In common things—the endless store of
 things,
 Rare, or at least so seeming, every day
 Found all about me in one neighbourhood— 111
 The self-congratulation, and, from morn
 To night, unbroken cheerfulness serene.
 But speedily an earnest longing rose
 To brace myself to some determined aim,
 Reading or thinking; either to lay up
 New stores, or rescue from decay the old
 By timely interference: and therewith

Came hopes still higher, that with outward life
I might endure some airy phantasies 120
That had been floating loose about for
years,
And to such beings temperately deal
forth
The many feelings that oppressed my
heart.
That hope hath been discouraged; welcome light
Dawns from the east, but dawns to dis-
appear 125
And mock me with a sky that ripens not
Into a steady morning: if my mind, Remembering the bold promise of the
past,
Would gladly grapple with some noble
theme,
Vain is her wish; where'er she turns she finds 130
Impediments from day to day renewed.

And now it would content me to yield up
Those lofty hopes awhile, for present
gifts
Of humbler industry. But, oh, dear
Friend!
The Poet, gentle creature as he is, 135
Hath, like the Lover, his unruly times;
His fits when he is neither sick nor well, Though no distress be near him but his
own Unmanageable thoughts: his mind, best pleased
While she as duteous as the mother dove Sits brooding, lives not always to that
end, 141
But like the innocent bird, hath goadings
on
That drive her as in trouble through the groves;
With me is now such passion, to be blamed
No otherwise than as it lasts too long. 145

When, as becomes a man who would prepare
For such an arduous work, I through myself

Make rigorous inquisition, the report
Is often cheering; for I neither seem To lack that first great gift, the vital
soul, 150
Nor general Truths, which are themselves a sort
Of Elements and Agents, Under-powers,
Subordinate helpers of the living mind:
Nor am I naked of external things,
Forms, images, nor numerous other aids
Of less regard, though won perhaps with
toil 156
And needful to build up a Poet's praise.
Time, place, and manners do I seek, and
these
Are found in plenteous store, but nowhere such 159
As may be singled out with steady choice;
No little band of yet remembered names Whom I, in perfect confidence, might
hope
To summon back from lonesome banish-
ment,
And make them dwellers in the hearts of
men
Now living, or to live in future years. 165
Sometimes the ambitious Power of choice, mistaking
Proud spring-tide swellings for a regular
sea,
Will settle on some British theme, some old
Romantic tale by Milton left unsung;
More often turning to some gentle place
Within the groves of Chivalry, I pipe 171
To shepherd swains, or seated harp in
hand,
Amid reposing knights by a river side
Or fountain, listen to the grave reports Of dire enchantments faced and over-
come 175
By the strong mind, and tales of warlike feats,
Where spear encountered spear, and sword with sword
Fought, as if conscious of the blazonry
That the shield bore, so glorious was the
strife;
Whence inspiration for a song that winds Through ever-changing scenes of votive
quest 181

Wrongs to redress, harmonious tribute paid
 To patient courage and unblemished
 truth,
 To firm devotion, zeal unquenchable,
 And Christian meekness hallowing faithful loves. 185
 Sometimes, more sternly moved, I would relate How vanquished Mithridates northward
 passed,
 And, hidden in the cloud of years, became Odin, the Father of a race by whom Perished the Roman Empire: how the
 friends 190
 And followers of Sertorius, out of Spain
 Flying, found shelter in the Fortunate
 Isles,
 And left their usages, their arts and laws,
 To disappear by a slow gradual death,
 To dwindle and to perish one by one, 195 Starved in those narrow bounds: but not the soul
 Of Liberty, which fifteen hundred years Survived, and, when the European came With skill and power that might not be withstood,
 Did, like a pestilence, maintain its hold
 And wasted down by glorious death that
 race 201
 Of natural heroes: or I would record
 How, in tyrannic times, some high-souled
 man,
 Unnamed among the chronicles of kings, Suffered in silence for Truth's sake; or
 tell, 205
 How that one Frenchman¹, through continued force
 Of meditation on the inhuman deeds
 Of those who conquered first the Indian
 Isles,
 Went single in his ministry across The Ocean; not to comfort the oppressed, 210
 But, like a thirsty wind, to roam about Withering the Oppressor: how Gustavus
 sought
 Help at his need in Dalecarlia's mines:

How Wallace fought for Scotland; left
 the name
 Of Wallace to be found, like a wild
 flower, 215
 All over his dear Country; left the
 deeds
 Of Wallace, like a family of Ghosts,
 To people the steep rocks and river
 banks,
 Her natural sanctuaries, with a local soul
 Of independence and stern liberty. 220
 Sometimes it suits me better to invent
 A tale from my own heart, more near akin
 To my own passions and habitual thoughts;
 Some variegated story, in the main Lofty, but the unsubstantial structure melts 225
 Before the very sun that brightens it,
 Mist into air dissolving! Then a wish,
 My last and favourite aspiration, mounts
 With yearning toward some philosophic
 song
 Of Truth that cherishes our daily life; 230
 With meditations passionate from deep Recesses in man's heart, immortal verse
 Thoughtfully fitted to the Orphean lyre;
 But from this awful burthen I full soon Take refuge and beguile myself with trust 235
 That mellow years will bring a riper
 mind
 And clearer insight. Thus my days are
 past
 In contradiction; with no skill to part Vague longing, haply bred by want of
 power,
 From paramount impulse not to be with-
 stood, 240
 A timorous capacity from prudence,
 From circumspection, infinite delay.
 Humility and modest awe themselves
 Betray me, serving often for a cloak 244
 To a more subtle selfishness; that now Locks every function up in blank reserve,
 Now dupes me, trusting to an anxious eye
 That with intrusive restlessness beats off
 Simplicity and self-presented truth.
 Ah! better far than this, to stray about Voluptuously through fields and rural
 walks, 251
 And ask no record of the hours, resigned

¹ Dominique de Gourgues, who in 1567 sailed to Florida to avenge the massacre of the French by the Spaniards.—Ed. of 1850.

To vacant musing, unproved neglect
 Of all things, and deliberate holiday. 254
 Far better never to have heard the name
 Of zeal and just ambition, than to live Baffled and plagued by a mind that every
 hour
 Turns recreant to her task; takes heart
 again,
 Then feels immediately some hollow
 thought
 Hang like an interdict upon her hopes.
 This is my lot; for either still I find 261
 Some imperfection in the chosen theme,
 Or see of absolute accomplishment Much wanting, so much wanting, in my-
 self,
 That I recoil and droop, and seek repose
 In listlessness from vain perplexity, 266
 Unprofitably travelling toward the grave,
 Like a false steward who hath much
 received
 And renders nothing back.

Was it for this

That one, the fairest of all rivers, loved
 To blend his murmurs with my nurse's
 song, 271
 And, from his alder shades and rocky falls,
 And from his fords and shallows, sent a
 voice
 That flowed along my dreams? For this, didst thou, 274
 O Derwent! winding among grassy holms
 Where I was looking on, a babe in arms, Make ceaseless music that composed my
 thoughts
 To more than infant softness, giving me
 Amid the fretful dwellings of mankind
 A foretaste, a dim earnest, of the calm That Nature breathes among the hills
 and groves. 281

When he had left the mountains and
 received
 On his smooth breast the shadow of those towers
 That yet survive, a shattered monument
 Of feudal sway, the bright blue river
 passed 285
 Along the margin of our terrace walk;
 A tempting playmate whom we dearly
 loved.

Oh, many a time have I, a five years'
 child,
 In a small mill-race severed from his
 stream,
 Made one long bathing of a summer's
 day; 290
 Basked in the sun, and plunged and basked again
 Alternate, all a summer's day, or scoured
 The sandy fields, leaping through flowery
 groves
 Of yellow ragwort; or when rock and
 hill,
 The woods, and distant Skiddaw's lofty
 height, 295
 Were bronzed with deepest radiance, stood alone
 Beneath the sky, as if I had been born On Indian plains, and from my mother's hut
 Had run abroad in wantonness, to sport,
 A naked savage, in the thunder shower.

Fair seed-time had my soul, and I grew
 up 301
 Fostered alike by beauty and by fear:
 Much favoured in my birthplace, and no
 less
 In that belovèd Vale to which erelong
 We were transplanted—there were we let loose 305
 For sports of wider range. Ere I had told
 Ten birth-days, when among the mountain-slopes
 Frost, and the breath of frosty wind, had snapped
 The last autumnal crocus, 'twas my joy
 With store of springes o'er my shoulder
 hung 310
 To range the open heights where wood-cocks run
 Among the smooth green turf. Through half the night, Scudding away from snare to snare, I
 plied
 That anxious visitation;—moon and stars
 Were shining o'er my head. I was alone,
 And seemed to be a trouble to the peace
 That dwelt among them. Sometimes it befell 317

In these night wanderings, that a strong desire O'erpowered my better reason, and the bird
 Which was the captive of another's toil Became my prey; and when the deed
 was done 321
 I heard among the solitary hills Low breathings coming after me, and
 sounds
 Of undistinguishable motion, steps
 Almost as silent as the turf they trod. 325

Nor less when spring had warmed the cultured Vale,
 Moved we as plunderers where the mother-
 bird
 Had in high places built her lodge;
 though mean
 Our object and inglorious, yet the end Was not ignoble. Oh! when I have
 hung 330
 Above the raven's nest, by knots of grass
 And half-inch fissures in the slippery
 rock
 But ill sustained, and almost (so it seemed)
 Suspended by the blast that blew amain, Shouldering the naked crag, oh, at that
 time 335
 While on the perilous ridge I hung alone,
 With what strange utterance did the loud dry wind
 Blow through my ear! the sky seemed not a sky
 Of earth—and with what motion moved the clouds!

Dust as we are, the immortal spirit
 grows 340
 Like harmony in music; there is a dark
 Inscrutable workmanship that reconciles Discordant elements, makes them cling together
 In one society. How strange that all
 The terrors, pains, and early miseries, 345
 Regrets, vexations, lassitudes interfused Within my mind, should e'er have borne
 a part,
 And that a needful part, in making up
 The calm existence that is mine when I Am worthy of myself! Praise to the

 end! 350
 Thanks to the means which Nature
 deigned to employ;
 Whether her fearless visitings, or those That came with soft alarm, like hurtless
 light
 Opening the peaceful clouds; or she may use
 Severer interventions, ministry 355
 More palpable, as best might suit her
 aim.

One summer evening (led by her) I
 found
 A little boat tied to a willow tree
 Within a rocky cave, its usual home.
 Straight I unloosed her chain, and stepping in 360
 Pushed from the shore. It was an act of stealth
 And troubled pleasure, nor without the
 voice
 Of mountain-echoes did my boat move on;
 Leaving behind her still, on either side,
 Small circles glittering idly in the moon,
 Until they melted all into one track 366
 Of sparkling light. But now, like one who rows,
 Proud of his skill, to reach a chosen point
 With an unswerving line, I fixed my view
 Upon the summit of a craggy ridge, 370
 The horizon's utmost boundary; far above
 Was nothing but the stars and the grey
 sky.
 She was an elfin pinnace; lustily
 I dipped my oars into the silent lake,
 And, as I rose upon the stroke, my boat Went heaving through the water like a swan; 376
 When, from behind that craggy steep till
 then
 The horizon's bound, a huge peak, black and huge,
 As if with voluntary power instinct Upreared its head. I struck and struck
 again, 380
 And growing still in stature the grim
 shape
 Towered up between me and the stars,
 and still,

For so it seemed, with purpose of its own
 And measured motion like a living thing, Strode after me. With trembling oars
 I turned, 385
 And through the silent water stole my
 way
 Back to the covert of the willow tree;
 There in her mooring-place I left my bark,—
 And through the meadows homeward went, in grave 389
 And serious mood; but after I had seen
 That spectacle, for many days, my brain Worked with a dim and undetermined
 sense
 Of unknown modes of being; o'er my
 thoughts
 There hung a darkness, call it solitude
 Or blank desertion. No familiar shapes 395
 Remained, no pleasant images of trees,
 Of sea or sky, no colours of green fields;
 But huge and mighty forms, that do not
 live
 Like living men, moved slowly through the mind
 By day, and were a trouble to my dreams.

Wisdom and Spirit of the universe! 401
 Thou Soul that art the eternity of thought,
 That givest to forms and images a breath
 And everlasting motion, not in vain
 By day or star-light thus from my first
 dawn 405
 Of childhood didst thou intertwine for
 me
 The passions that build up our human
 soul;
 Not with the mean and vulgar works of
 man,
 But with high objects, with enduring
 things—
 With life and nature—purifying thus 410
 The elements of feeling and of thought,
 And sanctifying, by such discipline,
 Both pain and fear, until we recognise
 A grandeur in the beatings of the heart.
 Nor was this fellowship vouchsafed to me
 With stinted kindness. In November
 days, 416
 When vapours rolling down the valley
 made

A lonely scene more lonesome, among
 woods,
 At noon and 'mid the calm of summer
 nights,
 When, by the margin of the trembling
 lake, 420
 Beneath the gloomy hills homeward I
 went
 In solitude, such intercourse was mine;
 Mine was it in the fields both day and
 night,
 And by the waters, all the summer long.

And in the frosty season, when the sun
 Was set, and visible for many a mile 426
 The cottage windows blazed through twilight gloom,
 I heeded not their summons: happy time
 It was indeed for all of us—for me
 It was a time of rapture! Clear and loud
 The village clock tolled six,—I wheeled
 about, 431
 Proud and exulting like an untired horse
 That cares not for his home. All shod
 with steel,
 We hissed along the polished ice in
 games
 Confederate, imitative of the chase 435
 And woodland pleasures,—the resounding
 horn,
 The pack loud chiming, and the hunted
 hare.
 So through the darkness and the cold we flew,
 And not a voice was idle; with the din
 Smitten, the precipices rang aloud; 440
 The leafless trees and every icy crag
 Tinkled like iron; while far distant hills
 Into the tumult sent an alien sound
 Of melancholy not unnoticed, while the
 stars Eastward were sparkling clear, and in the
 west 445
 The orange sky of evening died away.
 Not seldom from the uproar I retired
 Into a silent bay, or sportively Glanced sideways, leaving the tumultuous
 through,
 To cut across the reflex of a star 450
 That fled, and, flying still before me, gleamed

Upon the glassy plain ; and oftentimes,
When we had given our bodies to the
wind,

And all the shadowy banks on either side
Came sweeping through the darkness,
spinning still 455

The rapid line of motion, then at once
Have I, reclining back upon my heels,
Stopped short ; yet still the solitary cliffs Wheeled by me—even as if the earth had
rolled

With visible motion her diurnal round !
Behind me did they stretch in solemn
train, 461

Feebler and feebler, and I stood and
watched

Till all was tranquil as a dreamless sleep.

Ye Presences of Nature in the sky And on the earth ! Ye Visions of the
hills ! 465

And Souls of lonely places ! can I think A vulgar hope was yours when ye employed

Such ministry, when ye through many
a year

Haunting me thus among my boyish
sports,

On caves and trees, upon the woods and
hills, 470

Impressed upon all forms the characters
Of danger or desire ; and thus did make
The surface of the universal earth

With triumph and delight, with hope and fear,

Work like a sea ?

Not uselessly employed, Might I pursue this theme through every
change 476

Of exercise and play, to which the year
Did summon us in his delightful round.

We were a noisy crew ; the sun in
heaven

Beheld not vales more beautiful than
ours ; 480

Nor saw a band in happiness and joy Richer, or worthier of the ground they trod.

I could record with no reluctant voice
The woods of autumn, and their hazel
bowers

With milk-white clusters hung ; the rod and line, 485

True symbol of hope's foolishness, whose
strong

And unproved enchantment led us on By rocks and pools shut out from every
star,

All the green summer, to forlorn cascades
Among the windings hid of mountain
brooks. 490

—Unfading recollections ! at this hour
The heart is almost mine with which I felt,

From some hill-top on sunny afternoons,
The paper kite high among fleecy clouds Pull at her rein like an impetuous courser ; 495

Or, from the meadows sent on gusty
days,

Beheld her breast the wind, then suddenly Dashed headlong, and rejected by the storm.

Ye lowly cottages wherein we dwelt,
A ministration of your own was yours ; 500
Can I forget you, being as you were So beautiful among the pleasant fields

In which ye stood ? or can I here forget
The plain and seemly countenance with which

Ye dealt out your plain comforts ? Yet had ye 505

Delights and exultations of your own.

Eager and never weary we pursued
Our home-amusements by the warm peat-
fire

At evening, when with pencil, and smooth slate

In square divisions parcelled out and all
With crosses and with cyphers scribbled
o'er, 511

We schemed and puzzled, head opposed to head

In strife too humble to be named in
verse :

Or round the naked table, snow-white deal,

Cherry or maple, sate in close array, 515
And to the combat, Loo or Whist, led on A thick-ribbed army ; not, as in the
world,

Neglected and ungratefully thrown by Even for the very service they had
wrought,

But husbanded through many a long campaign. 520

Uncouth assemblage was it, where no few Had changed their functions; some, plebeian cards

Which Fate, beyond the promise of their
birth,

Had dignified, and called to represent
The persons of departed potentates. 525 Oh, with what echoes on the board they fell!

Ironic diamonds,—clubs, hearts, diamonds,
'spades,

A congregation piteously akin!
Cheap matter offered they to boyish wit,
Those sooty knaves, precipitated down
With scoffs and taunts, like Vulcan out of heaven: 531

The paramount ace, a moon in her eclipse, Queens gleaming through their splen-dour's last decay,

And monarchs surly at the wrongs sustained

By royal visages. Meanwhile abroad 535
Incessant rain was falling, or the frost Raged bitterly, with keen and silent
tooth;

And, interrupting oft that eager game,
From under Esthwaite's splitting fields of ice

The pent-up air, struggling to free itself, Gave out to meadow-grounds and hills
a loud 541

Protracted yelling, like the noise of wolves

Howling in troops along the Bothnic
Main.

Nor, sedulous as I have been to trace
How Nature by extrinsic passion first 545 Peopled the mind with forms sublime or
fair,

And made me love them, may I here omit

How other pleasures have been mine, and joys

Of subtler origin; how I have felt,
Not seldom even in that tempestuous time,

Those hallowed and pure motions of the
sense 551

Which seem, in their simplicity, to own
An intellectual charm; that calm delight
Which, if I err not, surely must belong

To those first-born affinities that fit 555
Our new existence to existing things,
And, in our dawn of being, constitute
The bond of union between life and joy.

Yes, I remember when the changeful
earth,

And twice five summers on my mind had stamped 560

The faces of the moving year, even then
I held unconscious intercourse with beauty
Old as creation, drinking in a pure Organic pleasure from the silver wreaths
Of curling mist, or from the level plain 565
Of waters coloured by impending clouds.

The sands of Westmoreland, the creeks and bays

Of Cumbria's rocky limits, they can tell How, when the Sea threw off his evening
shade

And to the shepherd's hut on distant hills
Sent welcome notice of the rising moon, How I have stood, to fancies such as
these

A stranger, linking with the spectacle 573
No conscious memory of a kindred sight,
And bringing with me no peculiar sense
Of quietness or peace; yet have I stood,
Even while mine eye hath moved o'er
many a league

Of shining water, gathering as it seemed,
Through every hair-breadth in that field
of light,

New pleasure like a bee among the
flowers. 580

Thus oft amid those fits of vulgar joy
Which, through all seasons, on a child's pursuits

Are prompt attendants, 'mid that giddy
bliss

Which, like a tempest, works along the blood

And is forgotten; even then I felt 585 Gleams like the flashing of a shield;—the
earth

And common face of Nature spake to me Rememberable things; sometimes, 'tis
true,

By chance collisions and quaint accidents (Like those ill-sorted unions, work supposed 590

Of evil-minded fairies), yet not vain
Nor profitless, if haply they impressed
Collateral objects and appearances,
Albeit lifeless then, and doomed to sleep
Until maturer seasons called them forth
To impregnate and to elevate the mind.

—And if the vulgar joy by its own
weight

Wearied itself out of the memory,
The scenes which were a witness of that
joy

Remained in their substantial lineaments
Depicted on the brain, and to the eye 601
Were visible, a daily sight; and thus
By the impressive discipline of fear,
By pleasure and repeated happiness,
So frequently repeated, and by force 605
Of obscure feelings representative Of things forgotten, these same scenes so
bright,

So beautiful, so majestic in themselves,
Though yet the day was distant, did become

Habitually dear, and all their forms 610
And changeful colours by invisible links
Were fastened to the affections.

I began

My story early—not misled, I trust,
By an infirmity of love for days Disowned by memory—ere the breath of
spring 615

Planting my snowdrops among winter
snows:

Nor will it seem to thee, O Friend! so prompt

In sympathy, that I have lengthened out
With fond and feeble tongue a tedious tale.
Meanwhile, my hope has been, that I might fetch 620

Invigorating thoughts from former years;
Might fix the wavering balance of my
mind,

And haply meet reproaches too, whose
power

May spur me on, in manhood now mature,

To honourable toil. Yet should these
hopes 625

Prove vain, and thus should neither I be taught

To understand myself, nor thou to know
With better knowledge how the heart was framed

Of him thou lovest; need I dread from
thee

Harsh judgments, if the song be loth to quit 630

Those recollected hours that have the charm

Of visionary things, those lovely forms
And sweet sensations that throw back
our life,

And almost make remotest infancy
A visible scene, on which the sun is shining? 635

One end at least hath been attained;
my mind

Hath been revived, and if this genial
mood

Desert me not, forthwith shall be brought
down

Through later years the story of my life.
The road lies plain before me;—'tis a
theme 640

Single and of determined bounds; and hence

I choose it rather at this time, than work
Of ampler or more varied argument,

Where I might be discomfited and lost:
And certain hopes are with me, that to
thee 645

This labour will be welcome, honoured
Friend!

BOOK SECOND.

 THUS far, O Friend! have we, though leaving much Unvisited, endeavoured to retrace The simple ways in which my childhood walked; Those chiefly that first led me to the love Of rivers, woods, and fields. The passion yet 5 Was in its birth, sustained as might befall By nourishment that came unsought; for still From week to week, from month to month, we lived A round of tumult. Duly were our games Prolonged in summer till the day-light failed: 10 No chair remained before the doors; the bench And threshold steps were empty; fast asleep The labourer, and the old man who had sate A later lingerer; yet the revelry Continued and the loud uproar: at last, When all the ground was dark, and twinkling stars 16 Edged the black clouds, home and to bed we went, Feverish with weary joints and beating minds. Ah! is there one who ever has been young, Nor needs a warning voice to tame the pride 20 Of intellect and virtue's self-esteem? One is there, though the wisest and the best Of all mankind, who covets not at times Union that cannot be;—who would not give, If so he might, to duty and to truth 25 The eagerness of infantine desire? A tranquillising spirit presses now 	 On my corporeal frame, so wide appears The vacancy between me and those days. Which yet have such self-presence in my mind, 30 That, musing on them, often do I seem Two consciousnesses, conscious of myself And of some other Being. A rude mass Of native rock, left midway in the square Of our small market village, was the goal Or centre of these sports; and when, returned 36 After long absence, thither I repaired, Gone was the old grey stone, and in its place A smart Assembly-room usurped the ground That had been ours. There let the fiddle scream, 40 And be ye happy! Yet, my Friends! I know That more than one of you will think with me Of those soft starry nights, and that old Dame From whom the stone was named, who there had sate, And watched her table with its huckster's wares 45 Assiduous, through the length of sixty years. We ran a boisterous course; the year span round With giddy motion. But the time ap- proached That brought with it a regular desire For calmer pleasures, when the winning forms 50 Of Nature were collaterally attached To every scheme of holiday delight And every boyish sport, less grateful else And languidly pursued. When summer came,
---	--

Our pastime was, on bright half-holidays, 55
 To sweep along the plain of Windermere
 With rival oars; and the selected bourne
 Was now an Island musical with birds
 That sang and ceased not; now a Sister
 Isle
 Beneath the oaks' umbrageous covert,
 sown 60
 With lilies of the valley like a field;
 And now a third small Island, where survived
 In solitude the ruins of a shrine
 Once to Our Lady dedicate, and served Daily with chaunted rites. In such a race 65
 So ended, disappointment could be none,
 Uneasiness, or pain, or jealousy:
 We rested in the shade, all pleased alike, Conquered and conqueror. Thus the pride of strength,
 And the vain-glory of superior skill, 70
 Were tempered; thus was gradually produced
 A quiet independence of the heart;
 And to my Friend who knows me I may add,
 Fearless of blame, that hence for future
 days
 Ensued a diffidence and modesty, 75
 And I was taught to feel, perhaps too
 much,
 The self-sufficing power of Solitude.

Our daily meals were frugal, Sabine
 fare!
 More than we wished we knew the blessing then
 Of vigorous hunger — hence corporeal
 strength 80
 Unsapped by delicate viands; for, exclude
 A little weekly stipend, and we lived Through three divisions of the quartered
 year
 In penniless poverty. But now to school
 From the half-yearly holidays returned,
 We came with weightier purses, that sufficed 86
 To furnish treats more costly than the
 Dame

Of the old grey stone, from her scant board, supplied.
 Hence rustic dinners on the cool green
 ground,
 Or in the woods, or by a river's side 90
 Or shady fountain's, while among the leaves
 Soft airs were stirring, and the mid-day
 sun
 Unfelt shone brightly round us in our joy.
 Nor is my aim neglected if I tell How sometimes, in the length of those half-years, 95
 We from our funds drew largely;—proud to curb,
 And eager to spur on, the galloping steed;
 And with the courteous inn-keeper, whose stud Supplied our want, we haply might employ
 Sly subterfuge, if the adventure's bound Were distant: some famed temple where of yore 101
 The Druids worshipped, or the antique
 walls
 Of that large abbey, where within the
 Vale
 Of Nightshade, to St. Mary's honour
 built,
 Stands yet a mouldering pile with fractured arch, 105
 Belfry, and images, and living trees;
 A holy scene!—Along the smooth green
 turf
 Our horses grazed. To more than inland
 peace,
 Left by the west wind sweeping overhead
 From a tumultuous ocean, trees and
 towers 110
 In that sequestered valley may be seen,
 Both silent and both motionless alike;
 Such the deep shelter that is there, and such
 The safeguard for repose and quietness.

Our steeds remounted and the summons
 given, 115
 With whip and spur we through the chantry flew
 In uncouth race, and left the cross-legged
 knight,

And the stone-abbot, and that single wren
 Which one day sang so sweetly in the nave
 Of the old church, that—though from recent showers 120
 The earth was comfortless, and, touched by faint
 Internal breezes, sobbings of the place
 And respirations, from the roofless walls
 The shuddering ivy dripped large drops—yet still
 So sweetly 'mid the gloom the invisible bird 125
 Sang to herself, that there I could have made
 My dwelling-place, and lived for ever there
 To hear such music. Through the walls we flew
 And down the valley, and, a circuit made
 In wantonness of heart, through rough and smooth 130
 We scampered homewards. Oh, ye rocks and streams,
 And that still spirit shed from evening air!
 Even in this joyous time I sometimes felt
 Your presence, when with slackened step we breathed Along the sides of the steep hills, or when Lighted by gleams of moonlight from the sea 136
 We beat with thundering hoofs the level sand.

Midway on long Winander's eastern shore,
 Within the crescent of a pleasant bay,
 A tavern stood; no homely-featured house, 140
 Primeval like its neighbouring cottages,
 But 'twas a splendid place, the door beset
 With chaises, grooms, and liveries, and within Decanters, glasses, and the blood-red wine.
 In ancient times, and ere the Hall was built 145
 On the large island, had this dwelling been

More worthy of a poet's love, a hut,
 Proud of its own bright fire and sycamore shade.
 But—though the rhymes were gone that once inscribed
 The threshold, and large golden characters, 150
 Spread o'er the spangled sign-board, had dislodged
 The old Lion and usurped his place, in slight
 And mockery of the rustic painter's hand—
 Yet, to this hour, the spot to me is dear
 With all its foolish pomp. The garden lay 155
 Upon a slope surmounted by a plain
 Of a small bowling-green; beneath us stood
 A grove, with gleams of water through the trees
 And over the tree-tops; nor did we want Refreshment, strawberries and mellow cream. 160
 There, while through half an afternoon we played
 On the smooth platform, whether skill prevailed
 Or happy blunder triumphed, bursts of glee
 Made all the mountains ring. But, ere nightfall,
 When in our pinnace we returned at leisure 165
 Over the shadowy lake, and to the beach
 Of some small island steered our course with one,
 The Minstrel of the Troop, and left him there,
 And rowed off gently, while he blew his flute
 Alone upon the rock—oh, then, the calm
 And dead still water lay upon my mind
 Even with a weight of pleasure, and the sky,
 Never before so beautiful, sank down
 Into my heart, and held me like a dream!
 Thus were my sympathies enlarged, and thus 175
 Daily the common range of visible things Grew dear to me: already I began

To love the sun ; a boy I loved the sun,
 Not as I since have loved him, as a pledge
 And surety of our earthly life, a light 180
 Which we behold and feel we are alive ;
 Nor for his bounty to so many worlds—
 But for this cause, that I had seen him
 lay

His beauty on the morning hills, had
 seen

The western mountain touch his setting
 orb, 185

In many a thoughtless hour, when, from excess

Of happiness, my blood appeared to flow
 For its own pleasure, and I breathed with
 joy.

And, from like feelings, humble though intense,

To patriotic and domestic love 190

Analogous, the moon to me was dear ;
 For I could dream away my purposes, Standing to gaze upon her while she
 hung

Midway between the hills, as if she knew

No other region, but belonged to thee, 195

Yea, appertained by a peculiar right

To thee and thy grey huts, thou one dear
 Vale !

Those incidental charms which first attached

My heart to rural objects, day by day

Grew weaker, and I hasten on to tell 200

How Nature, intervenient till this time

And secondary, now at length was sought

For her own sake. But who shall parcel
 out

His intellect by geometric rules,

Split like a province into round and square? 205

Who knows the individual hour in which

His habits were first sown, even as a seed?

Who that shall point as with a wand and
 say

“This portion of the river of my mind

Came from yon fountain?” Thou, my Friend ! art one 210

More deeply read in thy own thoughts ;
 to thee

Science appears but what in truth she is,

Not as our glory and our absolute boast,
 But as a succedaneum, and a prop
 To our infirmity. No officious slave 215
 Art thou of that false secondary power
 By which we multiply distinctions, then Deem that our puny boundaries are
 things

That we perceive, and not that we have
 made.

To thee, unblinded by these formal arts,
 The unity of all hath been revealed, 221

And thou wilt doubt, with me less aptly skilled

Than many are to range the faculties

In scale and order, class the cabinet

Of their sensations, and in voluble phrase

Run through the history and birth of
 each 226

As of a single independent thing.

Hard task, vain hope, to analyse the
 mind,

If each most obvious and particular
 thought,

Not in a mystical and idle sense, 230

But in the words of Reason deeply weighed,

Hath no beginning.

Blest the infant Babe, (For with my best conjecture I would
 trace

Our Being's earthly progress,) blest the
 Babe,

Nursed in his Mother's arms, who sinks
 to sleep, 235

Rocked on his Mother's breast ; who with his soul

Drinks in the feelings of his Mother's
 eye !

For him, in one dear Presence, there exists

A virtue which irradiates and exalts Objects through widest intercourse of
 sense. 240

No outcast he, bewildered and depressed :

Along his infant veins are interfused

The gravitation and the filial bond

Of nature that connect him with the world.

Is there a flower, to which he points with
 hand 245

Too weak to gather it, already love

Drawn from love's purest earthly fount
for him

Hath beautified that flower; already shades

Of pity cast from inward tenderness
Do fall around him upon aught that bears
Unightly marks of violence or harm. 251

Emphatically such a Being lives,
Frail creature as he is, helpless as frail,
An inmate of this active universe:
For feeling has to him imparted power That through the growing faculties of
sense 256

Doth like an agent of the one great Mind
Create, creator and receiver both,
Working but in alliance with the works Which it beholds.—Such, verily, is the first 260

Poetic spirit of our human life,
By uniform control of after years,
In most, abated or suppressed; in some,
Through every change of growth and of
decay,
Pre-eminent till death.

From early days, 265

Beginning not long after that first time
In which, a Babe, by intercourse of touch
I held mute dialogues with my Mother's
heart,

I have endeavoured to display the means Whereby this infant sensibility, 270
Great birthright of our being, was in me
Augmented and sustained. Yet is a path
More difficult before me; and I fear
That in its broken windings we shall need
The chamois' sinews, and the eagle's
wing: 275

For now a trouble came into my mind
From unknown causes. I was left alone Seeking the visible world, nor knowing
why.

The props of my affections were removed,
And yet the building stood, as if sustained 280

By its own spirit! All that I beheld
Was dear, and hence to finer influxes
The mind lay open, to a more exact And close communion. Many are our
joys 284

In youth, but oh! what happiness to live
When every hour brings palpable access

Of knowledge, when all knowledge is
delight,

And sorrow is not there! The seasons
came,

And every season wheresoe'er I moved Unfolded transitory qualities, 290
Which, but for this most watchful power
of love,

Had been neglected; left a register
Of permanent relations, else unknown.
Hence life, and change, and beauty, solitude

More active even than "best society"—
Society made sweet as solitude 296

By silent inobtrusive sympathies,
And gentle agitations of the mind
From manifold distinctions, difference Perceived in things, where, to the un-watchful eye, 300

No difference is, and hence, from the same source,

Sublimier joy; for I would walk alone,
Under the quiet stars, and at that time Have felt whate'er there is of power in
sound 304

To breathe an elevated mood, by form
Or image unprofaned; and I would stand,
If the night blackened with a coming
storm,

Beneath some rock, listening to notes that are

The ghostly language of the ancient earth,
Or make their dim abode in distant
winds. 310

Thence did I drink the visionary power;
And deem not profitless those fleeting moods

Of shadowy exultation: not for this,
That they are kindred to our purer mind
And intellectual life; but that the soul, Remembering how she felt, but what she
felt 316

Remembering not, retains an obscure
sense

Of possible sublimity, whereto
With growing faculties she doth aspire,
With faculties still growing, feeling still That whatsoever point they gain, they
yet 321

Have something to pursue.
And not alone,

'Mid gloom and tumult, but no less 'mid
fair

And tranquil scenes, that universal power
And fitness in the latent qualities 325

And essences of things, by which the mind
Is moved with feelings of delight, to me

Came strengthened with a superadded soul,
A virtue not its own. My morning walks

Were early;—oft before the hours of
school 330

I travelled round our little lake, five miles

Of pleasant wandering. Happy time!
more dear

For this, that one was by my side, a Friend¹,

Then passionately loved; with heart how full

Would he peruse these lines! For many
years 335

Have since flowed in between us, and,
our minds

Both silent to each other, at this time
We live as if those hours had never been.

Nor seldom did I lift our cottage latch Far earlier, ere one smoke-wreath had risen 340

From human dwelling, or the vernal
thrush

Was audible; and sate among the woods
Alone upon some jutting eminence,

At the first gleam of dawn-light, when the
Vale,

Yet slumbering, lay in utter solitude. 345

How shall I seek the origin? where find Faith in the marvellous things which then

I felt?

Oft in these moments such a holy calm Would overspread my soul, that bodily

eyes
Were utterly forgotten, and what I saw Appeared like something in myself, a

dream, 351

A prospect in the mind.

'Twere long to tell What spring and autumn, what the winter
snows,

And what the summer shade, what day
and night,

Evening and morning, sleep and waking,
thought 355

From sources inexhaustible, poured forth
To feed the spirit of religious love

In which I walked with Nature. But let
this

Be not forgotten, that I still retained
My first creative sensibility; 360

That by the regular action of the world
My soul was unsubdued. A plastic power

Abode with me; a forming hand, at times
Rebellious, acting in a devious mood;

A local spirit of his own, at war 365

With general tendency, but, for the most,
Subservient strictly to external things

With which it communed. An auxiliar-
light

Came from my mind, which on the setting-
sun

Bestowed new splendour; the melodious
birds, 370

The fluttering breezes, fountains that run
on

Murmuring so sweetly in themselves,
obeyed

A like dominion, and the midnight storm
Grew darker in the presence of my eye:

Hence my obeisance, my devotion hence,
And hence my transport.

Nor should this, perchance,
Pass unrecorded, that I still had loved

The exercise and produce of a toil,
Than analytic industry to me

More pleasing, and whose character I deem 380

Is more poetic as resembling more Creative agency. The song would speak

Of that interminable building reared
By observation of affinities

In objects where no brotherhood exists
To passive minds. My seventeenth year was come; 386

And, whether from this habit rooted now
So deeply in my mind, or from excess

In the great social principle of life
Coercing all things into sympathy, 390

To unorganic natures were transferred
My own enjoyments; or the power of truth

Coming in revelation, did converse With things that really are; I, at this
time,

—Ed. of 1850.

Saw blessings spread around me like a sea.
Thus while the days flew by, and years passed on, 396

From Nature and her overflowing soul
I had received so much, that all my
thoughts

Were steeped in feeling; I was only then Contented, when with bliss ineffable 400
I felt the sentiment of Being spread

O'er all that moves and all that seemeth
still;

O'er all that, lost beyond the reach of
thought

And human knowledge, to the human eye
Invisible, yet liveth to the heart; 405

O'er all that leaps and runs, and shouts and sings,

Or beats the gladsome air; o'er all that glides

Beneath the wave, yea, in the wave itself,
And mighty depth of waters. Wonder not

If high the transport, great the joy I felt Communing in this sort through earth and heaven 411

With every form of creature, as it looked Towards the Uncreated with a countenance

Of adoration, with an eye of love. 414

One song they sang, and it was audible,
Most audible, then, when the fleshly ear,

O'ercome by humblest prelude of that
strain,

Forgot her functions, and slept undisturbed.

If this be error, and another faith

Find easier access to the pious mind, 420

Yet were I grossly destitute of all Those human sentiments that make this
earth

So dear, if I should fail with grateful voice
To speak of you, ye mountains, and ye lakes

And sounding cataracts, ye mists and
winds 425

That dwell among the hills where I was born.

If in my youth I have been pure in heart,
If, mingling with the world, I am content

With my own modest pleasures, and have lived

With God and Nature communing, re-
moved 430

From little enmities and low desires,
The gift is yours; if in these times of fear

This melancholy waste of hopes o'er-
thrown,

If, 'mid indifference and apathy, 434
And wicked exultation when good men

On every side fall off, we know not how,
To selfishness, disguised in gentle names

Of peace and quiet and domestic love,
Yet mingled not unwillingly with sneers

On visionary minds; if, in this time 440
Of dereliction and dismay, I yet

Despair not of our nature, but retain
A more than Roman confidence, a faith

That fails not, in all sorrow my support,
The blessing of my life; the gift is yours,

Ye winds and sounding cataracts! 'tis
yours,

Ye mountains! thine, O Nature! Thou hast fed

My lofty speculations; and in thee,
For this uneasy heart of ours, I find

A never-failing principle of joy 450
And purest passion.

Thou, my Friend! wert reared
In the great city, 'mid far other scenes;

But we, by different roads, at length have gained

The self-same bourne. And for this cause
to thee

I speak, unapprehensive of contempt, 455
The insinuated scoff of coward tongues,

And all that silent language which so oft
In conversation between man and man

Blots from the human countenance all trace Of beauty and of love. For thou hast
sought 460

The truth in solitude, and, since the days
That gave thee liberty, full long desired,

To serve in Nature's temple, thou hast been
The most assiduous of her ministers; 464

In many things my brother, chiefly here
In this our deep devotion.

Fare thee well!

Health and the quiet of a healthful mind
Attend thee! seeking oft the haunts of men,

And yet more often living with thyself,
And for thyself, so haply shall thy days

Be many, and a blessing to mankind. 471

BOOK THIRD.

RESIDENCE AT CAMBRIDGE.

It was a dreary morning when the wheels Rolled over a wide plain o'erhung with
 clouds,
 And nothing cheered our way till first we saw

The long-roofed chapel of King's College lift

Turrets and pinnacles in answering files,
 Extended high above a dusky grove. 6

Advancing, we espied upon the road
 A student clothed in gown and tasselled cap,

Striding along as if o'ertasked by Time,
 Or covetous of exercise and air; 10

He passed—nor was I master of my eyes
 Till he was left an arrow's flight behind.
 As near and nearer to the spot we drew,
 It seemed to suck us in with an eddy's
 force.

Onward we drove beneath the Castle;
 caught, 15

While crossing Magdalene Bridge, a glimpse of Cam;

And at the Hoop alighted, famous Inn.

My spirit was up, my thoughts were full of hope;

Some friends I had, acquaintances who
 there

Seemed friends, poor simple schoolboys, now hung round 20

With honour and importance: in a world
 Of welcome faces up and down I roved;

Questions, directions, warnings and advice,

Flowed in upon me, from all sides; fresh
 day 24

Of pride and pleasure! to myself I seemed
 A man of business and expense, and went

From shop to shop about my own affairs,
 To Tutor or to Tailor, as befell,
 From street to street with loose and careless mind.

I was the Dreamer, they the Dream;
 I roamed 30

Delighted through the motley spectacle;
 Gowns grave, or gaudy, doctors, students,
 streets,

Courts, cloisters, flocks of churches, gateways, towers:

Migration strange for a stripling of the
 hills,

A northern villager.

As if the change 35
 Had waited on some Fairy's wand, at once
 Behold me rich in monies, and attired

In splendid garb, with hose of silk, and hair

Powdered like rimy trees, when frost is keen.

My lordly dressing-gown, I pass it by, 40
 With other signs of manhood that supplied

The lack of beard.—The weeks went roundly on,

With invitations, suppers, wine and fruit,
 Smooth housekeeping within, and all without

Liberal, and suiting gentleman's array. 45

The Evangelist St. John my patron was:
 Three Gothic courts are his, and in the first

Was my abiding-place, a nook obscure;
 Right underneath, the College kitchens
 made

A humming sound, less tuneable than
 bees, 50

But hardly less industrious; with shrill
notes

Of sharp command and scolding intermixed.

Near me hung Trinity's loquacious clock,
Who never let the quarters, night or day, Slip by him unproclaimed, and told the
hours 55

Twice over with a male and female voice.
Her pealing organ was my neighbour too;
And from my pillow, looking forth by
light

Of moon or favouring stars, I could behold

The antechapel where the statue stood 60
Of Newton with his prism and silent face,
The marble index of a mind for ever Voyaging through strange seas of Thought,
alone.

Of College labours, of the Lecturer's
room

All studded round, as thick as chairs
could stand, 65

With loyal students faithful to their
books,

Half-and-half idlers, hardy recusants,
And honest dunces—of important days,
Examinations, when the man was weighed
As in a balance! of excessive hopes, 70

Tremblings withal and commendable
fears,

Small jealousies, and triumphs good or bad—

Let others that know more speak as they
know.

Such glory was but little sought by me,
And little won. Yet from the first crude
days 75

Of settling time in this untried abode,
I was disturbed at times by prudent
thoughts,

Wishing to hope without a hope, some fears

About my future worldly maintenance,
And, more than all, a strangeness in the
mind, 80

A feeling that I was not for that hour, Nor for that place. But wherefore be cast down?

For (not to speak of Reason and her pure

Reflective acts to fix the moral law
Deep in the conscience, nor of Christian
Hope, 85

Bowing her head before her sister Faith
As one far mightier), hither I had come, Bear witness Truth, endowed with holy
powers

And faculties, whether to work or feel.
Oft when the dazzling show no longer new Had ceased to dazzle, oftentimes did I quit
My comrades, leave the crowd, buildings
and groves,

And as I paced alone the level fields
Far from those lovely sights and sounds
sublime

With which I had been conversant, the
mind 95

Drooped not; but there into herself returning,

With prompt rebound seemed fresh as heretofore.

At least I more distinctly recognised
Her native instincts: let me dare to speak
A higher language, say that now I felt

What independent solaces were mine, 101
To mitigate the injurious sway of place
Or circumstance, how far soever changed
In youth, or to be changed in after years.
As if awakened, summoned, roused, constrained, 105

I looked for universal things; perused
The common countenance of earth and
sky:

Earth, nowhere unembellished by some
trace

Of that first Paradise whence man was
driven;

And sky, whose beauty and bounty are expressed 110

By the proud name she bears—the name of Heaven.

I called on both to teach me what they
might;

Or turning the mind in upon herself,
Pored, watched, expected, listened, spread my thoughts

And spread them with a wider creeping;
felt 115

Incumbencies more awful, visitings
Of the Upholder of the tranquil soul,
That tolerates the indignities of Time,

And, from the centre of Eternity
 All finite motions overruling, lives 120
 In glory immutable. But peace! enough
 Here to record that I was mounting now
 To such community with highest truth—
 A track pursuing, not untrod before,
 From strict analogies by thought supplied 125
 Or consciousnesses not to be subdued.
 To every natural form, rock, fruit, or
 flower,
 Even the loose stones that cover the high-
 way,
 I gave a moral life: I saw them feel,
 Or linked them to some feeling: the great mass 130
 Lay bedded in a quickening soul, and all That I beheld respired with inward meaning.
 Add that what'er of Terror or of Love
 Or Beauty, Nature's daily face put on
 From transitory passion, unto this 135
 I was as sensitive as waters are
 To the sky's influence in a kindred mood
 Of passion; was obedient as a lute
 That waits upon the touches of the wind.
 Unknown, unthought of, yet I was most rich— 140
 I had a world about me—'twas my own;
 I made it, for it only lived to me,
 And to the God who sees into the heart.
 Such sympathies, though rarely, were betrayed 144
 By outward gestures and by visible looks:
 Some called it madness—so indeed it was,
 If child-like fruitfulness in passing joy,
 If steady moods of thoughtfulness matured
 To inspiration, sort with such a name;
 If prophecy be madness; if things viewed
 By poets in old time, and higher up 151
 By the first men, earth's first inhabitants, May in these tutored days no more be
 seen
 With undisordered sight. But leaving
 this,
 It was no madness, for the bodily eye 155
 Amid my strongest workings evermore
 Was searching out the lines of difference
 As they lie hid in all external forms,
 Near or remote, minute or vast; an eye
 Which, from a tree, a stone, a withered leaf, 160
 To the broad ocean and the azure heavens Spangled with kindred multitudes of
 stars,
 Could find no surface where its power might sleep;
 Which spake perpetual logic to my soul,
 And by an unrelenting agency 165
 Did bind my feelings even as in a chain.

 And here, O Friend! have I retraced my life
 Up to an eminence, and told a tale Of matters which not falsely may be-
 called
 The glory of my youth. Of genius,
 power, 170
 Creation and divinity itself
 I have been speaking, for my theme has
 been What passed within me. Not of outward
 things
 Done visibly for other minds, words, signs,
 Symbols or actions, but of my own heart Have I been speaking, and my youthful
 mind. 176
 O Heavens! how awful is the might of
 souls,
 And what they do within themselves
 while yet
 The yoke of earth is new to them, the
 world
 Nothing but a wild field where they were
 sown. 180
 This is, in truth, heroic argument,
 This genuine prowess, which I wished to touch
 With hand however weak, but in the main
 It lies far hidden from the reach of words.
 Points have we all of us within our souls Where all stand single; this I feel, and
 make 186
 Breathings for incommunicable powers;
 But is not each a memory to himself?—
 And, therefore, now that we must quit this theme,
 I am not heartless, for there's not a man
 That lives who hath not known his god-like hours, 191

And feels not what an empire we inherit
As natural beings in the strength of Nature.

No more: for now into a populous plain
We must descend. A Traveller I am, 195
Whose tale is only of himself; even so,
So be it, if the pure of heart be prompt
To follow, and if thou, my honoured
Friend!

Who in these thoughts art ever at my
side,
Support, as heretofore, my fainting steps.

It hath been told, that when the first
delight 201

That flashed upon me from this novel
show

Had failed, the mind returned into her-
self;

Yet true it is, that I had made a change
In climate, and my nature's outward coat
Changed also slowly and insensibly. 206

Full oft the quiet and exalted thoughts
Of loneliness gave way to empty noise
And superficial pastimes; now and then Forced labour, and more frequently forced
hopes; 210

And, worst of all, a treasonable growth
Of indecisive judgments, that impaired
And shook the mind's simplicity.—And
yet

This was a gladsome time. Could I be-
hold—

Who, less insensible than sodden clay 215
In a sea-river's bed at ebb of tide,
Could have beheld,—with undelighted
heart,

So many happy youths, so wide and fair
A congregation in its budding-time Of health, and hope, and beauty, all at
once 220

So many divers samples from the growth
Of life's sweet season—could have seen unmoved

That miscellaneous garland of wild flowers
Decking the matron temples of a place So famous through the world? To me, at least, 225

It was a goodly prospect: for, in sooth,
Though I had learnt betimes to stand unpropped,

And independent musings pleased me so That spells seemed on me when I was
alone,

Yet could I only cleave to solitude 230
In lonely places; if a throng was near

That way I leaned by nature; for my
heart

Was social, and loved idleness and joy.

Not seeking those who might participate
My deeper pleasures (nay, I had not once, Though not unused to mutter lonesome
songs, 236

Even with myself divided such delight,
Or looked that way for aught that might be clothed

In human language), easily I passed
From the remembrances of better things,
And slipped into the ordinary works 241
Of careless youth, unburdened, unalarmed.

Caverns there were within my mind which
sun

Could never penetrate, yet did there not Want store of leafy arbours where the
light 245

Might enter in at will. Companionships, Friendships, acquaintances, were welcome
all.

We sauntered, played, or rioted; we talked

Unprofitable talk at morning hours;
Drifted about along the streets and
walks, 250

Read lazily in trivial books, went forth
To gallop through the country in blind
zeal

Of senseless horsemanship, or on the breast
Of Cam sailed boisterously, and let the
stars

Come forth, perhaps without one quiet
thought. 255

Such was the tenour of the second act
In this new life. Imagination slept,
And yet not utterly. I could not print Ground where the grass had yielded to the steps

Of generations of illustrious men, 260 Unmoved. I could not always lightly
pass

Through the same gateways, sleep where they had slept,

Wake where they waked, range that inclosure old,
 That garden of great intellects, undisturbed.
 Place also by the side of this dark sense
 Of noble feeling, that those spiritual men, 266
 Even the great Newton's own ethereal self,
 Seemed humbled in these precincts thence to be
 The more endeared. Their several memories here (Even like their persons in their portraits clothed 270
 With the accustomed garb of daily life)
 Put on a lowly and a touching grace
 Of more distinct humanity, that left
 All genuine admiration unimpaired.

Beside the pleasant Mill of Trompington
 I laughed with Chaucer in the hawthorn shade; 276
 Heard him, while birds were warbling, tell his tales
 Of amorous passion. And that gentle Bard, Chosen by the Muses for their Page of State—
 Sweet Spenser, moving through his clouded heaven 280
 With the moon's beauty and the moon's soft pace,
 I called him Brother, Englishman, and Friend!
 Yea, our blind Poet, who, in his later day,
 Stood almost single; uttering odious truth—
 Darkness before, and danger's voice behind, 285
 Soul awful—if the earth has ever lodged
 An awful soul—I seemed to see him here
 Familiarly, and in his scholar's dress
 Bounding before me, yet a stripling youth—
 A boy, no better, with his rosy cheeks 290
 Angelical, keen eye, courageous look,
 And conscious step of purity and pride.
 Among the band of my compeers was one Whom chance had stationed in the very room

Honoured by Milton's name. O temperate Bard! 295
 Be it confessed that, for the first time, seated Within thy innocent lodge and oratory,
 One of a festive circle, I poured out
 Libations, to thy memory drank, till pride
 And gratitude grew dizzy in a brain 300
 Never excited by the fumes of wine
 Before that hour, or since. Then, forth I ran
 From the assembly; through a length of streets,
 Ran, ostrich-like, to reach our chapel door
 In not a desperate or opprobrious time,
 Albeit long after the importunate bell 306
 Had stopped, with wearisome Cassandra voice
 No longer haunting the dark winter night.
 Call back, O Friend! a moment to thy mind,
 The place itself and fashion of the rites. 310
 With careless ostentation shouldering up
 My surplice, through the inferior throng
 I clove
 Of the plain Burghers, who in audience stood
 On the last skirts of their permitted ground,
 Under the pealing organ. Empty thoughts! 315
 I am ashamed of them: and that great Bard,
 And thou, O Friend! who in thy ample mind
 Hast placed me high above my best deserts,
 Ye will forgive the weakness of that hour,
 In some of its unworthy vanities, 320
 Brother to many more.

In this mixed sort
 The months passed on, remissly, not given up
 To wilful alienation from the right, 323
 Or walks of open scandal, but in vague
 And loose indifference, easy likings, aims
 Of a low pitch—duty and zeal dismissed,
 Yet Nature, or a happy course of things
 Not doing in their stead the needful work.
 The memory languidly revolved, the heart

Reposed in noontide rest, the inner pulse
 Of contemplation almost failed to beat. 331
 Such life might not inaptly be compared To a floating island, an amphibious spot
 Unsound, of spongy texture, yet withal
 Not wanting a fair face of water-weeds
 And pleasant flowers. The thirst of living
 praise, 336
 Fit reverence for the glorious Dead, the
 sight
 Of those long vistas, sacred catacombs,
 Where mighty minds lie visibly entombed,
 Have often stirred the heart of youth, and bred 340
 A fervent love of rigorous discipline.—
 Alas! such high emotion touched not me.
 Look was there none within these walls
 to shame
 My easy spirits, and discountenance 344
 Their light composure, far less to instil
 A calm resolve of mind, firmly addressed To puissant efforts. Nor was this the blame
 Of others but my own; I should, in truth,
 As far as doth concern my single self,
 Misdemean most widely, lodging it else-
 where: 350
 For I, bred up 'mid Nature's luxuries,
 Was a spoiled child, and, rambling like
 the wind,
 As I had done in daily intercourse With those crystalline rivers, solemn
 heights,
 And mountains, ranging like a fowl of
 the air, 355
 I was ill-tutored for captivity;
 To quit my pleasure, and, from month to month,
 Take up a station calmly on the perch
 Of sedentary peace. Those lovely forms
 Had also left less space within my mind, Which, wrought upon instinctively, had
 found 361
 A freshness in those objects of her love,
 A winning power, beyond all other power.
 Not, that I slighted books,—that were to lack
 All sense,—but other passions in me ruled, 365
 Passions more fervent, making me less prompt

To in-door study than was wise or well, Or suited to those years. Yet I, though used
 In magisterial liberty to rove, Culling such flowers of learning as might tempt 370
 A random choice, could shadow forth a
 place
 (If now I yield not to a flattering dream)
 Whose studious aspect should have bent me down
 To instantaneous service; should at once
 Have made me pay to science and to arts
 And written lore, acknowledged my liege
 lord, 376
 A homage frankly offered up, like that Which I had paid to Nature. Toil and
 pains
 In this recess, by thoughtful Fancy built, Should spread from heart to heart; and stately groves, 380
 Majestic edifices, should not want
 A corresponding dignity within.
 The congregating temper that pervades
 Our unripe years, not wasted, should be taught
 To minister to works of high attempt—Works which the enthusiast would perform with love. 386
 Youth should be awed, religiously possessed
 With a conviction of the power that waits
 On knowledge, when sincerely sought and
 prized 389
 For its own sake, on glory and on praise
 If but by labour won, and fit to endure
 The passing day; should learn to put aside
 Her trappings here, should strip them off abashed
 Before antiquity and steadfast truth
 And strong book-mindedness; and over
 all 395
 A healthy sound simplicity should reign,
 A seemly plainness, name it what you
 will,
 Republican or pious.
 If these thoughts
 Are a gratuitous emblazonry
 That mocks the recreant age we live in,
 then 400

Be Folly and False-seeming free to affect Whatever formal gait of discipline Shall raise them highest in their own esteem—
 Let them parade among the Schools at
 will,
 But spare the House of God. Was ever
 known 405
 The witless shepherd who persists to drive
 A flock that thirsts not to a pool disliked?
 A weight must surely hang on days begun
 And ended with such mockery. Be wise, Ye Presidents and Deans, and, till the
 spirit 410
 Of ancient times revive, and youth be trained
 At home in pious service, to your bells
 Give seasonable rest, for 'tis a sound
 Hollow as ever vexed the tranquil air;
 And your officious doings bring disgrace
 On the plain steeples of our English
 Church, 416
 Whose worship, 'mid remotest village
 trees,
 Suffers for this. Even Science, too, at
 hand
 In daily sight of this irreverence,
 Is smitten thence with an unnatural taint,
 Loses her just authority, falls beneath Collateral suspicion, else unknown. 422
 This truth escaped me not, and I confess,
 That having 'mid my native hills given
 loose
 To a schoolboy's vision, I had raised a pile 425
 Upon the basis of the coming time, That fell in ruins round me. Oh, what
 joy
 To see a sanctuary for our country's youth Informed with such a spirit as might be
 Its own protection; a primeval grove, 430
 Where, though the shades with cheerfulness were filled,
 Nor indigent of songs warbled from crowds
 In under-coverts, yet the countenance
 Of the whole place should bear a stamp of awe;
 A habitation sober and demure 435
 For ruminating creatures; a domain
 For quiet things to wander in; a haunt

In which the heron should delight to feed
 By the shy rivers, and the pelican 439
 Upon the cypress spire in lonely thought Might sit and sun himself.—Alas! alas!
 In vain for such solemnity I looked;
 Mine eyes were crossed by butterflies, ears vexed
 By chattering popinjays; the inner heart Seemed trivial, and the impresses without
 Of a too gaudy region.
 Different sight 446
 Those venerable Doctors saw of old,
 When all who dwelt within these famous
 walls
 Led in abstemiousness a studious life;
 When, in forlorn and naked chambers cooped 450
 And crowded, o'er the ponderous books they hung
 Like caterpillars eating out their way
 In silence, or with keen devouring noise
 Not to be tracked or fathered. Princes
 then
 At matins froze, and couched at curfew-
 time, 455
 Trained up through piety and zeal to prize
 Spare diet, patient labour, and plain
 weeds.
 O seat of Arts! renowned throughout the
 world!
 Far different service in those homely days
 The Muses' modest nurslings underwent From their first childhood: in that glorious time 461
 When Learning, like a stranger come
 from far,
 Sounding through Christian lands her trumpet, roused
 Peasant and king; when boys and youths, the growth
 Of ragged villages and crazy huts, 465 Forsook their homes, and, errant in the
 quest
 Of Patron, famous school or friendly nook, Where, pensioned, they in shelter might sit down,
 From town to town and through wide scattered realms Journeyed with ponderous folios in their
 hands; 470

And often, starting from some covert place,
 Saluted the chance comer on the road,
 Crying, "An obolus, a penny give To a poor scholar!"—when illustrious
 men,
 Lovers of truth, by penury constrained,
 Bucer, Erasmus, or Melancthon, read 476
 Before the doors or windows of their cells
 By moonshine through mere lack of taper
 light.

But peace to vain regrets! We see but darkly
 Even when we look behind us, and best
 things 480
 Are not so pure by nature that they needs
 Must keep to all, as fondly all believe,
 Their highest promise. If the mariner, When at reluctant distance he hath
 passed
 Some tempting island, could but know the ills 485
 That must have fallen upon him had he
 brought
 His bark to land upon the wished-for
 shore,
 Good cause would oft be his to thank the surf Whose white belt scared him thence, or wind that blew
 Inexorably adverse: for myself 490
 I grieve not; happy is the gownèd youth,
 Who only misses what I missed, who falls
 No lower than I fell.

I did not love,
 Judging not ill perhaps, the timid
 course
 Of our scholastic studies; could have wished 495
 To see the river flow with ampler range
 And freer pace; but more, far more, I grieved
 To see displayed among an eager few,
 Who in the field of contest persevered, Passions unworthy of youth's generous
 heart 500
 And mounting spirit, pititably repaid,
 When so disturbed, whatever palms are
 won.
 From these I turned to travel with the shoal

Of more unthinking natures, easy minds
 And pillow; yet not wanting love that makes 505
 The day pass lightly on, when foresight
 sleeps,
 And wisdom and the pledges inter-
 changed
 With our own inner being are forgot.

Yet was this deep vacation not given up
 To utter waste. Hitherto I had stood 510
 In my own mind remote from social life,
 (At least from what we commonly so
 name,)
 Like a lone shepherd on a promontory
 Who lacking occupation looks far forth
 Into the boundless sea, and rather makes Than finds what he beholds. And sure it is, 516
 That this first transit from the smooth delights
 And wild outlandish walks of simple
 youth
 To something that resembles an approach Towards human business, to a privileged
 world 520
 Within a world, a midway residence
 With all its intervenient imagery,
 Did better suit my visionary mind,
 Far better, than to have been bolted
 forth, 524
 Thrust out abruptly into Fortune's way
 Among the conflicts of substantial life;
 By a more just gradation did lead on To higher things; more naturally matured,
 For permanent possession, better fruits,
 Whether of truth or virtue, to ensue. 530
 In serious mood, but oftener, I confess,
 With playful zest of fancy, did we note (How could we less?) the manners and the ways
 Of those who lived distinguished by the badge
 Of good or ill report; or those with whom
 By frame of Academic discipline 536
 We were perforce connected, men whose
 sway
 And known authority of office served To set our minds on edge, and did no
 more.

Nor wanted we rich pastime of this
 kind, 540
 Found everywhere, but chiefly in the ring
 Of the grave Elders, men unscoured, grotesque
 In character, tricked out like aged trees Which through the lapse of their infirmity
 Give ready place to any random seed 545
 That chooses to be reared upon their trunks.

Here on my view, confronting vividly
 Those shepherd swains whom I had lately
 left,
 Appeared a different aspect of old age;
 How different! yet both distinctly
 marked, 550
 Objects embossed to catch the general
 eye,
 Or portraits for special use designed,
 As some might seem, so aptly do they serve
 To illustrate Nature's book of rudiments—
 That book upheld as with maternal care
 When she would enter on her tender scheme 556
 Of teaching comprehension with delight,
 And mingling playful with pathetic
 thoughts.

The surfaces of artificial life
 And manners finely wrought, the delicate
 race 560
 Of colours, lurking, gleaming up and
 down
 Through that state arras woven with silk and gold;
 This wily interchange of snaky hues,
 Willingly or unwillingly revealed,
 I neither knew nor cared for; and as such 565
 Were wanting here, I took what might be
 found
 Of less elaborate fabric. At this day
 I smile, in many a mountain solitude
 Conjuring up scenes as obsolete in freaks
 Of character, in points of wit as broad, 570
 As aught by wooden images performed
 For entertainment of the gaping crowd
 At wake or fair. And oftentimes do fit

Remembrances before me of old men—Old humourists, who have been long in their graves, 575
 And having almost in my mind put off Their human names, have into phantoms
 passed
 Of texture midway between life and books.

I play the loiterer: 'tis enough to note That here in dwarf proportions were expressed 580
 The limbs of the great world; its eager strifes
 Collaterally pourtrayed, as in mock fight,
 A tournament of blows, some hardly dealt Though short of mortal combat; and what'er 584
 Might in this pageant be supposed to hit
 An artless rustic's notice, this way less,
 More that way, was not wasted upon
 me—
 And yet the spectacle may well demand
 A more substantial name, no mimic
 show,
 Itself a living part of a live whole, 590
 A creek in the vast sea; for, all degrees
 And shapes of spurious fame and short-lived praise
 Here sate in state, and fed with daily alms
 Retainers won away from solid good;
 And here was Labour, his own bond-slave; Hope, 595
 That never set the pains against the prize;
 Idleness halting with his weary clog,
 And poor misguided Shame, and witless
 Fear,
 And simple Pleasure foraging for Death;
 Honour misplaced, and Dignity astray;
 Feuds, factions, flatteries, enmity, and guile 601
 Murmuring submission, and bald government,
 (The idol weak as the idolater),
 And Decency and Custom starving Truth, And blind Authority beating with his
 staff 605
 The child that might have led him;
 Emptiness

Followed as of good omen, and meek
Worth
Left to herself unheard of and unknown.

Of these and other kindred notices
I cannot say what portion is in truth 610
The naked recollection of that time,
And what may rather have been called to
life

By after-meditation. But delight
That, in an easy temper lulled asleep,
Is still with Innocence its own reward, 615
This was not wanting. Carelessly I roamed

As through a wide museum from whose stores

A casual rarity is singled out
And has its brief perusal, then gives way
To others, all supplanted in their turn ;

Till 'mid this crowded neighbourhood of
things 621

That are by nature most unneighbourly,
The head turns round and cannot right
itself ;

And though an aching and a barren sense
Of gay confusion still be uppermost, 625
With few wise longings and but little love, Yet to the memory something cleaves at
last,

Whence profit may be drawn in times to
come.

Thus in submissive idleness, my Friend !
The labouring time of autumn, winter,
spring, 630

Eight months ! rolled pleasingly away ;
the ninth

Came and returned me to my native hills.

BOOK FOURTH.

SUMMER VACATION.

BRIGHT was the summer's noon when quickenings steps

Followed each other till a dreary moor
Was crossed, a bare ridge clomb, upon whose top

Standing alone, as from a rampart's edge,
I overlooked the bed of Windermere, 5
Like a vast river, stretching in the sun.

With exultation, at my feet I saw Lake, islands, promontories, gleaming
bays,

A universe of Nature's fairest forms Proudly revealed with instantaneous burst, 10

Magnificent, and beautiful, and gay.
I bounded down the hill shouting amain
For the old Ferryman ; to the shout the
rocks

Replied, and when the Charon of the flood

Had staid his oars, and touched the jutting pier, 15

I did not step into the well-known boat

Without a cordial greeting. Thence with speed

Up the familiar hill I took my way Towards that sweet Valley¹ where I had been reared ;

'Twas but a short hour's walk, ere veering
round 20

I saw the snow-white church upon her hill
Sit like a thronèd Lady, sending out
A gracious look all over her domain.

Yon azure smoke betrays the lurking
town ;

With eager footsteps I advance and reach
The cottage threshold where my journey
closed. 26

Glad welcome had I, with some tears,
perhaps,

From my old Dame, so kind and motherly,
While she perused me with a parent's
pride.

The thoughts of gratitude shall fall like dew

¹ Hawkshead.

Upon thy grave, good creature! While my heart 31

Can beat never will I forget thy name.
Heaven's blessing be upon thee where thou liest

After thy innocent and busy stir
In narrow cares, thy little daily growth 35
Of calm enjoyments, after eighty years,
And more than eighty, of untroubled life, Childless, yet by the strangers to thy
blood

Honoured with little less than filial love.
What joy was mine to see thee once
again, 40

Thee and thy dwelling, and a crowd of
things

About its narrow precincts all beloved,
And many of them seeming yet my own!
Why should I speak of what a thousand
hearts

Have felt, and every man alive can guess? 45

The rooms, the court, the garden were not left

Long unsaluted, nor the sunny seat
Round the stone table under the dark
pine,

Friendly to studious or to festive hours;
Nor that unruly child of mountain birth,
The famous brook, who, soon as he was boxed 51

Within our garden, found himself at once,
As if by trick insidious and unkind, Stripped of his voice and left to dimple
down

(Without an effort and without a will) 55
A channel paved by man's officious care.
I looked at him and smiled, and smiled
again,

And in the press of twenty thousand
thoughts,

"Ha," quoth I, "pretty prisoner, are you
there!"

Well might sarcastic Fancy then have whispered, 60

"An emblem here behold of thy own life;
In its late course of even days with all Their smooth enthrallment;" but the heart was full,

Too full for that reproach. My aged
Dame

Walked proudly at my side: she guided
me; 65

I willing, nay—nay, wishing to be led.
—The face of every neighbour whom
I met

Was like a volume to me; some were hailed

Upon the road, some busy at their work,
Unceremonious greetings interchanged
With half the length of a long field
between. 71

Among my schoolfellows I scattered
round

Like recognitions, but with some constraint

Attended, doubtless, with a little pride,
But with more shame, for my habili-
ments, 75

The transformation wrought by gay
attire.

Not less delighted did I take my place
At our domestic table: and, dear Friend!
In this endeavour simply to relate

A Poet's history, may I leave untold 80
The thankfulness with which I laid me
down

In my accustomed bed, more welcome
now

Perhaps than if it had been more desired
Or been more often thought of with regret;

That lowly bed whence I had heard the
wind 85

Roar, and the rain beat hard; where I so oft

Had lain awake on summer nights to watch

The moon in splendour couched among the leaves

Of a tall ash, that near our cottage stood;
Had watched her with fixed eyes while to
and fro 90

In the dark summit of the waving tree
She rocked with every impulse of the breeze.

Among the favourites whom it pleased me well

To see again, was one by ancient right
Our inmate, a rough terrier of the hills; 95
By birth and call of nature pre-ordained

To hunt the badger and unearth the fox
 Among the impervious crags, but having
 been
 From youth our own adopted, he had
 passed 99
 Into a gentler service. And when first
 The boyish spirit flagged, and day by day
 Along my veins I kindled with the stir,
 The fermentation, and the vernal heat
 Of poesy, affecting private shades Like a sick Lover, then this dog was used 105
 To watch me, an attendant and a friend,
 Obsequious to my steps early and late,
 Though often of such dilatory walk
 Tired, and uneasy at the halts I made.
 A hundred times when, roving high and
 low, 110
 I have been harassed with the toil of
 verse,
 Much pains and little progress, and at
 once
 Some lovely Image in the song rose up Full-formed, like Venus rising from the
 sea; 114
 Then have I darted forwards to let loose
 My hand upon his back with stormy joy,
 Caressing him again and yet again.
 And when at evening on the public way
 I sauntered, like a river murmuring
 And talking to itself when all things else 120
 Are still, the creature trotted on before;
 Such was his custom; but when'er he
 met
 A passenger approaching, he would turn
 To give me timely notice, and straight-
 way,
 Grateful for that admonishment, I hushed My voice, composed my gait, and, with
 the air 126
 And mien of one whose thoughts are free, advanced
 To give and take a greeting that might save
 My name from piteous rumours, such as wait
 On men suspected to be crazed in brain.
 Those walks well worthy to be prized and loved— 131

Regretted!—that word, too, was on my
 tongue,
 But they were richly laden with all good,
 And cannot be remembered but with thanks
 And gratitude, and perfect joy of heart—
 Those walks in all their freshness now came back 136
 Like a returning Spring. When first I
 made
 Once more the circuit of our little lake,
 If ever happiness hath lodged with man,
 That day consummate happiness was
 mine, 140
 Wide-spreading, steady, calm, contemplative.
 The sun was set, or setting, when I left Our cottage door, and evening soon brought on
 A sober hour, not winning or serene,
 For cold and raw the air was, and un-tuned; 145
 But as a face we love is sweetest then
 When sorrow damps it, or, whatever look
 It chance to wear, is sweetest if the heart
 Have fulness in herself; even so with me It fared that evening. Gently did my
 soul 150
 Put off her veil, and, self-transmuted,
 stood
 Naked, as in the presence of her God.
 While on I walked, a comfort seemed to touch
 A heart that had not been disconsolate:
 Strength came where weakness was not known to be, 155
 At least not felt; and restoration came
 Like an intruder knocking at the door
 Of unacknowledged weariness. I took The balance, and with firm hand weighed myself.
 —Of that external scene which round me
 lay, 160
 Little, in this abstraction, did I see;
 Remembered less; but I had inward
 hopes
 And swellings of the spirit, was rapt and soothed,
 Conversed with promises, had glimmering views 164
 How life pervades the undecaying mind;

How the immortal soul with God-like
power

Informs, creates, and thaws the deepest
sleep

That time can lay upon her; how on
earth

Man, if he do but live within the light
Of high endeavours, daily spreads abroad
His being armed with strength that cannot fail. 171

Nor was there want of milder thoughts,
of love,

Of innocence, and holiday repose;
And more than pastoral quiet, 'mid the
stir 174

Of boldest projects, and a peaceful end
At last, or glorious, by endurance won.
Thus musing, in a wood I sate me down Alone, continuing there to muse: the slopes

And heights meanwhile were slowly over-
spread

With darkness, and before a rippling
breeze 180

The long lake lengthened out its hoary
line,

And in the sheltered coppice where I
sate,

Around me from among the hazel leaves,
Now here, now there, moved by the straggling wind, 184

Came ever and anon a breath-like sound,
Quick as the pantings of the faithful dog,
The off and on companion of my walk;
And such, at times, believing them to be,
I turned my head to look if he were
there;

Then into solemn thought I passed once
more. 190

A freshness also found I at this time
In human Life, the daily life of those Whose occupations really I loved;
The peaceful scene oft filled me with surprise

Changed like a garden in the heat of
spring, 195

After an eight-days' absence. For (to omit

The things which were the same and yet
appeared

Far otherwise) amid this rural solitude, A narrow Vale where each was known to
all,

'Twas not indifferent to a youthful mind
To mark some sheltering bower or sunny
nook, 201

Where an old man had used to sit alone,
Now vacant; pale-faced babes whom I had left

In arms, now rosy prattlers at the feet
Of a pleased grandame tottering up and
down; 205

And growing girls whose beauty, filched
away

With all its pleasant promises, was gone
To deck some slighted playmate's homely
cheek.

Yes, I had something of a subtler sense,
And often looking round was moved to smiles 210

Such as a delicate work of humour breeds;
I read, without design, the opinions,
thoughts,

Of those plain-living people now observed
With clearer knowledge; with another
eye

I saw the quiet woodman in the woods,
The shepherd roam the hills. With new
delight, 216

This chiefly, did I note my grey-haired
Dame;

Saw her go forth to church or other work
Of state, equipped in monumental trim; Short velvet cloak, (her bonnet of the like), 220

A mantle such as Spanish Cavaliers Wore in old time. Her smooth domestic
life,

Affectionate without disquietude,
Her talk, her business, pleased me; and no less

Her clear though shallow stream of piety
That ran on Sabbath days a fresher
course; 226

With thoughts unfelt till now I saw her
read

Her Bible on hot Sunday afternoons, And loved the book, when she had dropped asleep

And made of it a pillow for her head. 230

Nor less do I remember to have felt,
Distinctly manifested at this time,
A human-heartedness about my love
For objects hitherto the absolute wealth
Of my own private being and no more ;
Which I had loved, even as a blessed
spirit 236

Or Angel, if he were to dwell on earth,
Might love in individual happiness.
But now there opened on me other
thoughts

Of change, congratulation or regret, 240
A pensive feeling ! It spread far and
wide ;

The trees, the mountains shared it, and the brooks,

The stars of Heaven, now seen in their old haunts—

White Sirius glittering o'er the southern
crag,

Orion with his belt, and those fair Seven,
Acquaintances of every little child, 246
And Jupiter, my own beloved star !

Whatever shadings of mortality, Whatever imports from the world of
death

Had come among these objects heretofore, 250

Were, in the main, of mood less tender:
strong,

Deep, gloomy were they, and severe ;
the scatterings

Of awe or tremulous dread, that had given way

In later youth to yearnings of a love
Enthusiastic, to delight and hope. 255

As one who hangs down-bending from the side

Of a slow-moving boat, upon the breast
Of a still water, solacing himself

With such discoveries as his eye can
make

Beneath him in the bottom of the deep,
Sees many beauteous sights—weeds, fishes,
flowers, 261

Grots, pebbles, roots of trees, and fancies
more,

Yet often is perplexed and cannot part
The shadow from the substance, rocks
and sky,

Mountains and clouds, reflected in the depth 265

Of the clear flood, from things which there abide

In their true dwelling ; now is crossed by
gleam

Of his own image, by a sunbeam now,
And wavering motions sent he knows not whence,

Impediments that make his task more
sweet ; 270

Such pleasant office have we long pursued Incumbent o'er the surface of past time
With like success, nor often have appeared

Shapes fairer or less doubtfully discerned
Than these to which the Tale, indulgent
Friend ! 275

Would now direct thy notice. Yet in spite

Of pleasure won, and knowledge not withheld,

There was an inner falling off—I loved,
Loved deeply all that had been loved
before,

More deeply even than ever : but a swarm 280

Of heady schemes jostling each other,
gawds,

And feast and dance, and public revelry,
And sports and games (too grateful in themselves,

Yet in themselves less grateful, I believe,
Than as they were a badge glossy and fresh 285

Of manliness and freedom) all conspired
To lure my mind from firm habitual
quest

Of feeding pleasures, to depress the zeal
And damp those yearnings which had once been mine—

A wild, unworldly-minded youth, given
up 290

To his own eager thoughts. It would demand

Some skill, and longer time than may be spared,

To paint these vanities, and how they
wrought

In haunts where they, till now, had been unknown.

It seemed the very garments that I wore Preyed on my strength, and stopped the quiet stream 296
 Of self-forgetfulness.

Yes, that heartless chase
 Of trivial pleasures was a poor exchange
 For books and nature at that early age.
 'Tis true, some casual knowledge might be gained 300
 Of character or life; but at that time,
 Of manners put to school I took small
 note,
 And all my deeper passions lay elsewhere.

Far better had it been to exalt the mind
 By solitary study, to uphold 305
 Intense desire through meditative peace;
 And yet, for chastisement of these regrets,

The memory of one particular hour Doth here rise up against me. 'Mid a
 throng

Of maids and youths, old men, and matrons staid, 310

A medley of all tempers, I had passed
 The night in dancing, gaiety, and mirth,
 With din of instruments and shuffling
 feet,

And glancing forms, and tapers glittering,
 And unaimed prattle flying up and down; Spirits upon the stretch, and here and
 there 316

Slight shocks of young love-liking interspersed,

Whose transient pleasure mounted to the
 head,

And tingled through the veins. Ere we retired,

The cock had crowed, and now the eastern sky 320

Was kindling, not unseen, from humble copse

And open field, through which the pathway wound,

And homeward led my steps. Magnificent

The morning rose, in memorable pomp,
 Glorious as e'er I had beheld—in front,
 The sea lay laughing at a distance; near,
 The solid mountains shone, bright as the
 clouds, 327

Grain-tinctured, drenched in empyrean
 light;

And in the meadows and the lower grounds

Was all the sweetness of a common
 dawn— 330

Dews, vapours, and the melody of birds,
 And labourers going forth to till the
 fields.

Ah! need I say, dear Friend! that to the brim

My heart was full; I made no vows, but vows

Were then made for me; bond unknown
 to me 335

Was given, that I should be, else sinning greatly,

A dedicated Spirit. On I walked
 In thankful blessedness, which yet survives.

Strange rendezvous! My mind was at that time

A parti-coloured show of grave and gay,
 Solid and light, short-sighted and pro-
 found; 341

Of inconsiderate habits and sedate,
 Consorting in one mansion unproved.

The worth I knew of powers that I possessed,

Though slighted and too oft misused.
 Besides, 345

That summer, swarming as it did with
 thoughts

Transient and idle, lacked not intervals
 When Folly from the frown of fleeting Time Shrunk, and the mind experienced in herself

Conformity as just as that of old 350

To the end and written spirit of God's
 works,

Whether held forth in Nature or in Man, Through pregnant vision, separate or conjoined.

When from our better selves we have too long

Been parted by the hurrying world, and droop, 355

Sick of its business, of its pleasures tired,
 How gracious, how benign, is Solitude;

How potent a mere image of her sway ;
 Most potent when impressed upon the
 mind
 With an appropriate human centre—hermit, 360
 Deep in the bosom of the wilderness ;
 Votary (in vast cathedral, where no foot
 Is treading, where no other face is seen) Kneeling at prayers ; or watchman on the top 364
 Of lighthouse, beaten by Atlantic waves ;
 Or as the soul of that great Power is met
 Sometimes embodied on a public road,
 When, for the night deserted, it assumes
 A character of quiet more profound Than pathless wastes.
 Once, when those summer
 months 370
 Were flown, and autumn brought its annual show
 Of oars with oars contending, sails with sails,
 Upon Winander's spacious breast, it chanced
 That—after I had left a flower-decked
 room
 (Whose in-door pastime, lighted up, survived 375
 To a late hour), and spirits overwrought
 Were making night do penance for a day
 Spent in a round of strenuous idleness—
 My homeward course led up a long ascent,
 Where the road's watery surface, to the top 380
 Of that sharp rising, glittered to the moon
 And bore the semblance of another stream Stealing with silent lapse to join the
 brook
 That murmured in the vale. All else was still ;
 No living thing appeared in earth or air,
 And, save the flowing water's peaceful
 voice, 386
 Sound there was none—but, lo ! an uncouth shape,
 Shown by a sudden turning of the road,
 So near that, slipping back into the shade
 Of a thick hawthorn, I could mark him
 well, 390
 Myself unseen. He was of stature tall,

A span above man's common measure,
 tall,
 Stiff, lank, and upright ; a more meagre
 man
 Was never seen before by night or day.
 Long were his arms, pallid his hands ;
 his mouth 395
 Looked ghastly in the moonlight : from
 behind,
 A mile-stone propped him ; I could also ken
 That he was clothed in military garb, Though faded, yet entire. Companion-
 less, 399
 No dog attending, by no staff sustained,
 He stood, and in his very dress appeared
 A desolation, a simplicity,
 To which the trappings of a gaudy world Make a strange back-ground. From his lips, ere long,
 Issued low muttered sounds, as if of pain Or some uneasy thought ; yet still his
 form 406
 Kept the same awful steadiness—at his
 feet
 His shadow lay, and moved not. From self-blame
 Not wholly free, I watched him thus ; at length 409
 Subduing my heart's specious cowardice,
 I left the shady nook where I had stood And hailed him. Slowly from his resting-
 place
 He rose, and with a lean and wasted arm
 In measured gesture lifted to his head
 Returned my salutation ; then resumed
 His station as before ; and when I asked
 His history, the veteran, in reply, 417
 Was neither slow nor eager ; but, un-
 moved,
 And with a quiet uncomplaining voice,
 A stately air of mild indifference, 420
 He told in few plain words a soldier's
 tale—
 That in the Tropic Islands he had served, Whence he had landed scarcely three weeks past ;
 That on his landing he had been dismissed,
 And now was travelling towards his native home. 425

This heard, I said, in pity, "Come with me."

He stooped, and straightway from the ground took up

An oaken staff by me yet unobserved—
A staff which must have dropt from his slack hand

And lay till now neglected in the grass.
Though weak his step and cautious, he appeared 431

To travel without pain, and I beheld,
With an astonishment but ill suppressed,
His ghostly figure moving at my side ;
Nor could I, while we journeyed thus,
forbear 435

To turn from present hardships to the past,
And speak of war, battle, and pestilence,
Sprinkling this talk with questions, better spared,

On what he might himself have seen or felt. 439

He all the while was in demeanour calm,
Concise in answer ; solemn and sublime
He might have seemed, but that in all he said

There was a strange half-absence, as of one

Knowing too well the importance of his theme, 444

But feeling it no longer. Our discourse
Soon ended, and together on we passed
In silence through a wood gloomy and still.

Up-turning, then, along an open field,
We reached a cottage. At the door I knocked,

And earnestly to charitable care 450
Commended him as a poor friendless man,

Belated and by sickness overcome.
Assured that now the traveller would repose

In comfort, I entreated that henceforth
He would not linger in the public ways,
But ask for timely furtherance and help
Such as his state required. At this reproof, 457

With the same ghastly mildness in his look,

He said, "My trust is in the God of Heaven,

And in the eye of him who passes me !"

The cottage door was speedily unbarred, 461

And now the soldier touched his hat once more

With his lean hand, and in a faltering voice,

Whose tone bespoke reviving interests
Till then unfelt, he thanked me ; I returned 465

The farewell blessing of the patient man,
And so we parted. Back I cast a look,
And lingered near the door a little space,
Then sought with quiet heart my distant home.

BOOK FIFTH.

BOOKS.

WHEN Contemplation, like the night-calm felt

Through earth and sky, spreads widely, and sends deep

Into the soul its tranquillising power,
Even then I sometimes grieve for thee,

O Man,
Earth's paramount Creature ! not so much for woes 5

That thou endurest ; heavy though that weight be,

Cloud-like it mounts, or touched with light divine

Doth melt away ; but for those palms achieved,

Through length of time, by patient exercise
Of study and hard thought ; there, there, 10
it is

That sadness finds its fuel. Hitherto,
 In progress through this Verse, my mind hath looked Upon the speaking face of earth and
 heaven
 As her prime teacher, intercourse with
 man
 Established by the sovereign Intellect, 15
 Who through that bodily image hath diffused,
 As might appear to the eye of fleeting
 time,
 A deathless spirit. Thou also, man! hast
 wrought,
 For commerce of thy nature with herself,
 Things that aspire to unconquerable life;
 And yet we feel—we cannot choose but
 feel— 21
 That they must perish. Tremblings of the heart
 It gives, to think that our immortal
 being
 No more shall need such garments; and yet man,
 As long as he shall be the child of earth, Might almost “weep to have” what he may lose, 26
 Nor be himself extinguished, but survive,
 Abject, depressed, forlorn, disconsolate.
 A thought is with me sometimes, and I
 say,—
 Should the whole frame of earth by inward throes 30
 Be wrenched, or fire come down from far to scorch
 Her pleasant habitations, and dry up
 Old Ocean, in his bed left singed and bare, Yet would the living Presence still subsist
 Victorious, and composure would ensue,
 And kindlings like the morning—presage
 sure 36
 Of day returning and of life revived.
 But all the meditations of mankind,
 Yea, all the adamantine holds of truth
 By reason built, or passion, which itself 40
 Is highest reason in a soul sublime;
 The consecrated works of Bard and Sage,
 Sensuous or intellectual, wrought by men,
 Twin labourers and heirs of the same
 hopes;

Where would they be? Oh! why hath not the Mind 45
 Some element to stamp her image on
 In nature somewhat nearer to her own?
 Why, gifted with such powers to send
 abroad
 Her spirit, must it lodge in shrines so frail?

One day, when from my lips a like complaint 50
 Had fallen in presence of a studious
 friend,

He with a smile made answer, that in truth
 'Twas going far to seek disquietude;
 But on the front of his reproof confessed
 That he himself had oftentimes given
 way 55
 To kindred hauntings. Whereupon I
 told,

That once in the stillness of a summer's
 noon,

While I was seated in a rocky cave
 By the sea-side, perusing, so it chanced,
 The famous history of the errant knight Recorded by Cervantes, these same
 thoughts 61

Beset me, and to height unusual rose,
 While listlessly I sate, and, having closed
 The book, had turned my eyes toward the wide sea.

On poetry and geometric truth, 65
 And their high privilege of lasting life,
 From all internal injury exempt,
 I mused; upon these chiefly: and at
 length,

My senses yielding to the sultry air,
 Sleep seized me, and I passed into a
 dream. 70

I saw before me stretched a boundless
 plain

Of sandy wilderness, all black and void,
 And as I looked around, distress and fear
 Came creeping over me, when at my side,
 Close at my side, an uncouth shape
 appeared 75

Upon a dromedary, mounted high,
 He seemed an Arab of the Bedouin tribes:

A lance he bore, and underneath one arm
 A stone, and in the opposite hand a shell

Of a surpassing brightness. At the sight Much I rejoiced, not doubting but a
 guide 81
 Was present, one who with unerring skill Would through the desert lead me; and while yet
 I looked and looked, self-questioned what this freight
 Which the new-comer carried through the waste 85
 Could mean, the Arab told me that the
 stone
 (To give it in the language of the dream)
 Was "Euclid's Elements;" and "This,"
 said he,
 "Is something of more worth;" and at
 the word
 Stretched forth the shell, so beautiful in
 shape, 90
 In colour so resplendent, with command
 That I should hold it to my ear. I did so,
 And heard that instant in an unknown
 tongue,
 Which yet I understood, articulate sounds,
 A loud prophetic blast of harmony; 95
 An Ode, in passion uttered, which foretold
 Destruction to the children of the earth
 By deluge, now at hand. No sooner
 ceased
 The song, than the Arab with calm look declared
 That all would come to pass of which the
 voice 100
 Had given forewarning, and that he himself
 Was going then to bury those two books:
 The one that held acquaintance with the
 stars,
 And wedded soul to soul in purest bond
 Of reason, undisturbed by space or time;
 The other that was a god, yea many gods, 106
 Had voices more than all the winds, with
 power
 To exhilarate the spirit, and to soothe,
 Through every clime, the heart of human
 kind.
 While this was uttering, strange as it may seem, 110
 I wondered not, although I plainly saw

The one to be a stone, the other a shell;
 Nor doubted once but that they both were books,
 Having a perfect faith in all that passed.
 Far stronger, now, grew the desire I felt To cleave unto this man; but when I
 prayed 116
 To share his enterprise, he hurried on Reckless of me: I followed, not unseen,
 For oftentimes he cast a backward look, Grasping his twofold treasure.—Lance in
 rest, 120
 He rode, I keeping pace with him; and
 now
 He, to my fancy, had become the knight Whose tale Cervantes tells; yet not the knight,
 But was an Arab of the desert too;
 Of these was neither, and was both at
 once. 125
 His countenance, meanwhile, grew more disturbed;
 And, looking backwards when he looked,
 mine eyes
 Saw, over half the wilderness diffused,
 A bed of glittering light: I asked the
 cause:
 "It is," said he, "the waters of the deep Gathering upon us;" quickening then the pace 131
 Of the unwieldy creature he bestrode,
 He left me: I called after him aloud;
 He heeded not; but, with his twofold
 charge 134
 Still in his grasp, before me, full in view,
 Went hurrying o'er the illimitable waste,
 With the fleet waters of a drowning
 world
 In chase of him; whereat I waked in terror,
 And saw the sea before me, and the book,
 In which I had been reading, at my side.
 Full often, taking from the world of
 sleep 141
 This Arab phantom, which I thus beheld,
 This semi-Quixote, I to him have given
 A substance, fancied him a living man,
 A gentle dweller in the desert, crazed 145
 By love and feeling, and internal thought Protracted among endless solitudes;

Have shaped him wandering upon this
quest !

Nor have I pitied him ; but rather felt Reverence was due to a being thus employed ; 150

And thought that, in the blind and awful lair

Of such a madness, reason did lie couched.
Enow there are on earth to take in charge
Their wives, their children, and their virgin loves,

Or whatsoever else the heart holds dear ;
Enow to stir for these ; yea, will I say, 156
Contemplating in soberness the approach
Of an event so dire, by signs in earth
Or heaven made manifest, that I could share

That maniac's fond anxiety, and go 160
Upon like errand. Oftentimes at least Me hath such strong entrancement over-
come,

When I have held a volume in my hand,
Poor earthly casket of immortal verse,
Shakespeare, or Milton, labourers divine !

Great and benign, indeed, must be the
power 166
Of living nature, which could thus so
long

Detain me from the best of other guides
And dearest helpers, left unthanked, un-praised.

Even in the time of lisping infancy, 170
And later down, in prattling childhood
even,

While I was travelling back among those
days,

How could I ever play an ingrate's part ?
Once more should I have made those bowers resound,

By intermingling strains of thankfulness
With their own thoughtless melodies ; at
least 176

It might have well beseeemed me to repeat
Some simply fashioned tale, to tell again,
In slender accents of sweet verse, some tale
That did bewitch me then, and soothes
me now. 180

O Friend ! O Poet ! brother of my soul, Think not that I could pass along un-
touched

By these remembrances. Yet wherefore
speak ?

Why call upon a few weak words to say
What is already written in the hearts 185
Of all that breathe ?—what in the path of
all

Drops daily from the tongue of every
child,

Wherever man is found ? The trickling
tear

Upon the cheek of listening Infancy
Proclaims it, and the insuperable look 190
That drinks as if it never could be full.

That portion of my story I shall leave
There registered : whatever else of power
Or pleasure sown, or fostered thus, may be Peculiar to myself, let that remain 195 Where still it works, though hidden from all search

Among the depths of time. Yet is it just That here, in memory of all books which
lay

Their sure foundations in the heart of
man,

Whether by native prose, or numerous
verse, 200

That in the name of all inspirèd souls—
From Homer the great Thunderer, from the voice

That roars along the bed of Jewish song,
And that more varied and elaborate,
Those trumpet-tones of harmony that shake 205

Our shores in England,—from those loftiest notes

Down to the low and wren-like warblings,
made

For cottagers and spinners at the wheel,
And sun-burnt travellers resting their tired limbs,

Stretched under wayside hedge-rows, ballad tunes, 210

Food for the hungry ears of little ones,
And of old men who have survived their
joys—

'Tis just that in behalf of these, the works,
And of the men that framed them,
whether known,

Or sleeping nameless in their scattered graves, 215

That I should here assert their rights,
 attest
 Their honours, and should, once for all, pronounce
 Their benediction; speak of them as
 Powers
 For ever to be hallowed; only less,
 For what we are and what we may become, 220
 Than Nature's self, which is the breath of
 God,
 Or His pure Word by miracle revealed.

Rarely and with reluctance would I stoop
 To transitory themes; yet I rejoice,
 And, by these thoughts admonished, will pour out 225
 Thanks with uplifted heart, that I was reared
 Safe from an evil which these days have
 laid
 Upon the children of the land, a pest That might have dried me up, body and
 soul.
 This verse is dedicate to Nature's self, 230
 And things that teach as Nature teaches:
 then,
 Oh! where had been the Man, the Poet
 where,
 Where had we been, we two, beloved
 Friend!
 If in the season of unperilous choice,
 In lieu of wandering, as we did, through
 vales 235
 Rich with indigenious produce, open
 ground
 Of Fancy, happy pastures ranged at
 will,
 We had been followed, hourly watched,
 and noosed,
 Each in his several melancholy walk Stringed like a poor man's heifer at its feed, 240
 Led through the lanes in forlorn servi-
 tude;
 Or rather like a stallèd ox debarred From touch of growing grass, that may not taste
 A flower till it have yielded up its sweets
 A prelibation to the mower's scythe. 245

Behold the parent hen amid her brood, Though fledged and feathered, and well pleased to part
 And straggle from her presence, still a
 brood,
 And she herself from the maternal bond Still undischarged; yet doth she little
 move 250
 Than move with them in tenderness and
 love,
 A centre to the circle which they make;
 And now and then, alike from need of
 theirs
 And call of her own natural appetites,
 She scratches, ransacks up the earth for
 food, 255
 Which they partake at pleasure. Early
 died
 My honoured Mother, she who was the
 heart
 And hinge of all our learnings and our
 loves:
 She left us destitute, and, as we might,
 Trooping together. Little suits it me 260
 To break upon the sabbath of her rest
 With any thought that looks at others'
 blame;
 Nor would I praise her but in perfect love.
 Hence am I checked: but let me boldly
 say,
 In gratitude, and for the sake of truth,
 Unheard by her, that she, not falsely
 taught, 266
 Fetching her goodness rather from times
 past,
 Than shaping novelties for times to come,
 Had no presumption, no such jealousy, Nor did by habit of her thoughts mis-
 trust 270
 Our nature, but had virtual faith that He Who fills the mother's breast with innocent milk,
 Doth also for our nobler part provide,
 Under His great correction and control,
 As innocent instincts, and as innocent
 food; 275
 Or draws for minds that are left free to trust
 In the simplicities of opening life
 Sweet honey out of spurned or dreaded
 weeds.

This was her creed, and therefore she was pure
 From anxious fear of error or mishap, 280
 And evil, overweeningly so called ;
 Was not puffed up by false unnatural
 hopes,
 Nor selfish with unnecessary cares,
 Nor with impatience from the season asked
 More than its timely produce ; rather
 loved 285
 The hours for what they are, than from regard Glanced on their promises in restless
 pride.
 Such was she—not from faculties more
 strong
 Than others have, but from the times,
 perhaps,
 And spot in which she lived, and through a grace 290
 Of modest meekness, simple-mindedness,
 A heart that found benignity and hope,
 Being itself benign.

My drift I fear

Is scarcely obvious ; but, that common
 sense
 May try this modern system by its fruits, Leave let me take to place before her
 sight 296
 A specimen pourtrayed with faithful
 hand.
 Full early trained to worship seemliness,
 This model of a child is never known To mix in quarrels ; that were far beneath 300
 Its dignity ; with gifts he bubbles o'er
 As generous as a fountain ; selfishness
 May not come near him, nor the little
 throng
 Of fitting pleasures tempt him from his
 path ;
 The wandering beggars propagate his
 name, 305
 Dumb creatures find him tender as a nun,
 And natural or supernatural fear,
 Unless it leap upon him in a dream,
 Touches him not. To enhance the wonder,
 see
 How arch his notices, how nice his sense
 Of the ridiculous ; not blind is he 311

To the broad follies of the licensed world, Yet innocent himself withal, though shrewd,
 And can read lectures upon innocence ;
 A miracle of scientific lore, 315
 Ships he can guide across the pathless
 sea,
 And tell you all their cunning ; he can read
 The inside of the earth, and spell the
 stars ;
 He knows the policies of foreign lands ;
 Can string you names of districts, cities,
 towns, 320
 The whole world over, tight as beads of
 dew
 Upon a gossamer thread ; he sifts, he weighs ;
 All things are put to question ; he must
 live
 Knowing that he grows wiser every day
 Or else not live at all, and seeing too 325
 Each little drop of wisdom as it falls
 Into the dimpling cistern of his heart :
 For this unnatural growth the trainer
 blame,
 Pity the tree.—Poor human vanity, Wert thou extinguished, little would be left 330
 Which he could truly love ; but how escape ?
 For, ever as a thought of purer birth
 Rises to lead him toward a better clime,
 Some intermeddler still is on the watch
 To drive him back, and pound him, like
 a stray, 335
 Within the pinfold of his own conceit.
 Meanwhile old grandame earth is grieved to find
 The playthings, which her love designed for him,
 Unthought of : in their woodland beds
 the flowers 339
 Weep, and the river sides are all forlorn.
 Oh ! give us once again the wishing-cap
 Of Fortunatus, and the invisible coat
 Of Jack the Giant-killer, Robin Hood,
 And Sabra in the forest with St. George !
 The child, whose love is here, at least,
 doth reap 345
 One precious gain, that he forgets himself.

These mighty workmen of our later age,
Who, with a broad highway, have overbridged

The froward chaos of futurity, Tamed to their bidding; they who have the skill 350

To manage books, and things, and make them act

On infant minds as surely as the sun Deals with a flower; the keepers of our
time,

The guides and wardens of our faculties,
Sages who in their prescience would control
All accidents, and to the very road 356

Which they have fashioned would confine us down,

Like engines; when will their presumption learn,

That in the unreasoning progress of the
world

A wiser spirit is at work for us, 360
A better eye than theirs, most prodigal

Of blessings, and most studious of our
good,

Even in what seem our most unfruitful
hours?

There was a Boy¹: ye knew him well, ye cliffs 364

And islands of Winander!—many a time
At evening, when the earliest stars began

To move along the edges of the hills,
Rising or setting, would he stand alone

Beneath the trees or by the glimmering
lake,

And there, with fingers interwoven, both
hands 370

Pressed closely palm to palm, and to his mouth

Uplifted, he, as through an instrument,
Blew mimic hootings to the silent owls,

That they might answer him; and they would shout

Across the watery vale, and shout again, Responsive to his call, with quivering
peals, 376

And long halloos and screams, and echoes
loud,

Redoubled and redoubled, concourse wild

Of jocund din; and, when a lengthened
pause

Of silence came and baffled his best skill, Then sometimes, in that silence while he
hung 381

Listening, a gentle shock of mild surprise
Has carried far into his heart the voice

Of mountain torrents; or the visible scene
Would enter unawares into his mind, 385

With all its solemn imagery, its rocks,
Its woods, and that uncertain heaven,
received

Into the bosom of the steady lake.

This Boy was taken from his mates, and died

In childhood, ere he was full twelve years
old. 390

Fair is the spot, most beautiful the vale
Where he was born; the grassy churchyard hangs

Upon a slope above the village school,
And through that churchyard when my
way has led 394

On summer evenings, I believe that there
A long half hour together I have stood

Mute, looking at the grave in which he
lies!

Even now appears before the mind's clear
eye

That self-same village church; I see her sit

(The throndè Lady whom erewhile we hailed) 400

On her green hill, forgetful of this Boy
Who slumbers at her feet,—forgetful, too,

Of all her silent neighbourhood of graves,
And listening only to the gladsome sounds

That, from the rural school ascending,
play 405

Beneath her and about her. May she long Behold a race of young ones like to those

With whom I herded!—(easily, indeed,
We might have fed upon a fatter soil

Of arts and letters—but be that for-
given)— 410

A race of real children; not too wise,
Too learned, or too good; but wanton,
fresh,

And bandied up and down by love and hate;

Not unresentful where self-justified ;
 Fierce, moody, patient, venturous, modest, shy ; 415
 Mad at their sports like withered leaves in winds ;
 Though doing wrong and suffering, and full oft Bending beneath our life's mysterious
 weight
 Of pain, and doubt, and fear, yet yielding
 not
 In happiness to the happiest upon earth.
 Simplicity in habit, truth in speech, 421
 Be these the daily strengtheners of their
 minds ;
 May books and Nature be their early joy !
 And knowledge, rightly honoured with that name—
 Knowledge not purchased by the loss of
 power ! 425

Well do I call to mind the very week
 When I was first intrusted to the care Of that sweet Valley ; when its paths, its
 shores,
 And brooks were like a dream of novelty
 To my half-infant thoughts ; that very week, 430
 While I was roving up and down alone, Seeking I knew not what, I chanced to
 cross
 One of those open fields, which, shaped like ears,
 Make green peninsulas on Esthwaite's
 Lake :
 Twilight was coming on, yet through the
 gloom 435
 Appeared distinctly on the opposite shore
 A heap of garments, as if left by one
 Who might have there been bathing.
 Long I watched,
 But no one owned them ; meanwhile the calm lake Grew dark with all the shadows on its
 breast, 440
 And, now and then, a fish up-leaping snapped
 The breathless stillness. The succeeding
 day,
 Those unclaimed garments telling a plain
 tale

Drew to the spot an anxious crowd ; some looked
 In passive expectation from the shore, While from a boat others hung o'er the
 deep, 446
 Sounding with grappling irons and long poles.
 At last, the dead man, 'mid that beauteous
 scene
 Of trees and hills and water, bolt upright
 Rose, with his ghastly face, a spectre
 shape 450
 Of terror ; yet no soul-debasing fear,
 Young as I was, a child not nine years old,
 Possessed me, for my inner eye had seen Such sights before, among the shining
 streams
 Of faery land, the forest of romance. 455
 Their spirit hallowed the sad spectacle
 With decoration of ideal grace ;
 A dignity, a smoothness, like the works
 Of Grecian art, and purest poesy.

A precious treasure had I long possessed, 460
 A little yellow, canvas-covered book,
 A slender abstract of the Arabian tales ;
 And, from companions in a new abode,
 When first I learnt, that this dear prize of mine
 Was but a block hewn from a mighty quarry— 465
 That there were four large volumes, laden
 all
 With kindred matter, 'twas to me, in
 truth,
 A promise scarcely earthly. Instantly,
 With one not richer than myself, I made
 A covenant that each should lay aside
 The moneys he possessed, and hoard up
 more, 471
 Till our joint savings had amassed enough To make this book our own. Through several months,
 In spite of all temptation, we preserved
 Religiously that vow ; but firmness failed,
 Nor were we ever masters of our wish.

And when thereafter to my father's house 477
 The holidays returned me, there to find

That golden store of books which I had left,

What joy was mine! How often in the
course 480

Of those glad respites, though a soft west
wind

Ruffled the waters to the angler's wish,
For a whole day together, have I lain Down by thy side, O Derwent! murmuring stream,

On the hot stones, and in the glaring
sun, 485

And there have read, devouring as I read,
Defrauding the day's glory, desperate!
Till with a sudden bound of smart reproach,

Such as an idler deals with in his shame,
I to the sport betook myself again. 490

A gracious spirit o'er this earth presides,

And o'er the heart of man: invisibly
It comes, to works of unreprieved delight,
And tendency benign, directing those Who care not, know not, think not what they do. 495

The tales that charm away the wakeful
night

In Araby, romances; legends penned
For solace by dim light of monkish lamps;
Fictions, for ladies of their love, devised
By youthful squires; adventures endless,
spun 500

By the dismantled warrior in old age,
Out of the bowels of those very schemes
In which his youth did first extravagate;
These spread like day, and something in the shape

Of these will live till man shall be no
more. 505

Dumb yearnings, hidden appetites, are
ours,

And they must have their food. Our childhood sits,

Our simple childhood, sits upon a throne
That hath more power than all the elements. 509

I guess not what this tells of Being past,
Nor what it augurs of the life to come;
But so it is, and, in that dubious hour,
That twilight when we first begin to see

This dawning earth, to recognise, expect, 514

And, in the long probation that ensues,
The time of trial, ere we learn to live

In reconciliation with our stinted powers;
To endure this state of meagre vassalage,
Unwilling to forego, confess, submit,
Uneasy and unsettled, yoke-fellows 520
To custom, mettlesome, and not yet tamed
And humbled down;—oh! then we feel,
we feel,

We know where we have friends. Ye dreamers, then,

Forgers of daring tales! we bless you
then, 524

Impostors, drivellers, dotards, as the ape
Philosophy will call you: then we feel With what, and how great might ye are in league,

Who make our wish, our power, our thought a deed,

An empire, a possession,—ye whom time
And seasons serve; all Faculties to whom Earth crouches, the elements are potter's clay, 531

Space like a heaven filled up with northern lights,

Here, nowhere, there, and everywhere at
once.

Relinquishing this lofty eminence
For ground, though humbler, not the less a tract 535

Of the same isthmus, which our spirits
cross

In progress from their native continent
To earth and human life, the Song might
dwell

On that delightful time of growing youth
When craving for the marvellous gives
way 540

To strengthening love for things that we have seen;

When sober truth and steady sympathies,
Offered to notice by less daring pens,
Take firmer hold of us, and words themselves

Move us with conscious pleasure.

I am sad
At thought of raptures now for ever flown; 546

Almost to tears I sometimes could be sad
 To think of, to read over, many a page,
 Poems withal of name, which at that time Did never fail to entrance me, and are
 now 550
 Dead in my eyes, dead as a theatre Fresh emptied of spectators. Twice five
 years
 Or less I might have seen, when first my
 mind
 With conscious pleasure opened to the charm
 Of words in tuneful order, found them
 sweet 555
 For their own sakes, a passion, and a
 power;
 And phrases pleased me chosen for de-
 light,
 For pomp, or love. Oft, in the public roads
 Yet unfrequented, while the morning
 light
 Was yellowing the hill tops, I went abroad 560
 With a dear friend, and for the better
 part
 Of two delightful hours we strolled along
 By the still borders of the misty lake,
 Repeating favourite verses with one voice,
 Or conning more, as happy as the birds That round us chaunted. Well might we be glad, 566
 Lifted above the ground by airy fancies,
 More bright than madness or the dreams of wine;
 And, though full oft the objects of our
 love
 Were false, and in their splendour over-
 wrought, 570
 Yet was there surely then no vulgar
 power
 Working within us,—nothing less, in
 truth,
 Than that most noble attribute of man,

Though yet untutored and inordinate,
 That wish for something loftier, more adorned, 575
 Than is the common aspect, daily garb,
 Of human life. What wonder, then, if
 sounds
 Of exultation echoed through the groves!
 For, images, and sentiments, and words,
 And everything encountered or pursued
 In that delicious world of poesy, 581
 Kept holiday, a never-ending show,
 With music, incense, festival, and flowers!

 Here must we pause: this only let me
 add,
 From heart-experience, and in humblest
 sense 585
 Of modesty, that he, who in his youth
 A daily wanderer among woods and fields
 With living Nature hath been intimate,
 Not only in that raw unpractised time
 Is stirred to ecstasy, as others are, 590
 By glittering verse; but further, doth
 receive,
 In measure only dealt out to himself,
 Knowledge and increase of enduring joy
 From the great Nature that exists in works
 Of mighty Poets. Visionary power 595
 Attends the motions of the viewless winds,
 Embodied in the mystery of words:
 There, darkness makes abode, and all the host
 Of shadowy things work endless changes,
 —there, 599
 As in a mansion like their proper home,
 Even forms and substances are circum-
 fused
 By that transparent veil with light divine,
 And, through the turnings intricate of
 verse,
 Present themselves as objects recognised,
 In flashes, and with glory, not their
 own. 605

BOOK SIXTH.

CAMBRIDGE AND THE ALPS.

THE leaves were fading when to Esthwaite's banks

And the simplicities of cottage life
I bade farewell; and, one among the youth

Who, summoned by that season, reunite
As scattered birds troop to the fowler's lure, 5

Went back to Granta's cloisters, not so prompt

Or eager, though as gay and undepressed
In mind, as when I thence had taken flight
A few short months before. I turned my face

Without repining from the coves and heights 10

Clothed in the sunshine of the withering fern;

Quitted, not loth, the mild magnificence
Of calmer lakes and louder streams; and you,

Frank-hearted maids of rocky Cumberland,

You and your not unwelcome days of mirth 15

Relinquished, and your nights of revelry,
And in my own unlovely cell sate down
In lightsome mood—such privilege has youth

That cannot take long leave of pleasant thoughts.

The bonds of indolent society 20
Relaxing in their hold, henceforth I lived
More to myself. Two winters may be passed

Without a separate notice: many books
Were skimmed, devoured, or studiously perused,

But with no settled plan. I was detached Internally from academic cares; 26

Yet independent study seemed a course
Of hardy disobedience towards friends
And kindred, proud rebellion and unkind.

This spurious virtue, rather let it bear 30
A name it now deserves, this cowardice,
Gave treacherous sanction to that overlove

Of freedom which encouraged me to turn
From regulations even of my own
As from restraints and bonds. Yet who can tell— 35

Who knows what thus may have been gained, both then

And at a later season, or preserved;
What love of nature, what original strength

Of contemplation, what intuitive truths,
The deepest and the best, what keen research, 40

Unbiased, unbewildered, and unawed?

The Poet's soul was with me at that time;

Sweet meditations, the still overflow
Of present happiness, while future years
Lacked not anticipations, tender dreams,
No few of which have since been realised;
And some remain, hopes for my future life. 47

Four years and thirty, told this very week,

Have I been now a sojourner on earth,
By sorrow not unsmitten; yet for me 50
Life's morning radiance hath not left the hills,

Her dew is on the flowers. Those were the days

Which also first emboldened me to trust
With firmness, hitherto but slightly touched

By such a daring thought, that I might
 leave 55
 Some monument behind me which pure
 hearts
 Should reverence. The instinctive humbleness, Maintained even by the very name and
 thought
 Of printed books and authorship, began To melt away; and further, the dread
 awe 60
 Of mighty names was softened down and
 seemed Approachable, admitting fellowship
 Of modest sympathy. Such aspect now, Though not familiarly, my mind put on,
 Content to observe, to achieve, and to enjoy. 65

All winter long, whenever free to choose,
 Did I by night frequent the College
 groves
 And tributary walks; the last, and oft
 The only one, who had been lingering
 there
 Through hours of silence, till the porter's
 bell, 70
 A punctual follower on the stroke of nine,
 Rang with its blunt unceremonious voice,
 Inexorable summons! Lofty elms,
 Inviting shades of opportune recess,
 Bestowed composure on a neighbourhood
 Unpeaceful in itself. A single tree 76
 With sinuous trunk, boughs exquisitely wreathed, Grew there; an ash which Winter for himself
 Decked as in pride, and with outlandish
 grace:
 Up from the ground, and almost to the
 top, 80
 The trunk and every master branch were
 green
 With clustering ivy, and the lightsome twigs
 And outer spray profusely tipped with seeds
 That hung in yellow tassels, while the air Stirred them, not voiceless. Often have I stood 85

Foot-bound uplooking at this lovely tree
 Beneath a frosty moon. The hemisphere
 Of magic fiction, verse of mine perchance
 May never tread; but scarcely Spenser's
 self
 Could have more tranquil visions in his
 youth, 90
 Or could more bright appearances create
 Of human forms with superhuman powers,
 Than I beheld loitering on calm clear
 nights
 Alone, beneath this fairy work of earth.

On the vague reading of a truant youth
 'Twere idle to descant. My inner judgment 96
 Not seldom differed from my taste in
 books,
 As if it appertained to another mind,
 And yet the books which then I valued
 most
 Are dearest to me now; for, having scanned, 100
 Not heedlessly, the laws, and watched the forms
 Of Nature, in that knowledge I possessed
 A standard, often usefully applied,
 Even when unconsciously, to things removed
 From a familiar sympathy.—In fine, 105
 I was a better judge of thoughts than
 words,
 Misled in estimating words, not only
 By common inexperience of youth,
 But by the trade in classic niceties,
 The dangerous craft of culling term and phrase 110
 From languages that want the living
 voice
 To carry meaning to the natural heart;
 To tell us what is passion, what is truth,
 What reason, what simplicity and sense.

Yet may we not entirely overlook 115
 The pleasure gathered from the rudi-
 ments
 Of geometric science. Though advanced
 In these enquiries, with regret I speak, No farther than the threshold, there I
 found
 Both elevation and composed delight:

With Indian awe and wonder, ignorance
pleased 121

With its own struggles, did I meditate
On the relation those abstractions bear
To Nature's laws, and by what process led, Those immaterial agents bowed their heads 125

Duly to serve the mind of earth-born man;
From star to star, from kindred sphere to
sphere,
From system on to system without end.

More frequently from the same source
I drew

A pleasure quiet and profound, a sense
Of permanent and universal sway, 131
And paramount belief; there, recognised
A type, for finite natures, of the one Supreme Existence, the surpassing life Which—to the boundaries of space and
time, 135

Of melancholy space and doleful time,
Superior, and incapable of change,
Nor touched by welterings of passion—is,
And hath the name of, God. Transcendent peace

And silence did await upon these thoughts That were a frequent comfort to my
youth. 141

'Tis told by one whom stormy waters
threw,

With fellow-sufferers by the shipwreck
spared,

Upon a desert coast, that having brought
To land a single volume, saved by chance,
A treatise of Geometry, he wont, 146
Although of food and clothing destitute,
And beyond common wretchedness de-
pressed,

To part from company and take this book (Then first a self-taught pupil in its truths) 150

To spots remote, and draw his diagrams
With a long staff upon the sand, and thus Did oft beguile his sorrow, and almost Forget his feeling: so (if like effect
From the same cause produced, 'mid outward things 155

So different, may rightly be compared),
So was it then with me, and so will be

With Poets ever. Mighty is the charm
Of those abstractions to a mind beset
With images, and haunted by herself,
And specially delightful unto me 161
Was that clear synthesis built up aloft
So gracefully; even then when it appeared

Not more than a mere plaything, or a toy
To sense embodied: not the thing it is In verity, an independent world, 166
Created out of pure intelligence.

Such dispositions then were mine unearned

By aught, I fear, of genuine desert—
Mine, through heaven's grace and inborn aptitudes. 170

And not to leave the story of that time Imperfect, with these habits must be joined

Moods melancholy, fits of spleen, that
loved

A pensive sky, sad days, and piping
winds,

The twilight more than dawn, autumn than spring; 175

A treasured and luxurious gloom of choice
And inclination mainly, and the mere Redundancy of youth's contentedness.

—To time thus spent, add multitudes of
hours

Pilfered away, by what the Bard who sang 180

Of the Enchanter Indolence hath called "Good-natured lounging," and behold a map

Of my collegiate life—far less intense
Than duty called for, or, without regard To duty, might have sprung up of itself
By change of accidents, or even, to
speak 186

Without unkindness, in another place.
Yet why take refuge in that plea?—the fault,

This I repeat, was mine; mine be the blame.

In summer, making quest for works of
art, 190

Or scenes renowned for beauty, I explored

That streamlet whose blue current works its way
Between romantic Dovedale's spiry rocks ; Pried into Yorkshire dales, or hidden tracts
Of my own native region, and was blest Between these sundry wanderings with a joy 196
Above all joys, that seemed another morn Risen on mid noon ; blest with the presence, Friend !
Of that sole Sister, her who hath been
long
Dear to thee also, thy true friend and
mine, 200
Now, after separation desolate, Restored to me—such absence that she seemed
A gift then first bestowed. The varied banks
Of Emont, hitherto unnamed in song,
And that monastic castle, 'mid tall trees, Low-standing by the margin of the
stream, 206
A mansion visited (as fame reports)
By Sidney, where, in sight of our Hel-vellyn,
Or stormy Cross-fell, snatches he might pen
Of his Arcadia, by fraternal love 210
Inspired ;—that river and those mouldering towers
Have seen us side by side, when, having clomb
The darksome windings of a broken stair,
And crept along a ridge of fractured wall,
Not without trembling, we in safety
looked 215
Forth, through some Gothic window's open space,
And gathered with one mind a rich
reward
From the far-stretching landscape, by the light
Of morning beautified, or purple eve ;
Or, not less pleased, lay on some turret's
head, 220
Catching from tufts of grass and hare-bell flowers
Their faintest whisper to the passing
breeze,

Given out while mid-day heat oppressed the plains.

Another maid there was, who also shed
A gladness o'er that season, then to me,
By her exulting outside look of youth 226
And placid under-countenance, first endeared ;
That other spirit, Coleridge ! who is now
So near to us, that meek confiding heart,
So revered by us both. O'er paths and fields 230
In all that neighbourhood, through narrow lanes
Of eglantine, and through the shady
woods,
And o'er the Border Beacon, and the
waste
Of naked pools, and common crags that
lay Exposed on the bare fell, were scattered
love, 235
The spirit of pleasure, and youth's golden
gleam.
O Friend ! we had not seen thee at that
time,
And yet a power is on me, and a strong
Confusion, and I seem to plant thee there.
Far art thou wandered now in search of
health 240
And milder breezes,—melancholy lot !
But thou art with us, with us in the past,
The present, with us in the times to come.
There is no grief, no sorrow, no despair,
No languor, no dejection, no dismay, 245
No absence scarcely can there be, for
those Who love as we do. Speed thee well !
divide
With us thy pleasure ; thy returning
strength,
Receive it daily as a joy of ours ;
Share with us thy fresh spirits, whether gift 250
Of gales Etesian or of tender thoughts.

I, too, have been a wanderer ; but, alas !
How different the fate of different men.
Though mutually unknown, yea, nursed and reared 254
As if in several elements, we were framed

To bend at last to the same discipline,
 Predestined, if two beings ever were,
 To seek the same delights, and have one
 health,
 One happiness. Throughout this narrative,
 Else sooner ended, I have borne in
 mind 260
 For whom it registers the birth, and marks the growth,
 Of gentleness, simplicity, and truth,
 And joyous loves, that hallow innocent
 days
 Of peace and self-command. Of rivers,
 fields,
 And groves I speak to thee, my Friend !
 to thee, 265
 Who, yet a liveried schoolboy, in the depths
 Of the huge city, on the leaded roof
 Of that wide edifice, thy school and home,
 Wert used to lie and gaze upon the clouds Moving in heaven ; or, of that pleasure
 tired, 270
 To shut thine eyes, and by internal light See trees, and meadows, and thy native
 stream,
 Far distant, thus beheld from year to year
 Of a long exile. Nor could I forget,
 In this late portion of my argument, 275
 That scarcely, as my term of pupilage
 Ceased, had I left those academic bowers When thou wert thither guided. From the heart
 Of London, and from cloisters there, thou camest,
 And didst sit down in temperance and
 peace, 280
 A rigorous student. What a stormy
 course
 Then followed. Oh ! it is a pang that calls
 For utterance, to think what easy change
 Of circumstances might to thee have
 spared
 A world of pain, ripened a thousand
 hopes, 285
 For ever withered. Through this retrospect
 Of my collegiate life I still have had Thy after-sojourn in the self-same place

Present before my eyes, have played with
 times
 And accidents as children do with cards,
 Or as a man, who, when his house is
 built, 291
 A frame locked up in wood and stone, doth still,
 As impotent fancy prompts, by his fire-
 side,
 Rebuild it to his liking. I have thought
 Of thee, thy learning, gorgeous eloquence,
 And all the strength and plumage of thy
 youth, 296
 Thy subtle speculations, toils abstruse
 Among the schoolmen, and Platonic forms
 Of wild ideal pageantry, shaped out From things well-matched or ill, and words for things, 300
 The self-created sustenance of a mind
 Debarred from Nature's living images,
 Compelled to be a life unto herself,
 And unrelentingly possessed by thirst
 Of greatness, love, and beauty. Not
 alone, 305
 Ah ! surely not in singleness of heart
 Should I have seen the light of evening
 fade
 From smooth Cam's silent waters : had we met,
 Even at that early time, needs must I
 trust
 In the belief, that my maturer age, 310
 My calmer habits, and more steady voice, Would with an influence benign have
 soothed,
 Or chased away, the airy wretchedness That battered on thy youth. But thou hast trod
 A march of glory, which doth put to
 shame 315
 These vain regrets ; health suffers in thee,
 else
 Such grief for thee would be the weakest
 thought
 That ever harboured in the breast of man.
 A passing word erewhile did lightly
 touch
 On wanderings of my own, that now embraced 320
 With livelier hope a region wider far.

When the third summer freed us from restraint,
A youthful friend, he too a mountaineer,
Not slow to share my wishes, took his
staff,
And sallying forth, we journeyed side by
side, 325
Bound to the distant Alps. A hardy slight
Did this unprecedented course imply
Of college studies and their set rewards; Nor had, in truth, the scheme been formed by me 329
Without uneasy forethought of the pain,
The censures, and ill-omening of those To whom my worldly interests were
dear.
But Nature then was sovereign in my
mind,
And mighty forms, seizing a youthful fancy, 334
Had given a charter to irregular hopes.
In any age of uneventful calm Among the nations, surely would my
heart
Have been possessed by similar desire;
But Europe at that time was thrilled
with joy,
France standing on the top of golden
hours, 340
And human nature seeming born again.

Lightly equipped, and but a few brief looks
Cast on the white cliffs of our native shore
From the receding vessel's deck, we chanced
To land at Calais on the very eve 345
Of that great federal day; and there we
saw,
In a mean city, and among a few,
How bright a face is worn when joy of
one
Is joy for tens of millions. Southward thence
We held our way, direct through hamlets,
towns, 350
Gaudy with reliques of that festival,
Flowers left to wither on triumphal arcs,
And window-garlands. On the public
roads,

And, once, three days successively, through paths
By which our toilsome journey was abridged, 355
Among sequestered villages we walked
And found benevolence and blessedness Spread like a fragrance everywhere, when
spring
Hath left no corner of the land un-
touched:
Where elms for many and many a league in files 360
With their thin umbrage, on the stately roads
Of that great kingdom, rustled o'er our
heads,
For ever near us as we paced along:
How sweet at such a time, with such
delight
On every side, in prime of youthful
strength, 365
To feed a Poet's tender melancholy
And fond conceit of sadness, with the
sound
Of undulations varying as might please
The wind that swayed them; once, and more than once,
Unhoused beneath the evening star we
saw 370
Dances of liberty, and, in late hours
Of darkness, dances in the open air Deftly prolonged, though grey-haired lookers on
Might waste their breath in chiding.
Under hills—
The vine-clad hills and slopes of Burgundy, 375
Upon the bosom of the gentle Saone
We glided forward with the flowing
stream.
Swift Rhone! thou wert the wings on which we cut
A winding passage with majestic ease Between thy lofty rocks. Enchanting
show 380
Those woods and farms and orchards
did present,
And single cottages and lurking towns,
Reach after reach, succession without end Of deep and stately vales! A lonely
pair

Of strangers, till day closed, we sailed
 along, 385
 Clustered together with a merry crowd
 Of those emancipated, a blithe host
 Of travellers, chiefly delegates returning
 From the great spouses newly solemnized
 At their chief city, in the sight of Heaven.
 Like bees they swarmed, gaudy and gay as bees; 391
 Some vapoured in the unruliness of joy,
 And with their swords flourished as if to fight
 The saucy air. In this proud company
 We landed—took with them our evening
 meal, 395
 Guests welcome almost as the angels were
 To Abraham of old. The supper done,
 With flowing cups elate and happy
 thoughts
 We rose at signal given, and formed a ring
 And, hand in hand, danced round and round the board; 400
 All hearts were open, every tongue was
 loud
 With amity and glee; we bore a name Honoured in France, the name of English-
 men,
 And hospitably did they give us hail,
 As their forerunners in a glorious course;
 And round and round the board we danced again. 406
 With these blithe friends our voyage we renewed
 At early dawn. The monastery bells Made a sweet jingling in our youthful ears;
 The rapid river flowing without noise, 410
 And each uprising or receding spire
 Spake with a sense of peace, at intervals Touching the heart amid the boisterous crew
 By whom we were encompassed. Taking
 leave
 Of this glad throng, foot-travellers side
 by side, 415
 Measuring our steps in quiet, we pursued Our journey, and ere twice the sun had set Beheld the Convent of Chartreuse, and
 there

Rested within an awful solitude:
 Yes; for even then no other than a place
 Of soul-affecting solitude appeared 421
 That far-famed region, though our eyes
 had seen,
 As toward the sacred mansion we advanced,
 Arms flashing, and a military glare
 Of riotous men commissioned to expel 425
 The blameless inmates, and belike subvert
 That frame of social being, which so long Had bodied forth the ghostliness of
 things
 In silence visible and perpetual calm.
 —“Stay, stay your sacrilegious hands!”—
 The voice 430
 Was Nature’s, uttered from her Alpine
 throne;
 I heard it then, and seem to hear it now—
 “Your impious work forbear: perish what may,
 Let this one temple last, be this one spot
 Of earth devoted to eternity!” 435
 She ceased to speak, but while St. Bruno’s pines
 Waved their dark tops, not silent as they waved,
 And while below, along their several beds, Murmured the sister streams of Life and
 Death,
 Thus by conflicting passions pressed, my
 heart 440
 Responded; “Honour to the patriot’s
 zeal!
 Glory and hope to new-born Liberty!
 Hail to the mighty projects of the time!
 Discerning sword that Justice yields, do
 thou
 Go forth and prosper; and, ye purging fires, 445
 Up to the loftiest towers of Pride ascend, Fanned by the breath of angry Providence.
 But oh! if Past and Future be the wings
 On whose support harmoniously con-
 joined Moves the great spirit of human knowledge, spare 450
 These courts, of mystery, where a step advanced
 Between the portals of the shadowy rocks

Leaves far behind life's treacherous vanities,
 For penitential tears and trembling hopes Exchanged—to equalise in God's pure
 sight 455
 Monarch and peasant: be the house redeemed
 With its unworldly votaries, for the sake
 Of conquest over sense, hourly achieved Through faith and meditative reason, resting
 Upon the word of heaven-imparted truth, Calmly triumphant; and for humbler
 claim 461
 Of that imaginative impulse sent From these majestic floods, yon shining
 cliffs,
 The untransmuted shapes of many worlds,
 Cerulean ether's pure inhabitants, 465
 These forests unapproachable by death,
 That shall endure as long as man endures,
 To think, to hope, to worship, and to
 feel,
 To struggle, to be lost within himself
 In trepidation, from the blank abyss 470
 To look with bodily eyes, and be consoled.”
 Not seldom since that moment have I wished
 That thou, O Friend! the trouble or the calm Hadst shared, when, from profane regards
 apart,
 In sympathetic reverence we trod 475
 The floors of those dim cloisters, till that
 hour,
 From their foundation, strangers to the presence
 Of unrestricted and unthinking man.
 Abroad, how cheeringly the sunshine lay Upon the open lawns! Vallombre's
 groves 480
 Entering, we fed the soul with darkness;
 thence Issued, and with uplifted eyes beheld,
 In different quarters of the bending sky,
 The cross of Jesus stand erect, as if Hands of angelic powers had fixed it
 there, 485
 Memorial revered by a thousand
 storms;

Yet then, from the indiscriminating
 sweep
 And rage of one State-whirlwind, insecure.
 'Tis not my present purpose to retrace
 That variegated journey step by step. 490
 A march it was of military speed,
 And Earth did change her images and
 forms
 Before us, fast as clouds are changed in
 heaven.
 Day after day, up early and down late,
 From hill to vale we dropped, from vale to hill 495
 Mounted—from province on to province swept,
 Keen hunters in a chase of fourteen
 weeks,
 Eager as birds of prey, or as a ship
 Upon the stretch, when winds are blowing fair:
 Sweet coverts did we cross of pastoral
 life, 500
 Enticing valleys, greeted them and left Too soon, while yet the very flash and
 gleam
 Of salutation were not passed away.
 Oh! sorrow for the youth who could have
 seen Unchastened, unsubdued, unawed, un-
 raised 505
 To patriarchal dignity of mind,
 And pure simplicity of wish and will,
 Those sanctified abodes of peaceful man, Pleased (though to hardship born, and compassed round
 With danger, varying as the seasons
 change), 510
 Pleased with his daily task, or, if not
 pleased,
 Contented, from the moment that the
 dawn
 (Ah! surely not without attendant gleams
 Of soul-illumination) calls him forth
 To industry, by glistenings flung on rocks, Whose evening shadows lead him to repose. 516
 Well might a stranger look with bounding heart
 Down on a green recess, the first I saw

Of those deep haunts, an aboriginal vale,
 Quiet and lorded over and possessed 520
 By naked huts, wood-built, and sown like tents

Or Indian cabins over the fresh lawns
 And by the river side.

That very day,

From a bare ridge we also first beheld Unveiled the summit of Mont Blanc, and grieved 525

To have a soulless image on the eye
 That had usurped upon a living thought That never more could be. The wondrous
 Vale

Of Chamouny stretched far below, and
 soon

With its dumb cataracts and streams of ice, 530

A motionless array of mighty waves,
 Five rivers broad and vast, made rich amends,

And reconciled us to realities;
 There small birds warble from the leafy
 trees,

The eagle soars high in the element, 535
 There doth the reaper bind the yellow sheaf,

The maiden spread the haycock in the sun,
 While Winter like a well-tamed lion
 walks,

Descending from the mountain to make sport 539

Among the cottages by beds of flowers.

Whate'er in this wide circuit we beheld,
 Or heard, was fitted to our unripe state
 Of intellect and heart. With such a book Before our eyes, we could not choose but
 read

Lessons of genuine brotherhood, the plain
 And universal reason of mankind, 546
 The truths of young and old. Nor, side
 by side

Pacing, two social pilgrims, or alone
 Each with his humour, could we fail to abound

In dreams and fictions, pensively composed: 550

Dejection taken up for pleasure's sake,
 And gilded sympathies, the willow
 wreath,

And sober posies of funereal flowers,
 Gathered among those solitudes sublime
 From formal gardens of the lady Sorrow,
 Did sweeten many a meditative hour. 556

Yet still in me with those soft luxuries Mixed something of stern mood, an under-thirst

Of vigour seldom utterly allayed:
 And from that source how different a sadness 560

Would issue, let one incident make
 known.

When from the Vallais we had turned,
 and clomb

Along the Simplon's steep and rugged
 road,

Following a band of muleteers, we reached A halting-place, where all together took Their noon-tide meal. Hastily rose our guide, 566

Leaving us at the board; awhile we lingered,

Then paced the beaten downward way that led

Right to a rough stream's edge, and there broke off;

The only track now visible was one 570
 That from the torrent's further brink held forth

Conspicuous invitation to ascend
 A lofty mountain. After brief delay Crossing the unbridged stream, that road we took,

And clomb with eagerness, till anxious
 fears 575

Intruded, for we failed to overtake Our comrades gone before. By fortunate
 chance,

While every moment added doubt to
 doubt,

A peasant met us, from whose mouth we learned

That to the spot which had perplexed us
 first 580

We must descend, and there should find
 the road,

Which in the stony channel of the stream
 Lay a few steps, and then along its banks;
 And, that our future course, all plain to
 sight,

Was downwards, with the current of that
stream. 585

Loth to believe what we so grieved to hear,
For still we had hopes that pointed to
the clouds,

We questioned him again, and yet again;
But every word that from the peasant's
lips

Came in reply, translated by our feelings, Ended in this,—that we had crossed the Alps. 591

Imagination—here the Power so called Through sad incompetence of human
speech,

That awful Power rose from the mind's
abyss

Like an unfathered vapour that enwraps, At once, some lonely traveller. I was
lost; 596

Halted without an effort to break through;
But to my conscious soul I now can say—
“I recognise thy glory:” in such strength
Of usurpation, when the light of sense Goes out, but with a flash that has revealed 601

The invisible world, doth greatness make
abode,

There harbours; whether we be young or
old,

Our destiny, our being's heart and home,
Is with infinitude, and only there; 605
With hope it is, hope that can never die,
Effort, and expectation, and desire,
And something evermore about to be.

Under such banners militant, the soul Seeks for no trophies, struggles for no spoils 610

That may attest her prowess, blest in
thoughts

That are their own perfection and reward,
Strong in herself and in beatitude
That hides her, like the mighty flood of Nile

Poured from his fount of Abyssinian
clouds 615

To fertilise the whole Egyptian plain.

The melancholy slackening that ensued
Upon those tidings by the peasant given Was soon dislodged. Downwards we hurried fast,

And, with the half-shaped road which we had missed, 620

Entered a narrow chasm. ¹The brook and
road

Were fellow-travellers in this gloomy
strait,

And with them did we journey several
hours

At a slow pace. The immeasurable height
Of woods decaying, never to be decayed,

The stationary blasts of waterfalls, 626
And in the narrow rent at every turn Winds thwarting winds, bewildered and
forlorn,

The torrents shooting from the clear blue
sky,

The rocks that muttered close upon our ears, 630

Black drizzling crags that spake by the
way-side

As if a voice were in them, the sick sight
And giddy prospect of the raving stream,

The unfettered clouds and region of the Heavens,

Tumult and peace, the darkness and the
light— 635

Were all like workings of one mind, the features

Of the same face, blossoms upon one tree;
Characters of the great Apocalypse,

The types and symbols of Eternity,
Of first, and last, and midst, and without
end. 640

That night our lodging was a house that stood

Alone, within the valley, at a point Where, tumbling from aloft, a torrent swelled

The rapid stream whose margin we had
trod;

A dreary mansion, large beyond all need,
With high and spacious rooms, deafened and stunned 646

By noise of waters, making innocent sleep
Lie melancholy among weary bones.

Uprisen, betimes, our journey we renewed,

Led by the stream, ere noon-day magnified 650
 Into a lordly river, broad and deep,
 Dimpling along in silent majesty,
 With mountains for its neighbours, and in view
 Of distant mountains and their snowy
 tops,
 And thus proceeding to Locarno's Lake,
 Fit resting-place for such a visitant. 656
 Locarno! spreading out in width like
 Heaven,
 How dost thou cleave to the poetic heart,
 Bask in the sunshine of the memory;
 And Como! thou, a treasure whom the
 earth 660
 Keeps to herself, confined as in a depth
 Of Abyssinian privacy. I spake
 Of thee, thy chestnut woods, and garden plots
 Of Indian corn tended by dark-eyed maids;
 Thy lofty steps, and pathways roofed with vines, 665
 Winding from house to house, from town to town,
 Sole link that binds them to each other;
 walks,
 League after league, and cloistral avenues,
 Where silence dwells if music be not
 there:
 While yet a youth undisciplined in verse,
 Through fond ambition of that hour, I
 strove 671
 To chant your praise; nor can approach you now
 Ungreeted by a more melodious Song, Where tones of Nature smoothed by learned Art May flow in lasting current. Like a
 breeze 675
 Or sunbeam over your domain I passed In motion without pause; but ye have left
 Your beauty with me, a serene accord
 Of forms and colours, passive, yet endowed
 In their submissiveness with power as
 sweet 680
 And gracious, almost might I dare to say,
 As virtue is, or goodness; sweet as love,

Or the remembrance of a generous deed,
 Or mildest visitations of pure thought,
 When God, the giver of all joy, is thanked Religiously, in silent blessedness; 685
 Sweet as this last herself, for such it is.

With those delightful pathways we advanced,
 For two days' space, in presence of the Lake,
 That, stretching far among the Alps, assumed 690
 A character more stern. The second
 night,
 From sleep awakened, and misled by
 sound
 Of the church clock telling the hours with strokes
 Whose import then we had not learned, we rose
 By moonlight, doubting not that day was
 nigh, 695
 And that meanwhile, by no uncertain
 path,
 Along the winding margin of the lake, Led, as before, we should behold the
 scene,
 Hushed in profound repose. We left the town
 Of Gravedona with this hope; but soon
 Were lost, bewildered among woods immense, 701
 And on a rock sate down, to wait for day.
 An open place it was, and overlooked,
 From high, the sullen water far beneath,
 On which a dull red image of the moon
 Lay bedded, changing oftentimes its form Like an uneasy snake. From hour to
 hour
 We sate and sate, wondering as if the
 night
 Had been ensnared by witchcraft. On the rock
 At last we stretched our weary limbs for
 sleep, 710
 But could not sleep, tormented by the stings
 Of insects, which with noise like that of
 noon
 Filled all the woods: the cry of unknown
 birds;

The mountains more by blackness visible
 And their own size, than any outward
 light; 715
 The breathless wilderness of clouds; the clock
 That told, with unintelligible voice,
 The widely parted hours; the noise of
 streams,
 And sometimes rustling motions nigh at
 hand,
 That did not leave us free from personal
 fear; 720
 And, lastly, the withdrawing moon, that set Before us, while she still was high in
 heaven;—
 These were our food; and such a summer's
 night
 Followed that pair of golden days that
 shed
 On Como's Lake, and all that round it
 lay, 725
 Their fairest, softest, happiest influence.

But here I must break off, and bid
 farewell
 To days, each offering some new sight, or fraught
 With some untried adventure, in a course Prolonged till sprinklings of autumnal
 snow 730
 Checked our unwearied steps. Let this
 alone
 Be mentioned as a parting word, that not
 In hollow exultation, dealing out Hyperboles of praise comparative; 734
 Not rich one moment to be poor for ever;
 Not prostrate, overborne, as if the mind
 Herself were nothing, a mere pensioner
 On outward forms—did we in presence
 stand
 Of that magnificent region. On the front Of this whole Song is written that my
 heart 740
 Must, in such Temple, needs have offered
 up
 A different worship. Finally, whatever
 I saw, or heard, or felt, was but a stream
 That flowed into a kindred stream; a gale,
 Confederate with the current of the soul,

To speed my voyage; every sound or
 sight, 746
 In its degree of power, administered
 To grandeur or to tenderness,—to the one Directly, but to tender thoughts by means Less often instantaneous in effect; 750 Led me to these by paths that, in the
 main,
 Were more circuitous, but not less sure Duty to reach the point marked out by Heaven.

Oh, most belovèd Friend! a glorious
 time,
 A happy time that was; triumphant looks Were then the common language of all
 eyes; 756
 As if awaked from sleep, the Nations
 hailed
 Their great expectancy: the fife of war
 Was then a spirit-stirring sound indeed,
 A blackbird's whistle in a budding grove.
 We left the Swiss exulting in the fate 761 Of their near neighbours; and, when shortening fast
 Our pilgrimage, nor distant far from
 home,
 We crossed the Brabant armies on the fret
 For battle in the cause of Liberty. 765
 A stripling, scarcely of the household
 then
 Of social life, I looked upon these things
 As from a distance; heard, and saw, and
 felt,
 Was touched, but with no intimate concern;
 I seemed to move along them, as a bird 770
 Moves through the air, or as a fish pursues
 Its sport, or feeds in its proper element;
 I wanted not that joy, I did not need
 Such help; the ever-living universe, Turn where I might, was opening out its glories, 775
 And the independent spirit of pure youth Called forth, at every season, new delights
 Spread round my steps like sunshine o'er green fields.

BOOK SEVENTH.

RESIDENCE IN LONDON.

Six changeful years have vanished since
 I first Poured out (saluted by that quickening
 breeze
 Which met me issuing from the City's¹
 walls)
 A glad preamble to this Verse: I sang Aloud, with fervour irresistible 5
 Of short-lived transport, like a torrent bursting,
 From a black thunder-cloud, down Scaffell's
 side
 To rush and disappear. But soon broke
 forth
 (So willed the Muse) a less impetuous
 stream,
 That flowed awhile with unabating
 strength, 10
 Then stopped for years; not audible
 again
 Before last primrose-time. Belovèd
 Friend!
 The assurance which then cheered some heavy thoughts
 On thy departure to a foreign land
 Has failed; too slowly moves the promised
 work. 15
 Through the whole summer have I been
 at rest,
 Partly from voluntary holiday,
 And part through outward hindrance.
 But I heard,
 After the hour of sunset yester-even,
 Sitting within doors between light and dark, 20
 A choir of redbreasts gathered somewhere
 near
 My threshold,—minstrels from the distant
 woods
 Sent in on Winter's service, to announce,

With preparation artful and benign,
 That the rough lord had left the surly
 North 25
 On his accustomed journey. The delight,
 Due to this timely notice, unawares Smote me, and, listening, I in whispers
 said,
 "Ye heartsome Choristers, ye and I will
 be Associates, and, unscared by blustering
 winds, 30
 Will chant together." Thereafter, as the shades
 Of twilight deepened, going forth, I spied
 A glow-worm underneath a dusky plume
 Or canopy of yet unwithered fern,
 Clear-shining, like a hermit's taper seen Through a thick forest. Silence touched me here 36
 No less than sound had done before; the
 child
 Of Summer, lingering, shining, by her-
 self,
 The voiceless worm on the unfrequented
 hills,
 Seemed sent on the same errand with the choir 40
 Of Winter that had warbled at my door,
 And the whole year breathed tenderness
 and love.

The last night's genial feeling over-
 flowed
 Upon this morning, and my favourite
 grove,
 Tossing in sunshine its dark boughs
 aloft, 45
 As if to make the strong wind visible,
 Wakes in me agitations like its own,
 A spirit friendly to the Poet's task,
 Which we will now resume with lively
 hope,

¹ The City of Goslar in Lower Saxony.

Nor checked by aught of tamer argument,
That lies before us, needful to be told. 51

Returned from that excursion¹, soon I bade

Farewell for ever to the sheltered seats
Of gowned students, quitted hall and
bower,

And every comfort of that privileged
ground, 55

Well pleased to pitch a vagrant tent
among

The unfenced regions of society.

Yet, undetermined to what course of
life

I should adhere, and seeming to possess
A little space of intermediate time 60

At full command, to London first I turned,
In no disturbance of excessive hope,

By personal ambition unenslaved, Frugal as there was need, and, though self-willed,

From dangerous passions free. Three years had flown 65

Since I had felt in heart and soul the shock
Of the huge town's first presence, and had paced

Her endless streets, a transient visitant:
Now, fixed amid that concourse of man-
kind 69

Where Pleasure whirls about incessantly,
And life and labour seem but one, I filled
An idler's place; an idler well content

To have a house (what matter for a home?)
That owned him; living cheerfully abroad

With unchecked fancy ever on the stir, 75
And all my young affections out of doors.

There was a time when whatsoever is feigned

Of airy palaces, and gardens built
By Genii of romance; or hath in grave

Authentic history been set forth of Rome,
Alcairo, Babylon, or Persepolis; 81

Or given upon report by pilgrim friars,
Of golden cities ten months' journey deep

Among Tartarian wilds—fell short, far
short,

Of what my fond simplicity believed 85

And thought of London—held me by a chain

Less strong of wonder and obscure de-
light.

Whether the bolt of childhood's Fancy shot

For me beyond its ordinary mark,
'Twere vain to ask; but in our flock of

boys 90
Was One, a cripple from his birth, whom
chance

Summoned from school to London; fortunate

And envied traveller! When the Boy
returned,

After short absence, curiously I scanned His mien and person, nor was free, in

sooth, 95
From disappointment, not to find some change

In look and air, from that new region
brought,

As if from Fairy-land. Much I questioned
him;

And every word he uttered, on my ears
Fell flatter than a caged parrot's note, 100

That answers unexpectedly awry,
And mocks the prompter's listening.

Marvellous things
Had vanity (quick Spirit that appears

Almost as deeply seated and as strong In a Child's heart as fear itself) conceived 105

For my enjoyment. Would that I could
now

Recall what then I pictured to myself,
Of mitred Prelates, Lords in ermine clad,

The King, and the King's Palace, and,
not last,

Nor least, Heaven bless him! the renowned Lord Mayor: 110

Dreams not unlike to those which once began

A change of purpose in young Whittington,

When he, a friendless and a drooping
boy,

Sate on a stone, and heard the bells speak
out 114

Articulate music. Above all, one thought Baffled my understanding: how men lived

Even next-door neighbours, as we say, yet
still Strangers, not knowing each the other's
name.

O, wond'rous power of words, by simple
faith

Licensed to take the meaning that we love!
Vauxhall and Ranelagh! I then had
heard 121

Of your green groves, and wilderness of lamps

Dimming the stars, and fireworks magical,
And gorgeous ladies, under splendid domes, 124

Floating in dance, or warbling high in air
The songs of spirits! Nor had Fancy fed
With less delight upon that other class

Of marvels, broad-day wonders permanent:

The River proudly bridged; the dizzy top
And Whispering Gallery of St. Paul's;
the tombs 130

Of Westminster; the Giants of Guild-
hall;

Bedlam, and those carved maniacs at the gates,

Perpetually recumbent; Statues—man,
And the horse under him—in gilded pomp Adorning flowery gardens, 'mid vast squares; 135

The Monument, and that Chamber of the
Tower

Where England's sovereigns sit in long
array,

Their steeds bestriding,—every mimic
shape

Cased in the gleaming mail the monarch
wore,

Whether for gorgeous tournament addressed, 140

Or life or death upon the battle-field.

Those bold imaginations in due time Had vanished, leaving others in their stead:

And now I looked upon the living scene;
Familiarly perused it; oftentimes, 145

In spite of strongest disappointment,
pleased

Through courteous self-submission, as a tax
Paid to the object by prescriptive right.

Rise up, thou monstrous ant-hill on the
plain

Of a too busy world! Before me flow, Thou endless stream of men and moving
things! 151

Thy every-day appearance, as it strikes—
With wonder heightened, or sublimed by
awe—

On strangers, of all ages; the quick dance
Of colours, lights, and forms; the deafening din; 155

The comers and the goers face to face,
Face after face; the string of dazzling
wares,

Shop after shop, with symbols, blazoned
names,

And all the tradesman's honours over-
head:

Here, fronts of houses, like a title-page,
With letters huge inscribed from top to toe; 161

Stationed above the door, like guardian
saints,

There, allegoric shapes, female or male,
Or physiognomies of real men.

Land-warriors, kings, or admirals of the
sea, 165

Boyle, Shakspeare, Newton, or the attractive head

Of some quack-doctor, famous in his
day.

Meanwhile the roar continues, till at
length,

Escaped as from an enemy, we turn
Abruptly into some sequestered nook,
Still as a sheltered place when winds blow
loud! 171

At leisure, thence, through tracts of thin
resort,

And sights and sounds that come at intervals,

We take our way. A raree-show is here,
With children gathered round; another street 175

Presents a company of dancing dogs,
Or dromedary, with an antic pair

Of monkeys on his back; a minstrel band
Of Savoyards; or, single and alone, 179

An English ballad-singer. Private courts, Gloomy as coffins, and unsightly lanes

Thrilled by some female vendor's scream, belike
 The very shrillest of all London cries,
 May then entangle our impatient steps ;
 Conducted through those labyrinths, unawares, 185
 To privileged regions and inviolate,
 Where from their airy lodges studious lawyers
 Look out on waters, walks, and gardens
 green.

Thence back into the throng, until we
 reach,
 Following the tide that slackens by degrees, 190
 Some half-frequented scene, where wider streets
 Bring straggling breezes of suburban air.
 Here files of ballads dangle from dead
 walls ;

Advertisements, of giant-size, from high
 Press forward, in all colours, on the sight ;
 These, bold in conscious merit, lower
 down ; 196
That, fronted with a most imposing word,
 Is, peradventure, one in masquerade.
 As on the broadening causeway we advance,

Behold, turned upwards, a face hard and
 strong 200
 In lineaments, and red with over-toil.
 'Tis one encountered here and every-
 where ;

A travelling cripple, by the trunk cut short,
 And stumping on his arms. In sailor's garb

Another lies at length, beside a range Of well-formed characters, with chalk inscribed 206

Upon the smooth flat stones: the Nurse
 is here,

The Bachelor, that loves to sun himself,
 The military Idler, and the Dame,
 That field-ward takes her walk with decent
 steps. 210

Now homeward through the thickening hubbub, where
 See, among less distinguishable shapes,
 The begging scavenger, with hat in hand ;

The Italian, as he thrids his way with care,
 Steadying, far-seen, a frame of images
 Upon his head ; with basket at his breast
 The Jew ; the stately and slow-moving Turk,
 With freight of slippers piled beneath his arm !

Enough ;—the mighty concourse I surveyed
 With no unthinking mind, well pleased to note 220

Among the crowd all specimens of man,
 Through all the colours which the sun
 bestows,

And every character of form and face :
 The Swede, the Russian ; from the genial
 south,

The Frenchman and the Spaniard ; from remote 225

America, the Hunter-Indian ; Moors, Malays, Lascars, the Tartar, the Chinese,
 And Negro Ladies in white muslin gowns.

At leisure, then, I viewed, from day to
 day,

The spectacles within doors,—birds and beasts 230

Of every nature, and strange plants convened

From every clime ; and, next, those sights that ape

The absolute presence of reality,
 Expressing, as in mirror, sea and land,
 And what earth is, and what she has to
 show. 235

I do not here allude to subtlest craft,
 By means refined attaining purest ends,
 But imitations, fondly made in plain Confession of man's weakness and his loves.

Whether the Painter, whose ambitious
 skill 240

Submits to nothing less than taking in
 A whole horizon's circuit, do with power ;
 Like that of angels or commissioned
 spirits,

Fix us upon some lofty pinnacle,
 Or in a ship on waters, with a world 245
 Of life, and life-like mockery beneath,
 Above, behind, far stretching and before ;

Or more mechanic artist represent
 By scale exact, in model, wood or clay,
 From blended colours also borrowing
 help, 250
 Some miniature of famous spots or
 things,—

St. Peter's Church; or, more aspiring aim,
 In microscopic vision, Rome herself;
 Or, haply, some choice rural haunt,—the Falls

Of Tivoli; and, high upon that steep, 255
 The Sibyl's mouldering Temple! every
 tree,

Villa, or cottage, lurking among rocks
 Throughout the landscape; tuft, stone, scratch minute—

All that the traveller sees when he is
 there. 259

Add to these exhibitions, mute and still,
 Others of wider scope, where living men,
 Music, and shifting pantomimic scenes,
 Diversified the allurements. Need I fear
 To mention by its name, as in degree,
 Lowest of these and humblest in attempt,
 Yet richly graced with honours of her own, Half-rural Sadler's Wells? Though at that
 time 267

Intolerant, as is the way of youth Unless itself be pleased, here more than
 once

Taking my seat, I saw (nor blush to add, With ample recompense) giants and dwarfs, 271

Clowns, conjurors, posture-masters, harlequins,

Amid the uproar of the rabblement, Perform their feats. Nor was it mean
 delight

To watch crude Nature work in untaught
 minds; 275

To note the laws and progress of belief;
 Though obstinate on this way, yet on that
 How willingly we travel, and how far!
 To have, for instance, brought upon the
 scene

The champion, Jack the Giant-killer: Lo!
 He dons his coat of darkness: on the
 stage 281

Walks, and achieves his wonders, from
 the eye

Of living Mortal covert, "as the moon Hid in her vacant interlunar cave."
 Delusion bold! and how can it be wrought?
 The garb he wears is black as death, the
 word 286
 "Invisible" flames forth upon his chest.

Here, too, were "forms and pressures of the time,"

Rough, bold, as Grecian comedy displayed
 When Art was young; dramas of living
 men, 290

And recent things yet warm with life;
 a sea-fight,

Shipwreck, or some domestic incident
 Divulged by Truth and magnified by
 Fame;

Such as the daring brotherhood of late Set forth, too serious theme for that light
 place— 295

I mean, O distant Friend! a story drawn From our own ground,—the Maid of Buttermere,—

And how, unfaithful to a virtuous wife
 Deserted and deceived, the Spoiler came And wooed the artless daughter of the
 hills, 300

And wedded her, in cruel mockery
 Of love and marriage bonds. These words
 to thee

Must needs bring back the moment when we first,

Ere the broad world rang with the maiden's
 name, 304

Beheld her serving at the cottage inn;
 Both stricken, as she entered or withdrew,
 With admiration of her modest mien
 And carriage, marked by unexampled
 grace.

We since that time not unfamiliarly Have seen her,—her discretion have observed, 310

Her just opinions, delicate reserve,
 Her patience, and humility of mind Unspoiled by commendation and the excess

Of public notice—an offensive light
 To a meek spirit suffering inwardly. 315

From this memorial tribute to my theme
 I was returning, when, with sundry forms

Commingled—shapes which met me in the
 way
 That we must tread—thy image rose
 again,
 Maiden of Buttermere! She lives in
 peace 320
 Upon the spot where she was born and reared;
 Without contamination doth she live
 In quietness, without anxiety:
 Beside the mountain-chapel, sleeps in
 earth
 Her new-born infant, fearless as a lamb
 That, thither driven from some unsheltered place, 326
 Rests underneath the little rock-like pile When storms are raging. Happy are they both—Mother and child!—These feelings, in themselves
 Trite, do yet scarcely seem so when I
 think 330
 On those ingenuous moments of our youth Ere we have learnt by use to slight the crimes
 And sorrows of the world. Those simple
 days
 Are now my theme; and, foremost of the scenes, 334
 Which yet survive in memory, appears
 One, at whose centre sate a lovely Boy,
 A sportive infant, who, for six months'
 space,
 Not more, had been of age to deal about Articulate prattle—Child as beautiful
 As ever clung around a mother's neck, 340
 Or father fondly gazed upon with pride.
 There, too, conspicuous for stature tall
 And large dark eyes, beside her infant
 stood
 The mother; but, upon her cheeks dif-
 fused,
 False tints too well accorded with the glare 345
 From play-house lustres thrown without reserve
 On every object near. The Boy had been The pride and pleasure of all lookers-on
 In whatsoever place, but seemed in this
 A sort of alien scattered from the clouds.
 Of lusty vigour, more than infantine 351

He was in limb, in cheek a summer rose
 Just three parts blown—a cottage-child—
 if e'er,
 By cottage-door on breezy mountain-side,
 Or in some sheltering vale, was seen a
 babe 355
 By Nature's gift so favoured. Upon a board
 Decked with refreshments had this child been placed,
His little stage in the vast theatre,
 And there he sate surrounded with a
 throng
 Of chance spectators, chiefly dissolute
 men 360
 And shameless women, treated and
 caressed;
 Ate, drank, and with the fruit and glasses
 played,
 While oaths and laughter and indecent
 speech
 Were rife about him as the songs of birds Contending after showers. The mother
 now 365
 Is fading out of memory, but I see
 The lovely Boy as I beheld him then Among the wretched and the falsely
 gay,
 Like one of those who walked with hair unsunged Amid the fiery furnace. Charms and spells 370
 Muttered on black and spiteful instigation
 Have stopped, as some believe, the kindliest growths.
 Ah, with how different spirit might a
 prayer
 Have been preferred, that this fair creature, checked
 By special privilege of Nature's love, 375 Should in his childhood be detained for ever!
 But with its universal freight the tide Hath rolled along, and this bright innocent,
 Mary! may now have lived till he could
 look
 With envy on thy nameless babe that sleeps, 380
 Beside the mountain-chapel, undisturbed.

Four rapid years had scarcely then been told

Since, travelling southward from our pastoral hills,

I heard, and for the first time in my life,
The voice of woman utter blasphemy—

Saw woman as she is, to open shame 386

Abandoned, and the pride of public vice ;

I shuddered, for a barrier seemed at once

Thrown in, that from humanity divorced

Humanity, splitting the race of man 390

In twain, yet leaving the same outward
form.

Distress of mind ensued upon the sight,
And ardent meditation. Later years

Brought to such spectacle a milder sad-
ness,

Feelings of pure commiseration, grief 395

For the individual and the overthrow

Of her soul's beauty ; farther I was then

But seldom led, or wished to go ; in truth

The sorrow of the passion stopped me
there.

But let me now, less moved, in order
take 400

Our argument. Enough is said to show

How casual incidents of real life,

Observed where pastime only had been
sought,

Outweighed, or put to flight, the set events

And measured passions of the stage, albeit 405

By Siddons trod in the fulness of her
power.

Yet was the theatre my dear delight ;

The very gilding, lamps and painted scrolls,

And all the mean upholstery of the place,

Wanted not animation, when the tide 410

Of pleasure ebbed but to return as fast

With the ever-shifting figures of the
scene,

Solemn or gay : whether some beauteous
dame

Advanced in radiance through a deep recess

Of thick entangled forest, like the moon

Opening the clouds ; or sovereign king, announced 416

With flourishing trumpet, came in full-blown state

Of the world's greatness, winding round with train

Of courtiers, banners, and a length of guards ;

Or captive led in abject weeds, and jingling 420

His slender manacles ; or romping girl

Bounced, leapt, and pawed the air ; or mumbling sire,

A scare-crow pattern of old age dressed up
In all the tatters of infirmity

All loosely put together, hobbled in, 425

Stumping upon a cane with which he
smites,

From time to time, the solid boards, and makes them

Prate somewhat loudly of the whereabouts

Of one so overloaded with his years.

But what of this ! the laugh, the grin, grimace, 430

The antics striving to outstrip each other,

Were all received, the least of them not
lost,

With an unmeasured welcome. Through the night,

Between the show, and many-headed
mass 434

Of the spectators, and each several nook

Filled with its fray or brawl, how eagerly And with what flashes, as it were, the
mind

Turned this way—that way ! sportive and alert

And watchful, as a kitten when at play,

While winds are eddying round her,
among straws 440

And rustling leaves. Enchanting age and sweet !

Romantic almost, looked at through a
space,

How small, of intervening years ! For
then,

Though surely no mean progress had been
made

In meditations holy and sublime, 445

Yet something of a girlish child-like gloss

Of novelty survived for scenes like these ;

Enjoyment haply handed down from
times

When at a country-playhouse, some rude barn Tricked out for that proud use, if I per-
chance 450
Caught, on a summer evening through a chink
In the old wall, an unexpected glimpse Of daylight, the bare thought of where I was Gladdened me more than if I had been led
Into a dazzling cavern of romance, 455
Crowded with Genii busy among works
Not to be looked at by the common sun.

The matter that detains us now may
seem,
To many, neither dignified enough Nor arduous, yet will not be scorned by
them, 460
Who, looking inward, have observed the
ties
That bind the perishable hours of life
Each to the other, and the curious props
By which the world of memory and
thought Exists and is sustained. More lofty
themes, 465
Such as at least do wear a prouder face, Solicit our regard; but when I think
Of these, I feel the imaginative power
Languish within me; even then it slept, When, pressed by tragic sufferings, the
heart 470
Was more than full; amid my sobs and
tears
It slept, even in the pregnant season of
youth.
For though I was most passionately moved
And yielded to all changes of the scene
With an obsequious promptness, yet the storm 475
Passed not beyond the suburbs of the
mind;
Save when realities of act and mien,
The incarnation of the spirits that move
In harmony amid the Poet's world,
Rose to ideal grandeur, or, called forth 480
By power of contrast, made me recognise,
As at a glance, the things which I had shaped,

And yet not shaped, had seen and scarcely
seen,
When, having closed the mighty Shak-speare's page,
I mused, and thought, and felt, in solitude. 485
Pass we from entertainments, that are such Professedly, to others titled higher,
Yet, in the estimate of youth at least,
More near akin to those than names imply,—
I mean the brawls of lawyers in their courts 490
Before the ermined judge, or that great
stage
Where senators, tongue-favoured men,
perform;
Admired and envied. Oh! the beating
heart,
When one among the prime of these rose
up,—
One, of whose name from childhood we had heard 495
Familiarly, a household term, like those,
The Bedfords, Glosters, Salisburys, of old Whom the fifth Harry talks of. Silence!
hush!
This is no trifler, no short-flighted wit,
No stammerer of a minute, painfully 500
Delivered. No! the Orator hath yoked
The Hours, like young Aurora, to his car:
Thrice welcome Presence! how can patience e'er
Grow weary of attending on a track That kindles with such glory! All are charmed, 505
Astonished; like a hero in romance,
He winds away his never-ending horn;
Words follow words, sense seems to follow
sense:
What memory and what logic! till the
strain 509
Transcendent, superhuman as it seemed,
Grows tedious even in a young man's ear.
Genius of Burke! forgive the pen seduced
By specious wonders, and too slow to tell
Of what the ingenuous, what bewildered
men,

Beginning to mistrust their boastful
 guides, 515
 And wise men, willing to grow wiser,
 caught,
 Rapt auditors! from thy most eloquent
 tongue—
 Now mute, for ever mute in the cold
 grave.
 I see him,—old, but vigorous in age,— Stand like an oak whose stag-horn branches start 520
 Out of its leafy brow, the more to awe
 The younger brethren of the grove. But some—
 While he forewarns, denounces, launches
 forth,
 Against all systems built on abstract
 rights,
 Keen ridicule; the majesty proclaims 525
 Of Institutes and Laws, hallowed by time;
 Declares the vital power of social ties Endear'd by Custom; and with high
 disdain,
 Exploding upstart Theory, insists Upon the allegiance to which men are
 born— 530
 Some—say at once a froward multitude—Murrur (for truth is hated, where not loved)
 As the winds fret within the Æolian cave, Galled by their monarch's chain. The times were big
 With ominous change, which, night by night, provoked 535 Keen struggles, and black clouds of passion raised;
 But memorable moments interven'd,
 When Wisdom, like the Goddess from Jove's brain,
 Broke forth in armour of resplendent
 words, Startling the Synod. Could a youth, and
 one 540
 In ancient story versed, whose breast had heaved
 Under the weight of classic eloquence,
 Sit, see, and hear, unthankful, uninspired?

 Nor did the Pulpit's oratory fail To achieve its higher triumph. Not un-
 felt 545

Were its admonishments, nor lightly
 heard
 The awful truths delivered thence by tongues
 Endowed with various power to search the soul;
 Yet ostentation, domineering, oft Poured forth harangues, how sadly out of
 place!— 550
 There have I seen a comely bachelor,
 Fresh from a toilette of two hours, ascend
 His rostrum, with seraphic glance look up,
 And, in a tone elaborately low Beginning, lead his voice through many a maze 555
 A minuet course; and, winding up his mouth,
 From time to time, into an orifice
 Most delicate, a lurking eyelet, small,
 And only not invisible, again
 Open it out, diffusing thence a smile 560
 Of rapt irradiation, exquisite.
 Meanwhile the Evangelists, Isaiah, Job,
 Moses, and he who penned, the other day,
 The Death of Abel, Shakspeare, and the Bard
 Whose genius spangled o'er a gloomy
 theme 565
 With fancies thick as his inspiring stars,
 And Ossian (doubt not—'tis the naked
 truth)
 Summoned from streamy Morven—each
 and all
 Would, in their turns, lend ornaments
 and flowers
 To entwine the crook of eloquence that helped 570
 This pretty Shepherd, pride of all the
 plains,
 To rule and guide his captivated flock.

 I glance but at a few conspicuous marks,
 Leaving a thousand others, that, in hall,
 Court, theatre, conventicle, or shop, 575
 In public room or private, park or street,
 Each fondly reared on his own pedestal,
 Looked out for admiration. Folly, vice,
 Extravagance in gesture, mien, and dress,
 And all the strife of singularity, 580
 Lies to the ear, and lies to every sense—

Of these, and of the living shapes they wear,
 There is no end. Such candidates for regard,
 Although well pleased to be where they were found,
 I did not hunt after, nor greatly prize, 585
 Nor made unto myself a secret boast
 Of reading them with quick and curious eye;
 But, as a common produce, things that are
 To-day, to-morrow will be, took of them
 Such willing note, as, on some errand bound 590
 That asks not speed, a traveller might bestow
 On sea-shells that bestrew the sandy beach,
 Or daisies swarming through the fields of June.

But foolishness and madness in parade,
 Though most at home in this their dear domain, 595
 Are scattered everywhere, no rarities,
 Even to the rudest novice of the Schools.
 Me, rather, it employed, to note, and keep
 In memory, those individual sights
 Of courage, or integrity, or truth, 600
 Or tenderness, which there, set off by foil, Appeared more touching. One will I select;
 A Father—for he bore that sacred name—
 Him saw I, sitting in an open square,
 Upon a corner-stone of that low wall, 605
 Wherein were fixed the iron pales that fenced
 A spacious grass-plot; there, in silence, sate
 This One Man, with a sickly babe outstretched
 Upon his knee, whom he had thither brought
 For sunshine, and to breathe the fresher air. 610
 Of those who passed, and me who looked at him,
 He took no heed; but in his brawny arms

(The Artificer was to the elbow bare,
 And from his work this moment had been stolen)
 He held the child, and, bending over it,
 As if he were afraid both of the sun 616
 And of the air, which he had come to seek,
 Eyed the poor babe with love unutterable.

As the black storm upon the mountaintop
 Sets off the sunbeam in the valley, so 620
 That huge fermenting mass of human-
 kind
 Serves as a solemn background, or relief,
 To single forms and objects, whence they
 draw,
 For feeling and contemplative regard, 624
 More than inherent liveliness and power.
 How oft, amid those overflowing streets,
 Have I gone forward with the crowd, and
 said
 Unto myself, "The face of every one
 That passes by me is a mystery!"
 Thus have I looked, nor ceased to look,
 oppressed 630
 By thoughts of what and whither, when
 and how,
 Until the shapes before my eyes became
 A second-sight procession, such as glides Over still mountains, or appears in
 dreams;
 And once, far-travelled in such mood,
 beyond 635
 The reach of common indication, lost
 Amid the moving pageant, I was smitten
 Abruptly, with the view (a sight not rare)
 Of a blind Beggar, who, with upright
 face,
 Stood, propped against a wall, upon his chest 640
 Wearing a written paper, to explain
 His story, whence he came, and who he was.
 Caught by the spectacle my mind turned
 round
 As with the might of waters; an apt type This label seemed of the utmost we can
 know, 645
 Both of ourselves and of the universe;

And, on the shape of that unmoving man,
His steadfast face and sightless eyes,
I gazed,
As if admonished from another world.

Though reared upon the base of outward things, 650
Structures like these the excited spirit mainly

Builds for herself; scenes different there
are,

Full-formed, that take, with small internal help,

Possession of the faculties,—the peace
That comes with night; the deep solemnity 655

Of nature's intermediate hours of rest,
When the great tide of human life stands
still;

The business of the day to come, unborn,
Of that gone by, locked up, as in the
grave;

The blended calmness of the heavens and
earth, 660

Moonlight and stars, and empty streets, and sounds

Unfrequent as in deserts; at late hours
Of winter evenings, when unwholesome
rains

Are falling hard, with people yet astir,
The feeble salutation from the voice 665

Of some unhappy woman, now and then Heard as we pass, when no one looks
about,

Nothing is listened to. But these, I fear,
Are falsely catalogued; things that are,
are not,

As the mind answers to them, or the
heart 670

Is prompt, or slow, to feel. What say you, then,

To times, when half the city shall break
out

Full of one passion, vengeance, rage, or
fear?

To executions, to a street on fire, Mobs, riots, or rejoicings? From these sights 675

Take one,—that ancient festival, the Fair, Holden where martyrs suffered in past
time,

And named of St. Bartholomew; there,
see

A work completed to our hands, that lays,

If any spectacle on earth can do, 680
The whole creative powers of man asleep!—

For once, the Muse's help will we implore,
And she shall lodge us, wafted on her
wings,

Above the press and danger of the crowd, Upon some showman's platform. What a shock . 685

For eyes and ears! what anarchy and
din,

Barbarian and infernal,—a phantasma,
Monstrous in colour, motion, shape, sight,
sound!

Below, the open space, through every nook

Of the wide area, twinkles, is alive 690
With heads; the midway region, and
above,

Is thronged with staring pictures and huge scrolls,

Dumb proclamations of the Prodigies;
With chattering monkeys dangling from their poles,

And children whirling in their roundabouts; 695

With those that stretch the neck and strain the eyes,

And crack the voice in rivalry, the crowd

Inviting; with buffoons against buffoons Grimacing, writhing, screaming,—him who grinds

The hurdy-gurdy, at the fiddle weaves, Rattles the salt-box, thumps the kettle-
drum, 701

And him who at the trumpet puffs his cheeks,

The silver-collared Negro with his timbrel, Equestrians, tumblers, women, girls, and boys,

Blue-breeched, pink-vested, with high-towering plumes.— 705

All moveables of wonder, from all parts,
Are here—Albinos, painted Indians,
Dwarfs,

The Horse of knowledge, and the learned Pig,

The Stone-eater, the man that swallows
fire,
Giants, Ventriloquists, the Invisible Girl,
The Bust that speaks and moves its goggling eyes, 711
The Wax-work, Clock-work, all the marvellous craft
Of modern Merlins, Wild Beasts, Puppet-
shows,
All out-o'-the-way, far-fetched, perverted
things,
All freaks of nature, all Promethean
thoughts 715
Of man, his dulness, madness, and their feats
All jumbled up together, to compose A Parliament of Monsters. Tents and Booths
Meanwhile, as if the whole were one vast mill,
Are vomiting, receiving on all sides, 720
Men, Women, three-years' Children, Babes in arms.

Oh, blank confusion! true epitome
Of what the mighty City is herself,
To thousands upon thousands of her sons,
Living amid the same perpetual whirl 725
Of trivial objects, melted and reduced
To one identity, by differences
That have no law, no meaning, and no
end—Oppression, under which even highest minds
Must labour, whence the strongest are not free. 730
But though the picture weary out the eye,
By nature an unmanageable sight,
It is not wholly so to him who looks
In steadiness, who hath among least
things 734
An under-sense of greatest; sees the parts
As parts, but with a feeling of the whole.
This, of all acquisitions, first awaits
On sundry and most widely different modes

Of education, nor with least delight On that through which I passed. Attention springs, 740
And comprehensiveness and memory flow,
From early converse with the works of
God
Among all regions; chiefly where appear
Most obviously simplicity and power.
Think, how the everlasting streams and
woods, 745
Stretched and still stretching far and wide, exalt
The roving Indian, on his desert sands:
What grandeur not unfelt, what pregnant
show
Of beauty, meets the sun-burnt Arab's
eye:
And, as the sea propels, from zone to zone, 750
Its currents; magnifies its shoals of life Beyond all compass; spreads, and sends aloft
Armies of clouds,—even so, its powers and aspects
Shape for mankind, by principles as fixed,
The views and aspirations of the soul 755
To majesty. Like virtue have the forms
Perennial of the ancient hills; nor less
The changeful language of their countenances
Quickens the slumbering mind, and aids
the thoughts,
However multitudinous, to move 760
With order and relation. This, if still,
As hitherto, in freedom I may speak,
Not violating any just restraint,
As may be hoped, of real modesty,—
This did I feel, in London's vast do-
main. 765
The Spirit of Nature was upon me there;
The soul of Beauty and enduring Life
Vouchsafed her inspiration, and diffused, Through meagre lines and colours, and
the press
Of self-destroying, transitory things, 770
Composure, and ennobling Harmony.

BOOK EIGHTH.

RETROSPECT.—LOVE OF NATURE LEADING TO LOVE OF MAN.

WHAT sounds are those, Helvellyn, that are heard
Up to thy summit, through the depth of
air
Ascending, as if distance had the power To make the sounds more audible? What crowd
Covers, or sprinkles o'er, yon village
green? 5
Crowd seems it, solitary hill! to thee,
Though but a little family of men, Shepherds and tillers of the ground—be-
times Assembled with their children and their wives,
And here and there a stranger inter-persed. 10
They hold a rustic fair—a festival,
Such as, on this side now, and now on
that,
Repeated through his tributary vales,
Helvellyn, in the silence of his rest,
Sees annually, if clouds towards either ocean 15
Blown from their favourite resting-place, or mists Dissolved, have left him an unshrouded
head.
Delightful day it is for all who dwell
In this secluded glen, and eagerly They give it welcome. Long ere heat of
noon, 20
From byre or field the kine were brought;
the sheep
Are penned in cotes; the chaffering is begun.
The heifer lows, uneasy at the voice
Of a new master; bleat the flocks aloud.
Booths are there none; a stall or two is
here; 25

A lame man or a blind, the one to beg,
The other to make music; hither, too,
From far, with basket, slung upon her
arm,
Of hawker's wares—books, pictures,
combs, and pins—
Some aged woman finds her way again, 30
Year after year, a punctual visitant!
There also stands a speech-maker by rote,
Pulling the strings of his boxed raree-
show;
And in the lapse of many years may come Prouder itinerant, mountebank, or he 35
Whose wonders in a covered wain lie hid.
But one there is, the loveliest of them
all,
Some sweet lass of the valley, looking out For gains, and who that sees her would not buy?
Fruits of her father's orchard are her
wares, 40
And with the ruddy produce she walks
round
Among the crowd, half pleased with, half ashamed
Of her new office, blushing restlessly.
The children now are rich, for the old to-
day
Are generous as the young; and, if content 45
With looking on, some ancient wedded
pair
Sit in the shade together, while they gaze,
"A cheerful smile unbends the wrinkled
brow,
The days departed start again to life,
And all the scenes of childhood reappear, Faint, but more tranquil, like the changing sun 51

To him who slept at noon and wakes at eve¹.”

Thus gaiety and cheerfulness prevail, Spreading from young to old, from old to
young,

And no one seems to want his share.—
Immense 55

Is the recess, the circumambient world
Magnificent, by which they are embraced:
They move about upon the soft green
turf:

How little they, they and their doings,
seem,

And all that they can further or obstruct!
Through utter weakness pitiably dear, 61
As tender infants are: and yet how great!

For all things serve them; them the morning light

Loves, as it glistens on the silent rocks;
And them the silent rocks, which now from high 65

Look down upon them; the reposing
clouds;

The wild brooks prattling from invisible
haunts;

And old Helvellyn, conscious of the stir Which animates this day their calm
abode.

With deep devotion, Nature, did I feel,
In that enormous City's turbulent world
Of men and things, what benefit I owed
To thee, and those domains of rural peace, Where to the sense of beauty first my
heart

Was opened; tract more exquisitely fair
Than that famed paradise of ten thousand
trees, 76

Or Gehol's matchless gardens, for delight
Of the Tartarian dynasty composed (Beyond that mighty wall, not fabulous, China's stupendous mound) by patient
toil 80

Of myriads and boon nature's lavish help;
There, in a clime from widest empire
chosen,

Fulfilling (could enchantment have done
more?)

A sumptuous dream of flowery lawns, with domes

Of pleasure sprinkled over, shady dells 85
For eastern monasteries, sunny mounts
With temples crested, bridges, gondolas, Rocks, dens, and groves of foliage taught
to melt

Into each other their obsequious hues,
Vanished and vanishing in subtle chase, 90
Too fine to be pursued; or standing forth
In no discordant opposition, strong

And gorgeous as the colours side by side Bedded among rich plumes of tropic
birds;

And mountains over all, embracing all; 95
And all the landscape, endlessly enriched
With waters running, falling, or asleep.

But lovelier far than this, the paradise
Where I was reared; in Nature's primitive gifts

Favoured no less, and more to every
sense 100

Delicious, seeing that the sun and sky,
The elements, and seasons as they change,
Do find a worthy fellow-labourer there—Man free, man working for himself, with choice

Of time, and place, and object; by his wants, 105

His comforts, native occupations, cares,
Cheerfully led to individual ends
Or social, and still followed by a train
Unwooded, unthought-of even—simplicity,
And beauty, and inevitable grace. 110

Yea, when a glimpse of those imperial
bowers

Would to a child be transport over-great,
When but a half-hour's roam through such
a place

Would leave behind a dance of images, That shall break in upon his sleep for weeks; 115

Even then the common haunts of the green earth,

And ordinary interests of man,
Which they embosom, all without regard As both may seem, are fastening on the
heart

Insensibly, each with the other's help. 120

¹ From the Malvern Hills of Joseph Cottle.

For me, when my affections first were led From kindred, friends, and playmates, to partake
 Love for the human creature's absolute
 self,
 That noticeable kindness of heart Sprang out of fountains, there abounding
 most, 125
 Where sovereign Nature dictated the tasks
 And occupations which her beauty
 adorned,
 And Shepherds were the men that pleased me first;
 Not such as Saturn ruled 'mid Latian
 wilds,
 With arts and laws so tempered, that their lives 130
 Left, even to us toiling in this late day,
 A bright tradition of the golden age;
 Not such as, 'mid Arcadian fastnesses Sequestered, handed down among themselves
 Felicity, in Grecian song renowned; 135 Nor such as—when an adverse fate had
 driven,
 From house and home, the courtly band whose fortunes Entered, with Shakspeare's genius, the wild woods
 Of Arden—amid sunshine or in shade
 Culled the best fruits of Time's uncounted
 hours, 140
 Ere Phoebe sighed for the false Ganymede;
 Or there where Perdita and Florizel Together danced, Queen of the feast, and
 King;
 Nor such as Spenser fabled. True it is,
 That I had heard (what he perhaps had
 seen) 145
 Of maids at sunrise bringing in from far Their May-bush, and along the street in flocks
 Parading with a song of taunting rhymes, Aimed at the laggards slumbering within doors;
 Had also heard, from those who yet remembered, 150
 Tales of the May-pole dance, and wreaths that decked

Porch, door-way, or kirk-pillar; and of youths,
 Each with his maid, before the sun was
 up,
 By annual custom, issuing forth in troops,
 To drink the waters of some sainted well,
 And hang it round with garlands. Love survives; 156
 But, for such purpose, flowers no longer
 grow:
 The times, too sage, perhaps too proud, have dropped
 These lighter graces; and the rural ways
 And manners which my childhood looked upon 160
 Were the unluxuriant produce of a life
 Intent on little but substantial needs,
 Yet rich in beauty, beauty that was felt.
 But images of danger and distress,
 Man suffering among awful Powers and
 Forms; 165
 Of this I heard, and saw enough to make Imagination restless; nor was free Myself from frequent perils; nor were tales
 Wanting,—the tragedies of former times, Hazards and strange escapes, of which
 the rocks 170
 Immutable, and everflowing streams,
 Where'er I roamed, were speaking monuments.
 Smooth life had flock and shepherd in
 old time,
 Long springs and tepid winters, on the banks
 Of delicate Galesus; and no less 175
 Those scattered along Adria's myrtle
 shores:
 Smooth life had herdsman, and his snow-white herd
 To triumphs and to sacrificial rites
 Devoted, on the inviolable stream Of rich Clitumnus; and the goat-herd
 lived 180
 As calmly, underneath the pleasant brows
 Of cool Lucretilis, where the pipe was
 heard
 Of Pan, Invisible God, thrilling the rocks
 With tutelary music, from all harm
 The fold protecting. I myself, mature

In manhood then, have seen a pastoral tract 186
 Like one of these, where Fancy might run wild,
 Though under skies less generous, less serene:
 There, for her own delight had Nature framed
 A pleasure-ground, diffused a fair expanse 190
 Of level pasture, islanded with groves
 And banked with woody risings; but the Plain Endless, here opening widely out, and there
 Shut up in lesser lakes or beds of lawn
 And intricate recesses, creek or bay 195
 Sheltered within a shelter, where at large
 The shepherd strays, a rolling hut his home.
 Thither he comes with spring-time, there abides
 All summer, and at sunrise ye may hear
 His flageolet to liquid notes of love 200
 Attuned, or sprightly fife resounding far.
 Nook is there none, nor tract of that vast space
 Where passage opens, but the same shall have
 In turn its visitant, telling there his hours
 In unlaborious pleasure, with no task
 More toilsome than to carve a beechen bowl 206
 For spring or fountain, which the traveller finds,
 When through the region he pursues at will His devious course. A glimpse of such sweet life
 I saw when, from the melancholy walls
 Of Goslar, once imperial, I renewed 211
 My daily walk along that wide campaign,
 That, reaching to her gates, spreads east and west,
 And northwards, from beneath the mountainous verge
 Of the Hercynian forest. Yet, hail to you 215
 Moors, mountains, headlands, and ye hollow vales,
 Ye long deep channels for the Atlantic's voice, Powers of my native region! Ye that seize
 The heart with firmer grasp! Your snows and streams
 Ungovernable, and your terrifying winds,
 That howl so dismally for him who treads 221
 Companionless your awful solitudes!
 There, 'tis the shepherd's task the winter long
 To wait upon the storms: of their approach
 Sagacious, into sheltering coves he drives
 His flock, and thither from the homestead bears 226
 A toilsome burden up the craggy ways,
 And deals it out, their regular nourishment Strewn on the frozen snow. And when the spring
 Looks out, and all the pastures dance with lambs, 230
 And when the flock, with warmer weather, climbs Higher and higher, him his office leads To watch their goings, whatsoever track
 The wanderers choose. For this he quits his home
 At day-spring, and no sooner doth the sun 235
 Begin to strike him with a fire-like heat,
 Than he lies down upon some shining rock,
 And breakfasts with his dog. When they have stolen,
 As is their wont, a pittance from strict time,
 For rest not needed or exchange of love,
 Then from his couch he starts; and now his feet 241
 Crush out a livelier fragrance from the flowers
 Of lowly thyme, by Nature's skill entwrought
 In the wild turf: the lingering dews of morn
 Smoke round him, as from hill to hill he hies, 245
 His staff protending like a hunter's spear,

Or by its aid leaping from crag to crag,
And o'er the brawling beds of unbridged
streams.

Philosophy, methinks, at Fancy's call, Might deign to follow him through what he does 250

Or sees in his day's march; himself he feels,

In those vast regions where his service
lies,

A freeman, wedded to his life of hope
And hazard, and hard labour inter-
changed

With that majestic indolence so dear 255
To native man. A rambling schoolboy, thus

I felt his presence in his own domain,
As of a lord and master, or a power,
Or genius, under Nature, under God,
Presiding; and severest solitude 260 Had more commanding looks when he was there.

When up the lonely brooks on rainy days
Angling I went, or trod the trackless hills
By mists bewildered, suddenly mine eyes Have glanced upon him distant a few
steps, 265

In size a giant, stalking through thick fog,

His sheep like Greenland bears; or, as he stepped

Beyond the boundary line of some hill-shadow,

His form hath flashed upon me, glorified
By the deep radiance of the setting sun:
Or him have I descried in distant sky, 271
A solitary object and sublime,

Above all height! like an aerial cross Stationed alone upon a spiry rock Of the Chartreuse, for worship. Thus was man 275

Ennobled outwardly before my sight,
And thus my heart was early introduced
To an unconscious love and reverence
Of human nature; hence the human form
To me became an index of delight, 280
Of grace and honour, power and worthi-
ness.

Meanwhile this creature—spiritual almost
As those of books, but more exalted far;
Far more of an imaginative form

Than the gay Corin of the groves, who lives 285

For his own fancies, or to dance by the
hour,

In coronal, with Phyllis in the midst—
Was, for the purposes of kind, a man
With the most common; husband, father;
learned,

Could teach, admonish; suffered with the
rest 290

From vice and folly, wretchedness and
fear;

Of this I little saw, cared less for it,
But something must have felt.

Call ye these appearances—
Which I beheld of shepherds in my
youth,

This sanctity of Nature given to man—
A shadow, a delusion, ye who pore 296
On the dead letter, miss the spirit of
things;

Whose truth is not a motion or a shape
Instinct with vital functions, but a block Or waxen image which yourselves have
made, 300

And ye adore! But blessed be the God
Of Nature and of Man that this was so;
That men before my inexperienced eyes
Did first present themselves thus purified,
Removed, and to a distance that was fit:

And so we all of us in some degree 306
Are led to knowledge, wheresoever led,
And howsoever; were it otherwise,

And we found evil fast as we find good
In our first years, or think that it is found,
How could the innocent heart bear, up and live! 311

But doubly fortunate my lot; not here
Alone, that something of a better life Perhaps was round me than it is the privilege

Of most to move in, but that first I looked 315

At man through objects that were great or fair;

First communed with him by their help.
And thus

Was founded a sure safeguard and defence

Against the weight of meanness, selfish
cares,

Coarse manners, vulgar passions, that beat in 320

On all sides from the ordinary world
In which we traffic. Starting from this point

I had my face turned toward the truth,
began

With an advantage furnished by that
kind

Of prepossession, without which the soul Receives no knowledge that can bring forth good, 326

No genuine insight ever comes to her.
From the restraint of over-watchful eyes
Preserved, I moved about, year after year, Happy, and now most thankful that my
walk 330

Was guarded from too early intercourse
With the deformities of crowded life,
And those ensuing laughters and con-tempths,

Self-pleasing, which, if we would wish to think

With a due reverence on earth's rightful
lord, 335

Here placed to be the inheritor of
heaven,

Will not permit us; but pursue the mind,
That to devotion willingly would rise,
Into the temple and the temple's heart.

Yet deem not, Friend! that human kind with me 340

Thus early took a place pre-eminent;
Nature herself was, at this unripe time,
But secondary to my own pursuits
And animal activities, and all Their trivial pleasures; and when these had drooped 345

And gradually, expired, and Nature,
prized

For her own sake, became my joy, even
then—

And upwards through late youth, until not less

Than two-and-twenty summers had been told—

Was Man in my affections and regards
Subordinate to her, her visible forms 351

And viewless agencies: a passion, she,
A rapture often, and immediate love

Ever at hand; he, only a delight
Occasional, an accidental grace, 355

His hour being not yet come. Far less had then

The inferior creatures, beast or bird, attuned

My spirit to that gentleness of love (Though they had long been carefully observed), 359

Won from me those minute obeisances
Of tenderness, which I may number now With my first blessings. Nevertheless, on these

The light of beauty did not fall in vain,
Or grandeur circumfuse them to no end.

But when that first poetic faculty 365

Of plain Imagination and severe,
No longer a mute influence of the soul,
Ventured, at some rash Muse's earnest
call,

To try her strength among harmonious
words;

And to book-notions and the rules of art
Did knowingly conform itself; there
came 371

Among the simple shapes of human life
A wilfulness of fancy and conceit:
And Nature and her objects beautified These fictions, as in some sort, in their
turn, 375

They burnished her. From touch of this new power

Nothing was safe: the elder-tree that grew

Beside the well-known charnel-house had
then

A dismal look; the yew-tree had its ghost, 379

That took his station there for ornament:
The dignities of plain occurrence then Were tasteless, and truth's golden mean, a point

Where no sufficient pleasure could be
found.

Then, if a widow, staggering with the blow

Of her distress, was known to have turned her steps 385

To the cold grave in which her husband
slept,

One night, or haply more than one,
 through pain
 Or half-insensate impotence of mind,
 The fact was caught at greedily, and
 there
 She must be visitant the whole year
 through, 390
 Wetting the turf with never-ending tears.

Through quaint obliquities I might
 pursue
 These cravings; when the foxglove, one
 by one,
 Upwards through every stage of the tall
 stem, 394
 Had shed beside the public way its bells,
 And stood of all dismantled, save the last Left at the tapering ladder's top, that seemed
 To bend as doth a slender blade of grass Tipped with a rain-drop, Fancy loved to
 seat,
 Beneath the plant despoiled, but crested
 still 400
 With this last relic, soon itself to fall,
 Some vagrant mother, whose arch little ones,
 All unconcerned by her dejected plight, Laughed as with rival eagerness their
 hands
 Gathered the purple cups that round them lay, 405
 Strewing the turf's green slope.

A diamond light

(Whene'er the summer sun, declining, smote
 A smooth rock wet with constant springs)
 was seen
 Sparkling from out a copse-clad bank that rose Fronting our cottage. Oft beside the hearth 410
 Seated, with open door, often and long
 Upon this restless lustre have I gazed,
 That made my fancy restless as itself.
 'Twas now for me a burnished silver
 shield 414
 Suspended over a knight's tomb, who lay Inglorious, buried in the dusky wood:
 An entrance now into some magic cave
 Or palace built by fairies of the rock;

Nor could I have been bribed to disen-chant
 The spectacle, by visiting the spot. 420
 Thus wilful Fancy, in no hurtful mood, Engrafted far-fetched shapes on feelings
 bred
 By pure Imagination: busy Power
 She was, and with her ready pupil
 turned Instinctively to human passions, then Least understood. Yet, 'mid the fervent swarm 426
 Of these vagaries, with an eye so rich
 As mine was through the bounty of a grand
 And lovely region, I had forms distinct To steady me: each airy thought revolved 430
 Round a substantial centre, which at
 once
 Incited it to motion, and controlled.
 I did not pine like one in cities bred,
 As was thy melancholy lot, dear Friend!
 Great Spirit as thou art, in endless
 dreams 435
 Of sickliness, disjoining, joining, things Without the light of knowledge. Where the harm,
 If, when the woodman languished with disease
 Induced by sleeping nightly on the
 ground 439
 Within his sod-built cabin, Indian-wise,
 I called the pangs of disappointed love,
 And all the sad etcetera of the wrong,
 To help him to his grave? Meanwhile the
 man,
 If not already from the woods retired
 To die at home, was haply as I knew, Withering by slow degrees, 'mid gentle airs, 446
 Birds, running streams, and hills so beautiful
 On golden evenings, while the charcoal
 pile
 Breathed up its smoke, an image of his ghost
 Or spirit that full soon must take her
 flight. 450
 Nor shall we not be tending towards that point

Of sound humanity to which our Tale
 Leads, though by sinuous ways, if here
 I show
 How Fancy, in a season when she wove Those slender cords, to guide the unconscious Boy. 455
 For the Man's sake, could feed at Nature's call
 Some pensive musings which might well beseeem Maturer years.

A grove there is whose boughs
 Stretch from the western marge of Thurston-mere,
 With length of shade so thick, that whoso
 glides 460
 Along the line of low-roofed water, moves As in a cloister. Once—while, in that
 shade
 Loitering, I watched the golden beams of
 light
 Flung from the setting sun, as they reposed
 In silent beauty on the naked ridge 465
 Of a high eastern hill—thus flowed my
 thoughts
 In a pure stream of words fresh from the
 heart:
 Dear native Regions, wheresoe'er shall
 close
 My mortal course, there will I think on
 you; 469
 Dying, will cast on you a backward look;
 Even as this setting sun (albeit the Vale
 Is no where touched by one memorial
 gleam)
 Doth with the fond remains of his last
 power
 Still linger, and a farewell lustre sheds
 On the dear mountain-tops where first he
 rose. 475

Enough of humble arguments; recall,
 My Song! those high emotions which thy
 voice
 Has heretofore made known; that bursting forth
 Of sympathy, inspiring and inspired,
 When everywhere a vital pulse was felt,
 And all the several frames of things, like
 stars, 481

Through every magnitude distinguish-able,
 Shone mutually indebted, or half lost
 Each in the other's blaze, a galaxy
 Of life and glory. In the midst stood
 Man, 485
 Outwardly, inwardly contemplated,
 As, of all visible natures, crown, though
 born
 Of dust, and kindred to the worm; a
 Being,
 Both in perception and discernment, first
 In every capability of rapture, 490 Through the divine effect of power and
 love;
 As, more than anything we know, instinct
 With godhead, and, by reason and by
 will,
 Acknowledging dependency sublime.

Ere long, the lonely mountains left,
 I moved, 495
 Begirt, from day to day, with temporal shapes
 Of vice and folly thrust upon my view,
 Objects of sport, and ridicule, and scorn,
 Manners and characters discriminate,
 And little bustling passions that eclipse,
 As well they might, the impersonated
 thought, 501
 The idea, or abstraction of the kind.

An Idler among academic bowers,
 Such was my new condition, as at large
 Has been set forth; yet here the vulgar
 light 505
 Of present, actual, superficial life,
 Gleaming through colouring of other
 times,
 Old usages and local privilege,
 Was welcome, softened, if not solemnised.
 This notwithstanding, being brought more near 510
 To vice and guilt, forerunning wretched-
 ness,
 I trembled,—thought, at times, of human
 life
 With an indefinite terror and dismay,
 Such as the storms and angry elements
 Had bred in me; but gloomier far, a dim

Analogy to uproar and misrule,
Disquiet, danger, and obscurity. 516

It might be told (but wherefore speak
of things

Common to all?) that, seeing, I was led Gravely to ponder—judging between good
And evil, not as for the mind's delight

But for her guidance—one who was to act,
As sometimes to the best of feeble means
I did, by human sympathy impelled;

And, through dislike and most offensive
pain, 525

Was to the truth conducted; of this
faith

Never forsaken, that, by acting well,
And understanding, I should learn to love
The end of life, and everything we know.

Grave Teacher, stern Preceptress! for at times 530

Thou canst put on an aspect most severe;
London, to thee I willingly return.

Erewhile my verse played idly with the
flowers

Enwrought upon thy mantle; satisfied
With that amusement, and a simple look

Of child-like inquisition now and then Cast upwards on thy countenance, to detect

Some inner meanings which might harbour there.

But how could I in mood so light indulge, Keeping such fresh remembrance of the
day, 540

When, having thridded the long labyrinth
Of the suburban villages, I first

Entered thy vast dominion? On the roof
Of an itinerant vehicle I sate,

With vulgar men about me, trivial forms Of houses, pavement, streets, of men and
things,— 546

Mean shapes on every side: but, at the instant,

When to myself it fairly might be said,
The threshold now is overpast, (how strange

That aught external to the living mind
Should have such mighty sway! yet so it
was), 551

A weight of ages did at once descend

Upon my heart; no thought embodied,
no

Distinct remembrances, but weight and
power,—

Power growing under weight: alas! I
feel 555

That I am trifling: 'twas a moment's pause,—

All that took place within me came and
went

As in a moment; yet with Time it dwells,
And grateful memory, as a thing divine.

The curious traveller, who, from open
day, 560

Hath passed with torches into some huge
cave,

The Grotto of Antiparos, or the Den
In old time haunted by that Danish Witch,

Yordas, he looks around and sees the vault

Widening on all sides; sees, or thinks he sees, 565

Erelong, the massy roof above his head,
That instantly unsettles and recedes,—

Substance and shadow, light and darkness, all

Commingled, making up a canopy
Of shapes and forms and tendencies to
shape 570

That shift and vanish, change and interchange

Like spectres,—ferment silent and sublime!

That after a short space works less and
less,

Till, every effort, every motion gone,
The scene before him stands in perfect
view 575

Exposed, and lifeless as a written book!—
But let him pause awhile, and look again,
And a new quickening shall succeed, at first

Beginning timidly, then creeping fast,
Till the whole cave, so late a senseless
mass, 580

Busies the eye with images and forms Boldly assembled, — here is shadowed
forth

From the projections, wrinkles, cavities,

A variegated landscape,—there the shape
Of some gigantic warrior clad in mail, 585
The ghostly semblance of a hooded monk, Veiled nun, or pilgrim resting on his
staff :

Strange congregation ! yet not slow to meet

Eyes that perceive through minds that can inspire.

Even in such sort had I at first been
moved, 590

Nor otherwise continued to be moved,
As I explored the vast metropolis,

Fount of my country's destiny and the world's ;

That great emporium, chronicle at once And burial-place of passions, and their
home 595

Imperial, their chief living residence.

With strong sensations teeming as it did

Of past and present, such a place must
needs

Have pleased me, seeking knowledge at that time

Far less than craving power ; yet knowledge came, 600

Sought or unsought, and influxes of
power

Came, of themselves, or at her call derived

In fits of kindest apprehensiveness,
From all sides, when whate'er was in itself

Capacious found, or seemed to find, in
me 605

A correspondent amplitude of mind ;
Such is the strength and glory of our
youth !

The human nature unto which I felt That I belonged, and revered with
love,

Was not a punctual presence, but a spirit Diffused through time and space, with aid derived 611

Of evidence from monuments, erect, Prostrate, or leaning towards their common rest

In earth, the widely scattered wreck
sublime

Of vanished nations, or more clearly
drawn 615
From books and what they picture and record.

'Tis true, the history of our native land,
With those of Greece compared and popular Rome,

And in our high-wrought modern narratives

Stript of their harmonising soul, the life
Of manners and familiar incidents, 621

Had never much delighted me. And
less

Than other intellects had mine been used
To lean upon extrinsic circumstance

Of record or tradition ; but a sense 625
Of what in the Great City had been done

And suffered, and was doing, suffering,
still,

Weighed with me, could support the test
of thought ;

And, in despite of all that had gone by,
Or was departing never to return, 630

There I conversed with majesty and
power

Like independent natures. Hence the
place

Was thronged with impregnations like the Wilds

In which my early feelings had been nursed—

Bare hills and valleys, full of caverns,
rocks, 635

And audible seclusions, dashing lakes,
Echoes and waterfalls, and pointed crags

That into music touch the passing wind.
Here then my young imagination found

No uncongenial element ; could here 640
Among new objects serve or give command,

Even as the heart's occasions might require,

To forward reason's else too scrupulous march.

The effect was, still more elevated views
Of human nature. Neither vice nor guilt,

Debasement undergone by body or mind,
Nor all the misery forced upon my sight,

Misery not lightly passed, but sometimes
scanned 648

Most feelingly, could overthrow my trust
 In what we may become; induce belief
 That I was ignorant, had been falsely
 taught, 651
 A solitary, who with vain conceits
 Had been inspired, and walked about in dreams.
 From those sad scenes when meditation
 turned,
 Lo! everything that was indeed divine
 Retained its purity inviolate, 656
 Nay brighter shone, by this portentous
 gloom
 Set off; such opposition as aroused
 The mind of Adam, yet in Paradise Though fallen from bliss, when in the East he saw 660 Darkness ere day's mid course, and morning light
 More orient in the western cloud, that drew
 O'er the blue firmament a radiant white, Descending slow with something heavenly fraught. 664

Add also, that among the multitudes
 Of that huge city, oftentimes was seen Affectingly set forth, more than elsewhere

Is possible, the unity of man,
 One spirit over ignorance and vice Predominant in good and evil hearts;
 One sense for moral judgments, as one
 eye 671
 For the sun's light. The soul when smitten thus
 By a sublime idea, whencesoe'er
 Vouchsafed for union or communion,
 feeds
 On the pure bliss, and takes her rest with
 God. 675

Thus from a very early age, O Friend!
 My thoughts by slow gradations had been drawn
 To human-kind, and to the good and ill
 Of human life: Nature had led me on;
 And oft amid the "busy hum" I seemed
 To travel independent of her help, 681
 As if I had forgotten her; but no,
 The world of human-kind outweighed not hers
 In my habitual thoughts; the scale of
 love,
 Though filling daily, still was light, compared 685
 With that in which her mighty objects
 lay.

BOOK NINTH.

RESIDENCE IN FRANCE.

EVEN as a river,—partly (it might seem) Yielding to old remembrances, and swayed
 In part by fear to shape a way direct,
 That would engulf him soon in the ravenous sea—
 Turns, and will measure back his course, far back, 5
 Seeking the very regions which he crossed
 In his first outset; so have we, my Friend!
 Turned and returned with intricate de-
 lay.

Or as a traveller, who has gained the brow
 Of some aerial Down, while there he halts
 For breathing-time, is tempted to review
 The region left behind him; and, if aught 12
 Deserving notice have escaped regard,
 Or been regarded with too careless eye, Strives, from that height, with one and yet one more 15
 Last look, to make the best amends he
 may:
 So have we lingered. Now we start afresh

With courage, and new hope risen on our toil.

Fair greetings to this shapeless eagerness, Whene'er it comes! needful in work so
long, 20

Thrice needful to the argument which
now

Awaits us! Oh, how much unlike the
past!

Free as a colt at pasture on the hill,
I ranged at large, through London's wide
domain,

Month after month. Obscurely did I
live, 25

Not seeking frequent intercourse with
men,

By literature, or elegance, or rank, Distinguished. Scarcely was a year thus spent

Ere I forsook the crowded solitude, 9

With less regret for its luxurious pomp,
And all the nicely-guarded shows of art,
Than for the humble book-stalls in the streets,

Exposed to eye and hand where'er I
turned.

France lured me forth; the realm that I had crossed

So lately, journeying toward the snow-clad Alps. 35

But now, relinquishing the scrip and
staff,

And all enjoyment which the summer sun
Sheds round the steps of those who meet
the day

With motion constant as his own, I went Prepared to sojourn in a pleasant town,
Washed by the current of the stately Loire. 41

Through Paris lay my readiest course,
and there

Sojourning a few days, I visited
In haste, each spot of old or recent fame,
The latter chiefly; from the field of Mars
Down to the suburbs of St. Antony, 46
And from Mont Martre southward to the Dome

Of Geneviève. In both her clamorous Halls,

The National Synod and the Jacobins,
I saw the Revolutionary Power 50 Toss like a ship at anchor, rocked by
storms;

The Arcades I traversed, in the Palace huge

Of Orleans; coasted round and round the line

Of Tavern, Brothel, Gaming-house, and Shop,

Great rendezvous of worst and best, the
walk 55

Of all who had a purpose, or had not;

I stared and listened, with a stranger's
ears,

To Hawkers and Haranguers, hubbub
wild!

And hissing Factionists with ardent eyes,
In knots, or pairs, or single. Not a look Hope takes, or Doubt or Fear is forced to wear, 61

But seemed there present; and I scanned
them all,

Watched every gesture uncontrollable,
Of anger, and vexation, and despite,
All side by side, and struggling face to
face, 65

With gaiety and dissolute idleness.

Where silent zephyrs sported with the dust

Of the Bastille, I sate in the open sun,
And from the rubbish gathered up a stone,
And pocketed the relic, in the guise 70
Of an enthusiast; yet, in honest truth,
I looked for something that I could not
find,

Affecting more emotion than I felt;
For 'tis most certain, that these various sights,

However potent their first shock, with
me 75

Appeared to recompense the traveller's
pains

Less than the painted Magdalene of Le Brun,

A beauty exquisitely wrought, with hair Dishevelled, gleaming eyes, and rueful
cheek

Pale and bedropped with everflowing
tears. 80

But hence to my more permanent abode
 I hasten; there, by novelties in speech, Domestic manners, customs, gestures,
 looks,
 And all the attire of ordinary life, Attention was engrossed; and, thus amused, 85
 I stood, 'mid those concussions, unconcerned,
 Tranquil almost, and careless as a flower Glased in a greenhouse, or a parlour shrub
 That spreads its leaves in unmolested
 peace,
 While every bush and tree, the country
 through, 90
 Is shaking to the roots: indifference this Which may seem strange: but I was unprepared
 With needful knowledge, had abruptly
 passed
 Into a theatre, whose stage was filled
 And busy with an action far advanced.
 Like others, I had skimmed, and sometimes read 96
 With care, the master-pamphlets of the
 day;
 Nor wanted such half-insight as grew
 wild
 Upon that meagre soil, helped out by talk 99
 And public news; but having never seen
 A chronicle that might suffice to show Whence the main organs of the public
 power
 Had sprung, their transmigrations, when
 and how
 Accomplished, giving thus unto events
 A form and body; all things were to me
 Loose and disjointed, and the affections
 left 106
 Without a vital interest. At that time,
 Moreover, the first storm was overblown,
 And the strong hand of outward violence
 Locked up in quiet. For myself, I fear
 Now in connection with so great a theme
 To speak (as I must be compelled to do)
 Of one so unimportant; night by night
 Did I frequent the formal haunts of men,
 Whom, in the city, privilege of birth 115
 Sequestered from the rest, societies

Polished in arts, and in punctilio versed; Whence, and from deeper causes, all dis-
 course
 Of good and evil of the time was shunned
 With scrupulous care; but these restrictions soon 120
 Proved tedious, and I gradually withdrew
 Into a noisier world, and thus ere long Became a patriot; and my heart was all Given to the people, and my love was theirs.
 A band of military Officers, 125
 Then stationed in the city, were the chief Of my associates: some of these wore swords
 That had been seasoned in the wars, and
 all
 Were men well-born; the chivalry of France.
 In age and temper differing, they had yet
 One spirit ruling in each heart; alike 131
 (Save only one, hereafter to be named)
 Were bent upon undoing what was done:
 This was their rest and only hope; therewith
 No fear had they of bad becoming worse,
 For worst to them was come; nor would have stirred, 136
 Or deemed it worth a moment's thought to stir,
 In anything, save only as the act Looked thitherward. One, reckoning by
 years,
 Was in the prime of manhood, and ere-
 while 140
 He had sate lord in many tender hearts;
 Though heedless of such honours now,
 and changed:
 His temper was quite mastered by the
 times,
 And they had blighted him, had eaten
 away
 The beauty of his person, doing wrong
 Alike to body and to mind: his port, 146
 Which once had been erect and open, now
 Was stooping and contracted, and a face,
 Endowed by Nature with her fairest gifts
 Of symmetry and light and bloom, expressed, 150

As much as any that was ever seen,
A ravage out of season, made by thoughts Unhealthy and vexatious. With the
hour,

That from the press of Paris duly brought Its freight of public news, the fever
came, 155

A punctual visitant, to shake this man, Disarmed his voice and fanned his yellow
cheek

Into a thousand colours; while he read, Or mused, his sword was haunted by his
touch

Continually, like an uneasy place 160
In his own body. 'Twas in truth an hour
Of universal ferment; mildest men
Were agitated; and commotions, strife
Of passions and opinions, filled the walls
Of peaceful houses with unquiet sounds.
The soil of common life, was, at that
time, 166

Too hot to tread upon. Oft said I then,
And not then only, "What a mockery
this

Of history, the past and that to come!
Now do I feel how all men are deceived, Reading of nations and their works, in
faith, 171

Faith given to vanity and emptiness;
Oh! laughter for the page that would reflect

To future times the face of what now is!"
The land all swarmed with passion, like
a plain 175

Devoured by locusts,—Carra, Gorsas,— add

A hundred other names, forgotten now, Nor to be heard of more; yet, they were
powers,

Like earthquakes, shocks repeated day
by day,

And felt through every nook of town and
field. 180

Such was the state of things. Meanwhile the chief

Of my associates stood prepared for flight
To augment the band of emigrants in arms

Upon the borders of the Rhine, and leagued

With foreign foes mustered for instant
war. 185

This was their undisguised intent, and
they

Were waiting with the whole of their desires

The moment to depart.

An Englishman,
Born in a land whose very name appeared
To license some unruliness of mind; 190
A stranger, with youth's further privilege,
And the indulgence, that a half-learn't
speech

Wins from the courteous; I, who had been else

Shunned and not tolerated, freely lived With these defenders of the Crown, and talked, 195

And heard their notions; nor did they disdain

The wish to bring me over to their cause.

But though untaught by thinking or by
books

To reason well of polity or law,
And nice distinctions, then on every
tongue, 200

Of natural rights and civil; and to acts
Of nations and their passing interests, (If with unworldly ends and aims compared)

Almost indifferent, even the historian's
tale 204

Prizing but little otherwise than I prized
Tales of the poets, as it made the heart Beat high, and filled the fancy with fair
forms,

Old heroes and their sufferings and their
deeds;

Yet in the regal sceptre, and the pomp
Of orders and degrees, I nothing found
Then, or had ever, even in crudest youth,
That dazzled me, but rather what I
mourned

And ill could brook, beholding that the best

Ruled not, and feeling that they ought to rule.

For, born in a poor district, and which
yet 215

Retaineth more of ancient homeliness,

Than any other nook of English ground,
 It was my fortune scarcely to have seen,
 Through the whole tenour of my schoolday time,
 The face of one, who, whether boy or
 man, 220
 Was vested with attention or respect Through claims of wealth or blood; nor was it least
 Of many benefits, in later years
 Derived from academic institutes
 And rules, that they held something up to view 225
 Of a Republic, where all stood thus far Upon equal ground; that we were brothers all
 In honour, as in one community, Scholars and gentlemen; where, further-
 more,
 Distinction open lay to all that came, 230
 And wealth and titles were in less esteem Than talents, worth, and prosperous industry.
 Add unto this, subservience from the first
 To presences of God's mysterious power
 Made manifest in Nature's sovereignty,
 And fellowship with venerable books, 236
 To sanction the proud workings of the
 soul,
 And mountain liberty. It could not be
 But that one tutored thus should look with awe
 Upon the faculties of man, receive 240
 Gladly the highest promises, and hail,
 As best, the government of equal rights
 And individual worth. And hence, O
 Friend!
 If at the first great outbreak I rejoiced Less than might well befit my youth, the
 cause 245
 In part lay here, that unto me the events Seemed nothing out of nature's certain
 course,
 A gift that was come rather late than
 soon.
 No wonder, then, if advocates like these,
 Inflamed by passion, blind with prejudice, 250
 And stung with injury, at this riper day,
 Were impotent to make my hopes put on

The shape of theirs, my understanding bend
 In honour to their honour: zeal, which
 yet 254
 Had slumbered, now in opposition burst
 Forth like a Polar summer: every word
 They uttered was a dart, by counter-
 winds
 Blown back upon themselves; their reason
 seemed
 Confusion-stricken by a higher power Than human understanding, their dis-
 course 260
 Maimed, spiritless: and, in their weakness strong,
 I triumphed.
 Meantime, day by day, the roads
 Were crowded with the bravest youth of France,
 And all the promptest of her spirits,
 linked
 In gallant soldiership, and posting on To meet the war upon her frontier
 bounds. 266
 Yet at this very moment do tears start
 Into mine eyes: I do not say I weep—
 I wept not then,—but tears have dimmed
 my sight,
 In memory of the farewells of that time,
 Domestic severings, female fortitude 271
 At dearest separation, patriot love
 And self-devotion, and terrestrial hope,
 Encouraged with a martyr's confidence;
 Even files of strangers merely seen but
 once, 275
 And for a moment, men from far with
 sound
 Of music, martial tunes, and banners
 spread,
 Entering the city, here and there a face,
 Or person singled out among the rest,
 Yet still a stranger and beloved as such;
 Even by these passing spectacles my
 heart 281
 Was oftentimes uplifted, and they seemed Arguments sent from Heaven to prove the cause
 Good, pure, which no one could stand up against,
 Who was not lost, abandoned, selfish,
 proud, 285

Mean, miserable, wilfully depraved,
Hater perverse of equity and truth.

Among that band of Officers was one,
Already hinted at¹, of other mould—
A patriot, thence rejected by the rest, 290
And with an oriental loathing spurned,
As of a different caste. A meeker man
Than this lived never, nor a more benign,
Meek though enthusiastic. Injuries Made him more gracious, and his nature
then 295

Did breathe its sweetness out most sensibly,

As aromatic flowers on Alpine turf,
When foot hath crushed them. He through the events

Of that great change wandered in perfect faith,

As through a book, an old romance, or tale 300

Of Fairy, or some dream of actions
wrought

Behind the summer clouds. By birth he ranked

With the most noble, but unto the poor
Among mankind he was in service bound,
As by some tie invisible, oaths professed
To a religious order. Man he loved 306
As man; and, to the mean and the obscure,

And all the homely in their homely works,
Transferred a courtesy which had no air
Of condescension; but did rather seem
A passion and a gallantry, like that 311
Which he, a soldier, in his idler day Had paid to woman: somewhat vain he
was,

Or seemed so, yet it was not vanity,
But fondness, and a kind of radiant joy Diffused around him, while he was intent 316

On works of love or freedom, or revolved
Complacently the progress of a cause, Whereof he was a part: yet this was
meek

And placid, and took nothing from the
man 320

That was delightful. Oft in solitude

With him did I discourse about the end
Of civil government, and its wisest forms;
Of ancient loyalty, and chartered rights,
Custom and habit, novelty and change;
Of self-respect, and virtue in the few 326
For patrimonial honour set apart,
And ignorance in the labouring multitude.
For he, to all intolerance indisposed, Balanced these contemplations in his
mind; 330

And I, who at that time was scarcely dipped

Into the turmoil, bore a sounder judgment
Than later days allowed; carried about me,
With less alloy to its integrity,

The experience of past ages, as, through help 335

Of books and common life, it makes sure
way

To youthful minds, by objects over near
Not pressed upon, nor dazzled or misled
By struggling with the crowd for present
ends.

But though not deaf, nor obstinate to
find 340

Error without excuse upon the side
Of them who strove against us, more
delight

We took, and let this freely be confessed,
In painting to ourselves the miseries 344
Of royal courts, and that voluptuous life
Unfeeling, where the man who is of soul
The meanest thrives the most; where dignity,

True personal dignity, abideth not;
A light, a cruel, and vain world cut off
From the natural inlets of just sentiment,
From lowly sympathy and chastening
truth: 351

Where good and evil interchange their
names,

And thirst for bloody spoils abroad is paired

With vice at home. We added dearest
themes—

Man and his noble nature, as it is 355
The gift which God has placed within his
power,

His blind desires and steady faculties
Capable of clear truth, the one to break

Bondage, the other to build liberty
 On firm foundations, making social life,
 Through knowledge spreading and imperishable, 361
 As just in regulation, and as pure
 As individual in the wise and good.

We summoned up the honourable deeds
 Of ancient Story, thought of each bright
 spot, 365
 That would be found in all recorded time,
 Of truth preserved and error passed
 away;

Of single spirits that catch the flame
 from Heaven,
 And how the multitudes of men will feed
 And fan each other; thought of sects, how keen 370

They are to put the appropriate nature on,
 Triumphant over every obstacle Of custom, language, country, love, or
 hate,

And what they do and suffer for their
 creed;

How far they travel, and how long endure; 375

How quickly mighty Nations have been
 formed,

From least beginnings; how, together locked

By new opinions, scattered tribes have
 made

One body, spreading wide as clouds in
 heaven.

To aspirations then of our own minds 380
 Did we appeal; and, finally, beheld

A living confirmation of the whole
 Before us, in a people from the depth

Of shameful imbecility uprisen, Fresh as the morning star. Elate we looked 385

Upon their virtues; saw, in rudest men,
 Self-sacrifice the firmest; generous love,

And continence of mind, and sense of
 right,

Uppermost in the midst of fiercest strife.

Oh, sweet it is, in academic groves, 390
 Or such retirement, Friend! as we have
 known

In the green dales beside our Rotha's
 stream,

Greta, or Derwent, or some nameless rill,
 To ruminate, with interchange of talk,
 On rational liberty, and hope in man, 395 Justice and peace. But far more sweet such toil—

Toil, say I, for it leads to thoughts abstruse—

If nature then be standing on the brink
 Of some great trial, and we hear the voice
 Of one devoted,—one whom circumstance Hath called upon to embody his deep
 sense

In action, give it outwardly a shape,
 And that of benediction, to the world.

Then doubt is not, and truth is more than truth,—

A hope it is, and a desire; a creed 405
 Of zeal, by an authority Divine

Sanctioned, of danger, difficulty, or death.
 Such conversation, under Attic shades,

Did Dion hold with Plato; ripened thus For a deliverer's glorious task,—and such

He, on that ministry already bound, 411
 Held with Eudemus and Timonides,

Surrounded by adventurers in arms,
 When those two vessels with their daring

freight,
 For the Sicilian Tyrant's overthrow, 415

Sailed from Zacynthus,—philosophic war,
 Led by Philosophers. With harder fate,

Though like ambition, such was he, O
 Friend!

Of whom I speak. So BEAUPUY (let the
 name

Stand near the worthiest of Antiquity) Fashioned his life; and many a long dis-
 course, 421

With like persuasion honoured, we main-
 tained:

He, on his part, accoutred for the worst,
 He perished fighting, in supreme command,

Upon the borders of the unhappy Loire¹,
 For liberty, against deluded men, 426

His fellow country-men; and yet most blessed

His fellow country-men; and yet most blessed

In this, that he the fate of later times

¹ An error. Beaupuy died at Emmendingen, shot while in command of a division of the Army of the Rhine and the Moselle.—Ed.

Lived not to see, nor what we now behold,
Who have as ardent hearts as he had then¹. 430

Along that very Loire, with festal mirth
Resounding at all hours, and innocent yet
Of civil slaughter, was our frequent walk ;
Or in wide forests of continuous shade,
Lofty and over-arched, with open space Beneath the trees, clear footing many a mile— 436

A solemn region. Oft amid those haunts, From earnest dialogues I slipped in
thought,

And let remembrance steal to other times,
When o'er those interwoven roots, moss-clad, 440

And smooth as marble or a waveless sea,
Some Hermit, from his cell forth-strayed, might pace

In sylvan meditation undisturbed ;
As on the pavement of a Gothic church Walks a lone Monk, when service hath expired, 445

In peace and silence. But if e'er was
heard,—

Heard, though unseen,—a devious traveller,

Retiring or approaching from afar
With speed and echoes loud of trampling hoofs

From the hard floor reverberated, then 450
It was Angelica thundering through the
woods

Upon her palfrey, or that gentle maid Erminia, fugitive as fair as she.

Sometimes methought I saw a pair of knights

Joust underneath the trees, that as in storm Rocked high above their heads ; anon,
the din 456

Of boisterous merriment, and music's roar,
In sudden proclamation, burst from haunt Of Satyrs in some viewless glade, with
dance

Rejoicing o'er a female in the midst, 460
A mortal beauty, their unhappy thrall.

¹ For the story of W's. relations with Beaupuy, see Le Général Michel Beaupuy, by MM. Georges Bussière and Emile Legouis : Chap. II.—Ed.

The width of those huge forests, unto me
A novel scene, did often in this way Master my fancy while I wandered on With that revered companion. And sometimes— 465

When to a convent in a meadow green,
By a brook-side, we came, a roofless pile,
And not by reverential touch of Time Dismantled, but by violence abrupt—
In spite of those heart-bracing colloquies,
In spite of real fervour, and of that 471 Less genuine and wrought up within myself—

I could not but bewail a wrong so harsh,
And for the Matin-bell to sound no more Grieved, and the twilight taper, and the cross 475

High on the topmost pinnacle, a sign (How welcome to the weary traveller's
eyes !)

Of hospitality and peaceful rest.
And when the partner of those varied walks
Pointed upon occasion to the site 480
Of Romorentin, home of ancient kings,
To the imperial edifice of Blois,

Or to that rural castle, name now slipped From my remembrance, where a lady
lodged,

By the first Francis wooed, and bound to
him 485

In chains of mutual passion, from the
tower,

As a tradition of the country tells,
Practised to commune with her royal knight

By cressets and love-beacons, intercourse
'Twixt her high-seated residence and his Far off at Chambord on the plain beneath ; Even here, though less than with the peaceful house

Religious, 'mid those frequent monuments
Of Kings, their vices and their better
deeds,

Imagination, potent to inflame 495
At times with virtuous wrath and noble
scorn,

Did also often mitigate the force
Of civic prejudice, the bigotry,
So call it, of a youthful patriot's mind ;
And on these spots with many gleams

I looked 500

Of chivalrous delight. Yet not the less,
 Hatred of absolute rule, where will of one
 Is law for all, and of that barren pride
 In them who, by immunities unjust, Between the sovereign and the people
 stand, 505
 His helper and not theirs, laid stronger
 hold
 Daily upon me, mixed with pity too
 And love; for where hope is, there love will be
 For the abject multitude. And when we chanced
 One day to meet a hunger-bitten girl, 510
 Who crept along fitting her languid gait
 Unto a heifer's motion, by a cord Tied to her arm, and picking thus from the lane
 Its sustenance, while the girl with pallid
 hands 514
 Was busy knitting in a heartless mood
 Of solitude, and at the sight my friend
 In agitation said, "Tis against that That we are fighting," I with him believed
 That a benignant spirit was abroad Which might not be withstood, that poverty 520
 Abject as this would in a little time
 Be found no more, that we should see the
 earth
 Unthwarted in her wish to recompense
 The meek, the lowly, patient child of toil,
 All institutes for ever blotted out 525
 That legalised exclusion, empty pomp Abolished, sensual state and cruel power,
 Whether by edict of the one or few;
 And finally, as sum and crown of all,
 Should see the people having a strong
 hand 530
 In framing their own laws; whence better
 days
 To all mankind. But, these things set apart,
 Was not this single confidence enough
 To animate the mind that ever turned A thought to human welfare,—that, henceforth 535
 Captivity by mandate without law
 Should cease; and open accusation lead
 To sentence in the hearing of the world,

And open punishment, if not the air
 Be free to breathe in, and the heart of
 man 540
 Dread nothing? From this height I shall not stoop
 To humbler matter that detained us oft
 In thought or conversation, public acts,
 And public persons, and emotions wrought
 Within the breast, as ever-varying winds
 Of record or report swept over us; 546
 But I might here, instead, repeat a tale¹, Told by my Patriot friend, of sad events,
 That prove to what low depth had struck the roots,
 How widely spread the boughs, of that old tree 550
 Which, as a deadly mischief, and a foul
 And black dishonour, France was weary of.

O, happy time of youthful lovers, (thus
 The story might begin,) oh, balmy time,
 In which a love-knot on a lady's brow,
 Is fairer than the fairest star in Heaven!
 So might—and with that prelude did begin 557
 The record; and, in faithful verse, was
 given
 The doleful sequel.

But our little bark
 On a strong river boldly hath been launched; 560
 And from the driving current should we
 turn
 To loiter wilfully within a creek,
 Howe'er attractive, Fellow voyager!
 Wouldst thou not chide? Yet deem not my pains lost:
 For Vaudracour and Julia (so were
 named 565
 The ill-fated pair) in that plain tale will
 draw Tears from the hearts of others, when their own
 Shall beat no more. Thou, also, there may'st read,
 At leisure, how the enamoured youth was driven, 569
 By public power abased, to fatal crime,
 Nature's rebellion against monstrous law;

How, between heart and heart, oppres- sion thrust	He fled, to shun the haunts of human kind;
Her mandates, severing whom true love had joined,	There dwelt, weakened in spirit more and more; 580
Harassing both; until he sank and pressed	Nor could the voice of Freedom, which through France
The couch his fate had made for him; supine, 575	Full speedily resounded, public hope, Or personal memory of his own worst wrongs,
Save when the stings of viperous remorse, Trying their strength, enforced him to start up,	Rouse him; but, hidden in those gloomy shades, 584
Aghast and prayerless. Into a deep wood	His days he wasted,—an imbecile mind.

BOOK TENTH.

RESIDENCE IN FRANCE.—(CONTINUED).

It was a beautiful and silent day That overspread the countenance of earth, Then fading with unusual quietness,— A day as beautiful as e'er was given To soothe the regret, though deepening what it soothed, 5	Wide as a province, but, the signal given, Before the point of the life-threatening spear Narrowing itself by moments—they, rash men, Had seen the anticipated quarry turned Into avengers, from whose wrath they fled 26
When by the gliding Loire I paused, and cast	In terror. Disappointment and dismay Remained for all whose fancies had run wild
Upon his rich domains, vineyard and tilth,	With evil expectations; confidence 29 And perfect triumph for the better cause.
Green meadow-ground, and many-coloured woods,	The State, as if to stamp the final seal On her security, and to the world Show what she was, a high and fearless soul,
Again, and yet again, a farewell look; Then from the quiet of that scene passed on, 10	Exulting in defiance, or heart-stung By sharp resentment, or belike to taunt With spiteful gratitude the baffled League, 36
Bound to the fierce Metropolis. From his throne	That had stirred up her slackening facul- ties
The King had fallen, and that invading host—	To a new transition, when the King was crushed,
Presumptuous cloud, on whose black front was written	Spared not the empty throne, and in proud haste
The tender mercies of the dismal wind That bore it—on the plains of Liberty 15	Assumed the body and venerable name Of a Republic. Lamentable crimes, 41
Had burst innocuous. Say in bolder words,	'Tis true, had gone before this hour, dire work
They—who had come elate as eastern hunters Banded beneath the Great Mogul, when he Erewhile went forth from Agra or Lahore, Rajahs and Omrahs in his train, intent 20
To drive their prey enclosed within a ring

Of massacre, in which the senseless sword Was prayed to as a judge; but these were
past,
Earth free from them for ever, as was
thought,— 45
Ephemeral monsters, to be seen but once!
Things that could only show themselves and die.

Cheered with this hope, to Paris I
returned,
And ranged, with ardour heretofore un-
felt,
The spacious city, and in progress passed
The prison where the unhappy Monarch
lay, 51
Associate with his children and his wife
In bondage; and the palace, lately stormed
With roar of cannon by a furious host. 54
I crossed the square (an empty area then!)
Of the Carrousel, where so late had lain
The dead, upon the dying heaped, and
gazed
On this and other spots, as doth a man 58
Upon a volume whose contents he knows
Are memorable, but from him locked up,
Being written in a tongue he cannot read,
So that he questions the mute leaves with
pain,
And half upbraids their silence. But that night
I felt most deeply in what world I was,
What ground I trod on, and what air I
breathed. 65
High was my room and lonely, near the
roof
Of a large mansion or hotel, a lodge
That would have pleased me in more quiet times;
Nor was it wholly without pleasure then.
With unextinguished taper I kept
watch, 70
Reading at intervals; the fear gone by Pressed on me almost like a fear to come.
I thought of those September massacres,
Divided from me by one little month,
Saw them and touched: the rest was conjured up 75
From tragic fictions or true history,
Remembrances and dim admonishments.

The horse is taught his manage, and no
star
Of wildest course but treads back his own
steps;
For the spent hurricane the air provides 80
As fierce a successor; the tide retreats
But to return out of its hiding-place
In the great deep; all things have second
birth;
The earthquake is not satisfied at once;
And in this way I wrought upon my-
self, 85
Until I seemed to hear a voice that cried, To the whole city, "sleep no more." The trance
Fled with the voice to which it had given
birth;
But vainly comments of a calmer mind Promised soft peace and sweet forgetful-
ness. 90
The place, all hushed and silent as it was,
Appeared unfit for the repose of night,
Defenceless as a wood where tigers roam.

With early morning towards the Palace-
walk
Of Orleans eagerly I turned; as yet 95
The streets were still; not so those long Arcades;
There, 'mid a peal of ill-matched sounds and cries,
That greeted me on entering, I could
hear Shrill voices from the hawkers in the
throng,
Bawling, "Denunciation of the Crimes 100
Of Maximilian Robespierre;" the hand, Prompt as the voice, held forth a printed
speech,
The same that had been recently pronounced,
When Robespierre, not ignorant for what mark
Some words of indirect reproof had
been 105
Intended, rose in hardihood, and dared
The man who had an ill surmise of him
To bring his charge in openness; whereat,
When a dead pause ensued, and no one
stirred,

In silence of all present, from his seat 110
 Louvet walked single through the avenue,
 And took his station in the Tribune, say-
 ing,

“I, Robespierre, accuse thee!” Well is known

The inglorious issue of that charge, and how

He, who had launched the startling thunderbolt, 115

The one bold man, whose voice the attack had sounded,

Was left without a follower to discharge
 His perilous duty, and retire lamenting

That Heaven’s best aid is wasted upon
 men

Who to themselves are false.

But these are things 120

Of which I speak, only as they were storm
 Or sunshine to my individual mind,

No further. Let me then relate that
 now—

In some sort seeing with my proper eyes That Liberty, and Life, and Death would
 soon 125

To the remotest corners of the land
 Lie in the arbitrement of those who ruled

The capital City; what was struggled for,
 And by what combatants victory must be
 won;

The indecision on their part whose aim Seemed best, and the straightforward path of those 131

Who in attack or in defence were strong
 Through their impiety—my inmost soul

Was agitated; yea, I could almost Have prayed that throughout earth upon all men, 135

By patient exercise of reason made
 Worthy of liberty, all spirits filled

With zeal expanding in Truth’s holy light,
 The gift of tongues might fall, and power
 arrive

From the four quarters of the winds to do 140

For France, what without help she could not do,

A work of honour; think not that to this
 I added, work of safety: from all doubt
 Or trepidation for the end of things

Far was I, far as angels are from guilt. 145

Yet did I grieve, nor only grieved, but
 thought

Of opposition and of remedies:

An insignificant stranger and obscure,
 And one, moreover, little graced with
 power

Of eloquence even in my native speech,
 And all unfit for tumult or intrigue, 151

Yet would I at this time with willing
 heart

Have undertaken for a cause so great Service however dangerous. I revolved,

How much the destiny of Man had
 still 155

Hung upon single persons; that there
 was,

Transcendent to all local patrimony,
 One nature, as there is one sun in heaven;

That objects, even as they are great, thereby

Do come within the reach of humblest
 eyes; 160

That Man is only weak through his mistrust

And want of hope where evidence divine Proclaims to him that hope should be most sure;

Nor did the inexperience of my youth
 Preclude conviction, that a spirit strong

In hope, and trained to noble aspirations, 166

A spirit thoroughly faithful to itself,
 Is for Society’s unreasoning herd

A domineering instinct, serves at once
 For way and guide, a fluent receptacle 170

That gathers up each petty straggling rill
 And vein of water, glad to be rolled on

In safe obedience; that a mind, whose
 rest

Is where it ought to be, in self-restraint,
 In circumspection and simplicity, 175

Falls rarely in entire discomfiture Below its aim, or meets with, from with-
 out,

A treachery that foils it or defeats;

And, lastly, if the means on human will,
 Frail human will, dependent should betray 180

Him who too boldly trusted them, I felt That ’mid the loud distractions of the world

A sovereign voice subsists within the soul,
 Arbitrator undisturbed of right and wrong,
 Of life and death, in majesty severe 185
 Enjoining, as may best promote the aims
 Of truth and justice, either sacrifice,
 From whatsoever region of our cares
 Or our infirm affections Nature pleads, Earnest and blind, against the stern
 decree. 190

On the other side, I called to mind those truths
 That are the commonplaces of the schools—

(A theme for boys, too hackneyed for their sires,)

Yet, with a revelation's liveliness,
 In all their comprehensive bearings known
 And visible to philosophers of old, 196 Men who, to business of the world untrained,

Lived in the shade; and to Harmodius
 known

And his compeer Aristogiton, known
 To Brutus—that tyrannic power is weak, Hath neither gratitude, nor faith, nor
 love, 201

Nor the support of good or evil men
 To trust in; that the godhead which is
 ours

Can never utterly be charmed or stilled;
 That nothing hath a natural right to last
 But equity and reason; that all else 206
 Meets foes irreconcilable, and at best Lives only by variety of disease.

Well might my wishes be intense, my
 thoughts

Strong and perturbed, not doubting at that time 210

But that the virtue of one paramount
 mind

Would have abashed those impious crests—have quelled

Outrage and bloody power, and—in despite

Of what the People long had been and were

Through ignorance and false teaching, sadder proof 215

Of immaturity, and—in the teeth
 Of desperate opposition from without—

Have cleared a passage for just government,
 And left a solid birthright to the State,
 Redeemed, according to example given
 By ancient lawgivers.

In this frame of mind,
 Dragged by a chain of harsh necessity,
 So seemed it,—now I thankfully acknowledge,

Forced by the gracious providence of
 Heaven,—

To England I returned, else (though assured 225

That I both was and must be of small
 weight,

No better than a landsman on the deck
 Of a ship struggling with a hideous storm)
 Doubtless, I should have then made common cause

With some who perished; haply perished
 too, 230

A poor mistaken and bewildered offering,—

Should to the breast of Nature have gone
 back,

With all my resolutions, all my hopes,
 A Poet only to myself, to men

Useless, and even, beloved Friend! a
 soul 235

To thee unknown!

Twice had the trees let fall
 Their leaves, as often Winter had put on His hoary crown, since I had seen the surge

Beat against Albion's shore, since ear of
 mine

Had caught the accents of my native
 speech 240

Upon our native country's sacred ground.
 A patriot of the world, how could I glide
 Into communion with her sylvan shades, Erewhile my tuneful haunt? It pleased me more

To abide in the great City, where I
 found 245

The general air still busy with the stir
 Of that first memorable onset made
 By a strong levy of humanity

Upon the traffickers in Negro blood; Effort which, though defeated, had recalled 250

To notice old forgotten principles,
And through the nation spread a novel
heat

Of virtuous feeling. For myself, I own
That this particular strife had wanted
power

To rivet my affections; nor did now 255
Its unsuccessful issue much excite My sorrow; for I brought with me the
faith

That, if France prospered, good men would not long

Pay fruitless worship to humanity,
And this most rotten branch of human
shame, 260

Object, so seemed it, of superfluous pains,
Would fall together with its parent tree.
What, then, were my emotions, when in arms

Britain put forth her freeborn strength
in league,

Oh, pity and shame! with those confederate Powers! 265

Not in my single self alone I found,
But in the minds of all ingenuous youth,
Change and subversion from that hour.
No shock

Given to my moral nature had I known
Down to that very moment; neither lapse Nor turn of sentiment that might be named 271

A revolution, save at this one time;
All else was progress on the self-same
path

On which, with a diversity of pace,
I had been travelling: this a stride at
once 275

Into another region. As a light And pliant harebell, swinging in the breeze

On some grey rock—its birthplace—so had I

Wanted, fast rooted on the ancient
tower

Of my belovèd country, wishing not 280
A happier fortune than to wither there:
Now was I from that pleasant station torn And tossed about in whirlwind. I rejoiced,

Yea, afterwards—truth most painful to record!—

Exulted, in the triumph of my soul, 285
When Englishmen by thousands were
o'erthrown,

Left without glory on the field, or driven, Brave hearts! to shameful flight. It was a grief,—

Grief call it not, 'twas anything but that,— 289

A conflict of sensations without name,
Of which he only, who may love the sight
Of a village steeple, as I do, can judge,
When, in the congregation bending all
To their great Father, prayers were offered up,

Or praises for our country's victories;
And, 'mid the simple worshippers, per-
chance 296

I only, like an uninvited guest Whom no one owned, sate silent, shall
I add,

Fed on the day of vengeance yet to come.

Oh! much have they to account for, who could tear, 300

By violence, at one decisive rent,
From the best youth in England their
dear pride,

Their joy, in England; this, too, at a
time

In which worst losses easily might wear
The best of names, when patriotic love
Did of itself in modesty give way, 306
Like the Precursor when the Deity

Is come Whose harbinger he was; a time
In which apostasy from ancient faith
Seemed but conversion to a higher creed;
Withal a season dangerous and wild, 311

A time when sage Experience would have snatched

Flowers out of any hedge-row to compose
A chaplet in contempt of his grey locks.

When the proud fleet that bears the red-cross flag 315

In that unworthy service was prepared
To mingle, I beheld the vessels lie,
A brood of gallant creatures, on the deep;
I saw them in their rest, a sojourner
Through a whole month of calm and glassy
days 320

In that delightful island which protects

Their place of convocation—there I heard,
Each evening, pacing by the still sea-
shore,

A monitory sound that never failed,—
The sunset cannon. While the orb went
down 325

In the tranquillity of nature, came That voice, ill requiem! seldom heard by
me.

Without a spirit overcast by dark
Imaginations, sense of woes to come, Sorrow for human kind, and pain of
heart. 330

In France, the men, who, for their desperate ends,

Had plucked up mercy by the roots, were glad

Of this new enemy. Tyrants, strong
before

In wicked pleas, were strong as demons
now;

And thus, on every side beset with foes,
The goaded land waxed mad; the crimes of few 336

Spread into madness of the many; blasts
From hell came sanctified like airs from heaven.

The sternness of the just, the faith of those

Who doubted not that Providence had
times 340

Of vengeful retribution, theirs who throned

The human Understanding paramount
And made of that their God, the hopes of men

Who were content to barter short-lived pangs

For a paradise of ages, the blind rage 345
Of insolent tempers, the light vanity

Of intermeddlers, steady purposes
Of the suspicious, slips of the indiscreet,

And all the accidents of life were pressed
Into one service, busy with one work. 350

The Senate stood aghast, her prudence quenched,

Her wisdom stifled, and her justice scared,
Her frenzy only active to extol

Past outrages, and shape the way for new,
Which no one dared to oppose or mitigate.

Domestic carnage now filled the whole
year 356

With feast-days; old men from the chimney-nook,

The maiden from the bosom of her love,
The mother from the cradle of her babe,

The warrior from the field—all perished,
all— 360

Friends, enemies, of all parties, ages,
ranks,

Head after head, and never heads enough For those that bade them fall. They found their joy,

They made it proudly, eager as a child,

(If like desires of innocent little ones 365
May with such heinous appetites be compared),

Pleased in some open field to exercise
A toy that mimics with revolving wings

The motion of a wind-mill; though the air
Do of itself blow fresh, and make the vanes 370

Spin in his eyesight, that contents him

not,
But, with the plaything at arm's length,

he sets
His front against the blast, and runs

amain,
That it may whirl the faster.

Amid the depth
Of those enormities, even thinking minds

Forgot, at seasons, whence they had their
being; 376

Forgot that such a sound was ever heard
As Liberty upon earth: yet all beneath

Her innocent authority was wrought,
Nor could have been, without her blessèd

name. 380
The illustrious wife of Roland, in the

hour
Of her composure, felt that agony,

And gave it vent in her last words. O
Friend!

It was a lamentable time for man,
Whether a hope had e'er been his or not;

A woeful time for them whose hopes survived 386

The shock; most woeful for those few who still

Were flattered, and had trust in human
kind:

They had the deepest feeling of the grief.
 Meanwhile the Invaders fared as they deserved: 390
 The Herculean Commonwealth had put forth her arms,
 And throttled with an infant godhead's
 might
 The snakes about her cradle; that was
 well,
 And as it should be; yet no cure for them Whose souls were sick with pain of what would be 395
 Hereafter brought in charge against man-
 kind.
 Most melancholy at that time, O Friend!
 Were my day-thoughts,—my nights were miserable;
 Through months, through years, long after the last beat
 Of those atrocities, the hour of sleep 400
 To me came rarely charged with natural
 gifts,
 Such ghastly visions had I of despair
 And tyranny, and implements of death;
 And innocent victims sinking under fear,
 And momentary hope, and worn-out
 prayer, 405
 Each in his separate cell, or penned in crowds
 For sacrifice, and struggling with fond mirth
 And levity in dungeons, where the dust Was laid with tears. Then suddenly the
 scene
 Changed, and the unbroken dream entangled me 410
 In long orations, which I strove to plead
 Before unjust tribunals,—with a voice
 Labouring, a brain confounded, and a sense,
 Death-like, of treacherous desertion, felt
 In the last place of refuge—my own soul.

When I began in youth's delightful
 prime 416
 To yield myself to Nature, when that
 strong
 And holy passion overcame me first, Nor day nor night, evening or morn, was
 free
 From its oppression. But, O Power
 Supreme! 420

Without Whose call this world would cease to breathe,
 Who from the Fountain of Thy grace dost
 fill
 The veins that branch through every frame of life,
 Making man what he is, creature divine,
 In single or in social eminence, 425
 Above the rest raised infinite ascents
 When reason that enables him to be
 Is not sequestered—what a change is
 here!
 How different ritual for this after-worship,
 What countenance to promote this second
 love! 430
 The first was service paid to things which
 lie
 Guarded within the bosom of Thy will.
 Therefore to serve was high beatitude; Tumult was therefore gladness, and the
 fear
 Ennobling, venerable; sleep secure, 435
 And waking thoughts more rich than happiest dreams.

But as the ancient Prophets, borne aloft
 In vision, yet constrained by natural laws
 With them to take a troubled human
 heart,
 Wanted not consolations, nor a creed 440
 Of reconciliation, then when they denounced,
 On towns and cities, wallowing in the abyss
 Of their offences, punishment to come;
 Or saw, like other men, with bodily eyes,
 Before them, in some desolated place, 445
 The wrath consummate and the threat fulfilled;
 So, with devout humility be it said,
 So, did a portion of that spirit fall
 On me uplifted from the vantage-ground
 Of pity and sorrow to a state of being That through the time's exceeding fierce-ness saw 451
 Glimpses of retribution, terrible,
 And in the order of sublime behests:
 But, even if that were not, amid the awe
 Of unintelligible chastisement, 455
 Not only acquiescences of faith

Survived, but daring sympathies with
power,
Motions not treacherous or profane, else
why
Within the folds of no ungentle breast
Their dread vibration to this hour prolonged? 460
Wild blasts of music thus could find their
way
Into the midst of turbulent events;
So that worst tempests might be listened
to.
Then was the truth received into my
heart,
That, under heaviest sorrow earth can bring, 465
If from the affliction somewhere do not grow Honour which could not else have been,
a faith,
An elevation, and a sanctity,
If new strength be not given nor old
restored,
The blame is ours, not Nature's. When a taunt 470
Was taken up by scoffers in their pride, Saying, "Behold the harvest that we reap
From popular government and equality,"
I clearly saw that neither these nor aught
Of wild belief engrafted on their names
By false philosophy had caused the woe,
But a terrific reservoir of guilt
And ignorance filled up from age to age,
That could no longer hold its loathsome
charge,
But burst and spread in deluge through
the land. 480

And as the desert hath green spots, the
sea
Small islands scattered amid stormy
waves,
So that disastrous period did not want
Bright sprinklings of all human excellence,
To which the silver wands of saints in
Heaven 485
Might point with rapturous joy. Yet not
the less,
For those examples, in no age surpassed,
Of fortitude and energy and love,
And human nature faithful to herself

Under worst trials, was I driven to think
Of the glad times when first I traversed
France 491
A youthful pilgrim; above all reviewed
That eventide, when under windows bright
With happy faces and with garlands hung,
And through a rainbow-arch that spanned the street, 495
Triumphal pomp for liberty confirmed,
I paced, a dear companion at my side,
The town of Arras, whence with promise
high
Issued, on delegation to sustain Humanity and right, that Robespierre, 500
He who thereafter, and in how short time!
Wielded the sceptre of the Atheist crew.
When the calamity spread far and wide—
And this same city, that did then appear
To outrun the rest in exultation, groaned
Under the vengeance of her cruel son, 506
As Lear reproached the winds—I could almost
Have quarrelled with that blameless spectacle
For lingering yet an image in my mind
To mock me under such a strange reverse. 510

O Friend! few happier moments have been mine
Than that which told the downfall of this Tribe
So dreaded, so abhorred. The day deserves
A separate record. Over the smooth sands
Of Leven's ample estuary lay 515
My journey, and beneath a genial sun,
With distant prospect among gleams of
sky
And clouds, and intermingling mountain-
tops,
In one inseparable glory clad,
Creatures of one ethereal substance met
In consistory, like a diadem 521
Or crown of burning seraphs as they sit
In the empyrean. Underneath that pomp Celestial, lay unseen the pastoral vales Among whose happy fields I had grown up 525
From childhood. On the fulgent spectacle,

That neither passed away nor changed,
I gazed

Enrapt; but brightest things are wont to draw

Sad opposites out of the inner heart,
As even their pensive influence drew from
mine. 530

How could it otherwise? for not in vain
That very morning had I turned aside
To seek the ground where, 'mid a throng of graves,

An honoured teacher of my youth was
laid,

And on the stone were graven by his desire 535

Lines from the churchyard elegy of Gray.
This faithful guide, speaking from his death-bed,

Added no farewell to his parting counsel,
But said to me, "My head will soon lie
low;"

And when I saw the turf that covered
him, 540

After the lapse of full eight years, those
words,

With sound of voice and countenance of
the Man,

Came back upon me, so that some few
tears

Fell from me in my own despite. But
now

I thought, still traversing that widespread
plain, 545

With tender pleasure of the verses graven Upon his tombstone, whispering to myself:

He loved the Poets, and, if now alive,
Would have loved me, as one not destitute

Of promise, nor belying the kind hope That he had formed, when I, at his command, 551

Began to spin, with toil, my earliest songs.

As I advanced, all that I saw or felt
Was gentleness and peace. Upon a small
And rocky island near, a fragment stood (Itself like a sea rock) the low remains 556 (With shells encrusted, dark with briny weeds)

Of a dilapidated structure, once
A Romish chapel, where the vested priest Said matins at the hour that suited those Who crossed the sands with ebb of morning tide. 561

Not far from that still ruin all the
plain

Lay spotted with a variegated crowd
Of vehicles and travellers, horse and foot, Wading beneath the conduct of their
guide 565

In loose procession through the shallow
stream

Of inland waters; the great sea meanwhile

Heaved at safe distance, far retired. I paused,

Longing for skill to paint a scene so
bright

And cheerful, but the foremost of the band 570

As he approached, no salutation given
In the familiar language of the day,

Cried, "Robespierre is dead!"—nor was a doubt,

After strict question, left within my
mind

That he and his supporters all were fallen. 575

Great was my transport, deep my gratitude

To everlasting Justice, by this fiat Made manifest. "Come now, ye golden
times,"

Said I forth-pouring on those open sands
A hymn of triumph: "as the morning comes 580

From out the bosom of the night, come ye:

Thus far our trust is verified; behold!
They who with clumsy desperation
brought

A river of Blood, and preached that nothing else

Could cleanse the Augean stable, by the
might 585

Of their own helper have been swept
away;

Their madness stands declared and visible;

Elsewhere will safety now be sought, and
 earth
 March firmly towards righteousness and
 'peace.'—
 Then schemes I framed more calmly, when and how 590
 The madding factions might be tranquillised,
 And how through hardships manifold and
 long
 The glorious renovation would proceed.
 Thus interrupted by uneasy bursts
 Of exultation, I pursued my way 595

Along that very shore which I had skimmed
 In former days, when—spurring from the
 Vale
 Of Nightshade, and St. Mary's mouldering fane,
 And the stone abbot, after circuit made
 In wantonness of heart, a joyous band
 Of schoolboys hastening to their distant
 home 601
 Along the margin of the moonlight sea—
 We beat with thundering hoofs the level sand.

BOOK ELEVENTH.

FRANCE.—(CONCLUDED).

FROM that time forth, Authority in France
 Put on a milder face; Terror had ceased, Yet everything was wanting that might
 give Courage to them who looked for good by
 light
 Of rational Experience, for the shoots 5
 And hopeful blossoms of a second spring:
 Yet, in me, confidence was unimpaired;
 The Senate's language, and the public acts
 And measures of the Government, though
 both Weak, and of heartless omen, had not
 power 10
 To daunt me; in the People was my
 trust,
 And in the virtues which mine eyes had
 seen.
 I knew that wound external could not take Life from the young Republic; that new foes
 Would only follow, in the path of shame,
 Their brethren, and her triumphs be in the end 16
 Great, universal, irresistible.
 This intuition led me to confound
 One victory with another, higher far,— Triumphs of unambitious peace at home,

And noiseless fortitude. Beholding still Resistance strong as heretofore, I thought That what was in degree the same was likewise
 The same in quality,—that, as the worse
 Of the two spirits then at strife remained Untired, the better, surely, would preserve 26
 The heart that first had roused him.
 Youth maintains,
 In all conditions of society,
 Communion more direct and intimate With Nature,—hence, oftentimes, with reason too— 30
 Than age or manhood, even. To Nature,
 then,
 Power had reverted: habit, custom, law,
 Had left an interregnum's open space
 For her to move about in, uncontrolled.
 Hence could I see how Babel-like their task, 35
 Who, by the recent deluge stupefied,
 With their whole souls went culling from
 the day
 Its petty promises, to build a tower
 For their own safety; laughed with my compeers
 At gravest heads, by enmity to France Distempered, till they found, in every
 blast 41

Forced from the street-disturbing newsman's horn,

For her great cause record or prophecy
Of utter ruin. How might we believe That wisdom could, in any shape, come
near 45

Men clinging to delusions so insane?
And thus, experience proving that no few
Of our opinions had been just, we took Like credit to ourselves where less was due,
And thought that other notions were as
sound, 50

Yea, could not but be right, because we saw

That foolish men opposed them.

To a strain

More animated I might here give way,
And tell, since juvenile errors are my theme,
What in those days through Britain was performed. 55

To turn all judgments out of their right
course;

But this is passion over-near ourselves,
Reality too close and too intense,
And intermixed with something, in my
mind,

Of scorn and condemnation personal, 60
That would profane the sanctity of verse.
Our Shepherds, this say merely, at that
time

Acted, or seemed at least to act, like men Thirsting to make the guardian crook of
law

A tool of murder; they who ruled the
State,— 65

Though with such awful proof before their eyes

That he, who would sow death, reaps death, or worse,

And can reap nothing better,—child-like longed

To imitate, not wise enough to avoid;
Or left (by mere timidity betrayed) 70
The plain straight road, for one no better
chosen

Than if their wish had been to undermine Justice, and make an end of Liberty.

But from these bitter truths I must
return

To my own history. It hath been told

That I was led to take an eager part 76
In arguments of civil polity,
Abruptly, and indeed before my time:
I had approached, like other youths, the shield

Of human nature from the golden side,
And would have fought, even to the death, to attest 81

The quality of the metal which I saw.
What there is best in individual man,
Of wise in passion, and sublime in power,
Benevolent in small societies, 85
And great in large ones, I had oft resolved,

Felt deeply, but not thoroughly understood

By reason: nay, far from it; they were yet,
As cause was given me afterwards to learn,
Not proof against the injuries of the
day; 90

Lodged only at the sanctuary's door,
Not safe within its bosom. Thus prepared,

And with such general insight into evil,
And of the bounds which sever it from
good,

As books and common intercourse with
life 95

Must needs have given—to the inexperienced mind,

When the world travels in a beaten road,
Guide faithful as is needed—I began
To meditate with ardour on the rule

And management of nations; what it is
And ought to be; and strove to learn how far 101

Their power or weakness, wealth or poverty,

Their happiness or misery, depends Upon their laws, and fashion of the State.

O pleasant exercise of hope and joy¹!
For mighty were the auxiliars which then
stood 106

Upon our side, us who were strong in
love!

Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive, •
But to be young was very Heaven! O
times,

In which the meagre, stale, forbidding
ways 110
Of custom, law, and statute, took at once
The attraction of a country in romance!
When Reason seemed the most to assert
her rights
When most intent on making of herself
A prime enchantress—to assist the work,
Which then was going forward in her
name! 116
Not favoured spots alone, but the whole
Earth,
The beauty wore of promise—that which sets
(As at some moments might not be un-
felt
Among the bowers of Paradise itself) 120
The budding rose above the rose full
blown.
What temper at the prospect did not
wake
To happiness unthought of? The inert
Were roused, and lively natures rapt
away!
They who had fed their childhood upon
dreams, 125
The play-fellows of fancy, who had made
All powers of swiftness, subtilty, and
strength
Their ministers,—who in lordly wise had stirred
Among the grandest objects of the sense,
And dealt with whatsoever they found
there 130
As if they had within some lurking right
To wield it;—they, too, who of gentle
mood
Had watched all gentle motions, and to
these
Had fitted their own thoughts, schemers
more mild,
And in the region of their peaceful
selves;— 135
Now was it that both found, the meek and lofty Did both find, helpers to their hearts'
desire,
And stuff at hand, plastic as they could
wish,—
Were called upon to exercise their skill,
Not in Utopia,—subterranean fields,—

Or some secreted island, Heaven knows
where! 141
But in the very world, which is the world
Of all of us,—the place where, in the end,
We find our happiness, or not at all!

Why should I not confess that Earth was then 145
To me, what an inheritance, new-fallen,
Seems, when the first time visited, to one
Who thither comes to find in it his home?
He walks about and looks upon the spot
With cordial transport, moulds it and remoulds, 150
And is half pleased with things that are amiss,
'Twill be such joy to see them disappear.

An active partisan, I thus convoked
From every object pleasant circumstance
To suit my ends; I moved among man-
kind 155
With genial feelings still predominant;
When erring, erring on the better part,
And in the kinder spirit; placable,
Indulgent, as not uninformed that men
See as they have been taught—Antiquity
Gives rights to error; and aware, no less,
That throwing off oppression must be
work
As well of License as of Liberty;
And above all—for this was more than
all— 164
Not caring if the wind did now and then Blow keen upon an eminence that gave Prospect so large into futurity;
In brief, a child of Nature, as at first,
Diffusing only those affections wider That from the cradle had grown up with
me, 170
And losing, in no other way than light
Is lost in light, the weak in the more strong.

In the main outline, such it might be
said
Was my condition, till with open war
Britain opposed the liberties of France.
This threw me first out of the pale of
love; 176
Soured and corrupted, upwards to the
source,

My sentiments; was not, as hitherto,
 A swallowing up of lesser things in great,
 But change of them into their contraries;
 And thus a way was opened for mistakes 181
 And false conclusions, in degree as gross, In kind more dangerous. What had been a pride,
 Was now a shame; my likings and my
 loves
 Ran in new channels, leaving old ones
 dry; 185
 And hence a blow that, in maturer age,
 Would but have touched the judgment, struck more deep Into sensations near the heart: mean-
 time,
 As from the first, wild theories were afloat,
 To whose pretensions, sedulously urged,
 I had but lent a careless ear, assured 191
 That time was ready to set all things
 right,
 And that the multitude, so long op-
 pressed,
 Would be oppressed no more.

But when events Brought less encouragement, and unto
 these 195
 The immediate proof of principles no
 more Could be entrusted, while the events
 themselves,
 Worn out in greatness, stripped of novelty,
 Less occupied the mind, and sentiments
 Could through my understanding's natural
 growth 200
 No longer keep their ground, by faith maintained
 Of inward consciousness, and hope that
 laid
 Her hand upon her object—evidence Safer, of universal application, such As could not be impeached, was sought elsewhere. 205

But now, become oppressors in their
 turn,
 Frenchmen had changed a war of self-defence

For one of conquest, losing sight of all Which they had struggled for: up mounted
 now, 209
 Openly in the eye of earth and heaven,
 The scale of liberty. I read her doom,
 With anger vexed, with disappointment sore,
 But not dismayed, nor taking to the
 shame
 Of a false prophet. While resentment
 rose
 Striving to hide, what nought could heal, the wounds 215
 Of mortified presumption, I adhered
 More firmly to old tenets, and, to prove Their temper, strained them more; and thus, in heat
 Of contest, did opinions every day Grow into consequence, till round my
 mind 220
 They clung, as if they were its life, nay
 more,
 The very being of the immortal soul.

This was the time, when, all things tending fast
 To depravation, speculative schemes—
 That promised to abstract the hopes of
 Man 225
 Out of his feelings, to be fixed thence-
 forth
 For ever in a purer element—Found ready welcome. Tempting region
that
 For Zeal to enter and refresh herself,
 Where passions had the privilege to work,
 And never hear the sound of their own
 names. 231
 But, speaking more in charity, the dream
 Flattered the young, pleased with extremes, nor least
 With that which makes our Reason's naked self
 The object of its fervour. What delight!
 How glorious! in self-knowledge and self-
 rule, 236
 To look through all the frailties of the
 world,
 And, with a resolute mastery shaking off
 Infirmities of nature, time, and place,
 Build social upon personal Liberty, 240

Which, to the blind restraints of general laws
 Superior, magisterially adopts
 One guide, the light of circumstances, flashed
 Upon an independent intellect.
 Thus expectation rose again; thus hope,
 From her first ground expelled, grew proud once more. 246
 Oft, as my thoughts were turned to human kind,
 I scorned indifference; but, inflamed with thirst
 Of a secure intelligence, and sick 249
 Of other longing, I pursued what seemed
 A more exalted nature; wished that Man Should start out of his earthy, worm-like state,
 And spread abroad the wings of Liberty,
 Lord of himself, in undisturbed delight—
 A noble aspiration! yet I feel 255
 (Sustained by worthier as by wiser thoughts)
 The aspiration, nor shall ever cease
 To feel it;—but return we to our course.

Enough, 'tis true—could such a plea excuse
 Those aberrations—had the clamorous friends 260
 Of ancient Institutions said and done
 To bring disgrace upon their very names;
 Disgrace, of which, custom and written law,
 And sundry moral sentiments as props
 Or emanations of those institutes, 265 Too justly bore a part. A veil had been Uplifted; why deceive ourselves? in sooth,
 'Twas even so; and sorrow for the man
 Who either had not eyes wherewith to see,
 Or, seeing, had forgotten! A strong shock
 Was given to old opinions; all men's minds 271
 Had felt its power, and mine was both let loose, Let loose and goaded. After what hath been Already said of patriotic love,
 Suffice it here to add, that, somewhat stern 275

In temperament, withal a happy man,
 And therefore bold to look on painful things,
 Free likewise of the world, and thence more bold,
 I summoned my best skill, and toiled, intent
 To anatomise the frame of social life;
 Yea, the whole body of society 281
 Searched to its heart. Share with me,
 Friend! the wish
 That some dramatic tale, endowed with shapes
 Livelier, and flinging out less guarded words
 Than suit the work we fashion, might set forth 285
 What then I learned, or think I learned, of truth,
 And the errors into which I fell, betrayed
 By present objects, and by reasonings false
 From their beginnings, inasmuch as drawn
 Out of a heart that had been turned aside
 From Nature's way by outward accidents,
 And which was thus confounded, more and more Misguided, and misguiding. So I fared,
 Dragging all precepts, judgments, maxims, creeds, 294
 Like culprits to the bar; calling the mind,
 Suspiciously, to establish in plain day
 Her titles and her honours; now believing,
 Now disbelieving; endlessly perplexed
 With impulse, motive, right and wrong, the ground
 Of obligation, what the rule and whence
 The sanction; till, demanding formal proof, 301
 And seeking it in everything, I lost
 All feeling of conviction, and, in fine,
 Sick, wearied out with contrarities, 304
 Yielded up moral questions in despair.

This was the crisis of that strong disease,
 This the soul's last and lowest ebb; I drooped,
 Deeming our blessed reason of least use
 Where wanted most: "The lordly attributes 309

When the great voice was heard from out
the tombs

Of ancient heroes. If I suffered grief
For ill-requited France, by many deemed
A trifler only in her proudest day; 385
Have been distressed to think of what she once

Promised, now is; a far more sober cause
Thine eyes must see of sorrow in a land,
To the reanimating influence lost
Of memory, to virtue lost and hope, 390
Though with the wreck of loftier years bestrewn.

But indignation works where hope is
not,
And thou, O Friend! wilt be refreshed.
There is

One great society alone on earth:
The noble Living and the noble Dead. 395

Thine be such converse strong and sa-native,
A ladder for thy spirit to reascend
To health and joy and pure contented-
ness;

To me the grief confined, that thou art
gone

From this last spot of earth, where Freedom now 400

Stands single in her only sanctuary;
A lonely wanderer art gone, by pain
Compelled and sickness, at this latter day,
This sorrowful reverse for all mankind.

I feel for thee, must utter what I feel: 405
The sympathies erewhile in part discharged,

Gather afresh, and will have vent again:
My own delights do scarcely seem to me
My own delights; the lordly Alps themselves,

Those rosy peaks, from which the Morning looks 410

Abroad on many nations, are no more
For me that image of pure gladness Which they were wont to be. Through kindred scenes,

For purpose, at a time, how different!
Thou tak'st thy way, carrying the heart and soul 415

That Nature gives to Poets, now by
thought

Matured, and in the summer of their
strength.

Oh! wrap him in your shades, ye giant
woods,

On Etna's side; and thou, O flowery field
Of Enna! is there not some nook of thine,
From the first playtime of the infant
world 421

Kept sacred to restorative delight,
When from afar invoked by anxious love?

Child of the mountains, among shepherds reared,

Ere yet familiar with the classic page, 425
I learnt to dream of Sicily; and lo,
The gloom, that, but a moment past, was deepened

At thy command, at her command gives
way;

A pleasant promise, wafted from her
shores,

Comes o'er my heart: in fancy I behold
Her seas yet smiling, her once happy
vales; 431

Nor can my tongue give utterance to a name
Of note belonging to that honoured isle,
Philosopher or Bard, Empedocles,

Or Archimedes, pure abstracted soul! 435
That doth not yield a solace to my grief:
And, O Theocritus¹, so far have some Prevailed among the powers of heaven and earth,

By their endowments, good or great, that they

Have had, as thou reportest, miracles Wrought for them in old time: yea, not unmoved, 441

When thinking on my own beloved friend,
I hear thee tell how bees with honey fed
Divine Comates, by his impious lord Within a chest imprisoned; how they
came 445

Laden from blooming grove or flowery field,
And fed him there, alive, month after
month,

Because the goatherd, blessed man! had lips

Wet with the Muses' nectar.

Thus I soothe

The pensive moments by this calm fire- side, 450	'Mid temples, served by sapient priests, and choirs 460
And find a thousand bounteous images	Of virgins crowned with roses. Not in vain
To cheer the thoughts of those I love, and mine.	Those temples, where they in their ruins yet
Our prayers have been accepted; thou wilt stand	Survive for inspiration, shall attract
On Etna's summit, above earth and sea,	Thy solitary steps: and on the brink 464
Triumphant, winning from the invaded heavens 455	Thou wilt recline of pastoral Arethuse;
Thoughts without bound, magnificent de- signs,	Or, if that fountain be in truth no more, Then, near some other spring—which by the name
Worthy of poets who attuned their harps	Thou gratestest, willingly deceived—
In wood or echoing cave, for discipline	I see thee linger a glad votary, 469
Of heroes; or, in reverence to the gods,	And not a captive pining for his home.

BOOK TWELFTH.

IMAGINATION AND TASTE, HOW IMPAIRED AND RESTORED.

LONG time have human ignorance and guilt	Bend the complying heads of lordly pines, And, with a touch, shift the stupendous clouds
Detained us, on what spectacles of woe	Through the whole compass of the sky;
Compelled to look, and inwardly op- pressed	ye brooks,
With sorrow, disappointment, vexing thoughts,	Muttering along the stones, a busy noise
Confusion of the judgment, zeal decayed, And, lastly, utter loss of hope itself 6	By day, a quiet sound in silent night; 20
And things to hope for! Not with these began	Ye waves, that out of the great deep steal forth
Our song, and not with these our song must end.—	In a calm hour to kiss the pebbly shore, Not mute, and then retire, fearing no storm;
Ye motions of delight, that haunt the sides	And you, ye groves, whose ministry it is To interpose the covert of your shades, 25
Of the green hills; ye breezes and soft airs, 10	Even as a sleep, between the heart of man And outward troubles, between man him- self,
Whose subtle intercourse with breathing flowers,	Not seldom, and his own uneasy heart:
Feelingly watched, might teach Man's haughty race	Oh! that I had a music and a voice Harmonious as your own, that I might tell 30
How without injury to take, to give	What ye have done for me. The morning shines,
Without offence; ye who, as if to show The wondrous influence of power gently used, 15	Nor heedeth Man's perverseness; Spring returns,—

I saw the Spring return, and could rejoice,
In common with the children of her love,
Piping on boughs, or sporting on fresh
fields, 35

Or boldly seeking pleasure nearer heaven
On wings that navigate cerulean skies.
So neither were complacency, nor peace, Nor tender yearnings, wanting for my
good

Through these distracted times; in Nature still 40

Glorying, I found a counterpoise in her,
Which, when the spirit of evil reached its height,

Maintained for me a secret happiness.

This narrative, my Friend! hath chiefly told

Of intellectual power, fostering love, 45 Dispensing truth, and, over men and
things,

Where reason yet might hesitate, diffusing
Prophetic sympathies of genial faith :

So was I favoured—such my happy lot—
Until that natural graciousness of mind

Gave way to overpressure from the times
And their disastrous issues. What availed,

When spells forbade the voyager to land,
That fragrant notice of a pleasant shore

Wafted, at intervals, from many a bower
Of blissful gratitude and fearless love? 56

Dare I avow that wish was mine to see,
And hope that future times would surely
see,

The man to come, parted, as by a gulph,
From him who had been; that I could no
more 60

Trust the elevation which had made me
one

With the great family that still survives
To illuminate the abyss of ages past,

Sage, warrior, patriot, hero; for it seemed That their best virtues were not free from taint 65

Of something false and weak, that could not stand

The open eye of Reason. Then I said, “Go to the Poets, they will speak to thee
More perfectly of purer creatures;—yet

If reason be nobility in man, 70
Can aught be more ignoble than the man

Whom they delight in, blinded as he is
By prejudice, the miserable slave
Of low ambition or distempered love?”

In such strange passion, if I may once
more 75

Review the past, I warred against myself—

A bigot to a new idolatry—

Like a cowed monk who hath forsworn
the world,

Zealously laboured to cut off my heart
From all the sources of her former
strength; 80

And as, by simple waving of a wand,
The wizard instantaneously dissolves
Palace or grove, even so could I unsoul
As readily by syllogistic words

Those mysteries of being which have
made, 85

And shall continue evermore to make,
Of the whole human race one brotherhood.

What wonder, then, if, to a mind so far Perverted, even the visible Universe

Fell under the dominion of a taste 90
Less spiritual, with microscopic view

Was scanned, as I had scanned the moral
world?

O Soul of Nature! excellent and fair!
That didst rejoice with me, with whom I,
too,

Rejoiced through early youth, before the
winds 95

And roaring waters, and in lights and
shades

That marched and countermarched about
the hills

In glorious apparition, Powers on whom
I daily waited, now all eye and now 99

All ear; but never long without the heart Employed, and man's unfolding intellect:

O Soul of Nature! that, by laws divine Sustained and governed, still dost over-
flow

With an impassioned life, what feeble ones

Walk on this earth! how feeble have I
been 105

When thou wert in thy strength! Nor this through stroke
 Of human suffering, such as justifies Remissness and inaptitude of mind,
 But through presumption; even in pleasure pleased 109
 Unworthily, disliking here, and there Liking; by rules of mimic art transferred To things above all art; but more,—for
 this,
 Although a strong infection of the age,
 Was never much my habit—giving way
 To a comparison of scene with scene, 115
 Bent overmuch on superficial things,
 Pampering myself with meagre novelties
 Of colour and proportion; to the moods
 Of time and season, to the moral power,
 The affections and the spirit of the place,
 Insensible. Nor only did the love 121
 Of sitting thus in judgment interrupt
 My deeper feelings, but another cause,
 More subtle and less easily explained,
 That almost seems inherent in the creature, 125
 A twofold frame of body and of mind.
 I speak in recollection of a time
 When the bodily eye, in every stage of life
 The most despotic of our senses, gained Such strength in me as often held my
 mind 130
 In absolute dominion. Gladly here,
 Entering upon abstruser argument,
 Could I endeavour to unfold the means Which Nature studiously employs to thwart
 This tyranny, summons all the senses
 each 135
 To counteract the other, and themselves,
 And makes them all, and the objects with which all
 Are conversant, subservient in their turn
 To the great ends of Liberty and Power.
 But leave me this: enough that my delights 140
 (Such as they were) were sought insati-ably.
 Vivid the transport, vivid though not
 profound;
 I roamed from hill to hill, from rock to
 rock,
 Still craving combinations of new forms,

New pleasure, wider empire for the sight,
 Proud of her own endowments, and rejoiced 146
 To lay the inner faculties asleep.
 Amid the turns and counterturns, the
 strife
 And various trials of our complex being,
 As we grow up, such thralldom of that
 sense 150
 Seems hard to shun. And yet I knew a maid,
 A young enthusiast, who escaped these bonds;
 Her eye was not the mistress of her
 heart;
 Far less did rules prescribed by passive taste,
 Or barren intermeddling subtleties, 155
 Perplex her mind; but, wise as women
 are
 When genial circumstance hath favoured
 them,
 She welcomed what was given, and craved
 no more;
 Whate'er the scene presented to her view
 That was the best, to that she was attuned
 By her benign simplicity of life, 161
 And through a perfect happiness of soul,
 Whose variegated feelings were in this Sisters, that they were each some new
 delight.
 Birds in the bower, and lambs in the green field, 165
 Could they have known her, would have loved; methought
 Her very presence such a sweetness
 breathed,
 That flowers, and trees, and even the silent hills,
 And everything she looked on, should have had
 An intimation how she bore herself 170 Towards them and to all creatures. God delights
 In such a being; for, her common
 thoughts
 Are piety, her life is gratitude.

 Even like this maid, before I was called
 forth 174
 From the retirement of my native hills,

I loved whate'er I saw : nor lightly loved,
But most intensely ; never dreamt of aught

More grand, more fair, more exquisitely framed

Than those few nooks to which my happy
feet

Were limited. I had not at that time Lived long enough, nor in the least survived 181

The first diviner influence of this world,
As it appears to unaccustomed eyes.
Worshipping then among the depth of
things,

As piety ordained ; could I submit 185
To measured admiration, or to aught
That should preclude humility and love ?
I felt, observed, and pondered ; did not judge,

Yea, never thought of judging ; with the gift

Of all this glory filled and satisfied. 190
And afterwards, when through the gorgeous Alps

Roaming, I carried with me the same
heart :

In truth, the degradation—howsoe'er
Induced, effect, in whatsoe'er degree,
Of custom that prepares a partial scale
In which the little oft outweighs the great ; 196

Or any other cause that hath been named ;

Or lastly, aggravated by the times
And their impassioned sounds, which well might make 199

The milder minstrelsies of rural scenes
Inaudible—was transient ; I had known
Too forcibly, too early in my life,
Visitings of imaginative power
For this to last : I shook the habit off
Entirely and for ever, and again 205
In Nature's presence stood, as now I
stand,

A sensitive being, a creative soul.

There are in our existence spots of
time,

That with distinct pre-eminence retain
A renovating virtue, whence, depressed
By false opinion and contentious thought,

Or aught of heavier or more deadly
weight,

In trivial occupations, and the round
Of ordinary intercourse, our minds 214
Are nourished and invisibly repaired ;

A virtue, by which pleasure is enhanced,
That penetrates, enables us to mount,
When high, more high, and lifts us up when fallen.

This efficacious spirit chiefly lurks
Among those passages of life that give Profoundest knowledge to what point,
and how, 221

The mind is lord and master—outward
sense

The obedient servant of her will. Such moments

Are scattered everywhere, taking their date

From our first childhood. I remember
well, 225

That once, while yet my inexperienced
hand

Could scarcely hold a bridle, with proud
hopes

I mounted, and we journeyed towards
the hills :

An ancient servant of my father's house
Was with me, my encourager and guide :
We had not travelled long, ere some mischance 231

Disjoined me from my 'comrade ; and,
through fear

Dismounting, down the rough and stony moor

I led my horse, and, stumbling on, at length

Came to a bottom, where in former times
A murderer had been hung in iron chains.
The gibbet-mast had mouldered down,
the bones 237

And iron case were gone ; but on the
turf,

Hard by, soon after that fell deed was
wrought,

Some unknown hand had carved the murderer's name. 240

The monumental letters were inscribed
In times long past ; but still, from year to year,

By superstition of the neighbourhood,

The grass is cleared away, and to this
hour

The characters are fresh and visible: 245
A casual glance had shown them, and I
fled,

Faltering and faint, and ignorant of the
road:

Then, reascending the bare common, saw
A naked pool that lay beneath the hills,
The beacon on the summit, and, more
near, 250

A girl, who bore a pitcher on her head,
And seemed with difficult steps to force her way

Against the blowing wind. It was, in
truth,

An ordinary sight; but I should need Colours and words that are unknown to
man, 255

To paint the visionary dreariness Which, while I looked all round for my lost guide,

Invested moorland waste, and naked pool,
The beacon crowning the lone eminence,
The female and her garments vexed and
tossed 260

By the strong wind. When, in the blessed
hours

Of early love, the loved one at my side,
I roamed, in daily presence of this scene,
Upon the naked pool and dreary crags,
And on the melancholy beacon, fell 265

A spirit of pleasure and youth's golden
gleam;

And think ye not with radiance more
sublime

For these remembrances, and for the
power

They had left behind? So feeling comes in aid

Of feeling, and diversity of strength 270 Attends us, if but once we have been strong.

Oh! mystery of man, from what a depth Proceed thy honours. I am lost, but see In simple childhood something of the base

On which thy greatness stands; but this
I feel, 275

That from thyself it comes, that thou must give,

Else never canst receive. The days gone
by

Return upon me almost from the dawn
Of life: the hiding-places of man's power Open; I would approach them, but they
close. 280

I see by glimpses now; when age comes
on,

May scarcely see at all; and I would
give,

While yet we may, as far as words can
give,

Substance and life to what I feel, enshrin-
ing,

Such is my hope, the spirit of the Past
For future restoration.—Yet another 286
Of these memorials:—

One Christmas-time,
On the glad eve of its dear holidays,
Feverish, and tired, and restless, I went
forth

Into the fields, impatient for the sight
Of those led palfreys that should bear us
home; 291

My brothers and myself. There rose a
crag,

That, from the meeting-point of two highways

Ascending, overlooked them both, far
stretched;

Thither, uncertain on which road to fix
My expectation, thither I repaired, 296 Scout-like, and gained the summit; 'twas
a day

Tempestuous, dark, and wild, and on the grass

I sate half-sheltered by a naked wall;
Upon my right hand couched a single
sheep, 300

Upon my left a blasted hawthorn stood;
With those companions at my side, I watched,

Straining my eyes intensely, as the mist
Gave intermitting prospect of the copse And plain beneath. Ere we to school
returned,— 305

That dreary time,—ere we had been ten
days

Sojourners in my father's house, he died,
And I and my three brothers, orphans
then,

Followed his body to the grave. The
 event,
 With all the sorrow that it brought,
 appeared 310
 A chastisement; and when I called to
 mind
 That day so lately past, when from the
 crag
 I looked in such anxiety of hope;
 With trite reflections of morality, 314
 Yet in the deepest passion, I bowed low
 To God, Who thus corrected my desires;
 And, afterwards, the wind and sleety rain,
 And all the business of the elements,
 The single sheep, and the one blasted tree,
 And the bleak music from that old stone
 wall, 320
 The noise of wood and water, and the mist
 That on the line of each of those two roads

Advanced in such indisputable shapes;
 All these were kindred spectacles and
 sounds
 To which I oft repaired, and thence would drink, 325
 As at a fountain; and on winter nights, Down to this very time, when storm and rain
 Beat on my roof, or, haply, at noon-day, While in a grove I walk, whose lofty
 trees,
 Laden with summer's thickest foliage,
 rock 330
 In a strong wind, some working of the
 spirit,
 Some inward agitations thence are brought,
 Whate'er their office, whether to beguile Thoughts over busy in the course they took,
 Or animate an hour of vacant ease. 335

BOOK THIRTEENTH.

IMAGINATION AND TASTE, HOW IMPAIRED AND RESTORED.—(CONCLUDED).

FROM Nature doth emotion come, and moods
 Of calmness equally are Nature's gift :
 This is her glory ; these two attributes
 Are sister horns that constitute her
 strength.
 Hence Genius, born to thrive by interchange 5
 Of peace and excitation, finds in her
 His best and purest friend ; from her receives
 That energy by which he seeks the truth,
 From her that happy stillness of the
 mind
 Which fits him to receive it when un-
 sought. 10

Such benefit the humblest intellects
 Partake of, each in their degree ; 'tis mine
 To speak, what I myself have known and
 felt ;
 Smooth task ! for words find easy way,
 inspired
 By gratitude, and confidence in truth. 15
 Long time in search of knowledge did I
 range
 The field of human life, in heart and
 mind
 Benighted ; but, the dawn beginning
 now
 To re-appear, 'twas proved that not in
 vain
 I had been taught to reverence a Power
 That is the visible quality and shape 21
 And image of right reason ; that matures
 Her processes by steadfast laws ; gives
 birth
 To no impatient or fallacious hopes,
 No heat of passion or excessive zeal, 25
 No vain conceits ; provokes to no quick turns

Of self-applauding intellect ; but trains
 To meekness, and exalts by humble faith ;
 Holds up before the mind intoxicate 29
 With present objects, and the busy dance
 Of things that pass away, a temperate show
 Of objects that endure ; and by this course
 Disposes her, when over-fondly set On throwing off incumbrances, to seek
 In man, and in the frame of social life, 35
 Whate'er there is desirable and good Of kindred permanence, unchanged in
 form
 And function, or, through strict vicissi-
 tude
 Of life and death, revolving. Above all Were re-established now those watchful
 thoughts 40
 Which, seeing little worthy or sublime
 In what the Historian's pen so much delights
 To blazon—power and energy detached
 From moral purpose—early tutored me
 To look with feelings of fraternal love 45
 Upon the unassuming things that hold
 A silent station in this beauteous world.
 Thus moderated, thus composed, I found
 Once more in Man an object of delight,
 Of pure imagination, and of love ; 50
 And, as the horizon of my mind enlarged,
 Again I took the intellectual eye
 For my instructor, studious more to see Great truths, than touch and handle little ones.
 Knowledge was given accordingly ; my
 trust 55
 Became more firm in feelings that had
 stood
 The test of such a trial ; clearer far My sense of excellence—of right and
 wrong :
 The promise of the present time retired

Into its true proportion; sanguine schemes, Ambitious projects, pleased me less; I
sought 61

For present good in life's familiar face,
And built thereon my hopes of good to
come.

With settling judgments now of what would last

And what would disappear; prepared to
find 65

Presumption, folly, madness, in the men Who thrust themselves upon the passive
world

As Rulers of the world; to see in these,
Even when the public welfare is their aim,
Plans without thought, or built on theories 70

Vague and unsound; and having brought the books

Of modern statists to their proper test,
Life, human life, with all its sacred claims Of sex and age, and heaven-descended
rights,

Mortal, or those beyond the reach of
death; 75

And having thus discerned how dire a thing

Is worshipped in that idol proudly named "The Wealth of Nations," where alone that wealth

Is lodged, and how increased; and having gained

A more judicious knowledge of the worth
And dignity of individual man, 81

No composition of the brain, but man
Of whom we read, the man whom we be-
hold

With our own eyes—I could not but enquire—

Not with less interest than heretofore, 85
But greater, though in spirit more subdued—

Why is this glorious creature to be found
One only in ten thousand? What one is, Why may not millions be? What bars are thrown

By Nature in the way of such a hope? 90
Our animal appetites and daily wants,
Are these obstructions insurmountable?
If not, then others vanish into air.

"Inspect the basis of the social pile:
Enquire," said I, "how much of mental
power 95

And genuine virtue they possess who live
By bodily toil, labour exceeding far
Their due proportion, under all the weight
Of that injustice which upon ourselves Ourselves entail." Such estimate to frame
I chiefly looked (what need to look beyond?) 101

Among the natural abodes of men, Fields with their rural works; recalled to mind

My earliest notices; with these compared
The observations made in later youth,
And to that day continued.—For, the
time 106

Had never been when throes of mighty Nations

And the world's tumult unto me could
yield,

How far soe'er transported and possessed,
Full measure of content; but still I craved 110

An intermingling of distinct regards
And truths of individual sympathy Nearer ourselves. Such often might be gleaned

From the great City, else it must have proved

To me a heart-depressing wilderness; 115
But much was wanting: therefore did I
turn

To you, ye pathways, and ye lonely roads;
Sought you enriched with everything I
prized,

With human kindnesses and simple joys.

Oh! next to one dear state of bliss, vouchsafed 120

Alas! to few in this untoward world,
The bliss of walking daily in life's prime Through field or forest with the maid we
love,

While yet our hearts are young, while yet we breathe 124

Nothing but happiness, in some lone nook,
Deep vale, or anywhere, the home of both,
From which it would be misery to stir:

Oh! next to such enjoyment of our youth,
In my esteem, next to such dear delight,

Was that of wandering on from day to
 day 130
 Where I could meditate in peace, and cull Knowledge that step by step might lead me on
 To wisdom ; or, as lightsome as a bird
 Wafted upon the wind from distant lands, Sing notes of greeting to strange fields or
 groves, 135
 Which lacked not voice to welcome me in
 turn :
 And, when that pleasant toil had ceased
 to please,
 Converse with men, where if we meet a
 face
 We almost meet a friend, on naked heaths
 With long long ways before, by cottage bench, 140
 Or well-spring where the weary traveller rests.

Who doth not love to follow with his eye
 The windings of a public way? the sight,
 Familiar object as it is, hath wrought
 On my imagination since the morn 145
 Of childhood, when a disappearing line,
 One daily present to my eyes, that crossed
 The naked summit of a far-off hill
 Beyond the limits that my feet had trod,
 Was like an invitation into space 150
 Boundless, or guide into eternity.
 Yes, something of the grandeur which invests
 The mariner who sails the roaring sea Through storm and darkness, early in my
 mind Surrounded, too, the wanderers of the
 earth ; 155
 Grandeur as much, and loveliness far
 more.
 Awed have I been by strolling Bedlamites ;
 From many other uncouth vagrants
 (passed In fear) have walked with quicker step ;
 but why Take note of this? When I began to enquire, 160
 To watch and question those I met, and
 speak

Without reserve to them, the lonely roads
 Were open schools in which I daily read With most delight the passions of man-
 kind,
 Whether by words, looks, sighs, or tears, revealed ; 165
 There saw into the depth of human souls,
 Souls that appear to have no depth at all To careless eyes. And—now convinced at heart
 How little those formalities, to which
 With overweening trust alone we give
 The name of Education, have to do 171
 With real feeling and just sense ; how vain
 A correspondence with the talking world Proves to the most ; and called to make good search
 If man's estate, by doom of Nature yoked
 With toil, be therefore yoked with ignorance ; 176
 If virtue be indeed so hard to rear,
 And intellectual strength so rare a boon—
 I prized such walks still more, for there
 I found
 Hope to my hope, and to my pleasure
 peace 180
 And steadiness, and healing and repose
 To every angry passion. There I heard,
 From mouths of men obscure and lowly,
 truths
 Replete with honour ; sounds in unison
 With loftiest promises of good and fair.

There are who think that strong affection, love 186
 Known by whatever name, is falsely deemed
 A gift, to use a term which they would use,
 Of vulgar nature ; that its growth requires Retirement, leisure, language purified
 By manners studied and elaborate ; 191 That whoso feels such passion in its
 strength
 Must live within the very light and air
 Of courteous usages refined by art.
 True is it, where oppression worse than
 death 195
 Salutes the being at his birth, where grace
 Of culture hath been utterly unknown,
 And poverty and labour in excess
 From day to day pre-occupy the ground

Of the affections, and to Nature's self 200
Oppose a deeper nature; there, indeed, Love cannot be; nor does it thrive with ease

Among the close and overcrowded haunts.
Of cities, where the human heart is sick,
And the eye feeds it not, and cannot feed. 205

—Yes, in those wanderings deeply did
I feel

How we mislead each other; above all,
How books mislead us, seeking their reward

From judgments of the wealthy Few,
who see

By artificial lights; how they debase 210
The Many for the pleasure of those Few;
Effeminately level down the truth

To certain general notions, for the sake
Of being understood at once, or else Through want of better knowledge in the heads 215

That framed them; flattering self-conceit with words,

That, while they most ambitiously set
forth

Extrinsic differences, the outward marks
Whereby society has parted man

From man, neglect the universal heart. 220

Here, calling up to mind what then
I saw,

A youthful traveller, and see daily now
In the familiar circuit of my home, Here might I pause, and bend in reverence

To Nature, and the power of human
minds, 225

To men as they are men within themselves.

How oft high service is performed within,
When all the external man is rude in
show,—

Not like a temple rich with pomp and
gold,

But a mere mountain-chapel, that protects Its simple worshippers from sun and
shower. 231

Of these, said I, shall be my song; of
these,

If future years mature me for the task,

Will I record the praises, making verse Deal boldly with substantial things; in
truth 235

And sanctity of passion, speak of these,
That justice may be done, obeisance paid
Where it is due: thus haply shall I teach,
Inspire; through unadulterated ears

Pour rapture, tenderness, and hope,—my
theme 240

No other than the very heart of man,
As found among the best of those who
live—

Not unexalted by religious faith,
Nor uninformed by books, good books, though few—

In Nature's presence: thence may I select 245

Sorrow, that is not sorrow, but delight;
And miserable love, that is not pain
To hear of, for the glory that redounds Therefrom to human kind, and what we are.

Be mine to follow with no timid step 250
Where knowledge leads me: it shall be my pride

That I have dared to tread this holy
ground,

Speaking no dream, but things oracular;
Matter not lightly to be heard by those Who to the letter of the outward promise 255

Do read the invisible soul; by men adroit
In speech, and for communion with the
world

Accomplished; minds whose faculties are
then

Most active when they are most eloquent,
And elevated most when most admired.

Men may be found of other mould than
these, 261

Who are their own upholders, to themselves

Encouragement, and energy, and will,
Expressing liveliest thoughts in lively
words 264

As native passion dictates. Others, too,
There are among the walks of homely life
Still higher, men for contemplation
framed,

Shy, and unpractised in the strife of
phrase;

Meek men, whose very souls perhaps would sink
 Beneath them, summoned to such inter-
 course: 270
 Theirs is the language of the heavens, the
 power,
 The thought, the image, and the silent joy:
 Words are but under-agents in their
 souls;
 When they are grasping with their greatest strength,
 They do not breathe among them: this
 I speak 275
 In gratitude to God, Who feeds our
 hearts
 For His own service; knoweth, loveth us,
 When we are unregarded by the world.

Also, about this time did I receive Convictions still more strong than heretofore, 280
 Not only that the inner frame is good,
 And graciously composed, but that, no
 less,
 Nature for all conditions wants not
 power
 To consecrate, if we have eyes to see,
 The outside of her creatures, and to breathe 285
 Grandeur upon the very humblest face
 Of human life. I felt that the array
 Of act and circumstance, and visible form,
 Is mainly to the pleasure of the mind
 What passion makes them; that meanwhile the forms 290
 Of Nature have a passion in themselves,
 That intermingles with those works of
 man
 To which she summons him; although the works
 Be mean, have nothing lofty of their own;
 And that the Genius of the Poet hence 295
 May boldly take his way among mankind Wherever Nature leads; that he hath
 stood
 By Nature's side among the men of old,
 And so shall stand for ever. Dearest
 Friend!
 If thou partake the animating faith 300
 That Poets, even as Prophets, each with
 each

Connected in a mighty scheme of truth,
 Have each his own peculiar faculty, Heaven's gift, a sense that fits him to perceive Objects unseen before, thou wilt not blame 305
 The humblest of this band who dares to
 hope
 That unto him hath also been vouchsafed
 An insight that in some sort he possesses,
 A privilege whereby a work of his,
 Proceeding from a source of untaught
 things, 310
 Creative and enduring, may become A power like one of Nature's. To a hope
 Not less ambitious once among the wilds Of Sarum's Plain, my youthful spirit was raised;
 There, as I ranged at will the pastoral downs 315
 Trackless and smooth, or paced the bare white roads
 Lengthening in solitude their dreary line,
 Time with his retinue of ages fled Backwards, nor checked his flight until I saw
 Our dim ancestral Past in vision clear; Saw multitudes of men, and, here and
 there, 321
 A single Briton clothed in wolf-skin vest,
 With shield and stone-axe, stride across the wold;
 The voice of spears was heard, the rattling spear
 Shaken by arms of mighty bone, in
 strength, 325
 Long mouldered, of barbaric majesty.
 I called on Darkness—but before the word Was uttered, midnight darkness seemed to take
 All objects from my sight; and lo! again
 The Desert visible by dismal flames; 330
 It is the sacrificial altar, fed
 With living men—how deep the groans!
 the voice
 Of those that crowd the giant wicker thrills
 The monumental hillocks, and the pomp
 Is for both worlds, the living and the dead.
 At other moments—for through that wide waste 336

Three summer days I roamed) where'er
the Plain

Was figured o'er with circles, lines, or mounds,

That yet survive, a work, as some divine,
Shaped by the Druids, so to represent

Their knowledge of the heavens, and image forth 341

The constellations—gently was I charmed
Into a waking dream, a reverie

That, with believing eyes, where'er I
turned,

Beheld long-bearded teachers, with white
wands 345

Uplifted, pointing to the starry sky,
Alternately, and plain below, while breath

Of music swayed their motions, and the
waste

Rejoiced with them and me in those sweet sounds.

This for the past, and things that may be viewed 350

Or fancied in the obscurity of years
From monumental hints: and thou, O

Friend!

Pleased with some unpremeditated strains
That served those wanderings to beguile, hast said

That then and there my mind had exercised 355

Upon the vulgar forms of present things,
The actual world of our familiar days,

Yet higher power; had caught from them
a tone,

An image, and a character, by books
Not hitherto reflected. Call we this 360

A partial judgment—and yet why? for
then

We were as strangers; and I may not
speak

Thus wrongfully of verse, however rude,
Which on thy young imagination, trained

In the great City, broke like light from far.
Moreover, each man's Mind is to herself

Witness and judge; and I remember well
That in life's every-day appearances

I seemed about this time to gain clear sight
Of a new world—a world, too, that was fit

To be transmitted, and to other eyes 371
Made visible; as ruled by those fixed laws

Whence spiritual dignity originates,
Which do both give it being and maintain

A balance, an ennobling interchange 375
Of action from without and from within;

The excellence, pure function, and best
power

Both of the object seen, and eye that sees.

BOOK FOURTEENTH.

CONCLUSION.

In one of those excursions (may they ne'er Fade from remembrance!) through the Northern tracts Of 'Cambria ranging with a youthful friend, I left Bethgelert's huts at couching-time, And westward took my way, to see the sun 5 Rise, from the top of Snowdon. To the door Of a rude cottage at the mountain's base We came, and roused the shepherd who attends The adventurous stranger's steps, a trusty guide; Then, cheered by short refreshment, sal- lied forth. 10 It was a close, warm, breezeless summer night, Wan, dull, and glaring, with a dripping fog Low-hung and thick that covered all the sky; But, undiscouraged, we began to climb The mountain-side. The mist soon girt us round, 15 And, after ordinary travellers' talk With our conductor, pensively we sank Each into commerce with his private thoughts: Thus did we breast the ascent, and by myself Was nothing either seen or heard that checked 20 Those musings or diverted, save that once The shepherd's lurcher, who, among the crags, Had to his joy unearthed a hedgehog, teased	His coiled-up prey with barkings turbu- lent. This small adventure, for even such it seemed 25 In that wild place and at the dead of night, Being over and forgotten, on we wound In silence as before. With forehead bent Earthward, as if in opposition set Against an enemy, I panted up 30 With eager pace, and no less eager thoughts. Thus might we wear a midnight hour away, Ascending at loose distance each from each, And I, as chanced, the foremost of the band; When at my feet the ground appeared to brighten, 35 And with a step or two seemed brighter still; Nor was time given to ask or learn the cause, For instantly a light upon the turf Fell like a flash, and lo! as I looked up, The Moon hung naked in a firmament 40 Of azure without cloud, and at my feet Rested a silent sea of hoary mist. A hundred hills their dusky backs up- heaved All over this still ocean; and beyond, Far, far beyond, the solid vapours stretched, In headlands, tongues, and promontory shapes, 46 Into the main Atlantic, that appeared To dwindle, and give up his majesty, Usurped upon far as the sight could reach. Not so the ethereal vault; encroachment none 50
--	---

Was there, nor loss; only the inferior stars
 Had disappeared, or shed a fainter light
 In the clear presence of the full-orbed
 Moon,
 Who, from her sovereign elevation, gazed
 Upon the billowy ocean, as it lay 55
 All meek and silent, save that through a rift—
 Not distant from the shore whereon we
 stood,
 A fixed, abysmal, gloomy, breathing-
 place—
 Mounted the roar of waters, torrents,
 streams
 Innumerable, roaring with one voice! 60 Heard over earth and sea, and, in that
 hour,
 For so it seemed, felt by the starry
 heavens.

When into air had partially dissolved
 That vision, given to spirits of the night
 And three chance human wanderers, in calm thought 65
 Reflected, it appeared to me the type
 Of a majestic intellect, its acts
 And its possessions, what it has and craves,
 What in itself it is, and would become.
 There I beheld the emblem of a mind 70
 That feeds upon infinity, that broods
 Over the dark abyss, intent to hear
 Its voices issuing forth to silent light
 In one continuous stream; a mind sustained
 By recognitions of transcendent power,
 In sense conducting to ideal form, 76
 In soul of more than mortal privilege.
 One function, above all, of such a mind
 Had Nature shadowed there, by putting
 forth,
 'Mid circumstances awful and sublime, 80
 That mutual domination which she loves
 To exert upon the face of outward things,
 So moulded, joined, abstracted, so endowed
 With interchangeable supremacy,
 That men, least sensitive, see, hear, perceive, 85
 And cannot choose but feel. The power, which all

Acknowledge when thus moved, which Nature thus
 To bodily sense exhibits, is the express Resemblance of that glorious faculty That higher minds bear with them as their own. 90
 This is the very spirit in which they deal
 With the whole compass of the universe:
 They from their native selves can send
 abroad
 Kindred mutations; for themselves create
 A like existence; and, when'er it dawns Created for them, catch it, or are caught
 By its inevitable mastery, Like angels stopped upon the wing by
 sound
 Of harmony from Heaven's remotest
 spheres.
 Them the enduring and the transient
 both 100
 Serve to exalt; they build up greatest
 things
 From least suggestions; ever on the watch,
 Willing to work and to be wrought upon,
 They need not extraordinary calls To rouse them; in a world of life they
 live, 105
 By sensible impressions not enthralled,
 But by their quickening impulse made more prompt
 To hold fit converse with the spiritual
 world,
 And with the generations of mankind Spread over time, past, present, and to
 come, 110
 Age after age, till Time shall be no more.
 Such minds are truly from the Deity, For they are Powers; and hence the highest bliss
 That flesh can know is theirs—the consciousness
 Of Whom they are, habitually infused Through every image and through every
 thought, 116
 And all affections by communion raised From earth to heaven, from human to
 divine;
 Hence endless occupation for the Soul,
 Whether discursive or intuitive; 120
 Hence cheerfulness for acts of daily life,

Emotions which best foresight need not
fear,
Most worthy then of trust when most intense.
Hence, amid ills that vex and wrongs that crush
Our hearts—if here the words of Holy Writ 125
May with fit reverence be applied—that
peace
Which passeth understanding, that repose
In moral judgments which from this pure
source
Must come, or will by man be sought in
vain.

Oh! who is he that hath his whole life
long 130
Preserved, enlarged, this freedom in himself?
For this alone is genuine liberty:
Where is the favoured being who hath
held
That course unchecked, unerring, and un-
tired,
In one perpetual progress smooth and
bright?— 135
A humbler destiny have we retraced,
And told of lapse and hesitating choice,
And backward wanderings along thorny
ways:
Yet—compassed round by mountain solitudes,
Within whose solemn temple I received
My earliest visitations, careless then 141
Of what was given me; and which now I
range,
A meditative, oft a suffering, man—
Do I declare—in accents which, from
truth
Deriving cheerful confidence, shall blend Their modulation with these vocal
streams— 146
That, whatsoever falls my better mind,
Revolving with the accidents of life,
May have sustained, that, howso'er mis-
led,
Never did I, in quest of right and wrong,
Tamper with conscience from a private
aim; 151
Nor was in any public hope the dupe

Of selfish passions; nor did ever yield Wilfully to mean cares or low pursuits,
But shrunk with apprehensive jealousy
From every combination which might aid
The tendency, too potent in itself,
Of use and custom to bow down the soul
Under a growing weight of vulgar sense,
And substitute a universe of death 160
For that which moves with light and life informed,
Actual, divine, and true. To fear and love,
To love as prime and chief, for there fear
ends,
Be this ascribed; to early intercourse,
In presence of sublime or beautiful forms,
With the adverse principles of pain and
joy— 166
Evil as one is rashly named by men Who know not what they speak. By love subsists
All lasting grandeur, by pervading love;
That gone, we are as dust.—Behold the
fields 170
In balmy spring-time full of rising flowers
And joyous creatures; see that pair, the lamb
And the lamb's mother, and their tender
ways
Shall touch thee to the heart; thou call-est this love,
And not inaptly so, for love it is, 175
Far as it carries thee. In some green
bower
Rest, and be not alone, but have thou there
The One who is thy choice of all the
world:
There linger, listening, gazing, with de-
light
Impassioned, but delight how pitiable!
Unless this love by a still higher love 181
Be hallowed, love that breathes not without awe;
Love that adores, but on the knees of
prayer,
By heaven inspired; that frees from chains the soul,
Lifted, in union with the purest, best, 185
Of earth-born passions, on the wings of
praise
Bearing a tribute to the Almighty's
Throne.

This spiritual Love acts not nor can exist

Without Imagination, which, in truth,
Is but another name for absolute power
And clearest insight, amplitude of mind,
And Reason in her most exalted mood.
This faculty hath been the feeding source Of our long labour: we have traced the
stream

From the blind cavern whence is faintly
heard

195

Its natal murmur; followed it to light
And open day; accompanied its course
Among the ways of Nature, for a time
Lost sight of it bewildered and engulfed;
Then given it greeting as it rose once
more

200

In strength, reflecting from its placid
breast

The works of man and face of human life;
And lastly, from its progress have we
drawn

Faith in life endless, the sustaining
thought

Of human Being, Eternity, and God. 205

Imagination having been our theme,
So also hath that intellectual Love,
For they are each in each, and cannot
stand

Dividually.—Here must thou be, O Man!
Power to thyself; no Helper hast thou
here;

210

Here keepest thou in singleness thy state:
No other can divide with thee this work:
No secondary hand can intervene
To fashion this ability; 'tis thine,

The prime and vital principle is thine 215

In the recesses of thy nature, far
From any reach of outward fellowship,
Else is not thine at all. But joy to him,
Oh, joy to him who here hath sown, hath
laid

Here, the foundation of his future years!
For all that friendship, all that love can do,

221

All that a darling countenance can look
Or dear voice utter, to complete the man,
Perfect him, made imperfect in himself,
All shall be his: and he whose soul hath risen

225

Up to the height of feeling intellect Shall want no humbler tenderness; his
heart

Be tender as a nursing mother's heart;
Of female softness shall his life be full,
Of humble cares and delicate desires, 230
Mild interests and gentlest sympathies.

Child of my parents! Sister of my soul!
Thanks in sincerest verse have been elsewhere

Poured out for all the early tenderness
Which I from thee imbibed: and 'tis most true

235

That later seasons owed to thee no less;
For, spite of thy sweet influence and the
touch

Of kindred hands that opened out the springs

Of genial thought in childhood, and in spite
Of all that unassisted I had marked 240

In life or nature of those charms minute
That win their way into the heart by stealth,

Still (to the very going-out of youth)
I too exclusively esteemed that love,
And sought that beauty, which, as Milton sings,

245

Hath terror in it. Thou didst soften down
This over-sternness; but for thee, dear
Friend!

My soul, too reckless of mild grace, had
stood

In her original self too confident,
Retained too long a countenance severe;
A rock with torrents roaring, with the clouds

251

Familiar, and a favourite of the stars:
But thou didst plant its crevices with
flowers,

Hang it with shrubs that twinkle in the
breeze,

And teach the little birds to build their nests

255

And warble in its chambers. At a time
When Nature, destined to remain so long Foremost in my affections, had fallen back Into a second place, pleased to become A handmaid to a nobler than herself, 260
When every day brought with it some new sense

Of exquisite regard for common things,
And all the earth was budding with these gifts.

Of more refined humanity, thy breath,
Dear Sister! was a kind of gentler spring
That went before my steps. Thereafter
came 266

One whom with thee friendship had early
paired;

She came, no more a phantom to adorn
A moment, but an inmate of the heart,
And yet a spirit, there for me enshrined
To penetrate the lofty and the low; 271
Even as one essence of pervading light Shines, in the brightest of ten thousand
stars,

And, the meek worm that feeds her lonely
lamp
Couched in the dewy grass.

With such a theme,
Coleridge! with this my argument, of
thee 276

Shall I be silent? O capacious Soul!
Placed on this earth to love and under-
stand,

And from thy presence shed the light of
love,

Shall I be mute, ere thou be spoken of?
Thy kindred influence to my heart of
hearts 281

Did also find its way. Thus fear relaxed
Her overweening grasp; thus thoughts and things

In the self-haunting spirit learned to take
More rational proportions; mystery, 285
The incumbent mystery of sense and soul,
Of life and death, time and eternity,

Admitted more habitually a mild
Interposition—a serene delight In closelier gathering cares, such as become 290

A human creature, howsoe'er endowed,
Poet, or destined for a humbler name;
And so the deep enthusiastic joy,
The rapture of the hallelujah sent From all that breathes and is, was chastened, stemmed 295

And balanced by pathetic truth, by trust
In hopeful reason, leaning on the stay Of Providence; and in reverence for duty,

Here, if need be, struggling with storms,
and there

Strewing in peace life's humblest ground with herbs, 300
At every season green, sweet at all hours.

And now, O Friend! this history is
brought

To its appointed close: the discipline
And consummation of a Poet's mind,
In everything that stood most prominent,
Have faithfully been pictured; we have reached 306

The time (our guiding object from the first)

When we may, not presumptuously, I
hope,

Suppose my powers so far confirmed, and
such 309

My knowledge, as to make me capable
Of building up a Work that shall endure.
Yet much hath been omitted, as need
was;

Of books how much! and even of the other wealth

That is collected among woods and fields,
Far more: for Nature's secondary grace
Hath hitherto been barely touched upon,
The charm more superficial that attends Her works, as they present to Fancy's
choice

Apt illustrations of the moral world, Caught at a glance, or traced with curious pains. 320

Finally, and above all, O Friend! (I
speak

With due regret) how much is overlooked
In human nature and her subtle ways,
As studied first in our own hearts, and
then 324

In life among the passions of mankind,
Varying their composition and their hue, Where'er we move, under the diverse shapes

That individual character presents
To an attentive eye. For progress meet,
Along this intricate and difficult path, Whate'er was wanting, something had I
gained, 331

As one of many schoolfellows compelled,

In hardy independence, to stand up
Amid conflicting interests, and the shock
Of various tempers; to endure and note
What was not understood, though known
to be; 336

Among the mysteries of love and hate, Honour and shame, looking to right and
left,

Unchecked by innocence too delicate,
And moral notions too intolerant, 340 Sympathies too contracted. Hence, when called

To take a station among men, the step
Was easier, the transition more secure,
More profitable also; for the mind 344
Learns from such timely exercise to keep
In wholesome separation the two natures,
The one that feels, the other that observes.

Yet one word more of personal concern;—

Since I withdrew unwillingly from France,
I led an undomestic wanderer's life, 350
In London chiefly harboured, whence I
roamed,

Tarrying at will in many a pleasant spot
Of rural England's cultivated vales Or Cambrian solitudes. A youth—(he bore

The name of Calvert—it shall live, if
words 355

Of mine can give it life,) in firm belief
That by endowments not from me with-
held

Good might be furthered—in his last
decay

By a bequest sufficient for my needs Enabled me to pause for choice, and
walk 360

At large and unrestrained, nor damped too soon

By mortal cares. Himself no Poet, yet
Far less a common follower of the world,
He deemed that my pursuits and labours
lay

Apart from all that leads to wealth, or
even 365

A necessary maintenance insures,
Without some hazard to the finer sense;
He cleared a passage for me, and the
stream

Flowed in the bent of Nature.

Having now Told what best merits mention, further
pains 370

Our present purpose seems not to require,
And I have other tasks. Recall to mind
The mood in which this labour was begun,

O Friend! The termination of my course Is nearer now, much nearer; yet even
then, 375

In that distraction and intense desire,
I said unto the life which I had lived, Where art thou? Hear I not a voice from
thee

Which 'tis reproach to hear? Anon I
rose

As if on wings, and saw beneath me
stretched 380

Vast prospect of the world which I had
been

And was; and hence this Song, which like a lark

I have protracted, in the unwearied
heavens

Singing, and often with more plaintive
voice

To earth attempered and her deep-drawn
sighs, 385

Yet centring all in love, and in the end
All gratulant, if rightly understood.

Whether to me shall be allotted life,
And, with life, power to accomplish aught
of worth,

That will be deemed no insufficient plea
For having given the story of myself, 391
Is all uncertain: but, beloved Friend!

When, looking back, thou seest, in clearer
view

Than any liveliest sight of yesterday,
That summer, under whose indulgent
skies, 395

Upon smooth Quantock's airy ridge we roved

Unchecked, or loitered 'mid her sylvan combs,

Thou in bewitching words, with happy
heart,

Didst chaunt the vision of that Ancient
Man,

The bright-eyed Mariner, and rueful
woes 400

Didst utter of the Lady Christabel;
And, I, associate with such labour, steeped
In soft forgetfulness the livelong hours, Murmuring of him who, joyous hap, was
found,

After the perils of his moonlight ride, 405
Near the loud waterfall; or her who sate
In misery near the miserable Thorn;— When thou dost to that summer turn thy
thoughts,

And hast before thee all which then we
were,

To thee, in memory of that happiness,
It will be known, by thee at least, my
Friend! 411

Felt, that the history of a Poet's mind
Is labour not unworthy of regard:
To thee the work shall justify itself.

The last and later portions of this gift
Have been prepared, not with the buoyant spirits 416
That were our daily portion when we first

Together wantoned in wild Poesy,
But, under pressure of a private grief, Keen and enduring, which the mind and
heart, 420

That in this meditative history
Have been laid open, needs must make me feel

More deeply, yet enable me to bear
More firmly; and a comfort now hath risen

From hope that thou art near, and wilt be soon 425

Restored to us in renovated health;
When, after the first mingling of our
tears

'Mong other consolations, we may draw
Some pleasure from this offering of my
love.

Oh! yet a few short years of useful life,
And all will be complete, thy race be run, 431

Thy monument of glory will be raised;
Then, though (too weak to tread the ways of truth)

This age fall back to old idolatry, 434
Though men return to servitude as fast
As the tide ebbs, to ignominy and shame
By nations sink together, we shall still Find solace—knowing what we have learnt to know,

Rich in true happiness if allowed to be Faithful alike in forwarding a day 440
Of firmer trust, joint labourers in the work

(Should Providence such grace to us vouchsafe)

Of their deliverance, surely yet to come.
Prophets of Nature, we to them will
speak

A lasting inspiration, sanctified 445
By reason, blest by faith: what we have
loved,

Others will love, and we will teach them
how;

Instruct them how the mind of man becomes

A thousand times more beautiful than the earth

On which he dwells, above this frame of
things 450

(Which, 'mid all revolution in the hopes And fears of men, doth still remain unchanged)

In beauty exalted, as it is itself
Of quality and fabric more divine.

The Excursion.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE
WILLIAM, EARL OF LONSDALE, K.G.,
ETC., ETC.

ORT, through thy fair domains, illustrious Peer!
In youth I roamed, on youthful pleasures bent;
And mused in rocky cell or sylvan tent,
Beside swift-flowing Lowther's current clear.
—Now, by thy care befriended, I appear Before thee, LONSDALE, and this Work present,
A token (may it prove a monument!)
Of high respect and gratitude sincere.
Gladly would I have waited till my task
Had reached its close; but Life is insecure,
And Hope full oft fallacious as a dream:
Therefore, for what is here produced, I ask Thy favour; trusting that thou wilt not deem
The offering, though imperfect, premature.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

PREFACE TO THE EDITION OF 1814.

THE Title-page announces that this is only a portion of a poem; and the Reader must be here apprised that it belongs to the second part of a long and laborious Work, which is to consist of three parts.—The Author will candidly acknowledge that, if the first of these had been completed, and in such a manner as to satisfy his own mind, he should have preferred the natural order of publication, and have given that to the world first; but, as the second division of the Work was designed to refer more to passing events, and to an existing state of things, than the others were meant to do, more continuous exertion was naturally bestowed upon it, and greater progress made here than in the rest of the poem; and as this part does not depend upon the preceding, to a degree which will materially injure its own peculiar interest, the Author, complying with the earnest entreaties of some valued Friends, presents the following pages to the Public.

It may be proper to state whence the poem, of which "The Excursion" is a part, derives its Title of THE RECLUSE.—Several years ago, when the Author retired to his native mountains, with the hope of being enabled to construct a literary Work that might live, it was a reasonable thing that he should take a review of his own mind, and examine how far Nature and Education had qualified him for such employment. As subsidiary to this preparation, he undertook to record, in verse, the origin and progress of his own powers, as far as he was acquainted with them. That Work, addressed to a dear Friend, most distinguished for his knowledge and genius, and to whom the Author's Intélect is deeply indebted, has been long finished; and the result of the investigation which gave rise to it was a determination to compose a philosophical poem, containing views of Man, Nature, and Society; and to be entitled, "The Recluse;" as having for its principal subject the sensations and opinions of a poet living in retirement.—The preparatory poem is biographical, and conducts the history of the Author's mind to the point when he was emboldened to hope that his faculties were sufficiently matured for entering upon the arduous labour which he had proposed to himself; and the two Works have the same kind of relation to each other, if he may so express himself, as the ante-chapel has to the body of a gothic church. Continuing this allusion, he may be permitted to add, that his minor Pieces, which have been long before the Public, when they shall be properly arranged, will be found by the attentive Reader to have such connection with the main Work as may give them claim to be likened to the little cells, oratories, and sepulchral recesses, ordinarily included in those edifices.

The Author would not have deemed himself justified in saying, upon this occasion, so much of performances either unfinished, or unpublished, if he had not thought that the labour bestowed by him upon what he has heretofore and now laid before the Public, entitled him to candid attention for such a statement as he thinks necessary to throw light upon his endeavours to please and, he would hope, to benefit his countrymen.—Nothing further need be added, than that the first and third parts of "The Recluse" will consist chiefly of meditations in the Author's own person; and that in the intermediate part ("The Excursion") the intervention of characters speaking is employed, and something of a dramatic form adopted.

It is not the Author's intention formally to announce a system: it was more animating to him to proceed in a different course; and if he shall succeed in conveying to the mind clear thoughts, lively images, and strong feelings, the Reader will have no difficulty in extracting the system for himself. And in the meantime the following passage, taken from the conclusion of the first book of "The Recluse," may be acceptable as a kind of Prospectus of the design and scope of the whole Poem.

"On Man, on Nature, and on Human Life, Musing in solitude, I oft perceive Fair trains of Imagery before me rise,
 Accompanied by feelings of delight
 Pure, or with no unpleasing sadness mixed; 5
 And I am conscious of affecting thoughts
 And dear remembrances, whose presence soothes Or elevates the Mind, intent to weigh
 The good and evil of our mortal state.
 —To these emotions, whencesoe'er they come, 10
 Whether from breath of outward circumstance,
 Or from the Soul—an impulse to herself—
 I would give utterance in numerous verse.
 Of Truth, of Grandeur, Beauty, Love, and Hope,
 And melancholy Fear subdued by Faith; 15
 Of blessed consolations in distress;
 Of moral strength, and intellectual Power;
 Of joy in widest commonality spread;
 Of the individual Mind that keeps her own
 Inviolate retirement, subject there 20
 To Conscience only, and the law supreme
 Of that Intelligence which governs all—
 I sing:—'fit audience let me find though few!'

"So prayed, more gaining than he asked, the Bard—
 In hollest mood. Urania, I shall need 25
 Thy guidance, or a greater Muse, if such Descend to earth or dwell in highest heaven!
 For I must tread on shadowy ground, must sink
 Deep—and, aloft ascending, breathe in worlds
 To which the heaven of heavens is but a veil. 30
 All strength—all terror, single or in bands,
 That ever was put forth in personal form—
 Jehovah—with his thunder, and the choir
 Of shouting Angels, and the empyreal thrones—
 I pass them unalarmed. Not Chaos, not 35
 The darkest pit of lowest Erebus,
 Nor aught of blinder vacancy, scooped out
 By help of dreams—can breed such fear and awe
 As fall upon us often when we look Into our Minds, into the Mind of Man— 40
 My haunt, and the main region of my song.
 —Beauty—a living Presence of the earth,
 Surpassing the most fair ideal Forms
 Which craft of delicate Spirits hath composed
 From earth's materials—waits upon my steps;
 Pitches her tents before me as I move, 46
 An hourly neighbour. Paradise, and groves Elysian, Fortunate Fields—like those of old Sought in the Atlantic Main—why should they be
 A history only of departed things, 50

Or a mere fiction of what never was?
 For the discerning intellect of Man,
 When wedded to this goodly universe
 In love and holy passion, shall find these A simple produce of the common day. 55
 —I, long before the blissful hour arrives,
 Would chant, in lonely peace, the spousal verse
 Of this great consummation:—and, by words
 Which speak of nothing more than what we are,
 Would I arouse the sensual from their sleep 60
 Of Death, and win the vacant and the vain
 To noble raptures; while my voice proclaims
 How exquisitely the individual Mind (And the progressive powers perhaps, no less Of the whole species) to the external World 65
 Is fitted:—and how exquisitely, too—
 Theme this but little heard of among men—
 The external World is fitted to the Mind;
 And the creation (by no lower name Can it be called) which they with blended might Accomplish:—this is our high argument. 71
 —Such grateful haunts foregoing, if I oft Must turn elsewhere—to travel near the tribes
 And fellowships of men, and see ill sights
 Of madding passions mutually inflamed; 75
 Must hear Humanity in fields and groves
 Pipe solitary anguish; or must hang Brooding above the fierce confederate storm
 Of sorrow, barricaded evermore
 Within the walls of cities—may these sounds 80
 Have their authentic comment; that even these Hearing, I be not downcast or forlorn!—
 Descend, prophetic Spirit! that inspir'd
 The human Soul of universal earth,
 Dreaming on things to come; and dost possess 86
 A metropolitan temple in the hearts
 Of mighty Poets: upon me bestow
 A gift of genuine insight; that my Song
 With star-like virtue in its place may shine,
 Shedding benignant influence, and secure, 90
 Itself, from all malevolent effect
 Of those mutations that extend their sway Throughout the nether sphere!—And if with
 this
 I mix more lowly matter; with the thing
 Contemplated, describe the Mind and Man 95 Contemplating; and who, and what he was—
 The transitory Being that beheld This Vision; when and where, and how he lived;—
 Be not this labour useless. If such theme
 May sort with highest objects, then—dread
 Power! 100
 Whose gracious favour is the primal source
 Of all illumination,—may my Life
 Express the image of a better time,
 More wise desires, and simpler manners;—nurse
 My Heart in genuine freedom:—all pure thoughts
 Be with me;—so shall thy unfalling love 106
 Guide, and support, and cheer me to the end!"

The Excursion.

BOOK FIRST.

THE WANDERER.

ARGUMENT.

A summer forenoon.—The Author reaches a ruined Cottage upon a Common, and there meets with a revered Friend, the Wanderer, of whose education and course of life he gives an account.—The Wanderer, while resting under the shade of the Trees that surround the Cottage, relates the History of its last Inhabitant.

'Twas summer, and the sun had mounted
high :
Southward the landscape indistinctly glared
Through a pale steam ; but all the northern downs,
In clearest air ascending, showed far off
A surface dappled o'er with shadows
flung 5
From brooding clouds ; shadows that lay in spots
Determined and unmoved, with steady
beams
Of bright and pleasant sunshine inter-
posed ;
To him most pleasant who on soft cool
moss Extends his careless limbs along the front 10
Of some huge cave, whose rocky ceiling casts
A twilight of its own, an ample shade,
Where the wren warbles, while the dreaming man,
Half conscious of the soothing melody,
With side-long eye looks out upon the
scene, 15
By power of that impending covert,
thrown
To finer distance. Mine was at that hour Far other lot, yet with good hope that
soon
Under a shade as grateful I should find Rest, and be welcomed there to livelier
joy. 20

Across a bare wide Common I was toiling
With languid steps that by the slippery
turf
Were baffled ; nor could my weak arm disperse
The host of insects gathering round my
face,
And ever with me as I paced along. 25

Upon that open moorland stood a grove,
The wished-for port to which my course was bound.
Thither I came, and there, amid the
gloom
Spread by a brotherhood of lofty elms, Appeared a roofless Hut ; four naked
walls 30
That stared upon each other !—I looked
round,
And to my wish and to my hope espied
The Friend I sought ; a Man of reverend
age,
But stout and hale, for travel unimpaired.
There was he seen upon the cottage-
bench, 35
Recumbent in the shade, as if asleep ;
An iron-pointed staff lay at his side.

Him had I marked the day before—
alone
And stationed in the public way, with
face
Turned toward the sun then setting, while that staff 40
Afforded, to the figure of the man

Detained for contemplation or repose, Graceful support; his countenance as he
stood

Was hidden from my view, and he remained

Unrecognised; but, stricken by the sight,
With slackened footsteps I advanced, and
soon . 46

A glad congratulation we exchanged
At such unthought-of meeting.—For the
night

We parted, nothing willingly; and now
He by appointment waited for me here, 50
Under the covert of these clustering elms.

We were tried Friends: amid a pleasant
vale,

In the antique market-village where was
passed

My school-time, an apartment he had owned,

To which at intervals the Wanderer drew,
And found a kind of home or harbour
there. 56

He loved me; from a swarm of rosy boys
Singled out me, as he in sport would say,
For my grave looks, too thoughtful for my years.

As I grew up, it was my best delight 60
To be his chosen comrade. Many a time,
On holidays, we rambled through the
woods:

We sate—we walked; he pleased me with report

Of things which he had seen; and often
touched

Abstrusest matter, reasonings of the
mind 65

Turned inward; or at my request would sing

Old songs, the product of his native hills;
A skilful distribution of sweet sounds,
Feeding the soul, and eagerly imbibed

As cool refreshing water, by the care 70
Of the industrious husbandman, diffused Through a parched meadow-ground, in time of drought.

Still deeper welcome found his pure discourse:

How precious when in riper days I learned

To weigh with care his words, and to rejoice 75

In the plain presence of his dignity!

Oh! many are the Poets that are
sown

By Nature; men endowed with highest
gifts,

The vision and the faculty divine;
Yet wanting the accomplishment of
verse, 80

(Which, in the docile season of their
youth,

It was denied them to acquire, through lack

Of culture and the inspiring aid of books,
Or haply by a temper too severe,

Or a nice backwardness afraid of shame)
Nor having e'er, as life advanced, been

led 86

By circumstance to take unto the height
The measure of themselves, these favoured Beings,

All but a scattered few, live out their
time,

Husbanding that which they possess
within, 90

And go to the grave, unthought of.
Strongest minds

Are often those of whom the noisy world Hears least; else surely this Man had not left

His graces unrevealed and unproclaimed.
But, as the mind was filled with inward

light, 95

So not without distinction had he lived, Beloved and honoured—far as he was
known.

And some small portion of his eloquent
speech,

And something that may serve to set in
view

The feeling pleasures of his loneliness,
His observations, and the thoughts his
mind 101

Had dealt with—I will here record in
verse;

Which, if with truth it correspond, and sink

Or rise as venerable Nature leads, 104
The high and tender Muses shall accept

With gracious smile, deliberately pleased,
And listening Time reward with sacred
praise.

Among the hills of Athol he was born ;
Where, on a small hereditary farm,
An unproductive slip of rugged ground,
His Parents, with their numerous offspring, dwelt ; 111

A virtuous household, though exceeding
poor !

Pure livers were they all, austere and
grave,

And fearing God ; the very children
taught

Stern self-respect, a reverence for God's word, 115

And an habitual piety, maintained
With strictness scarcely known on English ground.

From his sixth year, the Boy of whom
I speak,

In summer, tended cattle on the hills ;
But, through the inclement and the perilous days 120

Of long-continuing winter, he repaired, Equipped with satchel, to a school, that
stood

Sole building on a mountain's dreary edge,
Remote from view of city spire, or sound
Of minster clock ! From that bleak tene-
ment 125

He, many an evening, to his distant
home

In solitude returning, saw the hills
Grow larger in the darkness ; all alone
Beheld the stars come out above his head,
And travelled through the wood, with no one near 130

To whom he might confess the things he saw.

So the foundations of his mind were
laid.

In such communion, not from terror free, While yet a child, and long before his
time,

Had he perceived the presence and the
power 135

Of greatness ; and deep feelings had impressed

So vividly great objects that they lay Upon his mind like substances, whose presence

Perplexed the bodily sense. He had received

A precious gift ; for, as he grew in years,
With these impressions would he still compare 141

All his remembrances, thoughts, shapes, and forms ;

And, being still unsatisfied with aught
Of dimmer character, he thence attained
An active power to fasten images 145

Upon his brain ; and on their pictured
lines

Intensely brooded, even till they acquired The liveliness of dreams. Nor did he
fail,

While yet a child, with a child's eager-
ness

Incessantly to turn his ear and eye 150
On all things which the moving seasons
brought

To feed such appetite—nor this alone
Appeased his yearning :—in the after-day
Of boyhood, many an hour in caves
forlorn,

And 'mid the hollow depths of naked
crags 155

He sate, and even in their fixed linea-
ments,

Or from the power of a peculiar eye,
Or by creative feeling overborne,
Or by predominance of thought op-
pressed,

Even in their fixed and steady linea-
ments 160

He traced an ebbing and a flowing mind,
Expression ever varying !

Thus informed,
He had small need of books ; for many a tale

Traditionary round the mountains hung,
And many a legend, peopling the dark
woods, 165

Nourished Imagination in her growth,
And gave the Mind that apprehensive
power

By which she is made quick to recognise
The moral properties and scope of things.
But eagerly he read, and read again, 170

Whate'er the minister's old shelf supplied ;

The life and death of martyrs, who sustained,

With will inflexible, those fearful pangs Triumphantly displayed in records left
Of persecution, and the Covenant—times Whose echo rings through Scotland to this hour ! 176

And there, by lucky hap, had been preserved

A straggling volume, torn and incomplete,
That left half-told the preternatural tale,
Romance of giants, chronicle of fiends,
Profuse in garniture of wooden cuts 181
Strange and uncouth ; dire faces, figures dire,

Sharp-kneed, sharp-elbowed, and lean-ankled too,

With long and ghostly shanks—forms which once seen

Could never be forgotten !

In his heart,

Where Fear sate thus, a cherished visitant, 186

Was wanting yet the pure delight of love
By sound diffused, or by the breathing air,
Or by the silent looks of happy things,
Or flowing from the universal face 190 Of earth and sky. But he had felt the
power

Of Nature, and already was prepared,
By his intense conceptions, to receive Deeply the lesson deep of love which he,
Whom Nature, by whatever means, has
taught 195

To feel intensely, cannot but receive.

Such was the Boy—but for the growing
Youth

What soul was his, when, from the naked
top

Of some bold headland, he beheld the sun
Rise up, and bathe the world in light !
He looked— 200

Ocean and earth, the solid frame of earth
And ocean's liquid mass, in gladness lay Beneath him :—Far and wide the clouds were touched,

And in their silent faces could he read Unutterable love. Sound needed none,

Nor any voice of joy ; his spirit drank
The spectacle : sensation, soul, and form,
All melted into him ; they swallowed up
His animal being ; in them did he live,
And by them did he live ; they were his
life. 210

In such access of mind, in such high hour
Of visitation from the living God, Thought was not ; in enjoyment it expired.

No thanks he breathed, he proffered no
request ;

Rapt into still communion that transcends 215

The imperfect offices of prayer and praise,
His mind was a thanksgiving to the
power

That made him ; it was blessedness and
love !

A Herdsman on the lonely mountain-
tops, 219

Such intercourse was his, and in this sort
Was his existence oftentimes possessed.

O then how beautiful, how bright, appeared

The written promise ! Early had he learned

To reverence the volume that displays
The mystery, the life which cannot die ;
But in the mountains did he feel his
faith. 226

All things, responsive to the writing,
there

Breathed immortality, revolving life,
And greatness still revolving ; infinite :

There littleness was not ; the least of
things 230

Seemed infinite ; and there his spirit shaped

Her prospects, nor did he believe,—he saw.
What wonder if his being thus became Sublime and comprehensive ! Low desires, Low thoughts had there no place ; yet was his heart 235

Lowly ; for he was meek in gratitude,
Oft as he called those ecstasies to mind,
And whence they flowed ; and from them
he acquired

Wisdom, which works thro' patience ; thence he learned

In oft-recurring hours of sober thought
 To look on Nature with a humble heart, Self-questioned where it did not under-
 stand,
 And with a superstitious eye of love.

So passed the time; yet to the nearest
 town

He duly went with what small overplus His earnings might supply, and brought
 away 246

The book that most had tempted his desires

While at the stall he read. Among the
 hills

He gazed upon that mighty orb of song,
 The divine Milton. Lore of different kind,
 The annual savings of a toilsome life, 251
 His Schoolmaster supplied; books that explain

The purer elements of truth involved
 In lines and numbers, and, by charm
 severe,

(Especially perceived where nature droops And feeling is suppressed) preserve the
 mind 256

Busy in solitude and poverty.
 These occupations oftentimes deceived
 The listless hours, while in the hollow
 vale,

Hollow and green, he lay on the green
 turf 260

In pensive idleness. What could he do,
 Thus daily thirsting, in that lonesome life,
 With blind endeavours? Yet, still upper-
 most,

Nature was at his heart as if he felt,
 Though yet he knew not how, a wasting
 power 265

In all things that from her sweet influence Might tend to wean him. Therefore with her hues,

Her forms, and with the spirit of her
 forms,

He clothed the nakedness of austere truth.
 While yet he lingered in the rudiments
 Of science, and among her simplest laws,
 His triangles—they were the stars of
 heaven,

The silent stars! Oft did he take delight
 To measure the altitude of some tall crag

That is the eagle's birthplace, or some peak 275

Familiar with forgotten years, that shows
 Inscribed upon its visionary sides,
 The history of many a winter storm,
 Or obscure records of the path of fire.

And thus before his eighteenth year was told, 280

Accumulated feelings pressed his heart
 With still increasing weight; he was o'er-powered

By Nature; by the turbulence subdued
 Of his own mind; by mystery and hope,
 And the first virgin passion of a soul 285
 Communing with the glorious universe.

Full often wished he that the winds might rage

When they were silent: far more fondly
 now

Than in his earlier season did he love Tempestuous nights—the conflict and the sounds 290

That live in darkness. From his intellect
 And from the stillness of abstracted
 thought

He asked repose; and, failing oft to win
 The peace required, he scanned the laws
 of light

Amid the roar of torrents, where they send 295

From hollow clefts up to the clearer air
 A cloud of mist, that smitten by the sun Varies its rainbow hues. But vainly thus,
 And vainly by all other means, he strove
 To mitigate the fever of his heart. 300

In dreams, in study, and in ardent
 thought,

Thus was he reared; much wanting to assist

The growth of intellect, yet gaining more,
 And every moral feeling of his soul Strengthened and braced, by breathing in content 305

The keen, the wholesome, air of poverty,
 And drinking from the well of homely life.
 —But, from past liberty, and tried restraints,

He now was summoned to select the
 course 309

Of humble industry that promised best
 To yield him no unworthy maintenance.
 Urged by his Mother, he essayed to teach A village-school—but wandering thoughts were then
 A misery to him; and the Youth resigned
 A task he was unable to perform. 315

That stern yet kindly Spirit, who con-
 strains

The Savoyard to quit his naked rocks,
 The freeborn Swiss to leave his narrow
 vales,

(Spirit attached to regions mountainous Like their own steadfast clouds) did now impel 320

His restless mind to look abroad with
 hope.

—An irksome drudgery seems it to plod on,
 Through hot and dusty ways, or pelting
 storm,

A vagrant Merchant under a heavy load Bent as he moves, and needing frequent
 rest; 325

Yet do such travellers find their own
 delight;

And their hard service, deemed debasing
 now,

Gained merited respect in simpler times;
 When squire, and priest, and they who round them dwelt

In rustic sequestration—all dependent Upon the PEDLAR'S toil—supplied their wants, 331

Or pleased their fancies, with the wares he brought.

Not ignorant was the Youth that still no
 few

Of his adventurous countrymen were led
 By perseverance in this track of life 335
 To competence and ease:—to him it offered Attractions manifold;—and this he chose.

—His Parents on the enterprise bestowed
 Their farewell benediction, but with hearts
 Foreboding evil. From his native hills
 He wandered far; much did he see of men¹,

Their manners, their enjoyments, and
 pursuits, 342

Their passions and their feelings; chiefly
 those

Essential and eternal in the heart,
 That, 'mid the simpler forms of rural life,
 Exist more simple in their elements, 346
 And speak a plainer language. In the
 woods,

A lone Enthusiast, and among the fields,
 Itinerant in this labour, he had passed
 The better portion of his time; and there Spontaneously had his affections thriven
 Amid the bounties of the year, the peace
 And liberty of nature; there he kept
 In solitude and solitary thought
 His mind in a just equipoise of love. 355

Serene it was, unclouded by the cares
 Of ordinary life; unvexed, unwarped
 By partial bondage. In his steady course,
 No piteous revolutions had he felt,
 No wild varieties of joy and grief. 360
 Unoccupied by sorrow of its own,

His heart lay open; and, by nature tuned
 And constant disposition of his thoughts
 To sympathy with man, he was alive
 To all that was enjoyed where'er he went, 365

And all that was endured; for, in himself
 Happy, and quiet in his cheerfulness,
 He had no painful pressure from without That made him turn aside from wretched-
 ness

With coward fears. He could afford to suffer 370

With those whom he saw suffer. Hence it came

That in our best experience he was rich,
 And in the wisdom of our daily life.

For hence, minutely, in his various rounds,
 He had observed the progress and decay
 Of many minds, of minds and bodies too;
 The history of many families;
 How they had prospered; how they were o'erthrown

By passion or mischance, or such misrule Among the unthinking masters of the
 earth 380

As makes the nations groan.

This active course
 He followed till provision for his wants
 Had been obtained;—the Wanderer then

To pass the remnant of his days, untasked
With needless services, from hardship
free. 385

His calling laid aside, he lived at ease :
But still he loved to pace the public roads
And the wild paths ; and, by the summer's warmth

Invited, often would he leave his home
And journey far, revisiting the scenes 390
That to his memory were most endeared.

—Vigorous in health, of hopeful spirits, undamped

By worldly-mindedness or anxious care ;
Observant, studious, thoughtful, and refreshed

By knowledge gathered up from day to
day ; 395

Thus had he lived a long and innocent
life.

The Scottish Church, both on himself and those

With whom from childhood he grew up, had held

The strong hand of her purity ; and still Had watched him with an unrelenting eye.
This he remembered in his riper age 401
With gratitude, and reverential thoughts.
But by the native vigour of his mind,
By his habitual wanderings out of doors,
By loneliness, and goodness, and kind
works, 405

Whate'er, in docile childhood or in youth,
He had imbibed of fear or darker thought
Was melted all away ; so true was this,
That sometimes his religion seemed to me
Self-taught, as of a dreamer in the woods ;
Who to the model of his own pure heart
Shaped his belief, as grace divine inspired,
And human reason dictated with awe.

—And surely never did there live on earth
A man of kindlier nature. The rough sports 415

And teasing ways of children vexed not
him ;

Indulgent listener was he to the tongue
Of garrulous age ; nor did the sick man's
tale,

To his fraternal sympathy addressed,
Obtain reluctant hearing.

Plain his garb ; 420

Such as might suit a rustic Sire, prepared
For sabbath duties ; yet he was a man Whom no one could have passed without remark.

Active and nervous was his gait ; his limbs

And his whole figure breathed intelligence. 425

Time had compressed the freshness of his cheek

Into a narrower circle of deep red,
But had not tamed his eye ; that, under brows

Shaggy and grey, had meanings which it
brought

From years of youth ; which, like a Being
made 430

Of many Beings, he had wondrous skill
To blend with knowledge of the years to
come,

Human, or such as lie beyond the grave.

So was He framed ; and such his course
of life 434

Who now, with no appendage but a staff,
The prized memorial of relinquished toils, Upon that cottage-bench reposed his limbs,

Screened from the sun. Supine the Wanderer lay,

His eyes as if in drowsiness half shut,
The shadows of the breezy elms above Dappling his face. He had not heard the
sound 441

Of my approaching steps, and in the shade Unnoticed did I stand some minutes'
space.

At length I hailed him, seeing that his hat

Was moist with water-drops, as if the brim 445

Had newly scooped a running stream. He
rose,

And ere our lively greeting into peace
Had settled, " 'Tis," said I, " a burning
day :

My lips are parched with thirst, but you,
it seems,

Have somewhere found relief." He, at the word, 450

Pointing towards a sweet-briar, bade me
climb
The fence where that aspiring shrub looked out
Upon the public way. It was a plot
Of garden ground run wild, its matted
weeds
Marked with the steps of those, whom,
as they passed, 455
The gooseberry trees that shot in long lank slips,
Or currants, hanging from their leafless
stems,
In scanty strings, had tempted to o'erleap
The broken wall. I looked around, and
there,
Where two tall hedge-rows of thick alder
boughs 460
Joined in a cold damp nook, espied a
well
Shrouded with willow-flowers and plummy
fern.
My thirst I slaked, and, from the cheerless spot Withdrawing, straightway to the shade
returned
Where sate the old Man on the cottage-bench; 465
And, while, beside him, with uncovered
head,
I yet was standing, freely to respire,
And cool my temples in the fanning air,
Thus did he speak. "I see around me
here
Things which you cannot see: we die, my
Friend, 470
Nor we alone, but that which each man
loved
And prized in his peculiar nook of earth Dies with him, or is changed; and very
soon
Even of the good is no memorial left. 474
—The Poets, in their elegies and songs
Lamenting the departed, call the groves, They call upon the hills and streams to
mourn,
And senseless rocks; nor idly; for they
speak,
In these their invocations, with a voice
Obedient to the strong creative power 480
Of human passion. Sympathies there are

More tranquil, yet perhaps of kindred
birth,
That steal upon the meditative mind,
And grow with thought. Beside yon spring I stood,
And eyed its waters till we seemed to feel One sadness, they and I. For them a bond 486
Of brotherhood is broken: time has been When, every day, the touch of human
hand
Dislodged the natural sleep that binds them up
In mortal stillness; and they ministered To human comfort. Stooping down to drink, 491
Upon the slimy foot-stone I espied
The useless fragment of a wooden bowl,
Green with the moss of years, and subject
only
To the soft handling of the elements: 495
There let it lie—how foolish are such
thoughts!
Forgive them;—never—never did my
steps
Approach this door but she who dwelt within
A daughter's welcome gave me, and I loved her
As my own child. Oh, Sir! the good die
first, 500
And they whose hearts are dry as summer
dust
Burn to the socket. Many a passenger Hath blessed poor Margaret for her gentle looks,
When she upheld the cool refreshment
drawn
From that forsaken spring; and no one
came 505
But he was welcome; no one went away
But that it seemed she loved him. She is
dead,
The light extinguished of her lonely hut,
The hut itself abandoned to decay,
And she forgotten in the quiet grave. 510

"I speak," continued he, "of One whose stock
Of virtues bloomed beneath this lowly
roof.

She was a Woman of a steady mind,
Tender and deep in her excess of love;
Not speaking much, pleased rather with the joy 515
Of her own thoughts: by some especial
care
Her temper had been framed, as if to
make
A Being, who by adding love to peace
Might live on earth a life of happiness.
Her wedded Partner lacked not on his
side 520
The humble worth that satisfied her
heart:
Frugal, affectionate, sober, and withal Keenly industrious. She with pride would tell
That he was often seated at his loom, 524
In summer, ere the mower was abroad
Among the dewy grass,—in early spring, Ere the last star had vanished.—They who passed
At evening, from behind the garden fence Might hear his busy spade, which he would ply,
After his daily work, until the light 530
Had failed, and every leaf and flower
were lost
In the dark hedges. So their days were spent
In peace and comfort; and a pretty boy Was their best hope, next to the God in heaven.

“Not twenty years ago, but you I think Can scarcely bear it now in mind, there
came 536
Two blighting seasons, when the fields were left With half a harvest. It pleased Heaven to add
A worse affliction in the plague of war:
This happy Land was stricken to the
heart! 540
A Wanderer then among the cottages,
I, with my freight of winter raiment,
saw
The hardships of that season: many rich Sank down, as in a dream, among the
poor;
And of the poor did many cease to be,

And their place knew them not. Meanwhile, abridged 546
Of daily comforts, gladly reconciled
To numerous self-denials, Margaret Went struggling on through those calamitous years
With cheerful hope, until the second autumn, 550
When her life's Helpmate on a sick-bed
lay,
Smitten with perilous fever. In disease
He lingered long; and, when his strength
returned,
He found the little he had stored, to meet
The hour of accident or crippling age, 555
Was all consumed. A second infant now
Was added to the troubles of a time
Laden, for them and all of their degree,
With care and sorrow: shoals of artisans
From ill-requited labour turned adrift 560
Sought daily bread from public charity,
They, and their wives and children—happier far Could they have lived as do the little birds
That peck along the hedge-rows, or the kite
That makes her dwelling on the mountain rocks! 565
“A sad reverse it was for him who long Had filled with plenty, and possessed in
peace,
This lonely Cottage. At the door he stood,
And whistled many a snatch of merry tunes
That had no mirth in them; or with his knife 570
Carved uncouth figures on the heads of sticks—
Then, not less idly, sought, through every nook
In house or garden, any casual work
Of use or ornament; and with a strange,
Amusing, yet uneasy, novelty, 575
He mingled, where he might, the various tasks
Of summer, autumn, winter, and of
spring.
But this endured not; his good humour
soon

Became a weight in which no pleasure
was :

And poverty brought on a petted mood
And a sore temper: day by day he drooped, 581

And he would leave his work—and to the town

Would turn without an errand his slack
steps;

Or wander here and there among the
fields.

One while he would speak lightly of his babes, 585

And with a cruel tongue: at other times
He tossed them with a false unnatural
joy:

And 'twas a rueful thing to see the looks
Of the poor innocent children. 'Every
smile,'

Said Margaret to me, here beneath these
trees, 590

'Made my heart bleed.'

At this the Wanderer paused;

And, looking up to those enormous elms,
He said, "'Tis now the hour of deepest
noon.

At this still season of repose and peace,
This hour when all things which are not
at rest 595

Are cheerful; while this multitude of flies
With tuneful hum is filling all the air;
Why should a tear be on an old Man's
cheek?

Why should we thus, with an untoward
mind,

And in the weakness of humanity, 600
From natural wisdom turn our hearts
away;

To natural comfort shut our eyes and
ears;

And, feeding on disquiet, thus disturb
The calm of nature with our restless
thoughts?"

He spake with somewhat of a solemn tone: 605

But, when he ended, there was in his face
Such easy cheerfulness, a look so mild,
That for a little time it stole away
All recollection; and that simple tale

Passed from my mind like a forgotten
sound. 610

A while on trivial things we held dis-
course,

To me soon tasteless. In my own despite,
I thought of that poor Woman as of one

Whom I had known and loved. He had rehearsed 614

Her homely tale with such familiar power,
With such an active countenance, an eye

So busy, that the things of which he
spake

Seemed present; and, attention now relaxed,

A heart-felt chilliness crept along my veins.

I rose; and, having left the breezy shade,
Stood drinking comfort from the warmer
sun, 621

That had not cheered me long—ere, looking round

Upon that tranquil Ruin, I returned,
And begged of the old Man that, for my
sake,

He would resume his story.

He replied, 625

"It were a wantonness, and would demand

Severe reproof, if we were men whose
hearts

Could hold vain dalliance with the misery Even of the dead; contented thence to draw

A momentary pleasure, never marked
By reason, barren of all future good. 631

But we have known that there is often
found

In mournful thoughts, and always might be found,

A power to virtue friendly; were't not so,
I am a dreamer among men, indeed 635

An idle dreamer! 'Tis a common tale,
An ordinary sorrow of man's life,

A tale of silent suffering, hardly clothed
In bodily form.—But without further bidding

I will proceed.

While thus it fared with them,
To whom this cottage, till those hapless
years, 641

Had been a blessèd home, it was my
 chance
 To travel in a country far remote;
 And when these lofty elms once more
 appeared
 What pleasant expectations lured me on O'er the flat Common!—With quick step
 I reached 646
 The threshold, lifted with light hand the latch;
 But, when I entered, Margaret looked at
 me
 A little while; then turned her head
 away Speechless,—and, sitting down upon a chair, 650
 Wept bitterly. I wist not what to do, Nor how to speak to her. Poor Wretch!
 at last
 She rose from off her seat, and then,—
 O Sir!
 I cannot tell how she pronounced my
 name:—
 With fervent love, and with a face of
 grief 655
 Unutterably helpless, and a look That seemed to cling upon me, she enquired
 If I had seen her husband. As she spake
 A strange surprise and fear came to my
 heart,
 Nor had I power to answer ere she told That he had disappeared—not two months
 gone. 661
 He left his house: two wretched days had past,
 And on the third, as wistfully she raised Her head from off her pillow, to look
 forth, 664
 Like one in trouble, for returning light,
 Within her chamber-casement she espied
 A folded paper, lying as if placed To meet her waking eyes. This trem-bly
 She opened—found no writing, but be-
 held
 Pieces of money carefully enclosed, 670 Silver and gold. 'I shuddered at the
 sight,'
 Said Margaret, 'for I knew it was his
 hand

That must have placed it there; and ere that day
 Was ended, that long anxious day, I
 learned,
 From one who by my husband had been sent 675
 With the sad news, that he had joined a troop
 Of soldiers, going to a distant land.
 —He left me thus—he could not gather
 heart
 To take a farewell of me; for he feared That I should follow with my babes, and sink 680
 Beneath the misery of that wandering
 life.'

“This tale did Margaret tell with many
 tears:
 And, when she ended, I had little power
 To give her comfort, and was glad to take Such words of hope from her own mouth as served 685
 To cheer us both. But long we had not talked
 Ere we built up a pile of better thoughts,
 And with a brighter eye she looked around
 As if she had been shedding tears of joy.
 We parted.—’Twas the time of early
 spring; 690
 I left her busy with her garden tools;
 And well remember, o'er that fence she looked,
 And, while I paced along the foot-way
 path,
 Called out, and sent a blessing after me,
 With tender cheerfulness, and with a
 voice 695
 That seemed the very sound of happy
 thoughts.

“I roved o'er many a hill and many a dale,
 With my accustomed load; in heat and
 cold,
 Through many a wood and many an open
 ground,
 In sunshine and in shade, in wet and fair, Drooping or blithe of heart, as might befall; 701
 My best companions now the driving
 winds,

And now the 'trotting brooks' and whispering trees,

And now the music of my own sad steps,
With many a short-lived thought that passed between, 705

And disappeared.

I journeyed back this way,

When, in the warmth of midsummer, the wheat

Was yellow; and the soft and bladed grass,

Springing afresh, had o'er the hay-field spread

Its tender verdure. At the door arrived,
I found that she was absent. In the shade, 711

Where now we sit, I waited her return.
Her cottage, then a cheerful object, wore

Its customary look,—only, it seemed,
The honeysuckle, crowding round the porch, 715

Hung down in heavier tufts; and that bright weed,

The yellow stone-crop, suffered to take root

Along the window's edge, profusely grew Blinding the lower panes. I turned aside,

And strolled into her garden. It appeared 720

To lag behind the season, and had lost
Its pride of neatness. Daisy-flowers and thrift

Had broken their trim border-lines, and straggled

O'er paths they used to deck: carnations, once 724

Prized for surpassing beauty, and no less
For the peculiar pains they had required,
Declined their languid heads, wanting support.

The cumbrous bind-weed, with its wreaths and bells,

Had twined about her two small rows of peas,

And dragged them to the earth.

Ere this an hour
Was wasted.—Back I turned my restless steps; 731

A stranger passed; and, guessing whom I sought,

He said that she was used to ramble far.—
The sun was sinking in the west; and now
I sate with sad impatience. From within Her solitary infant cried aloud; 736
Then, like a blast that dies away self-stilled,

The voice was silent. From the bench I rose;

But neither could divert nor soothe my thoughts. 739

The spot, though fair, was very desolate—
The longer I remained, more desolate:

And, looking round me, now I first observed

The corner stones, on either side the porch,

With dull red stains discoloured, and stuck o'er

With tufts and hairs of wool, as if the sheep, 745

That fed upon the Common, thither came Familiarly, and found a couching-place

Even at her threshold. Deeper shadows fell

From these tall elms; the cottage-clock struck eight;—

I turned, and saw her distant a few steps.
Her face was pale and thin—her figure, too, 751

Was changed. As she unlocked the door, she said,

'It grieves me you have waited here so long,

But, in good truth, I've wandered much of late;

And, sometimes—to my shame I speak—have need 755

Of my best prayers to bring me back again.'

While on the board she spread our evening meal,

She told me—interrupting not the work
Which gave employment to her listless hands—

That she had parted with her elder child;
To a kind master on a distant farm 761

Now happily apprenticed.—'I perceive
You look at me, and you have cause;
to-day

I have been travelling far; and many days

About the fields I wander, knowing
this 765

Only, that what I seek I cannot find;
And so I waste my time: for I am
changed;

And to myself,' said she, 'have done much wrong

And to this helpless infant. I have slept Weeping, and weeping have I waked; my
tears 770

Have flowed as if my body were not such.
As others are; and I could never die.

But I am now in mind and in my heart
More easy; and I hope,' said she, 'that
God

Will give me patience to endure the
things 775

Which I behold at home.'

It would have grieved

Your very soul to see her. Sir, I feel
The story linger in my heart; I fear
'Tis long and tedious; but my spirit
clings

To that poor Woman:—so familiarly 780

Do I perceive her manner, and her look,
And presence; and so deeply do I feel Her goodness, that, not seldom, in my walks

A momentary trance comes over me; 784

And to myself I seem to muse on One
By sorrow laid asleep; or borne away,
A human being destined to awake

To human life, or something very near
To human life, when he shall come again For whom she suffered. Yes, it would have grieved 790

Your very soul to see her: evermore

Her eyelids drooped, her eyes downward were cast;

And, when she at her table gave me food,
She did not look at me. Her voice was
low, 794

Her body was subdued. In every act Pertaining to her house-affairs, appeared
The careless stillness of a thinking mind Self-occupied; to which all outward
things

Are like an idle matter. Still she sighed,
But yet no motion of the breast was seen, No heaving of the heart. While by the
fire 801

We sate together, sighs came on my ear,
I knew not how, and hardly whence they
came.

"Ere my departure, to her care I gave,
For her son's use, some tokens of regard,
Which with a look of welcome she received; 806

And I exhorted her to place her trust
In God's good love, and seek his help by
prayer.

I took my staff, and, when I kissed her
babe,

The tears stood in her eyes. I left her
then 810

With the best hope and comfort I could
give:

She thanked me for my wish;—but for my
hope

It seemed she did not thank me.

I returned,

And took my rounds along this road again
When on its sunny bank the primrose
flower 815

Peeped forth, to give an earnest of the Spring.

I found her sad and drooping: she had learned

No tidings of her husband; if he lived,
She knew not that he lived; if he were
dead,

She knew not he was dead. She seemed
the same 820

In person and appearance; but her house
Bespoke a sleepy hand of negligence;

The floor was neither dry nor neat, the hearth

Was comfortless, and her small lot of
books,

Which, in the cottage-window, heretofore
Had been piled up against the corner
panes 826

In seemly order, now, with straggling
leaves

Lay scattered here and there, open or shut,
As they had chanced to fall. Her infant
Babe

Had from its mother caught the trick of
grief, 830

And sighed among its playthings. I withdrew,

And once again entering the garden saw,
More plainly still, that poverty and grief
Were now come nearer to her: weeds defaced

The hardened soil, and knots of withered
grass: 835

No ridges there appeared of clear black
mould,

No winter greenness; of her herbs and
flowers,

It seemed the better part were gnawed
away

Or trampled into earth; a chain of straw,
Which had been twined about the slender
stem 840

Of a young apple-tree, lay at its root;
The bark was nibbled round by truant
sheep.

—Margaret stood near, her infant in her
arms,

And, noting that my eye was on the tree,
She said, 'I fear it will be dead and gone Ere Robert come again.' When to the House 846

We had returned together, she enquired
If I had any hope:—but for her babe
And for her little orphan boy, she said,
She had no wish to live, that she must die
Of sorrow. Yet I saw the idle loom 851 Still in its place; his Sunday garments
hung

Upon the self-same nail; his very staff
Stood undisturbed behind the door.

And when,

In bleak December, I retraced this way,
She told me that her little babe was dead,
And she was left alone. She now, released
From her maternal cares, had taken up The employment common through these wilds, and gained,

By spinning hemp, a pittance for herself;
And for this end had hired a neighbour's
boy 861

To give her needful help. That very time
Most willingly she put her work aside,
And walked with me along the miry road,
Heedless how far; and, in such piteous
sort 865

That any heart had ached to hear her, begged

That, wheresoe'er I went, I still would ask

For him whom she had lost. We parted
then—

Our final parting; for from that time
forth

Did many seasons pass ere I returned 870
Into this tract again.

Nine tedious years;

From their first separation, nine long
years,

She lingered in unquiet widowhood;

A Wife and Widow. Needs must it have
been

A sore heart-wasting! I have heard, my
Friend, 875

That in yon arbour oftentimes she sate Alone, through half the vacant sabbath
day;

And, if a dog passed by, she still would quit

The shade, and look abroad. On this old bench 879

For hours she sate; and evermore her eye
Was busy in the distance, shaping things That made her heart beat quick. You see that path,

Now faint,—the grass has crept o'er its grey line;

There, to and fro, she paced through many a day

Of the warm summer, from a belt of hemp
That girt her waist, spinning the long-drawn thread 886

With backward steps. Yet ever as there
passed

A man whose garments showed the soldier's red,

Or crippled mendicant in soldier's garb,
The little child who sate to turn the wheel Ceased from his task; and she with faltering voice 891

Made many a fond enquiry; and when
they,

Whose presence gave no comfort, were gone by,

Her heart was still more sad. And by yon gate,

That bars the traveller's road, she often
stood, 895

And when a stranger horseman came, the latch

Would lift, and in his face look wistfully:

Most happy, if, from aught discovered
there

Of tender feeling, she might dare repeat
The same sad question. Meanwhile her poor Hut 900

Sank to decay; for he was gone, whose
hand,

At the first nipping of October frost, Closed up each chink, and with fresh bands of straw

Chequered the green-grown thatch. And so she lived

Through the long winter, reckless and
alone; 905

Until her house by frost, and thaw, and
rain,

Was sapped; and while she slept, the nightly damp

Did chill her breast; and in the stormy
day

Her tattered clothes were ruffled by the
wind,

Even at the side of her own fire. Yet
still 910

She loved this wretched spot, nor would for worlds

Have parted hence; and still that length of road,

And this rude bench, one torturing hope endeared,

Fast rooted at her heart: and here, my Friend,—

In sickness she remained; and here she died; 915

Last human tenant of these ruined walls!"

The old Man ceased: he saw that I was
moved;

From that low bench, rising instinctively
I turned aside in weakness, nor had
power

To thank him for the tale which he had told. 920

I stood, and leaning o'er the garden wall Reviewed that Woman's sufferings; and it seemed

To comfort me while with a brother's
love

I blessed her in the impotence of grief.
Then towards the cottage I returned; and traced 925

Fondly, though with an interest more mild,

That secret spirit of humanity
Which, 'mid the calm oblivious tender-cies

Of nature, 'mid her plants, and weeds,
and flowers,

And silent overgrowings, still survived.

The old Man, noting this, resumed, and
said, 931

"My Friend! enough to sorrow you have
given,

The purposes of wisdom ask no more:
Nor more would she have craved as due to One

Who, in her worst distress, had oftentimes
felt 935

The unbounded might of prayer; and learned, with soul

Fixed on the Cross, that consolation
springs,

From sources deeper far than deepest
pain,

For the meek Sufferer. Why then should we read

The forms of things with an unworthy
eye? 940

She sleeps in the calm earth, and peace is
here.

I will remember that those very plumes,
Those weeds, and the high spear-grass on
that wall,

By mist and silent rain-drops silvered o'er,
As once I passed, into my heart conveyed

So still an image of tranquillity, 946

So calm and still, and looked so beautiful Amid the uneasy thoughts which filled
my mind,

That what we feel of sorrow and despair
From ruin and from change, and all the
grief 950

That passing shows of Being leave behind,

Appeared an idle dream, that could maintain,

Nowhere, dominion o'er the enlightened
spirit

Whose meditative sympathies repose Upon the breast of Faith. I turned
away, 955

And walked along my road in happiness."

He ceased. Ere long the sun declining shot	At distance heard, peopled the milder air.
A slant and mellow radiance, which began To fall upon us, while, beneath the trees,	The old Man rose, and, with a sprightly mien 965
We sate on that low bench: and now we felt, 960	Of hopeful preparation, grasped his staff; Together casting then a farewell look
Admonished thus, the sweet hour coming on.	Upon those silent walls, we left the shade;
A linnet warbled from those lofty elms,	And, ere the stars were visible, had reached 969
A thrush sang loud, and other melodies,	A village-inn,—our evening resting-place.

BOOK SECOND.

THE SOLITARY.

ARGUMENT.

The Author describes his travels with the Wanderer, whose character is further illustrated.—Morning scene, and view of a Village Wake.—Wanderer's account of a Friend whom he purposes to visit.—View, from an eminence, of the Valley which his Friend had chosen for his retreat.—Sound of singing from below.—A funeral procession.—Descent into the Valley.—Observations drawn from the Wanderer at sight of a book accidentally discovered in a recess in the Valley.—Meeting with the Wanderer's friend, the Solitary.—Wanderer's description of the mode of burial in this mountainous district.—Solitary contrasts with this, that of the individual carried a few minutes before from the cottage.—The cottage entered.—Description of the Solitary's apartment.—Repast there.—View, from the window, of two mountain summits; and the Solitary's description of the companionship they afford him.—Account of the departed inmate of the cottage.—Description of a grand spectacle upon the mountains, with its effect upon the Solitary's mind.—Leave the house.

In days of yore how fortunately fared The Minstrel! wandering on from hall to hall,	He walked—protected from the sword of war
Baronial court or royal; cheered with gifts	By virtue of that sacred instrument
Munificent, and love, and ladies' praise; Now meeting on his road an armed knight, 5	His harp, suspended at the traveller's side; 15
Now resting with a pilgrim by the side Of a clear brook;—beneath an abbey's roof	His dear companion wheresoe'er he went Opening from land to land an easy way
One evening sumptuously lodged; the next,	By melody, and by the charm of verse.
Humbly in a religious hospital; Or with some merry outlaws of the wood; Or haply shrouded in a hermit's cell. 11	Yet not the noblest of that honoured Race
Him, sleeping or awake, the robber spared;	Drew happier, loftier, more empassioned, thoughts 20
	From his long journeyings and eventful life,
	Than this obscure Itinerant had skill To gather, ranging through the tamer ground
	Of these our unimaginative days;

Both while he trod the earth in humblest
 guise 25
 Accoutred with his burthen and his staff;
 And now, when free to move with lighter
 pace,

What wonder, then, if I, whose favourite school

Hath been the fields, the roads, and rural lanes,

Looked on this guide with reverential
 love? 30

Each with the other pleased, we now
 pursued

Our journey, under favourable skies.

Turn wheresoe'er we would, he was a
 light

Unfailing: not a hamlet could we pass,
 Rarely a house, that did not yield to him Remembrances; or from his tongue call
 forth 36

Some way-beguiling tale. Nor less regard Accompanied those strains of apt dis-
 course,

Which nature's various objects might inspire;

And in the silence of his face I read 40
 His overflowing spirit. Birds and beasts, And the mute fish that glances in the
 stream,

And harmless reptile coiling in the sun,
 And gorgeous insect hovering in the air,
 The fowl domestic, and the household dog— 45

In his capacious mind, he loved them all:
 Their rights acknowledging he felt for
 all.

Oft was occasion given me to perceive
 How the calm pleasures of the pasturing
 herd

To happy contemplation soothed his
 walk; 50

How the poor brute's condition, forced to run

Its course of suffering in the public road,
 Sad contrast! all too often smote his heart
 With unavailing pity. Rich in love
 And sweet humanity, he was, himself, 55
 To the degree that he desired, beloved.

Smiles of good-will from faces that he knew

Greeted us all day long; we took our seats

By many a cottage-hearth, where he received

The welcome of an Inmate from afar, 60
 And I at once forgot I was a Stranger.

—Nor was he loth to enter ragged huts, Huts where his charity was blest; his
 voice

Heard as the voice of an experienced
 friend.

And, sometimes—where the poor man held dispute 65

With his own mind, unable to subdue
 Impatience through inaptness to perceive General distress in his particular lot;
 Or cherishing resentment, or in vain Struggling against it; with a soul perplexed, 70

And finding in herself no steady power
 To draw the line of comfort that divides
 Calamity, the chastisement of Heaven,
 From the injustice of our brother men—
 To him appeal was made as to a judge;
 Who, with an understanding heart, allayed 76

The perturbation; listened to the plea;
 Resolved the dubious point; and sentence
 gave

So grounded, so applied, that it was heard
 With softened spirit, even when it condemned. 80

Such intercourse I witnessed, while we
 roved,

Now as his choice directed, now as mine;
 Or both, with equal readiness of will,
 Our course submitting to the changeful
 breeze

Of accident. But when the rising sun 85 Had three times called us to renew our
 walk,

My Fellow-traveller, with earnest voice,
 As if the thought were but a moment old,
 Claimed absolute dominion for the day.

We started—and he led me toward the
 hills, 90

Up through an ample vale, with higher
 hills

Before us, mountains stern and desolate;
 But, in the majesty of distance, now

Set off, and to our ken appearing fair
Of aspect, with aerial softness clad, 95
And beautified with morning's purple
beams.

The wealthy, the luxurious, by the stress
Of business roused, or pleasure, ere their
time,

May roll in chariots, or provoke the hoofs
Of the fleet coursers they bestride, to raise From earth the dust of morning, slow to rise; 101

And they, if blest with health and hearts
at ease,

Shall lack not their enjoyment:—but how faint

Compared with ours! who, pacing side
by side,

Could, with an eye of leisure, look on all
That we beheld; and lend the listening
sense 106

To every grateful sound of earth and air; Pausing at will—our spirits braced, our
thoughts

Pleasant as roses in the thickets blown,
And pure as dew bathing their crimson
leaves. 110

Mount slowly, sun! that we may journey
long,

By this dark hill protected from thy
beams!

Such is the summer pilgrim's frequent
wish;

But quickly from among our morning
thoughts

'Twas chased away: for, toward the western side 115

Of the broad vale, casting a casual glance,
We saw a throng of people;—wherefore
met?

Bliethe notes of music, suddenly let loose
On the thrilled ear, and flags uprising, yild

Prompt answer; they proclaim the annual
Wake, 120

Which the bright season favours.—Tabor and pipe

In purpose join to hasten or reprove
The laggard Rustic; and repay with boons

Of merriment a party-coloured knot, 124
Already formed upon the village-green.

—Beyond the limits of the shadow cast
By the broad hill, glistened upon our
sight

That gay assemblage. Round them and
above,

Glitter, with dark recesses interposed, Casement, and cottage-roof, and stems of
trees 130

Half-veiled in vapoury cloud, the silver steam

Of dews fast melting on their leafy boughs
By the strong sunbeams smitten. Like a mast

Of gold, the Maypole shines; as if the rays

Of morning, aided by exhaling dew, 135
With gladsome influence could re-animate

The faded garlands dangling from its sides.

Said I, "The music and the sprightly
scene

Invite us; shall we quit our road, and join

These festive matins?"—He replied, "Not loth 140

To linger I would here with you partake,
Not one hour merely, but till evening's
close,

The simple pastimes of the day and place.
By the fleet Racers, ere the sun be set,

The turf of yon large pasture will be skimmed; 145

There, too, the lusty Wrestlers shall contend:

But know we not that he, who intermits
The appointed task and duties of the day, Untunes full oft the pleasures of the day;

Checking the finer spirits that refuse 150
To flow, when purposes are lightly
changed?

A length of journey yet remains un-
traced:

Let us proceed." Then, pointing with his staff

Raised toward those craggy summits, his intent

He thus imparted:—

"In a spot that lies 155

Among yon mountain fastnesses concealed,
 You will receive, before the hour of noon,
 Good recompense, I hope, for this day's
 toil,
 From sight of One who lives secluded
 there,
 Lonesome and lost : of whom, and whose past life, 160
 (Not to forestall such knowledge as may be
 More faithfully collected from himself)
 This brief communication shall suffice.

“Though now sojourning there, he, like myself, 164
 Sprang from a stock of lowly parentage
 Among the wilds of Scotland, in a tract
 Where many a sheltered and well-tended plant
 Bears, on the humblest ground of social life,
 Blossoms of piety and innocence.
 Such grateful promises his youth displayed : 170
 And, having shown in study forward
 zeal,
 He to the Ministry was duly called ;
 And straight, incited by a curious mind Filled with vague hopes, he undertook the charge
 Of Chaplain to a military troop 175 Cheered by the Highland bagpipe, as they marched
 In plaided vest,—his fellow-countrymen.
 This office filling, yet by native power
 And force of native inclination made
 An intellectual ruler in the haunts 180
 Of social vanity, he walked the world,
 Gay, and affecting graceful gaiety ;
 Lax, buoyant—less a pastor with his flock
 Than a soldier among soldiers—lived and roamed
 Where Fortune led :—and Fortune, who oft proves 185
 The careless wanderer's friend, to him
 made known
 A blooming Lady—a conspicuous flower, Admired for beauty, for her sweetness
 praised ;
 Whom he had sensibility to love,
 Ambition to attempt, and skill to win. 190

“For this fair Bride, most rich in gifts
 of mind,
 Nor sparingly endowed with worldly
 wealth,
 His office he relinquished ; and retired
 From the world's notice to a rural home.
 Youth's season yet with him was scarcely
 past, 195
 And she was in youth's prime. How free their love,
 How full their joy ! Till, pitiable doom !
 In the short course of one undreaded
 year,
 Death blasted all. Death suddenly o'er-threw
 Two lovely Children—all that they possessed ! 200
 The Mother followed :—miserably bare
 The one Survivor stood ; he wept, he prayed
 For his dismissal, day and night, compelled
 To hold communion with the grave, and
 face
 With pain the regions of eternity. 205
 An uncomplaining apathy displaced
 This anguish ; and, indifferent to delight,
 To aim and purpose, he consumed his
 days,
 To private interest dead, and public care.
 So lived he ; so he might have died.
 But now,
 To the wide world's astonishment, appeared 211
 A glorious opening, the unlooked-for
 dawn,
 That promised everlasting joy to France !
 Her voice of social transport reached even
 him !
 He broke from his contracted bounds, repaired 215
 To the great City, an emporium then
 Of golden expectations, and receiving Freights every day from a new world of
 hope.
 Thither his popular talents he transferred ;
 And, from the pulpit, zealously maintained 220
 The cause of Christ and civil liberty,
 As one, and moving to one glorious end.

Intoxicating service! I might say
 A happy service; for he was sincere
 As vanity and fondness for applause, 225
 And new and shapeless wishes, would allow.

“That righteous cause (such power hath freedom) bound,
 For one hostility, in friendly league,
 Ethereal natures and the worst of slaves;
 Was served by rival advocates that came
 From regions opposite as heaven and hell.
 One courage seemed to animate them all:
 And, from the dazzling conquests daily
 gained

By their united efforts, there arose
 A proud and most presumptuous confidence 235

In the transcendent wisdom of the age,
 And her discernment; not alone in rights,
 And in the origin and bounds of power
 Social and temporal; but in laws divine,
 Deduced by reason, or to faith revealed.

An overweening trust was raised; and
 fear 241

Cast out, alike of person and of thing.
 Plague from this union spread, whose subtle bane

The strongest did not easily escape;
 And He, what wonder! took a mortal
 taint. 245

How shall I trace the change, how bear
 to tell

That he broke faith with them whom he had laid

In earth's dark chambers, with a Christian's hope!

An infidel contempt of holy writ Stole by degrees upon his mind; and
 hence 250

Life, like that Roman Janus, double-
 faced;

Vilest hypocrisy—the laughing, gay Hypocrisy, not leagued with fear, but
 pride.

Smooth words he had to wheedle simple
 souls;

But, for disciples of the inner school, 255
 Old freedom was old servitude, and they
 The wisest whose opinions stooped the
 least

To known restraints; and who most boldly drew

Hopeful prognostications from a creed,
 That, in the light of false philosophy, 260
 Spread like a halo round a misty moon, Widening its circle as the storms advance.

“His sacred function was at length renounced;

And every day and every place enjoyed
 The unshackled layman's natural liberty; Speech, manners, morals, all without disguise. 266

I do not wish to wrong him; though the
 course

Of private life licentiously displayed
 Unhallowed actions—planted like a crown
 Upon the insolent aspiring brow 270

Of spurious notions—worn as open signs
 Of prejudice subdued—still he retained,
 'Mid much abasement, what he had received

From nature, an intense and glowing
 mind.

Wherefore, when humbled Liberty grew
 weak, 275

And mortal sickness on her face appeared,
 He coloured objects to his own desire
 As with a lover's passion. Yet his moods
 Of pain were keen as those of better
 men,

Nay keener, as his fortitude was less: 280
 And he continued, when worse days were
 come,

To deal about his sparkling eloquence, Struggling against the strange reverse with zeal

That showed like happiness. But, in despite

Of all this outside bravery, within, 285
 He neither felt encouragement nor hope:

For moral dignity, and strength of mind,
 Were wanting; and simplicity of life;
 And reverence for himself; and, last and
 best,

Confiding thoughts, through love and fear of Him 290

Before whose sight the troubles of this world

Are vain, as billows in a tossing sea.

"The glory of the times fading away—
 The splendour, which had given a festal
 air
 To self-importance, hallowed it, and veiled 295
 From his own sight—this gone, he forfeited
 All joy in human nature; was consumed,
 And vexed, and chafed, by levity and
 scorn,
 And fruitless indignation; galled by
 pride;
 Made desperate by contempt of men who throve 300
 Before his sight in power or fame, and
 won,
 Without desert, what he desired; weak
 men,
 Too weak even for his envy or his hate!
 Tormented thus, after a wandering course
 Of discontent, and inwardly opprest 305
 With malady—in part, I fear, provoked
 By weariness of life—he fixed his home,
 Or, rather say, sate down by very chance, Among these rugged hills; where now he dwells,
 And wastes the sad remainder of his
 hours, 310
 Steeped in a self-indulging spleen, that wants not
 Its own voluptuousness;—on this resolved,
 With this content, that he will live and
 die
 Forgotten,—at safe distance from 'a world
 Not moving to his mind.'"

These serious words

Closed the preparatory notices 316
 That served my Fellow-traveller to beguile
 The way, while we advanced up that wide vale.
 Diverging now (as if his quest had been Some secret of the mountains, cavern,
 fall 320
 Of water, or some lofty eminence, Renowned for splendid prospect far and
 wide)
 We scaled, without a track to ease our
 steps,

A steep ascent; and reached a dreary
 plain,
 With a tumultuous waste of huge hill
 tops 325
 Before us; savage region! which I paced Dispirited: when, all at once, behold!
 Beneath our feet, a little lowly vale,
 A lowly vale, and yet uplifted high Among the mountains; even as if the spot 330
 Had been from eldest time by wish of theirs
 So placed, to be shut out from all the
 world!
 Urn-like it was in shape, deep as an urn;
 With rocks encompassed, save that to the south
 Was one small opening, where a heath-clad ridge 335
 Supplied a boundary less abrupt and
 close;
 A quiet treeless nook, with two green
 fields,
 A liquid pool that glittered in the sun,
 And one bare dwelling; one abode, no
 more!
 It seemed the home of poverty and toil,
 Though not of want: the little fields, made green 341
 By husbandry of many thrifty years,
 Paid cheerful tribute to the moorland
 house.
 —There crows the cock, single in his
 domain:
 The small birds find in spring no thicket
 there 345
 To shroud them; only from the neighbouring vales
 The cuckoo, straggling up to the hill tops, Shouteth faint tidings of some gladder
 place.
 Ah! what a sweet Recess, thought I,
 is here!
 Instantly throwing down my limbs at ease 350
 Upon a bed of heath;—full many a spot
 Of hidden beauty have I chanced to espy Among the mountains; never one like
 this;
 So lonesome, and so perfectly secure;

Not melancholy—no, for it is green, 355
And bright, and fertile, furnished in itself
With the few needful things that life requires.

—In rugged arms how softly does it lie,
How tenderly protected! Far and near
We have an image of the pristine earth,
The planet in its nakedness: were this 361
Man's only dwelling, sole appointed seat,
First, last, and single, in the breathing
world,

It could not be more quiet: peace is here
Or nowhere; days unruffled by the gale
Of public news or private; years that
pass 366

Forgetfully; uncalled upon to pay
The common penalties of mortal life,
Sickness, or accident, or grief, or pain.

On these and kindred thoughts intent
I lay 370

In silence musing by my Comrade's side,
He also silent; when from out the heart
Of that profound abyss a solemn voice,
Or several voices in one solemn sound,
Was heard ascending; mournful, deep,
and slow 375
The cadence, as of psalms—a funeral
dirge!

We listened, looking down upon the hut,
But seeing no one: meanwhile from below
The strain continued, spiritual as before;
And now distinctly could I recognise 380 These words:—“Shall in the grave thy love be known,

In death thy faithfulness?”—“God rest
his soul!”

Said the old man, abruptly breaking silence,—

“He is departed, and finds peace at last!”

This scarcely spoken, and those holy
strains 385

Not ceasing, forth appeared in view a band

Of rustic persons, from behind the hut Bearing a coffin in the midst, with which They shaped their course along the sloping side

Of that small valley, singing as they
moved; 390

A sober company and few, the men
Bare-headed, and all decently attired!
Some steps when they had thus advanced,
the dirge

Ended; and, from the stillness that ensued

Recovering, to my Friend I said, “You
spake, 395

Methought, with apprehension that these rites

Are paid to Him upon whose shy retreat
This day we purposed to intrude.”—“I did so,

But let us hence, that we may learn the
truth:

Perhaps it is not he but some one else 400
For whom this pious service is performed;

Some other tenant of the solitude.”

So, to a steep and difficult descent

Trusting ourselves, we wound from crag to crag,

Where passage could be won; and, as the
last 405

Of the mute train, behind the heathy top
Of that off-sloping outlet, disappeared,

I, more impatient in my downward
course,

Had landed upon easy ground; and there Stood waiting for my Comrade. When beheld 410

An object that enticed my steps aside!

A narrow, winding, entry opened out
Into a platform—that lay, sheepfold-wise,

Enclosed between an upright mass of rock
And one old moss-grown wall;—a cool
recess, 415

And fanciful! For where the rock and
wall

Met in an angle, hung a penthouse,
framed

By thrusting two rude staves into the wall

And overlaying them with mountain
sods;

To weather-fend a little turf-built seat 420
Whereon a full-grown man might rest, nor dread

The burning sunshine, or a transient
shower;

But the whole plainly wrought by children's hands!

Whose skill had thronged the floor with a proud show

Of baby-houses, curiously arranged; 425
Nor wanting ornament of walks between,
With mimic trees inserted in the turf,
And gardens interposed. Pleased with the sight,

I could not choose but beckon to my Guide,

Who, entering, round him threw a careless glance 430

Impatient to pass on, when I exclaimed,
"Lo! what is here?" and, stooping down,
drew forth

A book, that, in the midst of stones and moss

And wreck of party-coloured earthenware,

Aptly disposed, had lent its help to raise
One of those petty structures. "His it must be!" 436

Exclaimed the Wanderer, "cannot but be his,

And he is gone!" The book, which in my hand

Had opened of itself (for it was swoln
With searching damp, and seemingly had lain 440

To the injurious elements exposed
From week to week,) I found to be a work

In the French tongue, a Novel of Voltaire,

His famous Optimist. "Unhappy Man!"

Exclaimed my Friend: "here then has been to him 445

Retreat within retreat, a sheltering-place Within how deep a shelter! He had fits,

Even to the last, of genuine tenderness,
And loved the haunts of children; here,

no doubt,
Pleasing and pleased, he shared their simple sports, 450

Or sate companionless; and here the book,
Left and forgotten in his careless way,

Must by the cottage-children have been found:

Heaven bless them, and their inconsiderate work!

To what odd purpose have the darlings turned 455

This sad memorial of their hapless friend!"

"Me," said I, "most doth it surprise,
to find

Such book in such a place!"—"A book it is,"

He answered, "to the Person suited well, Though little suited to surrounding

things: 460
'Tis strange, I grant; and stranger still had been

To see the Man who owned it, dwelling here,

With one poor shepherd, far from all the world!—

Now, if our errand hath been thrown away,

As from these intimations I forebode, 465
Grieved shall I be—less for my sake than yours,

And least of all for him who is no more."

By this, the book was in the old Man's hand;

And he continued, glancing on the leaves
An eye of scorn:—"The lover," said he,

"doomed 470
To love when hope hath failed him—whom no depth

Of privacy is deep enough to hide,
Hath yet his bracelet or his lock of hair,

And that is joy to him. When change of times

Hath summoned kings to scaffolds, do but give 475

The faithful servant, who must hide his head

Henceforth in whatsoever nook he may,
A kerchief sprinkled with his master's blood,

And he too hath his comforter. How poor,

Beyond all poverty how destitute, 480 Must that Man have been left, who, hither driven,

Flying or seeking, could yet bring with him

No dearer relique, and no better stay,
Than this dull product of a scoffer's pen,

Impure conceits discharging from a heart Hardened by impious pride!—I did not
 fear 486
 To tax you with this journey;”—mildly
 said
 My venerable Friend, as forth we stepped Into the presence of the cheerful light—“For I have knowledge that you do not shrink 490
 From moving spectacles;—but let us on.”

So speaking, on he went, and at the word
 I followed, till he made a sudden stand:
 For full in view, approaching through a gate
 That opened from the enclosure of green
 fields 495
 Into the rough uncultivated ground, Behold the Man whom he had fancied
 dead!
 I knew from his deportment, mien, and
 dress,
 That it could be no other; a pale face,
 A meagre person, tall, and in a garb 500
 Not rustic—dull and faded like himself!
 He saw us not, though distant but few
 steps;
 For he was busy, dealing, from a store
 Upon a broad leaf carried, choicest strings
 Of red ripe currants; gift by which he strove, 505
 With intermixture of endearing words,
 To soothe a Child, who walked beside him, weeping
 As if disconsolate.—“They to the grave
 Are bearing him, my Little-one,” he said, “To the dark pit; but he will feel no
 pain; 510
 His body is at rest, his soul in heaven.”

More might have followed—but my honoured Friend
 Broke in upon the Speaker with a frank And cordial greeting.—Vivid was the
 light
 That flashed and sparkled from the other’s
 eyes; 515
 He was all fire: no shadow on his brow
 Remained, nor sign of sickness on his face.
 Hands joined he with his Visitant,—a grasp,

An eager grasp; and many moments’
 space—
 When the first glow of pleasure was no
 more, 520
 And, of the sad appearance which at
 once
 Had vanished, much was come and coming back—
 An amicable smile retained the life
 Which it had unexpectedly received,
 Upon his hollow cheek. “How kind,”
 he said, 525
 “Nor could your coming have been better
 timed;
 For this, you see, is in our narrow world
 A day of sorrow. I have here a charge”—
 And, speaking thus, he patted tenderly
 The sun-burnt forehead of the weeping
 child— 530
 “A little mourner, whom it is my task
 To comfort;—but how came ye?—if you
 track (Which doth at once befriend us and betray) Conducted hither your most welcome
 feet,
 Ye could not miss the funeral train—they yet 535
 Have scarcely disappeared.” “This blooming Child,”
 Said the old Man, “is of an age to weep
 At any grave or solemn spectacle,
 Inly distressed or overpowered with awe,
 He knows not wherefore;—but the boy
 to-day, 540
 Perhaps is shedding orphan’s tears; you also Must have sustained a loss.”—“The hand of Death,”
 He answered, “has been here; but could not well
 Have fallen more lightly, if it had not fallen Upon myself.”—The other left these
 words 545
 Unnoticed, thus continuing.—
 “From yon crag Down whose steep sides we dropped into
 the vale,
 We heard the hymn they sang—a solemn
 sound

"That I came hither; neither have I
 found Among associates who have power of
 speech,
 Nor in such other converse as is here, 615
 Temptation so prevailing as to change
 That mood, or undermine my first resolve."
 Then, speaking in like careless sort, he
 said
 To my benign Companion,—“Pity ’tis That fortune did not guide you to this house 620
 A few days earlier; then would you have
 seen
 What stuff the Dwellers in a solitude,
 That seems by Nature hollowed out to be
 The seat and bosom of pure innocence,
 Are made of; an ungracious matter this!
 Which, for truth’s sake, yet in remembrance too 626
 Of past discussions with this zealous
 friend
 And advocate of humble life, I now
 Will force upon his notice; undeterred
 By the example of his own pure course,
 And that respect and deference which a
 soul 631
 May fairly claim, by niggard age enriched
 In what she most doth value, love of God
 And his frail creature Man;—but ye shall hear.
 I talk—and ye are standing in the sun
 Without refreshment!”
 Quickly had he spoken,
 And, with light steps still quicker than his words, Led toward the Cottage. Homely was
 the spot;
 And, to my feeling, ere we reached the
 door,
 Had almost a forbidding nakedness; 640
 Less fair, I grant, even painfully less
 fair,
 Than it appeared when from the beetling
 rock
 We had looked down upon it. All within,
 As left by the departed company,
 Was silent; save the solitary clock 645
 That on mine ear ticked with a mournful
 sound.—

Following our Guide, we clomb the cottage-stairs
 And reached a small apartment dark and
 low,
 Which was no sooner entered than our
 Host
 Said gaily, “This is my domain, my cell,
 My hermitage, my cabin, what you will—
 I love it better than a snail his house.
 But now ye shall be feasted with our best.”

So, with more ardour than an unripe girl Left one day mistress of her mother’s stores, 655
 He went about his hospitable task.
 My eyes were busy, and my thoughts no
 less,
 And pleased I looked upon my grey-haired Friend,
 As if to thank him; he returned that
 look,
 Cheered, plainly, and yet serious. What a wreck 660
 Had we about us! scattered was the floor,
 And, in like sort, chair, window-seat,
 and shelf,
 With books, maps, fossils, withered plants and flowers,
 And tufts of mountain moss. Mechanic tools
 Lay intermixed with scraps of paper,
 some 665
 Scribbled with verse: a broken anglingrod
 And shattered telescope, together linked
 By cobwebs, stood within a dusty nook;
 And instruments of music, some half-
 made,
 Some in disgrace, hung dangling from
 the walls. 670
 But speedily the promise was fulfilled;
 A feast before us, and a courteous Host Inviting us in glee to sit and eat.
 A napkin, white as foam of that rough
 brook
 By which it had been bleached, o’erspread the board; 675
 And was itself half-covered with a store
 Of dainties,—oaten bread, curd, cheese, and cream;

And cakes of butter curiously embossed,
Butter that had imbibed from meadow-
flowers

A golden hue, delicate as their own 680
Faintly reflected in a lingering stream.

Nor lacked, for more delight on that warm day,

Our table, small parade of garden fruits,
And whortle-berries from the mountain
side.

The Child, who long ere this had stilled his sobs, 685

Was now a help to his late comforter,
And moved, a willing Page, as he was bid,

Ministering to our need.

In genial mood,

While at our pastoral banquet thus we
sate

Fronting the window of that little cell,
I could not, ever and anon, forbear 691

To glance an upward look on two huge Peaks,

That from some other vale peered into
this.

"Those lusty twins," exclaimed our host,
"if here

It were your lot to dwell, would soon become 695

Your prized companions.—Many are the
notes

Which, in his tuneful course, the wind draws forth

From rocks, woods, caverns, heaths, and dashing shores;

And well those lofty brethren bear their
part

In the wild concert—chiefly when the storm 700

Rides high; then all the upper air they fill

With roaring sound, that ceases not to
flow,

Like smoke, along the level of the blast,
In mighty current; theirs, too, is the song
Of stream and headlong flood that seldom

fails; 705

And, in the grim and breathless hour of
noon,

Methinks that I have heard them echo
back

The thunder's greeting. Nor have nature's laws

Left them ungifted with a power to yield
Music of finer tone; a harmony, 710

So do I call it, though it be the hand
Of silence, though there be no voice;—

the clouds,

The mist, the shadows, light of golden suns,

Motions of moonlight, all come thither—
touch,

And have an answer—thither come, and
shape 715

A language not unwelcome to sick hearts
And idle spirits:—there the sun himself,

At the calm close of summer's longest day, Rests his substantial orb;—between those

heights

And on the top of either pinnacle, 720
More keenly than elsewhere in night's blue vault,

Sparkle the stars, as of their station
proud.

Thoughts are not busier in the mind of
man

Than the mute agents stirring there:—
alone

Here do I sit and watch.—"

A fall of voice, 725

Regretted like the nightingale's last note,
Had scarcely closed this high-wrought strain of rapture

Ere with inviting smile the Wanderer
said:

"Now for the tale with which you threatened us!"

"In truth the threat escaped me unawares: 730

Should the tale tire you, let this challenge
stand

For my excuse. Dissevered from man-
kind,

As to your eyes and thoughts we must have seemed

When ye looked down upon us from the
crag,

Islanders 'mid a stormy mountain sea,
We are not so;—perpetually we touch

Upon the vulgar ordinances of the world;
And he, whom this our cottage hath to-
day

- Relinquished, lived dependent for his bread
- Upon the laws of public charity. 740
- The Housewife, tempted by such slender
gains
- As might from that occasion be distilled,
Opened, as she before had done for me,
Her doors to admit this homeless Pensioner ;
- The portion gave of coarse but wholesome fare 745
- Which appetite required—a blind dull
nook,
- Such as she had, the kennel of his rest !
- This, in itself not ill, would yet have
been
- Ill borne in earlier life ; but his was now
The still contentedness of seventy years.
- Calm did he sit under the wide-spread
tree 751
- Of his old age ; and yet less calm and
meek,
- Winningly meek or venerably calm,
Than slow and torpid ; paying in this wise
- A penalty, if penalty it were, 755
- For spendthrift feats, excesses of his prime.
- I loved the old Man, for I pitied him !
- A task it was, I own, to hold discourse With one so slow in gathering up his
thoughts,
- But he was a cheap pleasure to my eyes ;
Mild, inoffensive, ready in his way, 761
- And helpful to his utmost power : and
there
- Our housewife knew full well what she possessed !
- He was her vassal of all labour, tilled
Her garden, from the pasture fetched her kine ; 765
- And, one among the orderly array
Of hay-makers, beneath the burning sun Maintained his place ; or heedfully pursued
- His course, on errands bound, to other
vales,
- Leading sometimes an inexperienced child
Too young for any profitable task. 771
- So moved he like a shadow that performed
- Substantial service. Mark me now, and learn
- For what reward !—The moon her monthly round
- Hath not completed since our dame, the queen 775
- Of this one cottage and this lonely dale,
Into my little sanctuary rushed—
Voice to a rueful treble humanised,
And features in deplorable dismay.
- I treat the matter lightly, but, alas ! 780
- It is most serious : persevering rain
Had fallen in torrents ; all the mountain-
tops
- Were hidden, and black vapours coursed their sides ;
- This had I seen, and saw ; but, till she
spake,
- Was wholly ignorant that my ancient
Friend— 785
- Who at her bidding early and alone,
Had clomb aloft to delve the moorland
turf
- For winter fuel—to his noontide meal Returned not, and now, haply, on the heights
- Lay at the mercy of this raging storm.
'Inhuman!'—said I, 'was an old Man's
life 791
- Not worth the trouble of a thought?— alas !
- This notice comes too late.' With joy I saw
- Her husband enter—from a distant vale.
- We sallied forth together ; found the tools 795
- Which the neglected veteran had dropped, But through all quarters looked for him
in vain.
- We shouted—but no answer ! Darkness
fell
- Without remission of the blast or shower,
And fears for our own safety drove us
home. 800
- "I, who weep little, did, I will confess,
The moment I was seated here alone, Honour my little cell with some few
tears
- Which anger and resentment could not
dry.

All night the storm endured: and, soon
as help 805

Had been collected from the neighbouring vale,

With morning we renewed our quest:
the wind

Was fallen, the rain abated, but the hills
Lay shrouded in impenetrable mist;

And long and hopelessly we sought in
vain: 810

Till, chancing on that lofty ridge to pass
A heap of ruin—almost without walls

And wholly without roof (the bleached remains

Of a small chapel, where, in ancient time,
The peasants of these lonely valleys used

To meet for worship on that central
height)— 816

We there espied the object of our search,
Lying full three parts buried among tufts

Of heath-plant, under and above him
strewn,

To baffle, as he might, the watery storm:
And there we found him breathing peaceably, 821

Snug as a child that hides itself in sport
'Mid a green hay-cock in a sunny field.

We spake—he made reply, but would not stir

At our entreaty; less from want of power
Than apprehension and bewildering

thoughts. 826

“So was he lifted gently from the
ground,

And with their freight homeward the shepherds moved

Through the dull mist, I following—when a step,

A single step, that freed me from the skirts 830

Of the blind vapour, opened to my view
Glory beyond all glory ever seen

By waking sense or by the dreaming soul!
The appearance, instantaneously dis-
closed,

Was of a mighty city—boldly say 835

A wilderness of building, sinking far
And self-withdrawn into a boundless

depth,
Far sinking into splendour—without end!

Fabric it seemed of diamond and of gold,
With alabaster domes, and silver spires,

And blazing terrace upon terrace, high Uplifted; here, serene pavilions bright,

In avenues disposed; there, towers begirt
With battlements that on their restless fronts

Bore stars—illumination of all gems! 845
By earthly nature had the effect been

wrought
Upon the dark materials of the storm

Now pacified; on them, and on the coves
And mountain-steeps and summits, whereunto

The vapours had receded, taking there
Their station under a cerulean sky. 851

Oh, 'twas an unimaginable sight!
Clouds, mists, streams, watery rocks and emerald turf,

Clouds of all tincture, rocks and sapphire

sky,
Confused, commingled, mutually inflamed, 855

Molten together, and composing thus,
Each lost in each, that marvellous array

Of temple, palace, citadel, and huge Fantastic pomp of structure without

name,
In fleecy folds voluminous, enwrapped.

Right in the midst, where interspace
appeared 861

Of open court, an object like a throne
Under a shining canopy of state

Stood fixed; and fixed resemblances were
seen

To implements of ordinary use, 865
But vast in size, in substance glorified;

Such as by Hebrew Prophets were beheld
In vision—forms uncouth of mightiest

power

For admiration and mysterious awe. 869
This little Vale, a dwelling-place of Man,

Lay low beneath my feet; 'twas visible—
I saw not, but I felt that it was there.

That which I saw was the revealed
abode

Of Spirits in beatitude: my heart Swelled in my breast.—‘I have been dead,’ I cried, 875

‘And now I live! Oh! wherefore do I

live?’

And with that pang I prayed to be no
more !—

—But I forget our Charge, as utterly I then forgot him:—there I stood and
gazed :

The apparition faded not away, 880
And I descended.

Having reached the house,
I found its rescued inmate safely lodged,
And in serene possession of himself, Beside a fire whose genial warmth seemed
met

By a faint shining from the heart, a gleam
Of comfort, spread over his pallid face.
Great show of joy the housewife made,
and truly

Was glad to find her conscience set at
ease ;

And not less glad, for sake of her good
name,

That the poor Sufferer had escaped with
life. 890

But, though he seemed at first to have received

No harm, and uncomplaining as before Went through his usual tasks, a silent
change

Soon showed itself: he lingered three short weeks ;

And from the cottage hath been borne
to-day. 895

“So ends my dolorous tale, and glad
I am

That it is ended.” At these words he turned—

And, with blithe air of open fellowship, Brought from the cupboard wine and stouter cheer,

Like one who would be merry. Seeing
this, 900

My grey-haired Friend said courteously—“Nay, nay,

You have regaled us as a hermit ought ;
Now let us forth into the sun !”—Our

Host

Rose, though reluctantly, and forth we went.

BOOK THIRD.

DESpondENCY.

ARGUMENT.

Images in the Valley.—Another Recess in it entered and described.—Wanderer's sensations.—Solitary's excited by the same objects.—Contrast between these.—Despondency of the Solitary gently reprov'd.—Conversation exhibiting the Solitary's past and present opinions and feelings, till he enters upon his own History at length.—His domestic felicity.—Afflictions.—Dejection.—Roused by the French Revolution.—Disappointment and disgust.—Voyage to America.—Disappointment and disgust pursue him.—His return.—His languor and depression of mind, from want of faith in the great truths of Religion, and want of confidence in the virtue of Mankind.

A HUMMING BEE—a little tinkling rill—
A pair of falcons wheeling on the wing,
In clamorous agitation, round the crest
Of a tall rock, their airy citadel—
By each and all of these the pensive ear 5
Was greeted, in the silence that ensued, When through the cottage-threshold we had passed,
And, deep within that lonesome valley,
stood
Once more beneath the concave of a blue And cloudless sky.—Anon exclaimed our
Host, 10
Triumphantly dispersing with the taunt
The shade of discontent which on his
brow
Had gathered,—“Ye have left my cell,— but see How Nature hems you in with friendly
arms!
And by her help ye are my prisoners
still. 15
But which way shall I lead you?—how contrive,
In spot so parsimoniously endowed,
That the brief hours, which yet remain, may reap
Some recompense of knowledge or de-
light?”
So saying, round he looked, as if perplexed; 20

And, to remove those doubts, my grey-haired Friend
Said—“Shall we take this pathway for our guide?—
Upward it winds, as if, in summer heats,
Its line had first been fashioned by the flock
Seeking a place of refuge at the root 25
Of yon black Yew-tree, whose protruded
boughs
Darken the silver bosom of the crag,
From which she draws her meagre sustenance.
There in commodious shelter may we rest.
Or let us trace this streamlet to its
source; 30
Feebly it tinkles with an earthy sound,
And a few steps may bring us to the spot Where, haply, crowned with flowerets and green herbs,
The mountain infant to the sun comes
forth,
Like human life from darkness.”—A quick
turn 35
Through a strait passage of encumbered
ground,
Proved that such hope was vain:—for now we stood
Shut out from prospect of the open vale,
And saw the water, that composed this
rill,

Descending, disembodied, and diffused 40
O'er the smooth surface of an ample crag,
Lofty, and steep, and naked as a tower.
All further progress here was barred;—

And who,
Thought I, if master of a vacant hour, Here would not linger, willingly de-
tained? 45

Whether to such wild objects he were led When copious rains have magnified the
stream

Into a loud and white-robed waterfall,
Or introduced at this more quiet time. 49

Upon a semicirque of turf-clad ground,
The hidden nook discovered to our view
A mass of rock, resembling, as it lay
Right at the foot of that moist precipice,
A stranded ship, with keel upturned, that rests

Fearless of winds and waves. Three several stones 55

Stood near, of smaller size, and not unlike
To monumental pillars: and, from these Some little space disjoined, a pair were
seen,

That with united shoulders bore aloft
A fragment, like an altar, flat and smooth: 60

Barren the tablet, yet thereon appeared
A tall and shining holly, that had found
A hospitable chink, and stood upright,
As if inserted by some human hand
In mockery, to wither in the sun, 65

Or lay its beauty flat before a breeze,
The first that entered. But no breeze did now

Find entrance;—high or low appeared no
trace

Of motion, save the water that descended,
Diffused adown that barrier of steep rock,
And softly creeping, like a breath of air,
Such as is sometimes seen, and hardly
seen,

To brush the still breast of a crystal lake.

“Behold a cabinet for sages built,
Which kings might envy!”—Praise to this effect 75

Broke from the happy old Man's reverend lip;

Who to the Solitary turned, and said,
“In sooth, with love's familiar privilege,
You have decried the wealth which is
your own.

Among these rocks and stones, methinks,
I see 80
More than the heedless impress that belongs

To lonely nature's casual work: they bear
A semblance strange of power intelligent,
And of design not wholly worn away.

Boldest of plants that ever faced the
wind, 85

How gracefully that slender shrub looks
forth

From its fantastic birthplace! And I
own,

Some shadowy intimations haunt me here,
That in these shows a chronicle survives
Of purposes akin to those of Man, 90
But wrought with mightier arm than now prevails.

—Voiceless the stream descends into the gulf

With timid lapse;—and lo! while in this strait

I stand—the chasm of sky above my head
Is heaven's profoundest azure; no domain
For fickle, short-lived clouds to occupy,
Or to pass through; but rather an abyss
In which the everlasting stars abide;
And whose soft gloom, and boundless depth, might tempt

The curious eye to look for them by day.
—Hail Contemplation! from the stately
towers, 101

Reared by the industrious hand of human
art

To lift thee high above the misty air
And turbulence of murmuring cities vast;
From academic groves, that have for thee
Been planted, hither come and find a lodge 106

To which thou may'st resort for holier
peace,—

From whose calm centre thou, through height or depth,

May'st penetrate, wherever truth shall
lead;

Measuring through all degrees, until the
scale 110

Of time and conscious nature disappear,
Lost in unsearchable eternity¹!”

A pause ensued; and with minuter care
We scanned the various features of the
scene: 114

And soon the Tenant of that lonely vale
With courteous voice thus spake—

“I should have grieved
Hereafter, not escaping self-reproach,
If from my poor retirement ye had gone
Leaving this nook unvisited: but, in sooth,
Your unexpected presence had so roused
My spirits, that they were bent on enterprise; 121

And, like an ardent hunter, I forgot,
Or, shall I say?—disdained, the game that lurks

At my own door. The shapes before our eyes
And their arrangement, doubtless must be deemed 125
The sport of Nature, aided by blind
Chance

Rudely to mock the works of toiling Man.
And hence, this upright shaft of unhewn
stone,

From Fancy, willing to set off her stores
By sounding titles, hath acquired the
name 130

Of Pompey's pillar; that I gravely style
My Theban obelisk; and, there, behold
A Druid cromlech!—thus I entertain
The antiquarian humour, and am pleased
To skim along the surfaces of things, 135
Beguiling harmlessly the listless hours.

But if the spirit be oppressed by sense
Of instability, revolt, decay,
And change, and emptiness, these freaks of Nature

And her blind helper Chance, do then suffice 140

To quicken, and to aggravate—to feed
Pity and scorn, and melancholy pride, Not less than that huge Pile (from some abyss

Of mortal power unquestionably sprung)
Whose hoary diadem of pendent rocks 145 Confines the shrill-voiced whirlwind, round and round

Eddying within its vast circumference,
On Sarum's naked plain—than pyramid
Of Egypt, unsubverted, undissolved—
Or Syria's marble ruins towering high 150
Above the sandy desert, in the light
Of sun or moon.—Forgive me, if I say That an appearance which hath raised your minds

To an exalted pitch (the self-same cause Different effect producing) is for me 155 Fraught rather with depression than
delight,

Though shame it were, could I not look around,

By the reflection of your pleasure, pleased.
Yet happier in my judgment, even than
you

With your bright transports fairly may be deemed, 160

The wandering Herbalist,—who, clear alike
From vain, and, that worse evil, vexing
thoughts,

Casts, if he ever chance to enter here,
Upon these uncouth Forms a slight regard

Of transitory interest, and peeps round
For some rare floweret of the hills, or plant 166

Of craggy fountain; what he hopes for wins,

Or learns, at least, that 'tis not to be won:
Then, keen and eager, as a fine-nosed hound

By soul-engrossing instinct driven along Through wood or open field, the harmless
Man 171

Departs, intent upon his onward quest!—
Nor is that Fellow-wanderer, so deem I,
Less to be envied, (you may trace him oft
By scars which his activity has left 175
Beside our roads and pathways, though, thank Heaven!

This covert nook reports not of his hand)
He who with pocket-hammer smites the edge

Of luckless rock or prominent stone, disguised

In weather-stains or crusted o'er by Nature 180

With her first growths, detaching by the

A chip or splinter—to resolve his doubts;
 And, with that ready answer satisfied,
 The substance classes by some barbarous
 name,
 And hurries on; or from the fragments picks 185
 His specimen, if but haply interveined
 With sparkling mineral, or should crystal cube
 Lurk in its cells—and thinks himself
 enriched,
 Wealthier, and doubtless wiser, than before!
 Intrusted safely each to his pursuit, 190
 Earnest alike, let both from hill to hill Range; if it please them, speed from clime to clime;
 The mind is full—and free from pain their pastime.”

“Then,” said I, interposing, “One is
 near,
 Who cannot but possess in your esteem Place worthier still of envy. May I
 name, 196
 Without offence, that fair-faced cottage-
 boy?
 Dame Nature’s pupil of the lowest form,
 Youngest apprentice in the school of art!
 Him, as we entered from the open glen,
 You might have noticed, busily engaged, Heart, soul, and hands,—in mending the defects 202
 Left in the fabric of a leaky dam
 Raised for enabling this penurious stream To turn a slender mill (that new-made plaything) 205
 For his delight—the happiest he of all!”

“Far happiest,” answered the despond-
 ing Man,
 “If, such as now he is, he might remain!
 Ah! what avails imagination high Or question deep? what profits all that
 earth, 210
 Or heaven’s blue vault, is suffered to put
 forth
 Of impulse or allurement, for the Soul
 To quit the beaten track of life, and soar
 Far as she finds a yielding element
 In past or future; far as she can go 215

Through time or space—if neither in the
 one,
 Nor in the other region, nor in aught
 That Fancy, dreaming o’er the map of
 things,
 Hath placed beyond these penetrable
 bounds,
 Words of assurance can be heard; if nowhere 220
 A habitation, for consummate good,
 Or for progressive virtue, by the search
 Can be attained,—a better sanctuary
 From doubt and sorrow, than the senseless grave?”

“Is this,” the grey-haired Wanderer mildly said, 225
 “The voice, which we so lately overheard,
 To that same child, addressing tenderly
 The consolations of a hopeful mind?
 ‘His body is at rest, his soul in heaven.’
 These were your words; and, verily,
 methinks 230
 Wisdom is oftentimes nearer when we stoop
 Than when we soar.”—

The Other, not displeased, Promptly replied—“My notion is the same.
 And I, without reluctance, could decline
 All act of inquisition whence we rise, 235
 And what, when breath hath ceased, we may become.
 Here are we, in a bright and breathing
 world.
 Our origin, what matters it? In lack
 Of worthier explanation, say at once With the American (a thought which suits 240
 The place where now we stand) that certain men
 Leapt out together from a rocky cave;
 And these were the first parents of man-
 kind:
 Or, if a different image be recalled
 By the warm sunshine, and the jocund
 voice 245
 Of insects chirping out their careless lives
 On these soft beds of thyme-besprinkled
 turf,
 Choose, with the gay Athenian, a conceit

As sound—blithe race! whose mantles were bedecked

With golden grasshoppers, in sign that
they 250

Had sprung, like those bright creatures, from the soil

Whereon their endless generations dwelt.

But stop! these theoretic fancies jar

On serious minds: then, as the Hindoos
draw 254

Their holy Ganges from a skyey fount,

Even so deduce the stream of human life

From seats of power divine; and hope,
or trust,

That our existence winds her stately
course

Beneath the sun, like Ganges, to make part

Of a living ocean; or, to sink engulfed,

Like Niger, in impenetrable sands 261

And utter darkness: thought which may be faced,

Though comfortless!—

Not of myself I speak;

Such acquiescence neither doth imply,

In me, a meekly-bending spirit soothed

By natural piety; nor a lofty mind, 266

By philosophic discipline prepared

For calm subjection to acknowledged law;

Pleased to have been, contented not to be.

Such palms I boast not;—no! to me, who
find, 270

Reviewing my past way, much to condemn,

Little to praise, and nothing to regret,

(Save some remembrances of dream-like
joys

That scarcely seem to have belonged to
me)

If I must take my choice between the
pair 275

That rule alternately the weary hours,

Night is than day more acceptable; sleep

Doth, in my estimate of good, appear

A better state than waking; death than
sleep:

Feelingly sweet is stillness after storm,

Though under covert of the wormy
ground! 281

“Yet be it said, in justice to myself,

That in more genial times, when I was
free

To explore the destiny of human kind

(Not as an intellectual game pursued 285

With curious subtilty, from wish to cheat

Irk some sensations; but by love of truth

Urged on, or haply by intense delight

In feeding thought, wherever thought could feed)

I did not rank with those (too dull or nice, 290

For to my judgment such they then appeared,

Or too aspiring, thankless at the best)

Who, in this frame of human life, perceive

An object whereunto their souls are tied

In discontented wedlock; nor did e'er,

From me, those dark impervious shades, that hang 296

Upon the region whither we are bound,

Exclude a power to enjoy the vital beams

Of present sunshine.—Deities that float

On wings, angelic Spirits! I could muse

O'er what from eldest time we have been told 301

Of your bright forms and glorious faculties,

And with the imagination rest content,

Not wishing more; repining not to tread

The little sinuous path of earthly care,

By flowers embellished, and by springs refreshed. 306

—‘Blow winds of autumn!—let your chilling breath

Take the live herbage from the mead, and strip

The shady forest of its green attire,—

And let the bursting clouds to fury rouse

The gentle brooks!—Your desolating
sway, 311

Sheds,’ I exclaimed, ‘no sadness upon me,

And no disorder in your rage I find.

What dignity, what beauty, in this change

From mild to angry, and from sad to gay,

Alternate and revolving! How benign,

How rich in animation and delight,

How bountiful these elements—compared

With aught, as more desirable and fair,

Devised by fancy for the golden age; 320

Or the perpetual warbling that prevails

In Arcady, beneath unaltered skies,

Through the long year in constant quiet
bound,

Night hushed as night, and day serene as day !'

—But why this tedious record?—Age, we know, 325

Is garrulous ; and solitude is apt
To anticipate the privilege of Age.
From far ye come ; and surely with a
hope
Of better entertainment :—let us hence !”

Loth to forsake the spot, and still more
loth 330

To be diverted from our present theme,
I said, “My thoughts, agreeing, Sir, with
yours,

Would push this censure farther ;—for, if smiles

Of scornful pity be the just reward
Of Poesy thus courteously employed 335
In framing models to improve the scheme
Of Man’s existence, and recast the world, Why should not grave Philosophy be styled,

Herself, a dreamer of a kindred stock,
A dreamer yet more spiritless and dull?
Yes, shall the fine immunities she boasts Establish sounder titles of esteem

For her, who (all too timid and reserved
For onset, for resistance too inert, Too weak for suffering, and for hope too tame) 345

Placed, among flowery gardens curtained
round

With world-excluding groves, the brotherhood

Of soft Epicureans, taught—if they
The ends of being would secure, and win
The crown of wisdom—to yield up their souls 350

To a voluptuous unconcern, preferring Tranquillity to all things. Or is she,”
I cried, “more worthy of regard, the
Power,

Who, for the sake of sterner quiet, closed
The Stoic’s heart against the vain approach 355

Of admiration, and all sense of joy ?”

His countenance gave notice that my zeal

Accorded little with his present mind ;

I ceased, and he resumed.—“ Ah ! gentle
Sir, .

Slight, if you will, the means ; but spare to slight 360

The end of those, who did, by system, rank,
As the prime object of a wise man’s aim,
Security from shock of accident,
Release from fear ; and cherished peaceful days

For their own sakes, as mortal life’s chief
good, 365

And only reasonable felicity.
What motive drew, what impulse, I would ask,

Through a long course of later ages, drove,
The hermit to his cell in forest wide ;
Or what detained him, till his closing
eyes 370

Took their last farewell of the sun and
stars,

Fast anchored in the desert ?—Not alone
Dread of the persecuting sword, remorse,
Wrongs unredressed, or insults unavenged
And unavengeable, defeated pride, 375
Prosperity subverted, maddening want, Friendship betrayed, affection unreturn-
ed,

Love with despair, or grief in agony ;—
Not always from intolerable pangs
He fled ; but, compassed round by pleasure, sighed 380

For independent happiness ; craving
peace,

The central feeling of all happiness,
Not as a refuge from distress or pain,
A breathing-time, vacation, or a truce,
But for its absolute self ; a life of peace,
Stability without regret or fear ; 386
That hath been, is, and shall be ever-
more !—

Such the reward he sought ; and wore out life,

There, where on few external things his
heart

Was set, and those his own ; or, if not his, 390

Subsisting under nature’s steadfast law.

“What other yearning was the master
tie

Of the monastic brotherhood, upon rock

Aerial, or in green secluded vale,
 One after one, collected from afar, 395
 An undissolving fellowship?—What but
 this,

The universal instinct of repose,
 The longing for confirmed tranquillity,
 Inward and outward; humble, yet sub-
 lime:

The life where hope and memory are as
 one; 400

Where earth is quiet and her face unchanged

Save by the simplest toil of human hands
 Or season's difference; the immortal Soul Consistent in self-rule; and heaven revealed

To meditation in that quietness!— 405 Such was their scheme: and though the wished-for end

By multitudes was missed, perhaps attained

By none, they for the attempt, and pains employed,

Do, in my present censure, stand redeemed
 From the unqualified disdain, that once Would have been cast upon them by my
 voice 411

Delivering her decisions from the seat
 Of forward youth—that scruples not to solve

Doubts, and determine questions, by the rules 414

Of inexperienced judgment, ever prone
 To overweening faith; and is inflamed,
 By courage, to demand from real life

The test of act and suffering, to provoke Hostility—how dreadful when it comes,
 Whether affliction be the foe, or guilt!

“A child of earth, I rested, in that stage 421

Of my past course to which these thoughts advert,

Upon earth's native energies; forgetting
 That mine was a condition which required
 Nor energy, nor fortitude—a calm 425
 Without vicissitude; which, if the like
 Had been presented to my view elsewhere,
 I might have even been tempted to despise.

But no—for the serene was also bright;

Enlivened happiness with joy o'erflowing,
 With joy, and—oh! that memory should survive 431

To speak the word—with rapture! Nature's boon,

Life's genuine inspiration, happiness
 Above what rules can teach, or fancy feign;

Abused, as all possessions are abused 435
 That are not prized according to their worth.

And yet, what worth? what good is given to men,

More solid than the gilded clouds of
 heaven?

What joy more lasting than a vernal
 flower?—

None! 'tis the general plaint of human
 kind 440

In solitude: and mutually addressed
 From each to all, for wisdom's sake:—
 This truth

The priest announces from his holy seat:
 And, crowned with garlands in the summer grove,

The poet fits it to his pensive lyre. 445

Yet, ere that final resting-place be gained,
 Sharp contradictions may arise, by doom
 Of this same life, compelling us to grieve
 That the prosperities of love and joy

Should be permitted, oftentimes, to endure
 So long, and be at once cast down for ever. 451

Oh! tremble, ye, to whom hath been assigned

A course of days composing happy
 months,

And they as happy years; the present
 still

So like the past, and both so firm a pledge
 Of a congenial future, that the wheels 456
 Of pleasure move without the aid of hope:
 For Mutability is Nature's bane;

And slighted Hope will be avenged; and,
 when

Ye need her favours, ye shall find her not;
 But in her stead—fear—doubt—and agony!” 461

This was the bitter language of the
 heart:

But, while he spake, look, gesture, tone
of voice,

Though discomposed and vehement, were such

As skill and graceful nature might suggest 465

To a proficient of the tragic scene
Standing before the multitude, beset
With dark events. Desirous to divert Or stem the current of the speaker's
thoughts,

We signified a wish to leave that place
Of stillness and close privacy, a nook 471
That seemed for self-examination made ;
Or, for confession, in the sinner's need, Hidden from all men's view. To our attempt

He yielded not ; but, pointing to a slope
Of mossy turf defended from the sun, 476
And on that couch inviting us to rest, Full on that tender-hearted Man he turned A serious eye, and his speech thus renewed.

“You never saw, your eyes did never
look 480

On the bright form of Her whom once I
loved :—

Her silver voice was heard upon the earth,
A sound unknown to you ; else, honoured
Friend !

Your heart had borne a pitiable share
Of what I suffered, when I wept that loss,
And suffer now, not seldom, from the
thought 486

That I remember, and can weep no more.— Stripped as I am of all the golden fruit
Of self-esteem ; and by the cutting blasts
Of self-reproach familiarly assailed ; 490
Yet would I not be of such wintry bare-
ness

But that some leaf of your regard should hang

Upon my naked branches :—lively
thoughts

Give birth, full often, to unguarded words ;
I grieve that, in your presence, from my
tongue 495

Too much of frailty hath already dropped ;
But that too much demands still more.

You know,

Revered Compatriot—and to you, kind
Sir,

(Not to be deemed a stranger, as you come Following the guidance of these welcome
feet 500

To our secluded vale) it may be told—
That my demerits did not sue in vain
To One on whose mild radiance many gazed

With hope, and all with pleasure. This fair Bride—

In the devotedness of youthful love, 505
Preferring me to parents, and the choir
Of gay companions, to the natal roof,
And all known places and familiar sights (Resigned with sadness gently weighing
down

Her trembling expectations, but no more Than did to her due honour, and to me
Yielded, that day, a confidence sublime
In what I had to build upon)—this Bride, Young, modest, meek, and beautiful, I led To a low cottage in a sunny bay, 515
Where the salt sea innocuously breaks,
And the sea breeze as innocently breathes,
On Devon's leafy shores ;—a sheltered
hold,

In a soft clime encouraging the soil
To a luxuriant bounty !—As our steps 520 Approach the embowered abode—our chosen seat—

See, rooted in the earth, her kindly bed,
The unendangered myrtle, decked with
flowers,

Before the threshold stands to welcome us !
While, in the flowering myrtle's neighbourhood, 525

Not overlooked but courting no regard, Those native plants, the holly and the
yew,

Gave modest intimation to the mind
How willingly their aid they would unite With the green myrtle, to endear the
hours 530

Of winter, and protect that pleasant place.
—Wild were the walks upon those lonely
Downs,

Track leading into track ; how marked,
how worn

Into bright verdure, between fern and gorse,

Winding away its never-ending line 535
On their smooth surface, evidence was
none :

But, there, lay open to our daily haunt,
A range of unappropriated earth,
Where youth's ambitious feet might move
at large ;

Whence, unmolested wanderers, we be-
held 540

The shining giver of the day diffuse
His brightness o'er a tract of sea and land
Gay as our spirits, free as our desires ;
As our enjoyments, boundless.—From those heights

We dropped, at pleasure, into sylvan combs ; 545

Where arbours of impenetrable shade,
And mossy seats, detained us side by side,
With hearts at ease, and knowledge in our hearts

'That all the grove and all the day was
ours.'

"O happy time ! still happier was at
hand ; 550

For Nature called my Partner to resign Her share in the pure freedom of that
life,

Enjoyed by us in common.—To my hope,
To my heart's wish, my tender Mate became

The thankful captive of maternal bonds ;
And those wild paths were left to me
alone. 556

There could I meditate on follies past ;
And, like a weary voyager escaped
From risk and hardship, inwardly retrace
A course of vain delights and thoughtless guilt, 560

And self-indulgence—without shame pursued.

There, undisturbed, could think of and could thank

Her whose submissive spirit was to me
Rule and restraint—my guardian—shall I say

That earthly Providence, whose guiding
love 565

Within a port of rest had lodged me safe ;
Safe from temptation, and from danger
far ?

Strains followed of acknowledgment addressed

To an Authority enthroned above
The reach of sight ; from whom, as from their source, 570

Proceed all visible ministers of good That walk the earth—Father of heaven
and earth,

Father, and king, and judge, adored and feared !

These acts of mind, and memory, and
heart,

And spirit—interrupted and relieved 575
By observations transient as the glance
Of flying sunbeams, or to the outward
form

Cleaving with power inherent and intense,
As the mute insect fixed upon the plant
On whose soft leaves it hangs, and from whose cup 580

It draws its nourishment imperceptibly—Endeared my wanderings ; and the mother's kiss

And infant's smile awaited my return.

"In privacy we dwelt, a wedded pair,
Companions daily, often all day long ; 585
Not placed by fortune within easy reach
Of various intercourse, nor wishing aught
Beyond the allowance of our own fire-
side,

The twain within our happy cottage born,
Inmates, and heirs of our united love ; 590
Graced mutually by difference of sex,
And with no wider interval of time Between their several births than served for one

To establish something of a leader's sway ; Yet left them joined by sympathy in
age ; 595

Equals in pleasure, fellows in pursuit.
On these two pillars rested as in air
Our solitude.

It soothes me to perceive,
Your courtesy withholds not from my
words

Attentive audience. But, oh ! gentle
Friends, 600

As times of quiet and unbroken peace,
Though, for a nation, times of blessed-
ness,

Give back faint echoes from the historian's
page;

So, in the imperfect sounds of this dis-
course,

Depressed I hear, how faithless is the
voice 605

Which those most blissful days reverberate.

What special record can, or need, be given To rules and habits, whereby much was done,

But all within the sphere of little things;
Of humble, though, to us, important cares,
And precious interests? Smoothly did
our life 611

Advance, swerving not from the path prescribed;

Her annual, her diurnal, round alike Maintained with faithful care. And you
divine

The worst effects that our condition saw
If you imagine changes slowly wrought,
And in their process unperceivable;
Not wished for; sometimes noticed with
a sigh,

(Whate'er of good or lovely they might bring)

Sighs of regret, for the familiar good 620
And loveliness endeared which they removed.

"Seven years of occupation undisturbed Established seemingly a right to hold
That happiness; and use and habit gave
To what an alien spirit had acquired 625
A patrimonial sanctity. And thus,
With thoughts and wishes bounded to this world,

I lived and breathed; most grateful—if to enjoy

Without repining or desire for more,
For different lot, or change to higher sphere, 630

(Only except some impulses of pride
With no determined object, though up-
held

By theories with suitable support)—
Most grateful, if in such wise to enjoy
Be proof of gratitude for what we have;
Else, I allow, most thankless.—But, at
once, 636

From some dark seat of fatal power was urged

A claim that shattered all.—Our blooming
girl,

Caught in the gripe of death, with such brief time

To struggle in as scarcely would allow 640
Her cheek to change its colour, was conveyed

From us to inaccessible worlds, to regions Where height, or depth, admits not the approach

Of living man, though longing to pursue.
—With even as brief a warning—and how
soon, 645

With what short interval of time between,
I tremble yet to think of—our last prop,
Our happy life's only remaining stay—
The brother followed; and was seen no
more!

"Calm as a frozen lake when ruthless
winds 650

Blow fiercely, agitating earth and sky,
The Mother now remained; as if in her,
Who, to the lowest region of the soul,
Had been erewhile unsettled and disturbed,

This second visitation had no power 655
To shake; but only to bind up and seal;
And to establish thankfulness of heart

In Heaven's determinations, ever just.
The eminence whereon her spirit stood,
Mine was unable to attain. Immense The space that severed us! But, as the
sight 661

Communicates with heaven's ethereal orbs
Incalculably distant; so, I felt

That consolation may descend from far (And that is intercourse, and union, too,) While, overcome with speechless gratitude, 666

And, with a holier love inspired, I looked
On her—at once superior to my woes
And partner of my loss.—O heavy change!
Dimness o'er this clear luminary crept 670
Insensibly;—the immortal and divine Yielded to mortal reflux; her pure glory,
As from the pinnacle of worldly state
Wretched ambition drops astounded, fell Into a gulf obscure of silent grief, 675

And keen heart-anguish—of itself ashamed,
Yet obstinately cherishing itself:
And, so consumed, she melted from my
arms;
And left me, on this earth, disconsolate!

“What followed cannot be reviewed in
thought; 680
Much less, retraced in words. If she,
of life

Blameless, so intimate with love and joy
And all the tender motions of the soul,
Had been supplanted, could I hope to
stand—

Infirm, dependent, and now destitute? 685
I called on dreams and visions, to disclose
That which is veiled from waking thought;
conjured

Eternity, as men constrain a ghost
To appear and answer; to the grave I
spake

Implopingly;—looked up, and asked the Heavens 690

If Angels traversed their cerulean floors,
If fixed or wandering star could tidings
yield

Of the departed spirit—what abode
It occupies—what consciousness retains Of former loves and interests. Then my
soul 695

Turned inward,—to examine of what stuff
Time's fetters are composed; and life was put

To inquisition, long and profitless!
By pain of heart—now checked—and now impelled—

The intellectual power, through words
and things, 700

Went sounding on, a dim and perilous
way!

And from those transports, and these toils abstruse,

Some trace am I enabled to retain
Of time, else lost;—existing unto me
Only by records in myself not found. 705

“From that abstraction I was roused,— and how?

Even as a thoughtful shepherd by a flash
Of lightning startled in a gloomy cave

Of these wild hills. For, lo! the dread Bastille,

With all the chambers in its horrid
towers, 710

Fell to the ground:—by violence overthrown

Of indignation; and with shouts that drowned

The crash it made in falling! From the wreck

A golden palace rose, or seemed to rise,
The appointed seat of equitable law 715

And mild paternal sway. The potent shock

I felt: the transformation I perceived,
As marvellously seized as in that moment
When, from the blind mist issuing, I beheld

Glory—beyond all glory ever seen, 720
Confusion infinite of heaven and earth, Dazzling the soul. Meanwhile, prophetic harps

In every grove were ringing, ‘War shall
cease;

Did ye not hear that conquest is abjured?
Bring garlands, bring forth choicest flowers, to deck 725

The tree of Liberty.’—My heart rebounded;

My melancholy voice the chorus joined;
—‘Be joyful all ye nations; in all lands,
Ye that are capable of joy be glad!

Henceforth, whate'er is wanting to your-
selves 730

In others ye shall promptly find;—and all,
Enriched by mutual and reflected wealth,
Shall with one heart honour their common
kind.’

“Thus was I reconverted to the world;
Society became my glittering bride, 735

And airy hopes my children.—From the depths

Of natural passion, seemingly escaped,
My soul diffused herself in wide embrace
Of institutions, and the forms of things;
As they exist, in mutable array, 740

Upon life's surface. What, though in my veins

There flowed no Gallic blood, nor had I breathed

The air of France, not less than Gallic
zeal

Kindled and burnt among the sapless
twigs

Of my exhausted heart. If busy men 745

In sober conclave met, to weave a web

Of amity, whose living threads should stretch

Beyond the seas, and to the farthest pole,

There did I sit, assisting. If, with noise

And acclamation, crowds in open air 750

Expressed the tumult of their minds, my
voice

There mingled, heard or not. The powers of song

I left not uninvoked; and, in still groves,

Where mild enthusiasts tuned a pensive
lay

Of thanks and expectation, in accord 755

With their belief, I sang Saturnian rule

Returned,—a progeny of golden years

Permitted to descend, and bless mankind.

—With promises the Hebrew Scriptures
teem :

I felt their invitation; and resumed 760

A long-suspended office in the House

Of public worship, where, the glowing phrase

Of ancient inspiration serving me,

I promised also,—with undaunted trust

Foretold, and added prayer to prophecy;

The admiration winning of the crowd; 766

The help desiring of the pure devout.

“Scorn and contempt forbid me to proceed!

But History, time’s slavish scribe, will tell

How rapidly the zealots of the cause 770

Disbanded—or in hostile ranks appeared;

Some, tired of honest service; these, out-
done,

Disgusted therefore, or appalled, by aims

Of fiercer zealots—so confusion reigned,

And the more faithful were compelled to exclaim,

As Brutus did to Virtue, ‘Liberty, 775

I worshipped thee, and find thee but a

Shade!’

“Such recantation had for me no charm,

Nor would I bend to it; who should have

grieved

At aught, however fair, that bore the
mien 780

Of a conclusion, or catastrophe.

Why then conceal, that, when the simply
good

In timid selfishness withdrew, I sought

Other support, not scrupulous whence it
came;

And, by what compromise it stood, not nice? 785

Enough if notions seemed to be high-pitched,

And qualities determined.—Among men

So characterized did I maintain a strife

Hopeless, and still more hopeless every
hour;

But, in the process, I began to feel 790

That, if the emancipation of the world

Were missed, I should at least secure my
own,

And be in part compensated. For rights,

Widely—inveterately usurped upon,

I spake with vehemence; and promptly
seized 795

All that Abstraction furnished for my
needs

Or purposes; nor scrupled to proclaim,

And propagate, by liberty of life,

Those new persuasions. Not that I rejoiced,

Or even found pleasure, in such vagrant

course, 800

For its own sake; but farthest from the
walk

Which I had trod in happiness and
peace,

Was most inviting to a troubled mind;

That, in a struggling and distempered
world,

Saw a seductive image of herself. 805

Yet, mark the contradictions of which
Man

Is still the sport! Here Nature was my
guide,

The Nature of the dissolute; but thee,

O fostering Nature! I rejected—smiled

At others’ tears in pity; and in scorn

At those, which thy soft influence sometimes drew 811

From my unguarded heart.—The tranquil shores

Of Britain circumscribed me; else, perhaps
I might have been entangled among
deeds,
Which, now, as infamous, I should abhor—Despise, as senseless: for my spirit relished 816
Strangely the exasperation of that Land, Which turned an angry beak against the
down
Of her own breast; confounded into hope
Of disencumbering thus her fretful wings.

“But all was quieted by iron bonds
Of military sway. The shifting aims,
The moral interests, the creative might,
The varied functions and high attributes
Of civil action, yielded to a power 825
Formal, and odious, and contemptible.
—In Britain, ruled a panic dread of
change;
The weak were praised, rewarded, and advanced;
And, from the impulse of a just disdain,
Once more did I retire into myself. 830
There feeling no contentment, I resolved
To fly, for safeguard, to some foreign
shore,
Remote from Europe; from her blasted
hopes;
Her fields of carnage, and polluted air.

“Fresh blew the wind, when o'er the Atlantic Main 835
The ship went gliding with her thoughtless crew;
And who among them but an Exile, freed From discontent, indifferent, pleased to sit
Among the busily-employed, not more With obligation charged, with service taxed, 840
Than the loose pendant—to the idle wind
Upon the tall mast streaming. But, ye
Powers
Of soul and sense mysteriously allied,
O, never let the Wretched, if a choice Be left him, trust the freight of his
distress 845
To a long voyage on the silent deep!
For, like a plague, will memory break out;

And, in the blank and solitude of things,
Upon his spirit, with a fever's strength,
Will conscience prey.—Feebly must they have felt 850
Who, in old time, attired with snakes and whips
The vengeful Furies. Beautiful regards
Were turned on me—the face of her I
loved;
The Wife and Mother pitifully fixing
Tender reproaches, insupportable! 855
Where now that boasted liberty? No welcome
From unknown objects I received; and
those,
Known and familiar, which the vaulted
sky
Did, in the placid clearness of the night,
Disclose, had accusations to prefer 860 Against my peace. Within the cabin
stood
That volume—as a compass for the soul—
Revered among the nations. I implored
Its guidance; but the infallible support Of faith was wanting. Tell me, why refused 865
To One by storms annoyed and adverse
winds;
Perplexed with currents; of his weakness sick;
Of vain endeavours tired; and by his own,
And by his nature's, ignorance, dismayed!

“Long wished-for sight, the Western World appeared; 870
And, when the ship was moored, I leaped ashore
Indignantly—resolved to be a man,
Who, having o'er the past no power,
would live
No longer in subjection to the past, 874
With abject mind—from a tyrannic lord
Inviting penance, fruitlessly endured:
So, like a fugitive, whose feet have cleared
Some boundary, which his followers may not cross
In prosecution of their deadly chase, Respiring I looked round.—How bright
the sun, 880
The breeze how soft! Can any thing produced

In the old World compare, thought I, for
power
And majesty with this gigantic stream, Sprung from the desert? And behold a city
Fresh, youthful, and aspiring! What are
these 885
To me, or I to them? As much, at least As he desires that they should be, whom
winds
And waves have wafted to this distant
shore,
In the condition of a damaged seed, Whose fibres cannot, if they would, take root. 890
Here may I roam at large;—my business
is,
Roaming at large, to observe, and not to
feel
And, therefore, not to act—convinced that all Which bears the name of action, how-soe'er
Beginning, ends in servitude—still painful, 895
And mostly profitless. And, sooth to
say,
On nearer view, a motley spectacle Appeared, of high pretensions—unre-
proved
But by the obstreperous voice of higher
still;
Big passions strutting on a petty stage;
Which a detached spectator may regard
Not unamused.—But ridicule demands Quick change of objects; and, to laugh
alone, 903
At a composing distance from the haunts
Of strife and folly, though it be a treat
As choice as musing Leisure can bestow;
Yet, in the very centre of the crowd,
To keep the secret of a poignant scorn,
Howe'er to airy Demons suitable,
Of all unsocial courses, is least fit 910
For the gross spirit of mankind,—the
one
That soonest fails to please, and quickest turns
Into vexation.

Let us, then, I said,
Leave this unknit Republic to the scourge

Of her own passions; and to regions haste,
Whose shades have never felt the encroaching axe, 916
Or soil endured a transfer in the mart
Of dire rapacity. There, Man abides, Primeval Nature's child. A creature weak
In combination, (wherefore else driven
back 920
So far, and of his old inheritance
So easily deprived?) but, for that cause,
More dignified, and stronger in himself;
Whether to act, judge, suffer, or enjoy.
True, the intelligence of social art 925 Hath overpowered his forefathers, and
soon
Will sweep the remnant of his line away;
But contemplations, worthier, nobler far
Than her destructive energies, attend 929
His independence, when along the side
Of Mississippi, or that northern stream¹
That spreads into successive seas, he walks;
Pleased to perceive his own unshackled
life,
And his innate capacities of soul,
There imaged: or when, having gained
the top 935
Of some commanding eminence, which yet
Intruder ne'er beheld, he thence surveys Regions of wood and wide savannah, vast Expanse of unappropriated earth,
With mind that sheds a light on what he sees; 940
Free as the sun, and lonely as the sun,
Pouring above his head its radiance down
Upon a living and rejoicing world!

“So, westward, tow'rd the unviolated
woods
I bent my way; and, roaming far and
wide, 945
Failed not to greet the merry Mocking-
bird;
And, while the melancholy Muccawiss (The sportive bird's companion in the grove)
Repeated o'er and o'er his plaintive cry,
I sympathised at leisure with the sound;
But that pure archetype of human great-
ness, 951

I found him not. There, in his stead,
appeared

A creature, squalid, vengeful, and im-
pure ;

Remorseless, and submissive to no law
But superstitious fear, and abject sloth.

“Enough is told ! Here am I—ye have
heard 956

What evidence I seek, and vainly seek ;
What from my fellow-beings I require,
And either they have not to give, or I Lack virtue to receive ; what I myself,
Too oft by wilful forfeiture, have lost 961 Nor can regain. How languidly I look Upon this visible fabric of the world,
May be divined—perhaps it hath been
said :—

But spare your pity, if there be in me 965
Aught that deserves respect : for I exist, Within myself, not comfortless.—The tenour

Which my life holds, he readily may conceive

Whoe'er hath stood to watch a mountain
brook

In some still passage of its course, and
seen, 970

Within the depths of its capacious breast,

Inverted trees, rocks, clouds, and azure
sky ;

And, on its glassy surface, specks of foam,
And conglobated bubbles undissolved,
Numerous as stars ; that, by their onward lapse, 975

Betray to sight the motion of the stream, Else imperceptible. Meanwhile, is heard A softened roar, or murmur ; and the
sound

Though soothing, and the little floating
isles

Though beautiful, are both by Nature
charged 980

With the same pensive office ; and make
known

Through what perplexing labyrinths, abrupt

Precipitations, and untoward straits,
The earth-born wanderer hath passed ;
and quickly, 984

That respite o'er, like traverses and toils
Must he again encounter.—Such a stream
Is human Life ; and so the Spirit fares

In the best quiet to her course allowed ;
And such is mine,—save only for a hope

That my particular current soon will reach The unfathomable gulf, where all is
still !” 991

BOOK FOURTH.

DESPONDENCY CORRECTED.

ARGUMENT.

State of feeling produced by the foregoing Narrative.—A belief in a superintending Providence the only adequate support under affliction.—Wanderer's ejaculation.—Acknowledges the difficulty of a lively faith.—Hence immoderate sorrow.—Exhortations.—How received.—Wanderer applies his discourse to that other cause of dejection in the Solitary's mind.—Disappointment from the French Revolution.—States grounds of hope, and insists on the necessity of patience and fortitude with respect to the course of great revolutions.—Knowledge the source of tranquillity.—Rural Solitude favourable to knowledge of the inferior Creatures; Study of their habits and ways recommended; exhortation to bodily exertion and communion with Nature.—Morbid Solitude pitiable.—Superstition better than apathy.—Apathy and destitution unknown in the infancy of society.—The various modes of Religion prevented it.—Illustrated in the Jewish, Persian, Babylonian, Chaldean, and Grecian modes of belief.—Solitary interposes.—Wanderer points out the influence of religious and imaginative feeling in the humble ranks of society, illustrated from present and past times.—These principles tend to recall exploded superstitions and Popery.—Wanderer rebuts this charge, and contrasts the dignities of the Imagination with the presumptuous littleness of certain modern Philosophers.—Recommends other lights and guides.—Asserts the power of the Soul to regenerate herself; Solitary asks how.—Reply.—Personal appeal.—Exhortation to activity of body renewed.—How to commune with Nature.—Wanderer concludes with a legitimate union of the Imagination, affections, understanding, and reason.—Effect of his discourse.—Evening; Return to the Cottage.

HERE closed the Tenant of that lonely vale

His mournful narrative—commenced in pain,

In pain commenced, and ended without peace:

Yet tempered, not unfrequently, with strains

Of native feeling, grateful to our minds;

And yielding surely some relief to his, 6

While we sate listening with compassion due.

A pause of silence followed; then, with voice

That did not falter though the heart was moved,

The Wanderer said:—

“One adequate support to
For the calamities of mortal life

Exists—one only; an assured belief
That the procession of our fate, howe'er Sad or disturbed, is ordered by a Being

Of infinite benevolence and power; 15
Whose everlasting purposes embrace

All accidents, converting them to good.
—The darts of anguish fix not where the

seat
Of suffering hath been thoroughly fortified

By acquiescence in the Will supreme 20
For time and for eternity; by faith,

Faith absolute in God, including hope,
And the defence that lies in boundless

love
Of his perfections; with habitual dread

Of aught unworthily conceived, endured Impatiently, ill-done, or left undone, 26

To the dishonour of his holy name.
Soul of our Souls, and safeguard of the

world!
Sustain, thou only canst, the sick of

heart;
Restore their languid spirits, and recall 30

Their lost affections unto thee and
thine!”

Then, as we issued from that covert
 nook,
 He thus continued, lifting up his eyes
 To heaven:—"How beautiful this dome of sky;
 And the vast hills, in fluctuation fixed 35
 At thy command, how awful! Shall the
 Soul,
 Human and rational, report of thee Even less than these!—Be mute who will,
 who can,
 Yet I will praise thee with impassioned
 voice:
 My lips, that may forget thee in the crowd, 40
 Cannot forget thee here; where thou hast
 built,
 For thy own glory, in the wilderness!
 Me didst thou constitute a priest of thine,
 In such a temple as we now behold Reared for thy presence: therefore am I
 bound 45
 To worship, here, and everywhere—as one Not doomed to ignorance, though forced
 to tread,
 From childhood up, the ways of poverty;
 From unreflecting ignorance preserved,
 And from debasement rescued.—By thy
 grace 50
 The particle divine remained unquenched;
 And, 'mid the wild weeds of a rugged soil,
 Thy bounty caused to flourish deathless
 flowers,
 From paradise transplanted: wintry age Impends; the frost will gather round my
 heart; 55
 If the flowers wither, I am worse than
 dead!
 —Come, labour, when the worn-out frame
 requires Perpetual sabbath; come, disease and
 want;
 And sad exclusion through decay of
 sense;
 But leave me unabated trust in thee— 60
 And let thy favour, to the end of life,
 Inspire me with ability to seek Repose and hope among eternal things—
 Father of heaven and earth! and I am
 rich,
 And will possess my portion in content!

"And what are things eternal?—powers depart," 66
 The grey-haired Wanderer steadfastly replied,
 Answering the question which himself
 had asked,
 "Possessions vanish, and opinions change,
 And passions hold a fluctuating seat: 70
 But, by the storms of circumstance un-
 shaken,
 And subject neither to eclipse nor wane,
 Duty exists;—immutably survive,
 For our support, the measures and the
 forms,
 Which an abstract intelligence supplies;
 Whose kingdom is, where time and space
 are not. 76
 Of other converse which mind, soul, and
 heart,
 Do, with united urgency, require,
 What more that may not perish?—Thou, dread source, 79
 Prime, self-existing cause and end of all
 That in the scale of being fill their place;
 Above our human region, or below,
 Set and sustained;—thou, who didst wrap the cloud
 Of infancy around us, that thyself,
 Therein, with our simplicity awhile 85
 Might'st hold, on earth, communion undisturbed;
 Who from the anarchy of dreaming sleep,
 Or from its death-like void, with punctual
 care,
 And touch as gentle as the morning light,
 Restor'st us, daily, to the powers of sense
 And reason's steadfast rule—thou, thou
 alone 91
 Art everlasting, and the blessed Spirits, Which thou includest, as the sea her
 waves:
 For adoration thou endur'st; endure
 For consciousness the motions of thy
 will; 95
 For apprehension those transcendent
 truths
 Of the pure intellect, that stand as laws (Submission constituting strength and power)
 Even to thy Being's infinite majesty!
 This universe shall pass away—a work 100

Glorious! because the shadow of thy
might,

A step, or link, for intercourse with thee.

Ah! if the time must come, in which my
feet

No more shall stray where meditation
leads,

By flowing stream, through wood, or craggy wild, 105

Loved haunts like these; the unim-prisoned Mind

May yet have scope to range among her
own,

Her thoughts, her images, her high desires.

If the dear faculty of sight should fail, 109

Still, it may be allowed me to remember

What visionary powers of eye and soul

In youth were mine; when, stationed on the top

Of some huge hill, expectant, I beheld

The sun rise up, from distant climes
returned

Darkness to chase, and sleep; and bring
the day 115

His bounteous gift! or saw him toward the deep

Sink, with a retinue of flaming clouds

Attended; then, my spirit was entranced

With joy exalted to beatitude;

The measure of my soul was filled with
bliss, 120

And holiest love; as earth, sea, air, with
light,

With pomp, with glory, with magnificence!

“Those fervent raptures are for ever
flown;

And, since their date, my soul hath undergone 124

Change manifold, for better or for worse:

Yet cease I not to struggle, and aspire

Heavenward; and chide the part of me that flags,

Through sinful choice; or dread necessity

On human nature from above imposed.

'Tis, by comparison, an easy task 130

Earth to despise; but, to converse with heaven—¹

This is not easy:—to relinquish all

We have, or hope, of happiness and joy,
And stand in freedom loosened from this
world,

I deem not arduous; but must needs confess 135

That 'tis a thing impossible to frame
Conceptions equal to the soul's desires;

And the most difficult of tasks: to keep Heights which the soul is competent to gain.

—Man is of dust: ethereal hopes are his,
Which, when they should sustain themselves aloft, 141

Want due consistence; like a pillar of smoke,

That with majestic energy from earth
Rises; but, having reached the thinner
air,

Melts, and dissolves, and is no longer seen.
From this infirmity of mortal kind 146

Sorrow proceeds, which else were not;
at least,

If grief be something hallowed and ordained,

If, in proportion, it be just and meet,
Yet, through this weakness of the general
heart, 150

Is it enabled to maintain its hold

In that excess which conscience disapproves.

For who could sink and settle to that point

Of selfishness; so senseless who could be
As long and perseveringly to mourn 155

For any object of his love, removed From this unstable world, if he could fix

A satisfying view upon that state

Of pure, imperishable, blessedness,

Which reason promises, and holy writ 160

Ensures to all believers?—Yet mistrust

Is of such incapacity, methinks,

No natural branch; despondency far less;

And, least of all, is absolute despair.

—And, if there be whose tender frames have drooped 165

Even to the dust; apparently, through
weight

Of anguish unrelieved, and lack of power

An agonizing sorrow to transmute;

Deem not that proof is here of hope with-
held

When wanted most; a confidence impaired 170

So pitiaibly, that, having ceased to see
With bodily eyes, they are borne down by love

Of what is lost, and perish through regret.
Oh! no, the innocent Sufferer often sees Too clearly; feels too vividly; and longs
To realize the vision, with intense 176
And over-constant yearning;—there—there lies

The excess, by which the balance is destroyed.

Too, too contracted are these walls of flesh,

This vital warmth too cold, these visual orbs, 180

Though inconceivably endowed, too dim
For any passion of the soul that leads To ecstasy; and all the crooked paths
Of time and change disdaining, takes its
course

Along the line of limitless desires. 185

I, speaking now from such disorder free, Nor rapt, nor craving, but in settled
peace,

I cannot doubt that they whom you deplore

Are glorified; or, if they sleep, shall wake

From sleep, and dwell with God in endless love. 190

Hope, below this, consists not with belief

In mercy, carried infinite degrees

Beyond the tenderness of human hearts:

Hope, below this, consists not with belief

In perfect wisdom, guiding mightiest
power, 195

That finds no limits but her own pure will.

“Here then we rest; not fearing for our creed

The worst that human reasoning can achieve,

To unsettle or perplex it: yet with pain Acknowledging, and grievous self-reproach, 200

That, though immovably convinced, we want

Zeal, and the virtue to exist by faith

As soldiers live by courage; as, by
strength

Of heart, the sailor fights with roaring seas.

Alas! the endowment of immortal power

Is matched unequally with custom, time¹,

And domineering faculties of sense

In all; in most with superadded foes,

Idle temptations; open vanities,

Ephemeral offspring of the unblushing
world; 210

And, in the private regions of the mind,

Ill-governed passions, ranklings of despise,

Immoderate wishes, pining discontent,

Distress and care. What then remains?—

To seek

Those helps for his occasions ever near

Who lacks not will to use them; vows,
renewed 216

On the first motion of a holy thought;

Vigils of contemplation; praise; and
prayer—

A stream, which, from the fountain of the heart 219

Issuing, however feebly, nowhere flows

Without access of unexpected strength.

But, above all, the victory is most sure

For him, who, seeking faith by virtue,
strives

To yield entire submission to the law

Of conscience—conscience revered and obeyed, 225

As God's most intimate presence in the
soul,

And his most perfect image in the world.

—Endeavour thus to live; these rules
regard;

These helps solicit; and a steadfast seat

Shall then be yours among the happy few

Who dwell on earth, yet breathe empyreal air, 231

Sons of the morning. For your nobler
part,

Ere disencumbered of her mortal chains,

Doubt shall be quelled and trouble chased
away;

With only such degree of sadness left 235

As may support longings of pure desire;

And strengthen love, rejoicing secretly

In the sublime attractions of the grave.”

While, in this strain, the venerable Sage Poured forth his aspirations, and announced 240
His judgments, near that lonely house we paced
A plot of green-sward, seemingly preserved
By nature's care from wreck of scattered
stones,
And from encroachment of encircling
heath:
Small space! but, for reiterated steps, Smooth and commodious; as a stately deck 246
Which to and fro the mariner is used To tread for pastime, talking with his mates,
Or haply thinking of far-distant friends,
While the ship glides before a steady
breeze. 250
Stillness prevailed around us: and the
voice
That spake was capable to lift the soul Toward regions yet more tranquil. But,
methought,
That he, whose fixed despondency had
given Impulse and motive to that strong dis-
course, 255
Was less upraised in spirit than abashed;
Shrinking from admonition, like a man
Who feels that to exhort is to reproach.
Yet not to be diverted from his aim,
The Sage continued:— “For that other loss, 260
The loss of confidence in social man,
By the unexpected transports of our age Carried so high, that every thought, which looked
Beyond the temporal destiny of the Kind,
To many seemed superfluous—as, no
cause 265
Could e'er for such exalted confidence
Exist; so, none is now for fixed despair:
The two extremes are equally disowned
By reason: if, with sharp recoil, from one
You have been driven far as its opposite, Between them seek the point whereon to build 271
Sound expectations. So doth he advise

Who shared at first the illusion; but was
soon
Cast from the pedestal of pride by shocks Which Nature gently gave, in woods and
fields; 275
Nor unproved by Providence, thus speaking
To the inattentive children of the world:
'Vain-glorious Generation! what new
powers
On you have been conferred? what gifts, withheld
From your progenitors, have ye received,
Fit recompense of new desert? what claim
Are ye prepared to urge, that my decrees
For you should undergo a sudden change;
And the weak functions of one busy day,
Reclaiming and extirpating, perform 285
What all the slowly-moving years of time,
With their united force, have left undone?
By nature's gradual processes be taught;
By story be confounded! Ye aspire Rashly, to fall once more; and that false
fruit, 290
Which, to your overweening spirits,
yields
Hope of a flight celestial, will produce Misery and shame. But Wisdom of her sons
Shall not the less, though late, be justified.'

“Such timely warning,” said the Wanderer, “gave 295
That visionary voice; and, at this day,
When a Tartarean darkness overspreads
The groaning nations; when the impious
rule,
By will or by established ordinance,
Their own dire agents, and constrain the
good 300
To acts which they abhor; though I bewail
This triumph, yet the pity of my heart Prevents me not from owning, that the
law,
By which mankind now suffers, is most just.
For by superior energies; more strict 305
Affiance in each other; faith more firm
In their unhallowed principles; the bad

Have fairly earned a victory o'er the weak,
The vacillating, inconsistent good.

Therefore, not unconsol'd, I wait—in
hope 310

To see the moment, when the righteous
cause

Shall gain defenders zealous and devout
As they who have opposed her; in which Virtue

Will, to her efforts, tolerate no bounds
That are not lofty as her rights; aspiring
By impulse of her own ethereal zeal. 316

That spirit only can redeem mankind;
And when that sacred spirit shall appear, Then shall cur triumph be complete as theirs.

Yet, should this confidence prove vain,
the wise 320

Have still the keeping of their proper
peace;

Are guardians of their own tranquillity.
They act, or they recede, observe, and
feel;

'Knowing the heart of man is set to be'¹
The centre of this world, about the which Those revolutions of disturbances 326

Still roll; where all the aspects of misery Predominate; whose strong effects are such

As he must bear, being powerless to redress;

And that unless above himself he can 330
*Erect himself, how poor a thing is man*²!

"Happy is he who lives to understand,
Not human nature only, but explores

All natures,—to the end that he may find
The law that governs each; and where begins 335

The union, the partition where, that makes

Kind and degree, among all visible Beings;
The constitutions, powers, and faculties,
Which they inherit,—cannot step beyond,— 339

And cannot fall beneath; that do assign
To every class its station and its office, Through all the mighty commonwealth of
things;

Up from the creeping plant to sovereign
Man.

Such converse, if directed by a meek,
Sincere, and humble spirit, teaches love:
For knowledge is delight; and such de-
light 346

Breeds love: yet, suited as it rather is
To thought and to the climbing intellect,
It teaches less to love, than to adore;
If that be not indeed the highest love!"

"Yet," said I, tempted here to interpose, 351

"The dignity of life is not impaired
By aught that innocently satisfies
The humbler cravings of the heart; and he

Is still a happier man, who, for those
heights 355

Of speculation not unfit, descends;
And such benign affections cultivates Among the inferior kinds; not merely
those

That he may call his own, and which depend,

As individual objects of regard, 360
Upon his care, from whom he also looks
For signs and tokens of a mutual bond;

But others, far beyond this narrow sphere,
Whom, for the very sake of love, he loves.
Nor is it a mean praise of rural life 365

And solitude, that they do favour most,
Most frequently call forth, and best sus-tain,

These pure sensations; that can penetrate

The obstreperous city; on the barren seas
Are not unfelt; and much might recommend, 370

How much they might inspirit and en-
dear,

The loneliness of this sublime retreat!"

"Yes," said the Sage, resuming the dis-
course

Again directed to his downcast Friend,
"If, with the froward will and grovelling
soul 375

Of man, offended, liberty is here,
And invitation every hour renewed,

To mark their placid state, who never heard

² Daniel.

Of a command which they have power to break,

Or rule which they are tempted to transgress: 380

These with a soothed or elevated heart,
May we behold; their knowledge register;
Observe their ways; and, free from envy,
find

Complacence there:—but wherefore this to you?

I guess that, welcome to your lonely
hearth, 385

The redbreast, ruffled up by winter's cold
Into a 'feathery bunch,' feeds at your
hand:

A box, perchance, is from your casement
hung

For the small wren to build in;—not in
vain, 389

The barriers disregarding that surround
This deep abiding place, before your sight Mounts on the breeze the butterfly; and soars,

Small creature as she is, from earth's bright flowers,

Into the dewy clouds. Ambition reigns
In the waste wilderness: the Soul ascends Drawn towards her native firmament of
heaven, 396

When the fresh eagle, in the month of May,
Upborne, at evening, on replenished wing,
This shaded valley leaves; and leaves the,
dark

Empurpled hills, conspicuously renewing
A proud communication with the sun 401

Low sunk beneath the horizon!—List!—
I heard,

From yon huge breast of rock, a voice sent forth

As if the visible mountain made the cry.
Again!"—The effect upon the soul was
such 405

As he expressed: from out the mountain's
heart

The solemn voice appeared to issue, startling

The blank air—for the region all around Stood empty of all shape of life, and silent Save for that single cry, the unanswer'd bleat 410

Of a poor lamb—left somewhere to itself,

The plaintive spirit of the solitude!

He paused, as if unwilling to proceed,
Through consciousness that silence in such
place

Was best, the most affecting eloquence.
But soon his thoughts returned upon themselves, 416

And, in soft tone of speech, thus he resumed.

"Ah! if the heart, too confidently
raised,

Perchance too lightly occupied, or lulled
Too easily, despise or overlook 420
The vassalage that binds her to the earth,
Her sad dependence upon time, and all
The trepidations of mortality, What place so destitute and void—but
there

The little flower her vanity shall check;
The trailing worm reprove her thoughtless pride? 426

"These craggy regions, these chaotic
wilds,

Does that benignity pervade, that warms
The mole contented with her darksome
walk

In the cold ground; and to the emmet
gives 430

Her foresight, and intelligence that makes
The tiny creatures strong by social league;
Supports the generations, multiplies

Their tribes, till we behold a spacious
plain

Or grassy bottom, all, with little hills—
Their labour, covered, as a lake with
waves; 436

Thousands of cities, in the desert place Built up of life, and food, and means of
life!

Nor wanting here, to entertain the
thought,

Creatures that in communities exist 440
Less, as might seem, for general guardianship

Or through dependence upon mutual aid,
Than by participation of delight

And a strict love of fellowship, combined.
What other spirit can it be that prompts
The gilded summer flies to mix and weave

Their sports together in the solar beam,
Or in the gloom of twilight hum their joy?
More obviously the self-same influence
rises

The feathered kinds; the fieldfare's pensive flock, 450

The cawing rooks, and sea-mews from
afar,

Hovering above these inland solitudes,
By the rough wind unscattered, at whose
call

Up through the trenches of the long-drawn vales

Their voyage was begun: nor is its power
Unfelt among the sedentary fowl 456
That seek yon pool, and there prolong their stay

In silent congress; or together roused Take flight; while with their clang the air resounds.

And, over all, in that ethereal vault, 460
Is the mute company of changeful clouds;
Bright apparition, suddenly put forth,
The rainbow smiling on the faded storm;
The mild assemblage of the starry heavens;

And the great sun, earth's universal lord!

“How bountiful is Nature! he shall
find 466

Who seeks not; and to him, who hath not asked,

Large measures shall be dealt. Three sabbath-days

Are scarcely told, since, on a service bent
Of mere humanity, you clomb those
heights; 470

And what a marvellous and heavenly
show

Was suddenly revealed!—the swains moved on,

And heeded not: you lingered, you perceived

And felt, deeply as living man could feel.
There is a luxury in self-dispraise; 475

And inward self-disparagement affords
To meditative spleen a grateful feast.

Trust me, pronouncing on your own desert,

You judge unthankfully: distempered nerves

Infect the thoughts; the languor of the frame 480

Depresses the soul's vigour. Quit your couch—

Cleave not so fondly to your moody cell;
Nor let the hallowed powers, that shed
from heaven

Stillness and rest, with disapproving eye Look down upon your taper, through a watch 485

Of midnight hours, unseasonably twinkling

In this deep Hollow, like a sullen star
Dimly reflected in a lonely pool.

Take courage, and withdraw yourself from ways

That run not parallel to nature's course.
Rise with the lark! your matins shall obtain 491

Grace, be their composition what it may,
If but with hers performed; climb once
again,

Climb every day, those ramparts; meet the breeze

Upon their tops, adventurous as a bee
That from your garden thither soars, to feed 496

On new-blown heath; let yon commanding rock

Be your frequented watch-tower; roll the
stone

In thunder down the mountains; with all your might

Chase the wild goat; and if the bold red deer 500

Fly to those harbours, driven by hound and horn

Loud echoing, add your speed to the pursuit;

So, wearied to your hut shall you return,
And sink at evening into sound repose.”

The Solitary lifted toward the hills 505
A kindling eye:—accordant feelings rushed

Into my bosom, whence these words broke forth:

“Oh! what a joy it were, in vigorous
health,

To have a body (this our vital frame
With shrinking sensibility endued, 510

And all the nice regards of flesh and blood)

And to the elements surrender it

As if it were a spirit!—How divine,

The liberty, for frail, for mortal, man 514

To roam at large among unpeopled glens

And mountainous retirements, only trod

By devious footsteps; regions consecrate

To oldest time! and, reckless of the storm

That keeps the raven quiet in her nest,

Be as a presence or a motion—one 520

Among the many there; and while the mists

Flying, and rainy vapours, call out shapes

And phantoms from the crags and solid earth

As fast as a musician scatters sounds

Out of an instrument; and while the streams 525

(As at a first creation and in haste

To exercise their untried faculties)

Descending from the region of the clouds,

And starting from the hollows of the earth

More multitudinous every moment, rend

Their way before them—what a joy to roam 531

An equal among mightiest energies;

And haply sometimes with articulate voice,

Amid the deafening tumult, scarcely heard

By him that utters it, exclaim aloud, 535

'Rage on, ye elements! let moon and stars

Their aspects lend, and mingle in their turn

With this commotion (ruinous though it be)

From day to night, from night to day, prolonged!"

"Yes," said the Wanderer, taking from my lips 540

The strain of transport, "whosoe'er in youth

Has, through ambition of his soul, given way

To such desires, and grasped at such delight,

Shall feel congenial stirrings late and long,

In spite of all the weakness that life brings, 545

Its cares and sorrows; he, though taught to own

The tranquillizing power of time, shall wake,

Wake sometimes to a noble restlessness—

Loving the sports which once he gloried in.

"Compatriot, Friend, remote are Garry's hills, 550

The streams far distant of your native glen;

Yet is their form and image here expressed

With brotherly resemblance. Turn your steps

Wherever fancy leads; by day, by night, Are various engines working, not the same 555

As those with which your soul in youth was moved,

But by the great Artificer endowed

With no inferior power. You dwell alone;

You walk, you live, you speculate alone; Yet doth remembrance, like a sovereign prince, 560

For you a stately gallery maintain

Of gay or tragic pictures. You have seen,

Have acted, suffered, travelled far, observed

With no incurious eye; and books are yours,

Within whose silent chambers treasure lies 565

Preserved from age to age; more precious far

Than that accumulated store of gold

And orient gems, which, for a day of need,

The Sultan hides deep in ancestral tombs.

These hoards of truth you can unlock at will: 570

And music waits upon your skilful touch,

Sounds which the wandering shepherd from these heights

Hears, and forgets his purpose;—furnished thus,
How can you droop, if willing to be up-
raised?

“A piteous lot it were to flee from
Man— 575

Yet not rejoice in Nature. He, whose
hours

Are by domestic pleasure uncaressed
And unenlivened; who exists whole years
Apart from benefits received or done

’Mid the transactions of the bustling crowd; 580

Who neither hears, nor feels a wish to hear,
Of the world’s interests—such a one hath need

Of a quick fancy and an active heart,
That, for the day’s consumption, books may yield

Food not unwholesome; earth and air correct 585

His morbid humour, with delight supplied

Or solace, varying as the seasons change.
—Truth has her pleasure-grounds, her haunts of ease

And easy contemplation; gay parterres,
And labyrinthine walks, her sunny
glades 590

And shady groves in studied contrast—
each,

For recreation, leading into each:
These may he range, if willing to partake
Their soft indulgences, and in due time
May issue thence, recruited for the tasks
And course of service Truth requires from those 596

Who tend her altars, wait upon her
throne,

And guard her fortresses. Who thinks,
and feels,

And recognises ever and anon
The breeze of nature stirring in his soul,
Why need such man go desperately
astray, 601

And nurse ‘the dreadful appetite of
death?’

If tired with systems, each in its degree Substantial, and all crumbling in their
turn,

Let him build systems of his own, and
smile 605

At the fond work, demolished with a
touch;

If unreligious, let him be at once,
Among ten thousand innocents, enrolled
A pupil in the many-chambered school, Where superstition weaves her airy
dreams. 610

“Life’s autumn past, I stand on winter’s verge;

And daily lose what I desire to keep:
Yet rather would I instantly decline
To the traditionary sympathies

Of a most rustic ignorance, and take 615
A fearful apprehension from the owl

Or death-watch: and as readily rejoice,
If two auspicious magpies crossed my
way;—

To this would rather bend than see and
hear

The repetitions wearisome of sense, 620
Where soul is dead, and feeling hath no
place;

Where knowledge, ill begun in cold
remark

On outward things, with formal inference
ends;

Or, if the mind turn inward, she recoils
At once—or, not recoiling, is perplexed—
Lost in a gloom of uninspired research;

Meanwhile, the heart within the heart,
the seat 627

Where peace and happy consciousness should dwell,

On its own axis restlessly revolving, Seeks, yet can nowhere find, the light of
truth. 630

“Upon the breast of new-created earth Man walked; and when and wheresoe’er he moved,

Alone or mated, solitude was not.
He heard, borne on the wind, the articulate voice

Of God; and Angels to his sight appeared 635

Crowning the glorious hills of paradise;
Or through the groves gliding like morning mist

Enkindled by the sun. He sate—and talked
 With wingèd Messengers; who daily
 brought
 To his small island in the ethereal deep Tidings of joy and love.—From those pure heights 641
 (Whether of actual vision, sensible
 To sight and feeling, or that in this sort
 Have condescendingly been shadowed
 forth
 Communications spiritually maintained,
 And intuitions moral and divine) 646 Fell Human-kind—to banishment condemned
 That flowing years repealed not: and distress
 And grief spread wide; but Man escaped the doom
 Of destitution;—solitude was not. 650
 —Jehovah—shapeless Power above all
 Powers,
 Single and one, the omnipresent God,
 By vocal utterance, or blaze of light,
 Or cloud of darkness, localised in heaven;
 On earth, enshrined within the wandering ark; 655
 Or, out of Sion, thundering from his throne
 Between the Cherubim—on the chosen
 Race
 Showered miracles, and ceased not to dispense Judgments, that filled the land from age
 to age
 With hope, and love, and gratitude, and
 fear; 660
 And with amazement smote;—thereby
 to assert
 His scorned, or unacknowledged, sovereignty.
 And when the One, ineffable of name,
 Of nature indivisible, withdrew
 From mortal adoration or regard, 665
 Not then was Deity engulfed; nor Man,
 The rational creature, left, to feel the
 weight
 Of his own reason, without sense or
 thought
 Of higher reason and a purer will,
 To benefit and bless, through mightier
 power:— 670
 Whether the Persian—zealous to reject
 Altar and image, and the inclusive walls
 And roofs of temples built by human
 hands—
 To loftiest heights ascending, from their
 tops,
 With myrtle-wreathed tiara on his brow,
 Presented sacrifice to moon and stars, 676
 And to the winds and mother elements,
 And the whole circle of the heavens, for
 him
 A sensitive existence, and a God,
 With lifted hands invoked, and songs of
 praise: 680
 Or, less reluctantly to bonds of sense
 Yielding his soul, the Babylonian framed
 For influence undefined a personal shape;
 And, from the plain, with toil immense, upreared
 Tower eight times planted on the top of
 tower, 685
 That Belus, nightly to his splendid couch Descending, there might rest; upon that
 height
 Pure and serene, diffused—to overlook
 Winding Euphrates, and the city vast
 Of his devoted worshippers, far-stretched,
 With grove and field and garden interspersed; 691
 Their town, and foodful region for support
 Against the pressure of beleaguering war.
 “Chaldean Shepherds, ranging trackless fields, 694
 Beneath the concave of unclouded skies
 Spread like a sea, in boundless solitude,
 Looked on the polar star, as on a guide
 And guardian of their course, that never
 closed
 His steadfast eye. The planetary Five With a submissive reverence they be-
 held; 700
 Watched, from the centre of their sleeping flocks,
 Those radiant Mercuries, that seemed to
 move
 Carrying through ether, in perpetual
 round,

Decrees and resolutions of the Gods ;
 And, by their aspects, signifying works
 Of dim futurity, to Man revealed. 706
 —The imaginative faculty was lord
 Of observations natural; and, thus Led on, those shepherds made report of
 stars
 In set rotation passing to and fro, 710
 Between the orbs of our apparent sphere
 And its invisible counterpart, adorned With answering constellations, under
 earth,
 Removed from all approach of living
 sight
 But present to the dead; who, so they deemed, 715
 Like those celestial messengers beheld
 All accidents, and judges were of all.

“The lively Grecian, in a land of hills, Rivers and fertile plains, and sounding
 shores,—
 Under a cope of sky more variable, 720
 Could find commodious place for every
 God,
 Promptly received, as prodigally brought,
 From the surrounding countries at the choice
 Of all adventurers. With unrivalled
 skill,
 As nicest observation furnished hints
 For studious fancy, his quick hand bestowed 726
 On fluent operations a fixed shape;
 Metal or stone, idolatrously served.
 And yet—triumphant o’er this pompous
 show
 Of art, this palpable array of sense, 730
 On every side encountered; in despite Of the gross fictions chanted in the streets
 By wandering Rhapsodists; and in contempt
 Of doubt and bold denial hourly urged Amid the wrangling schools—a SPIRIT
 hung, 735
 Beautiful region! o’er thy towns and
 farms,
 Statues and temples, and memorial tombs;
 And emanations were perceived; and acts

Of immortality, in Nature’s course, 739
 Exemplified by mysteries, that were felt
 As bonds, on grave philosopher imposed
 And armèd warrior; and in every grove
 A gay or pensive tenderness prevailed,
 When piety more awful had relaxed.
 —‘Take, running river, take these locks
 of mine’— 745
 Thus would the Votary say—‘this severed hair,
 My vow fulfilling, do I here present,
 Thankful for my belovèd child’s return.
 Thy banks, Cephisus, he again hath trod, Thy murmurs heard; and drunk the crystal lymph 750
 With which thou dost refresh the thirsty
 lip,
 And, all day long, moisten these flowery
 fields!’
 And, doubtless, sometimes, when the hair was shed
 Upon the flowing stream, a thought arose
 Of Life continuous, Being unimpaired; That hath been, is, and where it was
 and is 756
 There shall endure,—existence unexposed
 To the blind walk of mortal accident;
 From diminution safe and weakening
 age;
 While man grows old, and dwindles, and
 decays; 760
 And countless generations of mankind Depart; and leave no vestige where they trod.

“We live by Admiration, Hope, and
 Love;
 And, even as these are well and wisely
 fixed,
 In dignity of being we ascend. 765
 But what is error?”—“Answer he who can!” The Sceptic somewhat haughtily exclaimed:
 “Love, Hope, and Admiration—are they not Mad Fancy’s favourite vassals? Does not
 life 769
 Use them, full oft, as pioneers to ruin,
 Guides to destruction? Is it well to trust
 Imagination’s light when reason’s fails,

The unguarded taper where the guarded faints?

—Stoop from those heights, and soberly declare

What error is; and, of our errors, which Doth most debase the mind; the genuine seats 776

Of power, where are they? Who shall regulate,

With truth, the scale of intellectual rank?"

"Methinks," persuasively the Sage replied, 779

"That for this arduous office you possess Some rare advantages. Your early days A grateful recollection must supply

Of much exalted good by Heaven vouchsafed

To dignify the humblest state.—Your voice

Hath, in my hearing, often testified 785

That poor men's children, they, and they alone,

By their condition taught, can understand

The wisdom of the prayer that daily asks For daily bread. A consciousness is yours 789

How feelingly religion may be learned In smoky cabins, from a mother's tongue— Heard while the dwelling vibrates to the din

Of the contiguous torrent, gathering strength

At every moment—and, with strength, increase 794

Of fury; or, while snow is at the door, Assaulting and defending, and the wind, A sightless labourer, whistles at his work— Fearful; but resignation tempers fear, And piety is sweet to infant minds.

—The Shepherd-lad, that in the sunshine carves, 800

On the green turf, a dial—to divide

The silent hours; and who to that report Can portion out his pleasures, and adapt, Throughout a long and lonely summer's day

His round of pastoral duties, is not left 805

With less intelligence for moral things Of gravest import. Early he perceives,

Within himself, a measure and a rule, Which to the sun of truth he can apply, That shines for him, and shines for all mankind. 810

Experience daily fixing his regards On nature's wants, he knows how few they are,

And where they lie, how answered and appeased.

This knowledge ample recompense affords For manifold privations; he refers 815

His notions to this standard; on this rock Rests his desires; and hence, in after life,

Soul-strengthening patience, and sublime content.

Imagination—not permitted here To waste her powers, as in the worldling's mind, 820

On fickle pleasures, and superfluous cares, And trivial ostentation—is left free

And puissant to range the solemn walks Of time and nature, girded by a zone

That, while it binds, invigorates and supports. 825

Acknowledge, then, that whether by the side

Of his poor hut, or on the mountain-top, Or in the cultured field, a Man so bred (Take from him what you will upon the score

Of ignorance or illusion) lives and breathes For noble purposes of mind: his heart 831

Beats to the heroic song of ancient days; His eye distinguishes, his soul creates.

And those illusions, which excite the scorn Or move the pity of unthinking minds,

Are they not mainly outward ministers Of inward conscience? with whose service

charged 837

They came and go, appeared and disappear,

Diverting evil purposes, remorse Awakening, chastening an intemperate grief, 840

Or pride of heart abating: and, when'er For less important ends those phantoms

move,

Who would forbid them, if their presence serve,

On thinly-peopled mountains and wild heaths,

Filling a space, else vacant, to exalt 845
The forms of Nature, and enlarge her
powers?

“Once more to distant ages of the world
Let us revert, and place before our
thoughts

The face which rural solitude might wear
To the unenlightened swains of pagan Greece. 850

—In that fair clime, the lonely herdsman,
stretched

On the soft grass through half a summer’s
day,

With music lulled his indolent repose :
And, in some fit of weariness, if he,
When his own breath was silent, chanced
to hear 855

A distant strain, far sweeter than the sounds

Which his poor skill could make, his fancy fetched,

Even from the blazing chariot of the sun,
A beardless Youth, who touched a golden
lute,

And filled the illumined groves with ravishment. 860

The nightly hunter, lifting a bright eye Up towards the crescent moon, with grateful heart

Called on the lovely wanderer who bestowed

That timely light, to share his joyous
sport :

And hence, a beaming Goddess with her Nymphs, 865

Across the lawn and through the dark-some grove,

Not unaccompanied with tuneful notes
By echo multiplied from rock or cave, Swept in the storm of chase ; as moon and
stars

Glance rapidly along the clouded heaven, When winds are blowing strong. The traveller slaked 871

His thirst from rill or gushing fount, and thanked

The Naiad. Sunbeams, upon distant hills
Gliding apace, with shadows in their train, Might, with small help from fancy, be transformed 875

Into fleet Oreads sporting visibly.

The Zephyrs fanning, as they passed,
their wings,

Lacked not, for love, fair objects whom they wooed

With gentle whisper. Withered boughs
grotesque,

Stripped of their leaves and twigs by hoary age, 880

From depth of shaggy covert peeping
forth

In the low vale, or on steep mountain-side ;
And, sometimes, intermixed with stirring horns

Of the live deer, or goat’s depending beard,—

These were the lurking Satyrs, a wild
brood 885

Of gamesome Deities ; or Pan himself,
The simple shepherd’s awe-inspiring
God !”

The strain was aptly chosen ; and I could mark

Its kindly influence, o’er the yielding
brow

Of our Companion, gradually diffused ; While, listening, he had paced the noiseless turf, 891

Like one whose untired ear a murmuring
stream

Detains ; but tempted now to interpose,
He with a smile exclaimed :—

“’Tis well you speak

At a safe distance from our native land,
And from the mansions where our youth was taught. 896

The true descendants of those godly men Who swept from Scotland, in a flame of
zeal,

Shrine, altar, image, and the massy piles
That harboured them,—the souls retaining
yet 900

The churlish features of that after-race
Who fled to woods, caverns, and jutting
rocks,

In deadly scorn of superstitious rites,
Or what their scruples construed to be such—

How, think you, would they tolerate this scheme 905

Of fine propensities, that tends, if urged
 Far as it might be urged, to sow afresh
 The weeds of Romish phantasy, in vain
 Uprooted; would re-consecrate our wells
 To good Saint Fillan and to fair Saint Anne; 910
 And from long banishment recall Saint Giles,

To watch again with tutelary love O'er stately Edinborough throned on crags?

A blessed restoration, to behold
 The patron, on the shoulders of his priests,
 Once more parading through her crowded streets 916
 Now simply guarded by the sober powers
 Of science, and philosophy, and sense!"

This answer followed,—“You have turned my thoughts

Upon our brave Progenitors, who rose
 Against idolatry with warlike mind, 921
 And shrunk from vain observances, to lurk

In woods, and dwell under impending
 rocks

Ill-sheltered, and oft wanting fire and
 food;

Why?—for this very reason that they felt,
 And did acknowledge, wheresoe'er they
 moved, 926

A spiritual presence, oft-times miscon-
 ceived,

But still a high dependence, a divine Bounty and government, that filled their
 hearts

With joy, and gratitude, and fear, and
 love; 930

And from their fervent lips drew hymns
 of praise,

That through the desert rang. Though favoured less,

Far less, than these, yet such, in their degree,

Were those bewildered Pagans of old
 time.

Beyond their own poor natures and
 above 935

They looked; were humbly thankful for the good

Which the warm sun solicited, and earth

Bestowed; were gladsome,—and their moral sense

They fortified with reverence for the Gods;

And they had hopes that overstepped the
 Grave. 940

“Now, shall our great Discoverers,” he exclaimed,

Raising his voice triumphantly, “obtain From sense and reason less than these obtained,

Though far misled? Shall men for whom our age

Unbaffled powers of vision hath prepared,
 To explore the world without and world
 within, 946

Be joyless as the blind? Ambitious spirits—

Whom earth, at this late season, hath produced

To regulate the moving spheres, and weigh
 The planets in the hollow of their hand;
 And they who rather dive than soar,
 whose pains

Have solved the elements, or analysed
 The thinking principle—shall they in fact

Prove a degraded Race? and what avails Renown, if their presumption make them
 such? 955

Oh! there is laughter at their work in
 heaven!

Enquire of ancient Wisdom; go, demand
 Of mighty Nature, if 'twas ever meant

That we should pry far off yet be un-
 raised;

That we should pore, and dwindle as we pore, 960

Viewing all objects unremittingly
 In disconnection dead and spiritless;

And still dividing, and dividing still,
 Break down all grandeur, still unsatisfied

With the perverse attempt, while little-
 ness 965

May yet become more little; waging thus
 An impious warfare with the very life

Of our own souls!

And if indeed there be An all-pervading Spirit, upon whom

Our dark foundations rest, could he design 970

That this magnificent effect of power,
The earth we tread, the sky that we behold

By day, and all the pomp which night reveals ;

That these—and that superior mystery
Our vital frame, so fearfully devised, 975
And the dread soul within it—should exist

Only to be examined, pondered, searched,
Probed, vexed, and criticised?—Accuse me not

Of arrogance, unknown Wanderer as I am,
If, having walked with Nature threescore years, 980

And offered, far as frailty would allow,
My heart a daily sacrifice to Truth,
I now affirm of Nature and of Truth,
Whom I have served, that their DIVINITY
Revolts, offended at the ways of men 985
Swayed by such motives, to such ends employed ;

Philosophers, who, though the human soul
Be of a thousand faculties composed,
And twice ten thousand interests, do yet prize 989

This soul, and the transcendent universe,
No more than as a mirror that reflects
To proud Self-love her own intelligence ;
That one, poor, finite object, in the abyss
Of infinite Being, twinkling restlessly !

“Nor higher place can be assigned to him
And his compeers—the laughing Sage of France.— 996
Crowned was he, if my memory do not err,

With laurel planted upon hoary hairs,
In sign of conquest by his wit achieved
And benefits his wisdom had conferred ;
His stooping body tottered with wreaths of flowers! 1001

Opprest, far less becoming ornaments
Than Spring oft twines about a mouldering tree ;

Yet so it pleased a fond, a vain, old Man,
And a most frivolous people. Him I mean 1005

Who penned, to ridicule confiding faith,
This sorry Legend ; which by chance we found

Piled in a nook, through malice, as might seem,

Among more innocent rubbish.”—Speaking thus,

With a brief notice when, and how, and where, 1010

We had espied the book, he drew it forth ;
And courteously, as if the act removed,
At once, all traces from the good Man’s heart

Of unbenign aversion or contempt,
Restored it to its owner. “Gentle Friend,” 1015

Herewith he grasped the Solitary’s hand, “You have known lights and guides better than these.

Ah ! let not aught amiss within dispose
A noble mind to practise on herself, 1019
And tempt opinion to support the wrongs
Of passion : whatsoe’er be felt or feared,
From higher judgment-seats make no appeal

To lower : can you question that the soul
Inherits an allegiance, not by choice
To be cast off, upon an oath proposed
By each new upstart notion ? In the ports 1026

Of levity no refuge can be found,
No shelter, for a spirit in distress.
He, who by wilful disesteem of life
And proud insensibility to hope, 1030

Affronts the eye of Solitude, shall learn
That her mild nature can be terrible ;
That neither she nor Silence lack the power

To avenge their own insulted majesty.

“O blest seclusion ! when the mind admits 1035

The law of duty ; and can therefore move
Through each vicissitude of loss and gain,
Linked in entire complacence with her choice ;

When youth’s presumptuousness is mellowed down,

And manhood’s vain anxiety dismissed ;
When wisdom shows her seasonable fruit, 1041

Upon the boughs of sheltering leisure hung

In sober plenty ; when the spirit stoops,

To drink with gratitude the crystal stream
Of unproved enjoyment; and is pleased 1045

To muse, and be saluted by the air
Of meek repentance, wafting wallflower scents

From out the crumbling ruins of fallen
pride
And chambers of transgression, now forlorn.

O, calm contented days, and peaceful
nights! 1050

Who, when such good can be obtained, would strive

To reconcile his manhood to a couch
Soft, as may seem, but, under that dis-
guise,

Stuffed with the thorny substance of the
past

For fixed annoyance; and full oft beset 1055

With floating dreams, black and disconsolate,

The vapoury phantoms of futurity?

“Within the soul a faculty abides,
That with interpositions, which would hide

And darken, so can deal that they become 1060

Contingencies of pomp; and serve to exalt

Her native brightness. As the ample
moon,

In the deep stillness of a summer even Rising behind a thick and lofty grove, Burns, like an unconsuming fire of
light; 1065

In the green trees; and, kindling on all sides

Their leafy umbrage, turns the dusky veil

Into a substance glorious as her own, Yea, with her own incorporated, by
power

Capacious and serene. Like power abides 1070

In man's celestial spirit; virtue thus Sets forth and magnifies herself; thus feeds

A calm, a beautiful, and silent fire,

From the encumbrances of mortal life,
From error, disappointment—nay, from guilt; 1075

And sometimes, so relenting justice wills,
From palpable oppressions of despair.”

The Solitary by these words was touched
With manifest emotion, and exclaimed;
“But how begin? and whence?—‘The Mind is free— 1080

Resolve,’ the haughty Moralist would
say,

‘This single act is all that we demand.’
Alas! such wisdom bids a creature fly Whose very sorrow is, that time hath shorn

His natural wings!—To friendship let him turn 1085

For succour; but perhaps he sits
alone

On stormy waters, tossed in a little boat
That holds but him, and can contain no
more!

Religion tells of amity sublime
Which no condition can preclude; of
One 1090

Who, sees all suffering, comprehends all
wants,

All weakness fathoms, can supply all
needs:

But is that bounty absolute?—His gifts,
Are they not, still, in some degree, rewards

For acts of service? Can his love extend 1095

To hearts that own not him? Will showers
of grace,

When in the sky no promise may be
seen,

Fall to refresh a parched and withered
land?

Or shall the groaning Spirit cast her load
At the Redeemer's feet?”

In rueful tone, 1100
With some impatience in his mien, he
spake:

Back to my mind rushed all that had been urged

To calm the Sufferer when his story
closed;

I looked for counsel as unbending now;

But a discriminating sympathy 1105
Stooped to this apt reply :—

“As men from men
Do, in the constitution of their souls,
Differ, by mystery not to be explained;
And as we fall by various ways, and sink
One deeper than another, self-condemned 1110
Through manifold degrees of guilt and
shame;

So manifold and various are the ways
Of restoration, fashioned to the steps
Of all infirmity, and tending all
To the same point, attainable by all— 1115
Peace in ourselves, and union with our
God.

For you, assuredly, a hopeful road Lies open: we have heard from you a
voice

At every moment softened in its course
By tenderness of heart; have seen your
eye, 1120

Even like an altar lit by fire from heaven, Kindle before us.—Your discourse this
day,

That, like the fabled Lethe, wished to flow

In creeping sadness, through oblivious
shades

Of death and night, has caught at every
turn 1125

The colours of the sun. Access for
you

Is yet preserved to principles of truth,
Which the imaginative Will upholds
In seats of wisdom, not to be approached
By the inferior Faculty that moulds, 1130
With her minute and speculative pains,
Opinion, ever changing!

I have seen
A curious child, who dwelt upon a tract
Of inland ground, applying to his ear
The convolutions of a smooth-lipped
shell; 1135

To which, in silence hushed, his very soul
Listened intensely; and his countenance
soon

Brightened with joy; for from within were heard

Murmurings, whereby the monitor expressed

Mysterious union with its native sea. 1140
Even such a shell the universe itself
Is to the ear of Faith; and there are
times,

I doubt not, when to you it doth impart
Authentic tidings of invisible things;
Of ebb and flow, and ever-during
power; 1145

And central peace, subsisting at the
heart

Of endless agitation. Here you stand, Adore, and worship, when you know it
not;

Pious beyond the intention of your
thought;

Devout above the meaning of your
will. 1150

—Yes, you have felt, and may not cease
to feel.

The estate of man would be indeed forlorn
If false conclusions of the reasoning power Made the eye blind, and closed the passages

Through which the ear converses with the
heart. 1155

Has not the soul, the being of your life,
Received a shock of awful consciousness,
In some calm season, when these lofty
rocks

At night's approach bring down the unclouded sky,

To rest upon their circumambient
walls; 1160

A temple framing of dimensions vast,
And yet not too enormous for the sound
Of human anthems,—cheral song, or burst
Sublime of instrumental harmony,

To glorify the Eternal! What if these 1165
Did never break the stillness that prevails

Here,—if the solemn nightingale be mute,
And the soft woodlark here did never chant

Her vespers,—Nature fails not to provide

Impulse and utterance. The whispering
air 1170

Sends inspiration from the shadowy
heights,

And blind recesses of the caverned rocks;
The little rills, and waters numberless,

Inaudible by daylight, blend their notes

With the loud streams: and often, at the
hour 1175
When issue forth the first pale stars, is
heard,
Within the circuit of this fabric huge,
One voice—the solitary raven, flying Athwart the concave of the dark blue
dome,
Unseen, perchance above all power of
sight— 1180
An iron knell! with echoes from afar Faint—and still fainter—as the cry, with which
The wanderer accompanies her flight Through the calm region, fades upon the
ear,
Diminishing by distance till it seemed To expire; yet from the abyss is caught
again, 1186
And yet again recovered!
But descending
From these imaginative heights, that
yield
Far-stretching views into eternity, Acknowledge that to Nature's humbler
power 1190
Your cherished sullenness is forced to bend
Even here, where her amenities are
sown
With sparing hand. Then trust yourself
abroad
To range her blooming bowers, and spacious fields,
Where on the labours of the happy
throng 1195
She smiles, including in her wide embrace
City, and town, and tower,—and sea with ships
Sprinkled;—be our Companion while we
track
Her rivers populous with gliding life; While, free as air, o'er printless sands we march, 1200
Or pierce the gloom of her majestic
woods;
Roaming, or resting under grateful shade
In peace and meditative cheerfulness;
Where living things, and things inani-
mate,

Do speak, at Heaven's command, to eye and ear, 1205
And speak to social reason's inner
sense,
With inarticulate language.
For, the Man—
Who, in this spirit, communes with the
Forms
Of nature, who with understanding heart Both knows and loves such objects as excite 1210
No morbid passions, no disquietude,
No vengeance, and no hatred—needs must
feel
The joy of that pure principle of love
So deeply, that, unsatisfied with aught Less pure and exquisite, he cannot choose 1215
But seek for objects of a kindred love
In fellow-natures and a kindred joy.
Accordingly he by degrees perceives
His feelings of aversion softened down;
A holy tenderness pervade his frame. 1220
His sanity of reason not impaired, Say rather, all his thoughts now flowing
clear,
From a clear fountain flowing, he looks
round
And seeks for good; and finds the good he seeks:
Until abhorrence and contempt are
things 1225
He only knows by name; and, if he
hear,
From other mouths, the language which they speak,
He is compassionate; and has no thought,
No feeling, which can overcome his love.
“And further; by contemplating these
Forms 1230
In the relations which they bear to
man,
He shall discern, how, through the various means
Which silently they yield, are multiplied
The spiritual presences of absent things.
Trust me, that for the instructed, time will come 1235
When they shall meet no object but may teach

Some acceptable lesson to their minds
Of human suffering, or of human joy.
So shall they learn, while all things speak
of man,

Their duties from all forms; and general
laws, 1240

And local accidents, shall tend alike
To rouse, to urge; and, with the will,
confer

The ability to spread the blessings wide
Of true philanthropy. The light of love Not failing, perseverance from their
steps 1245

Departing not, for them shall be confirmed

The glorious habit by which sense is
made

Subservient still to moral purposes, Auxiliar to divine. That change shall clothe

The naked spirit, ceasing to deplore 1250
The burthen of existence. Science then Shall be a precious visitant; and then,
And only then, be worthy of her name:
For then her heart shall kindle; her dull
eye,

Dull and inanimate, no more shall hang 1255

Chained to its object in brute slavery;
But taught with patient interest to watch
The processes of things, and serve the
cause

Of order and distinctness, not for this Shall it forget that its most noble use, Its most illustrious province, must be
found 1261

In furnishing clear guidance, a support
Not treacherous, to the mind's excursive
power.

—So build we up the Being that we are;
Thus deeply drinking-in the soul of
things, 1265

We shall be wise perforce; and, while inspired

By choice, and conscious that the Will is
free,

Shall move unswerving, even as if impelled

By strict necessity, along the path Of order and of good. Whate'er we
see, 1270

Or feel, shall tend to quicken and refine;
Shall fix, in calmer seats of moral strength,
Earthly desires; and raise, to loftier
heights
Of divine love, our intellectual soul."

Here closed the Sage that eloquent harangue, 1275
Poured forth with fervour in continuous
stream,

Such as, remote, 'mid savage wilderness,
An Indian Chief discharges from his
breast

Into the hearing of assembled tribes,
In open circle seated round, and hushed
As the unbreathing air, when not a leaf Stirs in the mighty woods.—So did he
speak:

The words he uttered shall not pass
away

Dispersed, like music that the wind takes up

By snatches, and lets fall, to be forgotten; 1285

No—they sank into me, the bounteous gift
Of one whom time and nature had made
wise,

Gracing his doctrine with authority
Which hostile spirits silently allow;
Of one accustomed to desires that feed
On fruitage gathered from the tree of
life; 1291

To hopes on knowledge and experience
built;

Of one in whom persuasion and belief
Had ripened into faith, and faith become A passionate intuition; whence the
Soul, 1295

Though bound to earth by ties of pity
and love,

From all injurious servitude was free.

The Sun, before his place of rest were reached,

Had yet to travel far, but unto us,
To us who stood low in that hollow
dell, 1300

He had become invisible,—a pomp
Leaving behind of yellow radiance spread Over the mountain-sides, in contrast
bold

With ample shadows, seemingly, no less Than those resplendent lights, his rich bequest; 1305
 A dispensation of his evening power.
 —Adown the path that from the glen had led
 The funeral train, the Shepherd and his Mate
 Were seen descending:—forth to greet them ran
 Our little Page: the rustic pair approach; 1310
 And in the Matron's countenance may be read
 Plain indication that the words, which
 told
 How that neglected Pensioner was sent

Before his time into a quiet grave,
 Had done to her humanity no wrong: 1315
 But we are kindly welcomed—promptly,
 served
 With ostentatious zeal.—Along the floor
 Of the small Cottage in the lonely Dell
 A grateful couch was spread for our
 repose;
 Where, in the guise of mountaineers, we
 lay, 1320
 Stretched upon fragrant heath, and lulled by sound
 Of far-off torrents charming the still
 night,
 And, to tired limbs and over-busy
 thoughts,
 Inviting sleep and soft forgetfulness.

BOOK FIFTH.

THE PASTOR.

ARGUMENT.

Farewell to the Valley.—Reflections.—A large and populous Vale described.—The Pastor's Dwelling, and some account of him.—Church and Monuments.—The Solitary musing, and where.—Roused.—In the Churchyard the Solitary communicates the thoughts which had recently passed through his mind.—Lofty tone of the Wanderer's discourse of yesterday adverted to.—Rite of Baptism, and the professions accompanying it, contrasted with the real state of human life.—Apology for the Rite.—Inconsistency of the best men.—Acknowledgment that practice falls far below the injunctions of duty as existing in the mind.—General complaint of a falling-off in the value of life after the time of youth.—Outward appearances of content and happiness in degree illusive.—Pastor approaches.—Appeal made to him.—His answer.—Wanderer in sympathy with him.—Suggestion that the least ambitious enquirers may be most free from error.—The Pastor is desired to give some portraits of the living or dead from his own observation of life among these Mountains—and for what purpose.—Pastor consents.—Mountain cottage.—Excellent qualities of its Inhabitants.—Solitary expresses his pleasure; but denies the praise of virtue to worth of this kind.—Feelings of the Priest before he enters upon his account of persons interred in the Churchyard.—Graves of unbaptized Infants.—Funeral and sepulchral observances, whence.—Ecclesiastical Establishments, whence derived.—Profession of belief in the doctrine of Immortality.

“FAREWELL, deep Valley, with thy one rude House, And its small lot of life-supporting fields, And guardian rocks!—Farewell, attractive seat! To the still influx of the morning light Open, and day's pure cheerfulness, but veiled From human observation, as if yet Primeval forests wrapped thee round with dark Impenetrable shade; once more fare- well, Majestic circuit, beautiful abyss, By Nature destined from the birth of things For quietness profound!”	Lingering behind my comrades, thus I breathed A parting tribute to a spot that seemed Like the fixed centre of a troubled world. Again I halted with reverted eyes; The chain that would not slacken, was at length Snapt,—and, pursuing leisurely my way, How vain, thought I, is it by change of place To seek that comfort which the mind denies; Yet trial and temptation oft are shun- ned Wisely; and by such tenure do we hold Frail life's possessions, that even they whose fate Yields no peculiar reason of complaint Might, by the promise that is here, be won To steal from active duties, and embrace
---	---

Obscurity, and undisturbed repose.
—Knowledge, methinks, in these disordered times,

Should be allowed a privilege to have 30
Her anchorites, like piety of old ;
Men, who, from faction sacred, and unstained

By war, might, if so minded, turn aside
Uncensured, and subsist, a scattered few Living to God and nature, and content With that communion. Consecrated be The spots where such abide ! But happier
still

The Man, whom, furthermore, a hope attends

That meditation and research may guide
His privacy to principles and powers 40
Discovered or invented ; or set forth,
Through his acquaintance with the ways
of truth,

In lucid order ; so that, when his course
Is run, some faithful eulogist may say,
He sought not praise, and praise did over-
look 45

His unobtrusive merit ; but his life,
Sweet to himself, was exercised in good
That shall survive his name and memory.

Acknowledgments of gratitude sincere Accompanied these musings ; fervent
thanks 50

For my own peaceful lot and happy
choice ;

A choice that from the passions of the
world

Withdrew, and fixed me in a still retreat ;
Sheltered, but not to social duties lost,
Secluded, but not buried ; and with song Cheering my days, and with industrious
thought ; 56

With the ever-welcome company of books ;
With virtuous friendship's soul-sustaining
aid,

And with the blessings of domestic love.

Thus occupied in mind I paced along,
Following the rugged road, by sledge or wheel 61

Worn in the moorland, till I overtook
My two Associates, in the morning sun-
shine

Halting together on a rocky knoll,
Whence the bare road descended rapidly
To the green meadows of another vale.

Here did our pensive Host put forth his
hand 67

In sign of farewell. "Nay," the old Man
said,

"The fragrant air its coolness still retains ;
The herds and flocks are yet abroad to crop 70

The dewy grass ; you cannot leave us now,
We must not part at this inviting hour."
He yielded, though reluctant ; for his
mind

Instinctively disposed him to retire 74
To his own covert ; as a billow, heaved
Upon the beach, rolls back into the sea.

—So we descend : and winding round a rock

Attain a point that showed the valley—
stretched

In length before us ; and, not distant far,
Upon a rising ground a grey church-
tower, 80

Whose battlements were screened by tufted trees.

And towards a crystal Mere, that lay beyond

Among steep hills and woods embosomed,
flowed

A copious stream with boldly-winding
course ;

Here traceable, there hidden—there again
To sight restored, and glittering in the
sun. 86

On the stream's bank, and everywhere,
appeared

Fair dwellings, single, or in social knots ;
Some scattered o'er the level, others perched

On the hill-sides, a cheerful quiet scene,
Now in its morning purity arrayed. 91

"As 'mid some happy valley of the Alps,"

Said I, "once happy, ere tyrannic power,
Wantonly breaking in upon the Swiss, Destroyed their unoffending commonwealth, 95

A popular equality reigns here,

Save for yon stately House beneath whose roof
 A rural lord might dwell."—"No feudal pomp,
 Or power," replied the Wanderer, "to that House
 Belongs, but there in his allotted Home
 Abides, from year to year, a genuine
 Priest, 101
 The shepherd of his flock; or, as a king
 Is styled, when most affectionately praised,
 The father of his people. Such is he;
 And rich and poor, and young and old,
 rejoice 105
 Under his spiritual sway. He hath vouchsafed
 To me some portion of a kind regard;
 And something also of his inner mind
 Hath he imparted—but I speak of him
 As he is known to all.
 The calm delights 110
 Of unambitious piety he chose,
 And learning's solid dignity; though born
 Of knightly race, nor wanting powerful
 friends.
 Hither, in prime of manhood, he withdrew
 From academic bowers. He loved the
 spot— 115
 Who does not love his native soil?—he prized
 The ancient rural character, composed
 Of simple manners, feelings unsuppress'd
 And undisguised, and strong and serious
 thought;
 A character reflected in himself, 120
 With such embellishment as well beseems His rank and sacred function. This deep
 vale
 Winds far in reaches hidden from our
 sight,
 And one a turreted manorial hall Adorns, in which the good Man's ancestors 125
 Have dwelt through ages—Patrons of this Cure.
 To them, and to his own judicious pains,
 The Vicar's dwelling, and the whole do-
 main,
 Owes that presiding aspect which might
 well

Attract your notice; statelier than could else 130
 Have been bestowed, through course of common chance,
 On an unwealthy mountain Benefice."
 This said, oft pausing, we pursued our
 way;
 Nor reached the village-churchyard till
 the sun
 Travelling at steadier pace than ours, had risen 135
 Above the summits of the highest hills,
 And round our path darted oppressive
 beams.
 As chanced, the portals of the sacred
 Pile
 Stood open; and we entered. On my
 frame,
 At such transition from the fervid air, 140
 A grateful coolness fell, that seemed to strike
 The heart, in concert with that temperate
 awe
 And natural reverence which the place
 inspired.
 Not raised in nice proportions was the
 pile, 144
 But large and massy; for duration built;
 With pillars crowded, and the roof up-
 held
 By naked rafters intricately crossed,
 Like leafless underboughs, in some thick
 wood,
 All withered by the depth of shade above.
 Admonitory texts inscribed the walls, 150
 Each, in its ornamental scroll, enclosed;
 Each also crowned with wingèd heads—
 a pair
 Of rudely-painted Cherubim. The floor
 Of nave and aisle, in unpretending guise,
 Was occupied by oaken benches ranged In seemly rows; the chancel only showed Some vain distinctions, marks of earthly
 state 157
 By immemorial privilege allowed;
 Though with the Encincture's special sanctity
 But ill according. An heraldic shield, Varying its tincture with the changeful
 light, 161

Imbued the altar-window ; fixed aloft
 A faded hatchment hung, and one by
 time
 Yet undiscoloured. A capacious pew
 Of sculptured oak stood here, with drapery lined ; 165
 And marble monuments were here displayed Thronging the walls ; and on the floor
 beneath
 Sepulchral stones appeared, with emblems
 graven
 And foot-worn epitaphs, and some with small
 And shining effigies of brass inlaid. 170

The tribute by these various records
 claimed,
 Duly we paid, each after each, and read
 The ordinary chronicle of birth,
 Office, alliance, and promotion—all Ending in dust ; of upright magistrates, Grave doctors strenuous for the mother-
 church, 176
 And uncorrupted senators, alike
 To king and people true. A brazen plate,
 Not easily deciphered, told of one Whose course of earthly honour was begun 180
 In quality of page among the train
 Of the eighth Henry, when he crossed the seas
 His royal state to show, and prove his
 strength
 In tournament, upon the fields of France.
 Another tablet registered the death, 185
 And praised the gallant bearing, of a Knight
 Tried in the sea-fights of the second Charles.
 Near this brave Knight his Father lay entombed ;
 And, to the silent language giving voice,
 I read,—how in his manhood's earlier
 day 190
 He, 'mid the afflictions of intestine war
 And rightful government subverted, found
 One only solace—that he had espoused
 A virtuous Lady tenderly beloved
 For her benign perfections ; and yet
 more 195

Endeared to him, for this, that, in her
 state
 Of wedlock richly crowned with Heaven's regard,
 She with a numerous issue filled his house,
 Who throve, like plants, uninjured by the storm
 That laid their country waste. No need to speak 200
 Of less particular notices assigned To Youth or Maiden gone before their
 time,
 And Matrons and unwedded Sisters old ; Whose charity and goodness were rehearsed
 In modest panegyric.
 "These dim lines, 205
 What would they tell?" said I,—but,
 from the task
 Of puzzling out that faded narrative,
 With whisper soft my venerable Friend Called me ; and, looking down the dark-
 some aisle,
 I saw the Tenant of the lonely vale 210
 Standing apart ; with curvèd arm reclined
 On the baptismal font ; his pallid face Upruned, as if his mind were rapt, or
 lost
 In some abstraction ;—gracefully he stood,
 The semblance bearing of a sculptured
 form 215
 That leans upon a monumental urn
 In peace, from morn to night, from year to year.

Him from that posture did the Sexton rouse ;
 Who entered, humming carelessly a tune,
 Continuation haply of the notes 220
 That had beguiled the work from which he came,
 With spade and mattock o'er his shoulder
 hung ;
 To be deposited, for future need,
 In their appointed place. The pale Recluse Withdrew ; and straight we followed,— to a spot 225
 Where sun and shade were intermixed ;
 for there
 A broad oak, stretching forth its leafy arms

From an adjoining pasture, overhung Small space of that green churchyard with a light

And pleasant awning. On the moss-grown wall 230

My ancient Friend and I together took
Our seats; and thus the Solitary spake,
Standing before us:—

“Did you note the mien
Of that self-solaced, easy-hearted churl, Death’s hireling, who scoops out his neighbour’s grave, 235

Or wraps an old acquaintance up in clay,
All unconcerned as he would bind a sheaf,
Or plant a tree. And did you hear his
voice?

I was abruptly summoned by the sound
From some affecting images and thoughts, Which then were silent; but crave utterance now. 241

“Much,” he continued, with dejected
look,

“Much, yesterday, was said in glowing phrase

Of our sublime dependencies, and hopes
For future states of being; and the wings
Of speculation, joyfully outspread, 246
Hovered above our destiny on earth:

But stoop, and place the prospect of the
soul

In sober contrast with reality,
And man’s substantial life. If this mute
earth 250

Of what it holds could speak, and every
grave

Were as a volume, shut, yet capable
Of yielding its contents to eye and ear,
We should recoil, stricken with sorrow
and shame,

To see disclosed, by such dread proof,
how ill 255

That which is done accords with what is known

To reason, and by conscience is enjoined;
How idly, how perversely, life’s whole
course,

To this conclusion, deviates from the line,
Or of the end stops short, proposed to all
At her aspiring outset.

Mark the babe 261

Not long accustomed to this breathing
world;

One that hath barely learned to shape
a smile,

Though yet irrational of soul, to grasp
With tiny finger—to let fall a tear; 265

And, as the heavy cloud of sleep dissolves,

To stretch his limbs, bemocking, as might
seem,

The outward functions of intelligent
man;

A grave proficient in amusive feats
Of puppetry, that from the lap declare

His expectations, and announce his claims 271

To that inheritance which millions rue That they were ever born to! In due
time

A day of solemn ceremonial comes;
When they, who for this Minor hold in
trust 275

Rights that transcend the loftiest heritage

Of mere humanity, present their Charge,
For this occasion daintily adorned,

At the baptismal font. And when the pure

And consecrating element hath cleansed
The original stain, the child is there
received 281

Into the second ark, Christ’s church, with trust

That he, from wrath redeemed, therein shall float

Over the billows of this troublesome
world

To the fair land of everlasting life. 285

Corrupt affections, covetous desires,
Are all renounced; high as the thought
of man

Can carry virtue, virtue is professed;
A dedication made, a promise given

For due provision to control and guide,
And unremitting progress to ensure 291

In holiness and truth.”

“You cannot blame,”
Here interposing fervently I said,

“Rites which attest that Man by nature
lies

Bedded for good and evil in a gulf 295

Fearfully low; nor will your judgment
scorn

Those services, whereby attempt is made
To lift the creature toward that eminence
On which, now fallen, erewhile in majesty

He stood; or if not so, whose top serene
At least he feels 'tis given him to descry;
Not without aspirations, evermore 302

Returning, and injunctions from within Doubt to cast off and weariness; in trust That what the Soul perceives, if glory
lost, 305

May be, through pains and persevering
hope,

Recovered; or, if hitherto unknown,
Lies within reach, and one day shall be gained."

"I blame them not," he calmly answered—"no; 309

The outward ritual and established forms
With which communities of men invest These inward feelings, and the aspiring vows

To which the lips give public utterance
Are both a natural process; and by me Shall pass uncensured; though the issue
prove, 315

Bringing from age to age its own reproach,

Incongruous, impotent, and blank.—But,
oh!

If to be weak is to be wretched—miserable,

As the lost Angel by a human voice Hath mournfully pronounced, then, in
my mind, 320

Far better not to move at all than move
By impulse sent from such illusive
power,—

That finds and cannot fasten down; that grasps

And is rejoiced, and loses while it
grasps;

That tempts, emboldens—for a time sustains, 325

And then betrays; accuses and inflicts Remorseless punishment; and so re-
treads

The inevitable circle: better far

Than this, to graze the herb in thoughtless peace,

By foresight, or remembrance, undisturbed! 330

"Philosophy! and thou more vaunted
name

Religion! with thy statelier retinue, Faith, Hope, and Charity—from the visible world

Choose for your emblems whatso'er ye
find

Of safest guidance or of firmest trust—
The torch, the star, the anchor; nor except 336

The cross itself, at whose unconscious
feet

The generations of mankind have knelt Ruefully seized, and shedding bitter
tears,

And through that conflict seeking rest—of you, 340

High-titled Powers, am I constrained to ask,

Here standing, with the unvoyageable
sky

In faint reflection of infinitude Stretched overhead, and at my pensive
feet

A subterraneous magazine of bones, 345
In whose dark vaults my own shall soon
be laid,

Where are your triumphs? your dominion
where?

And in what age admitted and confirmed?

—Not for a happy land do I enquire,
Island or grove, that hides a blessed few Who, with obedience willing and sincere, 351

To your serene authorities conform;
But whom, I ask, of individual Souls,
Have ye withdrawn from passion's crooked ways,

Inspired, and thoroughly fortified?—If the heart 355

Could be inspected to its inmost folds By sight undazzled with the glare of
praise,

Who shall be named—in the resplendent
line

Of sages, martyrs, confessors—the man Whom the best might of faith, wherever fixed, 360
For one day's little compass, has preserved
From painful and discreditable shocks
Of contradiction, from some vague desire Culpably cherished, or corrupt relapse
To some unsanctioned fear?"

“If this be so, 365
And Man,” said I, “be in his noblest
shape
Thus pitifully infirm; then, he who
made,
And who shall judge the creature, will forgive.

—Yet, in its general tenor, your complaint
Is all too true; and surely not misplaced: 370
For, from this pregnant spot of ground, such thoughts

Rise to the notice of a serious mind
By natural exhalation. With the dead
In their repose, the living in their mirth,
Who can reflect, unmoved, upon the
round 375

Of smooth and solemnized complacencies,
By which, on Christian lands, from age
to age

Profession mocks performance? Earth is sick,
And Heaven is weary, of the hollow
words

Which States and Kingdoms utter when they talk 380
Of truth and justice. Turn to private
life

And social neighbourhood; look we to ourselves;

A light of duty shines on every day
For all; and yet how few are warmed or cheered!

How few who mingle with their fellow-
men 385

And still remain self-governed, and apart, Like this our honoured Friend; and thence acquire.

Right to expect his vigorous decline,
That promises to the end a blest old
age!"

“Yet,” with a smile of triumph thus exclaimed 390

The Solitary, “in the life of man,
If to the poetry of common speech
Faith may be given, we see as in a glass
A true reflection of the circling year,
With all its seasons. Grant that Spring is there, 395

In spite of many a rough untoward blast, Hopeful and promising with buds and
flowers;

Yet where is glowing Summer's long rich
day,

That ought to follow faithfully expressed?
And mellow Autumn, charged with bounteous fruit, 400

Where is she imaged? in what favoured
clime

Her lavish pomp, and ripe magnificence?
—Yet, while the better part is missed,
the worse

In man's autumnal season is set forth
With a resemblance not to be denied, 405
And that contents him; bowers that hear no more

The voice of gladness, less and less supply
Of outward sunshine and internal warmth;

And, with this change, sharp air and falling leaves, 409

Foretelling aged Winter's desolate sway.

“How gay the habitations that bedeck This fertile valley! Not a house but seems

To give assurance of content within;
Embosomed happiness, and placid love;
As if the sunshine of the day were met

With answering brightness in the hearts of all 416

Who walk this favoured ground. But chance-regards,

And notice forced upon incurious ears;
These, if these only, acting in despite

Of the encomiums by my Friend pronounced 420

On humble life, forbid the judging mind
To trust the smiling aspect of this fair

And noiseless commonwealth. The simple race

Of mountaineers (by nature's self removed

From foul temptations, and by constant
care 425

Of a good shepherd tended, as themselves

Do tend their flocks) partake man's general lot

With little mitigation. They escape, Perchance, the heavier woes of guilt;
feel not

The tedium of fantastic idleness: 430
Yet life, as with the multitude, with
them

Is fashioned like an ill-constructed tale;
That on the outset wastes its gay desires,
Its fair adventures, its enlivening hopes,
And pleasant interests—for the sequel leaving 435

Old things repeated with diminished
grace;

And all the laboured novelties at best Imperfect substitutes, whose use and
power

Evince the want and weakness whence they spring."

While in this serious mood we held discourse, 440

The reverend Pastor toward the churchyard gate

Approached; and, with a mild respectful
air

Of native cordiality, our Friend Advanced to greet him. With a gracious
mien

Was he received, and mutual joy prevailed. 445

Awhile they stood in conference, and I guess

That he, who now upon the mossy wall
Sate by my side, had vanished, if a wish
Could have transferred him to the flying
clouds,

Or the least penetrable hiding-place 450
In his own valley's rocky guardianship.

—For me, I looked upon the pair, well
pleased:

Nature had framed them both, and both were marked

By circumstance, with intermixture fine
Of contrast and resemblance. To an oak Hardy and grand, a weather-beaten oak,

Fresh in the strength and majesty of age,
One might be likened: flourishing appeared,

Though somewhat past the fulness of his prime,

The other—like a stately sycamore, 460
That spreads, in gentle pomp, its honied
shade.

A general greeting was exchanged;
and soon

The Pastor learned that his approach had given

A welcome interruption to discourse Grave, and in truth too often sad.—"Is
Man 465

A child of hope? Do generations press
On generations, without progress made?
Halts the individual, ere his hairs be
grey,

Perforce? Are we a creature in whom
good

Preponderates, or evil? Doth the will Acknowledge reason's law? A living
power 471

Is virtue, or no better than a name,
Fleeting as health or beauty, and un-
sound?

So that the only substance which remains, (For thus the tenour of complaint hath
run) 475

Among so many shadows, are the pains
And penalties of miserable life, Doomed to decay, and then expire in
dust!

—Our cogitations this way have been drawn,

These are the points," the Wanderer said,
"on which 480

Our inquest turns.—Accord, good Sir!
the light

Of your experience to dispel this gloom:
By your persuasive wisdom shall the
heart

That frets, or languishes, be stilled and cheered."

"Our nature," said the Priest, in mild reply, 485

"Angels may weigh and fathom: they
perceive,

With undistempred and unclouded
spirit,
The object as it is; but, for ourselves,
That speculative height we may not reach.
The good and evil are our own; and we Are that which we would contemplate
from far. 491

Knowledge, for us, is difficult to gain—
Is difficult to gain, and hard to keep—
As virtue's self; like virtue is beset With snares; tried, tempted, subject to
decay. 495

Love, admiration, fear, desire, and hate, Blind were we without these: through these alone
Are capable to notice or discern
Or to record; we judge, but cannot be Indifferent judges. 'Spite of proudest boast, 500

Reason, best reason, is to imperfect man
An effort only, and a noble aim;
A crown, an attribute of sovereign power,
Still to be courted—never to be won.
—Look forth, or each man dive into himself; 505

What sees he but a creature too per-
turbed;
That is transported to excess; that yearns,
Regrets, or trembles, wrongly, or too
much;
Hopes rashly, in disgust as rash recoils;
Battens on spleen, or moulders in despair? 510

Thus comprehension fails, and truth is
missed;
Thus darkness and delusion round our
path
Spread, from disease, whose subtle injury
lurks
Within the very faculty of sight. 514

“Yet for the general purposes of faith
In Providence, for solace and support,
We may not doubt that who can best subject
The will to reason's law, can strictliest
live
And act in that obedience, he shall gain
The clearest apprehension of those
truths, 520

Which unassisted reason's utmost power
Is too infirm to reach. But, waiving this,
And our regards confining within bounds
Of less exalted consciousness, through which
The very multitude are free to range, 525
We safely may affirm that human life
Is either fair and tempting, a soft scene
Grateful to sight, refreshing to the soul,
Or a forbidding tract of cheerless
view;
Even as the same is looked at, or approached. 530

Thus, when in changeful April fields are
white
With new-fallen snow, if from the sullen north
Your walk conduct you hither, ere the
sun
Hath gained his noontide height, this churchyard, filled
With mounds transversely lying side by
side 535
From east to west, before you will appear
An unilluminated, blank, and dreary, plain,
With more than wintry cheerlessness and
gloom Saddening the heart. Go forward, and look back;
Look, from the quarter whence the lord
of light, 540
Of life, of love, and gladness doth dispense
His beams; which, unexcluded in their
fall,
Upon the southern side of every grave
Have gently exercised a melting power;
Then will a vernal prospect greet your
eye, 545
All fresh and beautiful, and green and
bright,
Hopeful and cheerful:—vanished is the pall That overspread and chilled the sacred
turf,
Vanished or hidden; and the whole
domain,
To some, too lightly minded, might appear 550
A meadow carpet for the dancing hours.

—This contrast, not unsuitable to life,
Is to that other state more apposite,
Death and its two-fold aspect! wintry—
one,
Cold, sullen, blank, from hope and joy shut out; 555
The other, which the ray divine hath
touched,
Replete with vivid promise, bright as
spring.”

“We see, then, as we feel,” the Wanderer thus

With a complacent animation spake,
“And in your judgment, Sir! the mind’s
repose 560

On evidence is not to be ensured
By act of naked reason. Moral truth
Is no mechanic structure, built by rule;
And which, once built, retains a steadfast
shape

And undisturbed proportions; but a
thing 565

Subject, you deem, to vital accidents;
And, like the water-lily, lives and thrives, Whose root is fixed in stable earth, whose
head

Floats on the tossing waves. With joy sincere

I re-salute these sentiments confirmed 570
By your authority. But how acquire
The inward principle that gives effect
To outward argument; the passive will Meek to admit; the active energy, Strong and unbounded to embrace, and firm 575

To keep and cherish? how shall man
unite

With self-forgetting tenderness of heart
An earth-despising dignity of soul?

Wise in that union, and, without it
blind!”

“The way,” said I, “to court, if not obtain 580

The ingenuous mind, apt to be set aright;

This, in the lonely dell discoursing, you Declared at large; and by what exercise

From visible nature, or the inner self

Power may be trained, and renovation
brought 585

To those who need the gift. But, after
all,

Is aught so certain as that man is doomed

To breathe beneath a vault of ignorance?
The natural roof of that dark house in which

His soul is pent! How little can be
known— 590

This is the wise man’s sigh; how far we err—

This is the good man’s not unfrequent
pang!

And they perhaps err least, the lowly class

Whom a benign necessity compels 594
To follow reason’s least ambitious course;

Such do I mean who, unperplexed by
doubt,

And uncited by a wish to look Into high objects farther than they may,
Pace to and fro, from morn till eventide,

The narrow avenue of daily toil 600
For daily bread.”

“Yes,” buoyantly exclaimed
The pale Recluse—“praise to the sturdy plough,

And patient spade; praise to the simple
crook,

And ponderous loom—resounding while it holds

Body and mind in one captivity; 605
And let the light mechanic tool be hailed

With honour; which, encasing by the
power

Of long companionship, the artist’s hand, Cuts off that hand, with all its world of nerves,

From a too busy commerce with the
heart! 610

—Inglorious implements of craft and toil, Both ye that shape and build, and ye that force,

By slow solicitation, earth to yield
Her annual bounty, sparingly dealt forth

With wise reluctance; you would I extol,
Not for gross good alone which ye produce, 616

But for the impertinent and ceaseless strife

Of proofs and reasons ye preclude—in those

Who to your dull society are born,
And with their humble birthright rest
content. 620

—Would I had ne'er renounced it !”
A slight flush

Of moral anger previously had tinged
The old Man's cheek ; but, at this closing
turn

Of self-reproach, it passed away. Said he,
“That which we feel we utter ; as we think 625

So have we argued ; reaping for our pains
No visible recompense. For our relief
You,” to the Pastor turning thus he
spake,

“Have kindly interposed. May I entreat Your further help? The mine of real
life 630

Dig for us ; and present us, in the shape
Of virgin ore, that gold which we, by
pains

Fruitless as those of aery alchemists, Seek from the torturing crucible. There
lies

Around us a domain where you have long Watched both the outward course and inner heart : 636

Give us, for our abstractions, solid facts ;
For our disputes, plain pictures. Say what man

He is who cultivates yon hanging field ;
What qualities of mind she bears, who comes, 640

For morn and evening service, with her
pail,

To that green pasture ; place before our
sight

The family who dwell within yon house Fenced round with glittering laurel ; or in that

Below, from which the curling smoke ascends. 645

Or rather, as we stand on holy earth¹,
And have the dead around us, take from them

Your instances ; for they are both best
known,

And by frail man most equitably judged.
Epitomise the life ; pronounce, you can,
Authentic epitaphs on some of these 651
Who, from their lowly mansions hither
brought,

Beneath this turf lie mouldering at our
feet :

So, by your records, may our doubts be
solved ;

And so, not searching higher, we may learn
*To prize the breath we share with human
kind ; 656*

And look upon the dust of man with awe.”

The Priest replied—“An office you impose

For which peculiar requisites are mine ; Yet much, I feel, is wanting—else the task 660

Would be most grateful. True indeed it is That they whom death has hidden from our sight

Are worthiest of the mind's regard ; with
these

The future cannot contradict the past :
Mortality's last exercise and proof 665
Is undergone ; the transit made that shows

The very Soul, revealed as she departs.
Yet, on your first suggestion, will I give,
Ere we descend into these silent vaults,
One picture from the living.

You behold, 670

High on the breast of yon dark mountain, dark

With stony barrenness, a shining speck
Bright as a sunbeam sleeping till a shower
Brush it away, or cloud pass over it ;

And such it might be deemed—a sleeping sunbeam ; 675

But 'tis a plot of cultivated ground,
Cut off, an island in the dusky waste ;
And that attractive brightness is its own.

The lofty site, by nature framed to tempt

Amid a wilderness of rocks and stones
The tiller's hand, a hermit might have chosen, 681

For opportunity presented, thence Far forth to send his wandering eye o'er
land

And ocean, and look down upon the works,

The habitations, and the ways of men, Himself unseen! But no tradition tells
That ever hermit dipped his maple dish
In the sweet spring that lurks 'mid yon
green fields;

And no such visionary views belong 689
To those who occupy and till the ground,
High on that mountain where they long have dwelt

A wedded pair in childless solitude.
A house of stones collected on the spot,
By rude hands built, with rocky knolls
in front,

Backed also by a ledge of rock, whose crest 695
Of birch-trees waves over the chimney-
top;

A rough abode—in colour, shape, and size,
Such as in unsafe times of border-war Might have been wished for and contrived, to elude

The eye of roving plunderer—for their need 700
Suffices; and unshaken bears the assault
Of their most dreaded foe, the strong South-west

In anger blowing from the distant sea.
—Alone within her solitary hut; 704
There, or within the compass of her fields,
At any moment may the Dame be found,
True as the stock-dove to her shallow
nest

And to the grove that holds it. She beguiles
By intermingled work of house and field
The summer's day, and winter's; with success 710

Not equal, but sufficient to maintain, Even at the worst, a smooth stream of
content,

Until the expected hour at which her
Mate

From the far-distant quarry's vault returns;

And by his converse crowns a silent day With evening cheerfulness. In powers of
mind, 716

In scale of culture, few among my flock Hold lower rank than this sequestered
pair:

But true humility descends from heaven ;

And that best gift of heaven hath fallen on them; 720

Abundant recompense for every want.
—Stoop from your height, ye proud, and copy these!

Who, in their noiseless dwelling-place, can hear

The voice of wisdom whispering scripture texts

For the mind's government, or temper's
peace; 725

And recommending for their mutual need,
Forgiveness, patience, hope, and charity!"

"Much was I pleased," the grey-haired Wanderer said,

"When to those shining fields our notice
first

You turned; and yet more pleased have from your lips 730

Gathered this fair report of them who
dwell

In that retirement; whither, by such
course

Of evil hap and good as oft awaits
A tired way-faring man, once I was
brought

While traversing alone yon mountain-pass.
Dark on my road the autumnal evening
fell, 736

And night succeeded with unusual gloom,
So hazardous that feet and hands became

Guides better than mine eyes—until a
light

High in the gloom appeared, too high,
methought, 740

For human habitation; but I longed
To reach it, destitute of other hope.

I looked with steadiness as sailors look
On the north star, or watch-tower's distant lamp,

And saw the light—now fixed—and shifting now— 745

Not like a dancing meteor, but in line
Of never-varying motion, to and fro.

It is no night-fire of the naked hills,
Thought I—some friendly covert must be
near.

With this persuasion thitherward my
steps 750

I turn, and reach at last the guiding light;
 Joy to myself! but to the heart of her
 Who there was standing on the open hill, (The same kind Matron whom your tongue hath praised)

Alarm and disappointment! The alarm Ceased, when she learned through what mishap I came, 756

And by what help had gained those distant
 fields.

Drawn from her cottage, on that airy
 height,

Bearing a lantern in her hand she stood,
 Or paced the ground—to guide her Husband home, 760

By that unwearied signal, kenned afar;
 An anxious duty! which the lofty site,
 Traversed but by a few irregular paths,
 Imposes, whensoever untoward chance 764
 Detains him after his accustomed hour
 Till night lies black upon the ground.

'But come,
 Come,' said the Matron, 'to our poor
 abode;

Those dark rocks hide it!' Entering, I beheld

A blazing fire—beside a cleanly hearth Sate down; and to her office, with leave asked, 770

The Dame returned.

Or ere that glowing pile
 Of mountain turf required the builder's
 hand

Its wasted splendour to repair, the door Opened, and she re-entered with glad looks,

Her Helpmate following. Hospitable fare, Frank conversation, made the evening's treat: 776

Need a bewildered traveller wish for
 more?

But more was given; I studied as we sate
 By the bright fire, the good Man's form, and face

Not less than beautiful; an open brow 780
 Of undisturbed humanity; a cheek
 Suffused with something of a feminine hue;
 Eyes beaming courtesy and mild regard;
 But, in the quicker turns of the discourse,
 Expression slowly varying, that evinced
 A tardy apprehension. From a fount 786

Lost, thought I, in the obscurities of time,
 But honoured once, those features and that mien

May have descended, though I see them
 here.

In such a man, so gentle and subdued, 790
 Withal so graceful in his gentleness,
 A race illustrious for heroic deeds,

Humbled, but not degraded, may expire.
 This pleasing fancy (cherished and upheld
 By sundry recollections of such fall 795
 From high to low, ascent from low to high,
 As books record, and even the careless

mind
 Cannot but notice among men and things)
 Went with me to the place of my repose.

"Roused by the crowing cock at dawn
 of day, 800

I yet had risen too late to interchange
 A morning salutation with my Host,
 Gone forth already to the far-off seat
 Of his day's work. 'Three dark midwinter months

Pass,' said the Matron, 'and I never see, Save when the sabbath brings its kind release, 806

My helpmate's face by light of day. He quits

His door in darkness, nor till dusk returns.
 And, through Heaven's blessing, thus we gain the bread

For which we pray; and for the wants provide 810

Of sickness, accident, and helpless age.
 Companions have I many; many friends, Dependants, comforters—my wheel, my
 fire,

All day the house-clock ticking in mine ear,
 The cackling hen, the tender chicken
 brood, 815

And the wild birds that gather round my porch.

This honest sheep-dog's countenance I
 read;

With him can talk; nor blush to waste a
 word

On creatures less intelligent and shrewd.
 And if the blustering wind that drives the
 clouds 820

Care not for me, he lingers round my door,

And makes me pastime when our tempers
suit;—

But, above all, my thoughts are my support,

My comfort:—would that they were oftener fixed

On what, for guidance in the way that leads 825

To heaven, I know, by my Redeemer
taught.'

The Matron ended—nor could I forbear To exclaim—'O happy! yielding to the law

Of these privations, richer in the main!— While thankless thousands are oppress and clogged 830

By ease and leisure; by the very wealth
And pride of opportunity made poor;

While tens of thousands falter in their path,
And sink, through utter want of cheering
light; 834

For you the hours of labour do not flag;
For you each evening hath its shining star,
And every sabbath-day its golden sun."

"Yes!" said the Solitary with a smile
That seemed to break from an expanding
heart,

"The untutored bird may found, and so construct, 840

And with such soft materials line, her nest
Fixed in the centre of a prickly brake,
That the thorns wound her not; they only guard.

Powers not unjustly likened to those gifts
Of happy instinct which the woodland bird Shares with her species, nature's grace sometimes 846

Upon the individual doth confer, Among her higher creatures born and trained

To use of reason. And, I own that, tired
Of the ostentatious world—a swelling
stage 850

With empty actions and vain passions
stuffed,

And from the private struggles of mankind

Hoping far less than I could wish to hope, Far less than once I trusted and believed—

I love to hear of those, who, not contend-
ing 855

Nor summoned to contend for virtue's
prize,

Miss not the humbler good at which they
aim,

Blest with a kindly faculty to blunt
The edge of adverse circumstance, and turn Into their contraries the petty plagues
And hindrances with which they stand beset. 861

In early youth, among my native hills,
I knew a Scottish Peasant who possessed
A few small crofts of stone-encumbered
ground;

Masses of every shape and size, that lay Scattered about under the mouldering
walls 866

Of a rough precipice; and some, apart,
In quarters unobnoxious to such chance,
As if the moon had showered them down in spite.

But he repined not. Though the plough was scared 870

By these obstructions, 'round the shady
stones

A fertilising moisture,' said the Swain, 'Gathers, and is preserved; and feeding
dews

And damps, through all the droughty
summer day

From out their substance issuing, maintain 875

Herbage that never fails: no grass springs
up

So green, so fresh, so plentiful, as mine!'
But thinly sown these natures; rare, at
least,

The mutual aptitude of seed and soil
That yields such kindly product. He, whose bed 880

Perhaps yon loose sods cover, the poor
Pensioner

Brought yesterday from our sequestered
dell

Here to lie down in lasting quiet, he,
If living now, could otherwise report
Of rustic loneliness: that grey-haired Orphan— 885

So call him, for humanity to him
No parent was—feelingly could have told,

In life, in death, what solitude can breed
Of selfishness, and cruelty, and vice;
Or, if it breed not, hath not power to cure.
—But your compliance, Sir! with our request 891
My words too long have hindered.”

Undeterred,
Perhaps incited rather, by these shocks,
In no ungracious opposition given
To the confiding spirit of his own 895 Experienced faith, the reverend Pastor
said,
Around him looking; “Where shall I
begin?
Who shall be first selected from my flock Gathered together in their peaceful fold?”
He paused—and having lifted up his eyes
To the pure heaven, he cast them down
again 901
Upon the earth beneath his feet; and
spake:—

“To a mysteriously-united pair
This place is consecrate; to Death and
Life,
And to the best affections that proceed
From their conjunction; consecrate to
faith 906
In him who bled for man upon the cross;
Hallowed to revelation; and no less
To reason’s mandates; and the hopes
divine
Of pure imagination;—above all, 910
To charity, and love, that have provided,
Within these precincts, a capacious bed
And receptacle, open to the good
And evil, to the just and the unjust; 914
In which they find an equal resting-place:
Even as the multitude of kindred brooks
And streams, whose murmur fills this hollow vale,
Whether their course be turbulent or smooth, 918
Their waters clear or sullied, all are lost
Within the bosom of yon crystal Lake,
And end their journey in the same repose!

“And blest are they who sleep; and we that know,
While in a spot like this we breathe and
walk,

That all beneath us by the wings are covered
Of motherly humanity, outspread 925
And gathering all within their tender shade, Though loth and slow to come! A battle-
field,
In stillness left when slaughter is no more
With this compared, makes a strange spectacle!
A dismal prospect yields the wild shore
strewn 930
With wrecks, and trod by feet of young and old
Wandering about in miserable search
Of friends or kindred, whom the angry sea Restores not to their prayer! Ah! who would think
That all the scattered subjects which compose 935
Earth’s melancholy vision through the
space
Of all her climes—these wretched, these depraved,
To virtue lost, insensible of peace,
From the delights of charity cut off, 939
To pity dead, the oppressor and the oppressed:
Tyrants who utter the destroying word,
And slaves who will consent to be destroyed—
Were of one species with the sheltered few,
Who, with a dutiful and tender hand,
Lodged, in a dear appropriated spot, 945
This file of infants; some that never breathed
The vital air; others, which, though allowed
That privilege, did yet expire too soon,
Or with too brief a warning, to admit Administration of the holy rite 950
That lovingly consigns the babe to the arms
Of Jesus, and his everlasting care.
These that in trembling hope are laid apart;
And the besprinkled nursling, unrequired
Till he begins to smile upon the breast
That feeds him; and the tottering little-
one 956
Taken from air and sunshine when the rose
Of infancy first blooms upon his cheek;
The thinking, thoughtless, school-boy;
the bold youth
Of soul impetuous, and the bashful maid
Smitten while all the promises of life 961

Are opening round her; those of middle age, Cast down while confident in strength
they stand,

Like pillars fixed more firmly, as might seem,

And more secure, by very weight of all That, for support, rests on them; the decayed 966

And burthensome; and lastly, that poor
few

Whose light of reason is with age extinct;
The hopeful and the hopeless, first and last,
The earliest summoned and the longest
spared— 970

Are here deposited, with tribute paid
Various, but unto each some tribute paid;
As if, amid these peaceful hills and groves,
Society were touched with kind concern,
And gentle 'Nature grieved, that one should die'; 975

Or, if the change demanded no regret, Observed the liberating stroke—and blessed.

"And whence that tribute? wherefore these regards¹?"

Not from the naked Heart alone of Man (Though claiming high distinction upon
earth 980

As the sole spring and fountain-head of
tears,

His own peculiar utterance for distress
Or gladness)—"No," the philosophic Priest Continued, "'tis not in the vital seat
Of feeling to produce them, without aid
From the pure soul, the soul sublime and
pure; 986

With her two faculties of eye and ear,

The one by which a creature, whom his sins
Have rendered prone, can upward look to heaven; 989

The other that empowers him to perceive
The voice of Deity, on height and plain, Whispering those truths in stillness, which
the WORD,

To the four quarters of the winds, proclaims.

Not without such assistance could the use
Of these benign observances prevail: 995 Thus are they born, thus fostered, thus maintained;

And by the care prospective of our wise Forefathers, who, to guard against the shocks,

The fluctuation and decay of things, Embodied and established these high
truths 1000

In solemn institutions:—men convinced
That life is love and immortality,
The being one, and one the element.
There lies the channel, and original bed,
From the beginning, hollowed out and scooped 1005

For Man's affections—else betrayed and
lost,

And swallowed up 'mid deserts infinite!
This is the genuine course, the aim, and
end

Of prescient reason; all conclusions else
Are abject, vain, presumptuous, and perverse. 1010

The faith partaking of those holy times,
Life, I repeat, is energy of love
Divine or human; exercised in pain,
In strife, in tribulation; and ordained,
If so approved and sanctified, to pass,
Through shades and silent rest, to endless
joy." 1016

BOOK SIXTH.

THE CHURCHYARD AMONG THE MOUNTAINS.

ARGUMENT.

Poet's Address to the State and Church of England.—The Pastor not inferior to the ancient Worthies of the Church.—He begins his Narratives with an instance of unrequited Love.—Anguish of mind subdued, and how.—The lonely Miner.—An instance of perseverance.—Which leads by contrast to an example of abused talents, irresolution, and weakness.—Solitary, applying this covertly to his own case, asks for an instance of some Stranger, whose dispositions may have led him to end his days here.—Pastor, in answer, gives an account of the harmonising influence of Solitude upon two men of opposite principles, who had encountered agitations in public life.—The rule by which Peace may be obtained expressed, and where.—Solitary hints at an overpowering Fatality.—Answer of the Pastor.—What subjects he will exclude from his Narratives.—Conversation upon this.—Instance of an unamiable character, a Female, and why given.—Contrasted with this, a meek sufferer, from unguarded and betrayed love.—Instance of heavier guilt, and its consequences to the Offender.—With this instance of a Marriage Contract broken is contrasted one of a Widower, evidencing his faithful affection towards his deceased wife by his care of their female Children.

HAIL to the crown by Freedom shaped—to gird An English Sovereign's brow! and to the throne Whereon he sits! Whose deep foundations lie In veneration and the people's love; Whose steps are equity, whose seat is law. —Hail to the State of England! And conjoin 6 With this a salutation as devout, Made to the spiritual fabric of her Church; Founded in truth; by blood of Martyrdom Cemented; by the hands of Wisdom reared 10 In beauty of holiness, with ordered pomp, Decent and unproved. The voice, that greet's The majesty of both, shall pray for both*; That, mutually protected and sustained, They may endure long as the sea sur- rounds 15 This favoured Land, or sunshine warms her soil. And O, ye swelling hills, and spacious plains!	Besprent from shore to shore with steeple- towers, And spires whose "silent finger points to heaven¹;" 19 Nor wanting, at wide intervals, the bulk Of ancient minster lifted above the cloud Of the dense air, which town or city breeds To intercept the sun's glad beams—may ne'er That true succession fail of English hearts, 24 Who, with ancestral feeling, can perceive What in those holy structures ye possess Of ornamental interest, and the charm Of pious sentiment diffused afar, And human charity, and social love. 29 —Thus never shall the indignities of time Approach their reverend graces, un- opposed; Nor shall the elements be free to hurt Their fair proportions; nor the blinderrage Of bigot zeal madly to overturn; And, if the desolating hand of war 35 Spare them, they shall continue to bestow, Upon the thronged abodes of busy men (Depraved, and ever prone to fill the mind Exclusively with transitory things)

An air and mien of dignified pursuit; 40
Of sweet civility, on rustic wilds.

The Poet, fostering for his native land
Such hope, entreats that servants may abound

Of those pure altars worthy; ministers Detached from pleasure, to the love of
gain 45

Superior, insusceptible of pride,
And by ambitious longings undisturbed;
Men, whose delight is where their duty
leads

Or fixes them; whose least distinguished
day

Shines with some portion of that heavenly lustre 50

Which makes the sabbath lovely in the
sight

Of blessed angels, pitying human cares.

—And, as on earth it is the doom of truth
To be perpetually attacked by foes

Open or covert, be that priesthood still,

For her defence, replenished with a band

Of strenuous champions, in scholastic arts

Thoroughly disciplined; nor (if in course

Of the revolving world's disturbances

Cause should recur, which righteous

Heaven avert! 60

To meet such trial) from their spiritual

sires

Degenerate; who, constrained to wield

the sword

Of disputation, shrunk not, though as-

sailed

With hostile din, and combating in sight

Of angry umpires, partial and unjust; 65

And did, thereafter, bathe their hands in

fire,

So to declare the conscience satisfied:

Nor for their bodies would accept release;

But, blessing God and praising him, bequeathed

With their last breath, from out the smouldering flame, 70

The faith which they by diligence had

earned,

Or, through illuminating grace, received,

For their dear countrymen, and all man-

kind.

O high example, constancy divine!

Even such a Man (inheriting the zeal
And from the sanctity of elder times 76
Not deviating,—a priest, the like of
whom,

If multiplied, and in their stations set,
Would o'er the bosom of a joyful land Spread true religion and her genuine fruits) 80

Before me stood that day; on holy
ground

Fraught with the relics of mortality,

Exalting tender themes, by just degrees

To lofty raised; and to the highest, last;

The head and mighty paramount of
truths,— 85

Immortal life, in never-fading worlds,

For mortal creatures, conquered and secured.

That basis laid, those principles of faith
Announced, as a preparatory act

Of reverence done to the spirit of the
place, 90

The Pastor cast his eyes upon the ground;

Not, as before, like one oppressed with
awe,

But with a mild and social cheerfulness;

Then to the Solitary turned, and spake.

“At morn or eve, in your retired
domain, 95

Perchance you not unfrequently have
marked

A Visitor—in quest of herbs and flowers;

Too delicate employ, as would appear,

For one, who, though of drooping mien, had yet

From nature's kindness received a frame

Robust as ever rural labour bred.” 101

The Solitary answered: “Such a Form

Full well I recollect. We often crossed

Each other's path; but, as the Intruder
seemed

Fondly to prize the silence which he kept, 105

And I as willingly did cherish mine,

We met, and passed, like shadows. I have heard,

From my good Host, that being crazed in brain

By unrequited love, he scaled the
rocks,

Dived into caves, and pierced the matted
woods, 110

In hope to find some virtuous herb of
power

To cure his malady!"

The Vicar smiled,—

"Alas! before to-morrow's sun goes down
His habitation will be here: for him
That open grave is destined."

"Died he then 115
Of pain and grief?" the Solitary asked,
"Do not believe it; never could that be!"

"He loved," the Vicar answered,
"deeply loved,

Loved fondly, truly, fervently; and dared At length to tell his love, but sued in
vain; 120

Rejected, yea repelled; and, if with scorn
Upon the haughty maiden's brow, 'tis but

A high-prized plume which female Beauty wears

In wantonness of conquest, or puts on To cheat the world, or from herself to hide 125

Humiliation, when no longer free.
That he could brook, and glory in;—but when

The tidings came that she whom he had wooed

Was wedded to another, and his heart
Was forced to rend away its only
hope; 130

Then, Pity could have scarcely found on
earth

An object worthier of regard than he,
In the transition of that bitter hour!

Lost was she, lost; nor could the Sufferer
say

That in the act of preference he had
been 135

Unjustly dealt with; but the Maid was
gone!

Had vanished from his prospects and
desires;

Not by translation to the heavenly choir
Who have put off their mortal spoils—ah no!

She lives another's wishes to complete,— 140

'Joy be their lot, and happiness,' he cried,
'His lot and hers, as misery must be
mine!'

"Such was that strong concussion; but
the Man,

Who trembled, trunk and limbs, like some huge oak

By a fierce tempest shaken, soon resumed 145

The steadfast quiet natural to a mind
Of composition gentle and sedate,
And, in its movements, circumspect and slow.

To books, and to the long-forsaken desk,
O'er which enchained by science he had
loved 150

To bend, he stoutly re-addressed himself,

Resolved to quell his pain, and search for
truth

With keener appetite (if that might be)
And closer industry. Of what ensued Within the heart no outward sign appeared 155

Till a betraying sickliness was seen
To tinge his cheek; and through his frame it crept

With slow mutation unconcealable;
Such universal change as autumn makes
In the fair body of a leafy grove 160
Discoloured, then divested.

'Tis affirmed

By poets skilled in nature's secret ways
That Love will not submit to be controlled By mastery:—and the good Man lacked not friends

Who strove to instil this truth into his
mind, 165

A mind in all heart-mysteries unversed.

'Go to the hills,' said one, 'remit a while
This baneful diligence:—at early morn Court the fresh air, explore the heaths and woods;

And, leaving it to others to foretell, 170
By calculations sage, the ebb and flow

Of tides, and when the moon will be eclipsed,

Do you, for your own benefit, construct A calendar of flowers, plucked as they blow

Where health abides, and cheerfulness, and peace.' 175

The attempt was made;—'tis needless to report

How hopelessly; but innocence is strong,
And an entire simplicity of mind

A thing most sacred in the eye of
Heaven;

That opens, for such sufferers, relief 180
Within the soul, fountains of grace
divine;

And doth commend their weakness and disease

To Nature's care, assisted in her office
By all the elements that round her wait
To generate, to preserve, and to restore; 185

And by her beautiful array of forms Shedding sweet influence from above; or pure

Delight exhaling from the ground they
tread."

"Impute it not to impatience, if,"
exclaimed

The Wanderer, "I infer that he was healed 190

By perseverance in the course prescribed."

"You do not err: the powers, that had been lost

By slow degrees, were gradually regained;
The fluttering nerves composed; the beating heart

In rest established; and the jarring
thoughts 195

To harmony restored.—But yon dark
mould

Will cover him, in the fulness of his
strength,

Hastily smitten by a fever's force;
Yet not with stroke so sudden as refused

Time to look back with tenderness on her 200

Whom he had loved in passion; and to send

Some farewell words—with one, but one,
request;

That, from his dying hand, she would accept

Of his possessions that which most he
prized;

A book, upon whose leaves some chosen plants, 205

By his own hand disposed with nicest care,
In undecaying beauty were preserved;

Mute register, to him, of time and place,
And various fluctuations in the breast;

To her, a monument of faithful love 210
Conquered, and in tranquillity retained!

"Close to his destined habitation, lies
One who achieved a humbler victory, Though marvellous in its kind. A place
there is

High in these mountains, that allured a band 215

Of keen adventurers to unite their pains
In search of precious ore: they tried, were foiled—

And all desisted, all, save him alone.

He, taking counsel of his own clear
thoughts,

And trusting only to his own weak
hands, 220

Urged unremittingly the stubborn work, Unseconded, uncoun tenanced; then, as
time

Passed on, while still his lonely efforts
found

No recompense, derided; and at length,
By many pitied, as insane of mind; 225

By others dreaded as the luckless thrall
Of subterranean Spirits feeding hope

By various mockery of sight and sound;
Hope after hope, encouraged and destroyed.

—But when the lord of seasons had matured 230

The fruits of earth through space of twice ten years,

The mountain's entrails offered to his
view

And trembling grasp the long-deferred
reward.

Not with more transport did Columbus
greet

A world, his rich discovery! But our Swain, 235

A very hero till his point was gained,
 Proved all unable to support the weight Of prosperous fortune. On the fields he looked

With an unsettled liberty of thought, Wishes and endless schemes; by daylight
 walked 240

Giddy and restless; ever and anon Quaffed in his gratitude immoderate cups;

And truly might be said to die of joy!
 He vanished; but conspicuous to this
 day

The path remains that linked his cottage-
 door 245

To the mine's mouth; a long and slanting
 track,

Upon the rugged mountain's stony side,
 Worn by his daily visits to and from
 The darksome centre of a constant hope.
 This vestige, neither force of beating rain,
 Nor the vicissitudes of frost and thaw 251
 Shall cause to fade, till ages pass away;
 And it is named, in memory of the event,
 THE PATH OF PERSEVERANCE."

"Thou from whom Man has his strength," exclaimed the Wanderer, "oh! 255

Do thou direct it! To the virtuous grant
 The penetrative eye which can perceive In this blind world the guiding vein of
 hope;

That, like this Labourer, such may dig
 their way,

'Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified;' 260
 Grant to the wise his firmness of resolve!"

"That prayer were not superfluous,"
 said the Priest,

"Amid the noblest relics, proudest dust,
 That Westminster, for Britain's glory,
 holds

Within the bosom of her awful pile, 265
 Ambitiously collected. Yet the sigh, Which wafts that prayer to heaven, is due to all,

Wherever laid, who living fell below
 Their virtue's humbler mark; a sigh of
 pain

If to the opposite extreme they sank. 270

How would you pity her who yonder
 rests;

Him, farther off; the pair, who here are
 laid;

But, above all, that mixture of earth's
 mould

Whom sight of this green hillock to my mind

Recalls!

He lived not till his locks were nipped 275

By seasonable frost of age; nor died
 Before his temples, prematurely forced

To mix the manly brown with silver grey,
 Gave obvious instance of the sad effect

Produced, when thoughtless Folly hath usurped 280

The natural crown that sage Experience
 wears.

Gay, volatile, ingenious, quick to learn,
 And prompt to exhibit all that he possessed

Or could perform; a zealous actor, hired
 Into the troop of mirth, a soldier, sworn Into the lists of giddy enterprise— 286

Such was he; yet, as if within his frame
 Two several souls alternately had lodged,
 Two sets of manners could the Youth put on;

And, fraught with antics as the Indian
 bird 290

That writhes and chatters in her wiry cage,
 Was graceful, when it pleased him, smooth
 and still

As the mute swan that floats adown the
 stream,

Or, on the waters of the unruffled lake,
 Anchors her placid beauty. Not a leaf,
 That flutters on the bough, lighter than

he; 296

And not a flower, that droops in the green shade,

More winningly reserved! If ye enquire
 How such consummate elegance was bred

Amid these wilds, this answer may suffice; 300

'Twas Nature's will; who sometimes undertakes,

For the reproof of human vanity,
 Art to outstrip in her peculiar walk.

Hence, for this Favourite—lavishly endow'd

With personal gifts, and bright instinctive wit, 305

While both, embellishing each other, stood

Yet farther recommended by the charm Of fine demeanour, and by dance and song,

And skill in letters—every fancy shaped Fair expectations; nor, when to the world's 310

Capacious field forth went the Adventurer, there

Were he and his attainments overlooked, Or scantily rewarded; but all hopes,

Cherished for him, he suffered to depart, Like blighted buds; or clouds that mimick'd

land 315
Before the sailor's eye; or diamond drops That sparkling deck'd the morning grass;

or aught
That was attractive, and hath ceased to be!

“Yet, when this Prodigal returned, the rites

Of joyful greeting were on him bestowed, Who, by humiliation undeterred, 321

Sought for his weariness a place of rest Within his Father's gates.—Whence came he?—clothed

In tattered garb, from hovels where abides

Necessity, the stationary host 325
Of vagrant poverty; from rifted barns

Where no one dwells but the wide-staring owl

And the owl's prey; from these bare haunts, to which

He had descended from the proud saloon, He came, the ghost of beauty and of

health, 330
The wreck of gaiety! But soon revived

In strength, in power refitted, he renewed His suit to Fortune; and she smiled again

Upon a fickle Ingrate. Thrice he rose, Thrice sank as willingly. For he—whose nerves 335

Were used to thrill with pleasure, while his voice

Softly accompanied the tuneful harp, By the nice finger of fair ladies touch'd

In glittering halls—was able to derive No less enjoyment from an abject choice.

Who happier for the moment—who more blithe 341

Than this fallen Spirit? in those dreary holds

His talents lending to exalt the freaks Of merry-making beggars,—now, provoked

344
To laughter multiplied in louder peals By his malicious wit; then, all enchained

With mute astonishment, themselves to see

In their own arts outdone, their fame eclipsed,

As by the very presence of the Fiend Who dictates and inspires illusive feats,

For knavish purposes! The city, too, 351
(With shame I speak it) to her guilty bowers

Allured him, sunk so low in self-respect As there to linger, there to eat his bread,

Hired minstrel of voluptuous blandishment; 355

Charming the air with skill of hand or voice,

Listen who would, be wrought upon who might,

Sincerely wretched hearts, or falsely gay. —Such the too frequent tenour of his

boast
In ears that relished the report;—but all

Was from his Parents happily concealed; Who saw enough for blame and pitying

love.
They also were permitted to receive

His last, repentant breath; and closed his eyes, 364

No more to open on that irksome world Where he had long existed in the state

Of a young fowl beneath one mother hatched,

Though from another sprung. different in kind:

Where he had lived, and could not cease to live,

Distracted in propensity; content 370
With neither element of good or ill;

And yet in both rejoicing; man unblest;

Of contradictions infinite the slave,

Till his deliverance, when Mercy made him
One with himself, and one with them
that sleep." 375

"'Tis strange," observed the Solitary,
"strange

It seems, and scarcely less than pitiful,
That in a land where charity provides
For all that can no longer feed themselves,
A man like this should choose to bring his shame 380

To the parental door; and with his sighs
Infect the air which he had freely breathed
In happy infancy. He could not pine Through lack of converse; no—he must have found

Abundant exercise for thought and speech,
In his dividual being, self-reviewed, 386 Self-catechised, self-punished.—Some
there are

Who, drawing near their final home, and much
And daily longing that the same were reached,

Would rather shun than seek the fellowship 390
Of kindred mould.—Such haply here are
laid?"

"Yes," said the Priest, "the Genius of our hills—

Who seems, by these stupendous barriers
cast

Round his domain, desirous not alone
To keep his own, but also to exclude 395
All other progeny—doth sometimes lure,
Even by his studied depth of privacy,
The unhappy alien hoping to obtain Concealment, or seduced by wish to find,
In place from outward molestation free,
Helps to internal ease. Of many such 401 Could I discourse; but as their stay was brief,

So their departure only left behind Fancies, and loose conjectures. Other
trace

Survives, for worthy mention, of a pair
Who, from the pressure of their several fates, 406

Meeting as strangers, in a petty town
Whose blue roofs ornament a distant reach

Of this far-winding vale, remained as friends

True to their choice; and gave their bones in trust 410

To this loved cemetery, here to lodge
With unescutcheoned privacy interred Far from the family vault.—A Chieftain
one

By right of birth; within whose spotless
breast

The fire of ancient Caledonia burned:
He, with the foremost whose impatience
hailed 416

The Stuart, landing to resume, by force
Of arms, the crown which bigotry had
lost,

Aroused his clan; and, fighting at their
head,

With his brave sword endeavoured to prevent 420

Culloden's fatal overthrow. Escaped
From that disastrous rout, to foreign shores
He fled; and when the lenient hand of
time

Those troubles had appeased, he sought and gained,

For his obscured condition, an obscure Retreat, within this nook of English
ground. 426

"The other, born in Britain's southern tract,

Had fixed his milder loyalty, and placed
His gentler sentiments of love and hate, There, where they placed them who in conscience prized 430

The new succession, as a line of kings
Whose oath had virtue to protect the land
Against the dire assaults of papacy
And arbitrary rule. But launch thy bark
On the distempered flood of public life,
And cause for most rare triumph will be
thine 436

If, spite of keenest eye and steadiest
hand,

The stream, that bears thee forward, prove not, soon

Or late, a perilous master. He—who oft,
Beneath the battlements and stately trees
That round his mansion cast a sober
gloom, 441

Had moralised on this, and other truths
Of kindred import, pleased and satisfied—
Was forced to vent his wisdom with a
sigh

Heaved from the heart in fortune's bitter-
ness, 445

When he had crushed a plentiful estate
By ruinous contest, to obtain a seat In Britain's senate. Fruitless was the attempt:

And while the uproar of that desperate
strife

Continued yet to vibrate on his ear, 450
The vanquished Whig, under a borrowed
name,

(For the mere sound and echo of his own
Haunted him with sensations of disgust That he was glad to lose) slunk from the
world

To the deep shade of those untravelled
Wilds; 455

In which the Scottish Laird had long possessed

An undisturbed abode. Here, then, they met,

Two doughty champions; flaming Jacobite

And sullen Hanoverian! You might think
That losses and vexations, less severe 460
Than those which they had severally sustained,

Would have inclined each to abate his
zeal

For his ungrateful cause; no,—I have
heard

My reverend Father tell that, 'mid the calm

Of that small town encountering thus, they filled, 465

Daily, its bowling-green with harmless
strife;

Plagued with uncharitable thoughts the
church;

And vexed the market-place. But in the breasts

Of these opponents gradually was wrought,
With little change of general sentiment,
Such leaning towards each other, that their days 471

By choice were spent in constant fellowship;

And if, at times, they fretted with the yoke,

Those very bickerings made them love it
more.

“A favourite boundary to their lengthened walks 475

This Churchyard was. And, whether they had come

Treading their path in sympathy and linked

In social converse, or by some short space
Discreetly parted to preserve the peace,

One spirit seldom failed to extend its
sway 480

Over both minds, when they awhile had marked

The visible quiet of this holy ground,
And breathed its soothing air;—the spirit of hope

And saintly magnanimity; that—spurn-
ing

The field of selfish difference and dispute, 485

And every care which transitory things,
Earth and the kingdoms of the earth, create—

Doth, by a rapture of forgetfulness, Preclude forgiveness, from the praise de-
barred,

Which else the Christian virtue might have claimed. 490

“There live who yet remember here to have seen

Their courtly figures, seated on the stump
Of an old yew, their favourite resting-
place.

But as the remnant of the long-lived tree
Was disappearing by a swift decay, 495

They, with joint care, determined to erect,
Upon its site, a dial, that might stand

For public use preserved, and thus survive

As their own private monument: for
this

Was the particular spot, in which they wished 500

(And Heaven was pleased to accomplish the desire)

That, undivided, their remains should lie.

So, where the mouldered tree had stood, was raised

Yon structure, framing, with the ascent of steps

That to the decorated pillar lead, 505
A work of art more sumptuous than might seem

To suit this place; yet built in no proud
scorn

Of rustic homeliness; they only aimed
To ensure for it respectful guardianship.
Around the margin of the plate, whereon
The shadow falls to note the stealthy
hours, 511

Winds an inscriptive legend."—At these
words

Thither we turned; and gathered, as we
read,

The appropriate sense, in Latin numbers couched:

*"Time flies; it is his melancholy task 515
To bring, and bear away, delusive hopes,
And reproduce the troubles he destroys.
But, while his blindness thus is occupied, Discerning Mortal! do thou serve the will
Of Time's eternal Master, and that peace,
Which the world wants, shall be for thee confirmed!" 521*

"Smooth verse, inspired by no unlettered Muse,"

Exclaimed the Sceptic, "and the strain
of thought

Accords with nature's language;—the soft
voice

Of yon white torrent falling down the
rocks 525

Speaks, less distinctly, to the same effect.

If, then, their blended influence be not
lost

Upon our hearts, not wholly lost, I grant, Even upon mine, the more are we required 529

To feel for those among our fellow-men,
Who, offering no obeisance to the world,
Are yet made desperate by 'too quick a sense

Of constant infelicity,' cut off
From peace like exiles on some barren
rock,

Their life's appointed prison; not more
free 535

Than sentinels, between two armies, set,
With nothing better, in the chill night
air,

Than their own thoughts to comfort them.
Say why

That ancient story of Prometheus chained
To the bare rock, on frozen Caucasus; 540
The vulture, the inexhaustible repast Drawn from his vitals? Say what meant the woes

By Tantalus entailed upon his race,
And the dark sorrows of the line of Thebes?

Fictions in form, but in their substance
truths, 545

Tremendous truths! familiar to the men
Of long-past times, nor obsolete in ours.

Exchange the shepherd's frock of native
grey

For robes with regal purple tinged; convert

The crook into a sceptre; give the pomp
Of circumstance; and here the tragic
Muse 551

Shall find apt subjects for her highest art.
Amid the groves, under the shadowy
hills,

The generations are prepared; the pangs,
The internal pangs, are ready; the dread
strife 555

Of poor humanity's afflicted will Struggling in vain with ruthless destiny."

"Though," said the Priest in answer,
"these be terms

Which a divine philosophy rejects,
We, whose established and unailing
trust 560

Is in controlling Providence, admit That, through all stations, human life abounds

With mysteries;—for, if Faith were left untried,

How could the might, that lurks within her, then

Be shown? her glorious excellence—that ranks 565

Among the first of Powers and Virtues—
proved?

Our system is not fashioned to preclude
That sympathy which you for others ask ;
And I could tell, not travelling for my
theme

Beyond these humble graves, of grievous crimes 570

And strange disasters; but I pass them
by,

Loth to disturb what Heaven hath hushed in peace.

—Still less, far less, am I inclined to treat
Of Man degraded in his Maker's sight

By the deformities of brutish vice: 575
For, in such portraits, though a vulgar
face

And a coarse outside of repulsive life
And unaffected manners might at once Be recognised by all—"Ah! do not think,"

The Wanderer somewhat eagerly exclaimed, 580

"Wish could be ours that you, for such poor gain,

(Gain shall I call it?—gain of what?—for whom?)

Should breathe a word tending to violate Your own pure spirit. Not a step we look for

In slight of that forbearance and reserve Which common human-heartedness inspires, 586

And mortal ignorance and frailty claim,
Upon this sacred ground, if nowhere else."

"True," said the Solitary, "be it far
From us to infringe the laws of charity.

Let judgment here in mercy be pronounced; 591

This, self-respecting Nature prompts, and
this

Wisdom enjoins; but if the thing we seek Be genuine knowledge, bear we then in
mind

How, from his lofty throne, the sun can fling 595

Colours as bright on exhalations bred
By weedy pool or pestilential swamp,

As by the rivulet sparkling where it runs,
Or the pellucid lake."

"Small risk," said I,
"Of such illusion do we here incur; 600

Temptation here is none to exceed the
truth;

No evidence appears that they who rest Within this ground, were covetous of
praise,

Or of remembrance even, deserved or not.
Green is the Churchyard, beautiful and
green, 605

Ridge rising gently by the side of ridge,
A heaving surface, almost wholly free
From interruption of sepulchral stones,
And mantled o'er with aboriginal turf
And everlasting flowers. These Dalesmen
trust 610

The lingering gleam of their departed
lives

To oral record, and the silent heart;
Depositories faithful and more kind

Than fondest epitaph: for, if those fail, What boots the sculptured tomb? And who can blame, 615

Who rather would not envy, men that
feel

This mutual confidence; if, from such
source,

The practice flow,—if thence, or from a deep

And general humility in death?
Nor should I much condemn it, if it
spring 620

From disregard of time's destructive
power,

As only capable to prey on things
Of earth, and human nature's mortal part.

"Yet—in less simple districts, where
we see

Stone lift its forehead emulous of stone
In courting notice; and the ground all paved 626

With commendations of departed worth;
Reading, where'er we turn, of innocent
lives,

Of each domestic charity fulfilled,
And sufferings meekly borne—I, for my
part, 630

Though with the silence pleased that here
prevails,

Among those fair recitals also range, Soothed by the natural spirit which they breathe.

And, in the centre of a world whose soil
Is rank with all unkindness, compassed
round

With such memorials, I have sometimes
felt,

It was no momentary happiness
To have one Enclosure where the voice
that speaks

In envy or detraction is not heard ;
Which malice may not enter ; where the traces

Of evil inclinations are unknown ;
Where love and pity tenderly unite
With resignation ; and no jarring tone Intrudes, the peaceful concert to disturb Of amity and gratitude."

"Thus sanctioned,"
The Pastor said, "I willingly confine
My narratives to subjects that excite Feelings with these accordant ; love, esteem,

And admiration ; lifting up a veil,
A sunbeam introducing among hearts
Retired and covert ; so that ye shall have Clear images before your gladdened eyes
Of nature's unambitious underwood,
And flowers that prosper in the shade.

And when I speak of such among my flock as swerved

Or fell, those only shall be singled out Upon whose lapse, or error, something
more

Than brotherly forgiveness may attend ;
To such will we restrict our notice, else
Better my tongue were mute.

And yet there are,
I feel, good reasons why we should not leave

Wholly untraced a more forbidding way.
For, strength to persevere and to support,
And energy to conquer and repel—

These elements of virtue, that declare
The native grandeur of the human soul—
Are oftentimes not unprofitably shown

In the perverseness of a selfish course :
Truth every day exemplified, no less
In the grey cottage by the murmuring
stream

Than in fantastic conqueror's roving camp,
Or 'mid the factious senate unappalled

Who'er may sink, or rise—to sink again,
As merciless proscription ebbs and flows.

"There," said the Vicar, pointing as he
spake,

"A woman rests in peace ; surpassed by
few

In power of mind, and eloquent discourse.
Tall was her stature ; her complexion
dark

And saturnine ; her head not raised to
hold

Converse with heaven, nor yet deprest towards earth,

But in projection carried, as she walked
For ever musing. Sunken were her eyes ;

Wrinkled and furrowed with habitual
thought

Was her broad forehead ; like the brow
of one

Whose visual nerve shrinks from a painful glare

Of overpowering light.—While yet a
child,

She, 'mid the humble flowerets of the vale, Towered like the imperial thistle, not unfurnished

With its appropriate grace, yet rather seeking

To be admired, than coveted and loved.
Even at that age she ruled, a sovereign
queen,

Over her comrades ; else their simple
sports,

Wanting all relish for her strenuous
mind,

Had crossed her only to be shunned with
scorn.

—Oh ! pang of sorrowful regret for those Whom, in their youth, sweet study has enthralled,

That they have lived for harsher servi-
tude,

Whether in soul, in body, or estate !
Such doom was hers ; yet nothing could subdue

Her keen desire of knowledge, nor efface
Those brighter images by books imprest

Upon her memory, faithfully as stars
That occupy their places, and, though oft

Hidden by clouds, and oft bedimmed by haze,
Are not to be extinguished, nor impaired.

“Two passions, both degenerate, for they both 706

Began in honour, gradually obtained
Rule over her, and vexed her daily life;
An unremitting, avaricious thrift; 709

And a strange thralldom of maternal love,
That held her spirit, in its own despite,
Bound—by vexation, and regret, and
scorn,

Constrained forgiveness, and relenting
vows,

And tears, in pride suppressed, in shame concealed—

To a poor dissolute Son, her only child.
—Her wedded days had opened with mishap, 716

Whence dire dependence. What could she perform

To shake the burthen off? Ah! there was felt,

Indignantly, the weakness of her sex.
She mused, resolved, adhered to her resolve; 720

The hand grew slack in alms-giving, the
heart

Closed by degrees to charity; heaven's blessing

Not seeking from that source, she placed her trust

In ceaseless pains—and strictest parsimony Which sternly hoarded all that could be spared, 725

From each day's need, out of each day's least gain.

“Thus all was re-established, and a pile
Constructed, that sufficed for every end, Save the contentment of the builder's
mind;

A mind by nature indisposed to aught
So placid, so inactive, as content; 731

A mind intolerant of lasting peace,
And cherishing the pang her heart deplored.

Dread life of conflict! which I oft compared

To the agitation of a brook that runs 735

Down a rocky mountain, buried now and
lost

In silent pools, now in strong eddies chained;

But never to be charmed to gentleness:
Its best attainment fits of such repose
As timid eyes might shrink from fathom-
ing. 740

“A sudden illness seized her in the
strength

Of life's autumnal season.—Shall I tell
How on her bed of death the Matron lay,
To Providence submissive, so she thought;
But fretted, vexed, and wrought upon,
almost 745

To anger, by the malady that griped
Her prostrate frame with unrelaxing
power,

As the fierce eagle fastens on the lamb?
She prayed, she moaned;—her husband's sister watched 749

Her dreary pillow, waited on her needs;
And yet the very sound of that kind foot Was anguish to her ears! ‘And must she
rule,’

This was the death-doomed Woman heard
to say

In bitterness, ‘and must she rule and
reign,

Sole Mistress of this house, when I am
gone? 755

Tend what I tended, calling it her own!’
Enough;—I fear, too much.—One vernal
evening,

While she was yet in prime of health and
strength,

I well remember, while I passed her door
Alone, with loitering step, and upward
eye 760

Turned towards the planet Jupiter that

Above the centre of the Vale, a voice Roused me, her voice; it said, ‘That glorious star

In its untroubled element will shine
As now it shines, when we are laid in
earth 765

And safe from all our sorrows.’ With a
sigh

She spake, yet, I believe, not unsustained

By faith in glory that shall far transcend Aught by these perishable heavens disclosed

To sight or mind. Nor less than care
divine 770

Is divine mercy. She, who had rebelled, Was into meekness softened and sub-
dued ;

Did, after trials not in vain prolonged,
With resignation sink into the grave ;
And her uncharitable acts, I trust, 775
And harsh unkindnesses are all forgiven, Tho', in this Vale, remembered with deep
awe."

THE Vicar paused ; and toward a seat
advanced,

A long stone-seat, fixed in the Churchyard wall ; 779

Part shaded by cool sycamore, and part
Offering a sunny resting-place to them Who seek the House of worship, while the bells

Yet ring with all their voices, or before
The last hath ceased its solitary knoll.

Beneath the shade we all sate down ; and
there 785

His office, uninvited, he resumed.

"As on a sunny bank, a tender lamb
Lurks in safe shelter from the winds of March,

Screened by its parent, so that little mound

Lies guarded by its neighbour ; the small heap 790

Speaks for itself ; an Infant there doth
rest ;

The sheltering hillock is the Mother's
grave.

If mild discourse, and manners that conferred

A natural dignity on humblest rank ;
If gladsome spirits, and benignant looks,

That for a face not beautiful did more Than beauty for the fairest face can do ;

And if religious tenderness of heart,
Grieving for sin, and penitential tears

Shed when the clouds had gathered and distained 800

The spotless ether of a maiden life ;
If these may make a hallowed spot of
earth

More holy in the sight of God or Man ; Then, o'er that mould, a sanctity shall

brood 804
Till the stars sicken at the day of doom.

"Ah ! what a warning for a thoughtless
man,

Could field or grove, could any spot of
earth,

Show to his eye an image of the pangs
Which it hath witnessed ; render back an echo

Of the sad steps by which it hath been
trod ! 810

There, by her innocent Baby's precious
grave,

And on the very turf that roofs her own,
The Mother oft was seen to stand, or kneel

In the broad day, a weeping Magdalene.
Now she is not ; the swelling turf reports

Of the fresh shower, but of poor Ellen's
tears 816

Is silent ; nor is any vestige left

Of the path worn by mournful tread of her
Who, at her heart's light bidding, once had moved

In virgin fearlessness, with step that seemed 820

Caught from the pressure of elastic turf
Upon the mountains gemmed with morning dew,

In the prime hour of sweetest scents and airs.

—Serious and thoughtful was her mind ;
and yet,

By reconcilment exquisite and rare, 825
The form, port, motions, of this Cottage-
girl

Were such as might have quickened and inspired

A Titian's hand, addrest to picture forth Oread or Dryad glancing through the
shade

What time the hunter's earliest horn is
heard 830

Startling the golden hills.

A wide-spread elm

Stands in our valley, named THE JOYFUL
TREE;

From dateless usage which our peasants
hold

Of giving welcome to the first of May

By dances round its trunk.—And if the
sky 835

Permit, like honours, dance and song, are paid

To the Twelfth Night, beneath the frosty
stars

Or the clear moon. The queen of these gay sports,

If not in beauty yet in sprightly air,
Was hapless Ellen.—No one touched the
ground 840

So deftly, and the nicest maiden's locks Less gracefully were braided;—but this
praise,

Methinks, would better suit another
place.

“She loved, and fondly deemed herself beloved.

—The road is dim, the current unper-
ceived, 845

The weakness painful and most pitiful,
By which a virtuous woman, in pure
youth,

May be delivered to distress and shame.
Such fate was hers.—The last time Ellen danced,

Among her equals, round THE JOYFUL
TREE, 850

She bore a secret burthen; and full soon
Was left to tremble for a breaking vow,—
Then, to bewail a sternly-broken vow, Alone, within her widowed Mother's house.

It was the season of unfolding leaves, 855
Of days advancing toward their utmost
length,

And small birds singing happily to mates
Happy as they. With spirit-saddening
power

Winds pipe through fading woods; but those blithe notes 859

Strike the deserted to the heart; I speak
Of what I know, and what we feel within.

—Beside the cottage in which Ellen dwelt

Stands a tall ash-tree; to whose topmost twig

A thrush resorts, and annually chants,
At morn and evening from that naked
perch, 865

While all the undergrove is thick with
leaves,

A time-beguiling ditty, for delight
Of his fond partner, silent in the nest.

—‘Ah why,’ said Ellen, sighing to her-
self,

‘Why do not words, and kiss, and solemn pledge, 870

And nature that is kind in woman's
breast,

And reason that in man is wise and good,
And fear of him who is a righteous judge;

Why do not these prevail for human life,
To keep two hearts together, that began Their spring-time with one love, and that have need 876

Of mutual pity and forgiveness, sweet
To grant, or be received; while that poor
bird—

O come and hear him! Thou who hast to
me

Been faithless, hear him, though a lowly creature, 880

One of God's simple children that yet know not

The universal Parent, how he sings
As if he wished the firmament of heaven Should listen, and give back to him the
voice

Of his triumphant constancy and love;
The proclamation that he makes, how far 886

His darkness doth transcend our fickle
light!

“Such was the tender passage, not by
me

Repeated without loss of simple phrase, Which I perused, even as the words had
been 890

Committed by forsaken Ellen's hand
To the blank margin of a Valentine, Bedropped with tears. 'Twill please you to be told

That, studiously withdrawing from the
eye 894

Of all companionship, the Sufferer yet
 In lonely reading found a meek resource :
 How thankful for the warmth of summer
 days,
 When she could slip into the cottage-
 barn,
 And find a secret oratory there ;
 Or, in the garden, under friendly veil 900
 Of their long twilight, pore upon her book

By the last lingering help of the open sky
 Until dark night dismissed her to her bed !

Thus did a waking fancy sometimes lose
 The unconquerable pang of despised love.

“A kindlier passion opened on her soul When that poor Child was born. Upon its face

She gazed as on a pure and spotless gift
 Of unexpected promise, where a grief
 Or dread was all that had been thought of,—joy 910
 Far livelier than bewildered traveller
 feels,

Amid a perilous waste that all night long Hath harassed him toiling through fearful storm,

When he beholds the first pale speck
 serene

Of day-spring, in the gloomy east, revealed, 915

And greets it with thanksgiving. ‘Till
 this hour,’

Thus, in her Mother’s hearing Ellen
 spake,

‘There was a stony region in my heart ;
 But He, at whose command the parchèd
 rock

Was smitten, and poured forth a quen-ching stream, 920

Hath softened that obduracy, and made
 Unlooked-for gladness in the desert place,
 To save the perishing ; and, henceforth, I breathe

The air with cheerful spirit, for thy sake,
 My Infant ! and for that good Mother
 dear, 925

Who bore me ; and hath prayed for me
 in vain ;—

Yet not in vain ; it shall not be in vain.’

She spake, nor was the assurance unfulfilled ;

And if heart-rending thoughts would oft
 return,

They stayed not long.—The blameless
 Infant grew ; 930

The Child whom Ellen and her Mother
 loved

They soon were proud of ; tended it and nursed ;

A soothing comforter, although forlorn ;
 Like a poor singing-bird from distant
 lands ;

Or a choice shrub, which he, who passes by
 With vacant mind, not seldom may observe 936

Fair-flowering in a thinly-peopled house, Whose window, somewhat sadly, it adorns.

“Through four months’ space the Infant drew its food

From the maternal breast ; then scruples
 rose ; 940

Thoughts, which the rich are free from, came and crossed

The fond affection. She no more could
 bear

By her offence to lay a twofold weight
 On a kind parent willing to forget

Their slender means : so, to that parent’s
 care 945

Trusting her child, she left their common
 home,

And undertook with dutiful content
 A Foster-mother’s office.

’Tis, perchance,
 Unknown to you that in these simple
 vales

The natural feeling of equality 950
 Is by domestic service unimpaired ;

Yet, though such service be, with us,
 removed

From sense of degradation, not the less
 The ungentle mind can easily find means

To impose severe restraints and laws
 unjust, 955

Which hapless Ellen now was doomed to
 feel :

For (blinded by an over-anxious dread
 Of such excitement and divided thought

As with her office would but ill accord)
 The pair, whose infant she was bound to nurse, 960
 Forbad her all communion with her own :
 Week after week, the mandate they enforced.
 —So near! yet not allowed upon that
 sight
 To fix her eyes—alas! 'twas hard to bear!
 But worse affliction must be borne—far worse; 965
 For 'tis Heaven's will—that, after a disease
 Begun and ended within three days' space,
 Her child should die; as Ellen now exclaimed,
 Her own—deserted child!—Once, only
 once,
 She saw it in that mortal malady; 970
 And, on the burial-day, could scarcely gain Permission to attend its obsequies.
 She reached the house, last of the funeral
 train;
 And some one, as she entered, having chanced
 To urge unthinkingly their prompt departure, 975
 'Nay,' said she, with commanding look,
 a spirit
 Of anger never seen in her before,
 'Nay, ye must wait my time!' and down
 she sate,
 And by the unclosed coffin kept her seat Weeping and looking, looking on and weeping, 980
 Upon the last sweet slumber of her Child,
 Until at length her soul was satisfied.

“You see the Infant's Grave; and to this spot,
 The Mother, oft as she was sent abroad,
 On whatsoever errand, urged her steps :
 Hither she came; here stood, and sometimes knelt 986
 In the broad day, a rueful Magdalene!
 So call her; for not only she bewailed
 A mother's loss, but mourned in bitter-
 ness
 Her own transgression; penitent sincere
 As ever raised to heaven a streaming eye!
 —At length the parents of the foster-
 child, 992

Noting that in despite of their commands
 She still renewed and could not but renew Those visitations, ceased to send her
 forth; 995
 Or, to the garden's narrow bounds, confined.
 I failed not to remind them that they erred;
 For holy Nature might not thus be crossed,
 Thus wronged in woman's breast: in vain
 I pleaded—
 But the green stalk of Ellen's life was snapped, 1000
 And the flower drooped; as every eye
 could see,
 It hung its head in mortal languishment.
 —Aided by this appearance, I at length Prevailed; and, from those bonds released, she went Home to her mother's house.
 The Youth was fled;
 The rash betrayer could not face the
 shame 1006
 Or sorrow which his senseless guilt had caused;
 And little would his presence, or proof
 given
 Of a relenting soul, have now availed;
 For, like a shadow, he was passed away From Ellen's thoughts; had perished to her mind 1011
 For all concerns of fear, or hope, or love, Save only those which to their common
 shame,
 And to his moral being appertained:
 Hope from that quarter would, I know, have brought 1015
 A heavenly comfort; there she recognised
 An unrelaxing bond, a mutual need;
 There, and, as seemed, there only.
 She had built,
 Her fond maternal heart had built, a nest
 In blindness all too near the river's edge;
 That work a summer flood with hasty
 swell 1021
 Had swept away; and now her Spirit longed
 For its last flight to heaven's security.
 —The bodily frame wasted from day to
 day;

Meanwhile, relinquishing all other cares,
Her mind she strictly tutored to find
peace 1026

And pleasure in endurance. Much she
thought,

And much she read; and brooded feelingly

Upon her own unworthiness. To me,
As to a spiritual comforter and friend,
Her heart she opened; and no pains were
spared 1031

To mitigate, as gently as I could,
The sting of self-reproach, with healing
words.

Meek Saint! through patience glorified
on earth!

In whom, as by her lonely hearth she
sate, 1035

The ghastly face of cold decay put on
A sun-like beauty, and appeared divine!
May I not mention—that, within those
walls,

In due observance of her pious wish,
The congregation joined with me in
prayer 1040

For her soul's good? Nor was that office
vain.

—Much did she suffer: but, if any friend,
Beholding her condition, at the sight

Give way to words of pity or complaint,
She stilled them with a prompt reproof, and said, 1045

'He who afflicts me knows what I can
bear;

And, when I fail, and can endure no
more,

Will mercifully take me to himself.'
So, through the cloud of death, her Spirit

passed
Into that pure and unknown world of
love 1050

Where injury cannot come:—and here is
laid

The mortal Body by her Infant's side."

The Vicar ceased; and downcast looks
made known

That each had listened with his inmost
heart.

For me, the emotion scarcely was less
strong 1055

Or less benign than that which I had felt
When seated near my venerable Friend, Under those shady elms, from him I
heard

The story that retraced the slow decline
Of Margaret, sinking on the lonely heath With the neglected house to which she clung. 1061

—I noted that the Solitary's cheek Confessed the power of nature.—Pleased though sad,

More pleased than sad, the grey-haired Wanderer sate;

Thanks to his pure imaginative soul 1065
Capacious and serene; his blameless life,
His knowledge, wisdom, love of truth,
and love

Of human kind! He was it who first broke

The pensive silence, saying:—
"Blest are they

Whose sorrow rather is to suffer wrong Than to do wrong, albeit themselves have erred. 1071

This tale gives proof that Heaven most gently deals

With such, in their affliction.—Ellen's
fate,

Her tender spirit, and her contrite heart, Call to my mind dark hints which I have
heard 1075

Of one who died within this vale, by doom
Heavier, as his offence was heavier far.

Where, Sir, I pray you, where are laid the bones

Of Wilfred Armathwaite?"
The Vicar answered,

"In that green nook, close by the Churchyard wall, 1080

Beneath yon hawthorn, planted by myself
In memory and for warning, and in sign

Of sweetness where dire anguish had been
known,

Of reconciliation after deep offence—
There doth he rest. No theme his fate supplies 1085

For the smooth glozings of the indulgent
world;

Nor need the windings of his devious
course

Be here retraced;—enough that, by mishap

Sparry and bright, rough scatterings of
 the hills. 1155
 These ornaments, that fade not with the
 year,
 A hardy Girl continues to provide;
 Who, mounting fearlessly the rocky
 heights,
 Her Father's prompt attendant, does for
 him
 All that a boy could do, but with delight
 More keen and prouder daring; yet hath
 she, 1161
 Within the garden, like the rest, a bed
 For her own flowers and favourite herbs,
 a space,
 By sacred charter, holden for her use.
 —These, and whatever else the garden bears 1165
 Of fruit or flower, permission asked or not,
 I freely gather; and my leisure draws
 A not unfrequent pastime from the hum
 Of bees around their range of sheltered hives
 Busy in that enclosure; while the rill,
 That sparkling thrids the rocks, attunes
 his voice 1171
 To the pure course of human life which
 there Flows on in solitude. But, when the
 gloom

Of night is falling round my steps, then
 most
 This Dwelling charms me; often I stop
 short, 1175
 (Who could refrain?) and feed by stealth
 my sight
 With prospect of the company within,
 Laid open through the blazing window:—
 there
 I see the eldest Daughter at her wheel
 Spinning amain, as if to overtake 1180
 The never-halting time; or, in her turn,
 Teaching some Novice of the sisterhood
 That skill in this or other household
 work,
 Which, from her Father's honoured hand,
 herself,
 While she was yet a little-one, had
 learned. 1185
 Mild Man! he is not gay, but they are
 gay;
 And the whole house seems filled with gaiety.
 —Thrice happy, then, the Mother may be deemed,
 The Wife, from whose consolatory grave
 I turned, that ye in mind might witness
 where, 1190
 And how, her Spirit yet survives on earth!"

BOOK SEVENTH.

THE CHURCHYARD AMONG THE MOUNTAINS.—(CONTINUED).

Impression of these Narratives upon the Author's mind.—Pastor invited to give account of certain Graves that lie apart.—Clergyman and his Family.—Fortunate influence of change of situation.—Activity in extreme old age.—Another Clergyman, a character of resolute Virtue.—Lamentations over mis-directed applause.—Instance of less exalted excellence in a deaf man.—Elevated character of a blind man.—Reflection upon Blindness.—Interrupted by a Peasant who passes—his animal cheerfulness and careless vivacity.—He occasions a digression on the fall of beautiful and interesting Trees.—A female Infant's Grave.—Joy at her Birth.—Sorrow at her Departure.—A youthful Peasant—his patriotic enthusiasm and distinguished qualities—his untimely death.—Exultation of the Wanderer, as a patriot, in this Picture.—Solitary how affected.—Monument of a Knight.—Traditions concerning him.—Peroration of the Wanderer on the transitoriness of things and the revolutions of society.—Hints at his own past Calling.—Thanks the Pastor.

WHILE thus from theme to theme the Historian passed, The words he uttered, and the scene that lay Before our eyes, awakened in my mind Vivid remembrance of those long-past hours; When, in the hollow of some shadowy vale, 5 (What time the splendour of the setting sun Lay beautiful on Snowdon's sovereign brow, On Cader Idris, or huge Penmanmaur) A wandering Youth, I listened with de- light To pastoral melody or warlike air, 10 Drawn from the chords of the ancient British harp By some accomplished Master, while he sate Amid the quiet of the green recess, And there did inexhaustibly dispense An interchange of soft or solemn tunes, 15	Tender or blithe; now, as the varying mood Of his own spirit urged,—now, as a voice From youth or maiden, or some honoured chief Of his compatriot villagers (that hung Around him, drinking in the impassioned notes 20 Of the time-hallowed minstrelsy) required For their heart's ease or pleasure. Strains of power Were they, to seize and occupy the sense; But to a higher mark than song can reach Rose this pure eloquence. And, when the stream 25 Which overflowed the soul was passed away, A consciousness remained that it had left, Deposited upon the silent shore Of memory, images and precious thoughts, That shall not die, and cannot be de- stroyed. 30 “These grassy heaps lie amicably close,”

Said I, "like surges heaving in the wind
 Along the surface of a mountain pool:
 Whence comes it, then, that yonder we
 behold
 Five graves, and only five, that rise together 35
 Unsociably sequestered, and encroaching
 On the smooth playground of the village-
 school?"

The Vicar answered,—“No disdainful
 pride
 In them who rest beneath, nor any course
 Of strange or tragic accident, hath helped To place those hillocks in that lonely
 guise. 41
 —Once more look forth, and follow with your sight
 The length of road that from yon mountain's base
 Through bare enclosures stretches, 'till its line
 Is lost within a little tuft of trees; 45
 Then, reappearing in a moment, quits
 The cultured fields; and up the heathy
 waste,
 Mounts, as you see, in mazes serpentine,
 Led towards an easy outlet of the vale.
 That little shady spot, that sylvan tuft, 50
 By which the road is hidden, also hides
 A cottage from our view; though I discern (Ye scarcely can) amid its sheltering trees
 The smokeless chimney-top.—

All unembowered
 And naked stood that lowly Parsonage 55
 (For such in truth it is, and appertains
 To a small Chapel in the vale beyond)
 When hither came its last Inhabitant.
 Rough and forbidding were the choicest roads
 By which our northern wilds could then be crossed; 60
 And into most of these secluded vales
 Was no access for wain, heavy or light.
 So, at his dwelling-place the Priest arrived
 With store of household goods, in panniers slung
 On sturdy horses graced with jingling
 bells, 65
 And on the back of more ignoble beast;

That, with like burthen of effects most prized
 Or easiest carried, closed the motley train.
 Young was I then, a schoolboy of eight
 years;
 But still, methinks, I see them as they
 passed 70
 In order, drawing toward their wished-for home.
 —Rocked by the motion of a trusty ass
 Two ruddy children hung, a well-poised
 freight,
 Each in his basket nodding drowsily;
 Their bonnets, I remember, wreathed with
 flowers, 75
 Which told it was the pleasant month of June;
 And, close behind, the comely Matron rode,
 A woman of soft speech and gracious
 smile,
 And with a lady's mien.—From far they
 came,
 Even from Northumbrian hills; yet theirs
 had been 80
 A merry journey, rich in pastime, cheered
 By music, prank, and laughter-stirring jest;
 And freak put on, and arch word dropped—to swell
 The cloud of fancy and uncouth surmise
 That gathered round the slowly-moving
 train. 85
 —‘Whence do they come? and with what errand charged?
 Belong they to the fortune-telling tribe
 Who pitch their tents under the greenwood tree?
 Or Strollers are they, furnished to enact Fair Rosamond, and the Children of the
 Wood, 90
 And, by that whiskered tabby's aid, set
 forth
 The lucky venture of sage Whittington,
 When the next village hears the show announced
 By blast of trumpet?’ Plenteous was the growth
 Of such conjectures, overheard, or seen 95
 On many a staring countenance portrayed
 Of boor or burgher, as they marched along.

And more than once their steadiness of
face
Was put to proof, and exercise supplied
To their inventive humour, by stern looks,
And questions in authoritative tone, 101
From some staid guardian of the public
peace,
Checking the sober steed on which he rode,
In his suspicious wisdom; oftener still,
By notice indirect, or blunt demand 105
From traveller halting in his own despite,
A simple curiosity to ease:
Of which adventures, that beguiled and
cheered
Their grave migration, the good pair would tell,
With undiminished glee, in hoary age. 110

“A Priest he was by function; but his
course
From his youth up, and high as man-hood's noon,
(The hour of life to which he then was brought)
Had been irregular, I might say, wild;
By books unsteadied, by his pastoral care Too little checked. An active, ardent
mind; 116
A fancy pregnant with resource and scheme
To cheat the sadness of a rainy day;
Hands apt for all ingenious arts and
games;
A generous spirit, and a body strong 120
To cope with stoutest champions of the bowl;
Had earned for him sure welcome, and the rights
Of a prized visitant, in the jolly hall
Of country 'squire; or at the statelier
board
Of duke or earl, from scenes of courtly
pomp 125
Withdrawn,—to while away the summer
hours
In condescension among rural guests.

“With these high comrades he had revelled long,
Frolicked industriously, a simple Clerk

By hopes of coming patronage beguiled Till the heart sickened. So, each loftier
aim 131
Abandoning and all his showy friends,
For a life's stay (slender it was, but sure)
He turned to this secluded chapelry;
That had been offered to his doubtful
choice 135
By an unthought-of patron. Bleak and
bare
They found the cottage, their allotted
home;
Naked without, and rude within; a spot
With which the Cure not long had been endowed:
And far remote the chapel stood,—remote, 140
And, from his Dwelling, unapproachable, Save through a gap high in the hills, an opening Shadeless and shelterless, by driving
showers
Frequented, and beset with howling
winds.
Yet cause was none, whate'er regret might hang 145
On his own mind, to quarrel with the choice
Or the necessity that fixed him here;
Apart from old temptations, and constrained
To punctual labour in his sacred charge.
See him a constant preacher to the poor!
And visiting, though not with saintly
zeal, 151
Yet, when need was, with no reluctant
will,
The sick in body, or distress in mind;
And, by as salutary change, compelled To rise from timely sleep, and meet the
day 155
With no engagement, in his thoughts, more proud
Or splendid than his garden could afford,
His fields, or mountains by the heath-cock ranged,
Or the wild brooks; from which he now
returned
Contented to partake the quiet meal 160
Of his own board, where sat his gentle
Mate

And three fair Children, plentifully fed Though simply, from their little household farm;

Nor wanted timely treat of fish or fowl
By nature yielded to his practised
hand;— 165

To help the small but certain comings-in
Of that spare benefice. Yet not the less Theirs was a hospitable board, and theirs
A charitable door.

So days and years
Passed on;—the inside of that rugged
house 170

Was trimmed and brightened by the Matron's care,
And gradually enriched with things of price,

Which might be lacked for use or ornament.

What, though no soft and costly sofa
there

Insidiously stretched out its lazy length,
And no vain mirror glittered upon the
walls, 176

Yet were the windows of the low abode
By shutters weather-fended, which at
once

Repelled the storm and deadened its loud
roar.

Their snow-white curtains hung in decent folds; 180

Tough moss, and long-enduring mountain-plants,

That creep along the ground with sinuous trail,

Were nicely braided; and composed a work

Like Indian mats, that with appropriate
grace

Lay at the threshold and the inner doors;
And a fair carpet, woven of homespun
wool 186

But tintured daintily with florid hues,
For seemliness and warmth, on festal
days,

Covered the smooth blue slabs of mountain-stone

With which the parlour-floor, in simplest
guise 190

Of pastoral homesteads, had been long inlaid.

“Those pleasing works the Housewife's skill produced:

Meanwhile the unsedentary Master's hand
Was busier with his task—to rid, to plant,
To rear for food, for shelter, and delight;
A thriving covert! And when wishes,
formed 196

In youth, and sanctioned by the riper
mind,

Restored me to my native valley, here
To end my days; well pleased was I to
see

The once-bare cottage, on the mountain-
side, 200

Screen'd from assault of every bitter
blast;

While the dark shadows of the summer
leaves

Danced in the breeze, chequering its mossy roof.

Time, which had thus afforded willing help

To beautify with nature's fairest growths
This rustic tenement, had gently shed, 206
Upon its Master's frame, a wintry grace;
The comeliness of unenfeebled age.

“But how could I say, gently? for he
still

Retained a flashing eye, a burning palm,
A stirring foot, a head which beat at
nights 211

Upon its pillow with a thousand schemes.
Few likings had he dropped, few pleasures lost;

Generous and charitable, prompt to serve;
And still his harsher passions kept their
hold— 215

Anger and indignation. Still he loved The sound of titled names, and talked in glee

Of long-past banquetings with high-born
friends:

Then, from those lulling fits of vain de-
light 219

Uproused by recollected injury, railed
At their false ways disdainfully,—and oft
In bitterness, and with a threatening eye
Of fire, incensed beneath its hoary brow.

—Those transports, with staid looks of pure good-will,

And with soft smile, his consort would
reprove. 225

She, far behind him in the race of years,
Yet keeping her first mildness, was advanced

Far nearer, in the habit of her soul,
To that still region whither all are bound.
Him might we liken to the setting sun 230
As seen not seldom on some gusty day, Struggling and bold, and shining from
the west

With an inconstant and unmellowed
light;

She was a soft attendant cloud, that hung
As if with wish to veil the restless orb;
From which it did itself imbibe a ray 236

Of pleasing lustre.—But no more of this;
I better love to sprinkle on the sod
That now divides the pair, or rather say,
That still unites them, praises, like heaven's dew, 240
Without reserve descending upon both.

“Our very first in eminence of years
This old Man stood, the patriarch of the
Vale!

And, to his unmolested mansion, death
Had never come, through space of forty years; 245
Sparing both old and young in that
abode.

Suddenly then they disappeared: not twice

Had summer scorched the fields; not twice had fallen,

On those high peaks, the first autumnal
snow,

Before the greedy visiting was closed, 250
And the long-privileged house left empty
—swept

As by a plague. Yet no rapacious plague
Had been among them; all was gentle
death,

One after one, with intervals of peace.
A happy consummation! an accord 255
Sweet, perfect, to be wished for! save that here

Was something which to mortal sense might sound

Like harshness,—that the old grey-headed Sire,

The oldest, he was taken last, survived
When the meek Partner of his age, his Son,
His Daughter, and that late and high-prized gift, 261
His little smiling Grandchild, were no
more.

“All gone, all vanished! he deprived and bare,

How will he face the remnant of his life?
‘What will become of him?’ we said, and mused 265

In sad conjectures—‘Shall we meet him
now

Haunting with rod and line the craggy
brooks?

Or shall we overhear him, as we pass,
Striving to entertain the lonely hours With music?’ (for he had not ceased to touch 270

The harp or viol which himself had framed,

For their sweet purposes, with perfect
skill.)

‘What titles will he keep? will he remain
Musician, gardener, builder, mechanist,
A planter, and a rearer from the seed? 275
A man of hope and forward-looking mind
Even to the last!’—Such was he, unsubdued.

But Heaven was gracious; yet a little while,

And this Survivor, with his cheerful
throng

Of open projects, and his inward hoard
Of sunned griefs, too many and too
keen, 281

Was overcome by unexpected sleep,
In one blest moment. Like a shadow
thrown

Softly and lightly from a passing cloud, Death fell upon him, while reclined he
lay 285

For noontide solace on the summer grass,
The warm lap of his mother earth: and so,
Their lenient term of separation past,
That family (whose graves you there behold)

By yet a higher privilege once more 290
Were gathered to each other.”

Calm of mind

And silence waited on these closing words ;
 Until the Wanderer (whether moved by fear Lest in those passages of life were some That might have touched the sick heart of his Friend 295
 Too nearly, or intent to reinforce
 His own firm spirit in degree deprest
 By tender sorrow for our mortal state) Thus silence broke :—"Behold a thoughtless Man
 From vice and premature decay preserved 300
 By useful habits, to a fitter soil Transplanted ere too late.—The hermit, lodged
 Amid the untrodden desert, tells his beads,
 With each repeating its allotted prayer,
 And thus divides and thus relieves the
 time ; 305
 Smooth task, with his compared, whose mind could string,
 Not scantily, bright minutes on the thread
 Of keen domestic anguish ; and beguile
 A solitude, unchosen, unprofessed ;
 Till gentlest death released him.
 Far from us
 Be the desire—too curiously to ask 311
 How much of this is but the blind result
 Of cordial spirits and vital temperament,
 And what to higher powers is justly
 due.
 But you, Sir, know that in a neighbouring
 vale 315
 A Priest abides before whose life such doubts
 Fall to the ground ; whose gifts of nature
 lie
 Retired from notice, lost in attributes
 Of reason, honourably effaced by debts
 Which her poor treasure-house is content to owe, 320
 And conquests over her dominion gained,
 To which her frowardness must needs submit.
 In this one Man is shown a temperance—proof

Against all trials ; industry severe
 And constant as the motion of the day ;
 Stern self-denial round him spread, with
 shade 326
 That might be deemed forbidding, did not there
 All generous feelings flourish and rejoice ;
 Forbearance, charity in deed and thought,
 And resolution competent to take 330
 Out of the bosom of simplicity
 All that her holy customs recommend,
 And the best ages of the world prescribe.
 —Preaching, administering, in every work
 Of his sublime vocation, in the walks 335
 Of worldly intercourse between man and
 man,
 And in his humble dwelling, he appears
 A labourer, with moral virtue girt,
 With spiritual graces, like a glory,
 crowned."
 "Doubt can be none," the Pastor said,
 "for whom 340
 This portraiture is sketched. The great,
 the good,
 The well-beloved, the fortunate, the
 wise,—
 These titles emperors and chiefs have
 borne,
 Honour assumed or given : and him, the WONDERFUL,
 Our simple shepherds, speaking from the
 heart, 345
 Deservedly have styled.—From his abode
 In a dependent chapelry that lies Behind yon hill, a poor and rugged wild,
 Which in his soul he lovingly embraced,
 And, having once espoused, would never quit ; 350
 Into its graveyard will ere long be borne That lowly, great, good Man. A simple
 stone
 May cover him ; and by its help, per-
 chance,
 A century shall hear his name pronounced,
 With images attendant on the sound ; 355
 Then, shall the slowly-gathering twilight
 close
 In utter night ; and of his course remain
 No cognizable vestiges, no more

Than of this breath, which shapes itself in words
To speak of him, and instantly dissolves." 360

The Pastor pressed by thoughts which round his theme Still linger'd, after a brief pause, resumed;
"Noise is there not enough in doleful
war;
But that the heaven-born poet must stand
forth,
And lend the echoes of his sacred shell,
To multiply and aggravate the din? 366
Paings are there not enough in hopeless
love—

And, in requited passion, all too much
Of turbulence, anxiety, and fear— 369
But that the minstrel of the rural shade
Must tune his pipe, insidiously to nurse
The perturbation in the suffering breast,
And propagate its kind, far as he may?
—Ah who (and with such rapture as befits
The hallowed theme) will rise and celebrate 375

The good man's purposes and deeds;
retrace
His struggles, his discomfitures deplore,
His triumphs hail, and glorify his end;
That virtue, like the fumes and vapoury
clouds

Through fancy's heat redounding in the brain, 380
And like the soft infections of the heart,
By charm of measured words may spread o'er field,

Hamlet, and town; and piety survive
Upon the lips of men in hall or bower;
Not for reproof, but high and warm
delight, 385
And grave encouragement, by song inspired?

—Vain thought! but wherefore murmur or repine?
The memory of the just survives in
heaven:

And, without sorrow, will the ground
receive 389
That venerable clay. Meanwhile the best
Of what lies here confines us to degrees
In excellence less difficult to reach,

And milder worth: nor need we travel far From those to whom our last regards were paid,
For such example.

Almost at the root
Of that tall pine, the shadow of whose
bare 396
And slender stem, while here I sit at eve, Oft stretches toward me, like a long straight path

Traced faintly in the greensward; there,
beneath
A plain blue stone, a gentle Dalesman
lies, 400
From whom, in early childhood, was withdrawn

The precious gift of hearing. He grew up
From year to year in loneliness of soul;
And this deep mountain-valley was to him Soundless, with all its streams. The bird of dawn 405

Did never rouse this Cottager from sleep
With startling summons; not for his
delight

The vernal cuckoo shouted; not for him Murmured the labouring bee. When stormy winds

Were working the broad bosom of the lake 410
Into a thousand thousand sparkling
waves,

Rocking the trees, or driving cloud on
cloud

Along the sharp edge of yon lofty crags,
The agitated scene before his eye
Was silent as a picture: evermore 415 Were all things silent, wheresoe'er he
moved.

Yet, by the solace of his own pure
thoughts
Upheld, he duteously pursued the round
Of rural labours; the steep mountain-side Ascended, with his staff and faithful dog; 420

The plough he guided, and the scythe he
swayed;

And the ripe corn before his sickle fell
Among the jocund reapers. For himself,
All watchful and industrious as he was,
He wrought not: neither field nor flock
he owned: 425

No wish for wealth had place within his
mind ;
Nor husband's love, nor father's hope or
care.

“Though born a younger brother, need was none

That from the floor of his paternal home
He should depart, to plant himself anew.
And when, mature in manhood, he be-
held 431

His parents laid in earth, no loss ensued
Of rights to him ; but he remained well
pleased,

By the pure bond of independent love,
An inmate of a second family ; 435
The fellow-labourer and friend of him
To whom the small inheritance had fallen.
—Nor deem that his mild presence was a
weight

That pressed upon his brother's house ;
for books

Were ready comrades whom he could not tire ; 440

Of whose society the blameless Man
Was never satiate. Their familiar voice,
Even to old age, with unabated charm Beguiled his leisure hours ; refreshed his
thoughts ;

Beyond its natural elevation raised 445
His introverted spirit ; and bestowed Upon his life an outward dignity Which all acknowledged. The dark winter night,

The stormy day, each had its own resource ;

Song of the muses, sage historic tale, 450
Science severe, or word of holy Writ
Announcing immortality and joy
To the assembled spirits of just men Made perfect, and from injury secure.

—Thus soothed at home, thus busy in the
field, 455

To no perverse suspicion he gave way,
No languor, peevishness, nor vain complaint :

And they, who were about him, did not
fail

In reverence, or in courtesy ; they prized
His gentle manners : and his peaceful
smiles, 460

The gleams of his slow-varying countenance,
Were met with answering sympathy and
love.

“At length, when sixty years and five were told,

A slow disease insensibly consumed
The powers of nature : and a few short
steps 465

Of friends and kindred bore him from his
home

(Yon cottage shaded by the woody crags)
To the profounder stillness of the grave.

—Nor was his funeral denied the grace
Of many tears, virtuous and thoughtful
grief ; 470

Heart-sorrow rendered sweet by gratitude.
And now that monumental stone preserves

His name, and unambitiously relates How long, and by what kindly outward aids, 474

And in what pure contentedness of mind,
The sad privation was by him endured.

—And yon tall pine-tree, whose composing
sound

Was wasted on the good Man's living ear,
Hath now its own peculiar sanctity ;
And, at the touch of every wandering
breeze, 480

Murmurs, not idly, o'er his peaceful grave.

“Soul-cheering Light, most bountiful of things !

Guide of our way, mysterious comforter !
Whose sacred influence, spread through earth and heaven,

We all too thanklessly participate, 485
Thy gifts were utterly withheld from him Whose place of rest is near yon ivied porch.

Yet, of the wild brooks ask if he complained ;

Ask of the channelled rivers if they held
A safer, easier, more determined, course.
What terror doth it strike into the mind
To think of one, blind and alone, advancing 492

Straight toward some precipice's airy
brink !

But, timely warned, He would have stayed his steps,
 Protected, say enlightened, by his ear;
 And on the very edge of vacancy 496
 Not more endangered than a man whose
 eye
 Beholds the gulf beneath.—No floweret
 blooms
 Throughout the lofty range of these rough
 hills,
 Nor in the woods, that could from him conceal 500
 Its birthplace; none whose figure did not live Upon his touch. The bowels of the earth
 Enriched with knowledge his industrious
 mind;
 The ocean paid him tribute from the stores
 Lodged in her bosom; and, by science
 led, 505
 His genius mounted to the plains of
 heaven.
 —Methinks I see him—how his eye-balls
 rolled,
 Beneath his ample brow, in darkness
 paired,—
 But each instinct with spirit; and the
 frame
 Of the whole countenance alive with
 thought, 510
 Fancy, and understanding; while the
 voice
 Discoursed of natural or moral truth
 With eloquence, and such authentic
 power,
 That, in his presence, humbler knowledge
 stood Abashed, and tender pity overawed." 515

"A noble—and, to unreflecting minds,
 A marvellous spectacle," the Wanderer
 said,
 "Beings like these present! But proof
 abounds
 Upon the earth that faculties, which seem Extinguished, do not, therefore, cease
 to be. 520
 And to the mind among her powers of
 sense

This transfer is permitted,—not alone
 That the bereft their recompense may win;
 But for remoter purposes of love
 And charity; nor last nor least for
 this, 525
 That to the imagination may be given
 A type and shadow of an awful truth;
 How, likewise, under sufferance divine, Darkness is banished from the realms of
 death,
 By man's imperishable spirit, quelled. 530
 Unto the men who see not as we see Futurity was thought, in ancient times,
 To be laid open, and they prophesied.
 And know we not that from the blind have flowed
 The highest, holiest, raptures of the
 lyre; 535
 And wisdom married to immortal verse?"

Among the humbler Worthies, at our
 feet
 Lying insensible to human praise, Love, or regret,—whose lineaments would next
 Have been portrayed, I guess not; but it chanced 540
 That, near the quiet churchyard where we sat,
 A team of horses, with a ponderous freight Pressing behind, adown a rugged slope, Whose sharp descent confounded their
 array,
 Came at that moment, ringing noisily. 545

"Here," said the Pastor, "do we muse,
 and mourn
 The waste of death; and lo! the giant oak Stretched on his bier—that massy timber
 wain;
 Nor fail to note the Man who guides the team."

He was a peasant of the lowest class: 550
 Grey locks profusely round his temples
 hung
 In clustering curls, like ivy, which the bite
 Of winter cannot thin; the fresh air lodged

Within his cheek, as light within a cloud ;
And he returned our greeting with a
smile. 555

When he had passed, the Solitary spake ;
"A Man he seems of cheerful yesterdays
And confident to-morrows ; with a face
Not worldly-minded, for it bears too much
Of Nature's impress,—gaiety and health, Freedom and hope ; but keen, withal, and shrewd. 561
His gestures note,—and hark ! his tones
of voice
Are all vivacious as his mien and looks."

The Pastor answered, "You have read him well.

Year after year is added to his store 565
With silent increase : summers, winters—
past,

Past or to come ; yea, boldly might I say,
Ten summers and ten winters of a space
That lies beyond life's ordinary bounds,
Upon his sprightly vigour cannot fix 570
The obligation of an anxious mind,
A pride in having, or a fear to lose ;
Possessed like outskirts of some large
domain,

By any one more thought of than by him
Who holds the land in fee, its careless
lord ! 575

Yet is the creature rational, endowed With foresight ; hears, too, every sabbath
day,

The Christian promise with attentive ear ;
Nor will, I trust, the Majesty of Heaven
Reject the incense offered up by him, 580 Though of the kind which beasts and birds present

In grove or pasture ; cheerfulness of soul,
From trepidation and repining free.

How many scrupulous worshippers fall
down

Upon their knees, and daily homage
pay 585

Less worthy, less religious even, than his !

"This qualified respect, the old Man's
due,

Is paid without reluctance ; but in truth," (Said the good Vicar with a fond half-smile)

"I feel at times a motion of despite 590 Towards one, whose bold contrivances and
skill,

As you have seen, bear such conspicuous
part

In works of havoc ; taking from these
vales,

One after one, their proudest ornaments.
Full oft his doings leave me to deplore 595

Tall ash-tree, sown by winds, by vapours
nursed,

In the dry crannies of the pendent rocks ;
Light birch, aloft upon the horizon's edge,
A veil of glory for the ascending moon ;

And oak whose roots by noontide dew were damped, 600

And on whose forehead inaccessible
The raven lodged in safety.—Many a ship

Launched into Morecambe-bay, to him hath owed

Her strong knee-timbers, and the mast that bears

The loftiest of her pendants ; He, from park 605

Or forest, fetched the enormous axle-tree
That whirls (how slow itself !) ten thousand spindles :

And the vast engine labouring in the mine, Content with meaner prowess, must have lacked

The trunk and body of its marvellous
strength, 610

If his undaunted enterprise had failed
Among the mountain coves.

Yon household fir,

A guardian planted to fence off the blast,
But towering high the roof above, as if

Its humble destination were forgot— 615
That sycamore, which annually holds Within its shade, as in a stately tent¹

On all sides open to the fanning breeze,
A grave assemblage, seated while they shear

The fleece-encumbered flock—the JOYFUL
ELM, 620

Around whose trunk the maidens dance in May—

And the LORD'S OAK—would plead their several rights

In vain, if he were master of their fate ;
His sentence to the axe would doom
them all.

But, green in age and lusty as he is, 625
And promising to keep his hold on earth Less, as might seem, in rivalry with
men

Than with the forest's more enduring
growth,

His own appointed hour will come at
last ;

And, like the haughty Spoilers of the
world, 630

This keen Destroyer, in his turn, must
fall.

“Now from the living pass we once
again :

From Age,” the Priest continued, “turn your thoughts ;

From Age, that often unlamented drops,
And mark that daisied hillock, three spans long ! 635

—Seven lusty Sons sate daily round the board

Of Gold-rill side ; and, when the hope had ceased

Of other progeny, a Daughter then Was given, the crowning bounty of the whole ;

And so acknowledged with a tremulous
joy 640

Felt to the centre of that heavenly calm
With which by nature every mother's soul
Is stricken in the moment when her throes Are ended, and her ears have heard the cry

Which tells her that a living child is
born ; 645

And she lies conscious, in a blissful rest,
That the dread storm is weathered by them both.

“The Father—him at this unlooked-for gift

A bolder transport seizes. From the side Of his bright hearth, and from his open
door, 650

Day after day the gladness is diffused
To all that come, almost to all that pass ;
Invited, summoned, to partake the cheer

Spread on the never-empty board, and drink

Health and good wishes to his new-born
girl, 655

From cups replenished by his joyous
hand.

—Those seven fair brothers variously were
moved

Each by the thoughts best suited to his
years :

But most of all and with most thankful
mind

The hoary grandsire felt himself enriched ;
A happiness that ebbed not, but remained
To fill the total measure of his soul !

—From the low tenement, his own abode,
Whither, as to a little private cell,

He had withdrawn from bustle, care, and noise, 665

To spend the sabbath of old age in peace,
Once every day he duteously repaired

To rock the cradle of the slumbering babe :
For in that female infant's name he heard
The silent name of his departed wife ;

Heart-stirring music ! hourly heard that
name ; 671

Full blest he was, ‘Another Margaret
Green,’

Oft did he say, ‘was come to Gold-rill
side.’

“Oh ! pang unthought of, as the precious boon

Itself had been unlooked-for ; oh ! dire stroke 675

Of desolating anguish for them all !

—Just as the Child could totter on the
floor,

And, by some friendly finger's help up-stayed

Ranged round the garden walk, while she perchance

Was catching at some novelty of spring, Ground-flower, or glossy insect from its
cell 681

Drawn by the sunshine—at that hopeful season

The winds of March, smiting insidiously,
Raised in the tender passage of the throat Viewless obstruction ; whence, all unforewarned, 685

The household lost their pride and soul's
delight.

—But time hath power to soften all regrets,

And prayer and thought can bring to worst distress

Due resignation. Therefore, though some
tears

Fail not to spring from either Parent's
eye 690

Oft as they hear of sorrow like their own,
Yet this departed Little-one, too long

The innocent troubler of their quiet, sleeps
In what may now be called a peaceful
bed.

“On a bright day—so calm and bright,
it seemed 695

To us, with our sad spirits, heavenly-
fair—

These mountains echoed to an unknown
sound;

A volley, thrice repeated o'er the Corse
Let down into the hollow of that grave,

Whose shelving sides are red with naked
mould. 700

Ye rains of April, duly wet this earth!
Spare, burning sun of midsummer, these
sods,

That they may knit together, and therewith

Our thoughts unite in kindred quietness!
Nor so the Valley shall forget her loss. 705

Dear Youth, by young and old alike be-
loved,

To me as precious as my own!—Green
herbs

May creep (I wish that they would softly creep)

Over thy last abode, and we may pass
Reminded less imperiously of thee;— 710

The ridge itself may sink into the breast
Of earth, the great abyss, and be no more;

Yet shall not thy remembrance leave our
hearts,

Thy image disappear!
The Mountain-ash 714

No eye can overlook, when 'mid a grove
Of yet unfaded trees she lifts her head

Decked with autumnal berries, that out-
shine

Spring's richest blossoms; and ye may have marked,

By a brook-side or solitary tarn, How she her station doth adorn: the pool 720

Glows at her feet, and all the gloomy

rocks
Are brightened round her. In his native

vale
Such and so glorious did this Youth

appear;
A sight that kindled pleasure in all hearts

By his ingenuous beauty, by the gleam 725
Of his fair eyes, by his capacious brow,

By all the graces with which nature's hand
Had lavishly arrayed him. As old bards

Tell in their idle songs of wandering gods,
Pan or Apollo, veiled in human form: 730

Yet, like the sweet-breathed violet of the
shade,

Discovered in their own despite to sense
Of mortals (if such fables without blame

May find chance-mention on this sacred
ground)—

So, through a simple rustic garb's disguise, 735

And through the impediment of rural
cares,

In him revealed a scholar's genius shone;
And so, not wholly hidden from men's

sight,
In him the spirit of a hero walked

Our unpretending valley.—How the quoit Whizzed from the Stripling's arm! If touched by him, 741

The inglorious football mounted to the pitch

Of the lark's flight,—or shaped a rainbow curve,

Aloft, in prospect of the shouting field!

The indefatigable fox had learned 745
To dread his perseverance in the chase.

With admiration would he lift his eyes
To the wide-ruling eagle, and his hand

Was loth to assault the majesty he loved:
Else had the strongest fastnesses proved

weak 750
To guard the royal brood. The sailing

glead,
The wheeling swallow, and the darting snipe,

The sportive sea-gull dancing with the waves,
 And cautious water-fowl, from distant climes,
 Fixed at their seat, the centre of the Mere, 755
 Were subject to young Oswald's steady aim,
 And lived by his forbearance.
 From the coast
 Of France a boastful Tyrant hurled his threats;
 Our Country marked the preparation vast
 Of hostile forces; and she called—with voice 760
 That filled her plains, that reached her utmost shores,
 And in remotest vales was heard—to arms!
 —Then, for the first time, here you might have seen
 The shepherd's grey to martial scarlet changed,
 That flashed uncouthly through the woods and fields. 765
 Ten hardy Striplings, all in bright attire,
 And graced with shining weapons, weekly marched,
 From this lone valley, to a central spot
 Where, in assemblage with the flower and choice
 Of the surrounding district, they might learn 770
 The rudiments of war; ten—hardy, strong,
 And valiant; but young Oswald, like a chief
 And yet a modest comrade, led them forth
 From their shy solitude, to face the world,
 With a gay confidence and seemly pride;
 Measuring the soil beneath their happy feet 776
 Like Youths released from labour, and yet bound
 To most laborious service, though to them
 A festival of unencumbered ease;
 The inner spirit keeping holiday, 780
 Like vernal ground to sabbath sunshine left.

“Oft have I marked him, at some leisure hour,
 Stretched on the grass, or seated in the shade,
 Among his fellows, while an ample map
 Before their eyes lay carefully outspread,
 From which the gallant teacher would discourse, 786
 Now pointing this way, and now that.
 —‘Here flows,’
 Thus would he say, ‘the Rhine, that famous stream!
 Eastward, the Danube toward this inland sea,
 A mightier river, winds from realm to realm; 790
 And, like a serpent, shows his glittering back Bespotted—with innumerable isles:
 Here reigns the Russian, there the Turk; observe
 His capital city!’ Thence, along a tract
 Of livelier interest to his hopes and fears,
 His finger moved, distinguishing the spots 796
 Where wide-spread conflict then most fiercely raged;
 Nor left unstigmatized those fatal fields
 On which the sons of mighty Germany
 Were taught a base submission.—‘Here behold 800
 A nobler race, the Switzers, and their land,
 Vales deeper far than these of ours, huge woods,
 And mountains white with everlasting snow!’
 —And, surely, he, that spake with kindling brow,
 Was a true patriot, hopeful as the best
 Of that young peasantry, who, in our days, 806
 Have fought and perished for Helvetia's rights—
 Ah, not in vain!—or those who, in old time,
 For work of happier issue, to the side
 Of Tell came trooping from a thousand huts, 810
 When he had risen alone! No braver Youth

Descended from Judean heights, to march With righteous Joshua; nor appeared in arms
 When grove was felled, and altar was cast
 down,
 And Gideon blew the trumpet, soul-inflamed, 815
 And strong in hatred of idolatry."

The Pastor, even as if by these last
 words
 Raised from his seat within the chosen
 shade,
 Moved towards the grave;—instinctively
 his steps
 We followed; and my voice with joy
 exclaimed: 820
 "Power to the Oppressors of the world is given,
 A might of which they dream not. Oh!
 the curse,
 To be the awakener of divinest thoughts,
 Father and founder of exalted deeds;
 And, to whole nations bound in servile straits, 825
 The liberal donor of capacities
 More than heroic! this to be, nor yet Have sense of one connatural wish, nor
 yet
 Deserve the least return of human thanks;
 Winning no recompense but deadly hate With pity mixed, astonishment with
 scorn!" 831

When this involuntary strain had
 ceased,
 The Pastor said: "So Providence is
 served;
 The forkèd weapon of the skies can send Illumination into deep, dark holds, 835
 Which the mild sunbeam hath not power to pierce.
 Ye Thrones that have defied remorse, and
 cast
 Pity away, soon shall ye quake with fear!
 For, not unconscious of the mighty debt
 Which to outrageous wrong the sufferer owes, 840
 Europe, through all her habitable bounds,
 Is thirsting for their overthrow, who yet
 Survive, as pagan temples stood of yore,

By horror of their impious rites, pre-
 served;
 Are still permitted to extend their pride,
 Like cedars on the top of Lebanon 846
 Darkening the sun.

But less impatient thoughts,
 And love 'all hoping and expecting all,'
 This hallowed grave demands, where rests
 in peace
 A humble champion of the better cause;
 A Peasant-youth, so call him, for he asked 851
 No higher name; in whom our country
 showed,
 As in a favourite son, most beautiful.
 In spite of vice, and misery, and disease, Spread with the spreading of her wealthy arts, 855
 England, the ancient and the free, appeared
 In him to stand before my swimming
 eyes, Unconquerably virtuous and secure.
 —No more of this, lest I offend his dust:
 Short was his life, and a brief tale remains. 860

"One day—a summer's day of annual pomp
 And solemn chase—from morn to sultry
 noon
 His steps had followed, fleetest of the fleet,
 The red-deer driven along its native
 heights
 With cry of hound and horn; and, from that toil 865
 Returned with sinews weakened and relaxed,
 This generous Youth, too negligent of self,
 Plunged—'mid a gay and busy throng
 convened
 To wash the fleeces of his Father's flock—
 Into the chilling flood. Convulsions dire Seized him, that self-same night; and through the space 871
 Of twelve ensuing days his frame was wrenched,
 Till nature rested from her work in death.
 To him, thus snatched away, his comrades paid 874

A soldier's honours. At his funeral hour Bright was the sun, the sky a cloudless
blue— 876

A golden lustre slept upon the hills;
And if by chance a stranger, wandering
there,

From some commanding eminence had looked

Down on this spot, well pleased would he have seen 880

A glittering spectacle; but every face
Was pallid: seldom hath that eye been moist

With tears, that wept not then; nor were the few,

Who from their dwellings came not forth to join

In this sad service, less disturbed than
we. 885

They started at the tributary peal
Of instantaneous thunder, which announced,

Through the still air, the closing of the Grave;

And distant mountains echoed with a
sound

Of lamentation, never heard before!"

The Pastor ceased.—My venerable
Friend 891

Victoriously upraised his clear bright eye;
And, when that eulogy was ended, stood Enrapt, as if his inward sense perceived
The prolongation of some still response, Sent by the ancient Soul of this wide
land, 896

The Spirit of its mountains and its seas,
Its cities, temples, fields, its awful power,
Its rights and virtues—by that Deity Descending, and supporting his pure
heart 900

With patriotic confidence and joy.
And, at the last of those memorial words,
The pining Solitary turned aside;
Whether through manly instinct to conceal

Tender emotions spreading from the
heart 905

To his worn cheek; or with uneasy shame
For those cold humours of habitual spleen
That, fondly seeking in dispraise of man

Solace and self-excuse, had sometimes urged

To self-abuse a not ineloquent tongue.
—Right toward the sacred Edifice his
steps 911

Had been directed; and we saw him now
Intent upon a monumental stone,

Whose uncouth form was grafted on the
wall,

Or rather seemed to have grown into the
side 915

Of the rude pile; as oftentimes trunks of
trees,

Where nature works in wild and craggy spots,

Are seen incorporate with the living
rock—

To endure for aye. The Vicar, taking note
Of his employment, with a courteous
smile 920

Exclaimed—
"The sagest Antiquarian's eye That task would foil;" then, letting fall
his voice

While he advanced, thus spake: "Tradition tells

That, in Eliza's golden days, a Knight Came on a war-horse sumptuously attired, 925

And fixed his home in this sequestered
vale.

'Tis left untold if here he first drew
breath,

Or as a stranger reached this deep recess, Unknowing and unknown. A pleasing
thought

I sometimes entertain, that haply bound
To Scotland's court in service of his
Queen, 931

Or sent on mission to some northern Chief

Of England's realm, this vale he might have seen

With transient observation; and thence caught

An image fair, which, brightening in his
soul 935

When joy of war and pride of chivalry
Languished beneath accumulated years,

Had power to draw him from the world,
resolved

To make that paradise his chosen home
To which his peaceful fancy oft had turned.

“Vague thoughts are these; but, if belief may rest 941

Upon unwritten story fondly traced
From sire to son, in this obscure retreat
The Knight arrived, with spear and shield, and borne

Upon a Charger gorgeously bedecked 945
With brodered housings. And the lofty
Steed—

His sole companion, and his faithful
friend,

Whom he, in gratitude, let loose to range
In fertile pastures—was beheld with eyes
Of admiration and delightful awe, 950
By those untravelled Dalesmen. With less pride,

Yet free from touch of envious discontent,
They saw a mansion at his bidding rise,
Like a bright star, amid the lowly band
Of their rude homesteads. Here the Warrior dwelt; 955

And, in that mansion, children of his own,
Or kindred, gathered round him. As a
tree

That falls and disappears, the house is
gone;

And, through improvidence or want of
love

For ancient worth and honourable things,
The spear and shield are vanished, which the Knight 961

Hung in his rustic hall. One ivied arch
Myself have seen, a gateway, last remains
Of that foundation in domestic care

Raised by his hands. And now no trace is left 965

Of the mild-hearted Champion, save this
stone,

Faithless memorial! and his family name Borne by yon clustering cottages, that sprang

From out the ruins of his stately lodge:
These, and the name and title at full
length,— 970

Sir Alfred Erthing, with appropriate
words

Accompanied, still extant, in a wreath
Or posy, girding round the several fronts

Of three clear-sounding and harmonious
bells,

That in the steeple hang, his pious gift.”

“So fails, so languishes, grows dim, and dies,” 976

The grey-haired Wanderer pensively exclaimed,

“All that this world is proud of. From their spheres

The stars of human glory are cast down;
Perish the roses and the flowers of kings¹, Princes, and emperors, and the crowns and palms 981

Of all the mighty, withered and consumed!

Nor is power given to lowliest innocence Long to protect her own. The man himself

Departs; and soon is spent the line of
those 985

Who, in the bodily image, in the mind,
In heart or soul, in station or pursuit, Did most resemble him. Degrees and
ranks,

Fraternities and orders—heaping high
New wealth upon the burthen of the old,
And placing trust in privilege confirmed
And re-confirmed—are scoffed at with a smile

Of greedy foretaste, from the secret stand
Of Desolation, aimed: to slow decline
These yield, and these to sudden overthrow: 995

Their virtue, service, happiness, and state Expire; and nature’s pleasant robe of
green,

Humanity’s appointed shroud, enwraps Their monuments and their memory. The vast Frame

Of social nature changes evermore 1000
Her organs and her members, with decay
Restless, and restless generation, powers
And functions dying and produced at need,—

And by this law the mighty whole subsists:

With an ascent and progress in the main; 1005

Yet, oh! how disproportioned to the
hopes

And expectations of self-flattering minds!

“The courteous Knight, whose bones are here interred,

Lived in an age conspicuous as our own For strife and ferment in the minds of
men; 1010

Whence alteration in the forms of things,
Various and vast. A memorable age!

Which did to him assign a pensive lot—
To linger 'mid the last of those bright
clouds

That, on the steady breeze of honour,
sailed 1015

In long procession calm and beautiful.
He who had seen his own bright order
fade,

And its devotion gradually decline, (While war, relinquishing the lance and
shield,

Her temper changed, and bowed to other laws) 1020

Had also witnessed, in his morn of life,
That violent commotion, which o'erthrew,
In town and city and sequestered glen,
Altar, and cross, and church of solemn
roof,

And old religious house—pile after pile;
And shook their tenants out into the
fields, 1026

Like wild beasts without home! Their hour was come;

But why no softening thought of gratitude,

No just remembrance, scruple, or wise
doubt?

Benevolence is mild; nor borrows help,

Save at worst need, from bold impetuous
force, 1031

Fittest allied to anger and revenge.
But Human-kind rejoices in the might

Of mutability; and airy hopes,
Dancing around her, hinder and disturb

Those meditations of the soul that feed
The retrospective virtues. Festive songs

Break from the maddened nations at the
sight

Of sudden overthrow; and cold neglect
Is the sure consequence of slow decay.

“Even,” said the Wanderer, “as that courteous Knight, 1041

Bound by his vow to labour for redress
Of all who suffer wrong, and to enact

By sword and lance the law of gentle-
ness,

(If I may venture of myself to speak, 1045
Trusting that not incongruously I blend

Low things with lofty) I too shall be doomed

To outlive the kindly use and fair esteem
Of the poor calling which my youth embraced

With no unworthy prospect. But enough;
—Thoughts crowd upon me—and 'twere

seemlier now 1051

To stop, and yield our gracious Teacher
thanks

For the pathetic records which his voice Hath here delivered; words of heartfelt
truth,

Tending to patience when affliction strikes; 1055

To hope and love; to confident repose
In God; and reverence for the dust of Man.”

BOOK EIGHTH.

THE PARSONAGE.

ARGUMENT.

Pastor's apology and apprehensions that he might have detained his Auditors too long, with the Pastor's invitation to his house.—Solitary disinclined to comply—rallies the Wanderer—and playfully draws a comparison between his itinerant profession and that of the Knight-errant—which leads to Wanderer's giving an account of changes in the Country from the manufacturing spirit.—Favourable effects.—The other side of the picture, and chiefly as it has affected the humbler classes.—Wanderer asserts the hollowness of all national grandeur if unsupported by moral worth.—Physical science unable to support itself.—Lamentations over an excess of manufacturing industry among the humbler Classes of Society.—Picture of a Child employed in a Cotton-mill.—Ignorance and degradation of Children among the agricultural Population reviewed.—Conversation broken off by a renewed Invitation from the Pastor.—Path leading to his House.—Its appearance described.—His Daughter.—His Wife.—His Son (a Boy) enters with his Companion.—Their happy appearance.—The Wanderer how affected by the sight of them.

THE pensive Sceptic of the lonely vale
To those acknowledgments subscribed his
own,
With a sedate compliance, which the Priest
Failed not to notice, inly pleased, and
said:—
“If ye, by whom invited I began 5
These narratives of calm and humble life,
Be satisfied, 'tis well,—the end is gained;
And in return for sympathy bestowed
And patient listening, thanks accept from
me.
—Life, death, eternity! momentous
themes 10
Are they—and might demand a seraph's
tongue,
Were they not equal to their own support;
And therefore no incompetence of mine Could do them wrong. The universal
forms
Of human nature, in a spot like this, 15
Present themselves at once to all men's
view:
Ye wished for act and circumstance, that
make
The individual known and understood;

And such as my best judgment could select
From what the place afforded, have been
given; 20
Though apprehensions crossed me that my zeal
To his might well be likened, who unlocks
A cabinet stored with gems and pictures—
draws
His treasures forth, soliciting regard To this, and this, as worthier than the
last, 25
Till the spectator, who awhile was pleased
More than the exhibitor himself, becomes Weary and faint, and longs to be released.
—But let us hence! my dwelling is in
sight,
And there—”
At this the Solitary shrunk 30
With backward will; but, wanting not address
That inward motion to disguise, he said
To his Compatriot, smiling as he spake;
—“The peaceable remains of this good
Knight
Would be disturbed, I fear, with wrathful
scorn, 35

If consciousness could reach him where he lies

That one, albeit of these degenerate times, Deploring changes past, or dreading
change

Foreseen, had dared to couple, even in
thought,

The fine vocation of the sword and lance
With the gross aims and body-bending
toil 41

Of a poor brotherhood who walk the
earth

Pitied, and, where they are not known,
despised.

“Yet, by the good Knight’s leave, the two estates

Are graced with some resemblance.
Errant those, 45

Exiles and wanderers—and the like are
these;

Who, with their burthen, traverse hill
and dale,

Carrying relief for nature’s simple wants.
—What though no higher recompense be
sought

Than honest maintenance, by irksome
toil 50

Full oft procured, yet may they claim
respect,

Among the intelligent, for what this
course

Enables them to be and to perform.

Their tardy steps give leisure to observe,
While solitude permits the mind to feel;

Instructs, and prompts her to supply
defects 56

By the division of her inward self
For grateful converse: and to these poor
men

Nature (I but repeat your favourite boast)
Is bountiful—go wheresoe’er they may; 60

Kind nature’s various wealth is all their
own.

Versed in the characters of men; and
bound,

By ties of daily interest, to maintain Conciliatory manners and smooth speech;

Such have been, and still are in their degree, 65

Examples efficacious to refine

Rude intercourse; apt agents to expel,
By importation of unlooked-for arts,
Barbarian torpor, and blind prejudice;
Raising, through just gradation, savage
life 70

To rustic, and the rustic to urbane.
—Within their moving magazines is lodged

Power that comes forth to quicken and exalt

Affections seated in the mother’s breast,
And in the lover’s fancy; and to feed 75

The sober sympathies of long-tried friends.
—By these Itinerants, as experienced
men,

Counsel is given; contention they appease
With gentle language; in remotest wilds, Tears wipe away, and pleasant tidings
bring; 80

Could the proud quest of chivalry do
more?”

“Happy,” rejoined the Wanderer,
“they who gain

A panegyric from your generous tongue!
But, if to these Wayfarers once pertained
Aught of romantic interest, it is gone. 85

Their purer service, in this realm at least,
Is past for ever.—An inventive Age Has wrought, if not with speed of magic,
yet

To most strange issues. I have lived to mark

A new and unforeseen creation rise 90
From out the labours of a peaceful Land
Wielding her potent enginery to frame
And to produce, with appetite as keen As that of war, which rests not night or day,

Industrious to destroy! With fruitless
pains 95

Might one like me now visit many a tract
Which, in his youth, he trod, and trod
again,

A lone pedestrian with a scanty freight, Wished-for, or welcome, wheresoe’er he
came—

Among the tenantry of thorpe and vill;
Or straggling burgh, of ancient charter
proud, 101

And dignified by battlements and towers

Of some stern castle, mouldering on the
brow
Of a green hill or bank of rugged stream.
The foot-path faintly marked, the horse-track wild, 105
And formidable length of plashy lane, (Prized avenues ere others had been shaped
Or easier links connecting place with
place)
Have vanished—swallowed up by stately roads
Easy and bold, that penetrate the gloom
Of Britain's farthest glens. The Earth has lent 111
Her waters, Air her breezes¹; and the sail
Of traffic glides with ceaseless intercourse,
Glistening along the low and woody dale;
Or, in its progress, on the lofty side 115
Of some bare hill, with wonder kened
from far.

“Meanwhile, at social Industry's command,
How quick, how vast an increase! From the germ
Of some poor hamlet, rapidly produced Here a huge town, continuous and compact, 120
Hiding the face of earth for leagues—and
there,
Where not a habitation stood before,
Abodes of men irregularly massed Like trees in forests,—spread through spacious tracts,
O'er which the smoke of unremitting fires Hangs permanent, and plentiful as wreaths 126
Of vapour glittering in the morning sun.
And, wheresoe'er the traveller turns his
steps,
He sees the barren wilderness erased,
Or disappearing; triumph that proclaims How much the mild Directress of the plough 131
Owes to alliance with these new-born arts!
—Hence is the wide sea peopled,—hence the shores

Of Britain are resorted to by ships Freighted from every climate of the
world 135
With the world's choicest produce.
Hence that sum
Of keels that rest within her crowded ports,
Or ride at anchor in her sounds and bays;
That animating spectacle of sails That, through her inland regions, to and fro 140
Pass with the respirations of the tide, Perpetual, multitudinous! Finally,
Hence a dread arm of floating power, a
voice
Of thunder daunting those who would approach
With hostile purposes the blessed Isle, 145
Truth's consecrated residence, the seat
Impregnable of Liberty and Peace.

“And yet, O happy Pastor of a flock Faithfully watched, and, by that loving
care
And Heaven's good providence, preserved from taint! 150
With you I grieve, when on the darker
side
Of this great change I look; and there
behold
Such outrage done to nature as compels
The indignant power to justify herself;
Yea, to avenge her violated rights, 155
For England's bane.—When soothing darkness spreads O'er hill and vale,” the Wanderer thus expressed
His recollections, “and the punctual
stars,
While all things else are gathering to their homes, 159
Advance, and in the firmament of heaven
Glitter—but undisturbing, undisturbed;
As if their silent company were charged
With peaceful admonitions for the heart
Of all-beholding Man, earth's thoughtful
lord;
Then, in full many a region, once like
this 165
The assured domain of calm simplicity
And pensive quiet, an unnatural light

Prepared for never-resting Labour's eyes Breaks from a many-windowed fabric
huge;

And at the appointed hour a bell is
heard, 170

Of harsher import than the curfew-knoll
That spake the Norman Conqueror's stern
behest—

A local summons to unceasing toil!
Disgorged are now the ministers of day;
And, as they issue from the illumined
pile, 175

A fresh band meets them, at the crowded
door—

And in the courts—and where the rumbling stream,

That turns the multitude of dizzy wheels,
Glares, like a troubled spirit, in its bed
Among the rocks below. Men, maidens,
youths, 180

Mother and little children, boys and girls, Enter, and each the wonted task resumes

Within this temple, where is offered up
To Gain, the master-idol of the realm,
Perpetual sacrifice. Even thus of old 185
Our ancestors, within the still domain
Of vast cathedral or conventual church,
Their vigils kept; where tapers day and
night

On the dim altar burned continually,
In token that the House was evermore Watching to God. Religious men were
they; 191

Nor would their reason, tutored to aspire Above this transitory world, allow That there should pass a moment of the
year,

When in their land the Almighty's service ceased. 195

“Triumph who will in these profaner
rites

Which we, a generation self-extolled,
As zealously perform! I cannot share
His proud complacency:—yet do I exult,
Casting reserve away, exult to see 200
An intellectual mastery exercised O'er the blind elements; a purpose given,
A perseverance fed; almost a soul
Imparted—to brute matter. I rejoice,

Measuring the force of those gigantic
powers 205

That, by the thinking mind, have been compelled

To serve the will of feeble-bodied Man.
For with the sense of admiration blends
The animating hope that time may come When, strengthened, yet not dazzled, by the might 210

Of this dominion over nature gained,
Men of all lands shall exercise the same
In due proportion to their country's need;
Learning, though late, that all true glory
rests, 214

All praise, all safety, and all happiness,
Upon the moral law. Egyptian Thebes, Tyre, by the margin of the sounding
waves,

Palmyra, central in the desert, fell;
And the Arts died by which they had been raised. 219

—Call Archimedes from his buried tomb
Upon the grave of vanished Syracuse,
And feelingly the Sage shall make report
How insecure, how baseless in itself,
Is the Philosophy whose sway depends On mere material instruments;—how
weak 225

Those arts, and high inventions, if unpropped

By virtue.—He, sighing with pensive
grief,

Amid his calm abstractions, would admit
That not the slender privilege is theirs
To save themselves from blank forgetful-
ness!” 230

When from the Wanderer's lips these words had fallen,

I said, “And, did in truth those vaunted
Arts

Possess such privilege, how could we escape

Sadness and keen regret, we who revere,
And would preserve as things above all
price, 235

The old domestic morals of the land,
Her simple manners, and the stable worth
That dignified and cheered a low estate?
Oh! where is now the character of peace,
Sobriety, and order, and chaste love, 240

And honest dealing, and untainted speech,
And pure good-will, and hospitable cheer;
That made the very thought of country-
life

A thought of refuge, for a mind detained Reluctantly amid the bustling crowd?

Where now the beauty of the sabbath
kept 246

With conscientious reverence, as a day
By the almighty Lawgiver pronounced Holy and blest? and where the winning
grace

Of all the lighter ornaments attached
To time and season, as the year rolled
round?" 251

"Fled!" was the Wanderer's passionate response,

"Fled utterly! or only to be traced

In a few fortunate retreats like this;

Which I behold with trembling, when I
think 255

What lamentable change, a year—a month—

May bring; that brook converting as it runs

Into an instrument of deadly bane
For those, who, yet untempted to forsake
The simple occupations of their sires, 260 Drink the pure water of its innocent
stream

With lip almost as pure.—Domestic bliss
(Or call it comfort, by a humbler name,)

How art thou blighted for the poor Man's
heart!

Lo! in such neighbourhood, from morn to eve, 265

The habitations empty! or perchance
The Mother left alone,—no helping hand
To rock the cradle of her peevish babe;
No daughters round her, busy at the wheel, 269

Or in dispatch of each day's little growth
Of household occupation; no nice arts
Of needle-work; no bustle at the fire,
Where once the dinner was prepared with
pride;

Nothing to speed the day, or cheer the
mind;

Nothing to praise, to teach, or to command! 275

"The Father, if perchance he still retain

His old employments, goes to field or wood,
No longer led or followed by the Sons; Idlers perchance they were,—but in his
sight;

Breathing fresh air, and treading the
green earth; 280

Till their short holiday of childhood
ceased,

Ne'er to return! That birthright now is
lost.

Economists will tell you that the State Thrives by the forfeiture—unfeeling
thought,

And false as monstrous! Can the mother thrive 285

By the destruction of her innocent sons
In whom a premature necessity

Blocks out the forms of nature, preconsumes

The reason, famishes the heart, shuts up
The infant Being in itself, and makes

Its very spring a season of decay! 291

The lot is wretched, the condition sad,
Whether a pining discontent survive,

And thirst for change; or habit hath subdued 294

The soul deprest, dejected—even to love
Of her close tasks, and long captivity.

"Oh, banish far such wisdom as condemns

A native Briton to these inward chains,
Fixed in his soul, so early and so deep;

Without his own consent, or knowledge,
fixed! 300

He is a slave to whom release comes not,
And cannot come. The boy, where'er he

turns,
Is still a prisoner; when the wind is up Among the clouds, and roars through the ancient woods;

Or when the sun is shining in the east, Quiet and calm. Behold him—in the

school 306

Of his attainments? no; but with the air
Fanning his temples under heaven's blue

arch.
His raiment, whitened o'er with cottonflakes

Or locks of wool, announces whence he comes. 310
Creeping his gait and cowering, his lip
pale,
His respiration quick and audible;
And scarcely could you fancy that a
gleam
Could break from out those languid eyes, or a blush
Mantle upon his cheek. Is this the form,
Is that the countenance, and such the port, 316
Of no mean Being? One who should be clothed
With dignity befitting his proud hope;
Who, in his very childhood, should appear
Sublime from present purity and joy! 320
The limbs increase; but liberty of mind
Is gone for ever; and this organic frame,
So joyful in its motions, is become Dull, to the joy of her own motions dead;
And even the touch, so exquisitely poured Through the whole body, with a languid
will 326
Performs its functions; rarely competent
To impress a vivid feeling on the mind
Of what there is delightful in the breeze,
The gentle visitations of the sun, 330
Or lapse of liquid element—by hand, Or foot, or lip, in summer's warmth—perceived.
—Can hope look forward to a manhood
raised
On such foundations?"
"Hope is none for him!"
The pale Recluse indignantly exclaimed,
"And tens of thousands suffer wrong as
deep. 336
Yet be it asked, in justice to our age,
If there were not, before those arts appeared,
These structures rose, commingling old and young,
And unripe sex with sex, for mutual taint; 340
If there were not, then, in our far-famed
Isle,
Multitudes, who from infancy had breathed Air unimprisoned, and had lived at large;

Yet walked beneath the sun, in human
shape,
As abject, as degraded? At this day, 345
Who shall enumerate the crazy huts
And tottering hovels, whence do issue
forth
A ragged Offspring, with their upright hair
Crowned like the image of fantastic Fear;
Or wearing, (shall we say?) in that white
growth 350
An ill-adjusted turban, for defence
Or fierceness, wreathed around their sunburnt brows,
By savage Nature? Shrivelled are their
lips;
Naked, and coloured like the soil, the
feet
On which they stand; as if thereby they
drew 355
Some nourishment, as trees do by their roots,
From earth, the common mother of us all.
Figure and mien, complexion and attire,
Are leagued to strike dismay; but outstretched hand
And whining voice denote them supplicants 360
For the least boon that pity can bestow.
Such on the breast of darksome heaths are found;
And with their parents occupy the skirts
Of furze-clad commons; such are born
and reared
At the mine's mouth under impending
rocks; 365
Or dwell in chambers of some natural
cave;
Or where their ancestors erected huts,
For the convenience of unlawful gain,
In forest purlieus; and the like are bred,
All England through, where nooks and slips of ground 370
Purloined, in times less jealous than our
own,
From the green margin of the public way,
A residence afford them, 'mid the bloom
And gaiety of cultivated fields. 374
Such (we will hope the lowest in the scale)
Do I remember oftentimes to have seen 'Mid Buxton's dreary heights. In earnest
watch,

Till the swift vehicle approach, they stand ;

Then, following closely with the cloud of dust, 379

An uncouth feat exhibit, and are gone
Heels over head, like tumblers on a stage.

—Up from the ground they snatch the copper coin,

And, on the freight of merry passengers
Fixing a steady eye, maintain their speed ;

And spin—and pant—and overhead again,
Wild pursuivants ! until their breath is lost, 386

Or bounty tires—and every face, that smiled

Encouragement, hath ceased to look that way.

—But, like the vagrants of the gipsy tribe,

These, bred to little pleasure in themselves, 390

Are profitless to others.

Turn we then

To Britons born and bred within the pale
Of civil polity, and early trained

To earn, by wholesome labour in the field,
The bread they eat. A sample should I give 395

Of what this stock hath long produced to enrich

The tender age of life, ye would exclaim,
'Is this the whistling plough-boy whose shrill notes

Impart new gladness to the morning air !'
Forgive me if I venture to suspect 400

That many, sweet to hear of in soft verse,
Are of no finer frame. Stiff are his joints ;

Beneath a cumbrous frock, that to the knees

Invests the thriving churl, his legs appear,

Fellows to those that lustily upheld 405

The wooden stools for everlasting use,
Whereon our fathers sate. And mark his brow !

Under whose shaggy canopy are set
Two eyes—not dim, but of a healthy stare—

Wide, sluggish, blank, and ignorant, and strange— 410

Proclaiming boldly that they never drew
A look or motion of intelligence

From infant-conning of the Christ-cross-row,

Or puzzling through a primer, line by line,

Till perfect mastery crown the pains at last. 415

—What kindly warmth from touch of fostering hand,

What penetrating power of sun or breeze,
Shall e'er dissolve the crust wherein his soul

Sleeps, like a caterpillar sheathed in ice?
This torpor is no pitiable work 420

Of modern ingenuity ; no town
Nor crowded city can be taxed with aught

Of sottish vice or desperate breach of law,
To which (and who can tell where or how soon?)

He may be roused. This Boy the fields produce : 425

His spade and hoe, mattock and glittering scythe,

The carter's whip that on his shoulder rests

In air high-towering with a boorish pomp,
The sceptre of his sway ; his country's name,

Her equal rights, her churches and her schools— 430

What have they done for him? And, let me ask,

For tens of thousands uninformed as he?
In brief, what liberty of mind is here?"

This ardent sally pleased the mild good Man,

To whom the appeal couched in its closing words 435

Was pointedly addressed ; and to the thoughts

That, in assent or opposition, rose Within his mind, he seemed prepared to give

Prompt utterance ; but the Vicar interposed

With invitation urgently renewed. 440

—We followed, taking as he led, a path
Along a hedge of hollies dark and tall,

Whose flexile boughs low bending with a
weight
Of leafy spray, concealed the stems and roots
That gave them nourishment. When frosty winds 445
Howl from the north, what kindly warmth,
methought,
Is here—how grateful this impervious screen!
—Not shaped by simple wearing of the foot
On rural business passing to and fro
Was the commodious walk: a careful
hand 450
Had marked the line, and strewn its surface o'er
With pure cerulean gravel, from the
heights
Fetched by a neighbouring brook.—Across
the vale
The stately fence accompanied our steps;
And thus the pathway, by perennial
green 455
Guarded and graced, seemed fashioned to unite,
As by a beautiful yet solemn chain,
The Pastor's mansion with the house of
prayer.

Like image of solemnity, conjoined
With feminine allurements soft and fair,
The mansion's self displayed;—a reverend
pile 461
With bold projections and recesses deep;
Shadowy, yet gay and lightsome as it
stood Fronting the noontide sun. We paused to admire
The pillared porch, elaborately embossed;
The low wide windows with their mullions old; 466
The cornice, richly fretted, of grey stone;
And that smooth slope from which the dwelling rose,
By beds and banks Arcadian of gay
flowers
And flowering shrubs, protected and adorned: 470
Profusion bright! and every flower assuming

A more than natural vividness of hue
From unaffected contrast with the gloom
Of sober cypress, and the darker foil
Of yew, in which survived some traces,
here 475
Not unbecoming, of grotesque device
And uncouth fancy. From behind the roof
Rose the slim ash and massy sycamore, Blending their diverse foliage with the
green
Of ivy, flourishing and thick, that clasped
The huge round chimneys, harbour of
delight 481
For wren and redbreast,—where they sit and sing
Their slender ditties when the trees are
bare.
Nor must I leave untouched (the picture else
Were incomplete) a relique of old times
Happily spared, a little Gothic niche
Of nicest workmanship; that once had
held
The sculptured image of some patron-saint,
Or of the blessed Virgin, looking down
On all who entered those religious doors.

But lo! where from the rocky garden-
mount 491
Crowned by its antique summer-house—
descends,
Light as the silver fawn, a radiant Girl;
For she hath recognised her honoured
friend,
The Wanderer ever welcome! A prompt kiss 495
The glad some child bestows at his request;
And, up the flowery lawn as we advance,
Hangs on the old Man with a happy
look,
And with a pretty restless hand of love.
—We enter—by the Lady of the place
Cordially greeted. Graceful was her port:
A lofty stature undepressed by time,
Whose visitation had not wholly spared
The finer lineaments of form and face;
To that complexion brought which prudence trusts in 505

And wisdom loves.—But when a stately
ship
Sails in smooth weather by the placid
coast
On homeward voyage,—what if wind and
wave,
And hardship undergone in various climes,
Have caused her to abate the virgin
pride, 510
And that full trim of inexperienced hope With which she left her haven—not for
this,
Should the sun strike her, and the impartial breeze Play on her streamers, fails she to assume
Brightness and touching beauty of her
own, 515
That charm all eyes. So bright, so fair,
appeared
This goodly Matron, shining in the
beams
Of unexpected pleasure.—Soon the board Was spread, and we partook a plain re-
past. 519

Here, resting in cool shelter, we beguiled
The mid-day hours with desultory talk;
From trivial themes to general argument
Passing, as accident or fancy led,
Or courtesy prescribed. While question
rose 524
And answer flowed, the fetters of reserve
Dropping from every mind, the Solitary Resumed the manners of his happier
days;
And in the various conversation bore
A willing, nay, at times, a forward part;
Yet with the grace of one who in the
world 530
Had learned the art of pleasing, and had
now
Occasion given him to display his skill, Upon the steadfast 'vantage-ground of
truth.
He gazed, with admiration unsuppressed,
Upon the landscape of the sun-bright
vale, 535
Seen, from the shady room in which we
sate,

In softened perspective; and more than
once
Praised the consummate harmony serene
Of gravity and elegance, diffused Around the mansion and its whole domain; 540
Not, doubtless, without help of female taste
And female care.—“A blessed lot is yours!”
The words escaped his lip, with a tender
sigh
Breathed over them: but suddenly the door
Flew open, and a pair of lusty Boys 545 Appeared, confusion checking their de-
light.
—Not brothers they in feature or attire,
But fond companions, so I guessed, in
field,
And by the river's margin—whence they
come, 549
Keen anglers with unusual spoil elated.
One bears a willow-pannier on his back,
The boy of plainer garb, whose blush
survives
More deeply tinged. Twin might the other be
To that fair girl who from the garden-
mount Bounded:—triumphant entry this for
him! 555
Between his hands he holds a smooth blue stone,
On whose capacious surface see outspread Large store of gleaming crimson-spotted trouts;
Ranged side by side, and lessening by degrees
Up to the dwarf that tops the pinnacle.
Upon the board he lays the sky-blue
stone 561
With its rich freight; their number he proclaims;
Tells from what pool the noblest had been dragged;
And where the very monarch of the
brook,
After long struggle, had escaped at last—
Stealing alternately at them and us 566
(As doth his comrade too) a look of pride:
And, verily, the silent creatures made

A splendid sight, together thus exposed ; Dead—but not sullied or deformed by
 death, 570
 That seemed to pity what he could not spare.

But O, the animation in the mien
 Of those two boys ! yea in the very words
 With which the young narrator was inspired,

When, as our questions led, he told at large 575

Of that day's prowess ! Him might I
 compare,

His looks, tones, gestures, eager eloquence,

To a bold brook that splits for better
 speed,

And at the self-same moment, works its
 way

Through many channels, ever and anon
 Parted and re-united : his compeer 581

To the still lake, whose stillness is to
 sight

As beautiful—as grateful to the mind.
 —But to what object shall the lovely

Girl

Be likened ? She whose countenance and
 air 585

Unite the graceful qualities of both,
 Even as she shares the pride and joy of
 both.

My grey-haired Friend was moved ; his vivid eye

Glistened with tenderness ; his mind, I
 knew,

Was full ; and had, I doubted not, returned, 590

Upon this impulse, to the theme—ere-while

Abruptly broken off. The ruddy boys Withdrew, on summons to their well-earned meal ;

And He—to whom all tongues resigned their rights

With willingness, to whom the general
 ear 595

Listened with readier patience than to strain

Of music, lute or harp, a long delight
 That ceased not when his voice had ceased—as One

Who from truth's central point serenely views

The compass of his argument—began 600
 Mildly, and with a clear and steady tone.

BOOK NINTH.

DISCOURSE OF THE WANDERER, AND AN EVENING VISIT TO THE LAKE.

ARGUMENT.

Wanderer asserts that an active principle pervades the Universe, its noblest seat the human soul.—How lively this principle is in Childhood.—Hence the delight in old Age of looking back upon Childhood.—The dignity, powers, and privileges of Age asserted.—These not to be looked for generally but under a just government.—Right of a human Creature to be exempt from being considered as a mere Instrument.—The condition of multitudes deplored.—Former conversation recalled to, and the Wanderer's opinions set in a clearer light.—Truth placed within reach of the humblest.—Equality.—Happy state of the two Boys again adverted to.—Earnest wish expressed for a System of National Education established universally by Government.—Glorious effects of this foretold.—Walk to the Lake.—Grand spectacle from the side of a hill.—Address of Priest to the Supreme Being—In the course of which he contrasts with ancient Barbarism the present appearance of the scene before him.—The change ascribed to Christianity.—Apostrophe to his flock, living and dead.—Gratitude to the Almighty.—Return over the Lake.—Parting with the Solitary.—Under what circumstances.

“To every Form of being is assigned,”
Thus calmly spake the venerable Sage,
“An active Principle:—howe'er removed From sense and observation, it subsists
In all things, in all natures; in the stars 5
Of azure heaven, the unending clouds,
In flower and tree, in every pebbly stone
That paves the brooks, the stationary
rocks,
The moving waters, and the invisible air.
Whate'er exists hath properties that
spread 10
Beyond itself, communicating good,
A simple blessing, or with evil mixed;
Spirit that knows no insulated spot,
No chasm, no solitude; from link to link
It circulates, the Soul of all the worlds. 15
This is the freedom of the universe;
Unfolded still the more, more visible,
The more we know; and yet is revered
least,
And least respected in the human Mind, Its most apparent home. The food of
hope 20
Is meditated action; robbed of this
Her sole support, she languishes and dies.
We perish also; for we live by hope

And by desire; we see by the glad light
And breathe the sweet air of futurity; 25
And so we live, or else we have no life.
To-morrow—nay perchance this very
hour (For every moment hath its own tomorrow!)
Those blooming Boys, whose hearts are almost sick
With present triumph, will be sure to
find 30
A field before them freshened with the dew
Of other expectations;—in which course
Their happy year spins round. The youth obeys
A like glad impulse; and so moves the
man
'Mid all his apprehensions, cares, and
fears,— 35
Or so he ought to move. Ah! why in age
Do we revert so fondly to the walks
Of childhood—but that there the Soul discerns
The dear memorial footsteps unimpaired
Of her own native vigour; thence can
hear 40

Reverberations; and a choral song,
Commingling with the incense that ascends,

Undaunted, toward the imperishable heavens,

From her own lonely altar?

Do not think

That good and wise ever will be allowed,
Though strength decay, to breathe in such estate 46

As shall divide them wholly from the stir
Of hopeful nature. Rightly it is said

That Man descends into the VALE of years;

Yet have I thought that we might also speak, 50

And not presumptuously, I trust, of Age,
As of a final EMINENCE; though bare

In aspect and forbidding, yet a point

On which 'tis not impossible to sit

In awful sovereignty; a place of power, 55
A throne, that may be likened unto his,

Who, in some placid day of summer, looks Down from a mountain-top,—say one of those High peaks, that bound the vale where now we are. 59

Faint, and diminished to the gazing eye,
Forest and field, and hill and dale appear,

With all the shapes over their surface
spread:

But, while the gross and visible frame of
things

Relinquishes its hold upon the sense,

Yea almost on the Mind herself, and
seems 65

All unsubstantialized,—how loud the voice
Of waters, with invigorated peal

From the full river in the vale below,

Ascending! For on that superior height

Who sits, is disencumbered from the press
Of near obstructions, and is privileged 71

To breathe in solitude, above the host

Of ever-humming insects, 'mid thin air

That suits not them. The murmur of the leaves

Many and idle, visits not his ear: 75

This he is freed from, and from thousand
notes

(Not less unceasing, not less vain than these,)

By which the finer passages of sense Are occupied; and the Soul, that would incline

To listen, is prevented or deterred. 80

“And may it not be hoped, that, placed by age

In like removal, tranquil though severe,
We are not so removed for utter loss;

But for some favour, suited to our need?

What more than that the severing should confer 85

Fresh power to commune with the invisible world,

And hear the mighty stream of tendency

Uttering, for elevation of our thought,

A clear sonorous voice, inaudible

To the vast multitude; whose doom it is

To run the giddy round of vain delight, 91

Or fret and labour on the Plain below.

“But, if to such sublime ascent the hopes

Of Man may rise, as to a welcome close

And termination of his mortal course; 95 Them only can such hope inspire whose

minds

Have not been starved by absolute neglect;

Nor bodies crushed by unremitting toil;

To whom kind Nature, therefore, may afford

Proof of the sacred love she bears for all;
Whose birthright Reason, therefore, may ensure. 101

For me, consulting what I feel within

In times when most existence with herself

Is satisfied, I cannot but believe,

That, far as kindly Nature hath free
scope 105

And Reason's sway predominates; even so far,

Country, society, and time itself,

That saps the individual's bodily frame,

And lays the generations low in dust,

Do, by the almighty Ruler's grace, par-
take 110

Of one maternal spirit, bringing forth

And cherishing with ever-constant love,

That tires not, nor betrays. Our life is turned

Out of her course, wherever man is made
 An offering, or a sacrifice, a tool 115
 Or implement, a passive thing employed As a brute mean, without acknowledg-
 ment

Of common right or interest in the end ;
 Used or abused, as selfishness may prompt.
 Say, what can follow for a rational soul
 Perverted thus, but weakness in all good,
 And strength in evil? Hence an after-call
 For chastisement, and custody, and bonds,
 And oftentimes Death, avenger of the past,
 And the sole guardian in whose hands we dare 125

Entrust the future.—Not for these sad issues

Was Man created ; but to obey the law
 Of life, and hope, and action. And 'tis
 known

That when we stand upon our native soil,
 Unelbowed by such objects as oppress 130
 Our active powers, those powers themselves become

Strong to subvert our noxious qualities :
 They sweep distemper from the busy day,
 And make the chalice of the big round
 year

Run o'er with gladness ; whence the Being moves 135

In beauty through the world ; and all who see

Bless him, rejoicing in his neighbourhood."

"Then," said the Solitary, "by what force
 Of language shall a feeling heart express Her sorrow for that multitude in whom We look for health from seeds that have been sown 141

In sickness, and for increase in a power
 That works but by extinction? On themselves

They cannot lean, nor turn to their own
 hearts

To know what they must do ; their wisdom is 145

To look into the eyes of others, thence
 To be instructed what they must avoid :
 Or rather, let us say, how least observed,
 How with most quiet and most silent
 death,

With the least taint and injury to the
 air 150

The oppressor breathes, their human form
 divine,

And their immortal soul, may waste
 away."

The Sage rejoined, "I thank you—you have spared

My voice the utterance of a keen regret,
 A wide compassion which with you I
 share. 155

When, heretofore, I placed before your
 sight

A Little-one, subjected to the arts

Of modern ingenuity, and made
 The senseless member of a vast machine,
 Serving as doth a spindle or a wheel ; 160 Think not, that, pitying him, I could forget

The rustic Boy, who walks the fields, untaught ;

The slave of ignorance, and oft of want,
 And miserable hunger. Much, too much,
 Of this unhappy lot, in early youth 165

We both have witnessed, lot which I myself

Shared, though in mild and merciful
 degree :

Yet was the mind to hinderances exposed,
 Through which I struggled, not without distress

And sometimes injury, like a lamb enthrall'd 170

'Mid thorns and brambles ; or a bird that breaks

Through a strong net, and mounts upon
 the wind,

Though with her plumes impaired. If they, whose souls

Should open while they range the richer
 fields 174

Of merry England, are obstructed less
 By indigence, their ignorance is not less,

Nor less to be deplored. For who can doubt

That tens of thousands at this day exist
 Such as the boy you painted, lineal
 heirs

Of those who once were vassals of her soil, 180

Following its fortunes like the beasts or
trees

Which it sustained. But no one takes
delight

In this oppression; none are proud of it;
It bears no sounding name, nor ever bore;
A standing grievance, an indigenious vice Of every country under heaven. My
thoughts 186

Were turned to evils that are new and
chosen,

A bondage lurking under shape of good,—
Arts, in themselves beneficent and kind,
But all too fondly followed and too far;—
To victims, which the merciful can see

Nor think that they are victims—turned to wrongs,

By women, who have children of their
own,

Beheld without compassion, yea, with
praise!

I spake of mischief by the wise diffused
With gladness, thinking that the more it spreads 196

The healthier, the securer, we become;
Delusion which a moment may destroy!
Lastly I mourned for those whom I had
seen

Corrupted and cast down, on favoured
ground, 200

Where circumstance and nature had combined

To shelter innocence, and cherish love;
Who, but for this intrusion, would have lived,

Possessed of health, and strength, and peace of mind;

Thus would have lived, or never have been born. 205

“Alas! what differs more than man from man!

And whence that difference? Whence but from himself?

For see the universal Race endowed With the same upright form! The sun is fixed, 209

And the infinite magnificence of heaven
Fixed, within reach of every human eye;
The sleepless ocean murmurs for all ears;
The vernal field infuses fresh delight

Into all hearts. Throughout the world of
sense,

Even as an object is sublime or fair, 215
That object is laid open to the view

Without reserve or veil; and as a power
Is salutary, or an influence sweet,

Are each and all enabled to perceive That power, that influence, by impartial
law. 220

Gifts nobler are vouchsafed alike to all; Reason, and, with that reason, smiles and
tears;

Imagination, freedom in the will;
Conscience to guide and check; and death
to be

Foretasted, immortality conceived 225
By all,—a blissful immortality,

To them whose holiness on earth shall
make

The Spirit capable of heaven, assured.
Strange, then, nor less than monstrous, might be deemed

The failure, if the Almighty, to this point 230

Liberal and undistinguishing, should hide
The excellence of moral qualities

From common understanding; leaving
truth

And virtue, difficult, abstruse, and dark;
Hard to be won, and only by a few; 235

Strange, should He deal herein with nice respects,

And frustrate all the rest! Believe it not:
The primal duties shine aloft—like stars;
The charities that soothe, and heal, and
bless,

Are scattered at the feet of Man—like
flowers. 240

The generous inclination, the just rule, Kind wishes, and good actions, and pure
thoughts—

No mystery is here! Here is no boon
For high—yet not for low; for proudly
graced—

Yet not for meek of heart. The smoke
ascends 245

To heaven as lightly from the cottage-hearth

As from the haughtiest palace. He, whose
soul

Ponders this true equality, may walk

The fields of earth with gratitude and
 hope;
 Yet, in that meditation, will he find 250
 Motive to sadder grief, as we have found;
 Lamenting ancient virtues overthrown,
 And for the injustice grieving, that hath
 made
 So wide a difference between man and
 man.

“Then let us rather fix our gladdened
 thoughts 255
 Upon the brighter scene. How blest that pair
 Of blooming Boys (whom we beheld even
 now)
 Blest in their several and their common
 lot!
 A few short hours of each returning day
 The thriving prisoners of their village-
 school: 260
 And thence let loose, to seek their pleasant homes
 Or range the grassy lawn in vacancy;
 To breathe and to be happy, run and shout
 Idle,—but no delay, no harm, no loss;
 For every genial power of heaven and
 earth, 265
 Through all the seasons of the changeful
 year,
 Obscurely doth take upon herself
 To labour for them; bringing each in turn
 The tribute of enjoyment, knowledge,
 health,
 Beauty, or strength! Such privilege is theirs, 270
 Granted alike in the outset of their
 course
 To both; and, if that partnership must
 cease,
 I grieve not,” to the Pastor here he
 turned,
 “Much as I glory in that child of yours, Repine not for his cottage-comrade,
 whom 275
 Belike no higher destiny awaits
 Than the old hereditary wish fulfilled;
 The wish for liberty to live—content With what Heaven grants, and die—in peace of mind,

Within the bosom of his native vale. 280
 At least, whatever fate the noon of life
 Reserves for either, sure it is that both
 Have been permitted to enjoy the dawn;
 Whether regarded as a jocund time,
 That in itself may terminate, or lead 285
 In course of nature to a sober eve.
 Both have been fairly dealt with; looking back
 They will allow that justice has in them
 Been shown, alike to body and to mind.”

He paused, as if revolving in his soul
 Some weighty matter; then, with fervent
 voice 291
 And an impassioned majesty, exclaimed—

“O for the coming of that glorious
 time
 When, prizing knowledge as her noblest
 wealth 294
 And best protection, this imperial Realm,
 While she exacts allegiance, shall admit
 An obligation, on her part, to teach Them who are born to serve her and obey;
 Binding herself by statute to secure¹
 For all the children whom her soil maintains 300
 The rudiments of letters, and inform
 The mind with moral and religious truth, Both understood and practised,—so that
 none,
 However destitute, be left to droop
 By timely culture unsustained; or run 305
 Into a wild disorder; or be forced To drudge through a weary life without the help
 Of intellectual implements and tools;
 A savage horde among the civilised,
 A servile band among the lordly free! 310
 This sacred right, the lisping babe proclaims
 To be inherent in him, by Heaven’s will,
 For the protection of his innocence;
 And the rude boy—who, having overpast
 The sinless age, by conscience is enrolled, 315
 Yet mutinously knits his angry brow,

And lifts his wilful hand on mischief bent,
Or turns the godlike faculty of speech
To impious use—by process indirect Declares his due, while he makes known his need. 320

—This sacred right is fruitlessly announced,

This universal plea in vain addressed,
To eyes and ears of parents who themselves

Did, in the time of their necessity, Urge it in vain; and, therefore, like a
prayer 325

That from the humblest floor ascends to
heaven,

It mounts to reach the State's parental
ear;

Who, if indeed she own a mother's heart,
And be not most unfeelingly devoid

Of gratitude to Providence, will grant 330
The unquestionable good—which, England, safe

From interference of external force, May grant at leisure; without risk incurred

That what in wisdom for herself she doth,
Others shall e'er be able to undo. 335

“Look! and behold, from Calpe's sunburnt cliffs

To the flat margin of the Baltic sea,
Long-reverenced titles cast away as weeds;

Laws overturned; and territory split,
Like fields of ice rent by the polar
wind, 340

And forced to join in less obnoxious shapes

Which, ere they gain consistence, by a gust

Of the same breath are shattered and destroyed.

Meantime the sovereignty of these fair
Isles

Remains entire and indivisible: 345

And, if that ignorance were removed, which breeds

Within the compass of their several shores
Dark discontent, or loud commotion, each

Might still preserve the beautiful repose.

Of heavenly bodies shining in their spheres. 350

—The discipline of slavery is unknown
Among us,—hence the more do we require

The discipline of virtue; order else
Cannot subsist, nor confidence, nor peace.

Thus, duties rising out of good possess 355
And prudent caution needful to avert

Impending evil, equally require That the whole people should be taught and trained.

So shall licentiousness and black resolve
Be rooted out, and virtuous habits take 360

Their place; and genuine piety descend,
Like an inheritance, from age to age.

“With such foundations laid, avaunt
the fear

Of numbers crowded on their native soil,
To the prevention of all healthful

growth 365
Through mutual injury! Rather in the law

Of increase and the mandate from above Rejoice!—and ye have special cause for
joy.

—For, as the element of air affords
An easy passage to the industrious
bees 370

Fraught with their burthens; and a way as smooth

For those ordained to take their sounding flight

From the thronged hive, and settle where they list

In fresh abodes—their labour to renew;
So the wide waters, open to the power, 375

The will, the instincts, and appointed
needs

Of Britain, do invite her to cast off
Her swarms, and in succession send them
forth;

Bound to establish new communities
On every shore whose aspect favours

hope 380
Or bold adventure; promising to skill
And perseverance their deserved reward.

“Yes,” he continued, kindling as he
spake,

“Change wide, and deep, and silently
performed,

This Land shall witness; and as days roll
 on, 385
 Earth's universal frame shall feel the
 effect;
 Even till the smallest habitable rock,
 Beaten by lonely billows, hear the songs
 Of humanised society; and bloom
 With civil arts, that shall breathe forth their fragrance, 390
 A grateful tribute to all-ruling Heaven.
 From culture, unexclusively bestowed
 On Albion's noble Race in freedom born, Expect these mighty issues: from the
 pains 394
 And faithful care of unambitious schools
 Instructing simple childhood's ready ear:
 Thence look for these magnificent results!
 —Vast the circumference of hope—and ye
 Are at its centre, British Lawgivers; Ah! sleep not there in shame! Shall Wisdom's voice 400
 From out the bosom of these troubled
 times
 Repeat the dictates of her calmer mind,
 And shall the venerable halls ye fill
 Refuse to echo the sublime decree?
 Trust not to partial care a general good;
 Transfer not to futurity a work 406 Of urgent need.—Your Country must complete
 Her glorious destiny. Begin even now, Now, when oppression, like the Egyptian plague
 Of darkness, stretched o'er guilty Europe,
 makes 410
 The brightness more conspicuous that invests
 The happy Island where ye think and act;
 Now, when destruction is a prime pur-
 suit,
 Show to the wretched nations for what
 end 414
 The powers of civil polity were given.”

Abruptly here, but with a graceful air,
 The Sage broke off. No sooner had he
 ceased
 Than, looking forth, the gentle Lady said, “Behold the shades of afternoon have fallen

Upon this flowery slope; and see—beyond— 420
 The silvery lake is streaked with placid
 blue;
 As if preparing for the peace of evening.
 How temptingly the landscape shines!
 The air
 Breathes invitation; easy is the walk
 To the lake's margin, where a boat lies moored 425
 Under a sheltering tree.”—Upon this hint
 We rose together: all were pleased; but most Theauteous girl, whose cheek was flushed with joy.
 Light as a sunbeam glides along the hills
 She vanished—eager to impart the scheme
 To her loved brother and his shy com-
 peer. 431
 —Now was there bustle in the Vicar's
 house
 And earnest preparation.—Forth we went,
 And down the vale along the streamlet's
 edge
 Pursued our way, a broken company, 435
 Mute or conversing, single or in pairs.
 Thus having reached a bridge, that over-arched
 The hasty rivulet where it lay becalmed
 In a deep pool, by happy chance we saw
 A twofold image; on a grassy bank 440
 A snow-white ram, and in the crystal
 flood
 Another and the same! Most beautiful,
 On the green turf, with his imperial front Shaggy and bold, and wreathed horns superb,
 The breathing creature stood; as beautiful, 445
 Beneath him, showed his shadowy counterpart.
 Each had his glowing mountains, each his sky,
 And each seemed centre of his own fair
 world:
 Antipodes unconscious of each other,
 Yet, in partition, with their several spheres, 450
 Blended in perfect stillness, to our sight!

“Ah! what a pity were it to disperse,

Or to disturb, so fair a spectacle,
And yet a breath can do it!"

These few words

The Lady whispered, while we stood and
gazed 455

Gathered together, all in still delight, Not without awe. Thence passing on,
she said

In like low voice to my particular ear,
"I love to hear that eloquent old Man
Pour forth his meditations, and descant
On human life from infancy to age. 461

How pure his spirit! in what vivid hues
His mind gives back the various forms
of things,

Caught in their fairest, happiest, attitude!

While he is speaking, I have power to
see 465

Even as he sees; but when his voice hath
ceased,

Then, with a sigh, sometimes I feel, as
now,

That combinations so serene and bright
Cannot be lasting in a world like ours,
Whose highest beauty, beautiful as it
is, 470

Like that reflected in yon quiet pool, Seems but a fleeting sunbeam's gift, whose
peace

The sufferance only of a breath of air!"

More had she said—but sportive shouts
were heard

Sent from the jocund hearts of those two Boys, 475

Who, bearing each a basket on his arm, Down the green field came tripping after us.

With caution we embarked; and now the pair

For prouder service were address; but
each,

Wishful to leave an opening for my choice, 480

Dropped the light oar his eager hand had seized.

Thanks given for that becoming courtesy,
Their place I took—and for a grateful office

Pregnant with recollections of the time

When, on thy bosom, spacious Winder-
mere! 485

A Youth, I practised this delightful art; Tossed on the waves alone, or 'mid a crew

Of joyous comrades. Soon as the reedy
marge

Was cleared, I dipped, with arms accordant, oars

Free from obstruction; and the boat advanced 490

Through crystal water, smoothly as a hawk,

That, disentangled from the shady boughs
Of some thick wood, her place of covert,
cleaves

With correspondent wings the abyss of
air.

—"Observe," the Vicar said, "yon rocky isle 495

With birch-trees fringed; my hand shall guide the helm,

While thitherward we shape our course;
or while

We seek that other, on the western shore;
Where the bare columns of those lofty firs,

Supporting gracefully a massy dome 500
Of sombre foliage, seem to imitate

A Grecian temple rising from the Deep."

"Turn where we may," said I, "we cannot err

In this delicious region."—Cultured slopes, Wild tracts of forest-ground, and scattered groves, 505

And mountains bare, or clothed with ancient woods,

Surrounded us; and, as we held our way
Along the level of the glassy flood,

They ceased not to surround us; change of place,

From kindred features diversely combined, 510

Producing change of beauty ever new.
—Ah! that such beauty, varying in the
light

Of living nature, cannot be portrayed
By words, nor by the pencil's silent skill;
But is the property of him alone 515

Who hath beheld it, noted it with care,

And in his mind recorded it with love !
 Suffice it, therefore, if the rural Muse
 Vouchsafe sweet influence, while her Poet speaks
 Of trivial occupations well devised, 520
 And unsought pleasures springing up by
 chance ;
 As if some friendly Genius had ordained That, as the day thus far had been enriched
 By acquisition of sincere delight,
 The same should be continued to its
 close. 525

One spirit animating old and young,
 A gipsy-fire we kindled on the shore
 Of the fair Isle with birch-trees fringed—
 and there,
 Merrily seated in a ring, partook
 A choice repast—served by our young companions 530
 With rival earnestness and kindred glee.
 Launched from our hands the smooth stone skimmed the lake ;
 With shouts we raised the echoes ;—
 stiller sounds
 The lovely Girl supplied—a simple song, Whose low tones reached not to the distant rocks 535
 To be repeated thence, but gently sank Into our hearts ; and charmed the peaceful flood.

Rapaciously we gathered flowery spoils
 From land and water ; lilies of each hue—Golden and white, that float upon the waves, 540
 And court the wind ; and leaves of that shy plant,
 (Her flowers were shed) the lily of the
 vale,
 That loves the ground, and from the sun withholds
 Her pensive beauty ; from the breeze her sweets.

Such product, and such pastime, did
 the place 545
 And season yield ; but, as we re-embarked,
 Leaving, in quest of other scenes, the
 shore

Of that wild spot, the Solitary said
 In a low voice, yet careless who might
 hear,
 “The fire, that burned so brightly to our
 wish, 550
 Where is it now?—Deserted on the beach—
 Dying, or dead ! Nor shall the fanning
 breeze
 Revive its ashes. What care we for this, Whose ends are gained ? Behold an emblem here
 Of one day's pleasure, and all mortal
 joys ! 555
 And, in this unpremeditated slight
 Of that which is no longer needed, see
 The common course of human gratitude !”

This plaintive note disturbed not the
 repose
 Of the still evening. Right across the lake
 Our pinnacle moves ; then, coasting creek and bay, 561
 Glades we behold, and into thickets peep,
 Where couch the spotted deer ; or raised
 our eyes
 To shaggy steeps on which the careless goat
 Browsed by the side of dashing waterfalls ; 565
 And thus the bark, meandering with the
 shore,
 Pursued her voyage, till a natural pier
 Of jutting rock invited us to land.

Alert to follow as the Pastor led,
 We clomb a green hill's side ; and, as we clomb, 570
 The Valley, opening out her bosom, gave Fair prospect, intercepted less and less,
 O'er the flat meadows and indented coast
 Of the smooth lake, in compass seen :— far off,
 And yet conspicuous, stood the old Church-tower, 575
 In majesty presiding over fields
 And habitations seemingly preserved
 From all intrusion of the restless world
 By rocks impassable and mountains huge.

Soft heath this elevated spot supplied,

And choice of moss-clad stones, whereon
we couched 581

Or sate reclined; admiring quietly
The general aspect of the scene; but each
Not seldom over anxious to make known
His own discoveries; or to favourite points 585

Directing notice, merely from a wish To impart a joy, imperfect while un-shared.

That rapturous moment never shall I forget

When these particular interests were effaced

From every mind!—Already had the
sun, 590

Sinking with less than ordinary state, Attained his western bound; but rays of
light—

Now suddenly diverging from the orb Retired behind the mountain-tops or veiled

By the dense air—shot upwards to the crown 595

Of the blue firmament—aloft, and wide:
And multitudes of little floating clouds,
Through their ethereal texture pierced—ere we,

Who saw, of change were conscious—had become

Vivid as fire; clouds separately poised,— Innumerable multitude of forms 601 Scattered through half the circle of the
sky;

And giving back, and shedding each on
each,

With prodigal communion, the bright
hues

Which from the unapparent fount of glory 605

They had imbibed, and ceased not to receive.

That which the heavens displayed, the liquid deep

Repeated; but with unity sublime!

While from the grassy mountain's open
side

We gazed, in silence hushed, with eyes
intent 610

On the refulgent spectacle, diffused

Through earth, sky, water, and all visible
space,

The Priest in holy transport thus exclaimed:

“Eternal Spirit! universal God!
Power inaccessible to human thought,
Save by degrees and steps which thou hast deigned 616

To furnish; for this effluence of thyself,
To the infirmity of mortal sense
Vouchsafed; this local transitory type Of thy paternal splendours, and the pomp 620

Of those who fill thy courts in highest
heaven,

The radiant Cherubim;—accept the
thanks

Which we, thy humble Creatures, here
convened,

Presume to offer; we, who—from the
breast 624

Of the frail earth, permitted to behold
The faint reflections only of thy face—
Are yet exalted, and in soul adore!

Such as they are who in thy presence
stand

Unsullied, incorruptible, and drink
Imperishable majesty streamed forth 630
From thy empyreal throne, the elect of
earth

Shall be—divested at the appointed hour
Of all dishonour, cleansed from mortal stain.

—Accomplish, then, their number; and conclude

Time's weary course! Or if, by thy decree,
The consummation that will come by stealth 636

Be yet far distant, let thy Word prevail,
Oh! let thy Word prevail, to take away
The sting of human nature. Spread the
law,

As it is written in thy holy book, 640
Throughout all lands: let every nation
hear

The high behest, and every heart obey;
Both for the love of purity, and hope
Which it affords, to such as do thy will
And persevere in good, that they shall
rise, 645

To have a nearer view of thee, in heaven.
—Father of good! this prayer in bounty grant,

In mercy grant it, to thy wretched sons.
Then, nor till then, shall persecution
cease,

And cruel wars expire. The way is marked, 650

The guide appointed, and the ransom
paid.

Alas! the nations, who of yore received These tidings, and in Christian temples
meet

The sacred truth to acknowledge, linger
still;

Preferring bonds and darkness to a state
Of holy freedom, by redeeming love 656 Proffered to all, while yet on earth detained.

“So fare the many; and the thoughtful
few,

Who in the anguish of their souls bewail
This dire perverseness, cannot choose but ask, 660

Shall it endure?—Shall enmity and strife, Falsehood and guile, be left to sow their
seed;

And the kind never perish? Is the hope Fallacious, or shall righteousness obtain
A peaceable dominion, wide as earth, 665

And ne'er to fail? Shall that blest day
arrive

When they, whose choice or lot it is to
dwell

In crowded cities, without fear shall live Studious of mutual benefit; and he,

Whom Morn awakens, among dews and
flowers 670

Of every clime, to till the lonely field,
Be happy in himself?—The law of faith

Working through love, such conquest shall it gain,

Such triumph over sin and guilt achieve?
Almighty Lord, thy further grace im-

part! 675

And with that help the wonder shall be
seen

Fulfilled, the hope accomplished; and thy
praise

Be sung with transport and unceasing joy.

“Once,” and with wild demeanour, as he spake,

On us the venerable Pastor turned 680
His beaming eye that had been raised to

Heaven,

“Once, while the Name, Jehovah, was a
sound

Within the circuit of this sea-girt isle Unheard, the savage nations bowed the
head

To Gods delighting in remorseless deeds; Gods which themselves had fashioned, to promote 686

Ill purposes, and flatter foul desires.
Then, in the bosom of yon mountain-cove,

To those inventions of corrupted man Mysterious rites were solemnised; and
there— 690

Amid impending rocks and gloomy
woods—

Of those terrific Idols some received
Such dismal service, that the loudest voice Of the swoln cataracts (which now are
heard

Soft murmuring) was too weak to over-
come, 695

Though aided by wild winds, the groans and shrieks

Of human victims, offered up to appease
Or to propitiate. And, if living eyes
Had visionary faculties to see

The thing that hath been as the thing that is, 700

Aghast we might behold this crystal Mere Bedimmed with smoke, in wreaths voluminous,

Flung from the body of devouring fires,
To Taranis erected on the heights

By priestly hands, for sacrifice performed
Exultingly, in view of open day 706

And full assemblage of a barbarous host;
Or to Andates, female Power! who gave (For so they fancied) glorious victory.

—A few rude monuments of mountain-
stone 710

Survive; all else is swept away.—How
bright

The appearances of things! From such,
how changed

The existing worship; and with those compared,

The worshippers how innocent and blest !
 So wide the difference, a willing mind Might almost think, at this affecting
 hour, 716
 That paradise, the lost abode of man,
 Was raised again : and to a happy few,
 In its original beauty, here restored.

“Whence but from thee, the true and only God, 720
 And from the faith derived through Him who bled

Upon the cross, this marvellous advance
 Of good from evil ; as if one extreme Were left, the other gained.—O ye, who
 come 724

To kneel devoutly in yon reverend Pile,
 Called to such office by the peaceful sound Of sabbath bells ; and ye, who sleep in
 earth,

All cares forgotten, round its hallowed
 walls !

For you, in presence of this little band
 Gathered together on the green hill-side,
 Your Pastor is emboldened to prefer 731
 Vocal thanksgivings to the eternal King ; Whose love, whose counsel, whose commands, have made

Your very poorest rich in peace of thought And in good works ; and him, who is endowed 735

With scantiest knowledge, master of all
 truth

Which the salvation of his soul requires.
 Conscious of that abundant favour showered

On you, the children of my humble care,
 And this dear land, our country, while on
 earth 740

We sojourn, have I lifted up my soul,
 Joy giving voice to fervent gratitude.
 These barren rocks, your stern inheritance ;

These fertile fields, that recompense your
 pains ;

The shadowy vale, the sunny mountain-
 top ; 745

Woods waving in the wind their lofty
 heads,

Or hushed ; the roaring waters, and the
 still—

They see the offering of my lifted hands,
 They hear my lips present their sacrifice,
 They know if I be silent, morn or even :
 For, though in whispers speaking, the full heart 751

Will find a vent ; and thought is praise
 to him,

Audible praise, to thee, omniscient Mind,
 From whom all gifts descend, all blessings flow !”

This vesper-service closed, without delay, 755

From that exalted station to the plain Descending, we pursued our homeward
 course,

In mute composure, o'er the shadowy
 lake,

Under a faded sky. No trace remained
 Of those celestial splendours ; grey the vault— 760

Pure, cloudless, ether ; and the star of eve

Was wanting ; but inferior lights appeared Faintly, too faint almost for sight ; and some

Above the darkened hills stood boldly
 forth

In twinkling lustre, ere the boat attained
 Her mooring-place ; where, to the sheltering tree, 766

Our youthful Voyagers bound fast her prow,

With prompt yet careful hands. This done, we paced

The dewy fields ; but ere the Vicar's door Was reached, the Solitary checked his
 steps ; 770

Then, intermingling thanks, on each bestowed

A farewell salutation ; and, the like Receiving, took the slender path that leads

To the one cottage in the lonely dell :
 But turned not without welcome promise
 made 775

That he would share the pleasures and pursuits

Of yet another summer's day, not loth
 To wander with us through the fertile
 vales,

And o'er the mountain-wastes. "Another sun,"
 Said he, "shall shine upon us, ere we
 part; 780
 Another sun, and peradventure more;
 If time, with free consent, be yours to
 give,
 And season favours."

To enfeebled Power,
 From this communion with uninjured
 Minds,
 What renovation had been brought; and what 785
 Degree of healing to a wounded spirit,

Dejected, and habitually disposed
 To seek, in degradation of the Kind,
 Excuse and solace for her own defects;
 How far those erring notions were reformed; 790
 And whether aught, of tendency as good
 And pure, from further intercourse ensued;
 This—if delightful hopes, as heretofore,
 Inspire the serious song, and gentle
 Hearts
 Cherish, and lofty Minds approve the
 past— 795
 My future labours may not leave untold.

NOTES.

"If thou indeed derive thy light" (Inscription following title-page).

Written (earliest draft) some time after 1813; first printed (amongst Poems of Sentiment and Reflection) in ed. 1827. Expanded (1836), and placed in its present position in ed. 1845.—Ed.

GUILT AND SORROW (page 23).

Thirty stanzas (xxli.—xxxlv., and xxxviii.—l.) of Guilt and Sorrow were printed in the Lyrical Ballads of 1798, under the title of The Female Vagrant. This poem of 1798—much altered from time to time, and ultimately cut down to twenty-five stanzas—appeared in successive edd. of the Poetical Works from 1815 to 1843. The whole, as it now stands, was first printed in the vol. entitled Poems, Chiefly of Early and Late Years (1842). "Beside the changes made in these stanzas by Wordsworth from the point of view of poetic art, there are others the object of which seems to be to moderate the force of his indictment of society" (Dowden).—Ed.

"And, hovering, round it often did a raven fly" (page 25, l. 81).

From a short MS. poem read to me when an undergraduate, by my schoolfellow and friend, Charles Farish, long since deceased. The verses were by a brother of his, a man of promising genius, who died young.—W.

THE BORDERERS (page 37).

This Dramatic Piece, as noticed in its title-page, was composed in 1795-6. It lay nearly from that time till within the last two or three months unregarded among my papers, without being mentioned even to my most intimate friends. Having, however, impressions upon my mind which made me unwilling to destroy the MS., I determined to undertake the responsibility of publishing it during my own life, rather than impose upon my successors the task of deciding its fate. Accordingly it has been revised with some care; but, as it was at first written, and is now published, without any view to its exhibition upon the stage, not the slightest alteration has been made in the conduct of the story, or the composition of the characters; above all, in respect to the two leading Persons of the Drama, I felt no inducement to make any change. The study of human nature suggests this awful truth, that, as in the trials to which life subjects us, sin and crime are apt to start from their very opposite qualities, so are there no limits to the hardening of the heart, and the perversion of the understanding to which they may carry their slaves. During my long residence in France, while the revolution was rapidly advancing to its extreme of wickedness, I had frequent opportunities of being an eye-witness of this process, and it was while that knowledge was fresh upon my memory, that the Tragedy of "The Borderers" was composed.—W.

TO A BUTTERFLY (page 79).

The following pseudonyms occur in Wordsworth's poems:—Emmeline, Emma=Dorothy, Dora, the poet's sister; Laura=Dora his daughter (until after her death in 1847); Edward=Johnnie, the household name of his eldest born. Each of these poetical substitutes, it will be observed, is the exact metrical or accentual equivalent of the baptismal name for which it stands. The identity of the pseudonym Louisa (Poems Founded on the Affections, No. VI.) has been recently discussed (Athenaeum, Sept. 16; Oct. 14, 21, 1894). If Louisa was chosen—as the above-mentioned names undoubtedly were—on the principle of metrical equivalence, then the "young lady" so named by the poet cannot have been either Dorothy his sister, or Mary his wife. It is possible that by Louisa Wordsworth may have intended his wife's sister, the "wild-hearted maid," Joanna Hutchinson; nor should the opening lines of the poem To Joanna—which, rightly understood, amount to nothing more than merry banter—be regarded as constituting a solid argument against this view. The case of Lycoris is irrelevant, and need not be discussed here.—Ed.

THE MOTHER'S RETURN (page 81).

This poem was written by Dorothy Wordsworth at Coleorton, on the eve of the return of Wordsworth and his wife from London where they had spent a month (prob. April) in 1807.—Ed.

THE NORMAN BOY (page 91).

"Among ancient Trees there are few, I believe, at least in France, so worthy of attention as an Oak which may be seen in the 'Pays de Caux,' about a league from Yvetot, close to the church, and in the burial-ground of Allonville.

"The height of this Tree does not answer to its girth; the trunk, from the roots to the summit, forms a complete cone; and the inside of this cone is hollow throughout the whole of its height.

"Such is the oak of Allonville, in its state of nature. The hand of Man, however, has endeavoured to impress upon it a character still more interesting, by adding a religious feeling to the respect which its age naturally inspires.

"The lower part of its hollow trunk has been transformed into a Chapel of six or seven feet in diameter, carefully wainscotted and paved, and an open iron gate guards the humble Sanctuary.

"Leading to it there is a staircase, which twists round the body of the Tree. At certain seasons of the year divine service is performed in this Chapel.

"The summit has been broken off many years, but there is a surface at the top of the trunk, of the diameter of a very large tree, and from it rises a pointed roof, covered with slates, in the form of a steeple, which is surmounted with an iron Cross, that rises in a picturesque manner from the middle of the leaves, like an ancient Hermitage above the surrounding Wood.

"Over the entrance to the Chapel an Inscription appears, which informs us it was erected by the Abbé du Détroit, Curate of Allonville in the year 1696; and over a door is another, dedicating it 'To Our Lady of Peace.'"

Vide No. 14, Saturday Magazine.—W.

TO — (page 110).

No doubt addressed to the Poet's daughter Dora. See The Longest Day, stanza xvi.—Ed.

THE EMIGRANT MOTHER (page 120).

This poem was written in the orchard, Townsend, Grasmere, in the spring of 1802.—Ed.

TO THE DAISY (page 157).

This poem, and two others to the same flower, were written in the year 1802; which is mentioned, because in some of the ideas, though not in the manner in which those ideas are connected, and likewise even in some of the expressions, there is a resemblance to passages in a poem (lately published) of Mr. Montgomery's, entitled "A Field Flower." This being said, Mr. Montgomery will not think any apology due to him; I cannot, however, help addressing him in the words of the Father of English Poets:

"Though it happe me to rehersin
That ye han in your freshe songs saied,
Forberith me, and beth not ill apaied,
Sith that ye se I doe it in the honour
Of Love, and eke in service of the Flour." 1807.—W.

THE SEVEN SISTERS (page 161).

The story of this poem is from the German of Frederica Brun [flor. 1765—1835.—Ed.].—W.

THE DANISH BOY (page 165).

"These stanzas were designed to introduce a Ballad upon the Story of a Danish Prince who had fled from Battle, and, for the sake of the valuables about him, was murdered by the Inhabitant of a Cottage in which he had taken refuge. The House fell under a curse, and the Spirit of the Youth, it was believed, haunted the Valley where the crime had been committed."—W. 1827.

THE WAGGONER (page 173).

Several years after the event that forms the subject of the poem, in company with my friend, the late Mr. Coleridge, I happened to fall in with the person to whom the name of Benjamin is given. Upon our expressing regret that we had not, for a long time, seen upon the road either him or his waggon, he said:—"They could not do without me; and as to the man who was put in my place, no good could come out of him; he was a man of no ideas."

The fact of my discarded hero's getting the horses out of a great difficulty with a word, as related in the poem, was told me by an eyewitness.—W.

"The buzzing dor-hawk, round and round, is wheeling" (page 173, l. 3).

When the poem was first written the note of the bird was thus described:

"The Night-hawk is singing his frog-like tune, Twirling his watchman's rattle about—"

but from unwillingness to startle the reader at the outset by so bold a mode of expression, the passage was altered as it now stands.—W.

After the line, "Can any mortal clog come to her," (p. 178, l. 28) followed in the MS. an incident which has been kept back. Part of the suppressed verses shall here be given as a gratification of private feeling, which the well-disposed reader will find no difficulty in excusing. They are now printed for the first time.

Can any mortal clog come to her?
It can:

But Benjamin, in his vexation,
Possesses inward consolation;
He knows his ground, and hopes to find
A spot with all things to his mind,
An upright mural block of stone,
Moist with pure water trickling down.
A slender spring; but kind to man
It is, a true Samaritan;
Close to the highway, pouring out
Its offering from a chink or spout;
Whence all, how'er athirst, or drooping
With toil, may drink, and without stooping.

Cries Benjamin "Where is it, where?
Voice it hath none, but must be near."
—A star, declining towards the west,
Upon the watery surface threw
Its image tremulously imprest,
That just marked out the object and withdrew.
Right welcome service!

ROCK OF NAMES!¹

Light is the strain, but not unjust
To Thee and Thy memorial-trust
That once seemed only to express Love that was love in idleness;
Tokens, as year hath followed year
How changed, alas, in character!
For they were graven on thy smooth breast
By hands of those my soul loved best;
Meek women, men as true and brave
As ever went to a hopeful grave:
Their hands and mine, when side by side
With kindred zeal and mutual pride,

¹ The "Rock of Names" is at Thirlmere, "on the right hand of the road a short way past Waterhead." Upon it were carved the initials of William, Dorothy and John Wordsworth, of S. T. Coleridge, and of Mary and Sarah Hutchinson.—Ed.

We worked until the Initials took Shapes that defied a scornful look.—
 Long as for us a genial feeling
 Survives, or one in need of healing,
 The power, dear Rock, around these cast,
 Thy monumental power, shall last
 For me and mine! O thought of pain,
 That would impair it or profane!
 Take all in kindness then, as said
 With a staid heart but playful head;
 And fail not Thou, loved Rock! to keep Thy charge when we are laid asleep."—W.

"She was a Phantom of delight" (page 186).

"She was a Phantom of delight, he [Wordsworth] said, was written 'on his dear wife.'" (Hon. Justice Coleridge in Memoirs of Wordsworth, II. 306).—Ed.

"O Nightingale! thou surely art" (page 186).

Written probably at Coleorton, in Nov. or Dec., 1806.—Ed.

RESOLUTION AND INDEPENDENCE (page 195).

W. wrote as follows to some friends who had received a copy of Resolution and Independence in manuscript:—"I will explain to you in prose my feelings in writing that poem. . . . I describe myself as having been exalted to the highest pitch of delight by the joyousness and beauty of nature; and then as depressed, even in the midst of those beautiful objects, to the lowest dejection and despair. A young poet in the midst of the happiness of nature is described as overwhelmed by the thoughts of the miserable reverses which have befallen the happiest of all men, viz. poets. I think of this till I am so deeply impressed with it, that I consider the manner in which I was rescued from my dejection and despair almost as an interposition of Providence. A person reading the poem with feelings like mine will have been awed and controlled, expecting something spiritual or supernatural. What is brought forward? A lonely place, 'a pond by which an old man was, far from all house or home:' not stood, nor sat, but was—the figure presented in the most naked simplicity possible. This feeling of spirituality or supernaturalness is again referred to as being strong in my mind in this passage. How came he here? thought I, or what can he be doing? I then describe him, whether ill or well is not for me to judge with perfect confidence; but this I can confidently affirm, that though I believe God has given me a strong imagination, I cannot conceive a figure more impressive than that of an old man like this, the survivor of a wife and ten children, travelling alone among the mountains and all lonely places, carrying with him his own fortune, and the necessities which an unjust state of society has laid upon him."—Memoirs of Wordsworth, I. 172, 173.

THE THORN (page 197).

This Poem ought to have been preceded by an introductory Poem, which I have been prevented from writing by never having felt myself in a mood when it was probable that I should write it well. The character which I have here introduced speaking is sufficiently common. The Reader will perhaps have a general notion of it, if he has ever known a man, a captain of a small trading vessel, for example, who being past the middle age of life, had retired upon an annuity or small independent income to some village or country town of which he was not a native, or in which he had not been accustomed to live. Such men, having little to do, become credulous and talkative from indolence; and from the same cause, and other predisposing causes by which it is probable that such men may have been affected, they are prone to superstition. On which account it appeared to me proper to select a character like this to exhibit some of the general laws by which superstition acts upon the mind. Superstitious men are almost always men of slow faculties and deep feelings; their minds are not loose, but adhesive; they have a reasonable share of imagination, by which word I mean the faculty which produces impressive effects out of simple elements; but they are utterly destitute of fancy, the power by which pleasure and surprise are excited by sudden varieties of situation and by accumulated imagery.

It was my wish in this poem to show the manner in which such men cleave to the same ideas; and to follow the turns of passion, always different, yet not palpably different, by which their conversation is swayed. I had two objects to attain; first, to represent a picture which should not be unimpressive, yet consistent with the character that should describe it; secondly, while I adhered to the style in which such persons describe, to take care that words, which in their minds are impregnated with passion, should likewise convey passion to Readers who are not accustomed to sympathize with men feeling in that manner or using such language. It seemed to me that this might be done by calling in the assistance of Lyrical and rapid Metre. It was necessary that the Poem, to be natural, should in reality move slowly; yet I hoped that, by the aid of the metre, to those who should at all enter into the spirit of the Poem, it would appear to move quickly. The Reader will have the kindness to excuse this note, as I am sensible that an introductory Poem is necessary to give the Poem its full effect.

Upon this occasion I will request permission to add a few words closely connected with 'The Thorn' and many other Poems in these volumes. There is a numerous class of readers who imagine that the same words cannot be repeated without tautology: this is a great error: virtual tautology is much oftener produced by using different words when the meaning is exactly the same. Words, a Poet's words more particularly, ought to be weighed in the balance of feeling, and not measured by the space which they occupy upon paper. For the Reader cannot be too often reminded that Poetry is passion: it is the history or science of feelings. Now every man must know that an attempt is rarely made to communicate impassioned feelings without something of an accompanying consciousness of the inadequateness of our own powers, or the deficiencies of language. During such efforts there will be a craving in the mind, and as long as it is unsatisfied the speaker will cling to the same words, or words of the same character. There are also various other reasons why repetition and apparent tautology are frequently beauties of the highest kind. Among the chief of these reasons is the interest which the mind attaches to words, not only as symbols of the passion, but as things, active and efficient, which are of themselves part of the passion. And further, from a spirit of fondness, exultation, and gratitude, the mind luxuriates in the repetition of words which appear successfully to communicate its feelings. The truth of these remarks might be shown by innumerable passages from the Bible, and from the impassioned poetry of every nation. "Awake, awake, Deborah!" &c. Judges, chap. v., verses 12th, 27th, and part of 28th. See also the whole of that tumultuous and wonderful Poem.—W. 1800—1805.

Henry Lord Clifford, &c., &c., who is the subject of this poem, was the son of John Lord Clifford, who was slain at Towton Field, which John Lord Clifford, as is known to the reader of English history, was the person who after the battle of Wakefield slew, in the pursuit, the young Earl of Rutland, son of the Duke of York, who had fallen in the battle, "in part of revenge" (say the Authors of the "History of Cumberland and Westmoreland"); "for the Earl's Father had slain his." A deed which worthily blemished the author (saith Speed); but who, as he adds, "dare promise anything temperate of himself in the heat of martial fury?" chiefly, when it was resolved not to leave any branch of the York line standing; for so one maketh this Lord to speak." This, no doubt, I would observe by the bye, was an action sufficiently in the vindictive spirit of the times, and yet not altogether so bad as represented; "for the Earl was no child, as some writers would have him, but able to bear arms, being sixteen or seventeen years of age, as is evident from this, (say the Memoirs of the Countess of Pembroke, who was laudably anxious to wipe away, as far as could be, this stigma from the illustrious name to which she was born,) that he was the next child to King Edward the Fourth, which his mother had by Richard Duke of York, and that King was then eighteen years of age; and for the small distance betwixt her children, see Austin Vincent, in his 'Book of Nobility,' p. 622, where he writes of them all." It may further be observed, that Lord Clifford, who was then himself only twenty-five years of age, had been a leading man and commander two or three years together in the army of Lancaster, before this time; and, therefore, would be less likely to think that the Earl of Rutland might be entitled to mercy from his youth.—But independent of this act, at best a cruel and savage one, the family of Clifford had done enough to draw upon them the vehement hatred of the House of York; so that after the Battle of Towton there was no hope for them but in flight and concealment. Henry, the subject of the poem, was deprived of his estate and honours during the space of twenty-four years; all which time he lived as a shepherd in Yorkshire, or in Cumberland, where the estate of his father-in-law (Sir Lancelot Threlkeld) lay. He was restored to his estate and honours in the first year of Henry the Seventh. It is recorded that, "when called to Parliament, he behaved nobly and wisely; but otherwise came seldom to London or the Court; and rather delighted to live in the country, where he repaired several of his Castles, which had gone to decay during the late troubles." Thus far is chiefly collected from Nicholson and Burn; and I can add, from my own knowledge, that there is a tradition current in the village of Threlkeld and its neighbourhood, his principal retreat, that, in the course of his shepherd-life, he had acquired great astronomical knowledge. I cannot conclude this note without adding a word upon the subject of those numerous and noble feudal edifices, spoken of in the poem, the ruins of some of which are, at this day, so great an ornament to that interesting country. The Cliffords had always been distinguished for an honourable pride in these Castles; and we have seen that, after the wars of York and Lancaster, they were rebuilt; in the civil wars of Charles the First they were again laid waste, and again restored almost to their former magnificence by the celebrated Lady Anne Clifford, Countess of Pembroke, &c., &c. Not more than twenty-five years after this was done, when the estates of Clifford had passed into the family of Tufton, three of these Castles, namely, Brough, Brougham, and Pendragon, were demolished, and the timber and other materials sold by Thomas Earl of Thanet. We will hope that, when this order was issued, the Earl had not consulted the text of Isaiah, 58th chap. 12th verse, to which the inscription placed over the gate of Pendragon Castle, by the Countess of Pembroke (I believe his grandmother), at the time she repaired that structure, refers the reader:—"And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called the repairer of the breach, the restorer of paths to dwell in." The Earl of Thanet, the present possessor of the Estates, with a due respect for the memory of his ancestors, and a proper sense of the value and beauty of these remains of antiquity, has (I am told) given orders that they shall be preserved from all depredations.—W.

This line is from "The Battle of Bosworth Field," by Sir John Beaumont (brother to the Dramatist), whose poems are written with much spirit, elegance, and harmony; and have deservedly been reprinted lately in Chalmers' "Collection of English Poets."—W.

"And both the undying fish that swim
Through Bowscale-tarn," &c. (p. 205, ll. 122, 123).

It is imagined by the people of the country that there are two immortal fish, inhabitants of this tarn, which lies in the mountains not far from Threlkeld.—Blencathara, mentioned before, is the old and proper name of the mountain vulgarly called Saddle-back.—W.

"Armour rusting in his halls
On the blood of Clifford calls" (p. 205, ll. 142, 143).

The martial character of the Cliffords is well known to the readers of English history; but it may not be improper here to say, by way of comment on these lines and what follows, that besides several others who perished in the same manner, the four immediate progenitors of the person in whose hearing this is supposed to be spoken, all died in the field.—W.

*LINES COMPOSED A FEW MILES ABOVE

I have not ventured to call this Poem an Ode; but it was written with a hope that in the transitions and the impassioned music of the versification, would be found the principal requisites, of that species of composition.—W. 1802-5.

LAODAMIA (page 209).

In 1827 a change of unique importance—amounting to an absolute reversal of the central motive of the poem—was made in the penultimate stanza of Laodamia. In edd. 1815, 1820 the heroine's love, while described as at war with Reason, is expressly declared guiltless; and she is dismissed to the serene region tenanted by happy Ghosts, there "to gather flowers of blissful quiet," &c., &c. In 1827 all this is reversed. Love, indulged "in Reason's spite," is now declared a crime; and Laodamia, as manifestly guilty, is "doomed to wander in a grosser clime, Apart from happy Ghosts." In 1832 the severity of the sentence is mitigated: not now to dateless exile from the presence of her beloved, but to a limited period of exclusion,—an expiatory or purgatorial term of banishment—is she sentenced by "the just Gods whom no weak pity moves." Changes made subsequently to 1832 in no way affect the question of Laodamia's doom. The several forms successively assumed by this stanza must now be given:—

Ah, judge her gently who so deeply loved!
Her, who, in reason's spite, yet without crime,
Was in a trance of passion thus removed;
Delivered from the galling yoke of time
And these frail elements—to gather flowers
Of blissful quiet 'mid unfading bowers.

Edd. 1815, 1820.

By no weak pity might the Gods be moved;
She who thus perished not without the crime
Of Lovers that in Reason's spite have loved,
Was doomed to wander in a grosser clime
Apart from happy Ghosts—that gather flowers
Of blissful quiet 'mid unfading bowers.

Edd. 1827.

Edd. 1832 and 1836 follow ed. 1827 exactly, except in line 4, which in them runs as follows:—

"Was doomed to wear out her appointed time."
She—who, though warned, exhorted, and reproved,
Thus died, from passion desperate to a crime—
By the just Gods, whom no weak pity moved,
Was doomed to wear out her appointed time
Apart from happy Ghosts, that gather flowers, &c.

Edd. 1840-1843.

Our text follows the version of edd. 1845 and 1849. In defence of the change effected in 1827, Wordsworth wrote to his nephew John Wordsworth in 1831:—"As first written, the heroine was dismissed to happiness in Elysium. To what purpose then the mission of Protesilaus? He exhorts her to moderate her passion; the exhortation is fruitless, and no punishment follows. So it stood: at present she is placed among unhappy ghosts for disregard of the exhortation. Virgil also places her there; but compare the two passages and give me your opinion" (William Wordsworth, by Elizabeth Wordsworth, p. 131). Thus Laodamia probably owes the mitigated doom subsequently (ed. 1832) pronounced upon her to the interposition of the poet's nephew John Wordsworth.—Ed.

This poem began with the following stanza, which has been displaced on account of its detaining the reader too long from the subject, and as rather precluding, than preparing for the due effect of the allusion to the genius of Plato:

"Fair is the Swan, whose majesty, prevailing,"
&c., &c., &c.—W.

Heaved with convulsive throes, and all was still."

"In the Vale of Gramsere, by the side of the old highway leading to Ambleside, is a gate which, time out of mind, has been called the Wishing-gate."

Having been told, upon what I thought good authority, that this gate had been destroyed, and the opening, where it hung, walled up, I gave vent immediately to my feelings in these stanzas. But going to the place some time after, I found, with much delight, my old favourite unmolested.—W.

PETER BELL (page 236).

After line 515 occurred the stanza (immortalised by Shelley) omitted by Wordsworth after 1819:

"Is it a party in a parlour?
Cramm'd just as they on earth were cramm'd—
Some sipping punch, some sipping tea,
But, as you by their faces see,
All silent and all damn'd!"

In Crabb Robinson's Diary, June 6, 1812, we find: "Mrs. Basil Montagu told me she had no doubt she had suggested this image to Wordsworth by relating to him an anecdote. A person, walking in a friend's garden, looking in at a window, saw a company of ladies at a table near the window with countenances fixed. In an instant he was aware of their condition, and broke the window. He saved them from incipient suffocation."—Ed.

MISCELLANEOUS SONNETS (page 250).

Through the kindness of the author, Professor Edward Dowden, I am enabled to print at length the following valuable note upon the grouping of the Miscellaneous Sonnets. The note originally appeared in the Aldine Edition of Wordsworth's Poems, vol. lii., p. 327 (ed. 1892).—Ed.

"A group of Miscellaneous Sonnets was first published by Wordsworth in the 'Poems in two volumes,' 1807. In subsequent editions the number of Sonnets was increased, and the arrangement was altered. It seems to me evident that although these poems were written at various widely-parted times, they were finally arranged so as to illustrate one another, and form not indeed a linked chain of sonnets but a sequence as far as a sequence can be made from disconnected pieces by happy ordering. Let me try to show that this is the case with at least the thirty-six sonnets of Part I.

"I. Prefatory Sonnet on the Sonnet: contentment in limitation.

"II. The cottage of the poor; its beauty and happiness; contentment in limitation.

"III. The native vale of the child; the child's contentment in limitation altered by growth to manhood.

"IV. A little cottage, but glorified by Skiddaw and by the Muses.

"V. The glory of Skiddaw and its streams, though unsung by the Muses.

"VI. The glory of a little mountain stream sanctified by memory and the affections.

"VII. A mountain lake, glorified even more by human love than by Fancy and the Muses.

"VIII. Vale and mountain glorified by friendship and the art of music.

"IX. Immortality conferred on the beauty of nature by a friend's art of painting.

"X. True art springs from the human heart, and all external things are modified by human affections.

"XI. Fancy and the Muse also deal with outward nature and add a grace and dignity to it.

"XII, XIII, XIV., three sonnets 'To Sleep' stand unconnected with what precedes and serve as a resting-place.

"XV. The simplicity of the life of nature; the cumbersome pride of the artificial life.

"XVI. Walton; the happiness of a life 'nobly versed in simple discipline.'

"XVII. Dyer; the modesty and simplicity of his verse.

"XVIII. 'Peter Bell,' a poem of nature, ill received in an artificial age.

"XIX. Loss of cottage simplicity and its joys: the decay of spinning.

"XX. Spinning—a lost art: intellectual pride of the age.

"XXI. Pious use of the cottage fleece on Easter Sunday: contrast with these days of mechanical progress.

"XXII. Decay of rustic piety: Easter and Christmas church-going.

"XXIII. Piety of rural nuptials: love and religion united.

"XXIV-XXVI. Love and devotion have fitly led up to the sonnets translated from Michael Angelo, on mortal love leading to God.

"XXVII. And here is a fitting place for the contemplation of Death.

"XXVIII, XXIX. Beauty and repose in death a source of faith.

"XXX. But there are glad childlike hearts untouched by great solemnities, yet pure and sacred: mystery of the sea.

"XXXI. The 'reverential fear' of the sea, connected with a ship setting forth.

"XXXII. A ship singled out for love.

"XXXIII. How few of these glories and mysteries of Nature are felt by us! The mystery and beauty of the sea.

"XXXIV. The poets of Fashion contrasted with the poet of Nature.

"XXXV. Ennui and misanthropy of the poet of worldlings; how true Imagination transmutes the sorrows of life.

"XXXVI. Memorial Sonnet to Ralsley Calvert who enabled the author to live the life poetic.

"The reader who follows and verifies the above analysis can hardly doubt that Wordsworth was studious to arrange his sonnets with a view to their mutual illustration."

COUNTESS OF WINCHILSEA.—W.

"Wild Redbreast!" &c. (Sonnet XI., page 272).

This Sonnet, as Poetry, explains itself, yet the scene of the incident having been a wild wood, it may be doubted, as a point of natural history, whether the bird was aware that his attentions were bestowed upon a human, or even a living, creature. But a Redbreast will perch upon the foot of a gardener at work, and alight on the handle of the spade when his hand is half upon it—this I have seen. And under my own roof I have witnessed affecting instances of the creature's friendly visits to the chambers of sick persons, as described in the verses to the Redbreast, p. 143. One of these welcome intruders used frequently to roost upon a nail in the wall, from which a picture had hung, and was ready, as morning came, to pipe his song in the hearing of the invalid, who had been long confined to her room. These attachments to a particular person, when marked and continued, used to be reckoned ominous; but the superstition is passing away.—W.

AT THE GRAVE OF BURNS (page 284).

The following is extracted from the journal of my fellow-traveller, to which, as persons acquainted with my poems will know, I have been obliged on other occasions:

"Dumfries, August, 1803.

"On our way to the churchyard where Burns is buried, we were accompanied by a bookseller, who showed us the outside of Burns's house, where he had lived the last three years of his life, and where he died. It has a mean appearance, and is in a bye situation; the front whitewashed, dirty about the doors, as most Scotch houses are; flowering plants in the window. Went to visit his grave; he lies in a corner of the churchyard, and his second son, Francis Wallace, beside him. There is no stone to mark the spot; but a hundred guineas have been collected to be expended upon some sort of monument. 'There, said the bookseller, pointing to a pompous monument, 'lies Mr.—(I have forgotten the name)—a remarkably clever man; he was an attorney, and scarcely ever lost a cause he undertook. Burns made many a lampoon upon him, and there they rest as you see.' We looked at Burns's grave with melancholy and painful reflections, repeating to each other his own poet's epitaph:—

'Is there a man,' &c.

"The churchyard is full of gravestones and expensive monuments, in all sorts of fantastic shapes—obelisk-wise, pillar-wise, &c. When our guide had left us we turned again to Burns's grave, and afterwards went to his house, wishing to enquire after Mrs. Burns, who had gone to spend some time by the sea-shore with her children. We spoke to the maid-servant at the door, who invited us forward, and we sat down in the parlour. The walls were coloured with a blue wash; on one side of the fire was a mahogany desk; opposite the window a clock, which Burns mentions, in one of his letters, having received as a present. The house was cleanly and neat in the inside, the stairs of stone scoured white, the kitchen on the right side of the passage, the parlour on the left. In the room above the parlour the poet died, and his son, very lately, in the same room. The servant told us she had lived four years with Mrs. Burns, who was now in great sorrow for the death of Wallace. She said that Mrs. B's youngest son was now at Christ's Hospital. We were glad to leave Dumfries, where we could think of little but poor Burns, and his moving about on that unpoetic ground. In our road to Brownhill, the next stage, we passed Ellisland, at a little distance on our right—his farm-house. Our pleasure in looking round would have been still greater, if the road had led us nearer the spot.

"I cannot take leave of this country which we passed through to-day, without mentioning that we saw the Cumberland mountains within half-a-mile of Ellisland, Burns's house, the last view we had of them. Drayton has prettily described the connection, which this neighbourhood has with ours, when he makes Skiddaw say,—

"Scruffel, from the sky
That Annandale doth crown, with a most amorous eye
Salutes me every day, or at my pride looks grim, Oft threatening me with clouds, as I oft threaten him."

"These lines came to my brother's memory, as well as the Cumberland saying,—

"If Skiddaw hath a cap Scruffel wots well of that.

"We talked of Burns, and of the prospect he must have had, perhaps from his own door, of Skiddaw and his companions: indulging ourselves in the fancy that we might have been personally known to each other, and he have looked upon those objects with more pleasure for our sakes."—W.

SONNET COMPOSED AT—CASTLE. (page 292).

In the MS. copy of this Sonnet which Wordsworth sent to Walter Scott (Oct. 16, 1803) the first line ran as follows:

"Now, as I live, I pity that great Lord Whom mere despite," &c.

"In that original shape," says Lockhart, "Scott always recited it [the sonnet], and few lines in the language were more frequently in his mouth."—Ed.

THE BLIND HIGHLAND BOY (page 295).

In Ed. 1807, the vessel in which the boy embarked was a common wash-tub:

"But say, what was it? Thought of fear!
Well may ye tremble when ye hear!
—A Household Tub, like one of those Which women use to wash their clothes,
This carried the blind Boy."

The shell was substituted (in 1815) for the tub, on the suggestion of Coleridge—a change of which Charles Lamb and Barron Field strongly disapproved.—Ed.

"Jones! as from Calais southward" (Sonnet III., page 304).

(See Dedication to Descriptive Sketches, p. 601.)

This excellent Person, one of my earliest and dearest friends, died in the year 1835. We were undergraduates together of the same year, at the same college; and companions in many a delightful ramble through his own romantic Country of North Wales. Much of the latter part of his life he passed in comparative solitude; which I know was often cheered by remembrance of our youthful adventures, and of the beautiful regions which, at home and abroad, we had visited together. Our long friendship was never subject to a moment's interruption,—and while revising these volumes for the last time, I have been so often reminded of my loss, with a not unpleasing sadness, that I trust the Reader will excuse this passing mention of a Man who well deserves from me something more than so brief a notice. Let me only add, that during the middle part of his life he resided many years (as Incumbent of the Living) at a Parsonage in Oxfordshire, which is the subject of the 7th of the "Miscellaneous Sonnets," Part 3.—W.

Sonnet VII. (page 305).

In this and a succeeding sonnet on the same subject, let me be understood as a Poet availing himself of the situation which the King of Sweden occupied, and of the principles avowed in his MANIFESTOES; as laying hold of these advantages for the purpose of embodying moral truths. This remark might, perhaps, as well have been suppressed; for to those who may be in sympathy with the course of these Poems, it will be superfluous; and will, I fear, be thrown away upon that other class, whose besotted admiration of the intoxicated despot hereafter placed in contrast with him, is the most melancholy evidence of degradation in British feeling and intellect which the times have furnished.—W.

THE GERMANS ON THE HEIGHTS OF HOCHHEIM (page 322).

The event is thus recorded in the journals of the day:—"When the Austrians took Hochheim, in one part of the engagement they got to the brow of the hill, whence they had their first view of the Rhine. They instantly halted—not a gun was fired—not a voice heard; they stood gazing on the river with those feelings which the events of the last fifteen years at once called up. Prince Schwartzenberg rode up to know the cause of this sudden stop; they then gave three cheers, rushed after the enemy, and drove them into the water."—W.

THANKSGIVING ODE (page 329).

Wholly unworthy of touching upon the momentous subject here treated would that Poet be, before whose eyes the present distresses under which this kingdom labours could interpose a veil sufficiently thick to hide, or even to obscure, the splendour of this great moral triumph. If I have given way to exultation, unchecked by these distresses, it might be sufficient to protect me from a charge of insensibility, should I state my own belief that the sufferings will be transitory. Upon the wisdom of a very large majority of the British nation rested that generosity which poured out the treasures of this country for the deliverance of Europe: and in the same national wisdom, presiding in time of peace over an energy not inferior to that which has been displayed in war, they confide, who encourage a firm hope, that the cup of our wealth will be gradually replenished. There will, doubtless, be no few ready to indulge in regrets and repinings; and to feed a morbid satisfaction, by aggravating these burthens in imagination; in order that calamity so confidently prophesied, as it has not taken the shape which their sagacity allotted to it, may appear as grievous as possible under another. But the body of the nation will not quarrel with the gain, because it might have been purchased at a less price: and, acknowledging in these sufferings, which they feel to have been in a great degree unavoidable, a consecration of their noble efforts, they will vigorously apply themselves to remedy the evil.

Nor is it at the expense of rational patriotism, or in disregard of sound philosophy, that I have given vent to feelings tending to encourage a martial spirit in the bosoms of my countrymen, at a time when there is a general outcry against the prevalence of these dispositions. The British army, both by its skill and valour in the field, and by the discipline which rendered it, to the inhabitants of the several countries where its operations were carried on, a protection from the violence of their own troops, has performed services that will not allow the language of gratitude and admiration to be suppressed or restrained (whatever be the temper of the public mind) through a scrupulous dread lest the tribute due to the past should prove an injurious incentive for the future. Every man deserving the name of Briton adds his voice to the chorus which extols the exploits of his countrymen, with a consciousness, at times overpowering the effort, that they transcend all praise. But this particular sentiment, thus irresistibly excited, is not sufficient. The nation would err grievously, if she suffered the abuse which other states have made of military power to prevent her from perceiving that no people ever was or can be, independent, free, or secure, much less great, in any sane application of the word, without a cultivation of military virtues. Nor let it be overlooked, that the benefits derivable from these sources are placed within the reach of Great Britain, under conditions peculiarly favourable. The same insular position which, by rendering territorial incorporation impossible, utterly precludes the desire of conquest under the most seductive shape it can assume, enables her to rely, for her defence against foreign foes, chiefly upon a species of armed force from which her own liberties have nothing to fear. Such are the privileges of her situation; and, by permitting, they invite her to give way to the courageous instincts of human nature, and to strengthen and refine them by culture.

But some have more than insinuated that a design exists to subvert the civil character of the English people by unconstitutional applications and unnecessary increase of military power. The advisers and abettors of such a design, were it possible that it should exist, would be guilty of the most heinous crime, which, upon this planet, can be committed. Trusting that this apprehension arises from the delusive influences of an honourable jealousy, let me hope that the martial qualities which I venerate will be fostered by adhering to those good old usages which experience has sanctioned; and by availing ourselves of new means of indisputable promise: particularly by applying, in its utmost possible extent, that system of tuition whose master-spring is a habit of gradually enlightened subordination;—by imparting knowledge, civil, moral, and religious, in such measure that the mind, among all classes of the community, may love, admire, and be prepared and accomplished to defend, that country under whose protection its faculties have been unfolded, and its riches acquired;—by just dealing towards all orders of the state, so that, no members of it being trampled upon, courage may everywhere continue to rest immovably upon its ancient English foundation, personal self-respect;—by adequate rewards, and permanent honours, conferred upon the deserving;—by encouraging athletic exercises and manly sports among the peasantry of the country;—and by especial care to provide and support institutions, in which, during a time of peace, a reasonable proportion of the youth of the country may be instructed in military science.

I have only to add, that I should feel little satisfaction in giving to the world these limited attempts to celebrate the virtues of my country, if I did not encourage a hope that a subject, which it has fallen within my province to treat only in the mass, will by other poets be illustrated in that detail which its importance calls for, and which will allow opportunities to give the merited applause to PERSONS as well as to THINGS.

The ode was published along with other pieces, now interspersed through these volumes.—W.

“Had it been a hymn, uttering the sentiments of a multitude, a stanza would have been indispensable. But though I have called it a ‘Thanksgiving Ode,’ strictly speaking it is not so, but a poem composed, or supposed to be composed, on the morning of the thanksgiving, uttering the sentiments of an individual upon that occasion. It is a dramatised ejaculation; and this, if anything can, must excuse the irregular frame of the metre” (Letter of Wordsworth to Southey, 1816, in Memoirs by Bishop Wordsworth, ii. 60, 61.)—Ed.

Sonnet I. (page 333).

If in this sonnet I should seem to have borne a little too hard upon the personal appearance of the worthy Poissards of Calais, let me take shelter under the authority of my lamented friend, the late Sir George Beaumont. He, a most accurate observer, used to say of them, that their features and countenances seemed to have conformed to those of the creatures they dealt in; at all events the resemblance was striking.—W.

This is not the first poetical tribute which in our times has been paid to this beautiful city. Mr. Southey, in the "Poet's Pilgrimage," speaks of it in lines which I cannot deny myself the pleasure of connecting with my own.

"Time hath not wronged her, nor hath ruin sought

Rudely her splendid structures to destroy,
Save in those recent days, with evil fraught,

When mutability, in drunken joy
Triumphant, and from all restraint released,
Let loose her fierce and many-headed beast.

But for the scars in that unhappy rage

Inflited, firm she stands and undecayed;

Like our first Sires, a beautiful old age

Is hers in venerable years arrayed.

And yet, to her, benignant stars may bring,
What fate denies to man,—a second spring.

When I may read of tilts in days of old,

And tourneys graced by Chieftains of renown,
Fair dames, grave citizens, and warriors bold,

If fancy would portray some stately town,

For such a pomp fit theatre should be,
Fair Brugès, I shall then remember thee."

In this city are many vestiges of the splendour of the Burgundian Dukedom, and the long black mantle universally worn by the females is probably a remnant of the old Spanish connection, which, if I do not much deceive myself, is traceable in the grave deportment of its inhabitants. Brugès is comparatively little disturbed by that curious contest, or rather conflict, of Flemish with French propensities in matters of taste, so conspicuous through other parts of Flanders. The hotel to which we drove at Ghent furnished an odd instance. In the passages were paintings and statues, after the antique, of Hebe and Apollo; and in the garden, a little pond, about a yard and a half in diameter, with a weeping willow bending over it, and under the shade of that tree, in the centre of the pond, a wooden painted statue of a Dutch or Flemish boor, looking ineffably tender upon his mistress, and embracing her. A living duck, tethered at the feet of the sculptured lovers, alternately tormented a miserable eel and itself with endeavours to escape from its bonds and prison. Had we chanced to espy the hostess of the hotel in this quaint rural retreat, the exhibition would have been complete. She was a true Flemish figure, in the dress of the days of Holbein; her symbol of office, a weighty bunch of keys, pendent from her portly waist. In Brussels, the modern taste in costume, architecture, &c. has got the mastery; in Ghent there is a struggle: but in Brugès old images are still paramount, and an air of monastic life among the quiet goings-on of a thinly-peopled city is inexpressibly soothing; a pensive grace seems to be cast over all, even the very children.—Extract from Journal.—W.

"Where unremitting frosts the rocky crescent bleach" (page 335).

"Let a wall of rocks be imagined from three to six hundred feet in height, and rising between France and Spain, so as physically to separate the two kingdoms—let us fancy this wall curved like a crescent, with its convexity towards France. Lastly, let us suppose, that in the very middle of the wall, a breach of 300 feet wide has been beaten down by the famous Roland, and we may have a good idea of what the mountaineers call the 'BRECHE DE ROLAND.'"—Raymond's Pyrenees.—W.

"Miserere Domine" (page 336).

See the beautiful Song in Mr. Coleridge's Tragedy, "The Remorse." Why is the harp of Quantock silent?—W.

"Not, like his great Compeers, indignantly Doth Danube spring to life!" (page 336).

Before this quarter of the Black Forest was inhabited, the source of the Danube might have suggested some of those sublime images which Armstrong has so finely described; at present, the contrast is most striking. The Spring appears in a capacious stone Basin in front of a Ducal palace, with a pleasure-ground opposite; then, passing under the pavement, takes the form of a little, clear, bright, black, vigorous rill, barely wide enough to tempt the agility of a child five years old to leap over it,—and entering the garden, it joins, after a course of a few hundred yards, a stream much more considerable than itself. The copiousness of the spring at Doneschingen must have procured for it the honour of being named the Source of the Danube.—W.

"The Staub-bach" is a narrow Stream, which, after a long course on the heights, comes to the sharp edge of a somewhat overhanging precipice, overleaps it with a bound, and, after a fall of 930 feet, forms again a rivulet. The vocal powers of these musical Beggars may seem to be exaggerated; but this wild and savage air was utterly unlike any sounds I had ever heard; the notes reached me from a distance, and on what occasion they were sung I could not guess, only they seemed to belong, in some way or other, to the Waterfall—and reminded me of religious services chanted to Streams and Fountains in Pagan times. Mr. Southey has thus accurately characterised the peculiarity of this music: "While we were at the Waterfall, some half-score peasants, chiefly women and girls, assembled just out of reach of the Spring, and set up—surely, the wildest chorus that ever was heard by human ears,—a song not of articulate sounds, but in which the voice was used as a mere instrument of music, more flexible than any which art could produce,—sweet, powerful, and thrilling beyond description."—See Notes to "A Tale of Paraguay."—W.

ENGELBERG (page 338).

The Convent whose site was pointed out, according to tradition, in this manner, is seated at its base. The architecture of the building is unimpressive, but the situation is worthy of the honour which the imagination of the mountaineers has conferred upon it.—W.

*"Tho' searching damp and many an envious flaw
Have marred this Work;"* (page 342).

This picture of the Last Supper has not only been grievously injured by time, but the greatest part of it, if not the whole, is said to have been retouched, or painted over again. These niceties may be left to connoisseurs,—I speak of it as I felt. The copy exhibited in London some years ago, and the engraving by Morghen, are both admirable; but in the original is a power which neither of those works has attained, or even approached.—W.

"Of Figures human and divine" (page 343).

The Statues ranged round the spire and along the roof of the Cathedral of Milan, have been found fault with by persons whose exclusive taste is unfortunate for themselves. It is true that the same expense and labour, judiciously directed to purposes more strictly architectural, might have much heightened the general effect of the building; for, seen from the ground, the Statues appear diminutive. But the coup d'œil, from the best point of view, which is half way up the spire, must strike an unprejudiced person with admiration; and surely the selection and arrangement of the Figures is exquisitely fitted to support the religion of the country in the imaginations and feelings of the spectator. It was with great pleasure that I saw, during the two ascents which we made, several children, of different ages, tripping up and down the slender spire, and pausing to look around them, with feelings much more animated than could have been derived from these or the finest works of art, if placed within easy reach.—Remember also that you have the Alps on one side, and on the other the Apennines, with the plain of Lombardy between!—W.

*"Still, with those white-robed Shapes, a living
Stream,
The glacier Pillars join in solemn guise"* (page 347).

This Procession is a part of the sacramental service performed once a month. In the valley of Engelberg we had the good fortune to be present at the Grand Festival of the Virgin—but the Procession on that day, though consisting of upwards of 1,000 persons, assembled from all the branches of the sequestered valley, was much less striking (notwithstanding the sublimity of the surrounding scenery): it wanted both the simplicity of the other and the accompaniment of the Glacier-columns, whose sisterly resemblance to the moving Figures gave it a most beautiful and solemn peculiarity.—W.

ON BEING STRANDED, &c. (page 349).

Near the town of Boulogne, and overhanging the beach, are the remains of a tower which bears the name of Caligula, who here terminated his western expedition, of which these sea-shells were the boasted spoils. And at no great distance from these ruins, Buonaparte, standing upon a mound of earth, harangued his "Army of England," reminding them of the exploits of Cæsar, and pointing towards the white cliffs, upon which their standards were to float. He recommended also a subscription to be raised among the soldiery to erect on that ground, in memory of the foundation of the "Legion of Honour," a Column—which was not completed at the time we were there.—W.

To ruminate"* (page 349).

This is a most grateful sight for an Englishman returning to his native land. Everywhere one misses in the cultivated grounds abroad, the animated and soothing accompaniment of animals ranging and selecting their own food at will.—W.

"Far as St. Maurice, from yon eastern Forks"
(page 350).

LES FOURCHES, the point at which the two chains of mountains part, that inclose the Valais, which terminates at ST. MAURICE.—W.

*"ye that occupy
Your council-seats beneath the open sky,
On Sarnen's Mount"* (page 350).

Sarnen, one of the two capitals of the Canton of Underwalden; the spot here alluded to is close to the town, and is called the Landenberg, from the tyrant of that name, whose château formerly stood there. On the 1st of January, 1308, the great day which the confederated Heroes had chosen for the deliverance of their country, all the castles of the Governors were taken by force or stratagem; and the Tyrants themselves conducted, with their creatures, to the frontiers, after having witnessed the destruction of their strongholds. From that time the Landenberg has been the place where the Legislators of this division of the Canton assemble. The site, which is well described by Ebel, is one of the most beautiful in Switzerland.—W.

"Calls me to pace her honoured Bridge—"

The bridges of Lucerne are roofed, and open at the sides, so that the passenger has, at the same time, the benefit of shade and a view of the magnificent country. The pictures are attached to the rafters; those from Scripture History, on the Cathedral Bridge, amount, according to my notes, to 240. Subjects from the Old Testament face the passenger as he goes towards the Cathedral, and those from the New as he returns. The pictures on these bridges, as well as those in most other parts of Switzerland, are not to be spoken of as works of art; but they are instruments admirably answering the purpose for which they were designed.—W.

*"—although 'tis fair,
'Twill be another Yarrow"* (page 353, ll. 76, 77).

These words were quoted to me from "Yarrow Unvisited," by Sir Walter Scott, when I visited him at Abbotsford, a day or two before his departure for Italy: and the affecting condition in which he was when he looked upon Rome from the Janicular Mount, was reported to me by a lady who had the honour of conducting him thither.—W.

"His sepulchral verse" (page 356, l. 241).

If any English reader should be desirous of knowing how far I am justified in thus describing the epitaphs of Chiabrera, he will find translated specimens of them on pp. 573-6, under the head of "Epitaphs and Elegiac Pieces."—W.

"This flowering broom's dear neighbourhood" (page 358).

In the course of this continental tour of 1837, Wordsworth was deeply impressed with the splendour and profusion of the flowering broom in the valleys and the more sheltered heights of the Apennines; and reluctantly owned the inferiority of the English to the French variety in respect of both beauty and fragrance. The note upon the Oxford movement which follows (and which should properly be read at the conclusion of this poem) was written, at the request of the poet, by his friend Frederick Faber.—Ed.

It would be ungenerous not to advert to the religious movement that, since the composition of these verses in 1837, has made itself felt, more or less strongly, throughout the English Church;—a movement that takes, for its first principle, a devout deference to the voice of Christian antiquity. It is not my office to pass judgment on questions of theological detail; but my own repugnance to the spirit and system of Romanism has been so repeatedly and, I trust, feelingly expressed, that I shall not be suspected of a leaning that way, if I do not join in the grave charge, thrown out, perhaps in the heat of controversy, against the learned and pious men to whose labours I allude. I speak apart from controversy; but, with strong faith in the moral temper which would elevate the present by doing reverence to the past, I would draw cheerful auguries for the English Church from this movement, as likely to restore among us a tone of piety more earnest and real than that produced by the mere formalities of the understanding, refusing, in a degree which I cannot but lament, that its own temper and judgment shall be controlled by those of antiquity.—W.

THE PINE OF MONTE MARIO (p. 358).

Within a couple of hours of my arrival at Rome, I saw from Monte Pinco, the Pine-tree as described in the sonnet; and, while expressing admiration at the beauty of its appearance, I was told by an acquaintance of my fellow-traveller, who happened to join us at the moment, that a price had been paid for it by the late Sir G. Beaumont, upon condition that the proprietor should not act upon his known intention of cutting it down.—W.

CAMALDOLI (page 363).

This famous sanctuary was the original establishment of Saint Romualdo (or Runwald, as our ancestors saxonised the name), in the 11th century, the ground (campo) being given by a Count Maldo. The Camaldolensi, however, have spread wide as a branch of Benedictines, and may therefore be classed among the gentlemen of the monastic orders. The society comprehends two orders, monks and hermits; symbolised by their arms, two doves drinking out of the same cup. The monastery in which the monks here reside is beautifully situated, but a large unattractive edifice, not unlike a factory. The hermitage is placed in a loftier and wilder region of the forest. It comprehends between twenty and thirty distinct residences, each including for its single hermit an inclosed piece of ground and three very small apartments. There are days of indulgence when the hermit may quit his cell, and when old age arrives, he descends from the mountain and takes his abode among the monks.

My companion had in the year 1831 fallen in with the monk, the subject of these two sonnets, who showed him his abode among the hermits. It is from him that I received the following particulars. He was then about forty years of age, but his appearance was that of an older man. He had been a painter by profession, but on taking orders changed his name from Santi to Raffaello, perhaps with an unconscious reference as well to the great Sanzio d'Urbino as to the archangel. He assured my friend that he had been thirteen years in the hermitage and had never known melancholy or ennui. In the little recess for study and prayer, there was a small collection of books. "I read only," said he, "books of asceticism and mystical theology." On being asked the names of the most famous mystics, he enumerated Scaramelli, San Giovanni della Croce, Saint Dionysius the Areopagite (supposing the work which bears his name to be really his), and with peculiar emphasis Ricardo di San Vittori. The works of Saint Theresa are also in high repute among ascetics. These names may interest some of my readers.

We heard that Raffaello was then living in the convent; my friend sought in vain to renew his acquaintance with him. It was probably a day of seclusion. The reader will perceive that these sonnets were supposed to be written when he was a young man.—W.

"What aim had they, the Pair of Monks" (page 363).

In justice to the Benedictines of Camaldoli, by whom strangers are so hospitably entertained, I feel obliged to notice that I saw among them no other figures at all resembling, in size and complexion, the two Monks described in this Sonnet. What was their office, or the motive which brought them to this place of mortification, which they could not have approached without being carried in this or some other way, a feeling of delicacy prevented me from enquiring. An account has before been given of the hermitage they were about to enter. It was visited by us towards the end of the month of May; yet snow was lying thick under the pine-trees, within a few yards of the gate.—W.

The name of Milton is pleasantly connected with Vallombrosa in many ways. The pride with which the Monk, without any previous question from me, pointed out his residence, I shall not readily forget. It may be proper here to defend the Poet from a charge which has been brought against him, in respect to the passage in "Paradise Lost," where this place is mentioned. It is said, that he has erred in speaking of the trees there being deciduous, whereas they are, in fact, pines. The fault-finders are themselves mistaken; the natural woods of the region of Vallombrosa are deciduous, and spread to a great extent; those near the convent are, indeed, mostly pines; but they are avenues of trees planted within a few steps of each other, and thus composing large tracts of wood; plots of which are periodically cut down. The appearance of those narrow avenues, upon steep slopes open to the sky, on account of the height which the trees attain by being forced to grow upwards, is often very impressive. My guide, a boy of about fourteen years old, pointed this out to me in several places.—W.

THE RIVER DUDDON (page 375).

A Poet¹ whose works are not yet known as they deserve to be thus enters upon his description of the “Ruins of Rome:”

“The rising Sun
Flames on the ruins in the purer air Towering aloft;”

and ends thus—

“The setting Sun displays
His visible great round, between yon towers,
As through two shady cliffs.”

Mr. Crowe, in his excellent loco-descriptive Poem, “Lewesdon Hill,” is still more expeditious, finishing the whole on a May-morning, before breakfast.

“To-morrow for severer thought, but now
To breakfast, and keep festival to-day.”

No one believes, or is desired to believe, that those Poems were actually composed within such limits of time; nor was there any reason why a prose statement should acquaint the Reader with the plain fact, to the disturbance of poetic credibility. But, in the present case, I am compelled to mention, that the above series of Sonnets was the growth of many years;—the one which stands the 14th was the first produced; and others were added upon occasional visits to the Stream, or as recollections of the scenes upon its banks awakened a wish to describe them. In this manner I had proceeded insensibly, without perceiving that I was trespassing upon ground pre-occupied, at least as far as intention went, by Mr. Coleridge; who, more than twenty years ago, used to speak of writing a rural Poem, to be entitled “The Brook,” of which he has given a sketch in a recent publication. But a particular subject, cannot, I think, much interfere with a general one; and I have been further kept from encroaching upon any right Mr. C. may still wish to exercise, by the restriction which the frame of the Sonnet imposed upon me, narrowing unavoidably the range of thought, and precluding, though not without its advantages, many graces to which a freer movement of verse would naturally have led.

¹ i.e. the Welshman John Dyer (1699-1758), author of Gronowr Hill (1726), a kind of descriptive ode in octosyllabic verse, and of the two didactic poems in Miltonic blank verse, entitled, The Ruins of Rome (1740) and The Fleeca (1757). Lewesdon Hill, by the Rev. William Crowe, went through three editions between 1788 and 1804.—Ed.

May I not venture, then, to hope, that, instead of being a hindrance, by anticipation of any part of the subject, these Sonnets may remind Mr. Coleridge of his own more comprehensive design, and induce him to fulfil it?—There is a sympathy in streams,—“one calleth to another;” and I would gladly believe, that “The Brook” will, ere long, murmur in concert with “The Duddon.” But, asking pardon for this fancy, I need not scruple to say, that those verses must indeed be ill-fated which can enter upon such pleasant walks of nature, without receiving and giving inspiration. The power of waters over the minds of Poets has been acknowledged from the earliest ages;—through the “Flumina amem sylvasque inglorius” of Virgil, down to the sublime apostrophe to the great rivers of the earth, by Armstrong, and the simple ejaculation of Burns (chosen, if I recollect right, by Mr. Coleridge, as a motto for his embryo “Brook”):

“The Muse nae Poet ever fand her,
Till by himsel’ he learned to wander,
Adown some trotting burn’s meander,
AND NA’ THINK LANG.”—W.

“*There bloomed the strawberry of the wilderness;
The trembling eyebright showed her sapphire

These two lines are in a great measure taken from “The Beauties of Spring, a Juvenile Poem,” by the Rev. Joseph Sympson. He was a native of Cumberland, and was educated in the vale of Grasmere, and at Hawkshead school: his poems are little known, but they contain passages of splendid description; and the versification of his “Vision of Alfred” is harmonious and animated. In describing the motions of the Sylphs, that constitute the strange machinery of his Poem, he uses the following illustrative simile—

“Glancing from their plumes
A changeful light the azure vault illumens.
Less varying hues beneath the Pole adorn
The streamy glories of the Boreal morn,
That wavering to and fro their radiance shed
On Bothnia’s gulf with glassy ice o’erspread,
Where the lone native, as he homeward glides,
On polished sandals o’er the imprisoned tides,
And still the balance of his frame preserves,
Wheeled on alternate foot in lengthening curves,
Sees at a glance, above him and below,
Two rival heavens with equal splendour glow.
Sphered in the centre of the world he seems;
For all around with soft effulgence gleams;
Stars, moons, and meteors, ray opposed to ray,
And solemn midnight pours the blaze of day.”

He was a man of ardent feeling, and his faculties of mind, particularly his memory, were extraordinary. Brief notices of his life ought to find a place in the History of Westmoreland.—W.

Sonnets XVII. and XVIII. (page 380).

THE EAGLE requires a large domain for its support: but several pairs, not many years ago, were constantly resident in this country, building their nests in the steeps of Borrowdale, Wastdale, Ennerdale, and on the eastern side of Helvellyn. Often have I heard anglers speak of the grandeur of their appearance, as they hovered over Red Tarn, in one of the coves of this mountain. The bird frequently returns, but is always destroyed.

Not long since, one visited Rydal lake, and remained some hours near its banks: the consternation which it occasioned among the different species of fowl, particularly the herons, was expressed by loud screams. The horse also is naturally afraid of the eagle.—There were several Roman stations among these mountains; the most considerable seems to have been in a meadow at the head of Windermere, established, undoubtedly, as a check over the Passes of Kirkstone, Dunmail-raise, and of Hardknot and Wrynose. On the margin of Rydal lake, a coin of Trajan was discovered very lately.—The ROMAN FORT here alluded to, called by the country people "Hardknot Castle," is most impressively situated half-way down the hill on the right of the road that descends from Hardknot into Eskdale. It has escaped the notice of most antiquarians, and is but slightly mentioned by Lysons. The DRUIDICAL CIRCLE is about half a mile to the left of the road ascending Stone-side from the vale of Duddon: the country people call it Sunken Church.

The reader who may have been interested in the foregoing Sonnets (which together may be considered as a Poem), will not be displeased to find in this place a prose account of the Duddon, extracted from Green's comprehensive "Guide to the Lakes," lately published. "The road leading from Coniston to Broughton is over high ground, and commands a view of the river Duddon; which, at high water, is a grand sight, having the beautiful and fertile lands of Lancashire and Cumberland stretching each way from its margin. In this extensive view, the face of nature is displayed in a wonderful variety of hill and dale; wooded grounds and buildings; amongst the latter Broughton Tower, seated on the crown of a hill, rising elegantly from the valley, is an object of extraordinary interest. Fertility on each side is gradually diminished, and lost in the superior heights of Blackcomb, in Cumberland, and the high lands between Kirkby and Ulverstone."

"The road from Broughton to Seathwaite is on the banks of the Duddon, and on its Lancashire side it is of various elevations. The river is an amusing companion, one while brawling and tumbling over rocky precipices, until the agitated water becomes again calm by arriving at a smoother and less precipitous bed, but its course is soon again ruffled, and the current thrown into every variety of foam which the rocky channel of a river can give to water."—Vide Green's Guide to the Lakes, vol. 1. pp. 98-100.

After all, the traveller would be most gratified who should approach this beautiful Stream, neither at its source, as is done in the Sonnets, nor from its termination; but from Coniston over Walna Scar; first descending into a little circular valley, a collateral compartment of the long winding vale through which flows the Duddon. This recess, towards the close of September, when the after-grass of the meadows is still of a fresh green, with the leaves of many of the trees faded, but perhaps none fallen, is truly enchanting. At a point elevated enough to show the various objects in the valley, and not so high as to diminish their importance, the stranger will instinctively halt. On the foreground, a little below the most favourable station, a rude foot-bridge is thrown over the bed of the noisy brook foaming by the way-side. Russet and craggy hills, of bold and varied outline, surround the level valley, which is besprinkled with grey rocks plumed with birch trees. A few homesteads are interspersed, in some places peeping out from among the rocks like hermitages, whose site has been chosen for the benefit of sunshine as well as shelter; in other instances, the dwelling-house, barn, and byre, compose together a cruciform structure, which, with its embowering trees, and the ivy clothing part of the walls and roof like a fleece, call to mind the remains of an ancient abbey. Time, in most cases, and nature everywhere, have given a sanctity to the humble works of man, that are scattered over this peaceful retirement. Hence a harmony of tone and colour, a consummation and perfection of beauty, which would have been marred had aim or purpose interfered with the course of convenience, utility, or necessity. This unvitiated region stands in no need of the veil of twilight to soften or disguise its features. As it glistens in the morning sunshine, it would fill the spectator's heart with gladness. Looking from our chosen station, he would feel an impatience to rove among its pathways, to be greeted by the milkmaid, to wander from house to house, exchanging "good-mornings" as he passed the open doors; but, at evening, when the sun is set, and a pearly light gleams from the western quarter of the sky, with an answering light from the smooth surface of the meadows; when the trees are dusky, but each kind still distinguishable; when the cool air has condensed the blue smoke rising from the cottage chimneys; when the dark mossy stones seem to sleep in the bed of the foaming brook; then, he would be unwilling to move forward, not less from a reluctance to relinquish what he beholds, than from an apprehension of disturbing, by his approach, the quietness beneath him. Issuing from the plain of this valley, the brook descends in a rapid torrent passing by the churchyard of Seathwaite. The traveller is thus conducted at once into the midst of the wild and beautiful scenery which gave occasion to the Sonnets from the 14th to the 20th inclusive. From the point where the Seathwaite brook joins the Duddon, is a view upwards, into the pass through which the river makes its way into the plain of Donnerdale. The perpendicular rock on the right bears the ancient British name of THE PEN; the one opposite is called WALLA-BARROW CRAG, a name that occurs in other places to designate rocks of the same character. The chaotic aspect of the scene is well marked by the expression of a stranger, who strolled out while dinner was preparing, and at his return, being asked by his host, "What way he had been wandering?" replied, "As far as it is finished!"

The bed of the Duddon is here strewn with large fragments of rocks fallen from aloft; which, as Mr. Green truly says, "are happily adapted to the many-shaped waterfalls" (or rather water-breaks, for none of them are high), "displayed in the short space of half a mile." That there is some hazard in frequenting these desolate places, I myself have had proof; for one night an immense mass of rock fell upon the very spot where, with a friend, I had lingered the day before. "The concussion," says Mr. Green, speaking of the event (for he also, in the practice of his art, on that day sat exposed for a still longer time to the same peril), "was heard, not without alarm, by the neighbouring shepherds." But to return to Seathwaite Churchyard: it contains the following inscription:—

"In memory of the Reverend Robert Walker, who died the 25th of June, 1802, in the 83d year of his age, and 67th of his curacy at Seathwaite.

"Also, of Anne his wife, who died the 28th of January, in the 93d year of her age."

In the parish register of Seathwaite Chapel, is this notice:

"Buried, June 28th, the Rev. Robert Walker. He was curate of Seathwaite sixty-six years. He was a man singular for his temperance, industry, and integrity."

This individual is the Pastor alluded to, in the eighteenth Sonnet, as a worthy compeer of the country parson of Chaucer, &c. In the Seventh Book of the Excursion, an abstract of his character is given, beginning—

"A Priest abides before whose life such doubts Fall to the ground;—" and some account of his life, for it is worthy of being recorded, will not be out of place here.

MEMOIR OF THE REV. ROBERT WALKER.

In the year 1709, Robert Walker was born at Under-crag, in Seathwaite; he was the youngest of twelve children. His eldest brother, who inherited the small family estate, died at Under-crag, aged ninety-four, being twenty-four years older than the subject of this Memoir, who was born of the same mother. Robert was a sickly infant; and, through his boyhood and youth, continuing to be of delicate frame and tender health, it was deemed best, according to the country phrase, to breed him a scholar; for it was not likely that he would be able to earn a livelihood by bodily labour. At that period few of these dales were furnished with school-houses; the children being taught to read and write in the chapel; and in the same consecrated building, where he officiated for so many years both as preacher and schoolmaster, he himself received the rudiments of his education. In his youth he became schoolmaster at Loweswater; not being called upon, probably, in that situation to teach more than reading, writing, and arithmetic. But, by the assistance of a "Gentleman," in the neighbourhood, he acquired, at leisure hours, a knowledge of the classics, and became qualified for taking holy orders. Upon his ordination, he had the offer of two curacies: the one, Torver, in the vale of Coniston,—the other, Seathwaite, in his native vale. The value of each was the same, viz. five pounds per annum; but the cure of Seathwaite having a cottage attached to it, as he wished to marry, he chose it in preference. The young person on whom his affections were fixed, though in the condition of a domestic servant, had given promise, by her serious and modest deportment, and by her virtuous dispositions, that she was worthy to become the helpmate of a man entering upon a plan of life such as he had marked out for himself. By her frugality she had stored up a small sum of money, with which they began housekeeping. In 1735 or 1736, he entered upon his curacy; and, nineteen years afterwards, his situation is thus described, in some letters to be found in the Annual Register for 1760, from which the following is extracted:

To Mr. —.

"SIR,

"CONISTON, July 26, 1754

"I was the other day upon a party of pleasure, about five or six miles from this place, where I met with a very striking object, and of a nature not very common. Going into a clergyman's house (of whom I had frequently heard), I found him sitting at the head of a long square table, such as is commonly used in this country by the lower class of people, dressed in a coarse blue frock, trimmed with black horn buttons; a checked shirt, a leathern strap about his neck for a stock, a coarse apron, and a pair of great wooden-soled shoes plated with iron to preserve them (what we call clogs in these parts), with a child upon his knee, eating his breakfast; his wife, and the remainder of his children, were some of them employed in waiting upon each other, the rest in teasing and spinning wool, at which trade he is a great proficient; and moreover, when it is made ready for sale, will lay it, by sixteen or thirty-two pounds' weight, upon his back, and on foot, seven or eight miles, will carry it to the market, even in the depth of winter. I was not much surprised at all this, as you may possibly be, having heard a great deal of it related before. But I must confess myself astonished with the alacrity and the good humour that appeared both in the clergyman and his wife, and more so at the sense and ingenuity of the clergyman himself."

Then follows a letter from another person, dated 1755, from which an extract shall be given.

"By his frugality and good management, he keeps the wolf from the door, as we say; and if he advances a little in the world, it is owing more to his own care, than to anything else he has to rely upon. I don't find his inclination is running after further preferment. He is settled among the people, that are happy among themselves; and lives in the greatest unanimity and friendship with them; and, I believe, the minister and people are exceedingly satisfied with each other; and indeed how should they be dissatisfied when they have a person of so much worth and probity for their pastor? A man who, for his candour and meekness, his sober, chaste, and virtuous conversation, his soundness in principle and practice, is an ornament to his profession, and an honour to the country he is in; and bear with me if I say, the plainness of his dress, the sanctity of his manners, the simplicity of his doctrine, and the vehemence of his expression, have a sort of resemblance to the pure practice of primitive Christianity."

We will now give his own account of himself, to be found in the same place.

FROM THE REV. ROBERT WALKER.

"SIR,—Yours of the 26th instant was communicated to me by Mr. C—, and I should have returned an immediate answer, but the hand of Providence, then laying heavy upon an amiable pledge of conjugal endearment, hath since taken from me a promising girl, which the disconsolate mother too pensively laments the loss of; though we have yet eight living, all healthful, hopeful children, whose names and ages are as follows:—Zaccheus, aged almost eighteen years; Elizabeth, sixteen years and ten months; Mary, fifteen;

Moses, thirteen years and three months; Sarah, ten years and three months; Mabel, eight years and three months; William Tyson, three years and eight months; and Anne Esther, one year and three months; besides Anne, who died two years and six months ago, and was then aged between nine and ten; and Eleanor, who died the 23rd inst., January, aged six years and ten months. Zaccheus, the eldest child, is now learning the trade of tanner, and has two years and a half of his apprenticeship to serve. The annual income of my chapel at present, as near as I can compute it, may amount to about £17, of which is paid in cash, viz. £5 from the bounty of Queen Anne, and £5 from W. P., Esq., of P—, out of the annual rents, he being lord of the manor, and £3 from the several inhabitants of L—, settled upon the tenements as a rent-charge; the house and gardens I value at £4 yearly, and not worth more; and I believe the surplice fees and voluntary contributions, one year with another, may be worth £3; but as the inhabitants are few in number, and the fees very low, this last-mentioned sum consists merely in free-will offerings.

"I am situated greatly to my satisfaction with regard to the conduct and behaviour of my auditory, who not only live in the happy ignorance of the follies and vices of the age, but in mutual peace and goodwill with one another, and are seemingly (I hope really too) sincere Christians, and sound members of the established church, not one dissenter of any denomination being amongst them all. I got to the value of £40 for my wife's fortune, but had no real estate of my own, being the youngest son of twelve children, born of obscure parents; and, though my income has been but small, and my family large, yet, by a providential blessing upon my own diligent endeavours, the kindness of friends, and a cheap country to live in, we have always had the necessities of life. By what I have written (which is a true and exact account, to the best of my knowledge,) I hope you will not think your favour to me, out of the late worthy Dr. Stratford's effects, quite misbestowed, for which I must ever gratefully own myself,

"Sir,

"Your much obliged and most obedient humble Servant,

"R. W., Curate of S—.

"To Mr. C., of Lancaster."

About the time when this letter was written, the Bishop of Chester recommended the scheme of joining the curacy of Ulpha to the contiguous one of Seathwaite, and the nomination was offered to Mr. Walker but an unexpected difficulty arising, Mr. W., in a letter to the Bishop, (a copy of which, in his own beautiful handwriting, now lies before me,) thus expresses himself. "If he," meaning the person in whom the difficulty originated, "had suggested any such objection before, I should utterly have declined any attempt to the curacy of Ulpha: indeed, I was always apprehensive it might be disagreeable to my auditory at Seathwaite, as they have been always accustomed to double duty, and the inhabitants of Ulpha despair of being able to support a schoolmaster who is not curate there also; which suppressed all thoughts in me of serving them both." And in a second letter to the Bishop he writes:—

"My LORD,—I have the favour of yours of the 1st instant, and am exceedingly obliged on account of the Ulpha affair: if that curacy should lapse into your Lordship's hands, I would beg leave rather to decline than embrace it; for the chapels of Seathwaite and Ulpha, annexed together, would be apt to cause a general discontent among the inhabitants of both places; by either thinking themselves slighted, being only served alternately, or neglected in the duty, or attributing it to covetousness in me; all which occasions of murmuring I would willingly avoid." And in concluding his former letter, he expresses a similar sentiment upon the same occasion, "desiring, if it be possible, however, as much as in me lieth, to live peaceably with all men."

The year following, the curacy of Seathwaite was again augmented; and, to effect this augmentation, fifty pounds had been advanced by himself; and, in 1760, lands were purchased with eight hundred pounds. Scanty as was his income, the frequent offer of much better benefices could not tempt Mr. W. to quit a situation where he had been so long happy, with a consciousness of being useful. Among his papers I find the following copy of a letter, dated 1775, twenty years after his refusal of the curacy of Ulpha, which will show what exertions had been made for one of his sons.

"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR GRACE,

"Our remote situation here makes it difficult to get the necessary information for transacting business regularly; such is the reason of my giving your Grace the present trouble.

"The bearer (my son) is desirous of offering himself candidate for deacon's orders at your Grace's ensuing ordination; the first, on the 25th instant, so that his papers could not be transmitted in due time. As he is now fully at age, and I have afforded him education to the utmost of my ability, it would give me great satisfaction (if your Grace would take him, and find him qualified) to have him ordained. His constitution has been tender for some years; he entered the college of Dublin, but his health would not permit him to continue there, or I would have supported him much longer. He has been with me at home above a year, in which time he has gained great strength of body, sufficient, I hope, to enable him for performing the function. Divine Providence, assisted by liberal benefactors, has blest my endeavours, from a small income; to rear a numerous family; and as my time of life renders me now unfit for much future expectancy from this world, I should be glad to see my son settled in a promising way to acquire an honest livelihood for himself. His behaviour, so far in life, has been irreproachable; and I hope he will not degenerate, in principles or practice, from the precepts and pattern of an indulgent parent. Your Grace's favourable reception of this, from a distant corner of the diocese, and an obscure hand, will excite filial gratitude, and a due use shall be made of the obligation vouchsafed there by to "Your Grace's very dutiful and most obedient

"Son and Servant,

"ROBERT WALKER."

The same man, who was thus liberal in the education of his numerous family, was even munificent in hospitality as a parish priest. Every Sunday, were served, upon the long table, at which he has been described sitting with a child upon his knee, messes of broth, for the refreshment of those of his congregation who came from a distance, and usually took their seats as parts of his own household. It seems scarcely possible that this custom could have commenced before the augmentation of his cure; and what would to many have been a high price of self-denial, was paid, by the pastor and his family, for this gratification; as the treat could only be provided by dressing at one time the whole, perhaps, of their weekly allowance of fresh animal food; consequently, for a succession of days, the table was covered with cold victuals only. His generosity in old age may be still further illustrated by a little circumstance relating to an orphan grandson, then ten years of age, which I find in a copy of a letter to one of his sons; he requests that half a guinea may be left for "little Robert's pocket money," who was then at school; intrusting it to the care of a lady, who, as he says, "may sometimes frustrate his squandering it away foolishly," and promising to send him an equal allowance annually for the same purpose. The conclusion of the same letter is so characteristic, that I cannot forbear to transcribe it. "We," meaning his wife and himself, "are in our wonted state of health, allowing for the hasty strides of old age knocking daily at our door, and threateningly telling us, we are not only mortal, but must expect ere long to take our leave of our ancient cottage, and lie down in our last dormitory. Pray pardon my neglect to answer yours: let us hear sooner from you, to augment the mirth of the Christmas holidays. Wishing you all the pleasures of the approaching season, I am, dear Son, with lasting sincerity, yours affectionately,

"ROBERT WALKER."

He loved old customs and old usages, and in some instances stuck to them to his own loss; for, having had a sum of money lodged in the hands of a neighbouring tradesman, when long course of time had raised the rate of interest, and more was offered, he refused to accept it; an act not difficult to one, who, while he was drawing seventeen pounds a year from his curacy, declined, as we have seen, to add the profits of another small benefice to his own, lest he should be suspected of cupidity.—From this vice he was utterly free; he made no charge for teaching school; such as could afford to pay, gave him what they pleased. When very young, having kept a diary of his expenses, however trifling, the large amount at the end of the year surprised him; and from that time the rule of his life was to be economical, not avaricious. At his decease he left behind him no less a sum than £2,000; and such a sense of his various excellences was prevalent in the country, that the epithet of WONDERFUL is to this day attached to his name.

There is in the above sketch something so extraordinary as to require further explanatory details.—And to begin with his industry: eight hours in each day, during five days in the week, and half of Saturday, except when the labours of husbandry were urgent, he was occupied in teaching. His seat was within the rails of the altar; the communion table was his desk; and, like Shenstone's schoolmistress, the master employed himself at the spinning-wheel, while the children were repeating their lessons by his side. Every evening, after school hours, if not more profitably engaged, he continued the same kind of labour, exchanging, for the benefit of exercise, the small wheel at which he had sate, for the large one on which wool is spun, the spinner stepping to and fro. Thus, was the wheel constantly in readiness to prevent the waste of a moment's time. Nor was his industry with the pen, when occasion called for it, less eager. Intrusted with extensive management of public and private affairs, he acted, in his rustic neighbourhood, as scrivener, writing out petitions, deeds of conveyance, wills, covenants, &c., with pecuniary gain to himself, and to the great benefit of his employers. These labours (at all times considerable) at one period of the year, viz. between Christmas and Candlemas, when money transactions are settled in this country, were often so intense, that he passed great part of the night, and sometimes whole nights, at his desk. His garden also was tilled by his own hand; he had a right of pasturage upon the mountains for a few sheep and a couple of cows, which required his attendance; with this pastoral occupation he joined the labours of husbandry upon a small scale, renting two or three acres in addition to his own less than one acre of glebe; and the humblest drudgery which the cultivation of these fields required was performed by himself.

He also assisted his neighbours in haymaking and shearing their flocks, and in the performance of this latter service he was eminently dexterous. They, in their turn, complimented him with the present of a haycock, or a fleece; less as a recompense for this particular service than as a general acknowledgment. The Sabbath was in a strict sense kept holy; the Sunday evenings being devoted to reading the Scripture and family prayer. The principal festivals appointed by the Church were also duly observed; but through every other day in the week, through every week in the year he was incessantly occupied in work of hand or mind; not allowing a moment for recreation, except upon a Saturday afternoon, when he indulged himself with a Newspaper, or sometimes with a Magazine. The frugality and temperance established in his house were as admirable as the industry. Nothing to which the name of luxury could be given was there known; in the latter part of his life, indeed, when tea had been brought into almost general use, it was provided for visitors, and for such of his own family as returned occasionally to his roof, and had been accustomed to this refreshment elsewhere; but neither he nor his wife ever partook of it. The raiment worn by his family was comely and decent, but as simple as their diet; the homespun materials were made up into apparel by their own hands. At the time of the decease of this thrifty pair, their cottage contained a large store of webs of woollen and linen cloth, woven from thread of their own spinning. And it is remarkable that the pew in the chapel in which the family used to sit, remains neatly lined with woollen cloth spun by the pastor's own hands. It is the only pew in the chapel so distinguished; and I know of no other instance of his conformity to the delicate accommodations of modern times. The fuel of the house, like that of their neighbours, consisted of peat, procured from the mosses by their own labour. The lights by which, in the winter evenings, their work was performed, were of their own manufacture, such as still continue to be used in these cottages; they are made of the pith of rushes dipped in any unctuous substance that the house affords. White candles, as tallow candles are here called, were reserved to honour the Christmas festivals, and were perhaps produced upon no other occasions. Once a month, during the proper season, a sheep was drawn from their small mountain flock, and killed for the use of the family; and a cow, towards the close of the year, was salted and dried for winter provision: the hide was tanned to furnish them with shoes. —By these various resources, this venerable clergyman reared a numerous family, not only preserving them, as he affectingly says, “from wanting the necessaries of life;” but affording them an unstinted education, and the means of raising themselves in society. In this they were eminently assisted by the effects of their father’s example, his precepts, and injunctions: he was aware that truth-speaking, as a moral virtue, is best secured by inculcating attention to accuracy of report even on trivial occasions; and so rigid were the rules of honesty by which he endeavoured to bring up his family, that if one of them had chanced to find in the lanes or fields anything of the least use or value without being able to ascertain to whom it belonged, he always insisted upon the child’s carrying it back to the place from which it had been brought.

No one it might be thought could, as has been described, convert his body into a machine, as it were, of industry for the humblest uses, and keep his thoughts so frequently bent upon secular concerns, without grievous injury to the more precious parts of his nature. How could the powers of intellect thrive, or its graces be displayed, in the midst of circumstances apparently so unfavourable, and where, to the direct cultivation of the mind, so small a portion of time was allotted? But, in this extraordinary man, things in their nature adverse were reconciled. His conversation was remarkable, not only for being chaste and pure, but for the degree in which it was fervent and eloquent; his written style was correct, simple, and animated. Nor did his affections suffer more than his intellect; he was tenderly alive to all the duties of his pastoral office: the poor and needy “he never sent empty away,”—the stranger was fed and refreshed in passing that unfrequented vale—the sick were visited; and the feelings of humanity found further exercise among the distresses and embarrassments in the worldly estate of his neighbours, with which his talents for business made him acquainted; and the disinterestedness, impartiality, and uprightness which he maintained in the management of all affairs confided to him, were virtues seldom separated in his own conscience from religious obligation. Nor could such conduct fail to remind those who witnessed it of a spirit nobler than law or custom: they felt convictions which, but for such intercourse, could not have been afforded, that, as in the practice of their pastor, there was no guile, so in his faith there was nothing hollow; and we are warranted in believing, that upon these occasions, selfishness, obstinacy, and discord would often give way before the breathings of his good-will and saintly integrity. It may be presumed also—while his humble congregation were listening to the moral precepts which he delivered from the pulpit, and to the Christian exhortations that they should love their neighbours as themselves, and do as they would be done unto—that peculiar efficacy was given to the preacher’s labours by recollections in the minds of his congregation, that they were called upon to do no more than his own actions were daily setting before their eyes.

The afternoon service in the chapel was less numerously attended than that of the morning, but by a more serious auditory; the lesson from the New Testament, on those occasions, was accompanied by Burkitt’s Commentaries. These lessons he read with impassioned emphasis, frequently drawing tears from his hearers, and leaving a lasting impression upon their minds. His devotional feelings and the powers of his own mind were further exercised, along with those of his family, in perusing the Scriptures: not only on the Sunday evenings, but on every other evening, while the rest of the household were at work, some one of the children, and in her turn the servant, for the sake of practice in reading, or for instruction, read the Bible aloud; and in this manner the whole was repeatedly gone through. That no common importance was attached to the observance of religious ordinances by his family, appears from the following memorandum by one of his descendants, which I am tempted to insert at length, as it is characteristic, and somewhat curious. “There is a small chapel in the county palatine of Lancaster, where a certain clergyman has regularly officiated above sixty years, and a few months ago administered the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper in the same, to a decent number of devout communicants. After the clergyman had received himself, the first company out of the assembly who approached the altar, and kneeled down to be partakers of the sacred elements, consisted of the parson’s wife; to whom he had been married upwards of sixty years; one son and his wife; four daughters, each with her husband; whose ages, all added together, amounted to above 714 years. The several and respective distances from the place of each of their abodes, to the chapel where they all communicated, will measure more than 1,000 English miles. Though the narration will appear surprising, it is without doubt a fact that the same persons, exactly four years before, met at the same place, and all joined in performance of the same venerable duty.”

He was indeed most zealously attached to the doctrine and frame of the Established Church. We have seen him congratulating himself that he had no dissenters in his cure of any denomination. Some allowance must be made for the state of opinion when his first religious impressions were received, before the reader will acquit him of bigotry, when I mention, that at the time of the augmentation of the cure, he refused to invest part of the money in the purchase of an estate offered to him upon advantageous terms, because the proprietor was a Quaker;—whether from scrupulous apprehension that a blessing would not attend a contract framed for the benefit of the church between persons not in religious sympathy with each other; or, as a seeker of peace, he was afraid of the uncomplimentary disposition which at one time was too frequently conspicuous in that sect. Of this an instance had fallen under his own notice; for, while he taught school at Loweswater, certain persons of that denomination had refused to pay annual interest due under the title of Church-stock¹; a great hardship upon the incumbent, for the curacy of Loweswater was then scarcely less poor than that of Seathwaite. To what degree this prejudice of his was blameable need not be determined;—certain it is, that he was not only desirous, as he himself says, to live in peace, but in love, with all men. He was placable, and charitable in his judgments; and, however correct in conduct and rigorous to himself, he was ever ready to forgive the trespasses of others, and to soften the censure that was cast upon their frailties.—It would be unpardonable to omit that, in the maintenance of his virtues, he received due support from the partner of his long life. She was equally strict, in attending to her share of their joint cares, nor less diligent in her appropriate occupations. A person who had been some time their servant in the latter part of their lives, concluded the panegyric of her mistress by saying to me, "She was no less excellent than her husband; she was good to the poor; she was good to everything!" He survived for a short time this virtuous companion. When she died, he ordered that her body should be borne to the grave by three of her daughters and one grand-daughter; and, when the corpse was lifted from the threshold, he insisted upon lending his aid, and feeling about, for he was then almost blind, took hold of a napkin fixed to the coffin; and, as a bearer of the body, entered the chapel, a few steps from the lowly parsonage.

What a contrast does the life of this obscurely-seated, and, in point of worldly wealth, poorly-repaid Churchman, present to that of a Cardinal Wolsey!

"O 'tis a burthen, Cromwell, 'tis a burthen Too heavy for a man who hopes for heaven!"

We have been dwelling upon images of peace in the moral world, that have brought us again to the quiet enclosure of consecrated ground, in which this venerable pair lie interred. The sounding brook, that rolls close by the churchyard, without disturbing feeling or meditation, is now unfortunately laid bare; but not long ago it participated, with the chapel, the shade of some stately ash-trees, which will not spring again. While the spectator from this spot is looking round upon the girdle of stony mountains that encompasses the vale,—masses of rock, out of which monuments for all men that ever existed might have been hewn—it would surprise him to be told, as with truth he might be, that the plain blue slab dedicated to the memory of this aged pair is a production of a quarry in North Wales. It was sent as a mark of respect by one of their descendants from the vale of Festiniog, a region almost as beautiful as that in which it now lies!

Upon the Seathwaite Brook, at a small distance from the parsonage, has been erected a mill for spinning yarn; it is a mean and disagreeable object, though not unimportant to the spectator, as calling to mind the momentous changes wrought by such inventions in the frame of society—changes which have proved especially unfavourable to these mountain solitudes. So much had been effected by those new powers, before the subject of the preceding biographical sketch closed his life, that their operation could not escape his notice, and doubtless excited touching reflections upon the comparatively insignificant results of his own manual industry. But Robert Walker was not a man of times and circumstances: had he lived at a later period, the principle of duty would have produced application as unremitting; the same energy of character would have been displayed, though in many instances with widely-different effects.

With pleasure I annex, as illustrative and confirmatory of the above account, extracts from a paper in the "Christian Remembrancer," October, 1819: it bears an assumed signature, but is known to be the work of the Rev. Robert Bamford, vicar of Bishopston, in the county of Durham; a great-grandson of Mr. Walker, whose worth it commemorates, by a record not the less valuable for being written in very early youth.

"His house was a nursery of virtue. All the inmates were industrious, and cleanly, and happy. Sobriety, neatness, quietness, characterised the whole family. No railings, no idleness, no indulgence of passion were permitted. Every child, however young, had its appointed engagements; every hand was busy. Knitting, spinning, reading, writing, mending clothes, making shoes, were by the different children constantly performing. The father himself sitting amongst them, and guiding their thoughts, was engaged in the same occupations.

"He sat up late, and rose early; when the family were at rest, he retired to a little room which he had built on the roof of his house. He had slated it, and fitted it up with shelves for his books, his stock of cloth, wearing apparel, and his utensils. There many a cold winter's night, without fire, while the roof was glazed with ice, did he remain reading or writing till the day dawned. He taught the children in the chapel, for there was no school-house. Yet in that cold, damp place he never had a fire. He used to send the children in parties either to his own fire at home, or make them run up the mountain side.

"It may be further mentioned, that he was a passionate admirer of Nature; she was his mother, and he was a dutiful child. While engaged on the mountains, it was his greatest pleasure to view the rising sun; and in tranquil evenings, as it slid behind the hills, he blessed its departure. He was skilled in fossils and plants; a constant observer of the stars and winds: the atmosphere was his delight. He made many experiments on its nature and properties. In summer he used to gather a multitude of flies and insects, and, by his enterprising description, amuse and instruct his children. They shared all his daily employments, and derived many sentiments of love and benevolence from his observations on the works and productions of nature. Whether they were following him in the field, or surrounding him in school, he took every opportunity of storing their minds with useful information.—Nor was the circle of his influence confined to Seathwaite. Many a distant mother has told her child of Mr. Walker, and begged him to be as good a man.

“Once, when I was very young, I had the pleasure of seeing and hearing that venerable old man in his 90th year, and even then, the calmness, the force, the perspicuity of his sermon, sanctified and adorned by the wisdom of grey hairs, and the authority of virtue, had such an effect upon my mind, that I never see a hoary-headed clergyman, without thinking of Mr. Walker. . . . He allowed no dissenter or methodist to interfere in the instruction of the souls committed to his cure; and so successful were his exertions, that he had not one dissenter of any denomination whatever in the whole parish. Though he avoided all religious controversies, yet when age had silvered his head, and virtuous piety had secured to his appearance reverence and silent honour, no one, however determined in his hatred of apostolic descent, could have listened to his discourse on ecclesiastical history and ancient times, without thinking that one of the beloved apostles had returned to mortality, and in that vale of peace had come to exemplify the beauty of holiness in the life and character of Mr. Walker.

“Until the sickness of his wife, a few months previous to her death, his health and spirits and faculties were unimpaired. But this misfortune gave him such a shock, that his constitution gradually decayed. His senses, except sight, still preserved their powers. He never preached with steadiness after his wife's death. His voice faltered: he always looked at the seat she had used. He could not pass her tomb without tears. He became, when alone, sad and melancholy, though still among his friends kind and good-humoured. He went to bed about twelve o'clock the night before his death. As his custom was, he went, tottering and leaning upon his daughter's arm, to examine the heavens, and meditate a few moments in the open air. ‘How clear the moon shines to-night!’ He said these words, sighed, and laid down. At six next morning he was found a corpse. Many a tear, and many a heavy heart, and many a grateful blessing followed him to the grave.”

Having mentioned in this narrative the vale of Loweswater as a place where Mr. Walker taught school, I will add a few memoranda from its parish register, respecting a person apparently of desires as moderate, with whom he must have been intimate during his residence there.

“Let him that would, ascend the tottering seat
Of courtly grandeur, and become as great
As are his mounting wishes; but for me,
Let sweet repose and rest my portion be.

“HENRY FOREST, Curate.”

“Honour, the idol which the most adore,
Receives no homage from my knee;
Content in privacy I value more Than all uneasy dignity.”

“Henry Forest came to Loweswater, 1708, being twenty-five years of age.”

“This curacy was twice augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty. The first payment, with great difficulty, was paid to Mr. John Curwen of London, on the 6th of May, 1724, deposited by me, Henry Forest, Curate of Loweswater. Ye said 9th of May, ye said Mr. Curwen went to the office, and saw my name registered there, &c. This, by the Providence of God, came by lot to this poor place.

“Hæc testor H. FOREST.”

In another place he records, that the sycamore-trees were planted in the churchyard in 1710.

He died in 1741, having been curate thirty-four years. It is not improbable that H. Forest was the gentleman who assisted Robert Walker in his classical studies at Loweswater.

To this parish register is prefixed a motto, of which the following verses are a part:—

“Invigilate viri, tacito nam tempora gressu Diffugiunt, nulloque sono convertitur annus;
Utendum est ætate, cito pede præterit ætas.”—W.

“We feel that we are greater than we know”

“And feel that I am happier than I know.”
MILTON.

The allusion to the Greek poet will be obvious to the classical reader.—W.

The poet in question is Moschus; the passage of which W. is thinking is from the Epitaphium Bionis, ll. 106-111.

The seventh line of the Sonnet is a reminiscence of the following line of Moschus:—

ἄμμες δ', οἱ μεγάλοι καὶ καρτεροὶ ἢ σοφοὶ ἄνδρες.
—Ed.

HIGHLAND HUT (page 390).

This Sonnet describes the exterior of a Highland hut, as often seen under morning or evening sunshine. To the authoress of the “Address to the Wind,” and other poems, in these volumes, who was my fellow-traveller in this tour, I am indebted for the following extract from her journal, which accurately describes, under particular circumstances, the beautiful appearance of the interior of one of these rude habitations.

“On our return from the Trosachs the evening began to darken, and it rained so heavily that we were completely wet before we had come two miles, and it was dark when we landed with our boatman, at his hut upon the banks of Loch Katrine. I was faint from cold: the good woman had provided, according to her promise, a better fire than we had found in the morning; and, indeed, when I sat down in the chimney-corner of her smoky biggin, I thought I had never felt more comfortable in my life: a pan of coffee was boiling for us, and, having put our clothes in the way of drying, we all sat down thankful for a shelter. We could not prevail upon our boatman, the master of the house, to draw near the fire, though he was cold and wet, or to suffer his wife to get him dry clothes till she had served us, which she did most willingly, though not very expeditiously.

“A Cumberland man of the same rank would not have had such a notion of what was fit and right in his own house, or, if he had, one would have accused him of servility; but in the Highlander it only seemed like politeness (however erroneous and painful to us), naturally growing out of the dependence of the inferiors of the clan upon their laird; he did not, however, refuse to let his wife bring out the whisky bottle for his refreshment, at our request. 'She keeps a dram,' as the phrase is: indeed, I believe there is scarcely a lonely house by the wayside, in Scotland, where travellers may not be accommodated with a dram. We asked for sugar, butter, barley-bread, and milk; and, with a smile and a stare more of kindness than wonder, she replied, 'Ye'll get that,' bringing each article separately. We caroused our cups of coffee, laughing like children at the strange atmosphere in which we were: the smoke came in gusts, and spread along the walls; and above our heads in the chimney (where the hens were roosting) it appeared like clouds in the sky. We laughed and laughed again, in spite of the smarting of our eyes, yet had a quieter pleasure in observing the beauty of the beams and rafters gleaming between the clouds of smoke: they had been crusted over, and varnished by many winters, till, where the twilight fell upon them, they had become as glossy as black rocks, on a sunny day, cased in ice. When we had eaten our supper we sat about half an hour, and I think I never felt so deeply the blessing of a hospitable welcome and a warm fire. The man of the house repeated from time to time that we should often tell of this night when we got to our homes, and interposed praises of his own lake, which he had more than once, when we were returning in the boat, ventured to say was 'bonnier than Loch Lomond.' Our companion from the Trosachs, who, it appeared, was an Edinburgh drawing-master going, during the vacation, on a pedestrian tour to John o'Groat's house, was to sleep in the barn with my fellow-travellers, where the man said he had plenty of dry hay. I do not believe that the hay of the Highlands is ever very dry, but this year it had a better chance than usual: wet or dry, however, the next morning they said they had slept comfortably. When I went to bed, the mistress, desiring me to 'go ben,' attended me with a candle, and assured me that the bed was dry, though not 'sic as I had been used to.' It was of chaff: there were two others in the room, a cupboard and two chests, upon one of which stood milk in wooden vessels, covered over. The walls of the house were of stone unplastered: it consisted of three apartments, the cowhouse at one end, the kitchen or house in the middle, and the spence at the other end; the rooms were divided, not up to the rigging, but only to the beginning of the roof, so that there was a free passage for light and smoke from one end of the house to the other. I went to bed some time before the rest of the family; the door was shut between us, and they had a bright fire, which I could not see, but the light it sent up amongst the varnished rafters and beams, which crossed each other in almost as intricate and fantastic a manner as I have seen the under-boughs of a large beech-tree withered by the depth of shade above, produced the most beautiful effect that can be conceived. It was like what I should suppose an underground cave or temple to be, with a dripping or moist roof, and the moonlight entering in upon it by some means or other; and yet the colours were more like those of melted gems. I lay looking up till the light of the fire faded away, and the man and his wife and child had crept into their bed at the other end of the room: I did not sleep much, but passed a comfortable night; for my bed, though hard, was warm and clean: the unusualness of my situation prevented me from sleeping. I could hear the waves beat against the shore of the lake; a little rill close to the door made a much louder noise, and, when I sat up in my bed, I could see the lake through an open window-place at the bed's head. Add to this, it rained all night. I was less occupied by remembrance of the Trosachs, beautiful as they were, than the vision of the Highland hut, which I could not get out of my head; I thought of the Faery-land of Spenser, and what I had read in romance at other times; and then what a feast it would be for a London Pantomime-maker could he but transplant it to Drury-lane, with all its beautiful colours!"—MS.—W.

"Once on those steeps I roamed" (page 392).

The following is from the same MS., and gives an account of the visit to Bothwell Castle here alluded to:—

"It was exceedingly delightful to enter thus unexpectedly upon such a beautiful region. The castle stands nobly, overlooking the Clyde. When we came up to it, I was hurt to see that flower-borders had taken place of the natural overgrowings of the ruin, the scattered stones, and wild plants. It is a large and grand pile of red freestone, harmonising perfectly with the rocks of the river, from which, no doubt, it has been hewn. When I was a little accustomed to the unnaturalness of a modern garden, I could not help admiring the excessive beauty and luxuriance of some of the plants, particularly the purple-flowered clematis, and a broad-leaved creeping plant without flowers, which scrambled up the castle wall, along with the ivy, and spread its vine-like branches so lavishly that it seemed to be in its natural situation, and one could not help thinking that, though not self-planted among the ruins of this country, it must somewhere have its native abode in such places. If Bothwell Castle had not been close to the Douglas mansion, we should have been disgusted with the possessor's miserable conception of adorning such a venerable ruin; but it is so very near to the house, that of necessity the pleasure-grounds must have extended beyond it, and perhaps the neatness of a shaven lawn and the complete desolation natural to a ruin might have made an unpleasant contrast; and, besides being within the precincts of the pleasure-grounds, and so very near to the dwelling of a noble family, it has forfeited, in some degree, its independent majesty, and becomes a tributary to the mansion: its solitude being interrupted, it has no longer the command over the mind in sending it back into past times, or excluding the ordinary feelings which we bear about us in daily life. We had then only to regret that the castle and the house were so near to each other; and it was impossible not to regret it; for the ruin presides in state over the river, far from city or town, as if it might have a peculiar privilege to preserve its memorials of past ages, and maintain its own character for centuries to come. We sat upon a bench under the high trees, and had beautiful views of the different reaches of the river, above and below. On the opposite bank, which is finely wooded with elm and other trees, are the remains of a priory built upon a rock; and rock and ruin are so blended, that it is impossible to separate the one from the other. Nothing can be more beautiful than the little remnant of this holy place; elm-trees (for we were near enough to distinguish them by their branches) grow out of the walls, and overshadow a small, but very elegant window. It can scarcely be conceived what a grace the castle and priory impart to each other; and the river Clyde flows on, smooth and unruffled below, seeming to my thoughts more in harmony with the sober and stately images of former times, than if it had roared over a rocky channel, forcing its sound upon the ear. It blended gently with the warbling of the smaller birds, and the chattering of the larger ones, that had made their nests in the ruins. In this fortress the chief of the English nobility were confined after the battle of Bannockburn. If a man is to be a prisoner, he scarcely could have a more pleasant place to solace his captivity; but I thought that, for close confinement, I should prefer the banks of a lake, or the seaside. The greatest charm of a brook or river is in the liberty to pursue it through its windings; you can then take it in whatever mood you like; silent or noisy, sportive or quiet. The beauties of a brook or river must be sought, and the pleasure is in going in search of them; those of a lake or of the sea come to you of themselves. These rude warriors cared little, perhaps, about either; and yet, if one may judge from the writings of Chaucer, and from the old romances, more interesting passions were connected with natural objects in the days of chivalry than now; though going in search of scenery, as it is called, had not then been thought of. I had previously heard nothing of Bothwell Castle, at least nothing that I remembered; therefore, perhaps, my pleasure was greater, compared with what I received elsewhere, than others might feel."—MS. Journal.—W.

HART'S-HORN TREE (page 393).

"In the time of the first Robert de Clifford, in the year 1333 or 1334, Edward Balliol king of Scotland came into Westmoreland, and stayed some time with the said Robert at his castles of Appleby, Brougham, and Pendragon. And during that time they ran a stag by a single greyhound out of Whinfell Park to Redkirk, in Scotland, and back again to this place; where, being both spent, the stag leaped over the pales, but died on the other side; and the greyhound, attempting to leap, fell, and died on the contrary side. In memory of this fact the stag's horns were nailed upon a tree just by, and (the dog being named Hercules) this rhythm was made upon them:

"Hercules kill'd Hart a greese,
And Hart a greese killed Hercules."

The tree to this day bears the name of Hart's-horn Tree. The horns in process of time were almost grown over by the growth of the tree, and another pair was put up in their place."—Nicholson and Burns's History of Westmoreland and Cumberland.

The tree has now disappeared, but I well remember its imposing appearance as it stood, in a decayed state, by the side of the high road leading from Penrith to Appleby. This whole neighbourhood abounds in interesting traditions and vestiges of antiquity, viz. Julian's Bower; Brougham and Penrith Castles; Penrith Beacon; and the curious remains in Penrith Churchyard; Arthur's Round Table, and, close by, Maybrough; the excavation, called the Giant's Cave, on the banks of the Emont; Long Meg and her daughters, near Eden, &c. &c.—W.

THE WHITE DOE OF RYLSTONE (page 395).

The Poem of the White Doe of Rylstone is founded on a local tradition, and on the Ballad in Percy's Collection, entitled "The Rising of the North." The tradition is as follows:—"About this time," not long after the Dissolution, "a White Doe," say the aged people of the neighbourhood, "long continued to make a weekly pilgrimage from Rylstone over the fells of Bolton, and was constantly found in the Abbey Churchyard during divine service; after the close of which she returned home as regularly as the rest of the congregation."—DR. WHITAKER'S History of the Deanery of Craven.—Rylstone was the property and residence of the Nortons, distinguished in that ill-advised and unfortunate Insurrection; which led me to connect with this tradition the principal circumstances of their fate, as recorded in the Ballad.

"Bolton Priory," says Dr. Whitaker in his excellent book, "The History and Antiquities of the Deanery of Craven," "stands upon a beautiful curvature of the Wharf, on a level sufficiently elevated to protect it from inundations, and low enough for every purpose of picturesque effect.

"Opposite to the East window of the Priory Church, the river washes the foot of a rock nearly perpendicular, and of the richest purple, where several of the mineral beds, which break out, instead of maintaining their usual inclination to the horizon, are twisted by some inconceivable process into undulating and spiral lines. To the South all is soft and delicious; the eye reposes upon a few rich pastures, a moderate reach of the river, sufficiently tranquil to form a mirror to the sun, and the bounding hills beyond, neither too near nor too lofty to exclude, even in winter, any portion of his rays.

"But, after all, the glories of Bolton are on the North. Whatever the most fastidious taste could require to constitute a perfect landscape, is not only found here, but in its proper place. In front, and immediately under the eye, is a smooth expanse of park-like enclosure, spotted with native elm, ash, &c., of the finest growth: on the right a skirting oak wood, with jutting points of grey rock; on the left a rising copse. Still forward are seen the aged groves of Bolton Park, the growth of centuries; and farther yet, the barren and rocky distances of Simon-seat and Barden Fell contrasted with the warmth, fertility, and luxuriant foliage of the valley below.

"About half a mile above Bolton the valley closes, and either side of the Wharf is overhung by solemn woods, from which huge perpendicular masses of grey rock jut out at intervals.

"This sequestered scene was almost inaccessible till of late, that ridings have been cut on both sides of the river, and the most interesting points laid open by judicious thinnings in the woods.

Here a tributary stream rushes from a waterfall, and bursts through a woody glen to mingle its waters with the Wharf: there the Wharf itself is nearly lost in a deep cleft in the rock, and next becomes a horned flood enclosing a woody island—sometimes it reposes for a moment, and then resumes its native character, lively, irregular, and impetuous.

"The cleft mentioned above is the tremendous STRID. This channel, being incapable of receiving the winter floods, has formed on either side a broad strand of naked grit-stone full of rock-basins, or 'pots of the Linn,' which bear witness to the restless impetuosity of so many Northern torrents. But, if here Wharf is lost to the eye, it amply repays another sense by its deep and solemn roar, like 'the Voice of the angry Spirit of the Waters,' heard far above and beneath, amidst the silence of the surrounding woods.

"The terminating object of the landscape is the remains of Barden Tower, interesting from their form and situation, and still more so from the recollections which they excite."—W.

"Action is transitory"—(page 396).

This and the five lines that follow were either read or recited by me, more than thirty years since, to the late Mr. Hazlitt, who quoted some expressions in them (imperfectly remembered) in a work of his published several years ago.—W.

It is to be regretted that at the present day Bolton Abbey wants this ornament: but the Poem, according to the imagination of the Poet, is composed in Queen Elizabeth's time. "Formerly," says Dr. Whitaker, "over the Transept was a tower. This is proved not only from the mention of bells at the Dissolution, when they could have had no other place, but from the pointed roof of the choir, which must have terminated westward, in some building of superior height to the ridge."—W.

"A Chapel, like a wild-bird's nest" (p. 396, l. 27).

"The Nave of the Church having been reserved at the Dissolution, for the use of the Saxon Cure, is still a parochial Chapel; and, at this day, is as well kept as the neatest English cathedral."—W.

"Who sate in the shade of the Prior's Oak!"
(page 396, l. 34).

"At a small distance from the great gateway stood the Prior's Oak, which was felled about the year 1720, and sold for £70. According to the price of wood at that time, it could scarcely have contained less than 1400 feet of timber."—W.

"When Lady Aëliza mourned" (p. 398, l. 226).

The detail of this tradition may be found in Dr. Whitaker's book, and in a Poem of this Collection, "The Force of Prayer."—W.

"Pass, pass who will, yon chantry door;"
(page 398, l. 242).

"At the East end of the North aisle of Bolton Priory Church is a chantry belonging to Bethmesly Hall, and a vault, where, according to tradition, the Claphams" (who inherited this estate, by the female line, from the Mauleverers) "were interred upright." John de Clapham, of whom this ferocious act is recorded, was a man of great note in his time: "he was a vehement partisan of the house of Lancaster, in whom the spirit of his chieftains, the Cliffords, seemed to survive."—W.

In the second Volume of these Poems [Collective Edition of 1820.—Ed.] will be found one entitled, "Song at the Feast of Brougham Castle, upon the Restoration of Lord Clifford, the Shepherd, to the Estates and Honours of his Ancestors." To that Poem is annexed an account of this personage, chiefly extracted from Burns and Nicholson's "History of Cumberland and Westmoreland." It gives me pleasure to add these further particulars concerning him, from Dr. Whitaker, who says he "retired to the solitude of Barden, where he seems to have enlarged the tower out of a common keeper's lodge, and where he found a retreat equally favourable to taste, to instruction, and to devotion. The narrow limits of his residence show that he had learned to despise the pomp of greatness, and that a small train of servants could suffice him, who had lived to the age of thirty a servant himself. I think this nobleman resided here almost entirely when in Yorkshire, for all his charters which I have seen are dated at Barden.

"His early habits, and the want of those artificial measures of time which even shepherds now possess, had given him a turn for observing the motions of the heavenly bodies; and, having purchased such an apparatus as could then be procured, he amused and informed himself by those pursuits, with the aid of the Canons of Bolton, some of whom are said to have been well versed in what was then known of the science.

"I suspect this nobleman to have been sometimes occupied in a more visionary pursuit, and probably in the same company.

"For, from the family evidences, I have met with two MSS. on the subject of Alchemy, which, from the character, spelling, &c., may almost certainly be referred to the reign of Henry the Seventh. If these were originally deposited with the MSS. of the Cliffords, it might have been for the use of this nobleman. If they were brought from Bolton at the Dissolution, they must have been the work of those Canons whom he almost exclusively conversed with.

"In these peaceful employments Lord Clifford spent the whole reign of Henry the Seventh, and the first years of his son. But in the year 1513, when almost sixty years old, he was appointed to a principal command over the army which fought at Flodden, and showed that the military genius of the family had neither been chilled in him by age, nor extinguished by habits of peace.

"He survived the battle of Flodden ten years, and died April 23rd, 1523, aged about 70. I shall endeavour to appropriate to him a tomb, vault, and chantry, in the choir of the church of Bolton, as I should be sorry to believe that he was deposited, when dead, at a distance from the place which in his lifetime he loved so well.

"By his last will he appointed his body to be interred at Shap, if he died in Westmoreland; or at Bolton, if he died in Yorkshire."

With respect to the Canons of Bolton, Dr. Whitaker shows from MSS. that not only alchemy but astronomy was a favourite pursuit with them.—W.

*"Now joy for you who from the towers

Brancepeth Castle stands near the river Were, a few miles from the city of Durham. It formerly belonged to the Nevilles, Earls of Westmoreland. See Dr. Percy's account.—W

*"Of mitred Thurston—what a Host
He conquered!"* (page 405, ll. 814-15).

See the Historians for the account of this memorable battle, usually denominated the Battle of the Standard.—W.

"In the night before the battle of Durham was stricken and begun, the 17th day of October, anno 1346, there did appear to John Fosseur, then Prior of the Abbey of Durham, a Vision, commanding him to take the holy Corporax-cloth, wherewith St. Cuthbert did cover the chalice when he used to say mass, and to put the same holy relique like to a banner-cloth upon the point of a spear, and the next morning to go and repair to a place on the west side of the city of Durham, called the Red Hills, where the Maid's Bower wont to be, and there to remain and abide till the end of the battle. To which vision the Prior obeying, and taking the same for a revelation of God's grace and mercy by the mediation of Holy St. Cuthbert, did accordingly the next morning, with the monks of the said abbey, repair to the said Red Hills, and there most devoutly humbling and prostrating themselves in prayer for the victory in the said battle: (a great multitude of the Scots running and pressing by them, with intention to have spoiled them, yet had no power to commit any violence under such holy persons, so occupied in prayer, being protected and defended by the mighty Providence of Almighty God, and by the mediation of Holy St. Cuthbert, and the presence of the holy relique). And, after many conflicts and warlike exploits there had and done between the English men and the King of Scots and his company, the said battle ended, and the victory was obtained, to the great overthrow and confusion of the Scots, their enemies: And then the said Prior and monks accompanied with Ralph Lord Nevil, and John Nevil his son, and the Lord Percy, and many other nobles of England, returned home and went to the abbey church, there joining in hearty prayer and thanksgiving to God and Holy St. Cuthbert for the victory achieved that day."

The battle was afterwards called the Battle of Neville's Cross from the following circumstance:—

"On the west side of the city of Durham, where two roads pass each other, a most notable, famous, and goodly cross of stonework was erected and set up to the honour of God for the victory there obtained in the field of battle, and known by the name of Nevil's Cross, and built at the sole cost of the Lord Ralph Nevil, one of the most excellent and chief persons in the said battle." The Relique of St. Cuthbert afterwards became of great importance in military events. For soon after this battle, says the same author, "The prior caused a goodly and sumptuous banner to be made," (which is then described at great length), "and in the midst of the same banner-cloth was the said holy relique and corporax-cloth enclosed, &c. &c., and so sumptuously finished, and absolutely perfected, this banner was dedicated to Holy St. Cuthbert, of intent and purpose that for the future it should be carried to any battle, as occasion should serve; and was never carried and showed at any battle but by the especial grace of God Almighty, and the mediation of Holy St. Cuthbert, it brought home victory; which banner-cloth, after the dissolution of the abbey, fell into the possession of Dean WHITTINGHAM, whose wife, called KATHARINE, being a French woman, (as is most credibly reported by eye-witnesses,) did most injuriously burn the same in her fire, to the open contempt and disgrace of all ancient and goodly reliques."—Extracted from a book entitled, "Durham Cathedral, as it stood before the Dissolution of the Monastery." It appears, from the old metrical History, that the above-mentioned banner was carried by the Earl of Surrey to Flodden Field.—W.

*"An edifice of warlike frame

It is so called to this day, and is thus described by Dr. Whitaker:—"Rylstone Fell yet exhibits a monument of the old warfare between the Nortons and Cliffords. On a point of very high ground, commanding an immense prospect, and protected by two deep ravines, are the remains of a square tower, expressly said by Dodsworth to have been built by Richard Norton. The walls are of strong grout-work, about four feet thick. It seems to have been three stories high. Breaches have been industriously made in all the sides, almost to the ground, to render it untenable.

"But Norton Tower was probably a sort of pleasure-house in summer, as there are, adjoining to it, several large mounds, (two of them are pretty entire,) of which no other account can be given than that they were butts for large companies of archers.

"The place is savagely wild, and admirably adapted to the uses of a watch tower."—W.

—"*despoil and desolation

"After the attainder of Richard Norton his estates were forfeited to the crown, where they remained till the 2nd or 3rd of James; they were then granted to Francis Earl of Cumberland." From an accurate survey, made at that time, several particulars have been extracted by Dr. W. It appears that the "mansion-house was then in decay. Immediately adjoining is a close, called the Vivry, so called, undoubtedly, from the French Vivier, or modern Latin Vivarium; for there are near the house large remains of a pleasure-ground, such as were introduced in the earlier part of Elizabeth's time, with topiary works, fishponds, and island, &c. The whole township was ranged by an hundred and thirty red deer, the property of the Lord, which, together with the wood, had, after the attainder of Mr. Norton, been committed to Sir Stephen Tempest. The wood, it seems, had been abandoned to depredations, before which time it appears that the neighbourhood must have exhibited a forest-like and sylvan scene. In this survey among the old tenants, is mentioned one Richard Kitchen, butler to Mr. Norton, who rose in rebellion with his master, and was executed at Ripon.—W.

"In the deep fork of Amerdale;" (p. 415, l. 1707).

"At the extremity of the parish of Burnsal, the valley of Wharf forks off into two great branches, one of which retains the name of Wharfdale, to the source of the river; the other is usually called Littondale, but more anciently and properly, Amerdale. Derbrook, which runs along an obscure valley from the N.W., is derived from a Teutonic word, signifying concealment."—DR. WHITAKER.—W.

*"When the bells of Rylstone played

On one of the bells of Rylstone Church, which seems coeval with the building of the tower, is this cypher, "Æ. G." for John Norton, and the motto, "God us ayde."—W.

Which is thus described by Dr. Whitaker:—"On the plain summit of the hill are the foundations of a strong wall stretching from the S.W. to the N.E. corner of the tower, and to the edge of a very deep glen. From this glen, a ditch, several hundred yards long, runs south to another deep and rugged ravine. On the N. and W. where the banks are very steep, no wall or mound is discoverable, paling being the only fence that could stand on such ground.

"From the Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border it appears that such pounds for deer, sheep, &c. were far from being uncommon in the south of Scotland. The principle of them was something like that of a wire mouse-trap. On the declivity of a steep hill, the bottom and sides of which were fenced so as to be impassable, a wall was constructed nearly level with the surface on the outside, yet so high within, that without wings it was impossible to escape in the opposite direction. Care was probably taken that these enclosures should contain better feed than the neighbouring parks or forests; and whoever is acquainted with the habits of these sequacious animals, will easily conceive, that if the leader was once tempted to descend into the snare, a herd would follow."

I cannot conclude without recommending to the notice of all lovers of beautiful scenery, Bolton Abbey and its neighbourhood. This enchanting spot belongs to the Duke of Devonshire; and the superintendence of it has for some years been entrusted to the Rev. William Carr, who has most skilfully opened out its features; and, in whatever he has added has done justice to the place, by working with an invisible hand of art in the very spirit of nature.—W.

During the month of December, 1820, I accompanied a much-beloved and honoured Friend in a walk through different parts of his estate, with a view to fix upon the site of a new Church which he intended to erect. It was one of the most beautiful mornings of a mild season,—our feelings were in harmony with the cherishing influences of the scene; and such being our purpose, we were naturally led to look back upon past events with wonder and gratitude, and on the future with hope. Not long afterwards, some of the Sonnets which will be found towards the close of this series were produced as a private memorial of that morning's occupation.

The Catholic Question, which was agitated in Parliament about that time, kept my thoughts in the same course; and it struck me that certain points in the Ecclesiastical History of our Country might advantageously be presented to view in verse. Accordingly, I took up the subject, and what I now offer to the reader was the result.

When this work was far advanced, I was agreeably surprised to find that my friend, Mr. Southey, had been engaged with similar views in writing a concise History of the Church in England. If our Productions, thus unintentionally coinciding, shall be found to illustrate each other, it will prove a high gratification to me, which I am sure my friend will participate.

W. WORDSWORTH.

RYDAL MOUNT,
January 24, 1822.

For the convenience of passing from one point of the subject to another without shocks of abruptness, this work has taken the shape of a series of Sonnets; but the Reader, it is to be hoped, will find that the pictures are often so closely connected as to have jointly the effect of passages of a poem in a form of stanza to which there is no objection but one that bears upon the Poet only—its difficulty.—W.

"Did Holy Paul," &c. (page 418).

Stillingfleet adduces many arguments in support of this opinion, but they are unconvincing. The latter part of this Sonnet refers to a favourite notion of Roman Catholic writers, that Joseph of Arimathea and his companions brought Christianity into Britain, and built a rude church at Glastonbury; alluded to hereafter, in a passage upon the dissolution of monasteries.—W.

"That Hill, whose flowery platform," &c.

This hill at St. Alban's must have been an object of great interest to the imagination of the venerable Bede, who thus describes it, with a delicate feeling, delightful to meet with in that rude age, traces of which are frequent in his works:—"Varius herbarum floribus depictus Imò usquequaque vestitus, in quo nihil repente arduum, nihil præceps, nihil abruptum, quem lateribus longè latèque deductum in modum æquoris natura complanat, dignum videlicet eum pro insità sibi specie venustatis jam olim reddens, qui beati martyris cruore dicaretur."—W.

"Nor wants the cause the panic-striking aid
Of hallelujahs" (page 421).

Alluding to the victory gained under Germanus.—See Bede.—W.

"By men yet scarcely conscious of a care
For other monuments than those of Earth;"
(page 421, xi., ll. 9, 10).

The last six lines of this Sonnet are chiefly from the prose of Daniel; and here I will state (though to the Readers whom this Poem will chiefly interest it is unnecessary) that my obligations to other prose writers are frequent,—obligations which, even if I had not a pleasure in courting, it would have been presumptuous to shun, in treating an historical subject. I must, however, particularise Fuller, to whom I am indebted in the Sonnet upon Wicliffe and in other instances. And upon the acquittal of the Seven Bishops I have done little more than versify a lively description of that event in the MS. Memoirs of the first Lord Lonsdale.—W.

Sonnet XII. (page 421).

"Ethelforth reached the convent of Bangor, he perceived the Monks, twelve hundred in number, offering prayers for the success of their countrymen: 'if they are praying against us,' he exclaimed, 'they are fighting against us;' and he ordered them to be first attacked: they were destroyed; and, appalled by their fate, the courage of Brocmail wavered, and he fled from the field in dismay. Thus abandoned by their leader, his army soon gave way, and Ethelforth obtained a decisive conquest. Ancient Bangor itself soon fell into his hands, and was demolished; the noble monastery was levelled to the ground; its library, which is mentioned as a large one, the collection of ages, the repository of the most precious monuments of the ancient Britons, was consumed; half ruined walls, gates, and rubbish were all that remained of the magnificent edifice."—See Turner's valuable history of the Anglo-Saxons.

Taliesin was present at the battle which preceded this desolation.

The account Bede gives of this remarkable event, suggests a most striking warning against National and Religious prejudices.—W.

Sonnet XV. (page 422).

The person of Paulinus is thus described by Bede, from the memory of an eye-witness:—"Longæ stature, paululum incurvus, nigro capillo, facie macilentâ, naso adunco, pertenui, venerabilis simul et terribilis aspectu."—W.

"Man's life is like a Sparrow," (page 422).

See the original of this speech in Bede.—The Conversion of Edwin, as related by him, is highly interesting—and the breaking up of this Council accompanied with an event so striking and characteristic, that I am tempted to give it at length in a translation. "'Who,' exclaimed the King, when the Council was ended, 'shall first desecrate the altars and the temples?' 'I,' answered the Chief Priest; 'for who more fit than myself, through the wisdom which the true God hath given me, to destroy, for the good example of others, what in foolishness I worshipped?' Immediately, casting away vain superstition, he besought the King to grant him what the laws did not allow to a priest, arms and a courser (equum emissarium); which mounting, and furnished with a sword and lance, he proceeded to destroy the Idols. The crowd, seeing this, thought him mad—he, however, halted not, but, approaching, he profaned the temple, casting against it the lance which he had held in his hand, and, exulting in acknowledgment of the worship of the true God, he ordered his companions to pull down the temple, with all its enclosures. The place is shown where those Idols formerly stood, not far from York, at the source of the river Derwent, and is: 't this day called Gormund Gahan, ubi pontifex ille, inspirante Deo vero, pollutæ ac destruxit eas, quas ipse sacraverat aras.'" Having spoken of the zeal, disinterestedness, and temperance of the clergy of those times, Bede thus proceeds:—"Unde et in magna erat veneratione tempore illo religionis habitus, ita ut ubicunque clericus aliquis, aut monachus adveniret, gauderet ab omnibus tanquam Dei famulus exciperetur. Etiam si in itinere pergens inveniretur, accurrebant, et flexâ cervicæ, vel manu signari, vel ore illius se benedicti, gaudebant. Verbis quoque horum exhortatoris diligenter auditum præbebant." The list of foul names bestowed upon those poor creatures is long and curious:—and, as is, alas! too natural, most of the opprobrious appellations are drawn from circumstances into which they were forced by their persecutors, who even consolidated their miseries into one reproachful term, calling them Patarensians, or Paturins, from pati, to suffer.

These two lines are adopted from a MS., written about the year 1770, which accidentally fell into my possession. Then they brought a faggotte, kindled with fire, and laid the same downe at doctour Ridley's feete. To whome M. Latimer spake in this manner, 'Bee of good comfort, master Ridley, and play the man: wee shall this day light such a candle by God's grace in England, as I trust shall never bee put out.'"—Fox's Acts, &c.

'Richard, I do not give, but lend you my horse; be sure you be honest, and bring my horse back to me, at your return this way to Oxford. And I do now give you ten groats to bear your charges to Exeter; and here is ten groats more, which I charge you to deliver to your mother, and tell her I send her a Bishop's benediction with it, and beg the continuance of her prayers for me. And if you bring my horse back to me, I will give you ten groats more to carry you on foot to the college; and so God bless you, good Richard.'"—See WALTON'S Life of Richard Hooker.—W.

LAUD (page 440).

In this age a word cannot be said in praise of Laud, or even in compassion for his fate, without incurring a charge of bigotry; but fearless of such imputation, I concur with Hume, "that it is sufficient for his vindication to observe that his errors were the most excusable of all those which prevailed during that zealous period." A key to the right understanding of those parts of his conduct that brought the most odium upon him in his own time, may be found in the following passage of his speech before the bar of the House of Peers:—"Ever since I came in place, I have laboured nothing more than the external publick worship of God, so much slighted in divers parts of this kingdom, might be preserved, and that with as much decency and uniformity as might be. For I evidently saw that the public neglect of God's service in the outward face of it, and the nasty lying of many places dedicated to that service, had almost cast a damp upon the true and inward worship of God, which while we live in the body, needs external helps, and all little enough to keep it in any vigour."—W.

THE PILGRIM FATHERS (pages 443, 444).

American episcopacy, in union with the church in England, strictly belongs to the general subject; and I here make my acknowledgments to my American friends, Bishop Doane, and Mr. Henry Reed of Philadelphia, for having suggested to me the propriety of adverting to it, and pointed out the virtues and intellectual qualities of Bishop White, which so eminently fitted him for the great work he undertook. Bishop White was consecrated at Lambeth, Feb. 4, 1787, by Archbishop Moore; and before his long life was closed, twenty-six bishops had been consecrated in America, by himself. For his character and opinions, see his own numerous Works, and a "Sermon in commemoration of him, by George Washington Doane, Bishop of New Jersey."—W.

"A genial hearth
And a refined rusticity, belong
To the neat mansion" (page 444, xviii., ll. 1-3).

Among the benefits arising, as Mr. Coleridge has well observed, from a Church establishment of endowments corresponding with the wealth of the country to which it belongs, may be reckoned as eminently important, the examples of civility and refinement which the clergy stationed at intervals, afford to the whole people. The established clergy in many parts of England have long been, as they continue to be, the principal bulwark against barbarism, and the link which unites the sequestered peasantry with the intellectual advancement of the age. Nor is it below the dignity of the subject to observe, that their taste, as acting upon rural residences and scenery often furnishes models which country gentlemen, who are more at liberty to follow the caprices of fashion, might profit by. The precursors of an old residence must be treated by ecclesiastics with respect, both from prudence and necessity. I remember being much pleased, some years ago, at Rose Castle, the rural seat of the See of Carlisle, with a style of garden and architecture, which, if the place had belonged to a wealthy layman, would no doubt have been swept away. A parsonage-house generally stands not far from the church; this proximity imposes favourable restraints, and sometimes suggests an affecting union of the accommodations and elegancies of life with the outward signs of piety and mortality. With pleasure I recall to mind a happy instance of this in the residence of an old and much-valued friend in Oxfordshire. The house and church stand parallel to each other, at a small distance; a circular lawn or rather grass-plot, spreads between them; shrubs and trees curve from each side of the dwelling, veiling, but not hiding, the church. From the front of this dwelling, no part of the burial-ground is seen; but as you wind by the side of the shrubs towards the steeple-end of the church, the eye catches a single, small, low, monumental headstone, moss-grown, sinking into, and gently inclining towards the earth. Advance, and the churchyard, populous and gay with glittering tombstones, opens upon the view. This humble, and beautiful parsonage called forth a tribute, for which see the seventh of the "Miscellaneous Sonnets," Part III.—W.

Many years ago, when I was at Greta Bridge, in Yorkshire, the hostess of the Inn, proud of her skill in etymology, said, that "the name of the river was taken from the bridge, the form of which, as every one must notice, exactly resembled a great A." Dr. Whitaker has derived it from the word of common occurrence in the North of England, "to greet;" signifying to lament aloud, mostly with weeping: a conjecture rendered more probable from the stony and rocky channel of both the Cumberland and Yorkshire rivers. The Cumberland Greta, though it does not, among the country people, take up that name till within three miles of its disappearance in the River Derwent, may be considered as having its source in the mountain cove of Wythburn, and flowing through Thirlmere, the beautiful features of which lake are known only to those who, travelling between Grasmore and Keswick, have quitted the main road in the vale of Wythburn, and, crossing over to the opposite side of the lake, have proceeded with it on the right hand.

The channel of the Greta, immediately above Keswick, has, for the purposes of building, been in a great measure cleared of the immense stones which, by their concussion in high floods, produced the loud and awful noises described in the sonnet.

"The scenery upon this river," says Mr. Southey in his "Colloquies," "where it passes under the woody side of Latrigg, is of the finest and most rememberable kind:—

"The fears and impatience of Mary were so great," says Robertson, "that she got into a fisher-boat, and with about twenty attendants landed at Workington, in Cumberland; and thence she was conducted with many marks of respect to Carlisle." The apartment in which the Queen had slept at Workington Hall (where she was received by Sir Henry Curwen as became her rank and misfortunes) was long preserved, out of respect to her memory, as she had left it; and one cannot but regret that some necessary alterations in the mansion could not be effected without its destruction.—W.

STANZAS, &c. (page 465).

St. Bees' Heads, anciently called the Cliff of Baruth, are a conspicuous sea-mark for all vessels sailing in the N.E. parts of the Irish Sea. In a bay, one side of which is formed by the southern headland, stands the village of St. Bees; a place distinguished, from very early times, for its religious and scholastic foundations.

"St. Bees," says Nicholson and Burns, "had its name from Bega, an holy woman from Ireland, who is said to have founded here, about the year of our Lord 650, a small monastery, where afterwards a church was built in memory of her.

"The aforesaid religious house, being destroyed by the Danes, was restored by William de Meschiens, son of Ranulph, and brother of Ranulph de Meschiens, first Earl of Cumberland after the Conquest; and made a cell of a prior and six Benedictine monks to the Abbey of St. Mary at York."

Several traditions of miracles, connected with the foundation of the first of these religious houses, survive among the people of the neighbourhood; one of which is alluded to in these Stanzas; and another, of a somewhat bolder and more peculiar character, has furnished the subject of a spirited poem by the Rev. R. Parkinson, M.A., late Divinity Lecturer of St. Bees' College, and now Fellow of the Collegiate Church of Manchester.

After the dissolution of the monasteries, Archbishop Grindal founded a free school at St. Bees, from which the counties of Cumberland and Westmoreland have derived great benefit; and recently, under the patronage of the Earl of Lonsdale, a college has been established there for the education of ministers for the English Church. The old Conventual Church has been repaired under the superintendance of the Rev. Dr. Ainger, the Head of the College; and is well worthy of being visited by any strangers who might be led to the neighbourhood of this celebrated spot.

The form of stanza in this Poem, and something in the style of versification, are adopted from the "St. Monica," a poem of much beauty upon a monastic subject, by Charlotte Smith: a lady to whom English verse is under greater obligations than are likely to be either acknowledged or remembered. She wrote little, and that little unambitiously, but with true feeling for rural nature, at a time when nature was not much regarded by English Poets; for in point of time her earlier writings preceded, I believe, those of Cowper and Burns.—W.

I am aware that I am here treading upon tender ground; but to the intelligent reader I feel that no apology is due. The prayers of survivors, during passionate grief for the recent loss of relatives and friends, as the object of those prayers could no longer be the suffering body of the dying, would naturally be ejaculated for the souls of the departed; the barriers between the two worlds dissolving before the power of love and faith. The ministers of religion, from their habitual attendance upon sick-beds, would be daily witnesses of these benign results, and hence would be strongly tempted to aim at giving to them permanence, by embodying them in rites and ceremonies, recurring at stated periods. All this, as it was in course of nature, so was it blameless, and even praiseworthy; since some of its effects, in that rude state of society could not but be salutary. No reflecting person, however, can view without sorrow the abuses which rose out of thus formalising sublime instincts, and disinterested movements of passion, and perverting them into means of gratifying the ambition and rapacity of the priesthood. But, while we deplore and are indignant at these abuses, it would be a great mistake if we imputed the origin of the offices to prospective selfishness on the part of the monks and clergy: they were at first sincere in their sympathy, and in their degree dupes rather of their own creed, than artful and designing men. Charity is, upon the whole, the safest guide that we can take in judging our fellow-men, whether of past ages, or of the present time.—W.

"And they are led by noble Hillary" (page 469).

The TOWER OF REFUGE, an ornament to Douglas Bay, was erected chiefly through the humanity and zeal of Sir William Hillary; and he also was the founder of the lifeboat establishment at that place; by which, under his superintendance, and often by his exertions at the imminent hazard of his own life, many seamen and passengers have been saved.—W.

The summit of this mountain is well chosen by Cowley as the scene of the "Vision," in which the spectral angel discourses with him concerning the government of Oliver Cromwell. "I found myself," says he, "on the top of that famous hill in the Island Mona, which has the prospect of three great, and not long since most happy, kingdoms. As soon as ever I looked upon them, they called forth the sad representation of all the sins and all the miseries that had overwhelmed them these twenty years." It is not to be denied that the changes now in progress, and the passions, and the way in which they work, strikingly resemble those which led to the disasters the philosophic writer so feelingly bewails. God grant that the resemblance may not become still more striking as months and years advance! —W.

The reader may be tempted to exclaim, "How came this and the two following sonnets to be

Upon the head of the columns which form the front of the cave, rests a body of decomposed basaltic matter, which was richly decorated with that large bright flower, the ox-eyed daisy. I had noticed the same flower growing with profusion among the bold rocks on the western coast of the Isle of Man, making a brilliant contrast with their black and gloomy surfaces.—W.

It is to be feared that there is more of the poet than the sound etymologist in this derivation of the name Eden. On the western coast of Cumberland is a rivulet which enters the sea at Moresby, known also in the neighbourhood by the name of Eden. May not the latter syllable come from the word Dean, a valley? Langdale, near Ambleside, is by the inhabitants called Langden. The former syllable occurs in the name Emont, a principal feeder of the Eden; and the stream which flows, when the tide is out, over Cartmel sands, is called the Ea—eau, French—aqua, Latin.—W.

The daughters of Long Meg, placed in a perfect circle eighty yards in diameter, are seventy-two in number above ground; a little way out of the circle stands Long Meg herself, a single stone, eighteen feet high. When I first saw this monument, as I came upon it by surprise, I might over-rate its importance as an object; but, though it will not bear a comparison with Stonehenge, I must say I have not seen any other relique of those dark ages which can pretend to rival it in singularity and dignity of appearance.—W.

TO THE EARL OF LONSDALE (page 477).

This sonnet was written immediately after certain trials, which took place at the Cumberland Assizes, when the Earl of Lonsdale, in consequence of repeated and long-continued attacks upon his character, through the local press, had thought it right to prosecute the conductors and proprietors of three several journals. A verdict of libel was given in one case; and, in the others, the prosecutions were withdrawn, upon the individuals retracting and disavowing the charges, expressing regret that they had been made, and promising to abstain from the like in future.—W.

These lines were written several years ago, when reports prevailed of cruelties committed in many parts of America, by men making a law of their own passions. A far more formidable, as being a more deliberate mischief, has appeared among those States, which have lately broken faith with the public creditor in a manner so infamous. I cannot, however, but look at both evils under a similar relation to inherent good, and hope that the time is not distant when our brethren of the West will wipe off this stain from their name and nation.—W.

Additional Note.

I am happy to add that this anticipation is already partly realised; and that the reproach addressed to the Pennsylvanians in the next sonnet is no longer applicable to them. I trust that those other States to which it may yet apply will soon follow the example now set them by Philadelphia, and redeem their credit with the world.—W. 1850.

Moss Campion (Silene acaulis) (page 581 n.).

This most beautiful plant is scarce in England, though it is found in great abundance upon the mountains of Scotland. The first specimen I ever saw of it, in its native bed, was singularly fine, the tuft or cushion being at least eight inches in diameter, and the root proportionably thick. I have only met with it in two places among our mountains, in both of which I have since sought for it in vain.

Botanists will not, I hope, take it ill, if I caution them against carrying off, inconsiderately, rare and beautiful plants. This has often been done, particularly from Ingleborough and other mountains in Yorkshire, till the species have totally disappeared, to the great regret of lovers of nature living near the places where they grew.—W.

"From the most gentle creature nursed in fields" (page 584, xv., l. 23).

This way of indicating the name of my lamented friend has been found fault with; perhaps rightly so; but I may say in justification of the double sense of the word, that similar allusions are not uncommon in epitaphs. One of the best in our language in verse, I ever read, was upon a person who bore the name of Palmer; and the course of the thought, throughout, turned upon the Life of the Departed, considered as a pilgrimage. Nor can I think that the objection in the present case will have much force with any one who remembers Charles Lamb's beautiful sonnet addressed to his own name, and ending,

"No deed of mine shall shame thee, gentle name!"

"— much did he see of men" (page 761).

At the risk of giving a shock to the prejudices of artificial society, I have ever been ready to pay homage to the aristocracy of nature; under a conviction that vigorous human-heartedness is the constituent principle of true taste. It may still, however, be satisfactory to have prose testimony how far a Character, employed for purposes of imagination, is founded upon general fact. I, therefore, subjoin an extract from an author who had opportunities of being well acquainted with a class of men, from whom my own personal knowledge emboldened me to draw this portrait.

"We learn from Cæsar and other Roman Writers, that the travelling merchants who frequented Gaul and other barbarous countries, either newly conquered by the Roman arms, or bordering on the Roman conquests, were ever the first to make the inhabitants of those countries familiarly acquainted with the Roman modes of life, and to inspire them with an inclination to follow the Roman fashions, and to enjoy Roman conveniences. In North America, travelling merchants from the Settlements have done and continue to do much more towards civilizing the Indian natives, than all the missionaries, papist or protestant, who have ever been sent among them.

"It is farther to be observed, for the credit of this most useful class of men, that they commonly contribute, by their personal manners, no less than by the sale of their wares, to the refinement of the people among whom they travel. Their dealings form them to great quickness of wit and acuteness of judgment. Having constant occasion to recommend themselves and their goods, they acquire habits of the most obliging attention, and the most insinuating address. As in their peregrinations they have opportunity of contemplating the manners of various men and various cities, they become eminently skilled in the knowledge of the world. As they wander, each alone, through thinly-inhabited districts, they form habits of reflection and of sublime contemplation. With all these qualifications, no wonder, that they should often be, in remote parts of the country, the best mirrors of fashion, and censors of manners; and should contribute much to polish the roughness, and soften the rusticity of our peasantry. It is not more than twenty or thirty years since a young man going from any part of Scotland to England, of purpose to carry the pack, was considered as going to lead the life and acquire the fortune of a gentleman. When, after twenty years' absence, in that honourable line of employment, he returned with his acquisitions to his native country, he was regarded as a gentleman to all intents and purposes."—HERON'S Journey in Scotland, vol. i. p. 89.—W.

"Lost in unsearchable eternity!" (page 788).

Since this paragraph was composed, I have read with so much pleasure, in Burnet's "Theory of the Earth," a passage expressing corresponding sentiments, excited by objects of a similar nature, that I cannot forbear to transcribe it.

"Siquid verò Natura nobis dedit spectaculum, in hæc tellure, verè gratum, et philosopho dignum, id semel mihi contigisse arbitror; cùm ex celsissimâ rupe speculabundus ad oram maris Mediteranei, hinc æquor cæruleum, illinc tractus Alpino prospexi; nihil quidem magis dispar aut dissimile, nec in suo genere, magis egregium et singulare. Hoc theatrum ego facillè præterlerim Romanis cunctis, Græcisve; atque id quod natura hic spectandum exhibet, scenicis ludis omnibus, aut amphitheatri certaminibus. Nihil hinc elegans aut venustum, sed ingens et magnificentum, et quod placet magnitudine suâ et quâdam specie immensitatis. Hinc intuebar maris æquabilem superficiem, usque et usque diffusam, quantum maximum oculorum acies ferri potuit; illinc disruptissimam terræ faciem, et vastas moles varîe elevatas aut depressas, erectas, propendentes, reclinatâs, coacervatas, omni situ inæqualis et turbido. Placuit, ex hæc parte, Naturæ unitas et simplicitas, et inexhausta quædam plantities; ex alterâ, multiformis confusio magnorum corporum, et insanæ rerum strages: quas cùm intuebar, non urbis allecujus aut oppidi, sed confracti mundi rudera, ante oculos habere mihi visus sum.

"In singulis ferè montibus erat aliquid insolens et mirabile, sed præ cæteris mihi placebat illa, quæ sedebam, rupes; erat maxima et altissima, et quæ terram respiciebat, molliori ascensu altitudinem suam dissimulabat: quæ verò mare, horrendum præcepit, et quasi ad perpendicularium facta, instar parietis. Præterea facies illa marina adeò erat lævis ac uniformis (quod in rupibus aliquando observare licet) ac si scissa fuisset à summo ad imum, in illo plano; vel terræ motu alio, aut fulmine, divulsa.

"Ima pars rupis erat cava, recessusque habuit, et saxeos specus, euntes in vacuum montem; sive naturâ pridem factos, sive exesos mari, et undarum crebris ictibus: In hos enim cum impetu ruebant et fragore, æstuantis maris fluctus; quos iterum spumantes reddidit antrum, et quas i ab imo ventre evomit.

"A man is supposed to improve by going out into the World, by visiting London. Artificial man does; he extends with his sphere; but, alas! that sphere is microscopic; it is formed of minutise, and he surrenders his genuine vision to the artist, in order to embrace it in his ken. His bodily senses grow acute, even to barren and inhuman pruriency; while his mental become proportionally obtuse. The reverse is the Man of Mind; he who is placed in the sphere of Nature and of God, might be a mock at Tattersall's and Brooks's, and a sneer at St. James's: he would certainly be swallowed alive by the first Pizarro that crossed him:—But when he walks along the river of Amazons; when he rests his eye on the unrivalled Andes; when he measures the long and watered savannah; or contemplates, from a sudden promontory, the distant, vast Pacific—and feels himself a freeman in this vast theatre, and commanding each ready produced fruit of this wilderness, and each progeny of this stream—his exaltation is not less than imperial. He is as gentle, too, as he is great: his emotions of tenderness keep pace with his elevation of sentiment; for he says, "These were made by a good Being, who, unsought by me, placed me here to enjoy them." He becomes at once a child and a king. His mind is in himself; from hence he argues, and from hence he acts, and he argues unerringly, and acts magisterially; his mind in himself is also in his God; and therefore he loves, and therefore he scorns."—From the notes upon "The Hurricane," a Poem, by William Gilbert.

The Reader, I am sure, will thank me for the above quotation, which, though from a strange book, is one of the finest passages of modern English prose.—W.

The passage quoted from Daniel is taken from a poem addressed to the Lady Margaret, Countess of Cumberland, and the two last lines, printed in Italics, are by him translated from Seneca. The whole poem is very beautiful. I will transcribe four stanzas from it, as they contain an admirable picture of the state of a wise Man's mind in a time of public commotion.

"Nor is he moved with all the thunder-cracks
Of tyrant's threats, or with the surly brow
Of Power, that proudly sits on others' crimes;
Charged with more crying sins than those he checks.
The storms of sad confusion that may grow
Up in the present for the coming times,
Appal not him; that hath no side at all,
But of himself, and knows the worst can fall.

"Although his heart (so near allied to earth)
Cannot but pity the perplexed state
Of troubled and distressed mortality,
That thus make way unto the ugly birth
Of their own sorrows, and do still beget
Affliction upon Imbecility:
Yet seeing thus the course of things must run,
He looks thereon not strange, but as fore-done.

"And whilst distraught ambition compasses,
And is encompassed, while as craft deceives,
And is deceived: whilst man doth ransack man,
And builds on blood, and rises by distress;
And th' Inheritance of desolation leaves
To great-expecting hopes: He looks thereon,
As from the shore of peace, with unwet eye,
And bears no venture in Impiety.

"Thus, Lady, fares that man that hath prepared
A rest for his desires; and sees all things
Beneath him; and hath learned this book of man, Full of the notes of frailty; and compared
The best of glory with her sufferings:
By whom, I see, you labour all you can
To plant your heart! and set your thoughts as near His glorious mansion as your powers can bear."—W.

The sentiments and opinions here uttered are in unison with those expressed in the following Essay upon Epitaphs, which was furnished by me for Mr. Coleridge's periodical work, "The Friend;" and as they are dictated by a spirit congenial to that which pervades this and the two succeeding books, the sympathising reader will not be displeased to see the Essay here annexed.—W.

ESSAY UPON EPITAPHS.

It need scarcely be said, that an Epitaph presupposes a Monument, upon which it is to be engraven. Almost all Nations have wished that certain external signs should point out the places where their dead are interred. Among savage tribes unacquainted with letters this has mostly been done either by rude stones placed near the graves, or by mounds of earth raised over them. This custom proceeded obviously from a twofold desire; first, to guard the remains of the deceased from irreverent approach or from savage violation; and, secondly, to preserve their memory. "Never any," says Camden, "neglected burial but some savage nations, as the Bactrians, which cast their dead to the dogs; some varlet philosophers, as Diogenes, who desired to be devoured of fishes; some dissolute courtiers, as Mæcenas, who was wont to say, 'Non tumulum curo; sepelit natura relictos.'

"I'm careless of a grave:—Nature her dead will save."

As soon as nations had learned the use of letters, epitaphs were inscribed upon these monuments; in order that their intention might be more surely and adequately fulfilled. I have derived monuments and epitaphs from two sources of feeling: but these do in fact resolve themselves into one. The invention of epitaphs, Weever, in his "Discourse of Funeral Monuments," says rightly, "proceeded from the presage or fore-feeling of immortality, implanted in all men naturally, and is referred to the scholars of Linus the Theban poet, who flourished about the year of the world two thousand seven hundred; who first bewailed this Linus their Master, when he was slain, in doleful verses, then called of him CElina, afterwards Epitaphia, for that they were first sung at burials, after engraven upon the sepulchres."

And, verily, without the consciousness of a principle of immortality in the human soul, Man could never have had awakened in him the desire to live in the remembrance of his fellows: mere love, or the yearning of kind towards kind, could not have produced it. The dog or horse perishes in the field, or in the stall, by the side of his companions, and is incapable of anticipating the sorrow with which his surrounding associates shall bemoan his death, or pite for his loss; he cannot pre-conceive this regret, he can form no thought of it; and therefore cannot possibly have a desire to leave such regret or remembrance behind him. Add to the principle of love which exists in the inferior animals, the faculty of reason which exists in Man alone; will the conjunction of these account for the desire? Doubtless it is a necessary consequence of this conjunction; yet not I think as a direct result, but only to be come at through an intermediate thought, viz. that of an intimation or assurance within us, that some part of our nature is imperishable. At least the precedence, in order of birth, of one feeling to the other, is unquestionable. If we look back upon the days of childhood, we shall find that the time is not in remembrance when, with respect to our own individual Being, the mind was without this assurance; whereas, the wish to be remembered by our friends or kindred after death, or even in absence, is, as we shall discover, a sensation that does not form itself till the social feelings have been developed, and the Reason has connected itself with a wide range of objects. Forlorn, and cut off from communication with the best part of his nature, must that man be, who should derive the sense of immortality, as it exists in the mind of a child, from the same unthinking gaiety or liveliness of animal spirits with which the lamb in the meadow, or any other irrational creature is endowed; who should ascribe it, in short, to blank ignorance in the child; to an inability arising from the imperfect state of his faculties to come, in any point of his being, into contact with a notion of death; or to an unreflecting acquiescence in what had been instilled into him! Has such an unfold of the mysteries of nature, though he may have forgotten his former self, ever noticed the early, obstinate, and unappeasable inquisitiveness of children upon the subject of origination? This single fact proves outwardly the monstrosity of those suppositions: for, if we had no direct external testimony that the minds of very young children meditate feelingly upon death and immortality, these enquiries, which we all know they are perpetually making concerning the whence, do necessarily include correspondent habits of interrogation concerning the whither. Origin and tendency are notions inseparably co-relative. Never did a child stand by the side of a running stream, pondering within himself what power was the feeder of the perpetual current, from what never-wearied sources the body of water was supplied, but he must have been inevitably propelled to follow this question by another: "Towards what abyss is it in progress? what receptacle can contain the mighty influx?" And the spirit of the answer must have been, though the word might be sea or ocean, accompanied perhaps with an image gathered from a map, or from the real object in nature—these might have been the letter, but the spirit of the answer must have been as inevitably,—a receptacle without bounds or dimensions;—nothing less than infinity. We may, then, be justified in asserting, that the sense of immortality, if not a co-existent and twin birth with Reason, is among the earliest of her offspring: and we may further assert, that from these conjoined, and under their countenance, the human affections are gradually formed and opened out. This is not the place to enter into the recesses of these investigations; but the subject requires me here to make a plain avowal, that, for my own part, it is to me inconceivable, that the sympathies of love towards each other, which grow with our growth, could ever attain any new strength, or even preserve the old, after we had received from the outward senses the impression of death, and were in the habit of having that impression daily renewed and its accompanying feeling brought home to ourselves, and to those we love; if the same were not counteracted by those communications with our internal Being, which are anterior to all these experiences, and with which revelation coincides, and has through that coincidence alone (for otherwise it could not possess it) a power to affect us. I confess, with me the conviction is absolute, that, if the impression and sense of death were not thus counterbalanced, such a hollowness would pervade the whole system of things, such a want of correspondence and consistency, a disproportion so astounding betwixt means and ends, that there could be no repose, no joy. Were we to grow up unfostered by this genial warmth, a frost would chill the spirit, so penetrating and powerful, that there could be no notions of the life of love; and infinitely less could we have any wish to be remembered after we had passed away from a world in which each man had moved about like a shadow.—If, then, in a creature endowed with the faculties of foresight and reason, the social affections could not have unfolded themselves uncountenanced by the faith that Man is an immortal being; and if, consequently, neither could the individual dying have had a desire to survive in the remembrance of his fellows, nor on their side could they have felt a wish to preserve for future times vestiges of the departed; it follows, as a final inference, that without the belief in immortality, wherein these several desires originate, neither monuments nor epitaphs, in affectionate or laudatory commemoration of the deceased, could have existed in the world.

Simonides, it is related, upon landing in a strange country, found the corpse of an unknown person lying by the sea-side; he buried it, and was honoured throughout Greece for the piety of that act. Another ancient Philosopher, chancing to fix his eyes upon a dead body, regarded the same with slight, if not with contempt; saying, "See the shell of the flown bird!" But it is not to be supposed that the moral and tender-hearted Simonides was incapable of the lofty movements of thought, to which that other Sage gave way at the moment while his soul was intent only upon the indestructible being; nor, on the other hand, that he, in whose sight a lifeless human body was of no more value than the worthless shell from which the living fowl had departed, would not, in a different mood of mind, have been affected by those earthly considerations which had incited the philosophic Poet to the performance of that pious duty. And with regard to this latter we may be assured that, if he had been destitute of the capability of communing with the more exalted thoughts that appertain to human nature, he would have cared no more for the corpse of the stranger than for the dead body of a seal or porpoise which might have been cast up by the waves. We respect the corporeal frame of Man, not merely because it is the habitation of a rational, but of an immortal Soul. Each of these Sages was in sympathy with the best feelings of our nature; feelings which, though they seem opposite to each other, have another and a finer connection than that of contrast.—It is a connection formed through the subtle progress by which, both in the natural and the moral world, qualities pass insensibly into their contraries, and things revolve upon each other. As, in sailing upon the orb of this planet, a voyage towards the regions where the sun sets, conducts gradually to the quarter where we have been accustomed to behold it come forth at its rising; and, in like manner, a voyage towards the east, the birthplace in our imagination of the morning, leads finally to the quarter where the sun is last seen when he departs from our eyes; so the contemplative Soul, travelling in the direction of mortality, advances to the country of everlasting life; and, in like manner, may she continue to explore those cheerful tracts, till she is brought back, for her advantage and benefit, to the land of transitory things—of sorrow and of tears.

On a midway point, therefore, which commands the thoughts and feelings of the two Sages whom we have represented in contrast, does the Author of that species of composition, the laws of which it is our present purpose to explain, take his stand. Accordingly, recurring to the twofold desire of guarding the remains of the deceased and preserving their memory, it may be said that a sepulchral monument is a tribute to a man as a human being; and that an epitaph (in the ordinary meaning attached to the word) includes this general feeling and something more; and is a record to preserve the memory of the dead, as a tribute due to his individual worth, for a satisfaction to the sorrowing hearts of the survivors, and for the common benefit of the living; which record is to be accomplished, not in a general manner, but, where it can, in close connection with the bodily remains of the deceased: and these, it may be added, among the modern nations of Europe, are deposited within, or contiguous to, their places of worship. In ancient times, as is well known, it was the custom to bury the dead beyond the walls of towns and cities; and among the Greeks and Romans they were frequently interred by the way-sides.

I could here pause with pleasure, and invite the Reader to indulge with me in contemplation of the advantages which must have attended such a practice. We might ruminate upon the beauty which the monuments, thus placed, must have borrowed from the surrounding images of nature—from the trees, the wild flowers, from a stream running perhaps within sight or hearing, from the beaten road stretching its weary length hard by. Many tender similitudes must these objects have presented to the mind of the traveller leaning upon one of the tombs, or reposing in the coolness of its shade, whether he had halted from weariness or in compliance with the invitation, "Pause, Traveller!" so often found upon the monuments. And to its epitaph also must have been supplied strong appeals to visible appearances or immediate impressions, lively and affecting analogies of life as a journey—death as a sleep overcoming the tired wayfarer—of misfortune as a storm that falls suddenly upon him—of beauty as a flower that passeth away, or of innocent pleasure as one that may be gathered—of virtue that standeth firm as a rock against the beating waves;—of hope "undermined insensibly like the poplar by the side of the river that has fed it," or blasted in a moment like a pine-tree by the stroke of lightning upon the mountain-top—of admonitions and heart-stirring remembrances, like a refreshing breeze that comes without warning, or the taste of the waters of an unexpected fountain. These, and similar suggestions, must have given, formerly, to the language of the senseless stone a voice enforced and endeared by the benignity of that nature with which it was in unison.—We, in modern times, have lost much of these advantages; and they are but in a small degree counterbalanced to the inhabitants of large towns and cities, by the custom of depositing the dead within, or contiguous to, their places of worship; however splendid or imposing may be the appearance of those edifices, or however interesting or salutary the recollections associated with them. Even were it not true that tombs lose their honorary virtue when thus obtruded upon the notice of men occupied with the cares of the world, and too often sullied and defiled by those cares, yet still, when death is in our thoughts, nothing can make amends for the want of the soothing influences of nature, and for the absence of those types of renovation and decay, which the fields and woods offer to the notice of the serious and contemplative mind. To feel the force of this sentiment, let a man only compare in imagination the unsightly manner in which our monuments are crowded together in the busy, noisy, unclean, and almost grassless churchyard of a large town, with the still seclusion of a Turkish cemetery, in some remote place; and yet further sanctified by the grove of cypress in which it is embosomed. Thoughts in the same temper as these have already been expressed with true sensibility by an ingenious Poet of the present day. The subject of his poem is "All Saints' Church, Derby:" he has been deploring the forbidding and unseemly appearance of its burial-ground, and uttering a wish, that in past times the practice had been adopted of interring the inhabitants of large towns in the country:—

"Then in some rural, calm, sequestered spot,
Where healing Nature her benignant look Ne'er changes, save at that lorn season, when,
With tresses drooping o'er her sable stole,
She yearly mourns the mortal doom of man,
Her noblest work, (so Israel's virgins erst,
With annual moan upon the mountains wept
Their fairest gone,) there in that rural scene,
So placid, so congenial to the wish
The Christian feels, of peaceful rest within The silent grave, I would have stayed.

—wandered forth, where the cold dew of heaven
Lay on the humbler graves around, what time
The pale moon gazed upon the turfy mounds, Pensive, as though like me, in lonely muse,
'Twere brooding on the dead inhumed beneath.
There while with him, the holy man of Uz,
O'er human destiny I sympathised,
Counting the long, long periods prophecy
Decrees to roll, ere the great day arrives
Of resurrection, oft the blue-eyed Spring
Had met me with her blossoms, as the Dove,
Of old, returned with olive leaf, to cheer
The Patriarch mourning o'er a world destroyed:
And I would bless her visit; for to me
'Tis sweet to trace the consonance that links
As one, the works of Nature and the word
Of God."—

JOHN EDWARDS.

A village churchyard, lying as it does in the lap of nature, may indeed be most favourably contrasted with that of a town of crowded population; and sepulture therein combines many of the best tendencies which belong to the mode practised by the Ancients, with others peculiar to itself. The sensations of pious cheerfulness, which attend the celebration of the sabbath-day in rural places, are profitably chastised by the sight of the graves of kindred and friends, gathered together in that general home towards which the thoughtful yet happy spectators themselves are journeying. Hence a parish church, in the stillness of the country, is a visible centre of a community of the living and the dead; a point to which are habitually referred the nearest concerns of both.

As, then, both in cities and in villages, the dead are deposited in close connection with our places of worship, with us the composition of an epitaph naturally turns, still more than among the nations of antiquity, upon the most serious and solemn affections of the human mind; upon departed worth—upon personal or social sorrow and admiration—upon religion, individual and social—upon time, and upon eternity. Accordingly, it suffices in ordinary cases, to secure a composition of this kind from censure, that it contain nothing that shall shock or be inconsistent with this spirit. But, to entitle an epitaph to praise, more than this is necessary. It ought to contain some thought or feeling belonging to the mortal or immortal part of our nature touchingly expressed; and if that be done, however general or even trite the sentiment may be, every man of pure mind will read the words with pleasure and gratitude. A husband bewails a wife; a parent breathes a sigh of disappointed hope over a lost child; a son utters a sentiment of filial reverence for a departed father or mother; a friend perhaps inscribes an encomium recording the companionable qualities, or the solid virtues, of the tenant of the grave, whose departure has left a sadness upon his memory. This and a pious admonition to the living, and a humble expression of Christian confidence in immortality, is the language of a thousand churchyards; and it does not often happen that anything, in a greater degree discriminate or appropriate to the dead or to the living, is to be found in them. This want of discrimination has been ascribed by Dr. Johnson, in his Essay upon the epitaphs of Pope, to two causes; first, the scantiness of the objects of human praise; and, secondly, the want of variety in the characters of men; or, to use his own words, "to the fact, that the greater part of mankind have no character at all." Such language may be holden without blame among the generalities of common conversation; but does not become a critic and a moralist speaking seriously upon a serious subject. The objects of admiration in human nature are not scanty, but abundant; and every man has a character of his own, to the eye that has skill to perceive it. The real cause of the acknowledged want of discrimination in sepulchral memorials is this: That to analyse the characters of others, especially of those whom we love, is not a common or natural employment of men at any time. We are not anxious unerringly to understand the constitution of the minds of those who have soothed, who have cheered, who have supported us: with whom we have been long and daily pleased or delighted. The affections are their own justification. The light of love in our hearts is a satisfactory evidence that there is a body of worth in the minds of our friends or kindred, whence that light has proceeded. We shrink from the thought of placing their merits and defects to be weighed against each other in the nice balance of pure intellect; nor do we find much temptation to detect the shades by which a good quality or virtue is discriminated in them from an excellence known by the same general name as it exists in the mind of another; and, least of all, do we incline to these refinements when under the pressure of sorrow, admiration, or regret, or when actuated by any of those feelings which incite men to prolong the memory of their friends and kindred, by records placed in the bosom of the all-uniting and equalising receptacle of the dead.

The first requisite, then, in an Epitaph is, that it should speak, in a tone which shall sink into the heart, the general language of humanity as connected with the subject of death—the source from which an epitaph proceeds—of death, and of life. To be born and to die are the two points in which all men feel themselves to be in absolute coincidence. This general language may be uttered so strikingly as to entitle an epitaph to high praise; yet it cannot lay claim to the highest unless other excellencies be superadded. Passing through all intermediate steps, we will attempt to determine at once what these excellencies are, and wherein consists the perfection of this species of composition.—It will be found to lie in a due proportion of the common or universal feeling of humanity to sensations excited by a distinct and clear conception, conveyed to the reader's mind, of the individual, whose death is deplored and whose memory is to be preserved; at least of his character as, after death, it appeared to those who loved him and lament his loss. The general sympathy ought to be quickened, provoked, and diversified, by particular thoughts, actions, images,—circumstances of age, occupation, manner of life, prosperity which the deceased had known, or adversity to which he had been subject; and these ought to be bound together and solemnised into one harmony by the general sympathy. The two powers should temper, restrain, and exalt each other. The reader ought to know who and what the man was whom he is called upon to think of with interest. A distinct conception should be given (implicitly where it can, rather than explicitly) of the individual lamented.—But the writer of an epitaph is not an anatomist, who dissects the internal frame of the mind; he is not even a painter, who executes a portrait at leisure and in entire tranquillity: his delineation, we must remember, is performed by the side of the grave; and, what is more, the grave of one whom he loves and admires. What purity and brightness is that virtue clothed in, the image of which must no longer bless our living eyes! The character of a deceased friend or beloved kinsman is not seen, no—nor ought to be seen, otherwise than as a tree through a tender haze or a luminous mist, that spiritualises and beautifies it; that takes away, indeed, but only to the end that the parts which are not abstracted may appear more dignified and lovely; may impress and affect the more. Shall we say, then, that this is not truth, not a faithful image; and that, accordingly, the purposes of commemoration cannot be answered?—It is truth, and of the highest order; for, though doubtless things are not apparent which did exist; yet, the object being looked at through this medium, parts and proportions are brought into distinct view which before had been only imperfectly or unconsciously seen: it is truth hallowed by love—the joint offspring of the worth of the dead and the affections of the living! This may easily be brought to the test. Let one, whose eyes have been sharpened by personal hostility to discover what was amiss in the character of a good man, hear the tidings of his death, and what a change is wrought in a moment! Enmity melts away; and, as it disappears, unsightliness, disproportion, and deformity, vanish; and, through the influence of commiseration, a harmony of love and beauty succeeds. Bring such a man to the tombstone on which shall be inscribed an epitaph on his adversary, composed in the spirit which we have recommended. Would he turn from it as from an idle tale? No;—the thoughtful look, the sigh, and perhaps the involuntary tear, would testify that it had a sane, a generous, and good meaning; and that on the writer's mind had remained an impression which was a true abstract of the character of the deceased; that his gifts and graces were remembered in the simplicity in which they ought to be remembered. The composition and quality of the mind of a virtuous man, contemplated by the side of the grave where his body is mouldering, ought to appear, and be felt as something midway between what he was on earth walking about with his living frailties, and what he may be presumed to be as a Spirit in heaven.

It suffices, therefore, that the trunk and the main branches of the worth of the deceased be boldly and unaffectedly represented. Any further detail, minutely and scrupulously pursued, especially if this be done with laborious and anti-athetic discriminations, must inevitably frustrate its own purpose; forcing the passing Spectator to this conclusion,—either that the dead did not possess the merits ascribed to him, or that they who have raised a monument to his memory, and must therefore be supposed to have been closely connected with him, were incapable of perceiving those merits; or at least during the act of composition had lost sight of them; for, the understanding having been so busy in its petty occupation, how could the heart of the mourner be other than cold? and in either of these cases, whether the fault be on the part of the buried person or the survivors, the memorial is unaffecting and profitless.

Much better is it to fall short in discrimination than to pursue it too far, or to labour it unfeelingly. For in no place are we so much disposed to dwell upon those points, of nature and condition, wherein all men resemble each other, as in the temple where the universal Father is worshipped, or by the side of the grave which gathers all human Beings to itself, and “equalises the lofty and the low.” We suffer and we weep with the same heart; we love and are anxious for one another in one spirit; our hopes look to the same quarter; and the virtues by which we are all to be furthered and supported, as patience, meekness, good-will, justice, temperance, and temperate desires, are in an equal degree the concern of us all. Let an Epitaph, then, contain at least these acknowledgments to our common nature; nor let the sense of their importance be sacrificed to a balance of opposite qualities or minute distinctions in individual character; which if they do not, (as will for the most part be the case,) when examined, resolve themselves into a trick of words, will, even when they are true and just, for the most part be grievously out of place; for, as it is probable that few only have explored these intricacies of human nature, so can the tracing of them be interesting only to a few. But an epitaph is not a proud writing shut up for the studious; it is exposed to all—to the wise and the most ignorant; it is condescending, perspicuous, and lovingly solicits regard; its story and admonitions are brief, that the thoughtless, the busy, and indolent, may not be deterred, nor the impatient tired: the stooping old man cons the engraven record like a second horn-book;—the child is proud that he can read it;—and the stranger is introduced through its mediation to the company of a friend: it is concerning all, and for all;—in the churchyard it is open to the day; the sun looks down upon the stone, and the rains of heaven beat against it.

Yet, though the writer who would excite sympathy is bound in this case, more than in any other, to give proof that he himself has been moved, it is to be remembered, that to raise a monument is a sober and a reflective act; that the inscription which it bears is intended to be permanent, and for universal perusal; and that, for this reason, the thoughts and feelings expressed should be permanent also—liberated from that weakness and anguish of sorrow which is in nature transitory, and which with instinctive decency retires from notice. The passions should be subdued, the emotions controlled; strong, indeed, but nothing ungovernable or wholly involuntary. Seemliness requires this, and truth requires it also: for how can the narrator otherwise be trusted? Moreover, a grave is a tranquillising object: resignation in course of time springs up from it as naturally as the wild flowers, besprinkling the turf with which it may be covered, or gathering round the monument by which it is defended. The very form and substance of the monument which has received the inscription, and the appearance of the letters, testifying with what a slow and laborious hand they must have been engraven, might seem to reproach the author who had given way on this occasion to transports of mind, or to quick turns of conflicting passion; though the same might constitute the life and beauty of a funeral oration or elegiac poem.

These sensations and judgments, acted upon perhaps unconsciously, have been one of the main causes why epitaphs so often personate the deceased, and represent him as speaking from his own tomb-stone. The departed Mortal is introduced telling you himself that his pains are gone; that a state of rest is come; and he conjures you to weep for him no longer. He admonishes with the voice of one experienced in the vanity of those affections which are confined to earthly objects, and gives a verdict like a superior Being, performing the office of a judge, who has no temptations to mislead him, and whose decision cannot but be dispassionate. Thus is death disarmed of its sting, and affliction unsubstantialised. By this tender fiction, the survivors bind themselves to a sedate sorrow, and employ the intervention of the imagination in order that the reason may speak her own language earlier than she would otherwise have been enabled to do. This shadowy interposition also harmoniously unites the two worlds of the living and the dead by their appropriate affections. And it may be observed, that here we have an additional proof of the propriety with which sepulchral inscriptions were referred to the consciousness of immortality as their primal source.

I do not speak with a wish to recommend that an epitaph should be cast in this mould preferably to the still more common one, in which what is said comes from the survivors directly; but rather to point out how natural those feelings are which have induced men, in all states and ranks of society, so frequently to adopt this mode. And this I have done chiefly in order that the laws, which ought to govern the composition of the other, may be better understood. This latter mode, namely, that in which the survivors speak in their own persons, seems to me upon the whole greatly preferable: as it admits a wider range of notices; and, above all, because, excluding the fiction which is the groundwork of the other, it rests upon a more solid basis.

Enough has been said to convey our notion of a perfect epitaph; but it must be borne in mind that one is meant which will best answer the general ends of that species of composition. According to the course pointed out, the worth of private life, through all varieties of situation and character, will be most honourably and profitably preserved in memory. Nor would the model recommended less suit public men, in all instances save of those persons who by the greatness of their services in the employments of peace or war, or by the surpassing excellence of their works in art, literature, or science, have made themselves not only universally known, but have filled the heart of their country with everlasting gratitude. Yet I must here pause to correct myself. In describing the general tenour of thought which epitaphs ought to hold, I have omitted to say, that if it be the actions of a man, or even some one conspicuous or beneficial act of local or general utility, which have distinguished him, and excited a desire that he should be remembered, then, of course, ought the attention to be directed chiefly to those actions or that act: and such sentiments dwelt upon as naturally arise out of them or it. Having made this necessary distinction, I proceed.—The mighty benefactors of mankind, as they are not only known by the immediate survivors, but will continue to be known familiarly to latest posterity, do not stand in need of biographic sketches, in such a place; nor of delineations of character to individualise them. This is already done by their Works, in the memories of men. Their naked names, and a grand comprehensive sentiment of civic gratitude, patriotic love, or human admiration—or the utterance of some elementary principle most essential in the constitution of true virtue;—or a declaration touching that pious humility and self-abasement, which are ever most profound as minds are most susceptible of genuine exaltation—or an intuition, communicated in adequate words, of the sublimity of intellectual power;—these are the only tribute which can here be paid—the only offering that upon such an altar would not be unworthy.

“What needs my Shakspeare for his honoured bones

Or that his hallowed reliques should be hid

Dear Son of Memory, great Heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name?
Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a livelong monument,
And so sepulchred, in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die." W.

An instinctive taste teaches men to build their churches in flat countries with spire-steeple, which as they cannot be referred to any other object, point as with silent finger to the sky and stars, and sometimes, when they reflect the brazen light of a rich though rainy sunset, appear like a pyramid of flame burning heavenward. The "Transit gloria mundi" is finely expressed in the Introduction to the Foundation-charters of some of the ancient Abbeys. Some expressions here used are taken from that of the Abbey of St. Mary's Furness, the translation of which is as follows:—

In treating this subject, it was impossible not to recollect, with gratitude, the pleasing picture, which, in his Poem of the Fleece, the excellent and amiable Dyer has given of the influences of manufacturing industry upon the face of this Island. He wrote at a time when machinery was first beginning to be introduced, and his benevolent heart prompted him to augur from it nothing but good. Truth has compelled me to dwell upon the baneful effects arising out of an ill-regulated and excessive application of powers so admirable in themselves.—W.

PREFACES

ETC., ETC.

my 59. Bl. 65 Perry

MUCH the greatest part of the foregoing Poems has been so long before the Public that no prefatory matter, explanatory of any portion of them, or of the arrangement which has been adopted, appears to be required; and had it not been for the observations contained in those Prefaces upon the principles of Poetry in general they would not have been reprinted even as an Appendix in this Edition. [W. W. ed. 1849-50.]

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION OF SEVERAL OF THE FOREGOING POEMS, PUBLISHED, WITH AN ADDITIONAL VOLUME, UNDER THE TITLE OF "LYRICAL BALLADS."

[Note.—In succeeding Editions, when the Collection was much enlarged and diversified, this Preface was transferred to the end of the Volumes as having little of a special application to their contents.]

THE first Volume of these Poems has already been submitted to general perusal. It was published, as an experiment, which, I hoped, might be of some use to ascertain, how far, by fitting to metrical arrangement a selection of the real language of men in a state of vivid sensation, that sort of pleasure and that quantity of pleasure may be imparted, which a Poet may rationally endeavour to impart.

I had formed no very inaccurate estimate of the probable effect of those Poems: I flattered myself that they who should be pleased with them would read them with more than common pleasure: and, on the other hand, I was well aware, that by those who should dislike them, they would be read with more than common dislike. The result has differed from my expectation in this only, that a greater number have been pleased than I ventured to hope I should please.

Several of my Friends are anxious for the success of these Poems, from a belief, that, if the views with which they were composed were indeed realised, a class of Poetry would be produced, well adapted to interest mankind permanently, and not unimportant in the quality, and in the multiplicity of its moral relations: and on this account they have advised me to prefix a systematic defence of the theory upon which the Poems were written. But I was unwilling to undertake the task, knowing that on this occasion the Reader would look coldly upon my arguments, since I might be suspected of having been principally influenced by the selfish and foolish hope of reasoning him into an approbation of these particular Poems: and I was still more unwilling to undertake the task, because, adequately to display the opinions, and fully to enforce the arguments, would require a space wholly disproportionate to a preface. For, to treat the subject with the clearness and coherence of which it is susceptible, it would be necessary to give a full account of the present state of the public taste in this country, and to determine how far this taste is healthy or depraved; which, again, could not be determined, without pointing out in what manner language and the human mind act and re-act on each other, and without retracing the revolutions, not of literature alone, but likewise of society itself. I have therefore altogether declined to enter regularly upon this defence; yet I am sensible, that there would be something like impropriety in abruptly obtruding upon the Public, without a few words of introduction, Poems so materially different from those upon which general approbation is at present bestowed.

It is supposed, that by the act of writing in verse an Author makes a formal engagement that he will gratify certain known habits of association; that he not only thus apprises the Reader that certain classes of ideas and expressions will be found in his book, but that others will be carefully excluded. This exponent or symbol held forth by metrical language must in different eras of literature have excited very different expectations: for example, in the age of Catullus, Terence, and Lucretius, and that of Statius or Claudian; and in our own country, in the age of Shakspeare and Beaumont and Fletcher, and that of Donne and Cowley, or Dryden, or Pope. I will not take upon me to determine the exact import of the promise which, by the act of writing in verse, an Author in the present day makes to his reader: but it will undoubtedly appear to many persons that I have not fulfilled the terms of an engagement thus voluntarily contracted. They who have been accustomed to the gaudiness and inane phrasology of many modern writers, if they persist in reading this book to its conclusion, will, no doubt, frequently have to struggle with feelings of strangeness and awkwardness: they will look round for poetry, and will be induced to inquire by what species of courtesy these attempts can be permitted to assume that title. I hope therefore the reader will not censure me for attempting to state what I have proposed to myself to perform; and also (as far as the limits of a preface will permit) to explain some of the chief reasons which have determined me in the choice of my purpose: that at least he may be spared any unpleasant feeling of disappointment, and that I myself may be protected from one of the most dishonourable accusations which can be brought against an Author; namely, that of an indolence which prevents him from endeavouring to ascertain what is his duty, or, when his duty is ascertained, prevents him from performing it.

The principal object, then, proposed in these Poems was to choose incidents and situations from common life, and to relate or describe them, throughout, as far as was possible in a selection of language really used by men, and, at the same time, to throw over them a certain colouring of imagination, whereby ordinary things should be presented to the mind in an unusual aspect; and, further, and above all, to make these incidents and situations interesting by tracing in them, truly though not ostentatiously, the primary laws of our nature: chiefly, as far as regards the manner in which we associate ideas in a state of excitement. Humble and rustic life was generally chosen, because, in that condition, the essential passions of the heart find a better soil in which they can attain their maturity, are less under restraint, and speak a plainer and more emphatic language; because in that condition of life our elementary feelings coexist in a state of greater simplicity, and, consequently, may be more accurately contemplated, and more forcibly communicated; because the manners of rural life germinate from those elementary feelings, and, from the necessary character of rural occupations, are more easily comprehended, and are more durable; and, lastly, because in that condition the passions of men are incorporated with the beautiful and permanent forms of nature. The language, too, of these men has been adopted (purified indeed from what appear to be its real defects, from all lasting and rational causes of dislike or disgust) because such men hourly communicate with the best objects from which the best part of language is originally derived; and because, from their rank in society and the sameness and narrow circle of their intercourse, being less under the influence of social vanity, they convey their feelings and notions in simple and unelaborated expressions. Accordingly, such a language, arising out of repeated experience and regular feelings, is a more permanent, and a far more philosophical language, than that which is frequently substituted for it by Poets, who think that they are conferring honour upon themselves and their art, in proportion as they separate themselves from the sympathies of men, and indulge in arbitrary and capricious habits of expression, in order to furnish food for fickle tastes, and fickle appetites, of their own creation¹.

I cannot, however, be insensible to the present

outcry against the triviality and meanness, both of thought and language, which some of my contemporaries have occasionally introduced into their metrical compositions; and I acknowledge that this defect, where it exists, is more dishonourable to the Writer's own character than false refinement or arbitrary innovation, though I should contend at the same time, that it is far less pernicious in the sum of its consequences. From such verses the Poems in these volumes will be found distinguished at least by one mark of difference, that each of them has a worthy purpose. Not that I always began to write with a distinct purpose formally conceived; but habits of meditation have, I trust, so prompted and regulated my feelings, that my descriptions of such objects as strongly excite those feelings, will be found to carry along with them a purpose. If this opinion be erroneous, I can have little right to the name of a Poet. For all good poetry is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings: and though this be true, Poems to which any value can be attached were never produced on any variety of subjects but by a man who, being possessed of more than usual organic sensibility, had also thought long and deeply. For our continued influxes of feeling are modified and directed by our thoughts, which are indeed the representatives of all our past feelings; and, as by contemplating the relation of these general representatives to each other, we discover what is really important to men, so, by the repetition and continuance of this act, our feelings will be connected with important subjects, till at length, if we be originally possessed of much sensibility, such habits of mind will be produced, that, by obeying blindly and mechanically the impulses of those habits, we shall describe objects, and utter sentiments, of such a nature, and in such connection with each other, that the understanding of the Reader must necessarily be in some degree enlightened, and his affections strengthened and purified.

It has been said that each of these poems has a purpose. Another circumstance must be mentioned which distinguishes these Poems from the popular Poetry of the day; it is this, that the feeling therein developed gives importance to the action and situation, and not the action and situation to the feeling.

A sense of false modesty shall not prevent me from asserting, that the Reader's attention is pointed to this mark of distinction, far less for the sake of these particular Poems than from the general importance of the subject. The subject is indeed important! For the human mind is capable of being excited without the application of gross and violent stimulants; and he must have a very faint perception of its beauty and dignity who does not know this, and who does not further know, that one being is elevated above another, in proportion as he possesses this capability. It has therefore appeared to me, that to endeavour to produce or enlarge this capability is one of the best services in which, at any period, a Writer can be engaged; but this service, excellent at all times, is especially so at the present day. For a multitude of causes, unknown to former times, are now acting with a combined force to blunt the discriminating powers of the mind, and,

language is though naturally arranged and unfitting it for all voluntary exertion, to reduce it to a state of almost savage torpor. The most effective of these causes are the great national events which are daily taking place, and the increasing accumulation of men in cities, where the uniformity of their occupations produces a craving for extraordinary incident, which the rapid communication of intelligence hourly gratifies. To this tendency of life and manners the literature and theatrical exhibitions of the country have conformed themselves. The invaluable works of our elder writers, I had almost said the works of Shakspeare and Milton, are driven into neglect by frantic novels, sickly and stupid German Tragedies, and deluges of idle and extravagant stories in verse.—When I think upon this degrading thirst after outrageous stimulation, I am almost ashamed to have spoken of the feeble endeavour made in these volumes to counteract it; and, reflecting upon the magnitude of the general evil, I should be oppressed with no dishonourable melancholy, had I not a deep impression of certain inherent and indestructible qualities of the human mind, and likewise of certain powers in the great and permanent objects that act upon it, which are equally inherent and indestructible; and were there not added to this impression a belief, that the time is approaching when the evil will be systematically opposed, by men of greater powers, and with far more distinguished success.

Having dwelt thus long on the subjects and aim of these Poems, I shall request the Reader's permission to apprise him of a few circumstances relating to their style, in order, among other reasons, that he may not censure me for not having performed what I never attempted. The Reader will find that personifications of abstract ideas rarely occur in these volumes; and are utterly rejected, as an ordinary device to elevate the style, and raise it above prose. My purpose was to imitate, and, as far as possible, to adopt the very language of men; and assuredly such personifications do not make any natural or regular part of that language. They are, indeed, a figure of speech occasionally prompted by passion, and I have made use of them as such; but have endeavoured utterly to reject them as a mechanical device of style, or as a family language which Writers in metre seem to lay claim to by prescription. I have wished to keep the Reader in the company of flesh and blood, persuaded that by so doing I shall interest him. Others who pursue a different track will interest him likewise; I do not interfere with their claim, but wish to prefer a claim of my own. There will also be found in these volumes little of what is usually called poetic diction; as much pains has been taken to avoid it as is ordinarily taken to produce it; this has been done for the reason already alleged, to bring my language near to the language of men; and further, because the pleasure which I have proposed to myself to impart, is of a kind very different from that which is supposed by many persons to be the proper object of poetry. Without being culpably particular, I do not know how to give my Reader a more exact notion of the style in which it was my wish and intention to write, than by informing him that I have at all times endeavoured to look steadily at my subject; consequently, there is I hope in these Poems little falsehood of description, and my ideas are expressed in language fitted to their respective importance. Something must have been gained by this practice, as it is friendly to one property of all good poetry, namely good sense: but it has necessarily cut me off from a large portion of phrases and figures of speech which from father to son have long been regarded as the common inheritance of Poets. I have also thought it expedient to restrict myself still further, having abstained from the use of many expressions, in themselves proper and beautiful, but which have been foolishly repeated by bad Poets, till such feelings of disgust are connected with them as it is scarcely possible by any art of association to overpower.

If in a poem there should be found a series of lines, or even a single line, in which the language, though naturally arranged, and according to the strict laws of metre, does not differ from that of prose, there is a numerous class of critics, who, when they stumble upon these prosaisms, as they call them, imagine that they have made a notable discovery, and exult over the Poet as over a man ignorant of his own profession. Now these men would establish a canon of criticism which the Reader will conclude he must utterly reject, if he wishes to be pleased with these volumes. And it would be a most easy task to prove to him, that not only the language of a large portion of every good poem, even of the most elevated character, must necessarily, except with reference to the metre, in no respect differ from that of good prose, but likewise that some of the most interesting parts of the best poems will be found to be strictly the language of prose when prose is well written. The truth of this assertion might be demonstrated by innumerable passages from almost all the poetical writings, even of Milton himself. To illustrate the subject in a general manner, I will here adduce a short composition of Gray, who was at the head of those who, by their reasonings, have attempted to widen the space of separation betwixt Prose and Metrical composition, and was more than any other man curiously elaborate in the structure of his own poetic diction.

"In vain to me the smiling mornings shine, ✕
And reddening Phoebus lifts his golden fire:
The birds in vain their amorous descent join,
Or cheerful fields resume their green attire.
These ears, alas! for other notes repine;
A different object do these eyes require;
My lonely anguish melts no heart but mine;
And in my breast the imperfect joys expire;
Yet morning smiles the busy race to cheer,
And new-born pleasure brings to happier men;
The fields to all their wonted tribute bear;
To warm their little loves the birds complain.
I fruitless mourn to him that cannot hear,
And weep the more because I weep in vain."

It will easily be perceived, that the only part of this Sonnet which is of any value is the lines printed in Italics; it is equally obvious, that, except in the rhyme, and in the use of the single word "fruitless" for fruitlessly, which is so far a defect, the language of these lines does in no respect differ from that of prose.

By the foregoing quotation it has been shown that the language of Prose may yet be well adapted to Poetry; and it was previously asserted, that a large portion of the language of every good poem can in no respect differ from that of good Prose. We will go further. It may be safely affirmed, that there neither is, nor can be, any essential difference between the language of prose and metrical composition. We are fond of tracing the resemblance between Poetry and Painting, and, accordingly, we call them Sisters: but where shall we find bonds of connection sufficiently strict to typify the affinity betwixt metrical and prose composition? They both speak by and to the same organs; the bodies in which both of them are clothed may be said to be of the same substance, their affections are kindred, and almost identical, not necessarily differing even in degree; Poetry¹ sheds no tears "such as Angels weep," but natural and human tears; she can boast of no celestial ichor that distinguishes her vital juices from those of prose; the same human blood circulates through the veins of them both.

If it be affirmed that rhyme and metrical arrangement of themselves constitute a distinction which overturns what has just been said on the strict affinity of metrical language with that of prose, and paves the way for other artificial distinctions which the mind voluntarily admits, I answer that the language of such Poetry as is here recommended is, as far as is possible, a selection of the language really spoken by men; that this selection, wherever it is made with true taste and feeling, will of itself form a distinction far greater than would at first be imagined, and will entirely separate the composition from the vulgarity and meanness of ordinary life; and, if metre be superadded thereto, I believe that a dissimilitude will be produced altogether sufficient for the gratification of a rational mind. What other distinction would we have? Whence is it to come? And where is it to exist? Not, surely, where the Poet speaks through the mouths of his characters: it cannot be necessary here, either for elevation of style, or any of its supposed ornaments: for, if the Poet's subject be judiciously chosen, it will naturally, and upon fit occasion, lead him to passions the language of which, if selected truly and judiciously, must necessarily be dignified and variegated, and alive with metaphors and figures. I forbear to speak of an incongruity which would shock the intelligent Reader, should the Poet interweave any foreign splendour of his own with that which the passion naturally suggests: it is sufficient to say that such addition is unnecessary. And, surely, it is more probable that those passages, which with propriety abound with metaphors and figures, will have their due effect, if, upon other occasions where the passions are of a milder character, the style also be subdued and temperate.

But, as the pleasure which I hope to give by the Poems now presented to the Reader must depend entirely on just notions upon this subject, and, as it is in itself of high importance to our taste and moral feelings, I cannot content myself with these detached remarks. And if, in what I am about to say, it shall appear to some that my labour is unnecessary, and that I am like a man fighting a battle without enemies, such persons may be reminded, that, whatever be the language outwardly holden by men, a practical faith in the opinions which I am wishing to establish is almost unknown. If my conclusions are admitted, and carried as far as they must be carried if admitted at all, our judgments concerning the works of the greatest Poets both ancient and modern will be far different from what they are at present, both when we praise, and when we censure: and our moral feelings influencing and influenced by these judgments will, I believe, be corrected and purified.

Taking up the subject, then, upon general grounds, let me ask, what is meant by the word Poet? What is a Poet? To whom does he address himself? And what language is to be expected from him?—He is a man speaking to men: a man, it is true, endowed with more lively sensibility, more enthusiasm and tenderness, who has a greater knowledge of human nature, and a more comprehensive soul, than are supposed to be common among mankind; a man pleased with his own passions and Volitions, and who rejoices more than other men in the spirit of life that is in him; delighting to contemplate similar volitions and passions as manifested in the goings-on of the Universe, and habitually impelled to create them where he does not find them. To these qualities he has added a disposition to be affected more than other men by absent things as if they were present; an ability of conjuring up in himself passions, which are indeed far from being the same as those produced by real events, yet (especially in those parts of the general sympathy which are pleasing and delightful) do more nearly resemble the passions produced by real events, than anything which, from the motions of their own minds merely, other men are accustomed to feel in themselves:—whence, and from practice, he has acquired a greater readiness and power in expressing what he thinks and feels, and especially those thoughts and feelings which, by his own choice, or from the structure of his own mind, arise in him without immediate external excitement.

But whatever portion of this faculty we may suppose even the greatest Poet to possess, there cannot be a doubt that the language which it will suggest to him, must often, in liveliness and truth, fall short of that which is uttered by men in real life, under the actual pressure of those passions, certain shadows of which the Poet thus produces, or feels to be produced, in himself.

However exalted a notion we would wish to cherish of the character of a Poet, it is obvious, that while he describes and imitates passions, his employment is in some degree mechanical, compared with the freedom and power of real and substantial action and suffering. So that it will be the wish of the Poet to bring his feelings near to those of the persons whose feelings he describes, nay, for short spaces of time, perhaps, to let himself slip into an entire delusion, and even confound and identify his own feelings with theirs; modifying only the language which is thus suggested to him by a consideration that he describes for a particular purpose, that of giving pleasure. Here, then, he will apply the principle of selection which has been already insisted upon. He will depend upon this for removing what would otherwise be painful or disgusting in the passion; he will feel that there is no necessity to trick out or to elevate nature: and, the more industriously he applies this principle, the deeper will be his faith that no words, which his fancy or imagination can suggest, will be to be compared with those which are the emanations of reality and truth.

This can be said here self.

But it may be said by those who do not object to the general spirit of these remarks, that, as it is impossible for the Poet to produce upon all occasions language as exquisitely fitted for the passion as that which the real passion itself suggests, it is proper that he should consider himself as in the situation of a translator, who does not scruple to substitute excellencies of another kind for those which are unattainable by him; and endeavours occasionally to surpass his original, in order to make some amends for the general inferiority to which he feels that he must submit. But this would be to encourage idleness and unmanly despair. Further, it is the language of men who speak of what they do not understand; who talk of Poetry as of a matter of amusement and idle pleasure; who will converse with us as gravely about a taste for Poetry, as they express it, as if it were a thing as indifferent as a taste for rope-dancing, or Frontinac or Sherry. Aristotle, I have been told, has said, that Poetry is the most philosophic of all writing; it is so: its object is truth, not individual and local, but general, and operative; not standing upon external testimony, but carried alive into the heart by passion; truth which is its own testimony, which gives competence and confidence to the tribunal to which it appeals, and receives them from the same tribunal. Poetry is the image of man and nature. The obstacles which stand in the way of the fidelity of the Biographer and Historian, and of their consequent utility, are incalculably greater than those which are to be encountered by the Poet who comprehends the dignity of his art. The Poet writes under one restriction only, namely, the necessity of giving immediate pleasure to a human Being possessed of that information which may be expected from him, not as a lawyer, a physician, a mariner, an astronomer, or a natural philosopher, but as a Man. Except this one restriction, there is no object standing between the Poet and the image of things; between this, and the Biographer and Historian, there are a thousand.

Nor let this necessity of producing immediate pleasure be considered as a degradation of the Poet's art. It is far otherwise. It is an acknowledgment of the beauty of the universe, an acknowledgment the more sincere, because not formal, but indirect; it is a task light and easy to him who looks at the world in the spirit of love: further, it is a homage paid to the native and naked dignity of man, to the grand elementary principle of pleasure, by which he knows, and feels, and lives, and moves. We have no sympathy but what is propagated by pleasure: I would not be misunderstood; but wherever we sympathise with pain, it will be found that the sympathy is produced and carried on by subtle combinations with pleasure. We have no knowledge, that is, no general principles drawn from the contemplation of particular facts, but what has been built up by pleasure, and exists in us by pleasure alone. The Man of science, the Chemist and Mathematician, whatever difficulties and disgusts they may have had to struggle with, know and feel this. However painful may be the objects with which the Anatomist's knowledge is connected, he feels that his knowledge is pleasure; and where he has no pleasure he has no knowledge. What then does the Poet? He considers man and the objects that surround him as acting and re-acting upon each other, so as to produce an infinite complexity of pain and pleasure; he considers man in his own nature and in his ordinary life as contemplating this with a certain quantity of immediate knowledge, with certain convictions, intuitions, and deductions, which from habit acquire the quality of intuitions; he considers him as looking upon this complex scene of ideas and sensations, and finding everywhere objects that immediately excite in him sympathies which, from the necessities of his nature, are accompanied by an overbalance of enjoyment.

To this knowledge which all men carry about with them, and to these sympathies in which, without any other discipline than that of our daily life, we are fitted to take delight, the Poet principally directs his attention. He considers man and nature as essentially adapted to each other, and the mind of man as naturally the mirror of the fairest and most interesting properties of nature. And thus the Poet, prompted by this feeling of pleasure, which accompanies him through the whole course of his studies, converses with general nature, with affections akin to those, which, through labour and length of time, the Man of science has raised up in himself, by conversing with those particular parts of nature which are the objects of his studies. The knowledge both of the Poet and the Man of science is pleasure; but the knowledge of the one cleaves to us as a necessary part of our existence, our natural and unalienable inheritance; the other is a personal and individual acquisition, slow to come to us, and by no habitual and direct sympathy connecting us with our fellow-beings. The Man of science seeks truth as a remote and unknown benefactor; he cherishes and loves it in his solitude: the Poet, singing a song in which all human beings join with him, rejoices in the presence of truth as our visible friend and hourly companion. Poetry is the breath and finer spirit of all knowledge; it is the impassioned expression which is in the countenance of all Science. Emphatically may it be said of the Poet, as Shakspeare hath said of man, "that he looks before and after." He is the rock of defence for human nature; an upholder and preserver, carrying everywhere with him relationship and love. In spite of difference of soil and climate, of language and manners, of laws and customs: in spite of things silently gone out of mind, and things violently destroyed; the Poet binds together by passion and knowledge the vast empire of human society, as it is spread over the whole earth, and over all time. The objects of the Poet's thoughts are everywhere; though the eyes and senses of man are, it is true, his favourite guides, yet he will follow wheresoever he can find an atmosphere of sensation in which to move his wings. Poetry is the first and last of all knowledge—it is as immortal as the heart of man. If the labours of Men of science should ever create any material revolution, direct or indirect, in our condition, and in the impressions which we habitually receive, the Poet will sleep then no more than at present; he will be ready to follow the steps of the Man of science, not only in those general indirect effects, but he will be at his side, carrying sensation into the midst of the objects of the science itself. The remotest discoveries of the Chemist, the Botanist, or Mineralogist, will be as proper objects of the Poet's art as any upon which it can be employed, if the time should ever come when these things shall be familiar to us, and the relations under which they are contemplated by the followers of these respective sciences shall be manifestly and palpably material to us as enjoying and suffering beings. If the time should ever come when what is now called science, thus familiarised to men, shall be ready to put on, as it were, a form of flesh and blood, the Poet will lend his divine spirit to aid the transfiguration, and will welcome the Being thus produced, as a dear and genuine inmate of the household of man.—It is not, then, to be supposed that any one, who holds that sublime notion of Poetry which I have attempted to convey, will break in upon the sanctity and truth of his pictures by transitory and accidental ornaments, and endeavour to excite admiration of himself by arts, the necessity of which must manifestly depend upon the assumed meanness of his subject.

What has been thus far said applies to Poetry in general; but especially to those parts of composition where the Poet speaks through the mouths of his characters; and upon this point it appears to authorise the conclusion that there are few persons of good sense, who would not allow that the dramatic parts of composition are defective, in proportion as they deviate from the real language of nature, and are coloured by a diction of the Poet's own, either peculiar to him as an individual Poet or belonging simply to Poets in general; to a body of men who, from the circumstance of their compositions being in metre, it is expected will employ a particular language.

It is not, then, in the dramatic parts of composition that we look for this distinction of language; but still it may be proper and necessary where the Poet speaks to us in his own person and character. To this I answer by referring the Reader to the description before given of a Poet. Among the qualities there enumerated as principally conducing to form a Poet, is implied nothing differing in kind from other men, but only in degree. The sum of what was said is, that the Poet is chiefly distinguished from other men by a greater promptness to think and feel without immediate external excitement, and a greater power in expressing such thoughts and feelings as are produced in him in that manner. But these passions and thoughts and feelings are the general passions and thoughts and feelings of men. And with what are they connected? Undoubtedly with our moral sentiments and animal sensations, and with the causes which excite these; with the operations of the elements, and the appearances of the visible universe; with storm and sunshine, with the revolutions of the seasons, with cold and heat, with loss of friends and kindred, with injuries and resentments, gratitude and hope, with fear and sorrow. These, and the like, are the sensations and objects which the Poet describes, as they are the sensations of other men, and the objects which interest them. The Poet thinks and feels in the spirit of human passions. How, then, can his language differ in any material degree from that of all other men who feel vividly and see clearly? It might be proved that it is impossible. But supposing that this were not the case, the Poet might then be allowed to use a peculiar language when expressing his feelings for his own gratification, or that of men like himself. But Poets do not write for Poets alone, but for men. Unless therefore we are advocates for that admiration which subsists upon ignorance, and that pleasure which arises from hearing what we do not understand, the Poet must descend from this supposed height; and, in order to excite rational sympathy, he must express himself as other men express themselves. To this it may be added, that while he is only selecting from the real language of men, or, which amounts to the same thing, composing accurately in the spirit of such selection, he is treading upon safe ground, and we know what we are to expect from him. Our feelings are the same with respect to metre; for, as it may be proper to remind the Reader, the distinction of metre is regular and uniform, and not, like that which is produced by what is usually called POETIC DICTION, arbitrary, and subject to infinite caprices upon which no calculation whatever can be made. In the one case, the Reader is utterly at the mercy of the Poet, respecting what imagery or diction he may choose to connect with the passion; whereas, in the other, the metre obeys certain laws, to which the Poet and Reader both willingly submit because they are certain, and because no interference is made by them with the passion, but such as the concurring testimony of ages has shown to heighten and improve the pleasure which co-exists with it.

It will now be proper to answer an obvious question, namely, Why, professing these opinions, have I written in verse? To this, in addition to such answer as is included in what has been already said, I reply, in the first place, Because, however I may have restricted myself, there is still left open to me what confessedly constitutes the most valuable object of all writing, whether in prose or verse; the great and universal passions of men, the most general and interesting of their occupations, and the entire world of nature before me—to supply endless combinations of forms and imagery. Now, supposing for a moment that whatever is interesting in these objects may be as vividly described in prose, why should I be condemned for attempting to superadd to such description the charm which, by the consent of all nations, is acknowledged to exist in metrical language? To this, by such as are yet unconvinced, it may be answered that a very small part of the pleasure given by Poetry depends upon the metre, and that it is injudicious to write in metre, unless it be accompanied with the other artificial distinctions of style with which metre is usually accompanied, and that, by such deviation, more will be lost from the shock which will thereby be given to the Reader's associations than will be counterbalanced by any pleasure which he can derive from the general power of numbers. In answer to those who still contend for the necessity of accompanying metre with certain appropriate colours of style in order to the accomplishment of its appropriate end, and who also, in my opinion, greatly underrate the power of metre in itself, it might, perhaps, as far as relates to these Volumes, have been almost sufficient to observe, that poems are extant, written upon more humble subjects, and in a still more naked and simple style, which have continued to give pleasure from generation to generation. Now, if nakedness and simplicity be a defect, the fact here mentioned affords a strong presumption that poems somewhat less naked and simple are capable of affording pleasure at the present day; and, what I wished chiefly to attempt, at present, was to justify myself for having written under the impression of this belief.

But various causes might be pointed out why, when the style is manly, and the subject of some importance, words metrically arranged will long continue to impart such a pleasure to mankind as he who proves the extent of that pleasure will be desirous to impart. The end of Poetry is to produce excitement in co-existence with an overbalance of pleasure; but, by the supposition, excitement is an unusual and irregular state of the mind; ideas and feelings do not, in that state, succeed each other in accustomed order. If the words, however, by which this excitement is produced be in themselves powerful, or the images and feelings have an undue proportion of pain connected with them, there is some danger that the excitement may be carried beyond its proper bounds. Now the co-presence of something regular, something to which the mind has been accustomed in various moods and in a less excited state, cannot but have great efficacy in tempering and restraining the passion by an intertexture of ordinary feeling, and of feeling not strictly and necessarily connected with the passion. This is unquestionably true; and hence, though the opinion will at first appear paradoxical, from the tendency of metre to divest language, in a certain degree, of its reality, and thus to throw a sort of half-consciousness of unsubstantial existence over the whole composition, there can be little doubt but that more pathetic situations and sentiments, that is, those which have a greater proportion of pain connected with them, may be endured in metrical composition, especially in rhyme, than in prose. The metre of the old ballads is very artless; yet they contain many passages which would illustrate this opinion; and, I hope, if the following Poems be attentively perused, similar instances will be found in them. This opinion may be further illustrated by appealing to the Reader's own experience of the reluctance with which he comes to the re-perusal of the distressful parts of "Clarissa Harlowe," or the "Gamester;" while Shakspeare's writings, in the most pathetic scenes, never act upon us, as pathetic, beyond the bounds of pleasure—an effect which, in a much greater degree than might at first be imagined, is to be ascribed to small, but continual and regular impulses of pleasurable surprise from the metrical arrangement.—On the other hand (what it must be allowed will much more frequently happen) if the Poet's words should be incommensurate with the passion, and inadequate to raise the Reader to a height of desirable excitement, then, (unless the Poet's choice of his metre has been grossly injudicious) in the feelings of pleasure which the Reader has been accustomed to connect with metre in general, and in the feeling, whether cheerful or melancholy, which he has been accustomed to connect with that particular movement of metre, there will be found something which will greatly contribute to impart passion to the words, and to effect the complex end which the Poet proposes to himself.

If I had undertaken a SYSTEMATIC defence of the theory here maintained, it would have been my duty to develop the various causes upon which the pleasure received from metrical language depends. Among the chief of these causes is to be reckoned a principle which must be well known to those who have made any of the Arts the object of accurate reflection; namely, the pleasure which the mind derives from the perception of similitude and dissimilitude. This principle is the great spring of the activity of our minds, and their chief feeder. From this principle the direction of the sexual appetite, and all the passions connected with it, take their origin: it is the life of our ordinary conversation; and upon the accuracy with which similitude in dissimilitude, and dissimilitude in similitude are perceived, depend our taste and our moral feelings. It would not be a useless employment to apply this principle to the consideration of metre, and to show that metre is hence enabled to afford much pleasure, and to point out in what manner that pleasure is produced. But my limits will not permit me to enter upon this subject, and I must content myself with a general summary.

I have said that poetry is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings: it takes its origin from emotion recollected in tranquillity: the emotion is contemplated till, by a species of reaction, the tranquillity gradually disappears, and an emotion, kindred to that which was before the subject of contemplation, is gradually produced, and does itself actually exist in the mind. In this mood successful composition generally begins, and in a mood similar to this it is carried on; but the emotion, of whatever kind, and in whatever degree, from various causes, is qualified by various pleasures, so that in describing any passions whatsoever, which are voluntarily described, the mind will, upon the whole, be in a state of enjoyment. If Nature be thus cautious to preserve in a state of enjoyment a being so employed, the Poet ought to profit by the lesson held forth to him, and ought especially to take care, that, whatever passions he communicates to his Reader, those passions, if his Reader's mind be sound and vigorous, should always be accompanied with an overbalance of pleasure. Now the music of harmonious metrical language, the sense of difficulty overcome, and the blind association of pleasure which has been previously received from works of rhyme or metre of the same or similar construction, an indistinct perception perpetually renewed of language closely resembling that of real life, and yet, in the circumstance of metre, differing from it so widely—all these imperceptibly make up a complex feeling of delight, which is of the most important use in tempering the painful feeling always found intermingled with powerful descriptions of the deeper passions. This effect is always produced in pathetic and impassioned poetry; while, in lighter compositions, the ease and gracefulness with which the Poet manages his numbers are themselves confessedly a principal source of the gratification of the Reader. All that it is necessary to say, however, upon this subject, may be effected by affirming, what few persons will deny, that, of two descriptions, either of passions, manners, or characters, each of them equally well executed, the one in prose and the other in verse the verse will be read a hundred times where the prose is read once.

Having thus explained a few of my reasons for writing in verse, and why I have chosen subjects from common life, and endeavoured to bring my language near to the real language of men, if I have been too minute in pleading my own cause, I have at the same time been treating a subject of general interest; and for this reason a few words shall be added with reference solely to these particular poems, and to some defects which will probably be found in them. I am sensible that my associations must have sometimes been particular instead of general, and that, consequently, giving to things a false importance, I may have sometimes written upon unworthy subjects; but I am less apprehensive on this account, than that my language may frequently have suffered from those arbitrary connections of feelings and ideas with particular words and phrases, from which no man can altogether protect himself. Hence I have no doubt, that, in some instances, feelings, even of the ludicrous, may be given to my Readers by expressions which appeared to me tender and pathetic. Such faulty expressions, were I convinced they were faulty at present, and that they must necessarily continue to be so, I would willingly take all reasonable pains to correct. But it is dangerous to make these alterations on the simple authority of a few individuals, or even of certain classes of men; for where the understanding of an Author is not convinced, or his feelings altered, this cannot be done without great injury to himself: for his own feelings are his stay and support; and, if he set them aside in one instance, he may be induced to repeat this act till his mind shall lose all confidence in itself, and become utterly debilitated. To this it may be added, that the critic ought never to forget that he is himself exposed to the same errors as the Poet, and, perhaps, in a much greater degree: for there can be no presumption in saying of most readers, that it is not probable they will be so well acquainted with the various stages of meaning through which words have passed, or with the fickleness or stability of the relations of particular ideas to each other; and, above all, since they are so much less interested in the subject, they may decide lightly and carelessly.

Long as the Reader has been detained, I hope he will permit me to caution him against a mode of false criticism which has been applied to Poetry, in which the language closely resembles that of life and nature. Such verses have been triumphed over in parodies, of which Dr. Johnson's stanza is a fair specimen:—

"I put my hat upon my head
And walked into the Strand,
And there I met another man Whose hat was in his hand."

Immediately under these lines let us place one of the most justly-admired stanzas of the "Babes in the Wood."

"These pretty Babes with hand in hand
Went wandering up and down;
But never more they saw the Man Approaching from the Town."

In both these stanzas the words, and the order of the words, in no respect differ from the most unimpassioned conversation. There are words in both, for example, "the Strand," and "the Town," connected with none but the most familiar ideas; yet the one stanza we admit as admirable, and the other as a fair example of the superlatively contemptible. Whence arises this difference? Not from the metre, not from the language, not from the order of the words; but the matter expressed in Dr. Johnson's stanza is contemptible. The proper method of treating trivial and simple verses, to which Dr. Johnson's stanza would be a fair parallelism, is not to say, this is a bad kind of poetry, or this is not poetry; but, this wants sense; it is neither interesting in itself, nor can lead to anything interesting; the images neither originate in that same state of feeling which arises out of thought, nor can excite thought or feeling in the Reader. This is the only sensible manner of dealing with such verses. Why trouble yourself about the species, till you have previously decided upon the genus? Why take pains to prove that an ape is not a Newton, when it is self-evident that he is not a man?

One request I must make of my reader, which is, that in judging these Poems he would decide by his own feelings genuinely, and not by reflection upon what will probably be the judgment of others. How common is it to hear a person say, I myself do not object to this style of composition, or this or that expression, but, to such and such classes of people it will appear mean or ludicrous! This mode of criticism, so destructive of all sound unadulterated judgment, is almost universal; let the Reader then abide, independently, by his own feelings, and, if he finds himself affected, let him not suffer such conjectures to interfere with his pleasure.

If an Author, by any single composition, has impressed us with respect for his talents, it is useful to consider this as affording a presumption, that on other occasions where we have been displeased, he, nevertheless, may not have written ill or absurdly; and further, to give him so much credit for this one composition as may induce us to review what has displeased us, with more care than we should otherwise have bestowed upon it. This is not only an act of justice, but, in our decisions upon poetry especially, may conduce, in a high degree, to the improvement of our own taste; for an accurate taste in poetry, and in all the other arts, as Sir Joshua Reynolds has

to the is his

observed, is an acquired talent, which can only be produced by thought and a long-continued intercourse with the best models of composition. This is mentioned, not with so ridiculous a purpose as to prevent the most inexperienced Reader from judging for himself, (I have already said that I wish him to judge for himself;) but merely to temper the rashness of decision, and to suggest, that, if Poetry be a subject on which much time has not been bestowed, the judgment may be erroneous; and that, in many cases, it necessarily will be so.

Nothing would, I know, have so effectually contributed to further the end which I have in view, as to have shown of what kind the pleasure is, and how that pleasure is produced, which is confessedly produced by metrical composition essentially different from that which I have here endeavoured to recommend: for the Reader will say that he has been pleased by such composition; and what more can be done for him? The power of any art is limited; and he will suspect, that, if it be proposed to furnish him with new friends, that can be only upon condition of his abandoning his old friends. Besides, as I have said, the Reader is himself conscious of the pleasure which he has received from such composition, composition to which he has peculiarly attached the endearing name of Poetry; and all men feel an habitual gratitude, and something of an honourable bigotry, for the objects which have long continued to please them: we not only wish to be pleased, but to be pleased in that particular way in which we have been accustomed to be pleased. There is in these feelings enough to resist a host of arguments; and I should be the less able to combat them successfully, as I am willing to allow, that, in order entirely to enjoy the Poetry which I am recommending, it would be necessary to give up much of what is ordinarily enjoyed. But, would my limits have permitted me to point out how this pleasure is produced, many obstacles might have been removed, and the Reader assisted in perceiving that the powers of language are not so limited as he may suppose; and that it is possible for poetry to give other enjoyments, of a purer, more lasting, and more exquisite nature. This part of the subject has not been altogether neglected, but it has not been so much my present aim to prove, that the interest excited by some other kinds of poetry is less vivid, and less worthy of the nobler powers of the mind, as to offer reasons for presuming, that if my purpose were fulfilled, a species of poetry would be produced, which is genuine poetry; in its nature well adapted to interest mankind permanently, and likewise important in the multiplicity and quality of its moral relations.

From what has been said, and from a perusal of the Poems, the Reader will be able clearly to perceive the object which I had in view: he will determine how far it has been attained; and, what is a much more important question, whether it is worth attaining: and upon the decision of these two questions will rest my claim to the approbation of the Public.

APPENDIX.

See page 339—"by what is usually called POETIC DICTION."

PERHAPS, as I have no right to expect that attentive perusal, without which, confined, as I have been, to the narrow limits of a preface, my meaning cannot be thoroughly understood, I am anxious to give an exact notion of the sense in which the phrase poetic diction has been used; and for this purpose, a few words shall here be added, concerning the origin and characteristics of the phraseology, which I have condemned under that name.

The earliest poets of all nations generally wrote from passion excited by real events; they wrote naturally, and as men: feeling powerfully as they did, their language was daring, and figurative. In succeeding times, Poets, and Men ambitious of the fame of Poets, perceiving the influence of such language, and desirous of producing the same effect without being animated by the same passion, set themselves to a mechanical adoption of these figures of speech, and made use of them, sometimes with propriety, but much more frequently applied them to feelings and thoughts with which they had no natural connection whatsoever. A language was thus insensibly produced, differing materially from the real language of men in any situation. The Reader or Hearer of this distorted language found himself in a perturbed and unusual state of mind: when affected by the genuine language of passion he had been in a perturbed and unusual state of mind also: in both cases he was willing that his common judgment and understanding should be laid asleep, and he had no instinctive and infallible perception of the true to make him reject the false; the one served as a passport for the other. The emotion was in both cases delightful, and no wonder if he confounded the one with the other, and believed them both to be produced by the same, or similar causes. Besides, the Poet spake to him in the character of a man to be looked up to, a man of genius and authority. Thus, and from a variety of other causes, this distorted language was received with admiration; and Poets, it is probable, who had before contented themselves for the most part with misapplying only expressions which at first had been dictated by real passion, carried the abuse still further, and introduced phrases composed apparently in the spirit of the original figurative language of passion, yet altogether of their own invention, and characterised by various degrees of wanton deviation from good sense and nature.

It is indeed true, that the language of the earliest Poets was felt to differ materially from ordinary language, because it was the language of extraordinary occasions; but it was really spoken by men, language which the Poet himself had uttered when he had been affected by the events which he described, or which he had heard uttered by those around him. To this language it is probable that metre of some sort or other was early superadded. This separated the genuine language of Poetry still further from common life, so that whoever read or heard the poems of these earliest Poets felt himself moved in a way in which he had not been accustomed to be moved in real life, and by causes manifestly different from those which acted upon him in real life. This was the great temptation to all the corruptions which have followed: under the protection of this feeling succeeding Poets constructed a phrasology which had one thing, it is true, in common with the genuine language of poetry, namely, that it was not heard in ordinary conversation; that it was unusual. But the first Poets, as I have said, spake a language which, though unusual, was still the language of men. This circumstance, however, was disregarded by their successors; they found that they could please by easier means: they became proud of modes of expression which they themselves had invented, and which were uttered only by themselves. In process of time metre became a symbol or promise of this unusual language, and whoever took upon him to write in metre, according as he possessed more or less of true poetic genius, introduced less or more of this adulterated phrasology into his compositions, and the true and the false were inseparably interwoven until, the taste of men becoming gradually perverted, this language was received as a natural language: and at length, by the influence of books upon men, did to a certain degree really become so. Abuses of this kind were imported from one nation to another, and with the progress of refinement this diction became daily more and more corrupt, thrusting out of sight the plain humanties of nature by a motley masquerade of tricks, quaintnesses, hieroglyphics, and enigmas.

It would not be uninteresting to point out the causes of the pleasure given by this extravagant and absurd diction. It depends upon a great variety of causes, but upon none, perhaps, more than its influence in impressing a notion of the peculiarity and exaltation of the Poet's character, and in flattering the Reader's self-love by bringing him nearer to a sympathy with that character; an effect which is accomplished by unsettling ordinary habits of thinking, and thus assisting the Reader to approach to that perturbed and dizzy state of mind in which if he does not find himself, he imagines that he is balked of a peculiar enjoyment which poetry can and ought to bestow.

The sonnet quoted from Gray, in the Preface, except the lines printed in Italics, consists of little, else but this diction, though not of the worst kind; and indeed, if one may be permitted to say so, it is far too common in the best writers both ancient and modern. Perhaps in no way, by positive example, could more easily be given a notion of what I mean by the phrase poetic diction than by referring to a comparison between the metrical paraphrase which we have of passages in the Old and New Testament, and those passages as they exist in our common Translation. See Pope's "Messiah" throughout; Prior's "Did sweeter sounds adorn my flowing tongue," &c. &c. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels," &c. &c. 1st Corinthians, chap. xiii. By way of immediate example take the following of Dr. Johnson:—

"Turn on the prudent Ant thy heedless eyes, Observe her labours, Sluggard, and be wise;
No stern command, no monitory voice,
Prescribes her duties, or directs her choice;
Yet, timely provident, she hastes away
To snatch the blessings of a pteuous day;
When fruitful Summer loads the teeming plain,
She crops the harvest, and she stores the grain.
How long shall sloth usurp thy useless hours,
Unnerve thy vigour, and enchain thy powers?
While artful shades thy downy couch enclose,
And soft solicitation courts repose,
Amidst the drowsy charms of dull delight,
Year chases year with unremitted fight,
Till Want now following, fraudulent and slow,
Shall spring to seize thee, like an ambush'd foe."

From this hubbub of words pass to the original. "Go to the Ant, thou Sluggard, consider her ways, and be wise: which having no guide, overseer, or ruler, provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest. How long wilt thou sleep, O Sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep? Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man." Proverbs, chap. vi.

One more quotation, and I have done. It is from Cowper's Verses supposed to be written by Alexander Selkirk:—

"Religion! what treasure untold Resides in that heavenly word!
More precious than silver and gold,
Or all that this earth can afford.
But the sound of the church-going bell
These valleys and rocks never heard,
Ne'er sighed at the sound of a knell,
Or smiled when a sabbath appeared.

"Ye winds, that have made me your sport
Convey to this desolate shore
Some cordial endearing report
Of a land I must visit no more.
My Friends, do they now and then send
A wish or a thought after me?
O tell me I yet have a friend,
Though a friend I am never to see."

This passage is quoted as an instance of three different styles of composition. The first four lines are poorly expressed; some Critics would call the language prosaic; the fact is, it would be bad prose, so bad, that it is scarcely worse in metre. The epithet "church-going" applied to a bell, and that by so chaste a writer as Cowper, is an instance of the strange abuses which Poets have introduced into their language, till they and their Readers take them as matters of course, if they do not single them out expressly as objects of admiration. The two lines "Ne'er sighed at the sound," &c., are, in my opinion, an instance of the language of passion wrested from its proper use, and, from the mere circumstance of the composition being in metre, applied upon an occasion that does not justify such violent expressions; and I should condemn the passage, though perhaps few Readers will agree with me, as vicious poetic diction. The last stanza is throughout admirably expressed: it would be equally good whether in prose or verse, except that the Reader has an exquisite pleasure in seeing such natural language so naturally connected with metre. The beauty of this stanza tempts me to conclude with a principle which ought never to be lost sight of,

and which has been my chief guide in all I have said,—namely, that in works of imagination and sentiment, for of these only have I been treating, in proportion as ideas and feelings are valuable, whether the composition be in prose or in verse, they require and exact one and the same language. Metre is but adventitious to composition, and the phraseology for which that passport is necessary, even where it may be graceful at all, will be little valued by the judicious.

ESSAY, SUPPLEMENTARY TO THE PREFACE.

WITH the young of both sexes, Poetry is, like love, a passion; but, for much the greater part of those who have been proud of its power over their minds, a necessity soon arises of breaking the pleasing bondage; or it relaxes of itself;—the thoughts being occupied in domestic cares, or the time engrossed by business. Poetry then becomes only an occasional recreation; while to those whose existence passes away in a course of fashionable pleasure, it is a species of luxurious amusement. In middle and declining age, a scattered number of serious persons resort to poetry, as to religion, for a protection against the pressure of trivial employments, and as a consolation for the afflictions of life. And, lastly, there are many, who, having been enamoured of this art in their youth, have found leisure, after youth was spent, to cultivate general literature; in which poetry has continued to be comprehended as a study.

Into the above classes the Readers of poetry may be divided; Critics abound in them all; but from the last only can opinions be collected of absolute value, and worthy to be depended upon, as prophetic of the destiny of a new work. The young, who in nothing can escape delusion, are especially subject to it in their intercourse with Poetry. The cause, not so obvious as the fact is unquestionable, is the same as that from which erroneous judgments in this art, in the minds of men of all ages, chiefly proceed; but upon Youth it operates with peculiar force. The appropriate business of poetry, (which, nevertheless, if genuine, is as permanent as pure science,) her appropriate employment, her privilege and her duty, is to treat of things not as they are, but as they appear; not as they exist in themselves, but as they seem to exist to the senses, and to the passions. What a world of delusion does this acknowledged obligation prepare for the inexperienced! what temptations to go astray are here held forth for them whose thoughts have been little disciplined by the understanding, and whose feelings revolt from the sway of reason!—When a juvenile Reader is in the height of his rapture with some vicious passage, should experience throw in doubts, or common-sense suggest suspicions, a lurking consciousness that the realities of the Muse are but shows, and that her liveliest excitements are raised by transient shocks of conflicting feeling and successive assemblages of contradictory thoughts—is ever at hand to justify extravagance, and to sanction absurdity. But, it may be asked, as these illusions are unavoidable, and, no doubt, eminently useful to the mind as a process, what good can be gained by making observations, the tendency of which is to diminish the confidence of youth in its feelings, and thus to abridge its innocent and even profitable pleasures? The reproach implied in the question could not be warded off, if Youth were incapable of being delighted with what is truly excellent; or, if these errors always terminated of themselves in due season. But, with the majority, though their force be abated, they continue through life. Moreover, the fire of youth is too vivacious an element to be extinguished or damped by a philosophical remark; and, while there is no danger that what has been said will be injurious or painful to the ardent and the confident, it may prove beneficial to those who, being enthusiastic, are, at the same time, modest and ingenuous. The intimation may unite with their own misgivings to regulate their sensibility, and to bring in, sooner than it would otherwise have arrived, a more discreet and sound judgment.

If it should excite wonder that men of ability, in later life, whose understandings have been rendered acute by practice in affairs, should be so easily and so far imposed upon when they happen to take up a new work in verse, this appears to be the cause;—that, having discontinued their attention to poetry, whatever progress may have been made in other departments of knowledge, they have not, as to this art, advanced in true discernment beyond the age of youth. If, then, a new poem fall in their way, whose attractions are of that kind which would have enraptured them during the heat of youth, the judgment not being improved to a degree that they shall be disgusted, they are dazzled; and prize and cherish the faults for having had power to make the present time vanish before them, and to throw the mind back, as by enchantment, into the happiest season of life. As they read, powers seem to be revived, passions are regenerated, and pleasures restored. The Book was probably taken up after an escape from the burden of business, and with a wish to forget the world, and all its vexations and anxieties. Having obtained this wish, and so much more, it is natural that they should make report as they have felt.

If Men of mature age, through want of practice, be thus easily beguiled into admiration of absurdities, extravagances, and misplaced ornaments, thinking it proper that their understandings should enjoy a holiday, while they are unbending their minds with verse, it may be expected that such Readers will resemble their former selves also in strength of prejudice, and an inaptitude to be moved by the unostentatious beauties of a pure style. In the higher poetry, an enlightened Critic chiefly looks for a reflection of the wisdom of the heart and the grandeur of the imagination. Wherever these appear, simplicity accompanies them; Magnificence herself when legitimate, depending upon a simplicity of her own, to regulate her ornaments. But it is a well-known property of human nature, that our estimates are ever governed by comparisons, of which we are conscious with various degrees of distinctness. Is it not, then, inevitable (confining these observations to the effects of style merely) that an eye, accustomed to the glaring hues of diction by which such Readers are caught and excited, will for the most part be rather repelled than attracted by an original Work, the colouring of which is disposed according to a pure and refined scheme of harmony? It is in the fine arts as in the affairs of life, no man can serve (i.e. obey with zeal and fidelity) two Masters.

As Poetry is most just to its own divine origin when it administers the comforts and breathes the spirit of religion, they who have learned to perceive this truth, and who betake themselves to reading verse for sacred purposes, must be preserved from numerous illusions to which the two Classes of Readers, whom we have been considering, are liable. But, as the mind grows serious from the weight of life, the range of its passions is contracted accordingly; and its sympathies become so exclusive, that many species of high excellence wholly escape, or but languidly excite, its notice. Besides, men who read from religious or moral inclinations, even when the subject is of that kind which they approve, are beset with misconceptions and mistakes peculiar to themselves. Attaching so much importance to the truths which interest them, they are prone to overrate the Authors by whom those truths are expressed and enforced. They come prepared to impart so much passion to the Poet's language, that they remain unconscious how little, in fact, they receive from it. And, on the other hand, religious faith is to him who holds it so momentous a thing, and error appears to be attended with such tremendous consequences, that, if opinions touching upon religion occur which the Reader condemns, he not only cannot sympathise with them, however animated the expression, but there is, for the most part, an end put to all satisfaction and enjoyment. Love, if it before existed, is converted into dislike; and the heart of the Reader is set against the Author and his book.—To these excesses, they, who from their professions ought to be the most guarded against them, are perhaps the most liable; I mean those sects whose religion, being from the calculating understanding, is cold and formal. For when Christianity, the religion of humility, is founded upon the proudest faculty of our nature, what can be expected but contradictions? Accordingly, believers of this cast are at one time contemptuous; at another, being troubled, as they are and must be, with inward misgivings, they are jealous and suspicious;—and at all seasons, they are under temptation to supply by the heat with which they defend their tenets, the animation which is wanting to the constitution of the religion itself.

Faith was given to man that his affections, detached from the treasures of time, might be inclined to settle upon those of eternity;—the elevation of his nature, which this habit produces on earth, being to him a presumptive evidence of a future state of existence; and giving him a title to partake of its holiness. The religious man values what he sees chiefly as an "imperfect shadowing forth" of what he is incapable of seeing. The concerns of religion refer to indefinite objects, and are too weighty for the mind to support them without relieving itself by resting a great part of the burthen upon words and symbols. The commerce between Man and his Maker cannot be carried on but by a process where much is represented in little, and the Infinite Being accommodates himself to a finite capacity. In all this may be perceived the affinity between religion and poetry; between religion—making up the deficiencies of reason by faith; and poetry—passionate for the instruction of reason; between religion—whose element is infinitude, and whose ultimate trust is the supreme of things, submitting herself to circumscription, and reconciled to substitutions; and poetry—ethereal and transcendent, yet incapable to sustain her existence without sensuous incarnation. In this community of nature may be perceived also the lurking incitements of kindred error;—so that we shall find that no poetry has been more subject to distortion, than that species, the argument and scope of which is religious; and no lovers of the art have gone farther astray than the pious and the devout.

Whither then shall we turn for that union of qualifications which must necessarily exist before the decisions of a critic can be of absolute value? For a mind at once poetical and philosophical; for a critic whose affections are as free and kindly as the spirit of society, and whose understanding is severe as that of dispassionate government? Where are we to look for that initiatory composure of mind which no selfishness can disturb? For a natural sensibility that has been tutored into correctness without losing anything of its quickness; and for active faculties, capable of answering the demands which an Author of original imagination shall make upon them, associated with a judgment that cannot be duped into admiration by aught that is unworthy of it?—among those and those only, who, never having suffered their youthful love of poetry to remit much of its force, have applied to the consideration of the laws of this art the best power of their understandings. At the same time it must be observed—that, as this Class comprehends the only judgments which are trust-worthy, so does it include the most erroneous and perverse. For to be mistaught is worse than to be untaught; and no perverseness equals that which is supported by system, no errors are so difficult to root out as those which the understanding has pledged its credit to uphold. In this Class are contained censors, who, if they be pleased with what is good, are pleased with it only by imperfect glimpses, and upon false principles; who, should they generalise rightly, to a certain point, are sure to suffer for it in the end; who, if they stumble upon a sound rule, are fettered by misapplying it, or by straining it too far; being incapable of perceiving when it ought to yield to one of higher order. In it are found critics too petulant to be passive to a genuine poet, and too feeble to grapple with him; men, who take upon them to report of the course which he holds whom they are utterly unable to accompany,—confounded if he turn quick upon the wing, dismayed if he soar steadily "into the region;"—men of palsied imaginations and indurated hearts; in whose minds all healthy action is languid, who therefore feed as the many direct them, or, with the many, are greedy after vicious provocatives;—judges, whose censure is auspicious, and whose praise ominous! In this class meet together the two extremes of best and worst.

The observations presented in the foregoing series are of too ungracious a nature to have been made without reluctance; and, were it only on this account, I would invite the reader to try them by the test of comprehensive experience. If the number of judges who can be confidently relied upon be in reality so small, it ought to follow that partial notice only, or neglect, perhaps long continued, or attention wholly inadequate to their merits—must have been the fate of most works in the higher departments of poetry; and that, on the other hand, numerous productions have blazed into popularity, and have passed away, leaving scarcely a trace behind them: it will be further found, that when Authors shall have at length raised themselves into general admiration and maintained their ground, errors and prejudices have prevailed concerning their genius and their works, which the few who are conscious of those errors and prejudices would deplore; if they were not recompensed by perceiving that there are select Spirits for whom it is ordained that their fame shall be in the world an existence like that of Virtue, which owes its being to the struggles it makes, and its vigour to the enemies whom it provokes;—a vivacious quality, ever doomed to meet with opposition, and still triumphing over it; and, from the nature of its dominion, incapable of being brought to the sad conclusion of Alexander, when he wept that there were no more worlds for him to conquer.

Let us take a hasty retrospect of the poetical literature of this Country for the greater part of the last two centuries, and see if the facts support these inferences.

Who is there that now reads the "Creation" of Dubartas? Yet all Europe once resounded with his praise; he was caressed by kings; and, when his Poem was translated into our language, the "Faery Queen" faded before it. The name of Spenser, whose genius is of a higher order than even that of Ariosto, is at this day scarcely known beyond the limits of its British Isles. And if the value of his works is to be estimated from the attention now paid to them by his countrymen, compared with that which they bestow on those of some other writers, it must be pronounced small indeed.

"The laurel, meed of mighty conquerors And poets sage"—

are his own words; but his wisdom has, in this particular, been his worst enemy: while its opposite, whether in the shape of folly or madness, has been their best friend. But he was a great power, and bears a high name: the laurel has been awarded to him.

A dramatic Author, if he write for the stage, must adapt himself to the taste of the audience, or they will not endure him; accordingly the mighty genius of Shakspeare was listened to. The people were delighted: but I am not sufficiently versed in stage antiquities to determine whether they did not flock as eagerly to the representation of many pieces of contemporary Authors, wholly undeserving to appear upon the same boards. Had there been a formal contest for superiority among dramatic writers, that Shakspeare, like his predecessors Sophocles and Euripides, would have often been subject to the mortification of seeing the prize adjudged to sorry competitors, becomes too probable, when we reflect that the admirers of Settle and Shadwell were, in a later age, as numerous, and reckoned as respectable in point of talent, as those of Dryden. At all events, that Shakspeare stooped to accommodate himself to the People, is sufficiently apparent; and one of the most striking proofs of his almost omnipotent genius, is, that he could turn to such glorious purpose those materials which the prepossessions of the age compelled him to make use of. Yet even this marvellous skill appears not to have been enough to prevent his rivals from having some advantage over him in public estimation; else how can we account for passages and scenes that exist in his works, unless upon a supposition that some of the grossest of them, a fact which in my own mind I have no doubt of, were foisted in by the Players, for the gratification of the many?

But that his Works, whatever might be their reception upon the stage, made but little impression upon the ruling Intellects of the time, may be inferred from the fact that Lord Bacon, in his multifarious writings, nowhere either quotes or alludes to him! His dramatic excellence enabled him to resume possession of the stage after the Restoration; but Dryden tells us that in his time two of the plays of Beaumont and Fletcher were acted for one of Shakspeare's. And so faint and limited was the perception of the poetic beauties of his dramas in the time of Pope, that, in his Edition of the Plays, with a view of rendering to the general reader a necessary service, he printed between inverted commas those passages which he thought most worthy of notice.

At this day, the French Critics have abated nothing of their aversion to this darling of our Nation: "the English, with their bouffon de Shakspeare," is as familiar an expression among them as in the time of Voltaire. Baron Grimm is the only French writer who seems to have perceived his infinite superiority to the first names of the French Theatre; an advantage which the Parisian Critic owed to his German blood and German education. The most enlightened Italians, though well acquainted with our language, are wholly incompetent to measure the proportions of Shakspeare. The Germans only, of foreign nations, are approaching towards a knowledge and feeling of what he is. In some respects they have acquired a superiority over the fellow-countrymen of the Poet: for among us it is a current, I might say, an established opinion, that Shakspeare is justly praised when he is pronounced to be "a wild irregular genius, in whom great faults are compensated by great beauties." How long may it be before this miscon-

1 The learned Hakewill (a third edition of whose book bears date 1635), writing to refute the error "touching Nature's perpetual and universal decay," cites triumphantly the names of Ariosto, Tasso, Burtas, and Spenser, as instances that poetic genius had not degenerated; but he makes no mention of Shakspeare.

zeption passes away, and it becomes universally acknowledged that the judgment of Shakspeare in the selection of his materials, and in the manner in which he has made them, heterogeneous as they often are, constitute a unity of their own, and contribute all to one great end, is not less admirable than his imagination, his invention, and his intuitive knowledge of human Nature?

There is extant a small Volume of miscellaneous poems, in which Shakspeare expresses his own feelings in his own person. It is not difficult to conceive that the Editor, George Steevens, should have been insensible to the beauties of one portion of that Volume, the Sonnets; though in no part of the writings of this Poet is found, in an equal compass, a greater number of exquisite feelings felicitously expressed. But, from regard to the Critic's own credit, he would not have ventured to talk of an act of parliament not being strong enough to compel the perusal of those little pieces, if he had not known that the people of England were ignorant of the treasures contained in them: and if he had not, moreover, shared the too common propensity of human nature to exult over a supposed fall into the mire of a genius whom he had been compelled to regard with admiration, as an inmate of the celestial regions—"there sitting where he durst not soar."

Nine years before the death of Shakspeare, Milton was born; and early in life he published several small poems, which, though on their first appearance they were praised by a few of the judicious, were afterwards neglected to that degree, that Pope in his youth could borrow from them without risk of its being known. Whether these poems are at this day justly appreciated, I will not undertake to decide: nor would it imply a severe reflection upon the mass of readers to suppose the contrary; seeing that a man of the acknowledged genius of Voss, the German poet, could suffer their spirit to evaporate; and could change their character, as is done in the translation made by him of the most popular of those pieces. At all events, it is certain that these Poems of Milton are now much read, and loudly praised; yet were they little heard of till more than 150 years after their publication; and of the Sonnets, Dr. Johnson, as appears from Boswell's Life of him, was in the habit of thinking and speaking as contemptuously as Steevens wrote upon those of Shakspeare.

About the time when the Pindaric odes of Cowley and his imitators, and the productions of that class of curious thinkers whom Dr. Johnson has strangely styled metaphysical Poets, were beginning to lose something of that extravagant admiration which they had excited, the "Paradise Lost" made its appearance. "Fit audience find though few," was the petition addressed by the Poet to his inspiring Muse. I have said elsewhere that he gained more than he asked; this I believe to be true; but Dr. Johnson has fallen into a gross mistake when he attempts to prove, by the sale of the work, that Milton's Countrymen were "just to it" upon its first appearance. Thirteen hundred Copies were sold in two years; an uncommon example, he asserts, of the prevalence of genius in opposition to so much recent enmity as Milton's public conduct had excited. But, be it remembered that, if Milton's political and religious opinions, and the manner in which he announced them, had raised him many enemies, they had procured him numerous friends; who, as all personal danger was passed away at the time of publication, would be eager to procure the master-work of a man whom they revered, and whom they would be proud of praising. Take, from the number of purchasers, persons of this class, and also those who wished to possess the Poem as a religious work, and but few I fear would be left who sought for it on account of its poetical merits. The demand did not immediately increase; "for," says Dr. Johnson, "many more readers" (he means persons in the habit of reading poetry) "than were supplied at first the Nation did not afford." How careless must a writer be who can make this assertion in the face of so many existing title-pages to belle it! Turning to my own shelves, I find the folio of Cowley, seventh edition, 1687. A book near it is Flatman's Poems, fourth edition, 1686; Waller, fifth edition, same date. The Poems of Norris of Bemerton not long after went, I believe, through nine editions. What further demand there might be for these works I do not know; but I well remember, that, twenty-five years ago, the booksellers' stalls in London swarmed with the folios of Cowley. This is not mentioned in disparagement of that able writer and amiable man; but merely to show—that, if Milton's work were not more read, it was not because readers did not exist at the time. The early editions of the "Paradise Lost" were printed in a shape which allowed them to be sold at a low price, yet only three thousand copies of the Work were sold in eleven years; and the Nation, says Dr. Johnson, had been satisfied from 1623 to 1664, that is, forty-one years, with only two editions of the Works of Shakspeare; which probably did not together make one thousand Copies; facts adduced by the critic to prove the "paucity of Readers."—There were readers in multitudes; but their money went for other purposes, as their admiration was fixed elsewhere. We are authorised, then, to affirm, that the reception of the "Paradise Lost," and the slow progress of its fame, are proofs as striking as can be desired that the positions which I am attempting to establish are not erroneous².—How amusing to shape to one's self such a critique as a Wit of Charles's days, or a Lord of the Miscellanies or trading Journalist of King William's time, would have brought forth, if he had set his faculties industriously to work upon this Poem, everywhere impregnated with original excellence.

So strange indeed are the obliquities of admiration, that they whose opinions are much influenced by authority will often be tempted to think that there are no fixed principles¹ in human nature for this art to rest upon. I have been honoured by being permitted to peruse in MS. a tract composed between the period of the Revolution and the close of that century. It is the Work of an English Peer of high accomplishments, its object to form the character and direct the studies of his son. Perhaps nowhere does a more beautiful treatise of the kind exist. The good sense and wisdom of the thoughts, the delicacy of the feelings, and the charm of the style, are, throughout, equally conspicuous. Yet the Author, selecting among the Poets of his own country those whom he deems most worthy of his son's perusal, particularises only Lord Rochester, Sir John Denham, and Cowley. Writing about the same time, Shaftesbury, an author at present unjustly depreciated, describes the English Musics as only yet lisping in their cradles.

¹ This sippant insensibility was publicly reprobated by Mr. Coleridge in a course of Lectures upon Poetry given by him at the Royal Institution. For the various merits of thought and language in Shakspeare's Sonnets, see Numbers, 27, 29, 30, 32, 33, 54, 64, 66, 68, 73, 76, 86, 91, 92, 93, 97, 98, 105, 107, 108, 109, 111, 113, 114, 116, 117, 129, and many others.

² Hughes is express upon this subject: in his dedication of Spenser's Works to Lord Somers, he writes thus. "It was your Lordship's encouraging a beautiful edition of 'Paradise Lost' that first brought that incomparable Poem to be generally known and esteemed."

The arts by which Pope, soon afterwards, contrived to procure to himself a more general and a higher reputation than perhaps any English Poet ever attained during his life-time, are known to the judicious. And as well known is it to them, that the undue exertion of those arts is the cause why Pope has for some time held a rank in literature, to which, if he had not been seduced by an over-love of immediate popularity, and had confided more in his native genius, he never could have descended. He bewitched the nation by his melody, and dazzled it by his polished style, and was himself blinded by his own success. Having wandered from humanity in his Eclogues with boyish inexperience, the praise, which these compositions obtained, tempted him into a belief that Nature was not to be trusted, at least in pastoral Poetry. To prove this by example, he put his friend Gay upon writing those Eclogues which their author intended to be burlesque. The instigator of the work, and his admirers, could perceive in them nothing but what was ridiculous. Nevertheless, though these Poems contain some detestable passages, the effect, as Dr. Johnson well observes, "of reality and truth became conspicuous even when the intention was to show them grovelling and degraded." The Pastorals, ludicrous to such as prided themselves upon their refinement, in spite of those disgusting passages, "became popular, and were read with delight, as just representations of rural manners and occupations."

Something less than sixty years after the publication of the "Paradise Lost" appeared Thomson's "Winter;" which was speedily followed by his other Seasons. It is a work of inspiration; much of it is written from himself, and nobly from himself. How was it received? "It was no sooner read," says one of his contemporary biographers, "than universally admired: those only excepted who had not been used to feel, or to look for anything in poetry, beyond a point of satirical or epigrammatic wit, a smart antithesis richly trimmed with rhyme, or the softness of an elegiac complaint. To such his manly classical spirit could not readily commend itself; till, after a more attentive perusal, they had got the better of their prejudices, and either acquired or affected a truer taste. A few others stood aloof, merely because they had long before fixed the articles of their poetical creed, and resigned themselves to an absolute despair of ever seeing anything new and original. These were somewhat mortified to find their notions disturbed by the appearance of a poet, who seemed to owe nothing but to nature and his own genius. But, in a short time, the applause became unanimous; every one wondering how so many pictures, and pictures so familiar, should have moved them but faintly to what they felt in his descriptions. His digressions too, the overflowings of a tender benevolent heart, charmed the reader no less; leaving him in doubt, whether he should more admire the Poet or love the Man."

This case appears to bear strongly against us:—but we must distinguish between wonder and legitimate admiration. The subject of the work is the changes produced in the appearances of nature by the revolution of the year: and, by undertaking to write in verse, Thomson pledged himself to treat his subject as became a Poet. Now, it is remarkable that, excepting the nocturnal Reverie of Lady Winchelsea, and a passage or two in the "Windsor Forest" of Pope, the poetry of the period intervening between the publication of the "Paradise Lost" and the "Seasons" does not contain a single new image of external nature; and scarcely presents a familiar one from which it can be inferred that the eye of the Poet had been steadily fixed upon his object, much less that his feelings had urged him to work upon it in the spirit of genuine imagination. To what a low state knowledge of the most obvious and important phenomena had sunk, is evident from the style in which Dryden has executed a description of Night in one of his Tragedies, and Pope his translation of the celebrated moonlight scene in the "Iliad." A blind man, in the habit of attending accurately to descriptions casually dropped from the lips of those around him, might easily depict these appearances with more truth. Dryden's lines are vague, bombastic, and senseless²; those of Pope, though he had Homer to guide him, are throughout false and contradictory. The verses of Dryden, once highly celebrated, are forgotten; those of Pope still retain their hold upon public estimation,—nay, there is not a passage of descriptive poetry, which at this day finds so many and such ardent admirers. Strange to think of an enthusiast, as may have been the case with thousands, reciting those verses under the cope of a moonlight sky, without having his raptures in the least disturbed by a suspicion of their absurdity!—If these two distinguished writers could habitually think that the visible universe was of so little consequence to a poet, that it was scarcely necessary for him to cast his eyes upon it, we may be assured that those passages of the elder poets which faithfully and poetically describe the phenomena of nature,

All things are hush'd as Nature's self lay dead,
The mountains seem to nod their drowsy head.

were not at that time holden in much estimation, and that there was little accurate attention paid to those appearances.

Wonder is the natural product of Ignorance; and as the soil was in such good condition at the time of the publication of the "Seasons," the crop was doubtless abundant. Neither individuals nor nations become corrupt all at once, nor are they enlightened in a moment. Thomson was an inspired poet, but he could not work miracles; in cases where the art of seeing had in some degree been learned, the teacher would further the proficiency of his pupils, but he could do little more; though so far does vanity assist men in acts of self-deception, that many would often fancy they recognized a likeness when they knew nothing of the original. Having shown that much of what his biographer deemed genuine admiration must in fact have been blind wonderment—how is the rest to be accounted for?—Thomson was fortunate in the very title of his poem, which seemed to bring it home to the prepared sympathies of every one: in the next place, notwithstanding his high powers, he writes a vicious style; and his false ornaments are exactly of that kind which would be most likely to strike the undiscerning. He likewise abounds with sentimental common-places, that, from the manner in which they were brought forward, bore an imposing air of novelty. In any well-used copy of the "Seasons" the book generally opens of itself with the rhapsody on love, or with one of the stories (perhaps "Damon and Musidora"); these also are prominent in our collections of Extracts, and are the parts of his Work which, after all, were probably most efficient in first recommending the author to general notice. Pope, repaying praises which he had received, and wishing to extol him to the highest, only styles him "an elegant and philosophical Poet;" nor are we able to collect any unquestionable proofs that the true characteristics of Thomson's genius as an imaginative poet¹ were perceived, till the elder Warton, almost forty years after the publication of the "Seasons," pointed them out by a note in his Essay on the "Life and Writings of Pope." In the "Castle of Indolence" (of which Gray speaks so coldly) these characteristics were almost as conspicuously displayed, and in verse more harmonious, and diction more pure. Yet that fine poem was neglected on its appearance, and is at this day the delight only of a few!

When Thomson died, Collins breathed forth his regrets in an Elegiac Poem, in which he pronounces a poetical curse upon him who should regard with insensibility the place where the Poet's remains were deposited. The Poems of the mourner himself have now passed through innumerable editions, and are universally known; but if, when Collins died, the same kind of imprecation had been pronounced by a surviving admirer, small is the number whom it would not have comprehended. The notice which his poems attained during his lifetime was so small, and of course the sale so insignificant, that not long before his death he deemed it right to repay to the bookseller the sum which he had advanced for them, and threw the edition into the fire.

Next in importance to the "Seasons" of Thomson, though at considerable distance from that work in order of time, come the "Reliques of Ancient English Poetry;" collected, new-modelled, and in many instances (if such a contradiction in terms may be used) composed by the Editor, Dr. Percy. This work did not steal silently into the world, as is evident from the number of legendary tales, that appeared not long after its publication; and had been modelled, as the authors persuaded themselves, after the old Ballad. The Compilation was however ill suited to the then existing taste of city society; and Dr. Johnson, 'mid the little senate to which he gave laws, was not sparing in his exertions to make it an object of contempt. The critic triumphed, the legendary imitators were deservedly disregarded, and, as undeservedly, their ill-imitated models sank, in this country, into temporary neglect; while Bürger, and other able writers of Germany, were translating or imitating these Reliques, and composing, with the aid of inspiration thence derived, poems which are the delight of the German nation. Dr. Percy was so abashed by the ridicule flung upon his labours from the ignorance and insensibility of the persons with whom he lived, that, though while he was writing under a mask he had not wanted resolution to follow his genius into the regions of true simplicity and genuine pathos (as is evinced by the exquisite ballad of "Sir Cauline" and by many other pieces), yet when he appeared in his own person and character as a poetical writer, he adopted, as in the tale of the "Hermit of Warkworth," a diction scarcely in any one of its features distinguishable from the vague, the glossy, and unfeeling language of his day. I mention this remarkable fact² with regret, esteeming the genius of Dr. Percy in this kind of writing superior to that of any other man by whom in modern times it has been cultivated. That even Bürger (to whom Klopstock gave, in my hearing, a commendation which he denied to Goethe and Schiller, pronouncing him to be a genuine poet, and one of the few among the Germans whose works would last) had not the fine sensibility of Percy, might be shown from many passages, in which he has deserted his original only to go astray. For example,

"Now daye was gone, and night was come,
And all were fast asleepe,
All save the Lady Emeline,
Who sate in her bowre to weepe:

"And soone she heard her true Love's voice
Low whispering at the walle,
Awake, awake, my dear Ladye,
'Tis I thy true-love call."

² Shenstone, in his "Schoolmistress," gives a still more remarkable instance of this timidity. On its first appearance, (see D'Israeli's 2nd Series of the "Curiosities of Literature") the Poem was accompanied with an absurd prose commentary, showing, as indeed some incongruous expressions in the text imply, that the whole was intended for burlesque. In subsequent editions, the commentary was dropped, and the People have since continued to read in seriousness, doing for the Author what he had not courage openly to venture upon for himself.

Which is thus tricked out and dilated :

“Als nun die Nacht Gebirg' und Thal Vermummt in Rabenschatten,
Und Hochburgs Lampen überall
Schon ausgefimmert hatten,
Und alles tief entschlafen war;
Doch nur das Fräulein immerdar,
Voll Fieberangst, noch wachte,
Und seinen Ritter dachte:
Da horch! Ein süsser Liebeston Kam leis' empör geflogen.
'Ho, Trudehen, ho! Da bin ich schon!
Frisch auf! Dich angezogen!”

But from humble ballads we must ascend to heroics.

All hail, Macpherson! hail to thee, Sire of Ossian! The Phantom was begotten by the snug embrace of an impudent Highlander upon a cloud of tradition—it travelled southward, where it was greeted with acclamation, and the thin Consistence took its course through Europe, upon the breath of popular applause. The Editor of the “Reliques” had indirectly preferred a claim to the praise of invention, by not concealing that his supplementary labours were considerable! how selfish his conduct, contrasted with that of the disinterested Gael, who, like Lear, gives his kingdom away, and is content to become a pensioner upon his own issue for a beggarly pittance!—Open this far-famed Book!—I have done so at random, and the beginning of the “Epic Poem Temora,” in eight Books, presents itself. “The blue waves of Ullin roll in light. The green hills are covered with day. Trees shake their dusky heads in the breeze. Grey torrents pour their noisy streams. Two green hills with aged oaks surround a narrow plain. The blue cours' of a stream is there. On its banks stood Cairbar of Atha. His spear supports the king; the red eyes of his fear are sad. Cormac rises on his soul with all his ghastly wounds.” Precious memorandums from the pocket-book of the blind Ossian!

If it be unbecoming, as I acknowledge that for the most part it is, to speak disrespectfully of Works that have enjoyed for a length of time a widely-spread reputation, without at the same time producing irrefragable proofs of their unworthiness, let me be forgiven upon this occasion.—Having had the good fortune to be born and reared in a mountainous country, from my very childhood I have felt the falsehood that pervades the volumes imposed upon the world under the name of Ossian. From what I saw with my own eyes, I knew that the imagery was spurious. In nature everything is distinct, yet nothing defined into absolute independent singleness. In Macpherson's work, it is exactly the reverse; everything (that is not stolen) is in this manner defined, insulated, dislocated, deadened,—yet nothing distinct. It will always be so when words are substituted for things. To say that the characters never could exist, that the manners are impossible, and that a dream has more substance than the whole state of society, as there depicted, is doing nothing more than pronouncing a censure which Macpherson defied; when, with the steeps of Morven before his eyes, he could talk so familiarly of his Car-borne heroes;—of Morven, which, if one may judge from its appearance at the distance of a few miles, contains scarcely an acre of ground sufficiently accommodating for a sledge to be trailed along its surface.—Mr. Malcolm Laing has ably shown that the diction of this pretended translation is a motley assemblage from all quarters; but he is so fond of making out parallel passages as to call poor Macpherson to account for his “ands” and his “buts!” and he has weakened his argument by conducting it as if he thought that every striking resemblance was a conscious plagiarism. It is enough that the coincidences are too remarkable for its being probable or possible that they could arise in different minds without communication between them. Now as the Translators of the Bible, and Shakspeare, Milton, and Pope, could not be indebted to Macpherson, it follows that he must have owed his fine feathers to them; unless we are prepared gravely to assert, with Madame de Staël, that many of the characteristic beauties of our most celebrated English Poets are derived from the ancient Fingallian; in which case the modern translator would have been but giving back to Ossian his own!—It is consistent that Lucien Buonaparte, who could censure Milton for having surrounded Satan in the infernal regions with courtly and regal splendour, should pronounce the modern Ossian to be the glory of Scotland;—a country that has produced a Dunbar, a Buchanan, a Thomson, and a Burns! These opinions are of ill omen for the Epic ambition of him who has given them to the world.

Yet, much as those pretended treasures of antiquity have been admired, they have been wholly unimportant upon the literature of the Country. No succeeding writer appears to have caught from them a ray of inspiration; no author, in the least distinguished, has ventured formally to imitate them—except the boy, Chatterton, on their first appearance. He had perceived, from the successful trials which he himself had made in literary forgery, how few critics were able to distinguish between a real ancient medal and a counterfeit of modern manufacture; and he set himself to the work of filling a magazine with Saxon Poems,—counterparts of those of Ossian, as like his as one of his misty stars is to another. This incapability to amalgamate with the literature of the Island, is, in my estimation, a decisive proof that the book is essentially unnatural; nor should I require any other to demonstrate it to be a forgery, audacious as worthless.—Contrast, in this respect, the effect of Macpherson's publication with the “Reliques” of Percy, so unassuming, so modest in their pretensions!—I have already stated how much Germany is indebted to this latter work; and for our own country, its poetry has been absolutely redeemed by it. I do not think that there is an able writer in verse of the present day who would not be proud to acknowledge his obligations to the “Reliques;” I know that it is so with my friends; and, for myself, I am happy in this occasion to make a public avowal of my own.

Dr. Johnson, more fortunate in his contempt of the labours of Macpherson than those of his modest friend, was solicited not long after to furnish Prefaces biographical and critical for the works of some of the most eminent English Poets. The booksellers took upon themselves to make the collection; they referred probably to the most popular miscellanies, and, unquestionably, to their books of accounts; and decided upon the claim of authors to be admitted into a body of the most eminent, from the familiarity of their names with the readers of that day, and by the profits, which, from the sale of his works, each had brought and was bringing to the Trade. The Editor was allowed a limited exercise of discretion, and the Authors whom he recommended are scarcely to be mentioned without a smile. We open the volume of Prefatory Lives, and to our astonishment the first name we find is that of Cowley!—What is become of the morning-star of English Poetry? Where is the bright Elizabethan constellation? Or, if names be more acceptable than images, where is the ever-to-be-honoured Chaucer? where is Spenser? where Sidney? and, lastly, where he, whose rights as a poet, contra-distinguished from those which he is universally allowed to possess as a dramatist, we have vindicated,—where Shakspeare?—These, and a multitude of others not unworthy to be placed near them, their contemporaries and successors, we have not. But in their stead, we have (could better be expected when precedence was to be settled by an abstract of reputation at any given period made, as in this case before us?) Roscommon, and Stepmey, and Phillips, and Walsb, and Smith, and Duke, and King, and Spratt—Halifax, Granville, Sheffield, Congreve, Broome, and other reputed Magnates—metrical writers utterly worthless and useless, except for occasions like the present, when their productions are referred to as evidence what a small quantity of brain is necessary to procure a considerable stock of admiration, provided the aspirant will accommodate himself to the likings and fashions of his day.

As I do not mean to bring down this retrospect to our own times, it may with propriety be closed at the era of this distinguished event. From the literature of other ages and countries, proofs equally cogent might have been adduced, that the opinions announced in the former part of this Essay are founded upon truth. It was not an agreeable office, nor a prudent undertaking, to declare them; but their importance seemed to render it a duty. It may still be asked, where lies the particular relation of what has been said to these Volumes?—The question will be easily answered by the discerning Reader who is old enough to remember the taste that prevailed when some of these poems were first published, seventeen years ago; who has also observed to what degree the poetry of this Island has since that period been coloured by them; and who is further aware of the unremitting hostility with which, upon some principle or other, they have each and all been opposed. A sketch of my own notion of the constitution of Fame has been given; and, as far as concerns myself, I have cause to be satisfied. The love, the admiration, the indifference, the slight, the aversion, and even the contempt, with which these Poems have been received, knowing, as I do, the source within my own mind, from which they have proceeded, and the labour and pains, which, when labour and pains appeared needful, have been bestowed upon them, must all, if I think consistently, be received as pledges and tokens, bearing the same general impression, though widely different in value;—they are all proofs that for the present time I have not laboured in vain; and afford assurances, more or less authentic, that the products of my industry will endure.

If there be one conclusion more forcibly pressed upon us than another by the review which has been given of the fortunes and fate of poetical Works, it is this,—that every author, as far as he is great and at the same time original, has had the task of creating the taste by which he is to be enjoyed; so has it been, so will it continue to be. This remark was long since made to me by the philosophical Friend for the separation of whose poems from my own I have previously expressed my regret. The predecessors of an original Genius of a high order will have smoothed the way for all that he has in common with them;—and much he will have in common; but, for what is peculiarly his own, he will be called upon to clear and often to shape his own road:—he will be in the condition of Hannibal among the Alps.

And where lies the real difficulty of creating that taste by which a truly original poet is to be relished? Is it in breaking the bonds of custom, in overcoming the prejudices of false refinement, and displacing the aversions of inexperience? Or, if he labour for an object which here and elsewhere I have proposed to myself, does it consist in divesting the reader of the pride that induces him to dwell upon those points wherein men differ from each other, to the exclusion of those in which all men are alike, or the same; and in making him ashamed of the vanity that renders him insensible of the appropriate excellence which civil arrangements, less unjust than might appear, and Nature illimitable in her bounty, have conferred on men who may stand below him in the scale of society? Finally, does it lie in establishing that dominion over the spirits of readers by which they are to be humbled and humanised, in order that they may be purified and exalted?

If these ends are to be attained by the mere communication of knowledge, it does not lie here.—TASTE, I would remind the reader, like IMAGINATION, is a word which has been forced to extend its services far beyond the point to which philosophy would have confined them. It is a metaphor, taken from a passive sense of the human body, and transferred to things which are in their essence not passive,—to intellectual acts and operations. The word, Imagination, has been overstrained, from impulses honourable to mankind, to meet the demands of the faculty which is perhaps the noblest of our nature. In the instance of Taste, the process has been reversed; and from the prevalence of dispositions at once injurious and discreditable, being no other than that selfishness which is the child of apathy,—which, as Nations decline in productive and creative power, makes them value themselves upon a presumed refinement of judging. Poverty of language is the primary cause of the use which we make of the word, Imagination; but the word, Taste, has been stretched to the sense which it bears in modern Europe by habits of self-conceit, inducing that inversion in the order of things whereby a passive faculty is made paramount among the faculties conversant with the fine arts. Proportion and congruity, the requisite knowledge being supposed, are subjects upon which taste may be trusted; it is competent to this office;—for in its intercourse with these the mind is passive, and is affected painfully or pleasurably as by an instinct. But the profound and the exquisite in feeling, the lofty and universal in thought and imagination; or, in ordinary language, the pathetic and the sublime;—are neither of them accurately speaking, objects of a faculty which could ever without a sinking in the spirit of Nations have been designated by the metaphor—Taste. And why? Because without the exertion of a co-operating power in the mind of the Reader, there can be no adequate sympathy with either of these emotions: without this auxiliary impulse, elevated or profound passion cannot exist.

Passion, it must be observed, is derived from a word which signifies suffering; but the connection which suffering has with effort, with exertion, and action, is immediate and inseparable. How strikingly is this property of human nature exhibited by the fact, that, in popular language, to be in a passion, is to be angry!—But,

“Anger in hasty words or blows Itself discharges on its foes.”

To be moved, then, by a passion, is to be excited, often to external, and always to internal, effort; whether for the continuance and strengthening of the passion, or for its suppression, accordingly as the course which it takes may be painful or pleasurable. If the latter, the soul must contribute to its support, or it never becomes vivid,—and soon languishes, and dies. And this brings us to the point. If every great poet with whose writings men are familiar, in the highest exercise of his genius, before he can be thoroughly enjoyed, has to call forth and to communicate power; this service, in a still greater degree, falls upon an original writer, at his first appearance in the world.—Of genius the only proof is, the act of doing well what is worthy to be done, and what was never done before: Of genius, in the fine arts, the only infallible sign is the widening the sphere of human sensibility, for the delight, honour, and benefit of human nature. Genius is the introduction of a new element into the intellectual universe: or, if that be not allowed, it is the application of powers to objects on which they had not before been exercised, or the employment of them in such a manner as to produce effects hitherto unknown. What is all this but an advance, or a conquest, made by the soul of the poet? Is it to be supposed that the reader can make progress of this kind, like an Indian prince or general—stretched on his palanquin, and borne by his slaves? No; he is invigorated and inspired by his leader, in order that he may exert himself; for he cannot proceed in quiescence, he cannot be carried like a dead weight. Therefore to create taste is to call forth and bestow power, of which knowledge is the effect; and there lies the true difficulty.

As the pathetic participates of an animal sensation, it might seem—that, if the springs of this emotion were genuine, all men, possessed of competent knowledge of the facts and circumstances, would be instantaneously affected. And, doubtless, in the works of every true poet will be found passages of that species of excellence, which is proved by effects immediate and universal. But there are emotions of the pathetic that are simple and direct, and others—that are complex and revolutionary; some—to which the heart yields with gentleness; others—against which it struggles with pride; these varieties are infinite as the combinations of circumstance and the constitutions of character. Remember, also, that the medium through which, in poetry, the heart is to be affected, is language; a thing subject to endless fluctuations and arbitrary associations. The genius of the poet melts these down for his purpose; but they retain their shape and quality to him who is not capable of exerting, within his own mind, a corresponding energy. There is also a meditative, as well as a human, pathos; an enthusiastic, as well as an ordinary, sorrow; a sadness that has its seat in the depths of reason to which the mind cannot sink gently of itself—but to which it must descend by treading the steps of thought. And for the sublime,—if we consider what are the cares that occupy the passing day, and how remote is the practice and the course of life from the sources of sublimity, in the soul of Man, can it be wondered that there is little existing preparation for a poet charged with a new mission to extend its kingdom, and to augment and spread its enjoyments?

Away, then, with the senseless iteration of the word, popular, applied to new works in poetry, as if there were no test of excellence in this first of the fine arts but that all men should run after its productions, as if urged by an appetite, or constrained by a spell!—The qualities of writing best fitted for eager reception are either such as startle the world into attention by their audacity and extravagance; or they are chiefly of a superficial kind, lying upon the surfaces of manners; or arising out of a selection and arrangement of incidents, by which the mind is kept upon the stretch of curiosity, and the fancy amused without the trouble of thought. But in everything which is to send the soul into herself, to be admonished of her weakness, or to be made conscious of her power;—wherever life and nature are described as operated upon by the creative or abstracting virtue of the imagination; wherever the instinctive wisdom of antiquity and her heroic passions uniting, in the heart of the poet, with the meditative wisdom of later ages, have produced that accord of sublimated humanity, which is at once a history of the remote past and a prophetic enunciation of the remotest future, there, the poet must reconcile himself for a season to few and scattered hearers.—Grand thoughts (and Shakspeare must often have sighed over this truth), as they are most naturally and most fitly conceived in solitude, so can they not be brought forth in the midst of plaudits, without some violation of their sanctity. Go to a silent exhibition of the productions of the sister Art, and be convinced that the qualities which dazzle at first sight, and kindle the admiration of the multitude, are essentially different from those by which permanent influence is secured. Let us not shrink from following up these principles as far as they will carry us, and conclude with observing—that there never has been a period, and perhaps never will be, in which vicious poetry, of some kind or other, has not excited more zealous admiration, and been far more generally read, than good; but this advantage attends the good, that the individual, as well as the species, survives from age to age: whereas, of the depraved, though the species be immortal, the individual quickly perishes: the object of present admiration vanishes, being supplanted by some other as easily produced; which, though no better, brings with it at least the irritation of novelty,—with adaptation, more or less skilful, to the changing humours of the majority of those who are most at leisure to regard poetical works when they first solicit their attention.

Is it the result of the whole, that, in the opinion of the Writer, the judgment of the People is not to be respected? The thought is most injurious; and, could the charge be brought against him, he would repel it with indignation. The People have already been justified, and their eulogium pronounced by implication, when it was said, above—that, of good poetry, the individual, as well as the species, survives. And how does it survive but through the People? What preserves it but their intellect and their wisdom?

“—Past and future, are the wings
On whose support, harmoniously conjoined, Moves the great Spirit of human knowledge—” MS.

The voice that issues from this Spirit, is that Vox Populi which the Deity inspires. Foolish must he be who can mistake for this a local acclamation, or a transitory outcry—transitory though it be for years, local though from a Nation. Still more lamentable is his error who can believe that there is anything of divine infallibility in the clamour of that small though loud portion of the community, ever governed by factitious influence, which, under the name of the PUBLIC, passes itself, upon the unthinking, for the PEOPLE. Towards the Public, the Writer hopes that he feels as much deference as it is entitled to: but to the People, philosophically characterised, and to the embodied spirit of their knowledge, so far as it exists and moves, at the present, faithfully supported by its two wings, the past and the future, his devout respect, his reverence, is due. He offers it willingly and readily; and, this done, takes leave of his Readers, by assuring them—that, if he were not persuaded that the contents of these Volumes, and the Work to which they are subsidiary, evince something of the “Vision and the Faculty divine;” and that, both in words and things, they will operate in their degree, to extend the domain of sensibility for the delight, the honour, and the benefit of human nature, notwithstanding the many happy hours which he has employed in their composition, and the manifold comforts and enjoyments they have procured to him, he would not, if a wish could do it, save them from immediate destruction;—from becoming at this moment, to the world, as a thing that had never been.

DEDICATION.

PREFIXED TO THE EDITION OF 1815.

TO SIR GEORGE HOWLAND BEAUMONT, BART.

MY DEAR SIR GEORGE,

Accept my thanks for the permission given me to dedicate these Volumes to you. In addition to a lively pleasure derived from general considerations, I feel a particular satisfaction; for, by inscribing these Poems with your Name, I seem to myself in some degree to repay, by an appropriate honour, the great obligation which I owe to one part of the Collection—as having been the means of first making us personally known to each other. Upon much of the remainder, also, you have a peculiar claim,—for some of the best pieces were composed under the shade of your own groves, upon the classic ground of Coleorton; where I was animated by the recollection of those illustrious Poets of your name and family, who were born in that neighbourhood; and, we may be assured, did not wander with indifference by the dashing stream of Grace Dieu, and among the rocks that diversify the forest of Charnwood.—Nor is there any one to whom such parts of this Collection as have been inspired or coloured by the beautiful Country from which I now address you, could be presented with more propriety than to yourself—to whom it has suggested so many admirable pictures. Early in life, the sublimity and beauty of this region excited your admiration; and I know that you are bound to it in mind by a still strengthening attachment.

Wishing and hoping that this Work, with the embellishments it has received from your pencil,¹ may survive as a lasting memorial of a friendship, which I reckon among the blessings of my life,

I have the honour to be,
My dear Sir George,
Yours most affectionately and faithfully,
WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

PREFACE TO THE EDITION OF 1815.

1 The powers requisite for the production of poetry are: first, those of Observation and Description,—i.e. the ability to observe with accuracy things as they are in themselves and with fidelity to describe them, unmodified by any passion or feeling existing in the mind of the describer; whether the things depicted be actually present to the senses, or have a place only in the memory. This power, though indispensable to a Poet, is one which he employs only in submission to necessity, and never for a continuance of time; as its exercise supposes all the higher qualities of the mind to be passive, and in a state of subjection to external objects, much in the same way as a translator or engraver ought to be to his original. 2ndly, Sensibility,—which, the more exquisite it is, the wider will be the range of a poet's perceptions; and the more will he be incited to observe objects, both as they exist in themselves and as re-acted upon by his own mind. (The distinction between poetic and human sensibility has been marked in the character of the Poet delineated in the original preface.) 3rdly, Reflection,—which makes the Poet acquainted with the value of actions, images, thoughts, and feelings; and assists the sensibility in perceiving their connection with each other. 4thly, Imagination and Fancy,—to modify, to create, and to associate. 5thly, Invention,—by which characters are composed out of materials supplied by observation; whether of the Poet's own heart and mind, or of external life and nature; and such incidents and situations produced as are most impressive to the imagination, and most fitted to do justice to the characters, sentiments, and passions, which the Poet undertakes to illustrate. And, lastly, Judgment,—to decide how and where and in what degree, each of these faculties ought to be exerted; so that the less shall not be sacrificed to the greater; nor the greater, slighting the less, arrogate, to its own injury, more than its due. By judgment, also, is determined what are the laws and appropriate graces of every species of composition.¹

The materials of Poetry, by these powers collected and produced, are cast, by means of various moulds, into divers forms. The moulds may be enumerated, and the forms specified, in the following order. 1st, The Narrative,—including the Epopœia, the Historic Poem, the Tale, the Romance, the Mock-heroic, and, if the spirit of Homer will tolerate such neighbourhood, that dear production of our days, the metrical Novel. Of this Class, the distinguishing mark is, that the Narrator, however liberally his speaking agents be introduced, is himself the source from which everything primarily flows. Epic Poets, in order that their mode of composition may accord with the elevation of their subject, represent themselves as singing from the inspiration of the Muse, "Arma virumque cano;" but this is a fiction, in modern times, of slight value: the "Iliad" or the "Paradise Lost" would gain little in our estimation by being chanted. The other poets who belong to this class are commonly content to tell their tale;—so that of the whole it may be affirmed that they neither require nor reject the accompaniment of music.

2ndly, The Dramatic,—consisting of Tragedy, Historic Drama, Comedy, and Masque, in which the Poet does not appear at all in his own person, and where the whole action is carried on by speech and dialogue of the agents; music being admitted only incidentally and rarely. The Opera may be placed here, inasmuch as it proceeds by dialogue; though depending, to the degree that it does, upon music, it has a strong claim to be ranked with the lyrical. The characteristic and impassioned Epistle, of which Ovid and Pope have given examples, considered as a species of monodrama, may, without impropriety, be placed in this class.

3rdly, The Lyrical,—containing the Hymn, the Ode, the Elegy, the Song, and the Ballad; in all which, for the production of their full effect, an accompaniment of music is indispensable.

4thly, The Idyllium,—descriptive chiefly either of the processes and appearances of external nature, as the "Seasons" of Thomson; or of characters, manners, and sentiments, as are Shenstone's "Schoolmistress," "The Cotter's Saturday Night" of Burns, "The Twa Dogs" of the same Author; or of these in conjunction with the appearances of Nature, as most of the pieces of Theocritus, the "Allegro" and "Penseroso" of Milton, Beattie's "Minstrel," Goldsmith's "Deserted Village." The Epitaph, the Inscription, the Sonnet, most of the epistles of poets writing in their own persons, and all loco-descriptive poetry, belong to this class.

5thly, Didactic,—the principal object of which is direct instruction; as the Poem of Lucretius, the "Georgics" of Virgil, "The Fleece" of Dyer, Mason's "English Garden," &c.

And, lastly, philosophical Satire, like that of Horace and Juvenal; personal and occasional Satire rarely comprehending sufficient of the general in the individual to be dignified with the name of poetry.

Out of the three last has been constructed a composite order, of which Young's "Night Thoughts," and Cowper's "Task," are excellent examples.

It is deducible from the above, that poems, apparently miscellaneous, may with propriety be arranged either with reference to the powers of mind predominant in the production of them; or to the mould in which they are cast; or, lastly, to the subjects to which they relate. From each of these considerations, the following Poems have been divided into classes; which, that the work may more obviously correspond with the course of human life, and for the sake of exhibiting in it the three requisites of a legitimate whole, a beginning, a middle, and an end, have been also arranged, as far as it was possible, according to an order of time, commencing with Childhood, and terminating with Old Age, Death, and Immortality. My guiding wish was, that the small pieces of which these volumes consist, thus discriminated, might be regarded under a two-fold view; as composing an entire work within themselves, and as adjuncts to the philosophical Poem, "The Recluse." This arrangement has long presented itself habitually to my own mind. Nevertheless, I should have preferred to scatter the contents of these volumes at random, if I had been persuaded that, by the plan adopted, anything material would be taken from the natural effect of the pieces, individually, on the mind of the unreflecting Reader. I trust there is a sufficient variety in each class to prevent this; while, for him who reads with reflection, the arrangement will serve as a commentary unostentatiously directing his attention to my purposes, both particular and general. But, as I wish to guard against the possibility of misleading by this classification, it is proper first to remind the Reader, that certain poems are placed according to the powers of mind, in the Author's conception, predominant in the production of them; predominant, which implies the exertion of other faculties in less degree. Where there is more imagination than fancy in a poem, it is placed under the head of imagination, and vice versa. Both the above classes might without impropriety have been enlarged from that consisting of "Poems founded on the Affections;" as might this latter from those, and from the class "proceeding from Sentiment and Reflection." The most striking characteristics of each piece, mutual illustration, variety, and proportion, have governed me throughout.

None of the other Classes, except those of Fancy and Imagination, require any particular notice. But a remark of general application may be made. All Poets, except the dramatic, have been in the practice of feigning that their works were composed to the music of the harp or lyre: with what degree of affectation this has been done in modern times, I leave to the judicious to determine. For my own part, I have not been disposed to violate probability so far, or to make such a large demand upon the Reader's charity. Some of these pieces are essentially lyrical; and, therefore, cannot have their due force without a supposed musical accompaniment; but, in much the greatest part, as a substitute for the classic lyre or romantic harp, I require nothing more than an animated or impassioned recitation, adapted to the subject. Poems, however humble in their kind, if they be good in that kind, cannot read themselves; the law of long syllable and short must not be so inflexible,—the letter of metre must not be so oppressive to the spirit of versification,—as to deprive the Reader of all voluntary power to modulate, in subordination to the sense, the music of the poem;—in the same manner as his mind is left at liberty, and even summoned, to act upon its thoughts and images. But, though the accompaniment of a musical instrument be frequently dispensed with, the true Poet does not therefore abandon his privilege distinct from that of the mere Proseman;

"He murmurs near the running brooks
A music sweeter than their own."

Let us come now to the consideration of the words Fancy and Imagination, as employed in the classification of the following Poems. "A man," says an intelligent author, "has imagination in proportion as he can distinctly copy in idea the impressions of sense: it is the faculty which images within the mind the phenomena of sensation. A man has fancy in proportion as he can call up, connect, or associate, at pleasure, those internal images (βαρταζειν is to cause to appear) so as to complete ideal representations of absent objects. Imagination is the power of depicting and fancy of evoking and combining. The imagination is formed by patient observation; the fancy by a voluntary activity in shifting the scenery of the mind. The more accurate the imagination, the more safely may a painter, or a poet, undertake a delineation, or a description, without the presence of the objects to be characterised. The more versatile the fancy, the more original and striking will be the decorations produced."—British Synonyms discriminated, by W. Taylor.

Is not this as if a man should undertake to supply an account of a building, and be so intent upon what he had discovered of the foundation, as to conclude his task without once looking up at the superstructure? Here, as in other instances throughout the volume, the judicious Author's mind is enthralled by Etymology; he takes up the original word as his guide and escort, and too often does not perceive how soon he becomes its prisoner, without liberty to tread in any path but that to which it confines him. It is not easy to find out how imagination, thus explained, differs from distinct remembrance of images; or fancy from quick and vivid recollection of them: each is nothing more than a mode of memory. If the two words bear the above meaning, and no other, what term is left to designate that faculty of which the Poet is "all compact;" he whose eye glances from earth to heaven, whose spiritual attributes body forth what his pen is prompt in turning to shape; or what is left to characterise Fancy, as insinuating herself into the heart of objects with creative activity?—Imagination, in the sense of the word as giving title to a class of the following Poems, has no reference to images that are merely a faithful copy, existing in the mind, of absent external objects; but is a word of higher import, denoting operations of the mind upon those objects, and processes of creation or of composition, governed by certain fixed laws. I proceed to illustrate my meaning by instances. A parrot hangs from the wires of his cage by his beak or by his claws; or a monkey from the bough of a tree by his paws or his tail. Each creature does so literally and actually. In the first Eclogue of Virgil, the shepherd, thinking of the time when he is to take leave of his farm, thus addresses his goats:—

"Non ego vos posthac viridi projectus in antro Dumosa pendere procul de rupe videbo."

— "half way down Hangs one who gathers samphire," is the well-known expression of Shakespeare, delineating an ordinary image upon the cliffs of Dover. In these two instances is a slight exertion of the faculty which I denominate imagination, in the use of one word: neither the goats nor the samphire-gatherer do literally hang, as does the parrot or the monkey; but, presenting to the senses something of such an appearance, the mind in its activity, for its own gratification, contemplates them as hanging.

"As when far off at sea a fleet descried
Hangs in the clouds, by equinoctial winds
Close sailing from Bengala, or the isles
Of Ternate or Tidore, whence merchants bring Their spicy drugs; they on the trading food
Through the wide Ethiopian to the Cape Fly, stemming nightly toward the Pole: so seemed Far off the flying Fiend."

Here is the full strength of the imagination involved in the word hangs, and exerted upon the whole image: First, the fleet, an aggregate of many ships, is represented as one mighty person, whose track, we know and feel, is upon the waters; but, taking advantage of its appearance to the senses, the Poet dares to represent it as hanging in the clouds, both for the gratification of the mind in contemplating the image itself, and in reference to the motion and appearance of the sublime objects to which it is compared.

From impressions of sight we will pass to those of sound; which, as they must necessarily be of a less definite character, shall be selected from these volumes:

"Over his own sweet voice the Stock-dove broods;"

of the same bird,

"His voice was buried among trees,
Yet to be come at by the breeze;"

"O, Cuckoo! shall I call thee Bird,
Or but a wandering Voice?"

The stock-dove is said to coo, a sound well imitating the note of the bird; but, by the intervention of the metaphor broods, the affections are called in by the imagination to assist in marking the manner in which the bird reiterates and prolongs her soft note, as if herself delighting to listen to it, and participating of a still and quiet satisfaction, like that which may be supposed inseparable from the continuous process of incubation. "His voice was buried among trees," a metaphor expressing the love of seclusion by which this Bird is marked; and characterising its note as not partaking of the shrill and the piercing, and therefore more easily deadened by the intervening shade; yet a note so peculiar and withal so pleasing, that the breeze, gifted with that love of the sound which the Poet feels, penetrates the shades in which it is entombed, and conveys it to the ear of the listener.

"Shall I call thee Bird,
Or but a wandering Voice?"

This concise interrogation characterises the seeming ubiquity of the voice of the cuckoo, and disposes the creature almost of a corporeal existence; the Imagination being tempted to this exertion of her power by a consciousness in the memory that the cuckoo is almost perpetually heard throughout the season of spring, but seldom becomes an object of sight.

Thus far of images independent of each other, and immediately endowed by the mind with properties that do not inhere in them, upon an incitement from properties and qualities the existence of which is inherent and obvious. These processes of imagination are carried on either by conferring additional properties upon an object, or abstracting from it some of those which it actually possesses, and thus enabling it to re-act upon the mind which hath performed the process, like a new existence.

I pass from the Imagination acting upon an individual image to a consideration of the same faculty employed upon images in a conjunction by which they modify each other. The Reader has already had a fine instance before him in the passage quoted from Virgil, where the apparently perilous situation of the goat, hanging upon the shaggy precipice, is contrasted with that of the shepherd contemplating it from the seclusion of the cavern in which he lies stretched at ease and in security. Take these images separately, and how unaffecting the picture compared with that produced by their being thus connected with, and opposed to, each other!

"As a huge stone is sometimes seen to lie
Couched on the bald top of an eminence,
Wonder to all who do the same espy
By what means it could thither come, and whence,
So that it seems a thing endued with sense,
Like a sea-beast crawled forth, which on a shelf
Of rock or sand repositeth, there to sun himself.

Such seemed this Man; not all alive or dead
Nor all asleep, in his extreme old age.

Motionless as a cloud the old Man stood,
That heareth not the loud winds when they call,
And moveth altogether if it move at all."

In these images, the conferring, the abstracting, and the modifying powers of the Imagination, immediately and mediately acting, are all brought into conjunction. The stone is endowed with something of the power of life to approximate it to the sea-beast; and the sea-beast stripped of some of its vital qualities to assimilate it to the stone; which intermediate image is thus treated for the purpose of bringing the original image, that of the stone, to a nearer resemblance to the figure and condition of the aged Man; who is divested of so much of the indications of life and motion as to bring him to the point where the two objects unite and coalesce in just comparison. After what has been said, the image of the cloud need not be commented upon.

Thus far of an endowing or modifying power: but the Imagination also shapes and creates; and how? By innumerable processes; and in none does it more delight than in that of consolidating numbers into unity, and dissolving and separating unity into number,—alternations proceeding from, and governed by, a sublime consciousness of the soul in her own mighty and almost divine powers. Recur to the passage already cited from Milton. When the compact Fleet, as one Person, has been introduced "sailing from Bengala," "They," i.e. the "merchants," representing the fleet resolved into a multitude of ships, "ply" their voyage towards the extremities of the earth: "So," (referring to the word "As" in the commencement) "seemed the flying Fiend;" the image of his Person acting to recombine the multitude of ships into one body,—the point from which the comparison set out. "So seemed," and to whom seemed? To the heavenly Muse who dictates the poem, to the eye of the Poet's mind, and to that of the Reader, present at one moment in the wide Ethiopian, and the next in the solitudes, then first broken in upon, of the infernal regions!

"Modo me Thebis, modo ponit Athenis."

Hear again this mighty Poet,—speaking of the Messiah going forth to expel from heaven the rebellious angels,

"Attended by ten thousand thousand Saints
He onward came: far off his coming shone,"—

the retinue of Saints, and the Person of the Messiah himself, lost almost and merged in the splendour of that indefinite abstraction "His coming!"

As I do not mean here to treat this subject further than to throw some light upon the present Volumes, and especially upon one division of them, I shall spare myself and the Reader the trouble of considering the Imagination as it deals with thoughts and sentiments, as it regulates the composition of characters, and determines the course of actions: I will not consider it (more than I have already done by implication) as that power which, in the language of one of my most esteemed Friends, "draws all things to one; which makes things animate or inanimate, beings with their attributes, subjects with their accessories, take one colour and serve to one effect¹." The grand store-houses of enthusiastic and meditative Imagination, of poetical, as contra-distinguished from human and dramatic Imagination, are the prophetic and lyrical parts of the Holy Scriptures, and the works of Milton; to which I cannot forbear to add those of Spenser. I select these writers in preference to those of ancient Greece and Rome, because the anthropomorphism of the Pagan religion subjected the minds of the greatest poets in those countries too much to the bondage of definite form; from which the Hebrews were preserved by their abhorrence of idolatry. This abhorrence was almost as strong in our great epic Poet, both from circumstances of his life, and from the constitution of his mind. However imbued the surface might be with classical literature, he was a Hebrew in soul; and all things tended in him towards the sublime. Spenser, of a gentler nature, maintained his freedom by aid of his allegorical spirit, at one time inciting him to create persons out of abstractions; and, at another, by a superior effort of genius, to give the universality and permanence of abstractions to his human beings, by means of attributes and emblems that belong to the highest moral truths and the purest sensations,—of which his character of Una is a glorious example. Of the human and dramatic Imagination the works of Shakspeare are an inexhaustible source.

"I tax not you, ye Elements, with unkindness,
I never gave you kingdoms, call'd you Daughters!"

And if, bearing in mind the many Poets distinguished by this prime quality, whose names I omit to mention; yet justified by recollection of the insults which the ignorant, the incapable, and the presumptuous, have heaped upon these and my other writings, I may be permitted to anticipate the judgment of posterity upon myself, I shall declare (censurable, I grant, if the notoriety of the fact above stated does not justify me) that I have given in these unfavourable times, evidence of exertions of this faculty upon its worthiest objects, the external universe, the moral and religious sentiments of Man, his natural affections, and his acquired passions; which have the same ennobling tendency as the productions of men, in this kind, worthy to be holden in undying remembrance.

To the mode in which Fancy has already been characterised as the power of evoking and combining, or, as my friend Mr. Coleridge has styled it, "the aggregative and associative power," my objection is only that the definition is too general. To aggregate and to associate, to evoke and to combine, belong as well to the Imagination as to the Fancy; but either the materials evoked and combined are different; or they are brought together under a different law, and for a different purpose. Fancy does not require that the materials which she makes use of should be susceptible of change in their constitution, from her touch; and, where they admit of modification, it is enough for her purpose if it be slight, limited, and evanescent. Directly the reverse of these, are the desires and demands of the Imagination. She recoils from everything but the plastic, the pliant, and the indefinite. She leaves it to Fancy to describe Queen Mab as coming,

"In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman."

Having to speak of stature, she does not tell you that her gigantic Angel was as tall as Pompey's Pillar; much less that he was twelve cubits, or twelve hundred cubits high; or that his dimensions equalled those of Teneriffe or Atlas;—because these, and if they were a million times as high it would be the same, are bounded; The expression is, "His stature reached the sky!" the illimitable firmament!—When the Imagination frames a comparison, if it does not strike on the first presentation, a sense of the truth of the likeness, from the moment that it is perceived, grows—and continues to grow—upon the mind; the resemblance depending less upon outline of form and feature, than upon expression and effect; less upon casual and outstanding, than upon inherent and internal, properties: moreover, the images invariably modify each other.—The law under which the processes of Fancy are carried on is as capricious as the accidents of things, and the effects are surprising, playful, ludicrous, amusing, tender, or pathetic, as the objects happen to be oppositely produced or fortunately combined. Fancy depends upon the rapidity and profusion with which she scatters her thoughts and images; trusting that their number, and the felicity with which they are linked together, will make amends for the want of individual value: or she prides herself upon the curious subtlety and the successful elaboration with which she can detect their lurking affinities. If she can win you over to her purpose, and impart to you her feelings, she cares not how unstable or transitory may be her influence, knowing that it will not be out of her power to resume it upon an apt occasion. But the Imagination is conscious of an indestructible dominion;—the Soul may fall away from it, not being able to sustain its grandeur; but, if once felt and acknowledged, by no act of any other faculty of the mind can it be relaxed, impaired, or diminished.—Fancy is given to quicken and to beguile the temporal part of our nature, Imagination to incite and to support the eternal.—Yet is it not the less true that Fancy, as she is an active, is also, under her own laws and in her own spirit, a creative faculty. In what manner Fancy ambitiously aims at a rivalry with Imagination, and Imagination stoops to work with the materials of Fancy, might be illustrated from the compositions of all eloquent writers, whether in prose or verse; and chiefly from those of our own Country. Scarcely a page of the impassioned parts of Bishop Taylor's Works can be opened that shall not afford examples.—Referring the Reader to those inestimable volumes, I will content myself with placing a conceit (ascribed to Lord Chesterfield) in contrast with a passage from the "Paradise Lost":—

"The dews of the evening most carefully shun,
They are the tears of the sky for the loss of the sun."

After the transgression of Adam, Milton, with other appearances of sympathising Nature, thus marks the immediate consequence,

"Sky lowered, and, muttering thunder, some sad drops Wept at completion of the mortal sin."

The associating link is the same in each instance: Dew and rain, not distinguishable from the liquid substance of tears, are employed as indications of sorrow. A flash of surprise is the effect in the former case; a flash of surprise, and nothing more; for the nature of things does not sustain the combination. In the latter, the effects from the act, of which there is this immediate consequence and visible sign, are so momentous, that the mind acknowledges the justice and reasonableness of the sympathy in nature so manifested; and the sky weeps drops of water as if with human eyes, as "Earth had before trembled from her entrails, and Nature given a second groan."

Finally, I will refer to Cotton's "Ode upon Winter," an admirable composition, though stained with some peculiarities of the age in which he lived, for a general illustration of the characteristics of Fancy. The middle part of this ode contains a most lively description of the entrance of Winter, with his retinue, as "A palsied king," and yet a military monarch,—advancing for conquest with his army; the several bodies of which, and their arms and equipments, are described with a rapidity of detail, and a profusion of fanciful comparisons, which indicate on the part of the poet extreme activity of intellect, and a correspondent hurry of delightful feeling. Winter retires from the foe into his fortress, where —"a magazine

Of sovereign juice is cellared in; . . .
Liquor that will the siege maintain Should Phœbus ne'er return again."

Though myself a water-drinker, I cannot resist the pleasure of transcribing what follows, as an instance still more happy of Fancy employed in the treatment of feeling than, in its preceding passages, the Poem supplies of her management of forms.

"'Tis that, that gives the poet rage,
And thaws the gelid blood of age;
Matures the young, restores the old,
And makes the fainting coward bold.

"It lays the careful head to rest,
Calms palpitations in the breast,
Renders our lives' misfortune sweet;

"Then let the chill Sirocco blow,
And gird us round with hills of snow,
Or else go whistle to the shore,
And make the hollow mountains roar,

"Whilst we together jovial sit Careless, and crowned with mirth and wit,
Where, though bleak winds confine us home
Our fancies round the world shall roam.

"We'll think of all the Friends we know,
And drink to all worth drinking to;
When having drunk all thine and mine,
We rather shall want healths than wine.

"But where Friends fail us, we'll supply
Our friendships with our charity;
Men that remote in sorrows live,
Shall by our lusty brimmers thrive.

"We'll drink the wanting into health,
And those that languish into health,
The afflicted into joy; th' opprest
Into security and rest.

"The worthy in disgrace shall find Favour return again more kind,
And in restraint who stifled lie,
Shall taste the air of liberty.

"The brave shall triumph in success
The lover shall have mistresses, Poor unregarded Virtue, praise,
And the neglected Poet, bays.

"Thus shall our healths do others good,
Whilst we ourselves do all we would;
For, freed from envy and from care,
What would we be but what we are?"

When I sate down to write this Preface, it was my intention to have made it more comprehensive; but, thinking that I ought rather to apologise for detaining the reader so long, I will here conclude.

POSTSCRIPT.

1835.

In the present volume, as in those that have preceded it, the reader will have found occasionally opinions expressed upon the course of public affairs, and feelings given vent to as national interests excited them. Since nothing, I trust, has been uttered but in the spirit of reflective patriotism, those notices are left to produce their own effect; but, among the many objects of general concern, and the changes going forward, which I have glanced at in verse, are some especially affecting the lower orders of society; in reference to these, I wish here to add a few words in plain prose.

Were I conscious of being able to do justice to those important topics, I might avail myself of the periodical press for offering anonymously my thoughts, such as they are, to the world; but I feel that, in procuring attention, they may derive some advantage, however small, from my name, in addition to that of being presented in a less fugitive shape. It is also not impossible that the state of mind which some of the foregoing poems may have produced in the reader, will dispose him to receive more readily the impression which I desire to make, and to admit the conclusions I would establish.

I. The first thing that presses upon my attention is the Poor-Law Amendment Act. I am aware of the magnitude and complexity of the subject, and the unwearied attention which it has received from men of far wider experience than my own; yet I cannot forbear touching upon one point of it, and to this I will confine myself, though not insensible to the objection which may reasonably be brought against treating a portion of this, or any other, great scheme of civil polity separately from the whole. The point to which I wish to draw the reader's attention is, that all persons who cannot find employment, or procure wages sufficient to support the body in health and strength, are entitled to a maintenance by law.

This dictate of humanity is acknowledged in the Report of the Commissioners; but is there not room for apprehension that some of the regulations of the new act have a tendency to render the principle nugatory by difficulties thrown in the way of applying it? If this be so, persons will not be wanting to show it, by examining the provisions of the act in detail,—an attempt which would be quite out of place here; but it will not, therefore, be deemed unbecoming in one who fears that the prudence of the head may, in framing some of those provisions, have supplanted the wisdom of the heart, to enforce a principle which cannot be violated without infringing upon one of the most precious rights of the English people, and opposing one of the most sacred claims of civilized humanity.

There can be no greater error, in this department of legislation, than the belief that this principle does by necessity operate for the degradation of those who claim, or are so circumstanced as to make it likely they may claim, through laws founded upon it, relief and assistance. The direct contrary is the truth: it may be unanswerably maintained that its tendency is to raise, not to depress; by stamping a value upon life, which can belong to it only where the laws have placed men who are willing to work, and yet cannot find employment, above the necessity of looking for protection against hunger and other natural evils, either to individual and casual charity, to despair and death, or to the breach of law by theft, or violence.

And here, as in the Report of the Commissioners the fundamental principle has been recognised, I am not at issue with them any farther than I am compelled to believe that their "remedial measures" obstruct the application of it more than the interests of society require.

And, calling to mind the doctrines of political economy which are now prevalent, I cannot forbear to enforce the justice of the principle, and to insist upon its salutary operation.

And first for its justice: If self-preservation be the first law of our nature, would not every one in a state of nature be morally justified in taking to himself that which is indispensable to such preservation, where, by so doing, he would not rob another of that which might be equally indispensable to his preservation? And if the value of life be regarded in a right point of view, may it not be questioned whether this right of preserving life, at any expense short of endangering the life of another, does not survive man's entering into the social state; whether this right can be surrendered or forfeited, except when it opposes the divine law, upon any supposition of a social compact, or of any convention for the protection of mere rights of property?

But, if it be not safe to touch the abstract question of man's right in a social state to help himself even in the last extremity, may we not still contend for the duty of a christian government, standing in loco parentis towards all its subjects, to make such effectual provision, that no one shall be in danger of perishing either through the neglect or harshness of its legislation? Or, waiving this, is it not indisputable that the claim of the state to the allegiance, involves the protection, of the subject? And, as all rights in one party impose a correlative duty upon another, it follows that the right of the state to require the services of its members, even to the jeopardising of their lives in the common defence, establishes a right in the people (not to be gainsaid by utilitarians and economists) to public support when, from any cause, they may be unable to support themselves.

Let us now consider the salutary and benign operation of this principle. Here we must have recourse to elementary feelings of human nature, and to truths which from their very obviousness are apt to be slighted, till they are forced upon our notice by our own sufferings or those of others. In the "Paradise Lost," Milton represents Adam, after the Fall, as exclaiming, in the anguish of his soul—

"Did I request Thee, Maker, from my clay
To mould me man; did I solicit Thee
From darkness to promote me?
..... My will Concurred not to my being."

Under how many various pressures of misery have men been driven thus, in a strain touching upon impiety, to expostulate with the Creator! and under few so afflictive as when the source and origin of earthly existence have been brought back to the mind by its impending close in the pangs of destitution. But as long as, in our legislation, due weight shall be given to this principle, no man will be forced to bewail the gift of life in hopeless want of the necessaries of life.

Englishmen have, therefore, by the progress of civilisation among them, been placed in circumstances more favourable to piety and resignation to the divine will, than the inhabitants of other countries, where a like provision has not been established. And as Providence, in this care of our countrymen, acts through a human medium, the objects of that care must, in like manner, be more inclined towards a grateful love of their fellow-men. Thus, also, do stronger ties attach the people to their country, whether while they tread its soil, or, at a distance, think of their native land as an indulgent parent, to whose arms, even they who have been imprudent and underserving may, like the prodigal son, betake themselves, without fear of being rejected.

Such is the view of the case that would first present itself to a reflective mind; and it is in vain to show, by appeals to experience, in contrast with this view, that provisions founded upon the principle have promoted profaneness of life, and dispositions the reverse of philanthropic, by spreading idleness, selfishness, and rapacity: for these evils have arisen, not as an inevitable consequence of the principle, but for want of judgment in framing laws based upon it; and, above all, from faults in the mode of administering the law. The mischief that has grown to such a height from granting relief in cases where proper vigilance would have shown that it was not required, or in bestowing it in undue measure, will be urged by no truly enlightened statesman, as a sufficient reason for banishing the principle itself from legislation.

Let us recur to the miserable states of consciousness that it precludes.

There is a story told, by a traveller in Spain, of a female who, by a sudden shock of domestic calamity, was driven out of her senses, and ever after looked up incessantly to the sky, feeling that her fellow-creatures could do nothing for her relief. Can there be Englishmen who, with a good end in view, would, upon system, expose their brother Englishmen to a like necessity of looking upwards only; or downwards to the earth, after it shall contain no spot where the destitute can demand, by civil right, what by right of nature they are entitled to?

Suppose the objects of our sympathy not sunk into this blank despair, but wandering about as strangers in streets and ways, with the hope of succour from casual charity; what have we gained by such a change of scene? Woeful is the condition of the famished Northern Indian, dependent, among winter snows, upon the chance-passage of a herd of deer, from which one, if brought down by his rifle-gun, may be made the means of keeping him and his companions alive. As miserable is that of some savage Islander, who, when the land has ceased to afford him sustenance, watches for food which the waves may cast up, or in vain endeavours to extract it from the inexorable deep. But neither of these is in a state of wretchedness comparable to that, which is so often endured in civilised society: multitudes, in all ages, have known it, of whom may be said:—

"Homeless, near a thousand homes they stood,
And near a thousand tables pined, and wanted food."

Justly might I be accused of wasting time in an uncalled-for attempt to excite the feelings of the reader, if systems of political economy, widely spread, did not impugn the principle, and if the safeguards against such extremities were left unimpaired. It is broadly asserted by many, that every man who endeavours to find work, may find it: were this assertion capable of being verified, there still would remain a question, what kind of work, and how far may the labourer be fit for it? For if sedentary work is to be exchanged for standing; and some light and nice exercise of the fingers, to which an artisan has been accustomed all his life, for severe labour of the arms; the best efforts would turn to little account, and occasion would be given for the unthinking and the unfeeling unwarrantably to reproach those who are put upon such employment, as idle, froward, and unworthy of relief, either by law or in any other way! Were this statement correct, there would indeed be an end of the argument, the principle here maintained would be superseded. But, alas! it is far otherwise. That principle, applicable to the benefit of all countries, is indispensable for England, upon whose coast families are perpetually deprived of their support by shipwreck, and where large masses of men are so liable to be thrown out of their ordinary means of gaining bread, by changes in commercial intercourse, subject mainly or solely to the will of foreign powers; by new discoveries in arts and manufactures; and by reckless laws, in conformity with theories of political economy, which, whether right or wrong in the abstract, have proved a scourge to tens of thousands, by the abruptness with which they have been carried into practice.

But it is urged,—refuse altogether compulsory relief to the able-bodied, and the number of those who stand in need of relief will steadily diminish through a conviction of an absolute necessity for greater forethought, and more prudent care of a man's earnings. Undoubtedly it would, but so also would it, and in a much greater degree, if the legislative provisions were retained, and parochial relief administered under the care of the upper classes, as it ought to be. For it has been invariably found, that wherever the funds have been raised and applied under the superintendence of gentlemen and substantial proprietors, acting in vestries, and as overseers, pauperism has diminished accordingly. Proper care in that quarter would effectually check what is felt in some districts to be one of the worst evils in the poor law system, viz. the readiness of small and needy proprietors to join in imposing rates that seemingly subject them to great hardships, while, in fact, this is done with a mutual understanding, that the relief each is ready to bestow upon his still poorer neighbours will be granted to himself, or his relatives, should it hereafter be applied for.

But let us look to inner sentiments of a nobler quality, in order to know what we have to build upon. Affecting proofs occur in every one's experience, who is acquainted with the unfortunate and the indigent, of their unwillingness to derive their subsistence from aught but their own funds or labour, or to be indebted to parochial assistance for the attainment of any object, however dear to them. A case was reported, the other day, from a coroner's inquest, of a pair who, through the space of four years, had carried about their dead infant from house to house, and from lodging to lodging, as their necessities drove them, rather than ask the parish to bear the expense of its interment:—the poor creatures lived in the hope of one day being able to bury their child at their own cost. It must have been heart-rending to see and hear the mother, who had been called upon to account for the state in which the body was found, make this deposition. By some, judging coldly, if not harshly, this conduct might be imputed to an unwarrantable pride, as she and her husband had, it is true, been once in prosperity. But examples, where the spirit of independence works with equal strength, though not with like miserable accompaniments, are frequently to be found even yet among the humblest peasantry and mechanics. There is not, then, sufficient cause for doubting that a like sense of honour may be revived among the people, and their ancient habits of independence restored, without resorting to those severities which the new Poor Law Act has introduced.

But even if the surfaces of things only are to be examined, we have a right to expect that lawgivers should take into account the various tempers and dispositions of mankind: while some are led, by the existence of a legislative provision, into idleness and extravagance, the economical virtues might be cherished in others by the knowledge that, if all their efforts fail, they have in the Poor Laws a "refuge from the storm and a shadow from the heat." Despondency and distraction are no friends to prudence: the springs of industry will relax, if cheerfulness be destroyed by anxiety; without hope men become reckless, and have a sullen pride in adding to the heap of their own wretchedness. He who feels that he is abandoned by his fellow-men will be almost irresistibly driven to care little for himself; will lose his self-respect accordingly, and with that loss what remains to him of virtue?

With all due deference to the particular experience, and general intelligence of the individuals who framed the Act, and of those who in and out of parliament have approved of and supported it; it may be said, that it proceeds too much upon the presumption that it is a labouring man's own fault if he be not, as the phrase is, beforehand with the world. But the most prudent are liable to be thrown back by sickness, cutting them off from labour, and causing to them expense: and who but has observed how distress creeps upon multitudes without misconduct of their own; and merely from a gradual fall in the price of labour, without a correspondent one in the price of provisions; so that men who may have ventured upon the marriage state with a fair prospect of maintaining their families in comfort and happiness, see them reduced to a pittance which no effort of theirs can increase? Let it be remembered, also, that there are thousands with whom vicious habits of expense are not the cause why they do not store up their gains; but they are generous and kind-hearted, and ready to help their kindred and friends; moreover, they have a faith in Providence that those who have been prompt to assist others, will not be left destitute, should they themselves come to need. By acting from these blended feelings, numbers have rendered themselves incapable of standing up against a sudden reverse. Nevertheless, these men, in common with all who have the misfortune to be in want, if many theorists had their wish, would be thrown upon one or other of those three sharp points of condition before adverted to, from which the intervention of law has hitherto saved them.

All that has been said tends to show how the principle contended for makes the gift of life more valuable, and has, it may be hoped, led to the conclusion that its legitimate operation is to make men worthier of that gift; in other words, not to degrade but to exalt human nature. But the subject must not be dismissed without adverting to the indirect influence of the same principle upon the moral sentiments of a people among whom it is embodied in law. In our criminal jurisprudence there is a maxim, deservedly eulogised, that it is better that ten guilty persons should escape, than that one innocent man should suffer; so, also, might it be maintained, with regard to the Poor Laws, that it is better for the interests of humanity among the people at large, that ten undeserving should partake of the funds provided, than that one morally good man, through want of relief, should either have his principles corrupted, or his energies destroyed; than that such a one should either be driven to do wrong, or be cast to the earth in utter hopelessness. In France, the English maxim of criminal jurisprudence is reversed; there, it is deemed better that ten innocent men should suffer, than one guilty escape: in France, there is no universal provision for the poor; and we may judge of the small value set upon human life in the metropolis of that country, by merely noticing the disrespect with which, after death, the body is treated, not by the thoughtless vulgar, but in schools of anatomy, presided over by men allowed to be, in their own art and in physical science, among the most enlightened in the world. In the East, where countries are overrun with population as with a weed, infinitely more respect is shown to the remains of the deceased; and what a bitter mockery is it, that this insensibility should be found where civil polity is so busy in minor regulations, and ostentatiously careful to gratify the luxurious propensities, whether social or intellectual, of the multitude! Irreligion is, no doubt, much concerned with this offensive disrespect, shown to the bodies of the dead in France; but it is mainly attributable to the state in which so many of the living are left by the absence of compulsory provision for the indigent so humanely established by the law of England.

Sights of abject misery, perpetually recurring, harden the heart of the community. In the perusal of history, and of works of fiction, we are not, indeed, unwilling to have our commiseration excited by such objects of distress as they present to us; but, in the concerns of real life, men know that such emotions are not given to be indulged for their own sakes: there, the conscience declares to them that sympathy must be followed by action; and if there exist a previous conviction that the power to relieve is utterly inadequate to the demand, the eye shrinks from communication with wretchedness, and pity and compassion languish, like any other qualities that are deprived of their natural aliment. Let these considerations be duly weighed by those who trust to the hope that an increase of private charity, with all its advantages of superior discrimination, would more than compensate for the abandonment of those principles, the wisdom of which has been here insisted upon. How discouraging, also, would be the sense of injustice, which could not fail to arise in the minds of the well-disposed, if the burden of supporting the poor, a burden of which the selfish have hitherto by compulsion borne a share, should now, or hereafter, be thrown exclusively upon the benevolent.

By having put an end to the Slave Trade and Slavery, the British people are exalted in the scale of humanity; and they cannot but feel so, if they look into themselves, and duly consider their relation to God and their fellow-creatures. That was a noble advance; but a retrograde movement will assuredly be made, if ever the principle, which has been here defended, should be either avowedly abandoned or but ostensibly retained.

But after all, there may be little reason to apprehend permanent injury from any experiment that may be tried. On the one side will be human nature rising up in her own defence, and on the other prudential selfishness acting to the same purpose, from a conviction that, without a compulsory provision for the exigencies of the labouring multitude, that degree of ability to regulate the price of labour, which is indispensable for the reasonable interest of arts and manufactures, cannot, in Great Britain, be upheld.

II. In a poem of the foregoing collection, allusion is made to the state of the workmen congregated in manufactories. In order to relieve many of the evils to which that class of society are subject and to establish a better harmony between them and their employers, it would be well to repeal such laws as prevent the formation of joint-stock companies. There are, no doubt, many and great obstacles to the formation and salutary working of these societies, inherent in the mind of those whom they would obviously benefit. But the combinations of masters to keep down, unjustly, the price of labour would be fairly checked by them, as far as they were practicable; they would encourage economy, inasmuch as they would enable a man to draw profit from his savings, by investing them in buildings or machinery for processes of manufacture with which he was habitually connected. His little capital would then be working for him while he was at rest or asleep; he would more clearly perceive the necessity of capital for carrying on great works; he would better learn to respect the larger portions of it in the hands of others; he would be less tempted to join in unjust combinations; and, for the sake of his own property, if not for higher reasons, he would be slow to promote local disturbance, or endanger public tranquillity; he would, at least, be loth to act in that way knowingly: for it is not to be denied that such societies might be nurseries of opinions unfavourable to a mixed constitution of government, like that of Great Britain. The democratic and republican spirit which they might be apt to foster would not, however, be dangerous in itself, but only as it might act without being sufficiently counterbalanced, either by landed proprietorship, or by a Church extending itself so as to embrace an ever-growing and ever-shifting population of mechanics and artisans. But if the tendencies of such societies would be to make the men prosper who might belong to them, rulers and legislators should rejoice in the result, and do their duty to the state by upholding and extending the influence of that Church to which it owes, in so great a measure, its safety, its prosperity, and its glory.

This, in the temper of the present times, may be difficult, but it is become indispensable, since large towns in great numbers have sprung up, and others have increased tenfold, with little or no dependence upon the gentry and the landed proprietors; and apart from those mitigated feudal institutions, which, till of late, have acted so powerfully upon the composition of the House of Commons. Now it may be affirmed that, in quarters where there is not an attachment to the Church, or the landed aristocracy, and a pride in supporting them, there the people will dislike both, and be ready, upon such incitements as are perpetually recurring, to join in attempts to overthrow them. There is no neutral ground here: from want of due attention to the state of society in large towns and manufacturing districts, and ignorance or disregard of these obvious truths, innumerable well-meaning persons became zealous supporters of a Reform Bill, the qualities and powers of which, whether destructive or constructive, they would otherwise have been afraid of; and even the framers of that bill, swayed as they might be by party resentments and personal ambition, could not have gone so far, had not they too been lamentably ignorant or neglectful of the same truths both of fact and philosophy.

But let that pass; and let no opponent of the bill be tempted to compliment his own foresight, by exaggerating the mischiefs and dangers that have sprung from it: let not time be wasted in profitless regrets; and let those party distinctions vanish to their very names that have separated men who, whatever course they may have pursued, have ever had a bond of union in the wish to save the limited monarchy, and those other institutions that have, under Providence, rendered for so long a period of time this country the happiest and worthiest of which there is any record since the foundation of civil society.

III. A philosophic mind is best pleased when looking at religion in its spiritual bearing; as a guide of conduct, a solace under affliction, and a support amid the instabilities of mortal life; but the Church having been forcibly brought by political considerations to my notice, while treating of the labouring classes, I cannot forbear saying a few words upon that momentous topic.

There is a loud clamour for extensive change in that department. The clamour would be entitled to more respect if they who are the most eager to swell it with their voices were not generally the most ignorant of the real state of the Church, and the service it renders to the community. Reform is the word employed. Let us pause and consider what sense it is apt to carry, and how things are confounded by a lax use of it. The great religious Reformation, in the sixteenth century, did not profess to be a new construction, but a restoration of something fallen into decay, or put out of sight. That familiar and justifiable use of the word seems to have paved the way for fallacies with respect to the term reform, which it is difficult to escape from. Were we to speak of improvement, and the correction of abuses, we should run less risk of being deceived ourselves, or of misleading others. We should be less likely to fall blindly into the belief, that the change demanded is a renewal of something that has existed before, and that, therefore, we have experience on our side; nor should we be equally tempted to beg the question, that the change for which we are eager must be advantageous. From generation to generation, men are the dupes of words; and it is painful to observe, that so many of our species are most tenacious of those opinions which they have formed with the least consideration. They who are the readiest to meddle with public affairs, whether in church or state, fly to generalities, that they may be eased from the trouble of thinking about particulars; and thus is deputed to mechanical instrumentality the work which vital knowledge only can do well.

"Abolish pluralities, have a resident incumbent in every parish," is a favourite cry; but, without adverting to other obstacles in the way of this specious scheme, it may be asked what benefit would accrue from its indiscriminate adoption to counterbalance the harm it would introduce, by nearly extinguishing the order of curates, unless the revenues of the church should grow with the population, and be greatly increased in many thinly peopled districts, especially among the parishes of the North.

The order of curates is so beneficial, that some particular notice of it seems to be required in this place. For a church poor as, relatively to the numbers of people, that of England is, and probably will continue to be, it is no small advantage to have youthful servants, who will work upon the wages of hope and expectation. Still more advantageous is it to have, by means of this order, young men scattered over the country, who being more detached from the temporal concerns of the benefice, have more leisure for improvement and study, and are less subject to be brought into secular collision with those who are under their spiritual guardianship. The curate, if he reside at a distance from the incumbent, undertakes the requisite responsibilities of a temporal kind, in that modified way which prevents him, as a new-comer, from being charged with selfishness; while it prepares him for entering upon a benefice of his own, with something of a suitable experience. If he should act under and in co-operation with a resident incumbent, the gain is mutual. His studies will probably be assisted; and his training, managed by a superior, will not be liable to relapse in matters of prudence, seemliness, or in any of the highest cares of his functions; and by way of return for these benefits to the pupil, it will often happen that the zeal of a middle-aged or declining incumbent will be revived, by being in near communion with the ardour of youth, when his own efforts may have languished through a melancholy consciousness that they have not produced as much good among his flock as, when he first entered upon the charge, he fondly hoped.

Let one remark, and that not the least important, be added. A curate, entering for the first time upon his office, comes from college after a course of expense, and with such inexperience in the use of money, that, in his new situation, he is apt to fall unawares into pecuniary difficulties. If this happens to him, much more likely is it to happen to the youthful incumbent; whose relations, to his parishioners and to society, are more complicated; and, his income being larger and independent of another, a costlier style of living is required of him by public opinion. If embarrassment should ensue, and with that unavoidably some loss of respectability, his future usefulness will be proportionably impaired: not so with the curate, for he can easily remove and start afresh with a stock of experience and an unblemished reputation; whereas the early indiscretions of an incumbent being rarely forgotten, may be impediments to the efficacy of his ministry for the remainder of his life. The same observations would apply with equal force to doctrine. A young minister is liable to errors, from his notions being either too lax or overstrained. In both cases it would prove injurious that the error should be remembered, after study and reflection, with advancing years, shall have brought him to a clearer discernment of the truth, and better judgment in the application of it.

It must be acknowledged that, among the regulations of ecclesiastical polity, none at first view are more attractive than that which prescribes for every parish a resident incumbent. How agreeable to picture to one's self, as has been done by poets and romance-writers, from Chaucer down to Goldsmith, a man devoted to his ministerial office, with not a wish or a thought ranging beyond the circuit of its cares! Nor is it in poetry and fiction only that such characters are found; they are scattered, it is hoped not sparingly, over real life, especially in sequestered and rural districts, where there is but small influx of new inhabitants, and little change of occupation. The spirit of the Gospel, unaided by acquisitions of profane learning and experience in the world,—that spirit, and the obligations of the sacred office may, in such situations, suffice to effect most of what is needful. But for the complex state of society that prevails in England, much more is required, both in large towns, and in many extensive districts of the country. A minister there should not only be irreproachable in manners and morals, but accomplished in learning, as far as is possible without sacrifice of the least of his pastoral duties. As necessary, perhaps more so, is it that he should be a citizen as well as a scholar; thoroughly acquainted with the structure of society, and the constitution of civil government, and able to reason upon both with the most expert; all ultimately in order to support the truths of Christianity, and to diffuse its blessings.

A young man coming fresh from the place of his education, cannot have brought with him these accomplishments; and if the scheme of equalising church incomes, which many advisers are much bent upon, be realised, so that there should be little or no secular inducement for a clergyman to desire a removal from the spot where he may chance to have been first set down; surely not only opportunities for obtaining the requisite qualifications would be diminished, but the motives for desiring to obtain them would be proportionably weakened. And yet these qualifications are indispensable for the diffusion of that knowledge, by which alone the political philosophy of the New Testament can be rightly expounded, and its precepts adequately enforced. In these times, when the press is daily exercising so great a power over the minds of the people, for wrong or for right as may happen, that preacher ranks among the first of benefactors who, without stooping to the direct treatment of current politics and passing events, can furnish infallible guidance through the delusions that surround them; and who, appealing to the sanctions of Scripture, may place the grounds of its injunctions in so clear a light, that disaffection shall cease to be cultivated as a laudable propensity, and loyalty cleansed from the dishonour of a blind and prostrate obedience.

It is not, however, in regard to civic duties alone, that this knowledge in a minister of the Gospel is important; it is still more so for softening and subduing private and personal discontents. In all places, and at all times, men have gratuitously troubled themselves, because their survey of the dispensations of Providence has been partial and narrow; but now that readers are so greatly multiplied, men judge as they are taught, and repinings are engendered everywhere, by imputations being cast upon the government; and are prolonged or aggravated by being ascribed to misconduct or injustice in rulers, when the individual himself only is in fault. If a Christian pastor be competent to deal with these humours, as they may be dealt with, and by no members of society so successfully, both from more frequent and more favourable opportunities of intercourse, and by aid of the authority with which he speaks; he will be a teacher of moderation, a dispenser of the wisdom that blunts approaching distress by submission to God's will, and lightens, by patience, grievances which cannot be removed.

We live in times when nothing, of public good at least, is generally acceptable, but what we believe can be traced to preconceived intention, and specific acts and formal contrivances of human understanding. A Christian instructor thoroughly accomplished would be a standing restraint upon such presumptuousness of judgment, by impressing the truth that—

“In the unreasoning progress of the world
A wiser spirit is at work for us,
A better eye than ours.”—MS.

Revelation points to the purity and peace of a future world; but our sphere of duty is upon earth; and the relations of impure and conflicting things to each other must be understood, or we shall be perpetually going wrong, in all but goodness of intention; and goodness of intention will itself relax through frequent disappointment. How desirable, then, is it, that a minister of the Gospel should be versed in the knowledge of existing facts, and be accustomed to a wide range of social experience! Nor is it less desirable for the purpose of counterbalancing and tempering in his own mind that ambition with which spiritual power is as apt to be tainted as any other species of power which men covet or possess.

It must be obvious that the scope of the argument is to discourage an attempt which would introduce into the Church of England an equality of income, and station, upon the model of that of Scotland. The sounder part of the Scottish nation know what good their ancestors derived from their church, and feel how deeply the living generation is indebted to it. They respect and love it, as accommodated in so great a measure to a comparatively poor country, through the far greater portion of which prevails a uniformity of employment; but the acknowledged deficiency of theological learning among the clergy of that church is easily accounted for by this very equality. What else may be wanting there, it would be unpleasant to inquire, and might prove invidious to determine: one thing, however, is clear; that in all countries the temporalities of the Church Establishment should bear an analogy to the state of society, otherwise it cannot diffuse its influence through the whole community. In a country so rich and luxurious as England, the character of its clergy must unavoidably sink, and their influence be everywhere impaired, if individuals from the upper ranks, and men of leading talents, are to have no inducements to enter into that body but such as are purely spiritual. And this “tinge of secularity” is no reproach to the clergy, nor does it imply a deficiency of spiritual endowments. Parents and guardians, looking forward to sources of honourable maintenance for their children and wards, often direct their thoughts early towards the church, being determined partly by outward circumstances, and partly by indications of seriousness, or intellectual fitness. It is natural that a boy or youth, with such a prospect before him, should turn his attention to those studies, and be led into those habits of reflection, which will in some degree tend to prepare him for the duties he is hereafter to undertake. As he draws nearer to the time when he will be called to these duties, he is both led and compelled to examine the Scriptures. He becomes more and more sensible of their truth. Devotion grows in him; and what might begin in temporal considerations, will end (as in a majority of instances we trust it does) in a spiritual-mindedness not unworthy of that Gospel, the lessons of which he is to teach, and the faith of which he is to inculcate. Not inappositely may be here repeated an observation which, from its obviousness and importance, must have been frequently made, viz. that the impoverishing of the clergy, and bringing their incomes much nearer to a level, would not cause them to become less worldly-minded: the emoluments, howsoever reduced, would be as eagerly sought for, but by men from lower classes in society; men who, by their manners, habits, abilities, and the scanty measure of their attainments, would unavoidably be less fitted for their station, and less competent to discharge its duties.

Visionary notions have in all ages been affoat upon the subject of best providing for the clergy; notions which have been sincerely entertained by good men, with a view to the improvement of that order, and eagerly caught at and dwelt upon, by the designing, for its degradation and disparagement. Some are beguiled by what they call the voluntary system, not seeing (what stares one in the face at the very threshold) that they who stand in most need of religious instruction are unconscious of the want, and therefore cannot reasonably be expected to make any sacrifices in order to supply it. Will the licentious, the sensual, and the depraved, take from the means of their gratifications and pursuits, to support a discipline that cannot advance without uprooting the trees that bear the fruit which they devour so greedily? Will they pay the price of that seed whose harvest is to be reaped in an invisible world? A voluntary system for the religious exigencies of a people numerous and circumstanced as we are! Not more absurd would it be to expect that a knot of boys should draw upon the pittance of their pocket-money to build schools, or out of the abundance of their discretion be able to select fit masters to teach and keep them in order! Some, who clearly perceive the incompetence and folly of such a scheme for the agricultural part of the people, nevertheless think it feasible in large towns, where the rich might subscribe for the religious instruction of the poor. Alas! they know little of the thick darkness that spreads over the streets and alleys of our large towns. The parish of Lambeth, a few years since, contained not more than one church and three or four small proprietary chapels, while dissenting chapels, of every denomination were still more scantily found there; yet the inhabitants of the parish amounted at that time to upwards of 50,000. Were the parish church and the chapels of the Establishment existing there, an impediment to the spread of the Gospel among that mass of people? Who shall dare to say so? But if any one, in the face of the fact which has just been stated, and in opposition to authentic reports to the same effect from various other quarters, should still contend, that a voluntary system is sufficient for the spread and maintenance of religion, we would ask, what kind of religion? wherein would it differ, among the many, from deplorable fanaticism?

For the preservation of the Church Establishment, all men, whether they belong to it or not, could they perceive their true interest, would be strenuous: but how inadequate are its provisions for the needs of the country! and how much is it to be regretted that, while its zealous friends yield to alarms on account of the hostility of dissent, they should so much over-rate the danger to be apprehended from that quarter, and almost overlook the fact that hundreds of thousands of our fellow-countrymen, though formally and nominally of the Church of England, never enter her places of worship, neither have they communication with her ministers! This deplorable state of things was partly produced by a decay of zeal among the rich and influential, and partly by a want of due expansive power in the constitution of the Establishment as regulated by law. Private benefactors, in their efforts to build and endow churches, have been frustrated, or too much impeded by legal obstacles: these, where they are unreasonable or unfitted for the times, ought to be removed; and, keeping clear of intolerance and injustice, means should be used to render the presence and powers of the church commensurate with the wants of a shifting and still-increasing population.

This cannot be effected, unless the English Government vindicate the truth, that, as her church exists for the benefit of all (though not in equal degree), whether of her communion or not, all should be made to contribute to its support. If this ground be abandoned, cause will be given to fear that a moral wound may be inflicted upon the heart of the English people, for which a remedy cannot be speedily provided by the utmost efforts which the members of the Church will themselves be able to make.

But let the friends of the church be of good courage. Powers are at work, by which, under Divine Providence, she may be strengthened and the sphere of her usefulness extended; not by alterations in her Liturgy, accommodated to this or that demand of finical taste, nor by cutting off this or that from her articles or Canons, to which the scrupulous or the overwearing may object. Covert schism, and open nonconformity, would survive after alterations, however promising in the eyes of those whose subtlety had been exercised in making them. Latitudinarianism is the parheliion of liberty of conscience, and will ever successfully lay claim to a divided worship. Among Presbyterians, Socinians, Baptists, and Independents, there will always be found numbers who will tire of their several creeds, and some will come over to the Church. Conventicles may disappear, congregations in each denomination may fall into decay or be broken up, but the conquests which the National Church ought chiefly to aim at, lie among the thousands and tens of thousands of the unhappy outcasts who grow up with no religion at all. The wants of these cannot but be feelingly remembered. Whatever may be the disposition of the new constitutions under the reformed parliament, and the course which the men of their choice may be inclined or compelled to follow, it may be confidently hoped that individuals acting in their private capacities, will endeavour to make up for the deficiencies of the legislature. Is it too much to expect that proprietors of large estates, where the inhabitants are without religious instruction, or where it is sparingly supplied, will deem it their duty to take part in this good work; and that thriving manufacturers and merchants will, in their several neighbourhoods, be sensible of the like obligation, and act upon it with generous rivalry?

Moreover, the force of public opinion is rapidly increasing: and some may bend to it, who are not so happy as to be swayed by a higher motive; especially they who derive large incomes from lay-impropriations, in tracts of country where ministers are few and meagrely provided for. A claim still stronger may be acknowledged by those who, round their superb habitations, or elsewhere, walk over vast estates which were lavished upon their ancestors by royal favouritism or purchased at insignificant prices after church-spoliation; such proprietors, though not conscience-stricken (there is no call for that) may be prompted to make a return for which their tenantry and dependents will learn to bless their names. An impulse has been given; an accession of means from these several sources, co-operating with a well-considered change in the distribution of some parts of the property at present possessed by the church, a change scrupulously founded upon due respect to law and justice, will, we trust, bring about so much of what her friends desire, that the rest may be calmly waited for, with thankfulness for what shall have been obtained.

Let it not be thought unbecoming in a layman, to have treated at length a subject with which the clergy are more intimately conversant. All may, without impropriety, speak of what deeply concerns all; nor need an apology be offered for going over ground which has been trod before so ably and so often: without pretending, however, to anything of novelty, either in matter or manner, something may have been offered to view, which will save the writer from the imputation of having little to recommend his labour, but goodness of intention.

It was with reference to thoughts and feelings expressed in verse, that I entered upon the above notices, and with verse I will conclude. The passage is extracted from my MSS. written above thirty years ago: it turns upon the individual dignity which humbleness of social condition does not preclude, but frequently promotes. It has no direct bearing upon clubs for the discussion of public affairs, nor upon political or trade-unions; but if a single workman—who, being a member of one of those clubs, runs the risk of becoming an agitator, or who, being enrolled in a union, must be left without a will of his own, and therefore a slave—should read these lines, and be touched by them, I should indeed rejoice, and little would I care for losing credit as a poet with intemperate critics, who think differently from me upon political philosophy or public measures, if the sober-minded admit that, in general views, my affections have been moved, and my imagination exercised, under and for the guidance of reason.

“ Here might I pause, and bend in reverence
To Nature, and the power of human minds;
To men as they are men within themselves.
How oft high service is performed within,
When all the external man is rude in show;
Not like a temple rich with pomp and gold,
But a mere mountain chapel that protects
Its simple worshippers from sun and shower!
Of these, said I, shall be my song; of these,
If future years mature me for the task,
Will I record the praises, making verse
Deal boldly with substantial things—in truth
And sanctity of passion, speak of these,
That justice may be done, obeisance paid
Where it is due. Thus haply shall I teach,
Inspire, through unadulterated ears
Pour rapture, tenderness, and hope; my theme
No other than the very heart of man,
As found among the best of those who live,
Not unexalted by religious faith,
Nor uninformed by books, good books, though few,
In Nature's presence: thence may I select Sorrow that is not sorrow, but delight,
And miserable love that is not pain
To hear of, for the glory that redounds
Therefrom to human kind, and what we are.
Be mine to follow with no timid step.
Where knowledge leads me; it shall be my pride
That I have dared to tread this holy ground,
Speaking no dream, but things oracular,
Matter not lightly to be heard by those
Who to the letter of the outward promise
Do read the invisible soul; by men adroit
In speech, and for communion with the world Accomplished, minds whose faculties are then
Most active when they are most eloquent,
And elevated most when most admired.
Men may be found of other mould than these;
Who are their own upholders, to themselves
Encouragement and energy, and will;
Expressing liveliest thoughts in lively words
As native passion dictates. Others, too,
There are, among the walks of homely life,
Still higher, men for contemplation framed;
Shy, and unpractised in the strife of phrase;
Meek men, whose very souls perhaps would sink
Beneath them, summoned to such intercourse.
Theirs is the language of the heavens, the power,
The thought, the image, and the silent joy;
Words are but under-agents in their souls;
When they are grasping with their greatest strength
They do not breathe among them; this I speak
In gratitude to God, who feeds our hearts
For his own service, knoweth, loveth us,
When we are unregarded by the world.”

INDEX OF FIRST LINES.

A barking sound the Shepherd hears	491	And what is Penance with her knotted thong	433
A Book came forth of late, called PETER BELL	254	And what melodious sounds at times prevail	430
A bright-haired company of youthful slaves	421	An Orpheus! an Orpheus! yes, Faith may grow bold	188
Abruptly paused the strife;—the field throughout	322	Another year!—another deadly blow	310
A dark plume fetch me from yon blasted yew	380	A pen—to register; a key	499
Adieu, Rydalian Laurels! that have grown	463	A Pilgrim, when the summer day	167
Advance—come forth from thy Tyrolean ground	314	A plague on your languages, German and Norse	484
Aerial Rock—whose solitary brow	253	A pleasant music floats along the Mere	426
A famous man is Robin Hood	290	A Poet!—He hath put his heart to school	277
Affections lose their objects; Time brings forth	531	A point of life between my Parent's dust	464
A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by	253	Army of Clouds! ye winged Host in troops	229
A genial hearth, a hospitable board	444	A Rock there is whose homely front	224
Age! twine thy brows with fresh spring flowers	293	A Roman Master stands on Grecian ground	312
Ah, think how one compelled for life to abide	519	Around a wild and woody hill	337
Ah, when the Body, round which in love we clung	423	Arran! a single-crested Teneriffe	471
Ah! where is Palafox? Nor tongue nor pen	318	Art thou a Statist in the van	485
Ah why deceive ourselves! by no mere fit	515	Art thou the bird whom Man loves best	162
Aid, glorious Martyrs, from your fields of light	437	As faith thus sanctified the warrior's crest	430
Alas! what boots the long laborious quest	315	—A simple Child	83
A little onward lend thy guiding hand	496	As indignation mastered grief, my tongue	367
All praise the Likeness by thy skill portrayed	279	As leaves are to the tree whereon they grow	516
A love-lorn Maid, at some far-distant time	381	A slumber did my spirit seal	187
Ambition—following down this far-famed slope	345	As often as I murmur here	168
Amid a fertile region green with wood	392	As star that shines dependent upon star	444
Amid the smoke of cities did you pass	147	“As the cold aspect of a sunless way”	267
Amid this dance of objects sadness steals	335	A Stream, to mingle with your favourite Dee	272
Among a grave fraternity of Monks	510	A sudden conflict rises from the swell	442
Among all lovely things my Love had been	622	As, when a storm hath ceased, the birds re- gain	420
Among the dwellers in the silent fields	540	As with the Stream our voyage we pursue	428
Among the dwellings framed by birds	168	At early dawn, or rather when the air	269
Among the mountains were we nursed, loved Stream	464	A Traveller on the skirt of Sarum's Plain	24
A month, sweet Little-ones, is past	81	A trouble, not of clouds, or weeping rain	386
An age hath been when Earth was proud	496	At the corner of Wood Street, when day- light appears	187
A narrow girdle of rough stones and crags	148	Avant all specious pendency of mind	319
And has the Sun his flaming chariot driven	618	A voice, from long-expecting thousands sent	442
And is it among rude untutored Dales	315	A volant Tribe of Bards on earth are found	259
And is this—Yarrow?— This the Stream	301	Avon—a precious, an immortal name	392
And, not in vain embodied to the sight	430	A weight of awe, not easy to be borne	477
“And shall,” the Pontiff asks, “profaneness flow”	426	A whirl-blast from behind the hill	154
		A winged Goddess—clothed in vesture wrought	334
		A youth too certain of his power to wade	469

Bard of the Fleece, whose skilful genius made	254	Calvert! it must not be unheard by them ..	259
Beaumont! it was thy wish that I should rear	251	"Change me, some God, into that breathing rose"	377
Before I see another day	113	Chatsworth! thy stately mansion, and the pride	275
Before the world had passed her time of youth	518	Child of loud-throated War! the mountain Stream	290
"Begone, thou fond presumptuous Elf"	155	Child of the clouds! remote from every taint	376
Begulled into forgetfulness of care	508	Clarkson! it was an obstinate hill to climb	312
Behold an emblem of our human mind	551	Closing the sacred Book which long has fed	448
Behold a pupil of the monkish gown	425	Clouds, lingering yet, extend in solid bars ..	313
Behold her, single in the field	289	Coldly we spake. The Saxons, overpowered	426
Behold, within the leafy shade	79	Come ye—who, if (which Heaven avert!) the Land	310
"Beloved Vale!" I said, "when I shall con	250	Companion! by whose buoyant Spirit cheered	352
Beneath the concave of an April sky	226	Complacent Fictions were they, yet the same	359
Beneath these fruit-tree boughs that shed ..	159
Beneath yon eastern ridge, the craggy bound	547	Dark and more dark the shades of evening fell	262
Be this the chosen site; the virgin sod	450	Darkness surrounds us; seeking, we are lost	419
Between two sister moorland rills	165	Days passed—and Monte Calvo would not clear	360
Bishops and Priests, blessed are ye, if deep	444	Days undefiled by luxury or sloth	515
Black Demons hovering o'er his mitred head	428	Dear be the Church that, watching o'er the needs	445
Bleak season was it, turbulent and wild	622	Dear Child of Nature, let them rail	218
Blest is this Isle—our native Land	533	Dear Fellow-travellers! think not that the Muse	333
Blest Statesman He, whose Mind's unselfish will	514	Dear native regions, I foretell	1
Bold words affirmed, in days when faith was strong	468	Dear Reliques! from a pit of vilest mould ..	325
Brave Schill! by death delivered, take thy flight	317	Dear to the Loves, and to the Graces vowed	465
Bright Flower! whose home is everywhere	485	Deep is the lamentation! Not alone	435
Broken in fortune, but in mind entire	470	Degenerate Douglas! oh, the unworthy Lord	292
—Brook and road	186	Deign, Sovereign Mistress! to accept a lay	628
Brook! whose society the Poet seeks	268	Departed Child! I could forget thee once ..	118
Bruges I saw attired with golden light	333	Departing summer hath assumed	498
But Cythera, studious to invent	624	Deplorable his lot who tills the ground	429
But here no cannon thunders to the gale ..	384	Desire we past illusions to recall	469
But liberty, and triumphs on the Main	450	Desponding Father! mark this altered bough	266
But, to outweigh all harm, the sacred Book	435	Despond who will—I heard a voice exclaim	471
But, to remote Northumbria's royal Hall ..	422	Destined to war from very infancy	575
But what if One, through grove or flowery mead	424	Did pangs of grief for lenient time too keen	470
But whence came they who for the Saviour Lord	431	Discourse was deemed Man's noblest attri- bute	489
By a blest Husband guided, Mary came	576	Dishonoured Rock and Ruin! that, by law	388
By antique Fancy trimmed—though lowly, bred	339	Dogmatic Teachers, of the snow-white fur ..	268
By Art's bold privilege Warrior and War- horse stand	278	Doomed as we are our native dust	337
By chain yet stronger must the Soul be tied	446	Doubling and doubling with laborious walk	389
By Moscow self-devoted to a blaze	322	Down a swift Stream, thus far, a bold de- sign	443
By playful smiles, (alas! too oft)	577	Dread hour! when, upheaved by war's sul- phurous blast	349
By such examples moved to unbought pains	424	Driven in by Autumn's sharpening air	143
By their floating mill	166
By vain affections unenthralled	576
Call not the royal Swede unfortunate	317
Calm as an under-current, strong to draw ..	442
Calm is all nature as a resting wheel	1
Calm is the fragrant air, and loth to lose ..	453

Two Voices are there; one is of the sea....	306	"What know we of the Blest above	338
Under the shadow of a stately Pile.....	365	What lovelier home could gentle Fancy choose	335
Ungrateful Country, if thou e'er forget	442	What mischief cleaves to unsubdued regret	458
Unless to Peter's Chair the viewless wind ..	428	What need of clamorous bells, or ribands gay	256
Unquiet childhood here by special grace ..	274	What strong allurements draws, what spirit guides	281
Untouched through all severity of cold....	276	What though the Accused, upon his own appeal	500
Up, Timothy, up with your staff and away..	119	What though the Italian pencil wrought not here	339
Up to the throne of God is borne.....	506	What way does the Wind come? What way does he go	80
Up! up! my Friend, and quit your books..	481	"What, you are stepping westward?"—"Yea"	289
Up with me! up with me into the clouds ..	159	When Alpine Vales threw forth a suppliant cry	441
Urged by Ambition, who with subtlest skill	425	Whence that low voice?—A whisper from the heart	381
Uttered by whom, or how inspired—designed	336	When, far and wide, swift as the beams of morn	312
Vallombrosa! I longed in thy shadiest wood	345	When first, descending from the moorlands	586
"Vallombrosa—I longed in thy shadiest wood	364	When haughty expectations prostrate lie..	265
Vanguard of Liberty, ye men of Kent.....	309	When here with Carthage Rome to conflict came	361
"Wait, prithee, wait!" this answer Lesbia threw	274	When human touch (as monkish books attest)	267
Wanderer! that stoop'st so low, and com'st so near	459	When I have borne in memory what has tamed	307
Wansfell! this Household has a favoured lot	281	When in the antique age of bow and spear	534
Ward of the Law!—dread Shadow of a King	271	When, looking on the present face of things	309
Was it to disenchant, and to undo	335	When Love was born of heavenly line	620
Was the aim frustrated by force or guile ..	269	When Philoctetes in the Lemnian isle	273
Watch, and be firm! for, soul-subduing vice	420	When Ruth was left half desolate	192
"Weak is the will of Man, his judgment blind	259	When Severn's sweeping flood had over- thrown	627
We can endure that He should waste our lands	319	When the soft hand of sleep had closed the latch	323
Weep not, beloved Friends! nor let the air	573	When thy great soul was freed from mortal chains	425
We gaze—nor grieve to think that we must die	627	When, to the attractions of the busy world	150
We had a female Passenger who came	305	Where are they now, those wanton Boys ..	191
We have not passed into a doleful City	475	Where art thou, my beloved Son	116
Well have yon Railway Labourers to THIS ground	283	Where be the noisy followers of the game..	349
Well may'st thou halt—and gaze with brightening eye	250
Well sang the Bard who called the grave, in strains	389

Where be the temples which in Britain's Isle	102	With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st the sky	266
Where holy ground begins, unhallowed ends	271	Within her gilded cage confined	165
Where lies the Land to which you Ship must go	258	Within our happy Castle there dwelt One..	107
Where lies the truth? has Man, in wisdom's creed	461	Within the mind strong fancies work.....	214
Where long and deeply hath been fixed the root	431	With little here to do or see	158
Where towers are crushed, and unforbidden weeds	367	"With sacrifice before the rising morn ...	209
Where will they stop, those breathing Powers	228	With Ships the sea was sprinkled far and nigh	258
While Anna's peers and early playmates tread	273	Woe to the Crown that doth the Cowl obey	425
While beams of orient light shoot wide and high	282	"Woe to you, Prelates! rioting in ease ...	433
While flowing rivers yield a blameless sport	254	Woman! the Power who left His throne on high	447
While from the purpling east departs	506	Wouldst thou be gathered to Christ's chosen flock.....	626
While Merlin paced the Cornish sands	369	Wouldst thou be taught, when sleep has taken flight	229
While not a leaf seems faded; while the fields	263	Would that our scrupulous Sires had dared to leave	448
While poring Antiquarians search the ground	275	Ye Apennines! with all your fertile vales ..	352
While the Poor gather round, till the end of time	393	Ye brood of Conscience—Spectres! that frequent	518
"Who but hails the sight with pleasure ..	163	Ye Lime-trees, ranged before this hallowed Urn	546
Who but is pleased to watch the moon on high	461	Ye sacred Nurseries of blooming Youth...	270
Who comes—with rapture greeted, and caressed	441	Ye shadowy Beings, that have rights and claims	473
Who fancied what a pretty sight	162	Yes! hope may with my strong desire keep pace.....	256
Who is the happy Warrior? Who is he ...	493	Yes, if the intensities of hope and fear ...	445
Who ponders National events shall find ..	514	Yes, it was the mountain Echo.....	209
Who rashly strove thy Image to portray ..	511	Yes! thou art fair, yet be not moved	111
Who rises on the banks of Seine	311	Yes, though He well may tremble at the sound	520
Who swerves from innocence, who makes divorce	383	Ye Storms, resound the praises of your King	322
Who weeps for strangers? Many wept ...	623	Yet are they here the same unbroken knot	192
Why art thou silent! Is thy love a plant ..	277	"Yet life," you say, "is life; we have seen and see"	488
Why cast ye back upon the Gallic shore...	349	Yet many a Novice of the cloistral shade ..	434
Why, Minstrel, these untuneful murmurings	252	Yet more,—round many a Convent's blazing fire	433
Why should the Enthusiast, journeying through this Isle.....	463	Ye, too, must fly before a chasing hand....	434
Why should we weep or mourn, Angelic boy	581	Ye Trees! whose slender roots entwine ...	366
Why sleeps the future, as a snake enrolled	452	Yet Truth is keenly sought for, and the wind.....	441
Why stand we gazing on the sparkling Brine	469	Yet, yet, Biscayans! we must meet our Foes	313
Why, William, on that old grey stone ...	481	Ye vales and hills whose beauty hither drew	587
Wild Redbreast! hadst thou at Jemima's lip	272	You call it, "Love lies bleeding,"—so you may	169
Wings have we,—and as far as we can go ..	488	You have heard "a Spanish Lady	139
Wisdom and Spirit of the universe	89	YOUNG ENGLAND—what is then become of Old	516
With copious eulogy in prose or rhyme....	583

lines and paragraphs. The frequent curiosa a felicitas of the diction

4 Perfect truth to nature in his images.

5 a meditative pathos - a union of deep and subtle thought with sensitivity.

6 The gift of imagination in the highest sense of the word.

Defects.

1. Inconstancy of style.
2. Matter of factness
 - a. Laboured minuteness and fidelity in representing certain objects
 - b. Intrusion of accidental circumstances.
3. Inane predilection to dramatic (in factis poems)
4. Occasional prolixity, repetition, and edging rather than progression of thought.
5. Images to ground for subject-matter.

Branches:

1. An strict point of language back grammatically and logically, a perfect appropriateness of words to subj.
2. A correspondent weight & surety of thoughts & sentiments.
